b. we experience perplexity because we have limited comprehension. We don’t understand things; we get confused and have no idea why things happen and what will happen next. There are so many times when we just don’t know what to do or have no idea what the right choice of action is. Wouldn’t it be nice if the power of God would just reveal all things to us so we could see and know and understand and have a reason for everything? But it doesn’t. In our jars of clay, so many times we just have to shrug our shoulders and say, “I have no idea.”

c. we experience persecution because we have limited effectiveness. We are disliked and discriminated against because of our faith. People hate us and rail against us. It’s not so bad here in the US where we have freedom of religion, but it’s obvious in large areas of the world where Christians are a despised, small minority. In some countries to become one of us is a crime punishable by death. Wouldn’t it be nice if the power of God would just cause us to win all our enemies? If it would silence all their questions and bring them to Him in mighty conversions, the world would be a better place. But it doesn't. In this world, our jars of clay are often pursued and beaten and jailed at the will of our persecutors.

d. we experience defeat We're struck down and have only limited success. We have a heart to win the world, but have dozens and hundreds of missionaries sit in defeat who can't go because there's no money. Oh, there are so many projects that would reach millions but lack funding. We start this or that work that by all rights should succeed and people lose interest or quit or give up and go home. We get our hopes all up about something we think God's really in and it falls through. Wouldn't it be nice if the power of God would bring us unlimited success, if everything we did was successful, if every work for the kingdom was phenomenally blessed so all could see? But it isn't that way. For every three steps forward there are often two steps backward. You see:

The Issue: Weakness - How can God be glorified when I am so limited? I am only a jar of clay subject to all the limitations and weaknesses and frailties of being human. The power of God hasn't changed any of that in my life. A young lady who's struggling with the issue of singleness wrote me from halfway around the world and said, Yes, there are still the times of struggling, feeling like the third wheel, etc. It's still extremely painful, and I wonder why God has allowed it to be so in my life. Certainly, we all have our struggles -- and don't we always want them to be different! I can rant and rave about, "Why this?" or "Why me?", but it still doesn't change the fact that I need to settle my heart with God -- whatever the issue. But, oh, doesn't it get exhausting sometimes?! Yes, it does! These awful jars of clay! If only we could be now all that we'll be one day and all this weakness would go away. How much less I'd suffer and how much more glory God could get!

But that's not:

II. How God Chooses To Display His Power He does it in an entirely different way than we would choose to (8-9). Instead of delivering us from our problems, He makes sure that:

1. when we are pressured, we are not crushed by it, that we endure it by His grace. The most awful things come, sickness and pain and even death and yet the testimony of our faith remains firm and clear. Lawrence Tucker writes, "One stifling, humid August morning we stood with our family and friends as a kindly pastor spoke words of comfort and committed the body of our young son to the ground. We lingered a while looking at the floral pieces covering the small grave. Heavy of heart, lonely in spirit, we returned home. In unrelenting heat, the day passed. As evening's shadows began to creep across the grave, we returned to sit a few minutes by the resting place of our son. The floral tributes, so proud and erect in the morning, were now all wilted--ruined by the heat. Their drooping leaves and shattered blooms were matched by the brokenness of our hearts. With such little warning our son was gone, our arms were empty. As we sat quietly, our eyes were drawn to the central floral piece. Parts of it had paid the price demanded by the heat, but not all. Out of the center of a wilted background, twelve white calla lilies stood straight and erect, undaunted by the circumstances of the day. They had not been overwhelmed by scorching heat. In the midst of the dead and dying they had lived. Why? Probing the structure of the piece, I freed a bloom. The secret became known. The stem of the bloom was fastened in a small vial of water. When all elements combined to destroy their beauty, the lilies had a source of inner strength. By that strength they had continued to live in beauty, with a promise of hope. Joining hands, we drew comfort from a source almost pushed aside by our grief. Had the Master not said, "I am the resurrection and the life. He who believes in Me will live, even though he dies, and whoever lives and believes in Me will never die"? In that moment we received inner strength from our living Lord." [Time Out: A Men's Devotional compiled by Clint and Mary Beckwith. Evergreen Communications, Inc., 1989. Pages 56-57.] My friends, we're the lilies rooted in the living water that stand erect in the heat of the circumstances and testify continually to His goodness. We endure awful pressures through His power and stand firm! And even:

2. when we are perplexed, we do not despair When we don't understand and don't know what to do, we don't give up. We don't lose all hope and curl up in a ball and wait to die. We trust Him. When our life falls apart so that we're sitting numb with shock and all the world is telling us to throw in the towel and just curse God and die, we say like Job, Though he slay me, yet will I trust in Him. The Lord gives and the Lord takes away. Blessed be the Name of the Lord! Even:

3. when we are persecuted, we are not abandoned There's no horror that our enemies can inflict so bad as to convince us that He is not with us. Betsie Ten Boom was lying on a stretcher in the concentration camp Ravensbruck being carried to the hospital to die, having suffered unbelievable tortures and she whispered to her sister Corrie, We must tell people what we have learned here. We must tell them that there is no pit so deep that He is not deeper still. They will listen to us, Corrie, because we have been here. God never abandons His children and in all our suffering, we testify to it! And:

4. when we are defeated, we are not destroyed We may lose, but we don't give up because the war's not over yet and we've already read who wins. We may have to take those two steps backward, but we still keep walking forward. Numbers of us may be slain or laid aside or struck down in some other way, but more of us always rise up from the ranks to take their place and push on.

No, God has not chosen to take away all the limitations of human weakness from us by His power; rather He has chosen to display His power to all the world by carrying us through them instead! Now, why does He do that? Why does He leave the treasure in jars of clay instead of putting it in golden treasure chests, perfectly suited to it!

III. Why God Has Chosen Our Weakness (10-12) There is a phrase that I want you to look at with me for just a moment: Compare 12:9, My power is made perfect in weakness! That's His principle. The display of His power all by itself is not complete. It is brought to its most full and complete and perfect display in the context of weakness, in frailty and sickness and lack of any strength at all! How does it work?

1. weakness shows that the power is from God and not ourselves (7b) If God just made us "super-people", it would be hard for folks to see Him. If we just conquered every difficulty, were healed of every sickness, never had a setback or made a mistake, they might just give us the credit for it! When Paul and Barnabas healed a crippled man at Lystra, the people called them "gods come down in human form" and tried to offer sacrifices to them. But they tore their clothes and told the people, "Men, why are you doing this? We too are only men, human like you. We are bringing you good news, telling you to turn from these worthless things to the living God..." - Acts 14:15. If God always did the power thing with us, the world might attribute it to us instead of Him. But when He does the weakness thing with us, they see that the reason we're not crushed and in despair and abandoned and destroyed is because of HIM, not us! It enables us to say, "We're only human like you, but there is a Living God who has kept us!" Yet it's even deeper than that:

2. our continual sufferings express the death of Jesus (10) There were a few occasions when Jesus revealed His glorious power and the crowds flocked to Him, but that display of power did not convert them. Overall, Jesus took the human path of weakness. He became a man. He left glory. He was tempted and opposed. He mourned over loved ones. He knew pain and hunger and thirst and tears. He was pressured, perplexed, persecuted and defeated. He suffered and bled and died on a Roman cross in human weakness. In one sense His whole life was the process of dying. And when we go through those things in our human body, we are a visible reminder of what He endured. Wherever we go, our sufferings, the things we endure in this body, repeat and thereby express visibly His dying. But:

3. they are necessary to reveal the life of Jesus How is he going to show Himself to the world? In the midst of the suffering and dying, He saves us from crushing, despairing, abandonment and destruction. What would otherwise happen to us doesn't, because of the living Jesus who is in us! His supernatural power to endure, His power to withstand, His power to deliver through suffering rather than out of it, fairly shouts, "He lives, He lives, Christ Jesus lives today. He lives within my heart!" They see that Jesus lives because they see Him live in us in the midst of our sufferings! The Expositor's Commentary says, "It is not a matter of life after death or even of life through death but of life in the midst of death!" At the same time, they can see His death in our human sufferings, they can see His life in our deliverance in the midst of them! Therefore, the truth is that:

4. we constantly experience "dying" so the power of His life can be revealed through our "mortality" (11) We go through this stuff for His sake. We experience the "dying" human life that He did for the sake of His glory. So that He can use our very mortality, our very vulnerability to the process of dying, to reveal to the world His life which lives in us. So:

5. the "death" that is always at work in us brings life to others (12) The sufferings of Paul brought life to the Corinthians as they saw the life of Jesus revealed in him. And our sufferings, our daily "death" that is part of our constant human experience, works to bring life to others. They see Him in us and respond.

The story is told of a group of 100 Roman soldiers who had been drawn together in a special bond of closeness through the experiences they shared in battle. Among them were 40 Christians. One day the emperor called for a test of loyalty, demanding that every member of the army bow down before his statue. As each of the 40 believers passed before the image, they refused to worship it. One by one they declared, "I'm a Christian!" And every one received the sentence of death. It was winter and because of his high regard for these men, the legion commander was heartsick as he marched them onto the river's ice, where they would be left to die from exposure to the bitter cold. As they went out into the darkness, this chant rang in his ears: "Forty wrestlers, wrestling for Thee, O Christ, claim for Thee the victory and from Thee the crown." The commander waited throughout the night on shore near a roaring fire, hoping some would change their minds and obey the imperial decree. Finally, he saw a solitary figure groping his way toward the fire. Approaching the emperor's statue, the half-frozen man fell down before it. But no one else appeared! The centurion was so moved by the steadfastness of the 39 remaining men that he dropped his armor and rushed to join that dying band. In a few moments the cry again was heard echoing across the frigid wastes: "Forty wrestlers, wrestling for Thee, O Christ, claim for Thee the victory and from Thee the crown." They were given over to dying and the power of His life was revealed through them. God's strength was made perfect in weakness. It always is, even in your life and mine. But before we close, let's look quickly at:

IV. The Effect Of This Process On Us (16-18) We don't quit; we don't give up in discouragement as we suffer in weakness because we know three things:

1. outward deterioration cannot stop our inward renewal - Col. 3:10, We have put on the new self, which is being renewed in knowledge in the image of its Creator. We're being transformed into His likeness spiritually from glory to glory and all the outward falling apart of our body and our circumstances, all the suffering we endure in our weakness can never stop that process. His life is always being more and more clearly revealed in us. And so:

2. our limited and temporary sufferings produce an infinite and eternal glory (17) They do for us a favor. They are producing something infinitely better that lasts infinitely longer than themselves. They are producing a tremendous quantity of glory being given, not to us, but to God. Look at verse 15. He is glorified, and the more we suffer, the more His life is revealed and the more glory He receives. Hallelujah! So, what must we do? How do we get through this? After all, it hurts!

3. we focus on the unseen eternal result rather than the temporary suffering (18) Instead of burying our noses in the problems and wallowing in the misery, we... fix our eyes on Jesus, the author and perfecter of our faith, who for the joy set before him endured the cross, scorning its shame, and sat down at the right hand of the throne of God. - Heb. 12:2. Or as Col. 3:1-4 says, Since, then, you have been raised with Christ, set your hearts on things above, where Christ is seated at the right hand of God. Set your minds on things above, not on earthly things. For you died, and your life is now hidden with Christ in God. When Christ, who is your life appears, then you also will appear with him in glory.

The power is His, not yours, and the glory belongs to Him. Don't look down; look up!

A House Not Made With Hands • 5:1-10 • The Issue Of Eternity

At the close of chapter 4 last time, we talked about the need to keep our eyes fixed on the eternal things that are real, rather than on the troubles of earth. Probably the key thing that keeps us from doing that is our human body. It's this body that keeps us tied to earth. It's this body that runs short of breath and can't keep up and get done the things we need to get done. It's this body that gets sick and feels ill and suffers pain. It's this body that ages and loses all its beauty and grows frail and feeble and requires so much time and energy to care for. It's this body that threatens us with the thing that we instinctively fear the most, death. Everything about this body shouts "Temporary! It's not going to last!" One of these days I'm going to come face to face with the end of this body and, like it or not, I have a hard time thinking about separating myself from it. Now, Paul reminds us that there are two very basic:

I. The Facts That We Know About This Body (1) His image here is a very graphic one in the Greek, particularly coming from a tentmaker. He says:

1. we live now in the temporary dwelling (tent) of an earthly body The real "you" is your spirit, your person, and you live in the tent of an earthly body. Now, you live in a tent for a few days or a few weeks while you're on vacation. You live in a tent for the warm part of the year while you follow the flocks to the higher pastures as the Kyrgyz did for centuries in their yurts. You live in a tent while you're traveling on a journey to get to a more permanent place like Abraham did in the promised land and like the Israelites did during their years in the wilderness. But it's not permanent; it's only a place to live for now. And what makes that so evident about our "tent" is that:

a. it is in the process of being taken down That word "destroyed" in the NIV is also the normal word for taking down a tent. Every sign we have from our body tells us that it's in the process of being taken down. Charles L. Allen recounts the time John Quincy Adams, who was then 80 years old, met a friend on the street in Boston. "Good morning," said the friend, "and how is John Quincy Adams today?" "Thank you," the ex-President replied. "John Quincy Adams himself is well, quite well, thank you. But the house in which he lives at present is becoming dilapidated. It is tottering upon its foundation. Time and the seasons have nearly destroyed it. Its roof is pretty well worn out. The walls are much shattered, and it trembles with every wind. The old tenement is becoming almost uninhabitable, and I think John Quincy Adams will have to move out of it soon. But he himself is quite well, quite well." [The Seniors' Devotional Bible (NIV), Zondervan, 1995.] The tent is falling down and with each passing year that becomes more evident. But what we also begin to realize is that:

b. it is earthly and unfit for God's eternal purposes - 1 Cor. 15:50, I declare to you, brothers, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, nor does the perishable inherit the imperishable. It's made of earth and it's only good for this earth. You can't take it to heaven with you and who'd want to? Who'd want to spend eternity in a falling apart body of flesh and blood? It has to end. It's mortal. We have to get out of it at some point. So, what we're doing here on earth is really this:

2. we are awaiting the permanent dwelling (house) of a resurrection body We don't want to live in a tent; we want a house, an oikodome, a permanent dwelling place. And we know from the Scriptures that we have one. Now, please understand that he is not talking here about heaven itself, about the many mansions and the streets of gold. He's not saying that when your spirit gets out of this tent it can go to float around in a gold-lined apartment in the palace of the King with a view of the river of life. A soul doesn't need a literal house to live in; it needs a what? A body! The Creed says we believe in the resurrection of the body and the life everlasting. If we get to be in heaven without a body, that's only temporary. The eternal state is that we receive a resurrection body from, a house no human hand can make, a body that is eternal and it is heavenly or spiritual. Elsewhere we're told that:

a. our body will be completely changed to be like His - Phil. 3:20-21 The place we're going forever is heaven. But we're waiting for more than that. We're waiting for a Savior who's going to change our humble lowly bodies, made of the dust of the earth and fit only for the earth, and make them like His glorious resurrection body, spiritual bodies fit for eternal life in a spiritual kingdom. Jesus' resurrection body WAS His earthly body, but transformed and glorified to lose all its earthiness. It was real and touchable and seeable, yet it appeared and moved purely at will and without effort. We will receive from God a body just like that one, whether or not our ashes have been lost to the earth forever, a glorious spiritual resurrection body based on our earthly one. However:

b. it will lose all its earthly limitations - 1 Cor. 15:42-44 Everything this body isn't, that one will be. This one's dying; that one will be eternal. This one's blemished and flawed; that one's beaming with the glory of God. This one's weak and powerless; that one's filled with the limitless ability of the power of God. This one's natural, based on the things of earth, indwelt by sin and affected by its consequences; that one's spiritual, made to reflect the character of the perfect, pure spirit that dwells in it and fit for the Kingdom. That's what we're waiting for. But it's not an easy wait. Paul talks about:

II. The Feelings That We Endure In This Body Meanwhile, We Groan (2-4) The Greek language has a lot of specific words for expressing grief and sadness. It has one that means to wail out loud like the Jews did at funerals. It has one that means to shed tears and weep silently, another that means to weep audibly and cry like a child, another that means to sing a dirge and still another that means to cry out in a lament like, "Woe is me!" But Paul says in this body we groan, which means to express grief by inarticulate or semi-articulate syllables. You know what it is to groan, don't you? You've been in the kind of emotional or physical pain where you need to express that it hurts but you can't really say any words. You just groan, you moan, you make sounds that somehow say you're hurting and you want it to stop. And that's the way we feel all the time in this body, when we really think about it:

1. we are burdened with the effects of our own mortality Afterwhile we get tired of being tired. We get sick of feeling sick. We get frustrated with all the stuff that happens in this crazy world that we can't do anything about. The more suffering we know in life, the more pain that comes our way, the more tears of grief we shed, the more aware we become of just how mortal and frail and powerless and dying we are and the more we groan in our hearts because:

2. we have an intense longing to be free of it We want out. We want to be free. We want to leave this old body and this old world behind us. That's why today so many are boldly taking the path of suicide. The burdens and the problems and the pain of life become too much for them and since so few believe in a holy God anymore and almost nobody believes in hell and everyone thinks you just dissolve into nothingness, there's no fear to hold them back and they plunge out into eternity just to escape this body and all that goes with it. That longing to get out is in all of us, but let's clarify a bit. It is:

a. not simply to be a spirit free of the body We don't want to just get rid of our body because it's bad. We don't long to be a ghost, a shadowy spirit being with no material reality. I may not like a lot of things about my body but it's still part of ME, of who I am, of my identity, and I'm afraid to lose that. So, our real longing is not to escape our body:

b. but that our mortality might be swallowed up by life It is to lose all the effects of sin and death which show up in and through our body. We long not to be "unclothed" with our old body but to be "clothed" with a new one, to be transformed so that all of us, spirit, soul and body are made like Jesus! In short, our deepest longing is to receive what we already know He's promised, that new resurrection body that's free from all this. But the catch is that life drags on and the downward pull on this body gets worse and:

3. we have no "visible" proof to hold on to We have no "sight" to rely on to demonstrate that this is coming, only our faith. So, in short:

The Issue: Endurance - How do I persevere in this failing body? Listen to Solomon, Don't let the excitement of being young cause you to forget about your Creator. Honor him in your youth before the evil years come--when you'll no longer enjoy living. It will be too late then to try to remember him when the sun and light and moon and stars are dim to your old eyes, and there is no silver lining left among your clouds. For there will come a time when your limbs will tremble with age, your strong legs will become weak, and your teeth will be too few to do their work, and there will be blindness too. Then let your lips be tightly closed while eating when your teeth are gone! And you will waken at dawn with the first note of the birds; but you yourself will be deaf and tuneless, with quavering voice. You will be afraid of heights and of falling--a white-haired, withered old man, dragging himself along; without sexual desire, standing at death's door, and nearing his everlasting home as the mourners go along the streets. Yes, remember your Creator now while you are young--before the silver cord of life snaps and the gold bowl is broken; before the pitcher is broken at the fountain and the wheel is broken at the cistern; then the dust returns to the earth as it was, and the spirit returns to God who gave it. All is futile, says the Preacher; utterly futile. – Ecc. 12:1-8 (TLB). Oh, it would be so easy to end up there! It's all vanity. Life goes downhill and in the end my body returns to dust and my spirit floats off to God. Useless. What's the point of it all? But that's not where Paul goes. He reminds us instead of:

III. The Assurances That God Has Given Us and the first one is this:

1. He has intentionally made us this way (5a) This old body didn't take God by surprise. He made it this way. He deliberately put us in mortal, dying bodies. But He also made it so we wouldn't be stuck in them forever but would leave them behind and get brand new ones from His hand one day. He made it so we'd have to live in hope, so we'd have to look forward to the future, so that we wouldn't become so in love with this world and the way it is that we'd want to stay like this forever. He made us so we'd long to go home! So, trust His judgment and wisdom as Creator! And then, in case we begin to doubt whether that future will ever be realized, whether we'll ever get that new body after all, He has given us two very concrete proofs on which to hang our hope. First:

2. He has given us the undeniable proof of Jesus' resurrection (4:13-14) There it is, the proof you can't get away from, the proof that stands once for all time: Jesus rose from the dead. He was resurrected. He laid down the old body and it was transformed into a brand-new resurrection body. Paul put it like this, But Christ has indeed been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep. For since death came through a man, the resurrection of the dead comes also through a man. For as in Adam all die, so in Christ all will be made alive. But each in his own turn: Christ, the firstfruits; then, when he comes, those who belong to him. – 1 Cor 15:20-23. Anytime you doubt it, anytime you begin to despair and lose hope that it will be so, that you will ever be freed from this body and receive the longing of your heart, just look at Him. He's the firstfruits, the guarantee of the harvest. You're just waiting your turn! But He's given us yet another thing to hang on to:

3. He has given us the individual "deposit" of the Spirit (5b) He put Himself, the Holy Spirit of God, inside MY BODY when I was saved. He chose to dwell inside ME. And that personal indwelling is the "deposit", it's the down payment on the balance. I've got that and I'll get the rest. Because He lives in me now, He has guaranteed that He will transform me then. He is joined permanently to my spirit. We are one, just as He and the Father are One, inseparable forever. So, what happens to Him happens to me and since He received a glorious resurrection body, so will I. He became like Me and I'll become like Him and He has guaranteed it by His personal presence inside Me right now!

Now, when I get hold of that, does that ever change things! It changes my whole outlook and attitude on living. And that's what Paul talks about next:

IV. The Continual Confidence We Have For Living

Instead of the despair that Solomon described and that the world knows, we have a tremendous confidence as we live, a tremendous boldness to press on through life all the way through to the end because:

1. we live out of the eternal perspective of faith (6-8) He's repeating what he said in 4:18. We fix our eyes on the eternal things.

a. we recognize that in this body we will not have "sight" We don't visibly see Jesus. We don't visibly see heaven. We don't visibly see the resurrection that lies ahead for us. We can't. It's not part of the plan. God did not make us to walk by sight in this body. It can only see the physical and the temporary things of this world. But we see with spiritual eyes. We see it all by faith, by trusting in what God has told us. And because of that:

b. we stand confidently ready to leave it and be with the Lord In fact, we'd prefer it! We'd like to be out, to be free, to have the sight right now, to have the eternal. But that's not the plan. We stay right here and persevere because that's where He put us, but we're always ready to leave, to take down the tent of this body and move on to the eternal home that God has prepared. Yet in the meantime:

2. we passionately pursue the eternal goal of pleasing Him (9) That's what really counts, not pleasing ourselves, not escaping our problems and our pains, not our getting relief or getting what we want. That's backward. He's with and in us now and we're going to be with Him forever. So, the important thing both here and there boils down to just one thing, pleasing Him! And when we live by faith, that becomes our passion in life. It's all we care about. What does He want? What is His will? What is His desire? What matters to Him? How can I glorify Him? And when that becomes our passion, our focus changes:

3. we focus on the quality of things accomplished through this body (10) Somehow, we always see this verse in our minds almost like it's the Great White Throne in Rev. 10. We get to heaven as believers and Jesus is sitting on this judgment seat and there's a kind of formal trial based on our deeds and rewards, or else reprimands are handed out. However, if you read it in the original it's more like this, (Kless translation) "For all of us can't escape being shown for what we really are at His winners' platform at the end of the race. Every one of us will carry away (like the athlete) only the results of the things he did through his body, whether they were good (valuable in achieving the goal) or [literally] worthless, useless." The point is that this body is our vehicle for pleasing Him; through this body we can choose to glorify Him by pleasing Him. And when we're with Him by sight one day, all that's going to matter is the quality of what we did through it. Was our life pleasing and useful to Him? Did we present Him our body as a living sacrifice and let Him live through us or not? Let me share the words from a sermon by Pastor Lasarus to his congregation of the Sougb tribe in Irian Jaya: "Ibrani (Heb.) 13:14 tells us this earth is not our Birth Land. We are only like strangers and wanderers here. This land is just like a bivouac (a ramshackle leaf shelter, we'd call it a lean-to) on the path that leads to the Big City. There is no eternal life here. Our bones are just going to rot and then dry up to powder of the earth. Rather, God puts us here to plant and harvest His garden, telling others what His Voice says about Jesus." That's what counts! We live always focused on the fact that in this body we're here to plant and harvest God's garden of earth, to sow the precious seed of the Gospel and to harvest precious souls to belong to Him by telling others the Good news of Jesus. That's what He cares about; that's what will matter to us when we see Him, and that's what we should be about in this body.

But all the while living confidently and ready to step out of it and be with Him, knowing that to be absent from this body is to be immediately present with Him, always looking upward in anticipation instead of downward in depression. Let me tell you this story: The sound of Martha's voice on the other end of the telephone always brought a smile to Pastor Jim's face. This time, however, there seemed to be an unusual tone to her words. "Preacher, could you stop by this afternoon? I need to talk with you." "Of course, I'll be there around three. Is that ok?" It didn't take long for Jim to discover the reason for what he had only sensed in her voice before. Martha shared the news that her doctor had just discovered a previously undetected tumor. "He says I probably have six months to live". Martha's words were naturally serious, yet there was a definite calm about her. "I'm so sorry to..." but before Jim could finish, Martha interrupted. "Don't be. The Lord has been good. I have lived a long life. I'm ready to go." "I know," Jim whispered with a reassuring nod. "But I do want to talk with you about my funeral. I have been thinking about it, and there are things that I know I want." The two talked quietly for a long time. When it seemed that they had covered just about everything, Aunt Martie paused, looked up at Jim with a twinkle in her eye, and then added, "One more thing, preacher. When they bury me, I want my old Bible in one hand and a fork in the other". "A fork?" Jim was sure he had heard everything, but this caught him by surprise. "Why do you want to be buried with a fork?" "I have been thinking about all of the church dinners and banquets that I attended through the years," she explained, "Sometimes, at the best ones, somebody would lean over my shoulder and whisper, 'You can keep your fork.' "And do you know what that meant? Dessert was coming! And not a cup of Jell-O or pudding or even a dish of ice cream. You don't need a fork for that. It meant the good stuff, like chocolate cake or cherry pie! When they told me I could keep my fork, I knew the best was yet to come! That's exactly what I want people to talk about at my funeral. Sure, they can talk about all the good times we had together. That would be nice. But when they walk by my casket and look at my pretty blue dress, I want them to turn to one another and say, 'Why the fork?' "That's when I want you to tell them, that I kept my fork because 'the best is yet to come!'" My friends, our Lord has already leaned over our shoulder and whispered, "Live with the fork in your hand; the good stuff, the best, better than anything you can imagine, is coming! I promise!"

The Ministry Of Reconciliation • 5:11-21 • The Issue Of Purpose

The one thing that probably prevents us from letting God shine out His glory through us more than anything else or at least creates the most difficulty for us is people. The majority of the suffering we experience and the problems we have in life are caused by people. I read a story about a guy named Robert Henry. One evening he went shopping in a large discount store, hoping to purchase a pair of binoculars. As he walked up to the appropriate counter, he noticed that he was the only customer in the store. Behind the counter were two salespersons. One was so preoccupied talking to 'Mama' on the telephone that she refused to acknowledge that Robert was there. At the other end of the counter a second sales person was unloading inventory from a box onto the shelves. Growing impatient, Robert walked down to her end of the counter and just stood there. Finally, she looked up at him and said, "You got a number?" "I got a what?" asked Robert, trying to control his astonishment at such an absurdity. "You got a number? You gotta have a number." Robert replied, "Lady, I'm the only customer in the store! I don't need a number. Can't you see how ridiculous this is?" But she failed to see the absurdity and insisted that Robert take a number before agreeing to wait on him. By now, it was obvious to Robert that she was more interested in following procedures than helping customers. So, he went to the take-a-number machine, pulled number 37, and walked back to the salesperson. With that, she promptly went to her number counter, which revealed that the last customer waited on had been holding number 34. So she screamed out, "35!...35!...36!...36!...37!" "I'm number 37," said Robert. "May I help you? she asked without cracking a smile. "No," replied Robert, and he turned around and walked out. [Pursuit, Vol 111, No 2 (no date). Page 16.] Have you been in that store? I have! Have you been in that line of traffic when the "idiot" passes you over the double yellow line, nearly running you off the road? And these are just the little things. People often cheat you, hurt you, violate your trust, insult you and ignore your pleas for help. That comes with being part of the human race. Now, everything we've studied so far indicates to us that our very purpose on this earth is people! God is parading us in and out of peoples' lives exuding through us the aroma of Himself to attract them to Him, but what makes it tough is that they're not interested bystanders watching the parade. Lots of them are throwing tomatoes and buckets of water and sometimes shooting at our parade going by. Now, in our text, Paul points out to us:

I. Our Natural Way Of Seeing People: (16) A worldly point of view is literally, According To The Flesh, both their flesh and our flesh. We don't come into the world seeing people from God's point of view.

1. we see them based on their external appearances and qualities First, we look at their appearance and listen to their speech. If they look ugly to us or even different from what we like, we steer away. If they're in a wheelchair or are missing an arm or leg or have an obvious handicap, we hang back and shy away because we're uncomfortable. If they don't speak our language well, we unconsciously think of them as less intelligent than we are and if their skin color or their facial features indicate a different race, we may have no desire to know them or be around them whatsoever. Then there's their behavior. If they're loud and boisterous or self-absorbed, we instantly don't like them; if they're shy and quiet there must be something wrong with them, and the list goes on and on. And not only do we see people based on their flesh:

2. we see them through the filter of our own self-interest If they can help me or are nice and kind, I like them and care about them. If they do or say anything at all negative toward me, they're an instant enemy. If they cut into line in front of me or won't help me at the counter, they're off my list and I can be just as rude in return. And if they do anything to really hurt me, if they criticize me or try to cheat me or to sue me or to arrest me or push or shove me, I can naturally hate them in a hurry. If they disagree with me or don't do things my way or get their way over mine, I can get angry and dismiss them so quickly! You see, in the natural, ME is the center of all things and every person I run into has to pass the ME test for me to care about them. Of course, now that I'm saved, I can recognize some of that and I surely don't WANT to be like that, but the old way of seeing people is still very much a part of my life. I definitely don't want to serve and love and reach people who don't fit my filter. So, the issue becomes:

The Issue: Ministry - How do I relate to the world of difficult people around me? How am I going to minister to and serve and reach the world when it is so full of all these difficult people? I'm surrounded by them! Charles Wise tells the following fable: "Once there was a little boy who had a puppy. He was in love with that puppy. And that puppy loved him. They played together and slept together. They really enjoyed each other's company. One day the little boy was playing out in the front yard with his puppy. They were chasing each other, having a good time. During their play, the little dog ran out into the street and was hit by a car. Fortunately, he wasn't killed, but he was hurt really bad. As the little boy approached the puppy to help him, what do you think the puppy did? He did just what most hurting animals would do--he tried to bite the boy. He snapped at the little boy, not because he didn't love the little boy any more or because he was a bad puppy, but because he was in pain. Sometimes people who are in pain hurt other people. It's a kind of protection more than it is an attack. It's not that they're bad people, it's that they are reaching out in their pain the only way they know how. That's one principle we learn in ministry--that hurting people can hurt others. But we need to look at the little boy and his response. He has three choices. First, he can step back and angrily drop kick that puppy into the next block. He can choose to hurt the puppy because the puppy tried to bite him. We do that in our ministries. When people hurt us, sometimes we want to hurt them back. The little boy has a second choice. He can look at the puppy and say, 'I don't deserve that kind of behavior, and I sure don't need it,' and then just walk away and leave the puppy in the street. And we do that. Sometimes when we meet difficult people or hurting people, we tend to avoid them or ignore them because we don't need the trouble and the grief. But the boy has one other choice. The mature thing to do is to lovingly, carefully help the puppy. Now, doing that may mean going around and coming up on the blind side of the puppy where he can't see you coming. To pick him up and take him to the vet may even cause some pain for the puppy, even though it's for his own good. This may even involve being bitten by the puppy again. But we've got to have the maturity, the patience, and the love to give this sort of response--to reach out, knowing we may be hurt, knowing we may have to go to extraordinary lengths to minister and help that hurting puppy [or person!]. That's our job." [Single Adult Ministries Journal, Mar/Apr 1996. Page 14.]

Now, to do that we need a new way of seeing people. Paul says he gave that old way up:

II. Our New Way Of Seeing People, not according to the flesh but According To Their Spirit (16-17) People are in one of two spiritual conditions:

1. they are either IN Christ or NOT IN Christ Any human being you meet, no matter what his flesh looks like or how your flesh reacts to him, is either IN Christ or not. Fat or skinny, fast or slow, smart or dumb, black or white, doesn't matter. Either he has come to Christ in faith and been placed into the Body of Christ and regenerated by the Spirit of Christ or he is outside of and apart from Christ. There IS NO MIDDLE GROUND and ultimately nothing else matters! Next time you're out at the store or a soccer game, look around you. Think how God must see the people you see, "That one knows Me; this one and that one and the other one don't." How can you tell?

2. IN Christ they become brand new creations There is a tremendous change that occurs inside them, a tremendous miracle just as great as any that God did on the day of creation. God creates inside of the believer a new heart, a new spirit, a new nature, a new man that is righteous and pure and holy just like He is. You become a new YOU at the very core and as a consequence the OLD YOU, the old man, is not just on the way out; it's gone! And the new isn't just on the way in; it's already here! And spiritual change inside changes your life on the outside.

So, when you see people, they're either what you are, a NEW Creation, restored and made whole or they're still that wounded puppy in the middle of the road who can't move himself and is going to get hit by a car pretty soon! Now, what God is about is this: getting wounded puppies out of the street before they get killed and making them new creations! And He has a fancy name for that process:

III. The Process That God Is About: Reconciliation (18-19) To reconcile means to restore a relationship between two estranged parties. God is estranged from all old-creation type people from the moment they come into the world by sin. Here's how it came to be. God and man started out in relationship with one another in innocence and holiness enjoying true fellowship. But Adam as the head of the race turned his back on God and sinned. He said, "I don't want you" and allowed sin into his life. Because God is holy and cannot fellowship with sin, God would have been forced by His holiness to turn His back on man and allow him to die eternally. But God's love for us human beings was so strong that He did something radical about it:

1. God reconciled the world to Himself in Christ He sent His own beloved Son to die for the sins of the world, to take our place and the penalty of eternal death that we deserved, so that He would not have to count our sins against us. It left Him in the position of facing mankind once again. God reaches out in love, saying "We are estranged by sin, but I've made a way for you to come to Me; I have provided reconciliation for the whole world through My Son." But:

2. each person must now be personally reconciled by responding to Him through faith. I must choose to turn back to God, to repent, to have that relationship with My Creator that He provided through the cross. So, that's the business God's in. He's reconciled the world to Himself at the cross and He is now seeking and urging human beings one at a time to turn to Him and become new creatures. So, all men are either facing away from God in sin and lostness or toward Him in faith. And God has His arms stretched out, calling men to turn toward Him and be made new. Now notice two things:

a. note the global scope of the process We read this too fast and in our modern American mindset when we read world, we see me. But that isn't what it says. It includes me but the scope is bigger. It is true that God so loved ME that He sent His only Son but it says God so loved the WORLD. God's scope is the globe. He's not content with me and you and a few like us. He's not content with white North Americans. He provided reconciliation for the whole world, for every people, every language group, for those in every geographical location and that's why you must:

b. note the great commission given to the Church What does it say? Make disciples of ALL NATIONS... Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature...Jerusalem, Judea and Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth! This is a big process and we're not the only ones in it. That's why the task of missions is so vital and we spend so much effort in praying and giving and going and sending. God is commanding all men everywhere to repent, to turn to Him! It's a worldwide process. It's going on in Irian Jaya and Mongolia and Kyrgyzstan and Kenya and in Philadelphia and Glenside too. God is about calling those outside of Him to be reconciled to Him wherever they are.

IV. The Purpose That God Has For Us: (18b) He has given that ministry of reconciliation to us. He's doing it, He's calling men to Himself, not by writing in the sky, not by using angels, but through us. Verse (11) says We Persuade Men. We convince men to turn around and be reconciled and become new creatures. That's our purpose in God's process. That's why we're here, so that the wounded puppies of the world might be rescued from the street and made new in Him. Now notice five important facts about this:

1. we are entrusted with the responsibility of messengers (19b) He left the message that He's reconciled and ready to save them, with us. In those days when you wanted to send someone a message there was no phone or fax or even a postal service. You gave your message to a messenger and sent him to deliver it. And what's the responsibility of a messenger? To see that the message gets delivered and to see that it gets delivered accurately. The message is only as good as the messenger entrusted to deliver it. God entrusted the news of the Gospel, of His willingness to save men by faith to us. If we don't deliver it and if we don't deliver it to the whole world, to every tribe and tongue and place, then it won't get delivered! We're messengers; the fate of the world hangs on our faithfulness. Secondly:

2. we are invested with the authority of ambassadors (20a) An ambassador doesn't simply carry a message for the one he represents; he acts with the authority of that one. In those days the emperor could designate a legate and that legate or ambassador would act would not only carry his message but act with his full authority and power. That's why Jesus said, All authority in heaven and earth is given unto Me, now go and make disciples... The offer we make to men, we make on the very authority of Jesus Christ Himself! And in fact:

3. we are placed in the position of substitutes (20b) We are not making an appeal for Him; He is making His appeal through us! We stand in the very place of God. We're His stand-in. He doesn't come to people to offer salvation. He comes IN US, literally, to people to make His appeal to them and here's:

4. the appeal that we make: "Be reconciled to God!" (20c) This is not Paul appealing to the Corinthians. There is no you in the Greek. This is the appeal of God to all mankind, "Be reconciled, turn to God; He's made provision for you to be saved. His arms are open wide. He loves you. He wants you. Come to Him!" God is shouting that message out through our lives to all the outside-of-Christ wounded puppies in the street of the world. And the message continues. Here's:

5. the gift we offer: the righteousness of God (21) God put your sin on Jesus. He was perfect and sinless. But God treated Him as sin so that He can take the free gift of the righteousness of Jesus Christ and give it to you, so He can come into you and make you a brand-new creation, holy and pure!

Hey, that's your purpose in life! God didn't put you here to soak up the rays and enjoy the atmosphere. If you get some of that along that way, that's all right, but that's not why you're here. You're here because there are a few billion puppies out there lying wounded in the street. They'll bite you if you try to help them half the time, but you've got to decide what you're about. You can either kick them back or stomp off and forget them. Or you can get with God in His purpose and rescue them! But why would you want to do that? When they hurt you and they reject you and they criticize and make fun of you and don't want to listen to you? What are:

V. Our Motives For Pursuing This Purpose There are two:

1. we are moved by reverence for Christ: what we are is plain to Him (11) That doesn't mean we're afraid of Christ, that we're scared of Him and we care about others out of fear. This is connected with what we learned last week. The only motive worth having in this world, live or die, is to please Him (9) and one day we'll stand before Him face to face and take away from that encounter only the results of things done through this body (10). And we know that what we are and what we're about is already plain and clear to Him. We can't hide it. We can't fool Him. He knows what we're living for and whether we're living for His purpose or not. We respect Him; He's our Lord; His purpose and will mean something to us. That's one reason and the other is this:

2. we are compelled by the love of Christ: we died with Him to our own purposes and live for His (14-15) Let me put it really simply: He loved us so much that He died for us to get us out of the street! And He sent somebody with the message to share it with us. And when we receive that, it's time to die to our own purposes and wants and desires and to live for what He wants. His love for us compels us, it drives us to love others, to get out there and find that hurting puppy and pray and share and love him until his heart turns and he becomes a new creation in Jesus.

And when that love of God rules our hearts, we don't look at people and see enemies and critics and persecutors and people who are different and annoying and stupid. No matter what they look like or how repulsive and painful their behavior, we see hurting puppies that we love who need us to get them out of the street. Morris Chapman writes: "There is a chilling moment in the novel Hawaii by James Michener when a group of savages are dancing before their gods. One of the savages holds his baby high in the air, and as an act of worship to a pagan god, throws it onto a stone altar, cracking the child's skull and instantly killing it. Looking on, the savage's wife turns to another woman and says, 'My husband is not bad. With a different god, he would be a different man.'" [SBC Life, Oct 1995. Page 7.] People do an awful lot of things to bite us, to hurt us. But when you see them with the eyes of God's purpose, you know that if they had a different God, if they had Jesus Christ, they'd be different people. And His dying love, for you and for them, for the world, constrains you to do something about it, to hold out to them in their dying, the Word of Life.

Having Nothing Yet Possessing Everything • 6:1-10 • The Issue of Servanthood

There was one issue about which Jesus' disciples argued repeatedly. They argued about it on the way to Capernaum. They argued about it again on the way up to Jerusalem. They even argued about it at the table while they were eating for the last time with Him. Who knows how many other times it came up? They argued about which one of them was going to be the greatest. Who was the best? Who should be the leader? Who deserved the privileges? But Jesus had one standard answer for them. Mark 9:35, "...If anyone wants to be first, he must be the very last, and the servant of all. Mark 10:43-44, "...whoever wants to become great among you must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be slave of all. Luke 22:26, "...the greatest among you should be like the youngest, and the one who rules like the one who serves. Servanthood. We still struggle with it today. Everything in our flesh demands to be served and recoils against serving. Nobody wants to be a servant. Why not? Because a servant, by definition, is somebody who doesn't get to do what he wants; his lot in life is to do the will of another, to carry out his master's instructions. It is not to go about meeting his own needs, but seeing that his master's needs and desires are met. Now as we enter the sixth chapter of 2 Corinthians, Paul reminds us of:

I. Our Position Before God While there are many wonderful aspects of our relationship with God that we enjoy, there are two key positions we hold which impact what we are about in this world. First:

1. we are His co-workers (1a), workers together with Him in the same task. This looks back to 5:19-20. His purpose is reconciliation. He reconciled the world to Himself in Christ and now He's at work calling all men to turn and be reconciled to Him. That's His purpose for this age. And we are more than just persons working with Him. We are an integral part of the process; He does it through us! WE, God and us, appeal to people. So, to be coworkers means that we are the ones who live to accomplish His purpose. His task is our task; His purpose is our purpose. We are interdependent partners bound together in the task inseparably as one. But at the same time, we have another position:

2. we are His servants, diakonoi, the ones who live to carry out His will (4a) In other words, this partnership is not a 50-50 deal on the decision-making end. It's not 60-40 or even 90-10, it's 100-0. We may be partners together in the process, but His will is the absolute determining factor in the direction the process goes. He is the Master; we are His servants. What He wants to do with us and through us and how He wants to do it are His choice, His prerogative as the Sovereign Lord. Now, realizing that we are both co-workers and servants, it is easy to see:

II. The Danger Of Our Position (1-2) First of all:

1. we may receive God's grace in vain, literally unto nothing, unto emptiness, that is, without accomplishing His purpose. He redeems us and reconciles us and saves us and commits to us the ministry of reconciliation, but we give our life to some other purpose instead of coworking with Him in His. We chase after a career and money in the bank. We work hard for a fine house and a luxury car. We struggle to the top of the corporate ladder or perfect our golf game to a T. But we fail to allow Him to make His appeal to others through our lives. And what happens? His purpose doesn't get accomplished and His investment in us is empty, vain. It saves us, but it impacts nobody else! In the courtyard of a quaint little church in a French village stood a beautiful marble statue of Jesus with His hands outstretched. One day during the war, a bomb struck near the statue and mutilated it. After the battle was over and the enemy had passed through, the citizens of the village decided to find the pieces of their beloved statue and reconstruct it. Patiently they gathered the broken pieces and reassembled it. Even the scars on the body added to its beauty, but there was one problem. They were not able to find the hands of the statue. "A Christ without hands is no Christ at all," someone said sadly. "What's a Lord without hands. We need a new statue." Then someone else came along with another idea, and it prevailed. A brass plaque was attached to the base of the statue, saying, "I have no hands but your hands." Years later someone saw that inscription and wrote the following lines:

I have no hands but your hands to do my work today.

I have no feet but your feet to lead men on the way.

I have no tongue but your tongue to tell men how I died.

I have no help but your help to bring men to God's side.' [Church Growth Institute Newsletter, 1983.]

That's why Paul says, "I urge you, I beseech you, I beg you, don't let the grace of God which saved you be fruitless and empty. You're a coworker with God in His purpose of reaching all men!" Then he mentions another danger:

2. we may waste our precious opportunity We may be servants who live their lives without doing His will "Now is the time; today is the day of salvation." We always want to relate this verse to unbelievers to tell them that their opportunity to be saved is short. But Paul wasn't talking to unbelievers about being saved; he was exhorting Christians that their opportunity to save others is precious and fleeting. It is so easy for servants of God to spend their lives pursuing other goals and wasting the precious opportunity they have to carry out His instructions! Jesus said, It will be good for that servant whose master finds him doing so [that is, doing what he was instructed to do] when he returns. – Mat. 24:46. Now what opportunity are we talking about? What does today mean? It can literally mean:

a. the opportunity of this present moment Every day, every moment is important. Once it's gone you can never get it back; it's gone forever. You only get so many years to have your kids, to love them into loving Jesus with all their hearts and when it's gone, it's gone. All opportunities are windows; they open and then they close. Some of them are just one conversation long. Some are a few days, a few months. Some are years. But none last forever and none of us knows how long the window will stay open. That's why we have to be about the Master's business now, today. It counts. One of our retired missionary couples went to Russia in a strategic window of opportunity. The window opened and they and hundreds of others rushed in to evangelize and to train believers in Russia to do the evangelizing before the window closed. But it's just as true of me; if I don't do His will today, if I don't let Him make His appeal through my life today, I can't get today back; it's gone. And if you add enough "todays" together, you're talking about:

b. the opportunity of this present life Today is the last opportunity that thousands of people will have to receive salvation. Tomorrow will be too late for them; death will claim them. Plus, on my end, I've only got one lifetime to serve Him and I don't know when that will end; it could be tomorrow. The Bible says life is short, life is fleeting, life is a vapor that is here today and gone tomorrow. The opportunity to be about the Father's will, to be involved in the salvation of others, is precious and not to be wasted. And when you put all our lives together, you're talking about:

c. the opportunity of this present age It doesn't last forever. The cross opened the window and we live in the day when whosoever will may come. But one day, and we don't know when, the window of opportunity will close. The Lord will return. His church will be caught out and the Great Tribulation will begin. God has only given this age to accomplish His purpose of claiming some from every people and tribe and tongue for Himself. He's only sent His church into the world to get the job done until He comes and we need to do our part and work for the night is coming when man's work is done! And thank God that in our day the church is waking up to its purpose as never before and the job IS getting done.

But no matter how you look at it, this moment, this life, this age, NOW is the time; TODAY is the day to be about the Father's business of saving people. So, what is it that gets in the way? What is it that tempts me to hold back from being the coworker and the servant that I am, from accomplishing His purpose and carrying out His will? It's the worst four-letter word in the English language:

The Issue: Self - I want to live life for my purposes and do my own will! I've got my own agenda. I've got things I want to do. I...I...I. Leonard LeSourd was a pilot during World War II. The training planes he flew had a set of controls that were called "trim tabs." Once the aircraft had reached the desired altitude, the pilot would set the trim tabs so that the plane would fly straight ahead even when he didn't have his hands on the controls. LeSourd comments: "In the same way, a young man, almost without knowing it, can put the direction of his life on automatic. The set of his will, like the trim tabs, can steer him to church on a Sunday morning, or to the golf course, or to sleep the morning away. It determines whom he seeks out as friends, what they do... [Strong Men Weak Men by Leonard LeSourd. Chosen Books, 1990. Page 42.] The problem we have is a will problem. Our will is naturally set on the direction of "I"; we have a choice to make. We need to set the direction of our will on "Him" and fly His direction. After the big confession that Peter made when he said, You are the Christ, the Son of the Living God, Jesus called the entire crowd of his disciples together and laid this choice on them all, ...If anyone would come after me, he must deny himself and take up his cross daily [literally, according to the day] and follow me. For whoever wants to save his life [that is, control of it] will lose it, but whoever loses his life for me will save it. - Luke 9:23-24. If you want to keep the direction and control of your life, you can, but you'll lose it and waste it! He's calling you in the choices you make every day to die to self, to choose His purpose in the events of that day, to be obedient in what you're called to that day, to become a servant and lose control of your life, only to find it's real meaning and purpose. So, what does that look like? How do we live that way? What is:

III. The Goal Of Our Servanthood (3-4a) You can look at it both positively and negatively. Stated negatively our goal is: 1. to remove all things from our lives which would discredit God A servant's behavior reflects on his Master. I read about a dedicated Muslim leader, a servant of Allah, one devoted to him to the max, and he has his own son publicly beheaded, simply for believing in Jesus. Does that tell you something about the god he serves? Do you want to follow that god? A servant's actions reflect his Master's orders. You're a servant of the true God; would people who see your actions want to follow Him or would your actions prove to be an obstacle, a stumbling block, to keep them from Him? Our goal through His strength is to remove all those things that are contrary to His character and nature and will, such as anger, bitterness, greed, lust, and so on, so that our sin won't cloud their vision of Him. Or, stated positively, our goal as servants is:

2. to continually demonstrate that we are serving God, to let the presence and glory of God shine through us in every way, in every circumstance, in every opportunity we have. What does that look like? Well, one key area Paul mentions from his own life is this:

a. we demonstrate His patience in enduring:

- pressure: troubles, hardships, distresses (4b)
- persecution: beatings, imprisonments, riots (5a)
- difficult conditions: hard work, sleepless nights, hunger (5b)

It is as believers endure these things willingly, unchangingly devoted to Him by His power, that our message of reconciliation is broadcast the loudest. When they see that we have a God who is faithful to His servants in the pressures and troubles of life, that we don't give up and curse His name when tragedy strikes, but instead thank Him for our trials and worship Him, that speaks to them. When they see believers whose love for God is so great that they are willing to endure persecution and torture and imprisonment rather than deny Him, that speaks to them. When they see that they can close the churches and imprison the leaders but the church only grows, that speaks to them. And when they see believers who are willing to endure all kinds of difficult conditions and sacrifice their own comforts and privileges and give their all to share His love, that kind of servanthood speaks volumes! A God who can create that kind of endurance in His servants is worth serving! A second key area is this:

b. we demonstrate His character by displaying:

- purity, understanding, patience, kindness (6a)
- the Holy Spirit, sincere love, truthful speech (6b-7a)

Do any of these things sound familiar? Several of them are listed as fruits of the Spirit in Gal. 5. They are the character of our Master. We choose purity even when we're tempted greatly. We're patient and longsuffering when we're wronged. We're always kind and caring about the needs of others. We love even the ones who hate us and we always tell the truth, even when lying would seem more advantageous. We live in an un-natural, indeed, a SUPERnatural way. We flesh out in our daily lives as servants the very character of the God we serve. Gods always make their worshippers into their own image; they command them to do the things that reveal their own character. So, you become like what you worship. A God who produces that kind of character in His servants is worth worshipping! As we are obedient servants, we are revealing His character all the time! Then thirdly:

c. we display His power by wielding weapons of righteousness (7b-8a) There are lots of weapons in the world that people use to accomplish their goals. The terrorists use their bombs and the dictators use their armies. The powerful use their lying and extortion and money and whatever else they can get their hands on to advance their cause. But here stand us believers, not willing to use any of those, but instead holding out our simple weapons of righteousness, like always being honest and telling the truth and keeping promises and speaking out against injustice and oppression and praying for our enemies and loving them. And we keep on sticking to those weapons:

- whether they are used for attack or defense That phrase “in the right hand and in the left” can also be translated “for or attack or for defense”. We advance our cause in righteousness and we defend ourselves the same way. And we stick with them:

- whether they bring us glory or dishonor Whether they appear to triumph outwardly or not, whether we win or lose. We stick by them because they’re right and we do it:

- whether others give us a good report or bad report No matter what they say about us, no matter what they call us, no matter whether they call us names and accuse us of things untrue, we still cling to our weapons of righteousness.

And through those weapons of righteousness God displays His power which is mightier than that of the sword! And you can watch it happening all over the world. Time after time God’s enemies fall at His feet in worship, overwhelmed by weapons of love and righteousness, and His power is made clearly known through our very weakness! Do you get it? Simply by being obedient servants, by doing His will every day, we demonstrate and display Him in the way we speak and act; we reveal Him, His amazing endurance, His beautiful character, His awesome power, and it is through that process of daily servanthood that He carries out the ministry of reconciliation! And it’s a glorious process! When we think of a servant’s life, we think of a life that is menial, low, dull, unexciting, filled with laborious unrewarding, unfulfilling acts that nobody would want. But nothing could be further from the truth. Servanthood to Jesus Christ is to be involved in the most exciting, fulfilling adventure you can embark on. It is to directly involve yourself smack in the middle of a spiritual war that is the conflict of the ages. It is to throw yourself into the front lines of battle and be used of God to tear down Satanic strongholds next door and all over the world by simple daily obedience! Paul talks about:

IV. The Glory Of Our Servanthood (8b-10)

1. when we’re seen as imposters, we’re genuine When people say we’re not real, that our motives are wrong, that we only want something, that we’re deluded religious fanatics, deceivers who lead people astray, that our God is not real, we’re genuine! In fact, we’re the only ones who are genuine and real; truly what we say we are. The rest of the world are the impostors, having a form of religion, but knowing nothing of the real power of God!

2. when we’re seen as unknown, we’re well known When they say, “You’re just a bunch of nobodies, a little minority, preaching something nobody ever heard of.”, we’re well-known, fully known to God. In fact, we’re the only ones He knows and all the rest will hear, “Away from Me, I never knew you!” one day.

3. when we’re seen as dying, behold we’re living on How many a ruler and a conqueror has slain us by the hundreds, has persecuted and crushed us and yet behold, we’re living on! How many have thought they could kill the body, but after that had no more that they could do; we live on. We’re eternal and we’re the only ones with eternal life.

4. when we’re seen as punished, we’re not destroyed When they see us as beaten, chastised, punished, put down, no matter what they do to us, we’re not killed off, not destroyed. We survive!

5. when we’re seen as sorrowing, we’re always rejoicing When they make our lot so miserable and make us suffer so that we know sorrow after sorrow and they look at us and say, who would want to be one of them and live that life of suffering, when they look closer, they find that in the midst of our sorrow we are always rejoicing in the Lord, always praising Him and nothing can crush and take away our joy.

6. when we’re seen as poor, we’re making many rich We Christians of the earth are often the poor who have nothing; often we live in very simple and humble circumstances. And yet by our very servanthood, we’re making many rich with the glorious spiritual riches that are found in Jesus Christ.

7. when we’re seen as having nothing, we possess everything We’re servants. We have nothing to call our own here. It all belongs to the Master. The world looks at us and says we have nothing. We don’t have fame, we don’t have power, we don’t have wealth, we don’t have money and pleasure and all the things that the world says really matter. But the truth is that we possess everything! We are God’s heirs; we are receiving a Kingdom which cannot be shaken. And if you don’t think servanthood pays in the end, I leave you with Jesus’ words:

And do not set your heart on what you will eat or drink; do not worry about it. For the pagan world runs after all such things, and your Father knows that you need them. But seek his kingdom, and these things will be given to you as well.

"Do not be afraid, little flock, for your Father has been pleased to give you the kingdom. Sell your possessions and give to the poor. Provide purses for yourselves that will not wear out, a treasure in heaven that will not be exhausted, where no thief comes near and no moth destroys. For where your treasure is, there your heart will be also. Be dressed ready for service and keep your lamps burning, like men waiting for their master to return from a wedding banquet, so that when he comes and knocks, they can immediately open the door for him. It will be good for those servants whose master finds them watching when he comes. I tell you the truth, he will dress himself to serve, will have them recline at the table and will come and wait on them. - Luke 12:29-37.

Perfecting Holiness Out Of Reverence • 6:11-7:1 • The Issue of Purity

I want to talk to you today about a passage that has either been ignored or very much misunderstood and misused. There is a portion of the Christian church that places a great deal of emphasis on this chapter and has developed out of it a complete doctrine of separation that has caused them to wall themselves off from everybody and everything, even from a great many who are their true brothers and sisters in Christ. On the other hand, this passage addresses an issue, the ignoring of which has been the downfall of virtually every major denomination you can name. To understand it, we begin by examining carefully:

I. The Problem Paul Faced (11-13)

1. the Corinthians were withdrawing from Paul and his teaching They were withholding their affections from him. He was the one who had brought the Gospel to Corinth and started the church. They loved him and were grateful to him for bringing them the truth. But now they were backing away from that free and open affirmation of him and his message and their association with him. So much so that he made this heartfelt appeal. Now, why were they doing it? It should obviously have something to do with the next verse (14), with their association with "unbelievers". But what is he specifically talking about?

2. they were doing it because of the influence of false teachers All through the letter you can find him defending himself, talking about other teachers who had come among them recently and were teaching them some things that were different. Look at what Paul is worried about in (11:2-3). He's afraid that they might be deceived by false teachers:

a. they were preaching a different message (11:4) It wasn't that the Buddhists had showed up or the Hindus or the Zoroastrians. These were teachers who claimed to be followers of Christ but were teaching differently about Him and about the Spirit and about the gospel, the way to be saved. They were saying things like, for instance, "Jesus was not fully human; he was a created being that God sent down, above the angels, below God, but certainly not a man like us." Or they were saying, "You must be circumcised and keep the law if you want to follow Jesus." And these people were being listened to and tolerated in the church there. At the same time:

b. they were claiming superiority for themselves (11:5-6) They said, "We are the true apostles; we are superior. Paul was of the old school. He didn't understand correctly. We have the true message." And there were lots of other charges you can find implied through the book, "He doesn't have the background, he's not a trained speaker, he's not...." And as they put down Paul and his message, it impacted the Corinthians to back away. But here's the truth:

c. they were in reality Satan's workers (11:13-15) Instead of attacking the church through persecution, Satan was infiltrating the church with false teachers who were masquerading as messengers of light, when in reality they were Satan's agents to corrupt the church!

Do you know that just over 100 years ago or so, practically every Protestant church in America preached the Gospel? They believed the Bible was inerrant, that Christ was God, that He died for our sins and rose again and was the only way of salvation. People were hearing the truth and being saved in the Methodist Church and the Lutheran Church and the Presbyterian Church. The many Baptist churches were winning converts and even the Episcopalians for all their high church trappings were holding much more closely to the truth. However, a whole movement rose up in our colleges and seminaries around the turn of the century which declared that the Bible wasn't really inspired by God but was the opinions of good men, that Christ was a great teacher and a moral example but not the Son of God, that He rose from the dead in spirit but not in body and He certainly couldn't have been born of a virgin. Salvation is by being good and imitating His love and caring. And that movement of "Higher Criticism" or "liberalism" as we call it, was tolerated. It was left to grow and to prosper and do you know that within 30-40 years it infected virtually every major denomination in the land to the very core. Now please don't misunderstand; I am not saying there are no evangelical churches within the major denominations. There are. I am saying that today (in the Western world) we "evangelicals" who believe what Paul believed have gone from being the majority to being a small minority and millions have drifted away from the truth that gives life! What happened at Corinth has happened here! And we're not immune; it could happen to us or to our children!

The Issue: Spiritual Purity - How can we keep from drifting away? - Heb. 2:1, We must pay more careful attention, therefore, to what we have heard, so that we do not drift away. That is, from the truth, from the pure and true Gospel. Paul's answer is in verse 14 where he lays down a key:

II. The Principle: Literally, Stop becoming different-yoked with unbelievers! (14) Christ said, Take my yoke upon you. A yoke is the wooden bar that you put across the shoulders of two animals so they can pull a plow or a wagon. The Greek word means to yoke together two different kinds of animals, like the Old Testament law that says not to yoke an ox and a donkey together. So, the basic point is that you've got to stop getting into the yoke of Christ with people who are of an entirely different species. Now, first of all, let's look at:

1. what this does NOT mean It does not mean:

a. don't associate with any unbeliever There are those who take this to mean that we should have just as little as possible to do with unbelievers. Work for a Christian, hire a Christian carpenter, go to a Christian dentist and doctor, and spend all your time with Christians. Especially avoid the unbeliever if he happens to practice obvious sin, like he smokes or drinks or is living with someone or practices a false religion. Live as much as possible in a sheltered little Christian enclave. But that's not what Paul meant at all. In fact, we should associate with unbelievers! If he meant that, he'd never have written 1 Cor. 5:9-10. So, that's not what he means. But some have taken it to mean:

b. don't be friends with any unbeliever Drop all your unsaved friends. Get rid of them. You can know unbelievers, but don't let them into your life. Don't build friendships; don't build relationships. Do you know that statistics tell us that within 2 years the average person who comes to Christ has no non-Christian friends left? That's sad because it is so very unlike the example of Jesus which says we should! - Mk. 2:15-17. Jesus deliberately associated with sinners all the time; that's how they came to believe! He was their friend and yet He was the pure, spotless lamb of God. We need to cultivate associations with unbelievers; that's the only way to reach them! So, it doesn't mean that, and then some have taken it to mean:

c. don't cooperate with any unbeliever A yoke joins two animals to work together, so don't do anything together with non-Christians. Don't join the Lions Club or the Rotary or the fire house. Don't become their business partner; don't let them contribute money or help with the projects you're involved in. Don't become dependent on them or accept their aid in any way. Yet the very example of Paul seems to say that we should! In Acts 28:1-10 he was shipwrecked on the island of Malta and it was the pagan idolaters who took him and his crew in and fed them and housed them all winter and Paul didn't hesitate about it one bit. There are lots of things in which we should cooperate with unbelievers for their good and ours. So, what does it mean? Remember the context:

2. it means: avoid equal-status relationship with false teachers He's not talking about the average non-Christian next door or at the office. It's false teachers he's got in view. Paul's saying, "You're separating yourself from ME through their influence; rather you should be separating yourself from THEM, because they're polluting and defiling your faith and causing you to drift away!" When we consider those who deliberately preach and teach a different gospel our brethren and call them part of the church and let them teach and listen to them as though they were one of us, we are exposing ourselves to grave spiritual danger. We should cut off those kinds of yokes. Look at what John said in 2 John 7-11. In those days many Christian workers like Paul were "circuit riders". They would come to a town and stay with the believers there and be fed and cared for by them while they preached and taught and did evangelistic work. John says, "If the guy doesn't stand for the truth, don't support him; don't help him do his deceptive work!" He's not saying if a Jehovah's Witness knocks on your door, slam it in his face. All that does is teach him that "born-again" Christians are rude and ignorant and don't love anybody, which reinforces what he's been taught to begin with. He's saying that when you find a person who claims to be Christian but is teaching false doctrines, don't count him as being like you; you certainly don't let him teach you and you don't aid or encourage him in teaching others. Maintain spiritual purity, the pure truth, the pure Gospel at all costs!

What makes this so hard is that false teachers don't have the appearance of evil. They appear as angels of light. They are probably kind and caring, sincere, dedicated, committed to what they believe and teach. They probably do lots of good things. They talk about Jesus, about loving others, about praying, and it is hard to recognize them for what they really are! I know! Before I knew any better, I spent four years in a college and three years in a denominational seminary where the professors were just such people! Here were religious people, kind people, educated and dedicated people who claimed Christianity, but when you thought carefully, they denied everything we hold dear about Jesus and the Bible. Because I was pretty well grounded, I wrestled hard and was able to make that distinction, to see the truth of who they were and what they taught. But not everyone did. Their impact on students was profound and, of course, those students went out to fill pulpits all over the land, now having become like their teachers, having drifted away from the simple truth! I saw many classmates who started out with true faith drift away in that fashion. Perhaps the closest to my heart was a young man named Dennis who when I knew him was on fire for Jesus Christ. He sang in the choir and solos; he led in worship and even preached on occasion. He witnessed at work and went out visiting with me to share the Gospel. He felt called of God into full-time ministry, but had no Bible training. When we moved here, I encouraged him to come east and go to a solid Bible School, not to do it like I did. But he and his wife chose the security of staying on and going to the denominational college. He was given a student church and when I visited a few years later, I asked him how he was doing spiritually, whether he was still holding to the truth of the Bible and whether he was still encouraging people to be saved by trusting in Jesus. It broke my heart to hear him say, "I guess I just don't believe like that anymore." It was not long after that he was divorced from his wife and their 4 children. And from there I lost track. He just drifted away from the truth and shipwrecked. Why? Because he failed to heed this principle; he failed to unyoke himself from false teachers. Now here's:

3. what you must understand about them (14b-16a) No matter how wonderful they may look on the surface the real truth is that:

a. you are about opposing purposes: righteousness vs. lawlessness You're about pursuing and partaking of the righteousness of God. What they're about, no matter how upright and moral it may seem, is really anomia, lawlessness, leading people to live without law, to ignore the law that God has laid down in His word concerning His son. And:

b. you have opposing natures: light (truth) vs. darkness Light and darkness are mutually exclusive. The very nature of one is the opposite of the other. When light comes, darkness can't be there, by definition. And light is always in the Bible a figure of truth and of good. While darkness is a figure of evil and deceit. When a Muslim says, "Jesus is not God, nor is he the Son of God, but merely a good man and a prophet", we immediately call that blasphemy. But when a so-called "Christian" theologian writes that same thing, we publish it in a textbook and make students read it! It is the same thing. You are about light, about the truth once for all revealed to the saints. The work of false teachers is an evil work, a work of darkness. Moreover:

c. you serve opposing masters: Christ vs. Satan You are serving Christ who is about the redemption of the world; they are serving Satan's purpose (even if they don't realize it), who is about the destruction of the world! You'll never see Christ and Satan doing a duet in harmony, will you? So, you can't do one with them either. Your direction of service is entirely opposite from theirs. And:

d. you have opposing status: believing vs. disbelieving You believe. Yet, it is not that they are simply unbelievers, in that they've not had opportunity to believe. They've heard the truth and rejected it. They have chosen to disbelieve, to reject what God has revealed about His Son and to lead others into that rejection. And finally:

e. you worship opposing deities: God vs. idols You're worshipping the true and living God in relationship with Him. The God and the Jesus they've set up are man-made idols, false imitations of the real. You're NOT worshipping and serving the same God. The god of the Jehovah's witnesses, the god of the Mormons, the god set up by liberal theology in the mainline church is not the God of the Bible, of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and Jesus, but only a man-made caricature which they have set up and bow down to.

For all the similarities and the language you may use that seems the same, you are as different as day and night, as far apart as east and west, and as divided as heaven and hell. To enter into any kind of an equal-status relationship with someone who professes Christianity but is in reality a false teacher, an enemy agent, is deadly! But listen to Jude 1:3-4, 19-21. Now, that posture is not going to be popular. People are not going to understand it. They're going to call you narrow-minded and prejudiced and divisive or maybe, like they called Peter and the Apostles, they'll call you unlearned and ignorant men who are living in the past! You can suffer for this; it can get tough. So, Paul reminds us of:

III. Our Reason For Spiritual and Moral Purity: We Are His Temple (16b-18) I'll take that any day. We who trust in Jesus as our personal Savior are the sons and daughters of God Almighty. He has received us. He is a Father to us! We're His people; we belong to Him! That's what really counts. But it says we're even more. We're His temple. Individually, our body is the Temple of the Holy Spirit; He lives in us. And because of that, corporately, we who believe are the Temple of God, His dwelling place. Now look what Paul says:

1. God lives in us Literally, I will dwell in them. Just as God's presence once literally dwelt inside an earthly temple, so now He literally dwells inside us, inside our body and is joined to our spirit and so:

2. God walks about in us I will walk about in them. Where we go, He goes. What we see, He sees. What we listen to, He listens to. What we do, we engage Him in. We drag Him into everything we do and say and experience with us. In 1 Cor. 6, Paul says, "How can you get involved in sexual immorality? Don't you realize that you're His temple and you're dragging Him into it with you! You're defiling His temple!" We strive for moral purity because a holy God lives in us. And when we listen to someone teach that Jesus didn't rise bodily from the dead, that His death is not enough in itself to save us, that we must earn our salvation, and we give assent to that stuff or call that person a brother and treat him that way, think about God who's walking about in us. This is His Son who died, His Word revealed in truth, His message that's being falsely represented and blasphemed. We can't make Him party to that!! Not after all He's done for and in us! So, since we have all these great and precious promises, Paul admonishes us about:

IV. Our Responsibility For Spiritual and Moral Purity (7:1) We are:

1. to purify ourselves from (remove) ANYthing that defiles us Whether we're talking about a sinful habit that contaminates our body, a moral problem, a terrible temper, evil thought patterns or whether we're talking about tolerating and listening to false teachers which contaminates our mind and spirit, ANYTHING that defiles or contaminates us, that offends the Holy God who lives in us, has to go, has to be removed. That's expressing it negatively. Positively, what we're to do is:

2. to perfect (grow in) our holiness out of reverence for God Because we're in awe of His holiness in us, because we're aware of what it means to be forgiven and cleansed and made holy before Him, we're constantly striving to make our holiness complete in our daily behavior, to make it like His, to lay aside anything moral or spiritual that hinders our purity.

David Branon writes: "Along the country road that our family takes to a favorite recreational spot is a house that we always notice. Every time we pass it, someone calls out, 'Perfect house!' We call this ranch-style home by this name because from our vantage point, as we whiz by, it looks flawless. The lawn looks like carpet. The shrubs are perfectly clipped. The windows shine. Nothing looks shabby or out of place. As we drive past, we usually get a clear indication why the house looks so neat. The owners are almost always outside working to keep things looking nice. With bucket or rake in hand, they seem determined to fight off dirt and decay and unwanted growth to keep their home looking good. As a homeowner who understands how tough it is to keep everything just right, I can appreciate the efforts of this couple. But for me they also symbolize something else. In Scripture, God says, 'Be holy, for I am holy.' That means we are to strive for perfection. Like those homeowners, we can never reach perfection. Yet we must keep at it--cleaning out bad habits here, clipping troublesome thoughts there. It takes constant effort, but with the Spirit's help we are to continue in our drive for perfection. Perfecting holiness out of reverence for God!"

The Suffering And The Glory - 2 Corinthians 1-7 Godly Sorrow That Brings Repentance • 7:2-16 • The Issue of Sin

Suffering comes into our lives from a variety of sources. Sometimes it is purely from circumstances; we lose our job, we get sick, we fall and get hurt or what have you. Then sometimes it comes to us intentionally at the hand of outsiders; someone cheats us or yells at us or even persecutes us. But what often hurts the worst is the suffering we bring on one another in our families, our friendships and our personal relationships. The German philosopher Schopenhauer said the human race is like a bunch of porcupines huddling together on a cold winter's night. He said, "The colder it gets outside, the more we huddle together for warmth; but the closer we get to one another, the more we hurt one another with our sharp quills..." Those quills, those hurts, are the result of the presence of sin in our lives. We frequently sin against one another and cause hurt. And in chapter 7 we can see a clear example of:

I. The Suffering That Occurs As The Result Of Sin (5-9a) Now let's review some things here. First of all:

1. the Corinthians' sin had hurt Paul When we studied chapter 2, I shared with you that Paul had evidently made a brief and difficult visit to Corinth during his three years at Ephesus. He was evidently not well-received. I mentioned to you last week the evidence that they had been tolerating false teachers among them and withdrawing from Paul. And as they chose to reject Paul's teaching and to reject Paul himself, it hurt him. 2:1 calls it a "painful visit", one which brought him sorrow and grief. So, Paul went back and wrote a letter, one which has not been preserved, and:

2. Paul's stern letter had hurt the Corinthians It was not malicious; it was not vengeful; it was not intended to hurt them intentionally. 2 Cor. 2:4, For I wrote you out of great distress and anguish of heart and with many tears, not to grieve you but to let you know the depth of my love for you. It was to tell them the truth about his own love and his distress at their choices and to urge them to turn away from their sin. And it worked. It impacted and grieved them in a positive way:

3. their pain produced deep sadness and change in them, but Paul didn't know it. He was worried at how it was received. He sent Titus there in person to find out, before he himself arrived. When he left Ephesus and headed across into Macedonia, he was full of apprehension about them on the inside, but then suddenly Titus showed up with a wonderful report in verse 7. God had worked! The letter had broken their hearts! They did love Paul. They did long to see him again. Their sorrow was true and genuine and it had led them to repentance from their sin. And:

4. this tremendous change greatly encouraged Paul (4) Notice also 7b and 9a. He was flying high, filled with joy, not because they had been hurt by his letter (he initially regretted that), but because the temporary pain it caused them had led them to profound change and restoration. So, the issue is:

The Issue: Sin In The Believer's Life - How God Intends Us To React The Corinthians are not the only believers who choose to sin and hurt people. It happens TO us all the time. Our friends and loved ones, fellow believers, do and say things that grieve us deeply. And Paul's example of communicating with them honestly out of a heart full of love and then forgiving and receiving them and being overjoyed, is the process God wants us to use when it happens TO us. But that's not my point today. We DO it to others all the time. We are more often like the Corinthians who choose to sin and hurt others, than we are like Paul being hurt! I sin! YOU sin! I cause people pain by my words and by my actions and sometimes by my lack of words and actions! Steve Farrar writes, "About six months ago I blew up at my daughter Rachel just before bedtime. Actually, I blew up at her about 45 minutes after she was supposed to be in bed. It had been a long day, and I was extremely tired. For some reason, it seemed she kept lingering and hovering around the house. I wanted peace and quiet. Finally, Mount St. Helens blew. I'm sure the neighbors wondered what had angered me so. I told Rachel that she had 15 seconds to be in bed. She went to bed crying as the hot lava of my wrath pursued her up the stairs. After I came back down, Mary told me there were several good reasons she had been up. Some special event was to take place at school the next morning, and Rachel was getting ready for it. She wasn't lingering, she was preparing. If I had bothered to ask Rachel what was going on, I could have discovered that for myself. But I didn't. I just vented on her." Just change the names and that same drama plays at our house. And I'd wager that it or one like it plays at yours. It may be the opposite; sin can be very quiet and even unrealized, like breaking your wife's heart by disappointing her and putting down her best efforts and being insensitive to her feelings and needs. It can be a quiet jealousy toward a brother or sister for what they have and you don't. You and I are saved, but YOU and I sin, and we hurt people. Now, how does God intend for us to react once it dawns on us or someone points it out to us? It should produce sorrow. But Paul spells out for us here that there are:

II. The Two Types Of Sorrow (9b-10) First, there is:

1. sorrow as God intended, Godly sorrow. This type of sorrow is characterized by three things:

a. it produces a change of mind about the nature of the act which we call repentance. The Greek word is metanoia which means to change the mind, to change the way you think about something. But it's more than, "Gee, I wish I hadn't done that." A man in a parking lot backed into another car. He simply didn't look to see if the way was clear, and he was obviously at fault. But he jumped out of his car, yelled furiously at the woman driving the car he hit, and told her it was her fault for getting in his way. He continued to blame her when he spoke to his insurance agent later. Eventually she was cleared, but only after going through tremendous anguish. I'm sure he was sorry he backed out of the space, but he never changed his mind about what he'd done. We're all like that. We sin because we "have to", or we "couldn't help it". It was somebody else's fault, even God's, because he didn't rescue us. True sorrow means changing your mind about the nature of what you did, acknowledging it was wrong, that I was wrong! That's what God intended sorrow to produce! But it does more:

b. it produces a change of direction in the life For an unsaved person, it is this change of mind about his sin that brings him to Christ for forgiveness and eternal salvation. But the word salvation in this context, when we apply it to a believer who already has eternal salvation, should be taken in its primary meaning of deliverance. When you change your mind about a sin, it leads to deliverance from it, to stopping it. Repentance is often described as a change of direction, to be going one way and then stop and go the other. If I believe it is wrong, I will not do it any-more! And thirdly:

c. it produces a change that is permanent You don't regret your repentance. You don't go back on it and start to see your sin in a better light. You don't slide back into the old mindset; your mind and behavior are permanently changed. That's sorrow as God intended it to work. But Paul mentions another type of sorrow:

2. sorrow as the world practices it, worldly sorrow! What's that?

a. it is a self-oriented regret based on circumstances and consequences "I wish I hadn't done it; look at how it messed my life up; these consequences are painful." It's not about good and evil, right and wrong, or holiness before God. It's about me and what feels good and what I have to suffer or don't. It's sorrow about being caught, rather than about doing wrong. And this kind of sorrow:

b. it does not usually produce a permanent change in behavior If I don't do it again, it's because it's to my own advantage. But you can bet that if the circumstances are right and I can benefit by it, I will do it again, because my heart has not changed. And the result is that:

c. it leaves sin in control to work its deadly effect - Rom. 6:23 says sin always pays off in death. But death is not simply physical death or eternal punishment. It comes by degrees. When you yield to it, sin kills. It kills relationships. It kills opportunities. It kills your walk with God and your service for Him. It kills marriages and parent-child relationships. It kills the desire to do right and to change. It saps life of meaning and value. And the only way to break its deadly grip is a godly sorrow that produces true repentance!

The Corinthians had this godly sorrow and had genuinely repented of their sin. Paul was convinced of it by the report Titus had brought him. He heard about things in them that convinced him that they were not just filled with worldly sorrow but with the real thing. And he spells them out in verse 11 so we can use them as a measuring stick for ourselves. How do I know when I (or someone else) am genuinely repentant? There are six:

III. The Marks Of Genuine Repentance (11) Look at that last phrase. At every point they had proved themselves, not innocent of the original deed, but literally holy, that is, to have a holy character on the inside. These are the things that convince me that your life has changed to line up with the holy character of who you actually are in Christ. But let's apply them personally. If I am truly repentant, I will have:

1. an earnestness that demands the sin be dealt with and soon I won't be content to try to hide it or cover it over anymore. My goal won't be to try to get others to forget about it or to put off having to deal with it as long as possible. I will have a drive to deal with it. This thing must be set right and soon. It's important and I don't want it in my life. There is a haste, a drivenness, an inability to rest until the issue has been fully settled. There will also be:

2. an eagerness to give a full and complete explanation Not to clear myself in the sense of defending my behavior and proving myself innocent, though the Greek word can mean that. But it can also mean to give a long and reasoned explanation, a full and complete account, to tell the whole story. If I truly abhor what I've done, I don't want to hide any part of it any more. I want to confess to the whole thing, to get it out of the darkness and into the light and get it off of me. I'm eager to say, "I did it" and to tell all I did, not to hold back as much as possible. Then, there will be:

3. a deep grief over the commission of the sin Indignation means to be very displeased, to be grieved by something, but in this case it's not by the actions of others, it's by MY OWN sin! I'm displeased with myself. I'm grieved that I have done this thing, that I could stoop that low, that I could fall. I am truly sad that I did it. Yet it will be more than just grief; it will be:

4. an alarm over the spiritual danger involved A healthy reverent fear that is born out of the realization of the danger of my own actions, of what the choice to sin could do to me and to the other person and to my relationship with God! The Corinthians had very nearly thrown away the truth of the Gospel by yoking up with false teachers, had very nearly forfeited God's gracious gift of truth to follow a lie. I'm sure they shuddered when they thought about it! There was a new respect for holiness and a new fear of sin and what it can do! And then, when I'm truly repentant there is always:

5. a deep longing and concern for the one(s) injured I know I've hurt somebody and that breaks my heart. I long to reach out to them, to help them, to heal them, to reestablish a relationship with them. As a simple illustration, just think how you feel when you accidentally bump into or knock over a small child, how you know you've hurt them and instantly your heart just wants to reach out to hold them and make it better. When there's been intentional sin and you're repentant, you have the same longing, the same concern only even deeper. And finally, there is always:

6. a readiness to right the wrong: to accept punishment and make amends There are no excuses and no weaseling out of it. I did it and I deserve the consequences of what I did. I accept the responsibility. I'll do the time. I'll pay the fine. I'll accept that penalty. And that extends to doing whatever I can to repair the damage, to give back what I took away, to right the wrong, to pay the bill. I read a story about a farmer who, a few years before, had sold a combine at an auction. However, in order to increase the sale price, he first set the hour meter back so the combine didn't appear to be as used as it really was. During a revival crusade in his church, the farmer came under conviction for his dishonesty. He confessed his sin to God and determined to make restitution. Next, he talked with a farm implement dealer to determine how much less the combine would have been worth had he not tampered with the hour meter. Finally, he went to the new owner to confess what he had done and to offer $1,500 in restitution. The buyer was taken aback and said, "This is unbelievable. My wife just underwent a series of cancer treatments which have put us under financial strain." He went on to explain that he and his wife had determined that the amount they needed to get out from under the financial burden was $1,500. So, two households were blessed by the genuine repentance of one man." [Personal letter, Oct 17, 1995.] There's a realization of the damage and a determination to fix it.

Those are the marks that demonstrate my heart is pure, that my sorrow is godly, my repentance genuine and my life changed. But as he closes the subject Paul emphasizes:

IV. The Key: To See What Is Really True Of Yourself Before God (12-13a) Godly sorrow and repentance are not first of all for the one who did the wrong. They're not first of all for the injured party you've hurt. The primary concern is that God's truth is revealed and that you see what is really true of yourself in God's sight, the way He sees you. This whole thing proved something. Despite all their faults and their sin, the Corinthians were genuine in their hearts. At the core, they really did love God and want to please Him, even though for a time they chose to sin. At the core they really did love Paul even though they treated him badly for a time. God looks at the heart. Nothing is hidden from Him. He wants us to see what He sees about ourselves. When old Job, who had been mouthing off pretty loudly at God, was confronted with his sin and had his eyes opened, here's what he said, I am unworthy—how can I reply to you? I put my hand over my mouth. I spoke once, but I have no answer— twice, but I will say no more. - Job 40:4-5. My ears had heard of you but now my eyes have seen you. Therefore I despise myself and repent in dust and ashes. - 42:5-6. Job said, "Now I see You for Who You are and me for who I am. I have no choice but to change." And he did. When you sin, do you sorrow as God intended? Do you exhibit the marks of genuine repentance? Or do you regularly justify, hide, and gloss over your sins? Be honest. Look at Him. He knows!

I never did tell you the end of the story of what happened with Steve and his daughter Rachel upon whom he'd vented his wrath wrongly at bedtime. Here's the rest: I made my way back up the stairs and asked her forgiveness. I felt like a real jerk. We prayed together, and I tucked her in and decided the safest place for me was in bed as well. I told Mary I was turning in. But I couldn't drop off to sleep. My explosion had unsettled me, too. I kept thinking of the enormous damage I could inflict on my exquisite ten-year-old daughter without even realizing it. The last thing I wanted to do was to crush her delicate spirit. Although we had patched things up and she had forgiven me, I couldn't get her off my mind. After an hour or so, I got up, got in the car, and drove down to the 24-hour supermarket. I found a red rose in a nice little vase, and a card with a man peering out of a doghouse, and headed home. I wrote Rachel a note telling her that I really did love her and that I really was wrong. Then I placed the rose and the card on the kitchen table. It was the first thing she saw when she walked in the next morning. I figured after ruining her evening, the least I could do would be to make her day. It was worth the late-night trip. Instead of going off to school with memories of the red hot lava, she could think of her red serene rose...and a dad who was genuinely sorry." [Point Man by Steve Farrar. Multnomah, 1990. Pages 214-215.] The situation is not always that simple, but the sorrow can always be that genuine.

The Grace Of Giving - 2 Corinthians 8-9

What Is Giving? - 8:1-8

Over the next six weeks I'm going to do a systematic study on the subject of Christian Giving. I am doing it, not simply because we are behind our expenses right now, but for a much deeper reason. You see, for many generations, a habit of significant giving was viewed as normal for a believer. Previous generations saw and understood significant giving as a normal part of the Christian life; it was as important a part of the Christian life as reading the Bible and praying and going to church; they committed to a principle of giving and held to it in prosperity or adversity, inflation or depression. But many people in the current generation have never learned to make the principle of giving a significant part of their life. The number of those who do so is growing less all the time. We, the church, have failed to teach the truth about giving; except for those who continually beg for money, we have been silent on the issue! We have openly said, "Give Jesus your heart!", but we have been reluctant to go further and say, "Give Jesus your wallet!" in any kind of a concrete way. Yet God has a great deal to say in His Word about giving, so we are going to thoroughly study 2 Cor. 8-9, the two chapters of the Bible which are completely devoted to this subject alone and consolidate many of the principles that God wants us to know about giving. Now let me begin by giving you some brief background information. As he writes to the Corinthians, Paul is appealing to them concerning a huge relief project.

1. Paul recognized a tremendous need Luke tells us in Acts 11 that a severe famine began during the time of Claudius, around 46 AD. That pretty much means that there were several years of drought when crops did not grow. In the land of Judea, it was especially severe and secular sources tell us that for a time some even starved and food prices quadrupled. The new Christians at Antioch in Syria quickly sent initial help in Acts 12 to the believers in Jerusalem, delivered by Paul and Barnabas, so he saw the devastation there personally. Then that church sent them off on a three year plus missionary journey planting churches throughout Asia Minor and when he returned, Paul went up to Jerusalem once again in the year 49 AD for a council with the apostles. He tells us in Galatians 2:10 that ...they asked us to remember the poor, the very thing I was eager to do. Evidently between the long-term effects of the famine and the persecution that was ever present by the Jews, the believers in Jerusalem and Judea were still very poor and suffering. At the end of Paul's third missionary journey in the year 57 AD Paul wrote a letter to the Romans in which he said, At present, however, I am going to Jerusalem bringing aid to the saints. For Macedonia and Achaia have been pleased to make some contribution for the poor among the saints at Jerusalem. - Rom. 15:25-26. Paul had indeed not forgotten the suffering of the poor believers there. On his second journey he had planted churches throughout Macedonia and Achaia, northern and southern Greece, and on his third journey:

2. Paul organized an extensive collection, urging all the Greek churches he had planted in Asia Minor and Macedonia and Achaia to take a collection for the poor and to send it to Jerusalem with him and representatives from their own fellowships. It was a massive project, one that not only engaged churches over a thousand mile stretch of geography, but also spanned perhaps 5 years until it was completed. About the year 55 Paul wrote the Corinthians a set of instructions on how to go about preparing this collection in 1 Cor. 16:1-4, Now concerning the collection for the saints: as I directed the churches of Galatia, so you also are to do. On the first day of every week, each of you is to put something aside and store it up, as he may prosper, so that there will be no collecting when I come. And when I arrive, I will send those whom you accredit by letter to carry your gift to Jerusalem. If it seems advisable that I should go also, they will accompany me. For several years the various churches collected weekly and saved up for this huge gift of aid. But then, before he actually arrived in Corinth for the last time to gather this collection, he wrote his second letter and:

3. Paul used this opportunity of the extensive collection to teach the important principles of giving which we have recorded for us for all time in chapters 8-9. Now, the basic principle underlying all of it is this:

I. Christian Giving Is An Act Of Grace (1) That word grace occurs three more times in these verses, the favor or privilege in verse 4, and the words act of grace in verses 6, 7. The term grace refers to something that is God's action, God's doing. We are saved by grace; that is, He does the saving. It is done solely by His energy and power. We are also to live by grace; that is, He does the living by His power. And giving is likewise an act of grace; that is:

1. it is a desire that is imparted by God when we are saved, when He puts His nature inside us. You see the kind of giving I'm talking about:

a. it is not normal in human nature The nature we are born with can be characterized by one word, SELF. It is self-oriented, self-seeking and self-serving. Sure, we are willing to give to our own family, to our own spouse and children and parents. We may even be willing to sacrifice to keep food on the table or put a child through college. But our families are part of our collective SELF. And sure, we may possibly be willing to share a little bit of our excess (if we have one) to advance some good cause. But human nature is such that once I get outside that family circle, I see that my own needs get met first. What I have is mine. I earned it; I own it; I decide what to do with it and I keep most of it! That's the habit pattern of our flesh, of the people all around us. And unfortunately, that's the vicious lie we will continue to live out of, if nobody ever teaches us the truth! But when I was saved God planted HIS nature inside me and giving:

b. it is the reflection of God's nature What is God like? God is love and love GIVES! God so loved the world that He GAVE His only Son... or Rom. 5:8, God demonstrates His love for us in that while we were still sinners Christ died for us! God gives to people who don't deserve it! God gives to His enemies; He gives to people that have no idea that He exists, let alone care that He exists. Yet He gives and gives and gives, and gives again. He is a giving God! And now that His nature is planted in us, we have within us an innate God-given, God-like desire to give! It is our nature to give! And as we yield our lives to His Spirit, we become givers, people whose love and whose habit and whose joy is to give! We go from being Scrooge on Christmas Eve to being Scrooge on Christmas morning (only not because we've been visited by three spirits of Christmas; we've been transformed by the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of Christ Himself!). We love to give. We WANT to give. Giving is part of who we are and because of that:

2. it is a desire that is undiminished by circumstances It doesn't change or evaporate when our circumstances change. It is not diminished:

a. by the measure of our own ability Some feel that giving is only for those who have a lot and by implication, it is only for me when I have a lot. But if the desire to give is inside me, then whether I have a lot or a little doesn't matter; I give whatever I have. I'll never forget when we were in Kyrgyzstan in 1999 some of us were in the home of a handicapped lady named Ludmila for a Bible study. A year earlier she had lost her only son at 16 but he had been a believer and through his death she had become a believer. Her pension at that time was around $5 a month but she was being helped a little by Venture International's Family to Family program and she was so filled with joy. But she had some money she had been saving up to give to God and when we came, she pulled out 200 som and said to me, "I want to give this to the Lord as a gift to Glenside Bible Church." It was the equivalent of $5, a whole month's pension to her, not much to us when our budget is some $300,000 each year, but to her a tremendous sacrifice. Those two bills and her picture hung on my office wall as a reminder and I put $5 in the plate on her behalf. She gave what she had out of joy because the desire was in her to give. In Indonesia they give pigs and chickens, in India they give handfuls of rice, but wherever they are and no matter how much they have, God's people love to give. Lack of income or even poverty doesn't diminish our desire! And neither is it diminished:

b. by the nature of our relationship with the recipient Of course it's easy to give to those you know and love, but Ludmila didn't know me from Adam and had never even heard of Glenside Bible Church, I'm sure! The Christians in Corinth or in Macedonia had never met the Christians in Jerusalem either, but they understood that God had a need in another part of His vineyard and that was enough! We give nearly $100,000 every year to reach people all over the world that we've never met! Christians around the world give millions of dollars each year to bring the Gospel to people who are Muslims or atheists, to people who hate Christianity and try to stamp it out! In essence they give to those who proclaim themselves enemies! Why? Because giving is an act of grace, it is a desire that has been planted inside them by God; it is their very nature! And:

3. it is a desire that was evident in the Macedonian churches (2-4) Paul wrote this letter as he was passing through Macedonia (northern Greece) and sent it on ahead with Titus down to Corinth (in southern Greece) to encourage the Corinthians to be ready to give when he arrived. And he holds up the Macedonians as an example to the Corinthians. Look how they gave:

a. they gave to an unconnected cause They had never seen the Christians in Jerusalem and Judea and probably never would. They would probably never even get a thank-you note! They only knew that brethren were suffering and they wanted to give. But Paul says:

b. they gave out of extreme poverty These were not rich people. They themselves were suffering and knew the depths of poverty. They knew what it was to literally pray for enough bread to eat each day. Yet:

c. they gave out of joy in the midst of trial Paul had been attacked in every Macedonian city on his previous journey, in Philippi, Thessalonica and Berea. These believers were probably persecuted and certainly were constantly discriminated against and ridiculed, all this on top of being poor! Yet they were so full of joy in the Lord and their salvation that they gave! And not only that:

d. they gave beyond their ability They gave more than they were really able to give, much more than they could afford. They sacrificed. They did without things, maybe even without food for a time, so that others might have what they need. It amazed Paul when he saw what they gave; it floored him. But they wanted to give and they asked God for a way to do it and He gave it to them. But notice that:

e. they gave out of inner desire It was entirely on their own; nobody begged them to give. In fact, they pleaded with Paul; they begged him for the privilege, the grace, to be included and allowed to give! Such poor people; how can it be?

Because true Christian giving is born out of a burning desire of the heart that is planted there by God Himself! It is an act of grace that is totally unnatural and nothing can stop it! But if that's so, then why doesn't every Christian give like that? The answer is our second point, that:

II. Christian Giving Stems From Complete Consecration (5) Just like any of the other works of the Lord in our life, it is planted there already. But we must choose, we must give voluntary cooperation, to that desire to give and let it rule and reign in our lives. And here's where that begins. First:

1. I give myself to the Lord I was saved at age 15, but at 19 God finally convinced me of the truth that He wanted absolute control of everything in my life. He was not simply there to help me; He was my Lord and Master. He wanted control of the direction of my life, of my relationships, of my hobbies and, yes, even my checkbook! So, when I finally surrendered to Him and gave Him my whole self, everything I did or had was included in that. Nothing I have is my own; it's God's! He gave it to me; He tells me what to do with it and how to use it. Now, that's issue we all have to settle first! A rich young man came to Jesus one day and Jesus told him to go home and sell everything he had and give it to the poor. But he walked away sad; he couldn't do it! Could you? What if Jesus told you to sell your house, to give away all the money in your bank account, to empty your retirement nest egg, for His cause; would you do it? I'm not saying He'll ask you to do that; I'm asking whether you would if He did! Is Jesus really Lord, as He was to these Macedonians? Is everything you have really His and are you willing to let Him tell you what to do with it? Now, once that's settled, then naturally:

2. I give myself to His people The lives of the Macedonians were radically transformed by this realization. They became totally involved in meeting the needs of others, the needs in the work of God. The same thing happened in the very beginning at Jerusalem. As soon as there were converts, they began to meet together and immediately began giving to one another to meet the needs of others. Luke's comment was, All the believers were one in heart and mind. No one claimed that any of his possessions was his own, but they shared everything they had. - Acts 4:32. It came naturally. Once they figured out that everything they had was God's, not theirs, they shared it to meet needs and as the church grew and caught God's vision for the world, the vision for their giving grew also, until here were these Macedonians willing to sacrifice for people a thousand miles away whom they'd never met! And once I recognize that:

3. I give according to His will I pray and let God direct me and distribute whatever He gives me the way He wants. Brother Yun is a Chinese house church leader who now lives in the west and here's his commentary: Multitudes of church members in the West are satisfied with giving their minimum to God, not their maximum. I've watched men and women during offering time in church. They open their fat wallets and search for the smallest amount they can give. This type of attitude will never do! Jesus gave his whole life for us and we give as little of our lives, time and money as we can back to God. What a disgrace! Repent! This may sound strange, but I even miss the offerings we used to give in China. On numerous occasions the leader of a meeting would announce, "We have a new worker who is leaving tomorrow to serve the Lord. Immediately every single person would completely empty their pockets of everything they had. With that money the worker would buy a train or bus ticket and leave the next day. Often this money was not just everything we had in our pockets at the time, but everything we owned in the whole world. [The Heavenly Man, p. 297-298]

How about me? Do I give God what I want to give or do I go to God and listen and give what He directs? Christian giving is an act of consecration; it is the laying down of all rights to everything I have. I am only a steward, a manager, who has been entrusted with the Master's property. I must submit to Him and give according to His will! Then finally we read here that:

III. Christian Giving Is A Spiritual Gift (6-8) It is a gift just like faith, knowledge and love. It is even mentioned specifically as a spiritual gift in Rom.12:6-8. It is planted in us by the Holy Spirit and it flows out from us when He is in control. So:

1. it cannot be forced by external command Giving that is commanded is a misnomer. It is not giving; it is taxation. It would be like saying you give to the IRS every April 15th. Neither I nor anybody else can tell you what you must give. In the Old Testament God levied a tax on His people to support the sacrificial system in Israel. He commanded a tithe, a tenth. That was not giving. But the people brought offerings over and above that out of love for God; those were acts of grace; those were giving. In our era God works differently. He does not stand outside and demand; He now lives inside and moves our hearts by His Spirit! He plants the gift of giving in us. However, like any spiritual gift:

2. it can be developed by practice Just like speaking or wisdom or knowledge, it can be improved upon by concentration and by use. I can improve my Christian giving by working at being responsive to the Spirit, by learning to listen to Him, by praying regularly about my finances and how He wants me to use all the material things I have. And further:

3. it can be encouraged by example Paul encouraged the Corinthians to develop their giving by lifting up the example of the Macedonians. Jesus did the same with His disciples. Look with me at Mk. 12:41-44. Now suppose you were sitting there that day. What would your reaction have been? Shock? Surprise? Would you have been awed by the huge amount put in by some rich person? Or would you have recognized the depth of the work of God in the life of that poor widow and stood in awe with tears in your eyes? Would you have gone away saying, "I want to be like her!" Jesus pointed her out as an example to us of the gift of giving. And finally, Paul says that giving:

4. it is a proof of the genuineness of our love for God and others It demonstrates it in a visible, tangible way; it is the evidence that we truly love God and because of that, we love others.

A businessman and a lawyer, both Christians were traveling in Korea. They saw in a field a young man pulling a plow while an old man held the handles. The lawyer was amused and took a picture, saying to the missionary who was guiding them, "I suppose they are very poor." He replied, "That is the family of Chi Boui. When the church was being built, they were eager to give so they sold their ox and gave the money. This spring they pull the plow themselves" The businessman said, "That must have been a real sacrifice." But the missionary replied, "They did not call it that. They thought it was fortunate that they had the ox to sell." Upon arriving home, the lawyer went to his pastor, showed the picture of the men plowing and told the story. He said, "I want to double my pledge. I have never yet given anything to my church that cost me anything." Christian giving is an act of the heart motivated by the Spirit of God. It is the Lord working through the hands of His surrendered servant to meet the needs of others. Is your giving true Christian giving? Is mine? Let's be encouraged by the example of the Macedonians, the example of Ludmila, the example of this widow in the Scripture and of these poor Koreans. Let's ask God to develop this grace of giving in us.

Why Do We Give? - 8:8-15

We are in a series of six studies through 2 Corinthians 8 and 9 on the subject of Christian giving. You know, God always has a reason for the way He chooses to do things. He always has a purpose in mind. Last week we saw that by planting His nature inside of us, God made us to be GIVING people. We don't give because we're commanded to, nor because we're ashamed not to; we give because it is now our very nature to give. Roosters crow; cats chase mice; pigs wallow in mud. Why? They can't help it; it's their nature. Christians give! It's our nature. Jesus Christ planted it in us by His Spirit. But the question is, why did He do that? Why did God make us to be givers? Why is giving such a significant matter that these two full chapters are given to it? God made giving a part of our lives for two very important purposes and unless we understand them, it will probably never seem like a primary issue to us, like it is something important to develop in our lives. God says it's important, first of all, because:

I. Giving Is Our Means Of Demonstrating Love (8-12) Verse 8 makes it very clear that giving is an act that demonstrates the sincerity of love. Love and giving are almost like faith and works. Faith without any works to demonstrate its reality is dead, useless, ineffective. It's actually not real. Our faith is demonstrated by what we do. Yet works without faith are useless and vain; they don't save anybody. Similarly, love without giving is a dead, empty, useless, insincere concept and giving without love is just another dead, empty work. Paul said, If I give all I possess to the poor ... but have not love, I gain nothing. - 1Cor 13:3. The two go together hand in hand, love, the reality of the heart's commitment, and giving, the outworking and evidence of that love. And to demonstrate that, Paul turns naturally to:

1. our example: Christ (9) This is one of the most beautiful verses in all of the New Testament. It encompasses the entire work of Christ in one statement and characterizes it as giving. We know, that is, we have experienced the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. How? In:

a. His giving: He became poor What does that mean? Does it mean that the Creator of the world who owned the cattle on a thousand hills was born into a poor carpenter's family in a cattle stall with the animals? Does it mean that He never owned a place He could call home or carried more than the clothes on His back? Yes, it means all that, but it means so much more than that. Look with me at Phil. 2:5-8. His becoming poor was not primarily a material thing. He emptied Himself for us. He set aside all His glory, His privileges, His power. He became a man and ultimately, He GAVE His life! He literally gave everything He had. Why? Paul tells us:

b. His purpose: that we might be rich Does that mean materially? Of course not! Many, if not most, Christians in the world are still very poor. But spiritually we are all billionaires! Paul said to the Ephesians, Praise be to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us in the heavenly realms with every spiritual blessing in Christ... to the praise of his glorious grace, which he has freely given us in the One he loves. In him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, in accordance with the riches of God's grace. - Eph. 1:3,6-7. We received every spiritual blessing He has. We have been given all the riches of His grace. We have sonship, heirship, authority. We are kings and priests unto our God with access to and communication with Him. We will one day be endowed with all of His glory and made like Him forever and ever. We are rich beyond measure! And the point is that He gave everything up in order to give all this to us. And that's how we know He loves us! Look at what John says about:

c. its effect - 1 John 3:16-18 You see:

(1) it demonstrated His love to us Christ didn't sit in heaven and send "I Love You" cards through the prophets and leave us here perishing in our sin. He loved us by giving His very life. That's how we know His love. And that:

(2) it illustrated His intent for us John's point is that if His love is in us, if we are really believers that have His nature inside us, then it will come out in the same fashion. We will give. We will lay down our lives in varying ways to meet the needs of others. And it is in that act of giving that they will know and experience the love of God toward them and through it, they will know that our faith is a real thing. So, Paul now goes on to apply this directly to the Corinthians. From our example in Jesus comes:

2. our action He says, we must act on our desire (10-11) This collection for the poor saints in Jerusalem was taking a long time. A year or more before this writing, the Corinthians had expressed their willingness to give and had even begun to collect money for that purpose. But somehow in the intervening time, Paul is implying that the actual giving part had slacked off. You see:

a. the desire to give is primary That's our nature. All true giving must begin with willingness, with the desire to give in the heart. But:

b. the act of giving proves the genuineness of the desire When we actually give, it proves that the desire is real and not just so much talk. F. B. Proctor told the following story: A man was trying to get financial help for a widow who was in dire need, but his efforts were meeting with very little success. Yet most of the people he contacted did express their regret over the sad situation of the poverty-stricken woman. The concerned man, refusing to give up, had high hopes as he approached a wealthy acquaintance, but he too refused to offer help. In declining the request, the rich man said, "I do want you to know, however, that I really feel sorry for that poor woman." The one who was asking for the money responded, "I'm sure you do. But I'm afraid you don't feel it in the right place." "Oh, yes, I do," the man replied, "I feel it very deeply in my heart." The other responded, "That's the problem. You feel it in the wrong place. I just wish those feelings were also in your pocket." That's what Paul is saying, "Let your giving complement and match your desire. Don't just say you want to give! Give! Let your actions match your words and prove your love is real, just like Jesus did." It is the God-given way we have of demonstrating that Jesus Christ is real in our lives. However, do notice that Paul is also careful to mention:

3. our limitation, which is the means God has provided (11b-12) You see:

a. God doesn't expect us to give what we don't have He is not talking about quantity here. Love is not measured in the amount of what you give. We saw that last week in Jesus' example of the widow who only gave two small coins. Yet they were all she had, so her gift was a tremendous act of love and devotion, even though it was materially next to nothing. God knows our means. He knows what we have because He gave it to us! He knows what is costly and sacrificial to us. Don't ever think that you can't really display God's love as you'd like because you don't have much to give. Don't ever imagine that if you only had more that then you could really give and make a difference! Simply give out of what you have as He directs. The two pennies that poor widow gave have been changing lives for 20 centuries! God will use whatever you have to make a difference! But on the other hand:

b. God does expect us to give what we do have Whatever He has given us, whether it is much or little, whether two million or two pennies, God does want us to give out of that, so that He can use that opportunity to demonstrate our love and through it, His love. We must start giving with whatever we do have.

However, if our desire to give is there, He will often honor that desire and provide in such a way that we can give more! George Mueller wrote in his journal in 1863: "The end of the year was now at hand, and, in winding up the accounts, it was my earnest desire to do once more all I could in sending help to needy laborers in the gospel. I went therefore through the list, writing against the various names of those to whom I had not already recently sent, what amount it appeared desirable to send; and I found, when these sums were added together, the total was 476 pounds, but 280 pounds was all I had in hand. I wrote therefore a check for 280 pounds, though I would gladly have sent 476 pounds, yet felt thankful at the same time that I had this amount in hand for these brethren. Having written the check, as the last occupation of the day, then came my usual season of prayer, for the many things which I daily bring before Him; and then again, I brought also the case of these preachers of the gospel before the Lord and besought Him that He would even now be pleased to give me yet a goodly sum for them, though there remained but three days to the close of our year. This being done, I went home and found there had arrived from a great distance 100 pounds designated for missions, with 100 pounds left at my disposal, and five pounds for myself. I took the whole 200 for missions, and thus had 480 pounds in hand to meet the 476 pounds which I desired for this object. Those who know the blessedness of really trusting in God, and getting help from Him, as in this case, in answer to prayer, will be able to enter into the spiritual enjoyment I had in the reception of that donation, in which both the answer to prayer was granted, and with it the great enjoyment of gladdening the hearts of many devoted servants of Christ." [Intercessors for America Newsletter, Dec 1996. Page 3.] George Mueller went ahead and gave all he could but his desire to give was greater than his means, so he continued to ask God and God gave him the desire of his heart because his desire was to give more! And what did it prove overall? The greatness of his love for the workers and the greatness of God's love for them! That's what God did with the Macedonians in their extreme poverty in verses 2-3; He gave them more than He normally would because He knew how badly they wanted to give! And that's what God wants to do with us, to make us givers, so He can show His love through us! Now, there's a second purpose that God has for our giving:

II. Giving Is God's Means Of Meeting Needs (13-15) We read time and time again in the Bible of God's promises of meeting our needs. He knows what we need before we ask for it.... If we seek first the Kingdom of God all of these things we need will be added to us... God will supply all our needs according to His riches in glory.... Of course, there are a lot of ways God can do that. He can literally make money grow on trees if He wants to! There will always be times when God meets our needs in extraordinary ways, but one of the most common means that God uses to meet the needs of His children in the body of Christ is the giving of other believers. The church at Jerusalem and in Judea had a great need at this particular moment in history. And God met that need by moving the hearts of all the Gentile churches, like the Corinthians, to give to them. And, of course, He is still doing the very same thing, using our giving to meet the needs of others and their giving to meet ours. Now here's:

1. God's goal in meeting needs: (13-14) The word there twice is fairness. The NIV and King James say equality, but the Greek word really doesn't literally mean equal; rather it means equity, that which is right and fair and just. You see, His goal:

a. it is not that His favorites might have more, that those whom God likes best or those who love Him the most get the most from Him. How much I have is never an indicator of how He feels about me, even though the world around me might think it is! Further, His goal:

b. it is not that everyone might have exactly the same amount. God is not a communist. He never intended that all His children should have exactly the same amount of material possessions. Rather, God's goal and promise:

c. it is that each might have what he needs Everybody, every individual believer, every family, has different needs which vary according to a multitude of factors. Each has an assigned place in God's program and if they are being obedient to God's will, then they are where God wants them to be and with that place comes a set of needs that God has created by them being there. A believer in Glenside cannot possibly live on what a believer in a village in India can. And by the same token, if a believer in rural India received a paycheck like yours, he would be wealthy beyond imagining in the eyes of all the villagers around him. We are all in different places, in different circumstances and situations, so what's fair is this: God supplies us with what we need to be wherever He's put us! Now, Paul demonstrates that by using an Old Testament:

2. God's example of meeting needs (15) This is a quote taken from the story of how God supplied manna to the Israelites in the wilderness and what would happen when each one would go out and gather. Listen to Ex. 16:16-18, This is what the LORD has commanded: "Gather of it, each one of you, as much as he can eat. You shall each take an omer, according to the number of the persons that each of you has in his tent." And the people of Israel did so. They gathered, some more, some less. But when they measured it with an omer, whoever gathered much had nothing left over, and whoever gathered little had no lack. Each of them gathered as much as he could eat. Did you understand that? God set a standard for gathering. Each was to go out and gather about an omer of manna for each person in their family, but they didn't all carry an omer measure out there with them. They gathered it in baskets and buckets and clay pots or the fold of their garment or whatever they had, and then brought it back and measured it out. And every time they did, a miraculous thing happened. He that had gathered much did not have too much and he that had gathered little did not have too little. In other words, God:

a. He made sure Israel's gathering was always enough When you've got a million people out there scraping up manna from the ground before it melts away when the sun gets hot, there are bound to be those who can't gather enough of it in time. And then there are those whose judgment isn't too good and don't gather enough. But somehow when they measured it out, God made sure that each one had enough, that their needs were met. Conversely:

b. He made sure their gathering was never too much There was always the guy who would rather be safe than sorry and so gathered more than his share, just to make sure he had enough. And lo and behold, no matter how much he gathered, when he went to weigh it out, God made sure it was reduced to just the right amount.

So, God saw that each one had what they needed by a miraculous adjustment so that none went hungry while another had waste. And God is still doing that very same thing with His people today, only today He is using a new method of adjusting:

3. God's method of meeting needs today is Christian giving Here's how it works:

a. when we have plenty, we fill up someone else's lack God was giving the Corinthian believers at that moment more than they needed. And that was so that they could give, and through their giving, He would see that the Judean believers had what they needed. God many times blesses us with more than enough so that we can give just what will meet the needs of someone else. But it also works in reverse:

b. when someone else has plenty, they fill up our lack There may come a day in our lives (and often does) when the shoe is on the other foot, when we're out of work or injured and we find ourselves in need and at that very time God will meet our need through the giving of others, to whom He has given more than they need.

John Wesley, the famous evangelist and founder of the Methodist movement, was traveling one day along a narrow road filled with ruts. His carriage soon became stuck in the mud. The delay especially disturbed him because he was eager to get to the next town where he was scheduled to preach. While some helpers were trying to get the vehicle moving, another Christian came by. Wesley talked with him a moment and perceived that the poor fellow was deeply troubled. Asking why he was so distressed, he learned that because of crop failure, the man was almost destitute. "I haven't been able to get the money together to pay the rent," he said despairingly. "The landlord is ready to turn us out, and I don't know where to go with my wife and children." "How much do you owe?" Wesley inquired. He was told that 20 shillings would clear the debt. "Well," said Wesley, "I believe we can handle that. The Lord evidently wanted me to meet you." Taking the money from his wallet, he handed it to the man and said, "Here, go and be happy!" Then turning to his companions, he exclaimed, "Now I see why our carriage had to get stuck in the mud. Our steps were halted so that we might help that needy family." You see, giving is God's means of seeing that all His children have their needs met fairly. He may give to you so that you can meet someone else's need and he may give to them so that they can meet yours.

Listen, God has needs that He wants to meet through you. Some of them are near at hand and some of them are far away. Some are people you meet firsthand like Wesley did and some you will only hear about like the need that Paul made the Corinthians aware of in Judea. We meet both kinds of needs right here through our giving at GBC every week. The firsthand needs of people all around us we meet through our giving to the Elders Fund. Faraway needs we meet through our giving to the budget, 20% of which goes to missions to meet the needs of people we'll never meet this side of heaven. And of course, there are many needs of both types that God puts before you outside of GBC. But wherever and whatever the needs are, God wants to meet them through you. And God has hearts He wants to touch through you. He wants to shower His love upon people through your giving and mine. Our giving is a direct means of God's working in the world. I trust that all of us will learn to see it for what it really is and let Him direct us to give.

How Should We Handle Money? - 8:16-24

We're in a series of studies together examining 2 Corinthians 8-9 on the subject of Christian giving. So far, we've learned, first of all, that giving is an act of grace that stems from our transformed nature, and second, that we should give because giving is our means of demonstrating love and God's means of meeting the needs of others. In this third message we are going to look at the issue of handling money. It's an issue that affects every one of us because every one of us handles money personally, though some of us handle more than others, of course! But beyond that, some of us have the responsibility of handling not only the money God has given personally to us, but we have also been entrusted with responsibility of handling the money of others. Paul, as you remember, was in the process of collecting a very large offering from a number of Gentile churches in Asia Minor, Macedonia and Corinth and taking it back to Jerusalem to be given to the poor, suffering believers there during a time of urgent need. In the verses of our text today, we meet those who are going to handle that large gift and the manner in which Paul knew they would handle it. Let's read 8:16-24. Now let's go back and look more closely at what Paul has said. First of all, in the end of verse 19 we can see:

I. The Concerns We Should Have As We Handle Money (19) Paul says there are two concerns he had constantly in mind in the handling of this large sum of money and they should also be ours. First of all:

1. we should seek to honor the Lord, to use and treat the money in such a way that it will bring Him glory, that it will enhance His reputation and cause people to praise Him. Three years before our church building burned in 1992 a Philadelphia Christian businessman named John G. Bennett started an organization called the Foundation for New Era Philanthropy. Claiming to have a team of wealthy philanthropists who wanted to bless Christian organizations, he was able to promise that those organizations who would invest a certain amount of money with New Era for three months would have their funds doubled. He was a very convincing person and got other very convincing people to help him find donors and the list ultimately grew to include 1100 investors who put in over $500 million, including Biblical Seminary, Covenant College, Houghton College, Wheaton College and eventually the Boy Scouts, Princeton and the University of Pennsylvania, and somewhere in the middle of it all, Glenside Bible Church. But two years later it was discovered to be a Ponzi or pyramid scheme, where essentially you pay what you owe the first donor with the new money you take in from the next. Bennett embezzled $135 million dollars and was sentenced to 12 years in jail and was only released in 2008. The courts got back for donors all the money that they could, but who really got the blame in the eyes of the watching world? Certainly, he did personally. But because it was done by an outspoken Christian, in the eyes of many, I'm sure that it reinforced the notion that "Christians are a bunch of hypocrites" and that our claims about Christ are not real. It discredited and dishonored Him. But now let me ask another question. When you have fallen on hard circumstances, maybe you're laid off or sick and can't work and there's a bill due and some fellow Christian comes along and stuffs a check in your pocket or a bill in your hand just when you need it most, who gets the credit? Who do you get on your knees and thank? Sure, you thank the person, but my point is that ultimately the Lord gets the credit or the blame for the way we handle money. So, our first concern in handling money should be the same as our first concern in every other area of our lives, to glorify God. Is that what I think about when I sit down to decide what to do with my paycheck? Here's a challenge: when you receive your next paycheck, stop and say, "Lord, thanks for this gift. It's from Your hand and it is all Yours. Show me how to use this to glorify you." Later on, we'll see more specifically some principles of how to do this, but right now let's mention our second concern in handling money. Paul said that as we administer our money:

2. we should seek to demonstrate our love In the end of verse 19 he says, "I'm collecting and carrying this offering in order to show our collective good will, our eagerness to help". But he puts it another way in verse 24. "This offering is the proof of our love to these brothers and sisters in Judea; they can see our love through our giving and through our handling this money for their benefit." Maybe you've never thought of it quite that way. We know we can demonstrate our love to people through our words. We can demonstrate it through our kind and helpful actions. But we can also love them through the way we handle our money and through our giving. As you pray about how to glorify the Lord with your paycheck, try adding this, "Lord, let me love somebody with this; let this be somehow a means of demonstrating love; let me love my family with this; let me love others with this; show me how." And again, we'll talk about how to do that more concretely in a moment. But right now, let's move from our concerns in handling money to:

II. The Character We Should Display In Handling Money Paul was sending a party of men ahead from Macedonia, where he was writing, to Corinth to get the collection prepared in advance, so it would be ready when he arrived. That "committee" was composed of three men, Titus and two other believers whose names Paul does not even mention. Now, let's try to picture this together. If we took an extended offering over a month to help our brothers and sisters in Nepal who are suffering after the terrible earthquake a few weeks ago and a second one this past week, how much do you think we could raise? Let's say, maybe $5,000 or even more. Then, suppose we cooperated with 9 other churches who all were about the same sized and could give about the same amount. Now we would be talking about $50,000 or more, wouldn't we? If we collected over a year's period, we'd be looking at $100,000, maybe $200,000 or more. Nowhere does the biblical record say how large Paul's "collection" turned out to be, but from the sheer number of churches involved and the year period over which it was collected, it must have been pretty sizable and they didn't print paper money in those days! Handling this huge amount of money and getting it safely to Jerusalem was a tremendous responsibility. So, what kind of people do you think Paul chose to handle this errand? Did he look for shrewd businessmen or careful bankers or people trained in economics at the Jerusalem Business Institute? Not at all. That might be what we would do, but look at how he describes the character qualities of the three men whom he chose to handle the money. For each man Paul lists one particular thing to explain to the Corinthians why he chose that man and to give them assurance that they could trust him. The first was Titus, whose example shows us that:

1. we should have a willing spirit (16-17) Titus genuinely wanted to go to Corinth. He didn't wait for Paul to ask him; rather he asked Paul to go. And it was not because he loved to run his fingers through piles of money, but because he had the same love and concern for the Corinthians that Paul had. The person who handles our money or our property ought to be somebody who wants to do it because they care deeply about us. The people who handle the church's money and the church's property ought not just to be people who were "shanghaied" into doing the job against their wishes. They ought to be people who are eager to do it because they love the church and because they love the work of God and because they love our missionaries and our ministries and therefore, they will handle our money in an attitude of love. The second man Paul sent with Titus was an unnamed brother whom we'll call Brother #1, and his example shows us that:

2. we should have a spiritual reputation (18-19) We have no idea who this brother was. Some have speculated and tried to name him, but it really doesn't matter. If God had wanted us to know, Paul would have written it down! What's important is that this guy was a man with a reputation. He was not simply known to one church but to a number of churches and he was praised by everyone for the way that he was serving the Lord and preaching the Gospel; in fact, his reputation was such that he was chosen by them to handle the offering. Handling money should be done by someone who is recognized, someone with a reputation, not for economics, but for the Gospel, for spiritual things. We always think that somehow money handling or caring for property is a less spiritual pursuit than teaching or being an elder and that we can allow people to handle money even if they haven't shown a lot of spiritual interest because they have "business background". Experience is great, but handling God's resources ought to be done by spiritual people, people who have a reputation for spirituality within the church. And then with these two men came a third unnamed man, Brother #2, whose example shows us that:

3. we should have a trustworthy record (22) We don't know who this man was either. All we know is that this guy was proven. He had often faced testing and temptation and had proved that he was made of spiritual iron and would not bend. The last person we need handling money is a person who is prone to falling into sin. He's just liable to be tempted one day by the large amount of money in his hands and run off with the goods.

So, there are some key criteria for of us who serve as ushers and money counters and treasurers and properties committee people and custodians, and so on, criteria to test ourselves by, indeed, that we can all test ourselves by. Am I doing what I do out of love for the people and for the work of God? Am I a spiritual person; do I love the things of God? And am I the kind of person who readily falls into sin? If my answer to any of these questions is negative, I either need to get out of handling money and property or ask God to do a work in my life and change me! But on a positive note, Paul also gives here some very wonderful, encouraging and:

III. Essential Truths About People Who Handle Money Let me take a moment here to encourage all our faithful stewards who work so long and hard in the financial part of the ministry of our church and all you Properties Committee folks and others who give so much of your time in caring for the church's physical resources. Look what Paul says about people like us in verse (23):

1. we are partners in the work So many times we think like this: it's the pastors and the teachers and the elders, the verbal types, who do the REAL ministry of the church. The financial and property stuff is secondary, though necessary. But Paul says that is not so! Those who handle our finances are partners in the work of the Gospel, fellow-workers and their work is just as valuable as mine or anybody else's in the advancement of the kingdom of God. For years our late missionary Doris Funk was one of the bookkeepers and treasurers for a portion of the Wycliffe organization. She spent years of her life sitting at a desk juggling figures and balancing books. It may not seem like much, but without her faithful service an entire wing of the ministry of Wycliffe Bible Translators would have come to a dead standstill. Our retired missionary Ed Friedman faithfully served the whole France field of TEAM as treasurer for years and years. Those who handle our finances and property right here are vital; without them the ministry does not happen! In God's economy, the way He looks at things, those who "stay by the stuff" are just as much a part of the ministry as those who "go out to the battle"; they are full partners in the work and deserve an equal share of the reward, a principle that David put in place during his leadership of Israel! But we are even more than that. As we handle money:

2. we are representatives of the church You're going to love this; that word messengers or representatives is literally apostles! We are people who've been sent on a mission, in Latin, missionaries! We are people who have been commissioned, who have been given a trust to carry out, stewards who have been charged to care for that which belongs to others and we carry out our responsibility as a holy, God-given task, the same way we are sent to carry out the Great Commission! In fact, it is PART of carrying out that Commission! Our task is not mundane and ordinary but a truly high calling. And then look at this; Paul says:

3. we are glorifying to Christ By our work we bring Him honor and glory and praise, just as much as those who sacrifice their lives in missionary service. Dear friends, we need to begin thinking of material things in a new way. The ministry we have with money or with property brings honor and glory to Christ if we do it well! If we can get that picture in our minds while we are doing it, it'll transform our view of what may seem to be mundane; it will bring new life and meaning to it!

So special thanks to those of you who partner in our ministry in that way. We thank God for you. But now let's step back once again and look at some things that apply more generally to all of us. Paul gives us:

IV. The Principles We Should Follow In Handling Our Money (20-21) Whether we handle only the money and the material things the Lord gives us personally or whether we handle the money and property of others in our job or in the church, here are the principles that we need to put into practice. First, Paul says:

1. I must do what is right in the sight of God That's a concept that means a lot more if you try to visualize it. John A. Broadus, a well-known Baptist pastor in the 1800's, left his pulpit one Sunday morning and stood beside one of the ushers as he began to take the collection. The pastor went with him up the aisle and observed every coin and bill that was given by his parishioners. Some of them seemed angry, some appeared confused, maybe ashamed, others were amazed, but all of them were very surprised. When that part of the service was over, Broadus went back to the platform and began to preach. He based his message on the incident where Jesus was sitting in the Temple and watching people put money into the treasury and He noticed that poor widow casting in her two mites. Then he concluded by saying, "My people, if you take it to heart that I have seen your offerings this day and know just what sacrifice you have made--and what sacrifice you have not made--remember that your Savior goes up the aisles with every usher and sees every cent contributed by His people." Listen, God is literally watching everything I do, not only what I give, but what I do with all the money He has entrusted to my care! So I need to be careful to do what is right in His sight! And doing what is right in His sight means two things. Obviously, it means that:

a. I must be obedient to do what God wants done Spending my paycheck or buying a car or a house or making up our annual church budget or supporting certain missionaries, all of these things are really not our decisions. The resources come from Him and they belong to Him, so we must be obedient. We must do what He wants done with them. Therefore, we should not just pray to GET finances; we should be continually praying about what to do with them! Doing what's right in the sight of God means we must do all of our money-handling and make all our materially-oriented decisions through prayer, just the same way we do in praying about people relationships and decisions. But it also means that:

b. I must be honest to do it God's way It never ceases to amaze me how Christians are somehow willing to adopt the world's standards when it comes to material things. Christians do things like cheating and lying on their taxes, like making money and not reporting it, like suing to get money they don't honestly deserve, like spending company money on personal items, and a whole host of similar things. Paul reminds us that God is watching us, so if I'm going to handle God's money, I must do it HIS way and that means absolute and scrupulous honesty. That's the only way my money-handling can honor the Lord and bring glory to Him. I have to use my money and possessions for His purpose and in a scrupulously honest fashion. Then secondly, Paul says in verse 21 that:

2. I must do what is right in the sight of people Paul was taking pains to do not only what was directed by God and honest in His sight, but also to do what was right before people. And to do that:

a. I must be accountable by including others That's why Paul sent a team of three to handle this collection at Corinth. And when he was taking it on the long trip back to Jerusalem to deliver it, we read in Acts 20:4 that many were with him, Sopater the Berean, son of Pyrrhus, accompanied him; and of the Thessalonians, Aristarchus and Secundus; and Gaius of Derbe, and Timothy; and the Asians, Tychicus and Trophimus. These were representatives of all the churches helping to deliver the huge offering. In the handling of material things, especially in the church, nothing should be done in secret by one person alone. Everyone should make themselves accountable and include others in the process, thereby safeguarding themselves and making sure it is obvious to all they truly are doing what is right in the sight of God. And it also means that:

b. I must be careful to avoid wrong appearances, to avoid not just DOING something wrong or questionable, but not even LOOKING like I'm doing it, not giving any possible room for question or criticism. Paul left no room for anyone to suggest that he was personally profiting by or getting anything from this offering, that it was purely an act of love. So, he surrounded himself with people who could obviously see that. I must be careful, not only to BE honest, but also to APPEAR honest to everyone!

So, what do I want you to get out of this message this morning? Let me answer that by telling a story. There was a butcher who ran a little shop on the edge of London years ago. He decided one Sunday that he would go into town and hear the famous Baptist preacher, Charles Spurgeon. His wife chose not to go with him. So the butcher went to town, went to church, and returned home and that afternoon his wife began to question him about the service. "What songs did they sing?" He said, "I don't remember" "What was the preacher's subject?" He said, "I don't remember." "Well, what was his Bible text?" Again he said, "I don't remember" Finally, in exasperation, his wife said, "Well, then what good did it do for you to go to church this morning?!" The butcher was quiet for a moment and then he said, "I'll tell you what good it did. You know those scales in the shop that only weigh 14 oz. to the pound? Before we open for business tomorrow, I'm going to correct those scales so that they weigh a full 16 oz. to the pound!" I don't care if you remember what songs we sang today. I don't care if you remember what my text was today; you probably won't. But I'd love for you to do what this butcher did, to examine the way you're handling the money and the material things that God has entrusted to your care and to correct what needs correcting and to improve what needs improving and to quit what needs quitting and to continue doing better and better what's really worth continuing! I hope you'll let God speak to your heart!

How Much Should We Give? 9:1-7

In our series so far, we've learned that Christian giving is an act of grace that comes from a transformed heart, that we should give because it demonstrates our love and God uses it to meet needs, and, last week, that we should be careful to do what is right in God's sight as we handle money. But the bottom line for most of us when we talk about giving is simply this: How much should I give? And just in case you are thinking "Aha, here it comes. I knew it was all leading up to this. He's finally going to tell us what we have to give!", let me shock you by saying this: THERE IS NO PERSON ON EARTH WHO CAN TELL YOU HOW MUCH YOU MUST GIVE! You heard me correctly. Not one. Now of course, there ARE plenty of people who WILL tell you how much to give. But nobody has the RIGHT to tell you how much to give! If you want an answer to the question, "How much should I give?", the only thing I can do is to help you to understand and apply three principles that God has given us through Paul in the beginning of chapter 9 that should regulate and characterize our giving. The first principle is:

I. The Principle Of Eagerness (1-5) Let me summarize for you Paul's situation one more time. He was in Macedonia (northern Greece) and was on his way to Corinth in the south. He was gathering a collection from all the Gentile churches he had planted to give to the poor suffering saints at Jerusalem. He was sending a team of three men ahead of himself to Corinth to get their offering in order and ready. But here he adds another note to the story. In the beginning of chapter 8 he mentioned the generous way the Macedonians gave in order to encourage the Corinthians to give. But in chapter 9 he turns around and tells a little secret. He says, "I've been telling the Macedonians about how eager YOU were to give to this need last year already!" Paul commended their eagerness to give and used it as an example. And of course, that eagerness to give was not just something good about the Corinthians; I believe Paul is implying that God wants US to be eager to give. What does eager mean? To be eager to give means simply:

1. the meaning: I love to give The Greek word in verse 2 means to be pre-disposed, literally, to have a passion for something ahead of time. Let me illustrate it like this. Do you have to tell a lion that he HAS to eat a steak? No, you just put the opportunity in front of him and he does it. In fact, he jumps at it! Why? Because he loves to eat steak; it's his nature. He'll do it every chance he gets. Do you have to tell a golfer that he HAS to go play golf? No, the lion is predisposed to eat steak and the golfer is predisposed to play golf and we're to be pre-disposed to give. If giving is an act of grace as we learned at the beginning of this series, then that means that God has made my heart a giving heart. Therefore, I should love to give; I should be eager to give. All God has to do is put the means in my pocket and the need in front of me and instantly I say, "Oh boy, I get to give!" You see, we actually started with the wrong question this morning. It shouldn't be, "How much must I give", but "How much MAY I give!" If the Spirit of God is really controlling my life and I am yielding to Him, then I am pre-disposed to give, I'm eager to give, I love to give, I can't wait to give. Paul said back in 8:4 that the Macedonians pleaded with him to be able to give toward this need; they were eager. When the people of Israel were camped at the foot of Mt. Sinai, God told them to build a tabernacle and to bring an offering for it. Listen to what the Word says, ...everyone who was willing and whose heart moved him came and brought an offering to the LORD for the work on the Tent of Meeting, for all its service, and for the sacred garments. All who were willing, men and women alike, came and brought gold jewelry of all kinds: brooches, earrings, rings and ornaments. They all presented their gold as a wave offering to the LORD ...All the Israelite men and women who were willing brought to the LORD freewill offerings for all the work the LORD through Moses had commanded them to do.... And the people continued to bring freewill offerings morning after morning. So all the skilled craftsmen who were doing all the work on the sanctuary left their work and said to Moses, "The people are bringing more than enough for doing the work the LORD commanded to be done." Then Moses gave an order and they sent this word throughout the camp: "No man or woman is to make anything else as an offering for the sanctuary." And so, the people were restrained from bringing more, because what they already had was more than enough to do all the work. - Ex. 35:21-22, 29, 36:3-7. What a problem to have! See how eager they were to give! Fickle as they were, at that moment, they truly loved to give and just kept on doing it as long as there was need. May God make us eager to give like they were! And here's:

2. the result: Paul says in verse 2 that it encourages others to give. It's contagious. The Macedonians heard how eager the Corinthians were to give and the Corinthians' eagerness moved them to follow the example and they, in turn, became eager to give. Eagerness and excitement draws others. If my brothers and sisters see that I am eager to give and all the excitement I get when I give, and how I just love to give, then they are encouraged to be like me. I remember seeing this principle in action many years ago in a former church. We were involved with a missionary in Haiti as I recall, and he had an immediate need for $600, which in those days was a sizeable sum. At that time, I was a student and we were poor as church mice and didn't have two nickels to rub together, but I remember presenting the need to our folks and saying, "We'll give the first $100; who will join us?" and before the meeting was over the whole $600 was pledged. Our example of eagerness was contagious; when you are generous, others are encouraged to be generous. However, with eagerness there is also a:

3. the danger: Paul says in verse 4 that it must result in action He was somewhat afraid that since he hadn't been in Corinth for a good while that their eagerness might have become more hot air than actual action. That's why he was sending the team ahead of him to make sure. Eagerness in itself is not enough. It must be genuine and real. To always promise to give and plan to give and then not end up giving, shows people that I'm insincere and it makes me feel ashamed. There are folks like that, you know, people that promise God or promise themselves, "I'm going to give; I will; next week I'll start..." but they never do. That kind of eagerness does more damage than good. The eagerness must be real and must result in actual giving. So, first of all, ask God to make you genuinely eager to give. Now we're ready for principle #2:

II. The Principle Of Generosity (6) Here's an interesting note. The word translated bountiful or generous here is actually the word blessing. The real contrast here is not so much between two amounts as between two attitudes. It is the person who gives with the attitude that giving is a blessing who will give much. The person who feels that it is a chore, a duty, or a difficult thing will give little in comparison. You see, there are:

1. two ways of giving spoken of here under the metaphor of sowing or planting seeds in a field. Think about two farmers who go out to plant their crop but they each have a different attitude and so they plant in two different ways. The first man plants:

a. sparingly He sits down and carefully calculates how many square feet of land he has to plant and how much seed he has in the barn. He figures "Well, I can get by with one seed every six inches or so and still get a crop." His attitude is, Keep as much as you can! He doesn't want to lose any of that precious seed, because it's money in the hand. Having as much as possible in the barn is his security. So he tries to keep as much as he can and only gives out as much as he can squeak by with. That is the attitude that some people have about giving, "What's important is how much I can KEEP". But farmer #2 plants:

b. bountifully or generously He doesn't throw seed away unwisely or carelessly and waste it, but he scatters the seed evenly and close together. His attitude is, Sow as much as you can! He knows that the more seed he plants, the more plants will come up and the greater the harvest will be. So he plants all he possibly can. By the way, if you think this illustration is lame, when was the last time you tried to plant a new patch of grass in your yard? Do you remember what happened? Well, there are:

2. two results of giving (spoken of here under the metaphor of reaping or harvesting) If you took the attitude that grass seed is expensive and were more worried about saving money than you were about getting grass and you spread only a thin handful of seed on your bare spot, then you got:

a. a minimal harvest, right? Not much came up. Your lawn probably looks like the top of my head! When you keep all you can and give only what you can get by with, there will never be much to show for it; there won't be much in the way of results. But, if what you really wanted most was grass and you spread the seed on the spot nice and thick, you got:

b. a bountiful harvest, a fine thick crop of grass. And that same law operates in the spiritual realm in many areas, but, Paul says, particularly in the area of giving. We must give with a view to the harvest, to the results that our giving will produce. And if we focus on that, we will give generously; we will give as much as we can. Now, what does generous giving produce, anyway? Well, the first result of planting a crop is that you get to eat it, and, believe it or not, the first result of giving generously is that:

(1) God will meet our own needs Look with me at Phil. 4:15-19. Here we have that oft-quoted wonderful promise that God will meet all our needs. But look more closely, because we usually quote it out of context. What Paul really says is, "You have given generously; time and again you gave to me; you gave when nobody else did and my God will in turn see that every need of yours is met!" Now please listen carefully: WE NEVER GIVE IN ORDER TO GET. We don't give so that God will give us more in return. I'm simply saying that if you're trying to keep all you can of what God has given you, trying to make sure that you meet all your own needs before anything else, then don't count on God to do it for you! But I'll promise you this, if you love to give and you let God direct the way you use what He's given you and give generously as He directs, THEN you can count on Him to take care of your needs. Jesus Himself said, Give, and it will be given to you. A good measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over, will be poured into your lap. For with the measure you use, it will be measured to you. - Lk. 6:38. If we expect God to meet our needs, then we have to relinquish control over our resources and give as He directs. He will meet our own needs as we give, but I don't think that's the primary thing in view in Paul's mind when he wrote about the bountiful harvest. I think he is envisioning the fact that:

(2) God will abundantly meet the needs of others Look again at Phil. 4:18. The bountiful giving of the Philippian church produced the tremendous harvest of keeping Paul, the missionary, well-supplied. The more generously I give, the more God can do with it, the greater the blessing to others can be. It is not right to give God a few spare dollars, as if to say, "Here God, You multiply this somehow to feed the missionaries!" If it were my last and only dollar, such a request would be fitting! Rather, it is when I have given all that all I can, that I can ask God to multiply and use it to meet great needs, needs far beyond what I can meet, and He will do just that. Five loaves and two fishes fed thousands when that little boy gave his lunch to Jesus! But he didn't keep back a loaf and a fish for himself to eat when everyone around him was hungry too! He gave ALL he had to Jesus. He gave generously, not thinking about himself, and God multiplied it to bless everyone in the crowd and also to encourage every person who has heard that story since! He will meet the needs of others, with baskets left over, IF we give bountifully from the heart.

Now, once we understand the principles of giving eagerly and giving generously, then and only then, are we ready to understand the third principle:

III. The Principle Of Freedom: (7) Here's what that verse actually means: I AM FREE TO GIVE WHAT I REALLY WANT TO GIVE! Now if I had taught that first, somebody might have misinterpreted it to mean, "Give whatever you feel like; it doesn't matter," and that's NOT what it means. Paul is saying three things. First:

1. I should not give because I have to In fact, simply by definition, you CANNOT give because you have to. If you have to do it, it's not a gift; a true gift is freely given. It is not done under compulsion. (We should remember that at Christmas time!) But somebody may be thinking, "Wait a minute, doesn't God command that I am supposed to give a tithe of my income!" This is a subject we should take a moment and examine. In the Old Testament:

a. the tithe was a mandated exaction Listen to the law God gave Israel in Num. 18:25-28, The LORD said to Moses, Speak to the Levites and say to them: 'When you receive from the Israelites the tithe I give you as your inheritance, you must present a tenth of that tithe as the LORD's offering. Your offering will be reckoned to you as grain from the threshing floor or juice from the winepress. In this way you also will present an offering to the LORD from all the tithes you receive from the Israelites. From these tithes you must give the LORD's portion to Aaron the priest. Notice the repeated command, YOU MUST. The people MUST bring one tenth of their harvest to the Levites and the Levites MUST bring a tenth of that to the priests. The tithe was a mandated exaction, a God-commanded income tax due from every Israelite, that supported the tribe of Levi, the priesthood and the sacrificial system in Israel. It was not giving in the New Testament sense. That's why tithes were "PAID". Gifts are never "paid"; they are given. The Israelite paid his tithe every year but he could then bring a free-will offering whenever and as often as he liked as a gift to God. However, please understand this: the tithe is never once mentioned in the New Testament in reference to Christians. It is mentioned only in the Gospels in reference to the Jews doing it and in the Book of Hebrews in reference to Levi paying tithes in Abraham. Nowhere in the New Testament does Jesus or any of the other writers command Christians to give a tenth or to give any other set amount of their income to the Lord or to their church. In this New Testament era, God no longer COMMANDS giving; instead, He gave us hearts that love to give through His Spirit coming to live in us and now He simply expects us to do what comes naturally from inside! However, we must be careful not to throw the baby out with the bathwater. Even though the command is not given to us:

b. the tithe is still a meaningful example God put it there to show us something and we can learn something from it. Evidently God considered a tenth of one's income both a fair portion and a significant portion to give away to others. In fact, in His way of measuring it, real giving did not even start until after a tenth had already been given. So, if God commanded that of His people in the Old Testament in order to teach them to have giving hearts by an outward command, should our new hearts not be willing to do at least that and more! The concept of the tithe helps us to understand the meaning of the term generous. It's a good starting place that keeps us from deceiving ourselves into falsely thinking we're being generous, when in truth what we give is only a small portion of what have. However, if I make a million dollars a year and only give a tenth away while keeping $900,000 for myself, that may not be generous at all! $100,000 might seem like a generous gift when looked at from someone who makes an average income, but to a millionaire, giving that much may hold no significance at all. That's why no rule can tell you what generous is for you. Generous giving is giving that begins to take a significant bite out of our lifestyle, that requires some level of sacrifice. But again, no one can command you or I what we should give and we should never give because somebody tells us we have to. But Paul also says here:

2. I should not give if I don't want to That is, I should not give out of a sense of obligation. I shouldn't give simply because the plate is being passed to me and I don't want to appear stingy by not putting anything in. If you don't want to give anything, don't! We should not give because somebody laid a guilt trip on us and made us feel bad. Paul says, God loves what kind of giver? A CHEERFUL giver, one who gives with joy, one who loves to give. So that means:

3. I should give what I genuinely WANT to give How much I give should not be mandated by somebody else or by some rule:

a. it should be a decision of the heart It should come from down inside, not from a bunch of external things. I should give what my heart genuinely desires to give and decide it on that basis. And therefore:

b. it should be an individual decision Every person decides in their own heart. It is as individual as I am. It is between me and God. So, if my heart is predisposed and eager to give and wants to give generously, there should just be two factors involved in making the decision. First:

(1) I must consider God's provision - 1 Cor. 16:2 says Each one should give in keeping with his income. The KJV says as God has prospered him, reminding us who gave it to us in the first place. No two people should give the same and nobody will be able to give the same every week forever because income changes. I must ask, "What has God given me?" I must consider what God has given me and then when my heart is willing to give:

(2) I must follow God's direction I pray. I ask God how much to give and where to give it. He wants me to give freely but He would love to direct me when, where and how to do it. All I need to do is ask.

So, there are the 3 principles: Give eagerly: ask God to make you love giving. Give generously: give all you can because you want the harvest to be great. And give freely: give what you truly want to give. Listen to God and gladly follow His direction in giving. And if you do these things, you won't need a rule. You won't need a guilt trip or an appeal to get you to give. You will give naturally in such a way that God will use it to make a great harvest for His Kingdom in the world. In 1954 a missionary to Japan named Neil Verwey was approached by a Japanese man he barely knew. The man wanted to borrow his bicycle. Neil said yes. A few weeks went by and the bike was not returned. In fact, Neil found out from someone that the borrower, a Mr. Mimura, had pawned his bicycle. What was really puzzling, though, was what happened the next time Neil ran into Mr. Mimura on the street. Rather than taking him to task for not returning his bicycle, the missionary felt God prompting him to give the man all the cash he had in his wallet. It was strange but he obeyed that prompting, and a few days later was told that the Japanese man had been about to commit suicide because he had no money and no way to feed his wife and children. Neil didn't see Mr. Mimura again for 25 years. Then in 1980 a Japanese evangelist informed him that a tuberculosis patient wanted to see him. It turned out to be Mr. Mimura, and he wanted to make restitution for the stolen bicycle. Shortly after that he and his wife came to faith in Christ. But Neil lost contact with the new converts. Then in 1996, Mr. Mimura called Neil up and told him he was dying of cancer. He said, "My wife and I have Psalm 23 to carry us through this ordeal." His wife testified, "How can I weep when my husband is so victorious?" A few months later, Mr. Mimura went to be with the Lord. Neil had no idea that when he said yes and gave that bicycle and that pocket full of cash, he was making an investment that changed eternity. [Pulpit Helps, Jul 1997. Page 9.] But Jesus did! Giving God's way will reap a great harvest. John Wesley had a famous sermon he used to preach on giving. Like all good sermons it had 3 points: GET all you can (don't be lazy and skimp by; earn all you can); SAVE all you can (don't be wasteful and fritter it away) and then GIVE all you can (that's the purpose of the getting and the saving, not to keep it for yourself!). If you give all you can, God will use it to change the world.

What Happens When We Give? - 9:8-15

There are many areas in the overall subject of giving which we have not covered in this series, for the simple reason that they are not mentioned specifically in these two chapters. We could, for instance, have talked about the priority of giving, the concept that our giving to God should occur first before we spend our money on anything else. It's the idea that God should be receiving our firstfruits, not our leftovers. Or, we could easily have talked about the regularity of giving, about how giving should be a consistent habit that I practice every week or every time I receive my income, and how I should make sure my giving continues even when I go on vacation or when I am away. I don't get to keep money that belongs to God just because I didn't attend church on a particular day. But Paul doesn't talk about any of those things here. He assumes that if giving is an act of the heart which is done freely and generously then all of these kinds of things will naturally happen. So instead of talking about things like these, he concludes his two chapters on giving by talking about the RESULTS of giving, what happens when we give. Suppose I actually let Jesus live through me in directing my finances and my giving and God makes me a person who loves to give and I give and give generously, all that I can; what will happen? Well, the results are listed in verses 8-15 and I've divided them into three categories so that you can see them clearly. First of all, there are:

I. The Results For Myself in verses (8-11) What will happen to ME if I become a giving person? Paul says several things will happen. First:

1. God will see that I have what I need (8-9) The first concern that somebody always raises is this, "But if I give like that, what will be left for me? How will I pay my bills? How will I know that I have enough to take care of my family?"

Well, let me assure you of this about God:

a. He will never allow giving to hurt me I will have all I need; He will see to it. Let me put it this way; if I take care of God's business, He will take care of mine. He knows what I need before I ask. He's not going to let me sit here as His child and lack the necessities of life while asking me to give those very things away. He's going to see that my needs are met, and that abundantly. Of course, that doesn't mean that I get a vacation home, a yacht, and a sports car and He'll keep up the payments. Being a giving person WILL probably change my lifestyle. Giving as much as I can will definitely cause me to think about the things I invest my hard-earned cash in and not buy some things I am tempted to, but God will never impoverish me by giving! On the contrary:

b. His supply for me will be dependable Look at verse 8. Paul says, in ALL things, at ALL times, God will see you have ALL you need so you can abound in giving. In other words, God has a dependable pattern of supplying your needs. Everything you need whenever and wherever you need it He will supply so that you are free to abound in giving. Then in verse 9, he quotes the Psalms. At first glance you'd think the HE in this verse was God and the quote doesn't make much sense. But listen to Ps. 112:5-9, It is well with the man who deals generously and lends; who conducts his affairs with justice. For the righteous will never be moved; he will be remembered forever. He is not afraid of bad news; his heart is firm, trusting in the LORD. His heart is steady; he will not be afraid, until he looks in triumph on his adversaries. He has distributed freely; he has given to the poor; his righteousness endures forever; his horn is exalted in honor. But the HE is not God; it is the person who gives generously! When YOU give generously and freely give your gifts to the poor, that act of righteousness is remembered by God; it is remembered forever. Good will come to you because of it. You need have no fear that God will forget and somehow your need will not be remembered. God's supply for you will be dependable. So, really what we have here is another version of Phil. 4:19 which we looked at last week. When I give God will supply all my needs according to His riches in glory! That's the first result to me. The second is that:

2. God will enlarge my ability to give (10a) If I'm a generous sower, God will enlarge my store of seed. If I love to give, there are so few people like that, that God will gladly give me more opportunity. If I'm willing to let it pour out of my pocket freely, God will pour it in freely. And not only that:

3. God will enlarge the results of my giving (10b) The effects, the harvest, the amount of good my giving does, will be enlarged. Think right now about the amount of good your life is accomplishing for others. For some of you that may be a great deal, for others not much. But God can double and triple and quadruple that if you will let Him make you a real giver. He'll pour more in and more will go out and the blessing will multiply. But in addition, as I give a wonderful thing will happen to me:

4. God will enlarge my heart (11) The more I give, the more I will want to give. On occasion after occasion I'll give until I find myself giving on every occasion. Now, I'm not talking about responding to every solicitation you get in the mail, but you will want to respond to every legitimate God-sent opportunity. Your heart will be enlarged to give more and more. The story is told of an English woman who had once wanted to do much for Christ when she was poor. But then someone left her a great sum of money and she said, "I cannot do as much as I used to do." When someone asked, "But how is that?" she said, "When I had a shilling purse, I had a guinea heart, but now I have a guinea purse and I have only a shilling heart." For us that's like saying, "When I had pennies in my wallet, I had a heart that wanted to give thousands; but now that I have thousands in my wallet, my heart only wants to give pennies!" The surest way to change a stingy heart into a generous heart is to give. The more you give, the more God will enlarge it, the more you'll want to give and love to give! Through giving, God will make you a new and different you! But now we must move on to talk about:

II. The Results of giving For Those Who Receive It (12-14) My giving has a profound effect on the lives of others. When I give:

1. their needs will be supplied (12a) The Corinthians (and many other churches) gave and the believers over in Jerusalem and Judea had their needs met. They had food to eat and houses to live in and clothes to wear, when otherwise they would have gone hungry or lived on the street. Try to picture it, if you can. Times are hard in Jerusalem. There is a depression. The believers there are struggling and every day they get on their knees and beg God for their daily bread, but the reserves are running thin. However, a report of this travels a thousand miles and reaches the ears of Christians in Greece. And God moves on their hearts and hundreds of them start to save up to give to a collection. By the time a year comes around the collection is ready to go and is quite a large sum and Paul comes and takes it back to Jerusalem. It arrives just as the last of their meal is used up. Can you imagine their faces as Paul piles it all up and says "Here! This is for you from your brothers in Greece!" Think how you would feel! Now just hold that picture a moment, while I point out again that God answered their prayers and supplied their needs through the giving of others. That's what my giving does! But here's the second effect:

2. they will see the genuineness of my faith The NIV of (13) says Because of the service by which you have proved yourselves, men will praise God for the obedience that accompanies your confession of the gospel of Christ, and for your generosity in sharing with them and with everyone else. If there was still any doubt as to whether these Gentiles over in Greece and Macedonia were real Christians or not, you can bet it was gone now. They had proved themselves to be real in giving. The world doesn't do that, by and large. People will see that you are really genuine when God puts a desire in your heart to give and you follow it. Indeed, John said the opposite in 1 John, If you see your brother have a need and don't give, how does the love of God dwell in you? Refusing to give is evidence of a lack of relationship with God; giving is a sign and a verification of true spiritual life. People will know my testimony is for real as I give and:

3. their hearts will be bound to mine (14) Do you think those Judeans loved the Corinthians after the offering arrived? Their hearts went out to them; they longed for them. The Corinthians became more than a name on a map; they became beloved brethren because they gave. Giving binds hearts together. It's hard to have problems with somebody who gives to you out of love! As I give, it binds the heart of the recipients with mine and as a natural result:

4. they will pray for me, as Paul says in (14a) That love will manifest itself in prayer. They may never be able to repay me, but they will start to pray for me and for my needs. I'll have a new prayer partner. And I will find myself praying for the ones I've given to as well. If you want to become more missions-conscious, just pick a missionary and start giving to them! You will look at every letter that comes with interest and you'll pray and they in turn will pray for you because of the loving gifts you send. But giving not only has results for me and for those who receive it, it has:

III. The Results For God (12-15) Wonderful things result toward Him when I give as well. First of all:

1. He will receive thanksgiving and praise (11b-12) As I said to you last time, when you have a need and somebody comes along and meets that need, who do you get on your knees and thank? Who do you think the Christians in Jerusalem thanked? They'd been praying and they knew this offering was God at work answering their prayers so they thanked Him for it. And then they praised Him for His love and caring and tender mercy and then they praised Him for something else, for the people at Corinth who had done the giving and for His working in their lives. You see, when I give, not only will people praise God for meeting their needs but they will praise Him for ME as well. They will praise Him:

a. for my true Christian character (13) That is, they will praise Him that I am really obedient to the Gospel, that I am a genuine Christian, a true child of God and not merely somebody with lip service. And they will praise Him:

b. for my generosity, for the bountiful way in which I have given, for my willingness to sacrifice and to give beyond my means like the Macedonians did. But most of all they will praise Him:

c. for His grace in working through me (14) They'll know it's not me. They'll know that my giving is an act of grace, the result of God working in me. And they'll thank God that He can still transform the hearts and lives of people and make them like Himself. He will get the credit and the glory for my giving! And in addition to that:

2. His Word will receive credibility (13) There is a hint here that I will be a living illustration of the reality of Christianity and the Christian message. That may not be so much true for believers but certainly for unbelievers. When they see you transformed into a giving person, putting others first, giving and loving it, it will be a means to convince them that Christianity is real, that it makes a difference, that it matters. It touches the pocketbook and the lifestyle. It will draw people to the Savior. And finally, Paul can't stand it anymore. He breaks out in his own word of thanksgiving and praise in verse 15 and that's exactly what will happen when we give:

3. His gift will be fully appreciated (15) Our giving is just a tiny little mirror that reflects for us the indescribable depth of His giving to us. Go back to 8:9. Though He was rich, for us He became a poor human being and stripped Himself of every right and privilege and went to the cross so that we might share His infinite riches. It is when I give and when I'm given to that I'm led to stand in awe and wonder at the giving nature of my loving Father and His son Jesus who loved me and gave Himself for me.

Jesus did not show the Father's love by hugs and kisses. Instead, He showed it by giving, by giving Himself as a sacrifice for us. And the moment we realized that, we flung ourselves into His arms and were reconciled with the Father. What an indescribable gift! But God wants to do the same with us. He wants to make us givers so that He can send us as living letters known and read by men to tell them of His love by our giving. And He truly will get the praise and the glory forever! I'd like to end this series with a challenge from Luke 19, if you'll turn there with me. It begins with the story of Zacchaeus, a rich man, a chief tax collector but also a short guy who wanted to meet Jesus, so he climbs a tree and when Jesus sees him, He calls him down and goes to his house for a meal. That's the part of the story we remember, but the real point comes in verses 8-9. When Zacchaeus heard Jesus and understood the forgiveness of his sins, his reaction was, Here and now I give half of my possessions to the poor! And Jesus replied, Today salvation has come to this house, this man is a true child of Abraham! In that moment his heart was changed and he became a giver! Think about it, a rich man who gave away half of everything he had! Nobody told him to; his heart was so touched by God's gift to Him that he just did it! Think what people would say if you gave away half of everything you have for Jesus' sake! They'd say, "Now there's a person who was really saved, who really met Jesus; only Jesus could do a miracle like that!"

But immediately Jesus goes on in verse 11 to tell a story, the parable of the ten minas (or pounds in the KJV). I doubt we've ever looked at it seriously. [read 12-26] This is really a story about us. Jesus is the man of noble birth who went back to heaven to be appointed King and return. We are the servants He left here. And He's given each one of us a sum of money. Now a mina is equal to 100 days wages in that time. So, to make the math easy, let's figure a day's wage is $100 today, so each of the ten got the equivalent of, say $10,000. That sounds like a lot of money to be receiving. Well, I went online to my Social Security account that lists all my income for every year since I started working. And when I added the numbers up, I was shocked to find out that since 1970 when I was 16, I've earned a cumulative total of $1.6 million so far! Many of you will make MUCH more than that in your lifetime, especially you young people. But, you see, that is my mina; that is the sum of His money that Jesus has entrusted to me and His instructions to me are: Put this money to work until I come back! Now I don't think He means simply, "Make as much money as you can with this money because I love money and I want more money." I think He means, Put this money to work for my kingdom; invest it to help people like Zacchaeus find salvation; invest it to get the maximum return for the purpose I've given you, that is, to take the Gospel to every human being on earth, to help the poor, to bring honor and glory and worship to My Name! I pave the streets of heaven with gold as though it were asphalt; it's people I want; it's the church I am building; it's that Kingdom of worshippers from every tribe, tongue, people and nation! And when He comes back, we're going to stand before Him because He wants to find out what we have gained (for His Kingdom) with what He's entrusted to us. Well, in the parable, one servant said, Your one mina has earned 10 more, that is, your $10,000 has earned $100,000. That's a 10-fold return or 1000%! No wonder the King said Well done, my good servant! Another said, Your one mina has earned 5 more, that is, your $10,000 has earned $50,000. That's a 5-fold return or 500%! Good by anybody's standards! These two were given great responsibilities in their Master's new kingdom; they became rulers! But there was another guy who had gotten the same mina, the same $10,000 as the rest, but he didn't do anything for the King with it. He didn't care about the Kingdom. He put it away and hid it and now at the end of his days he simply handed it back and said, Here is what is yours! And Jesus calls him a wicked servant, takes it away from him and gives him NO responsibilities in the Kingdom. The question is, Which servant will you be? One invests his life's income well by giving all he can and hundreds or maybe thousands of people come into the Kingdom because of it; another invests it by giving significantly and consistently and dozens or even scores of people come into the Kingdom. But another just hands it back to the Lord when he dies, having invested nothing or very little by giving and having no real return to show, nothing he can take with him. He doesn't lose his salvation, but who do you think Jesus is going to entrust to rule over important parts of the world during His millennial kingdom? Who is He going to trust to do what He says to do with what He's given them charge over when He comes back? Those who were faithful to His cause while He was away! Think about it; over your lifetime God will have given you maybe 1 or 2 million dollars or more to invest for His glory; which servant will you be? How much do you love the King who gave Himself for you? Will you invest all you can in His business? He invested His very life in yours!

The Need Of The Message Of Grace 1:1-9

The Book of Galatians holds the dubious distinction of being one of the few and perhaps the only KEY New Testament book which I had never preached or taught through in my first 17 years of ministry. I think the reason is that the chief message of this Epistle is that we are saved by GRACE and I already believed that and, since I didn't come out of Jewish background or influence, I had no desire to go back and live under the law. And neither did 99% of the people I've ever ministered to. It was like living in Pennsylvania and owning an elephant gun. It's a good thing to have and you keep it in the closet in case you ever run into an elephant and need it! But more recently, God has been making clear to me that it has a much more direct application to my life and to yours than that, because many of us are Jews in Christian clothing. We talk much about grace for salvation. but we live under law as a way of life. So, God has laid it on my heart to explore this book together with you, as much for me as for you. Now, you'll find that the book breaks down easily into three major sections which I've outlined for you:

- I. Grace: God's Message through Paul (PERSONAL) Chs. 1-2
- II. Grace: God's Method of Salvation (DOCTRINAL) Chs. 3-4
- III. Grace: God's Means of Living (PRACTICAL) Chs. 5-6

And today we'll start at the beginning in the personal section of the book and talk about the NEED we have of the message of grace. In the first two verses you'll find:

I. The Epistle Introduced (1-2) Here you'll find three things:

1. the writer: Paul the Apostle You're saying, "Gee, I already knew that!" But don't miss what Paul is really hinting at here. If I could paraphrase, Paul is saying, "I am a person sent out to do a job, sent not because some man decided somebody needed to be sent nor because some man decided I needed to be sent. I was sent out by Jesus Christ." If you want to see what he means, just read the story of his conversion in Acts 26:15-18. His point is that Jesus Christ stopped him, saved him, and then sent him to take the message of salvation by grace to the Gentiles. The message wasn't his but Jesus', and he's going to spend the first two chapters of the letter proving this very point. So, let me just add that what I'm going to teach you in this series is not simply my ideas; it is what Jesus wanted you to know and sent Paul to tell you! Now, secondly, you meet here:

2. the readers: the Galatians Galatia was the name of the Roman province that occupied most of the center of the peninsula of Asia Minor. Paul and Barnabas reached the southern region of it on their first missionary journey and planted churches there at Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe. They came home from that journey with a glowing report of what God had done among the Gentiles, but when they got back to their home church in Antioch in Syria, they discovered they had a real problem and that is the reason that Paul wrote this letter and sent it back to circulate among the Galatian churches.

3. the reason: the Judaizers (7) Some false teachers had gone there and were confusing the believers. Compare Acts 15:1. There was a group of people, whom we'll call Judaizers, who came to Antioch and got Paul in an uproar. They taught that in order to be saved, a Gentile must not only believe in Jesus, but must also essentially become a Jew by following and keeping all the law of Moses. They said, "You must be circumcised and that obligates you to keep the law as well. So, salvation is by faith, yes, but it is really by faith PLUS works. You must believe, but you must also DO certain things." Paul took the matter straight to Jerusalem, to Peter and James and the original apostles to set it straight. But in the meantime, these teachers did not stop at Antioch. Some of them were really "missionary-minded" and had gotten out into Galatia and were confusing Paul's new converts. But do you know what? Some of them got further than Galatia. Some of their descendants made it to the USA and to Philadelphia and to Glenside! In fact, you'll find them all around you, people who will teach you that you must believe, surely, but you must also work. Some of them are cults who knock on your door or set up reading rooms down the street. Others come under the heading of mainline church denominations. But when you boil it down, their message is all the same, FAITH PLUS WORKS! Now Paul was not merely worried, he was horrified! So, he sent them a letter, this letter, to rescue them from this diabolical danger of being confused about the message of grace. And right at its beginning you have:

II. The Message Stated (3-5) In those verses you have the whole message in a three verse nutshell:

1. Christ alone saves us and this deliverance is two-fold:

a. from the guilt of our sins by His death He gave Himself for our sins. Nothing else can take them away, not our circumcision, not our keeping of the law, or our doing of good works. And, I might add, not our baptism, our communion, our joining of a church or a sect. Salvation from sin was provided completely through the blood of Christ. Now, most of us believe that and cling to it dearly, but there's another half to the message. We are also saved:

b. from the power of sin by His life He gave Himself in order that He might rescue us from the present evil age, and I don't think He's talking here so much about taking us to heaven someday. He's talking about rescuing us from the power of sin in our lives while we live here and now, as you'll see spelled out in the text of the letter. And here's where our Christianized version of legalism or Judaizing comes in; we believe that our eternal salvation is provided completely by Christ, but our day to day Christian walk is provided by US. It is a function of our will, our knowledge, and our strength. We must deliver ourselves from the lifestyle of sin. And that is so wrong! Look at Rom. 5:10. It is His death that reconciles us to God by removing our sin, but it is His life coming into us and flowing through us which changes our lives and delivers us from the wrath to come! Christ alone saves us and Christ alone can produce in us the life He intends for us to live! Now how do we get it?

2. we receive it by grace (as a gift) When you hear the word grace, think GIFT. It means something that God gives without our deserving it in any sense as a reward for what we have done. To be saved by grace means:

a. we did not make it happen It was God's will and plan. It originated with Him. We did not seek God. God sought us and provided our salvation for us in full. All we did was understand that and say, "Thank you". And so:

b. we do not take any credit We are saved by grace not works. It is the gift of God lest any man should boast. That's why all the glory, all the credit, goes to God forever and ever. I didn't save me from the guilt of sin and I didn't rescue me from the power of sin. He did.

That's the message Paul preached and taught and the truth that he wanted to call these Galatian believers back to. They needed it, because here's what was happening to them and what can happen to us:

III. The Process Explained (6-7) You see, it began with:

1. perversion of the message These false teachers came along with another message, another gospel. It sounded the same or nearly so. It sounded good. It made sense. They too said to believe in Jesus and, after all, isn't that what Paul preached? But they added, "and here's what you must DO next! You must be circumcised; you must do this; you must do that. All these things are necessary!" But this was another gospel, a different set of good news, which was really no "good news" at all! And this perverted message produced:

2. confusion of the mind These young believers had had no time to be well-founded and well-grounded. It produced confusion in them. I'll never forget a visit I made to a couple many years ago who had left a standard type church and become leaders in the Church of Christ in our town. They were a very godly and sincere couple. They lived good lives and worshipped regularly and even took communion every day by themselves. But as we talked, he began to say, "Yes, but doesn't the Scripture say, 'Believe and be baptized and you will be saved?' And doesn't it say, 'Repent and be baptized and you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit?' So repentance is necessary to salvation and baptism is necessary to salvation. And didn't John write that no one who loves the Father can continue to sin? So, I must also live a clean life." And it was so confusing to me at the moment. I knew it was wrong. Yet here were people who did believe that Jesus died for their sins! However, it soon hit me; they actually believed in salvation by WORKS or by faith PLUS works, which is the same thing! The perverted message had led them astray and they were confusing others! And if you spend time enough reading some of the literature I've received from Jehovah's witnesses and even from Roman Catholic sources, it will bring real confusion if you're not grounded in the message of salvation by GRACE ALONE. And it may lead to:

3. desertion of the Master They were rather quickly willing to give up the message of GRACE and adopt WORKS, which Paul calls desertion, a military concept! It is forsaking Christ. You must see:

IV. The Danger Involved (8-9) These are, I believe, the strongest words in all Paul's writings. Because he sees:

1. the eternal consequences at stake A person who does not trust in Christ ALONE for salvation is eternally lost. These false teachers looked great and pious, but were condemning people to hell by their teaching, confusing them and keeping them from trusting fully in the MASTER. Over in Corinth, the Christians were fighting with each other, tolerating immorality and confusion; they were proud and boastful and all the rest, but Paul says nothing like this to them. This is more serious still. He says that the person who perverts the Gospel stands under the anathema of eternal condemnation himself! Folks, the world all around you is full of nice religious people who believe a perverted Gospel and are headed for eternity in hell and are dragging others with them! It's happening everywhere! And so you see:

2. the priority of the message Paul says, "ANYONE who preaches a different Gospel, I don't care if it's me or an angel from heaven or somebody that is right now there and teaching you, I don't care who the person may be, that person is eternally LOST!" It is the MESSAGE that is true and true eternally. It is the MESSAGE that is from God. The character of any messenger must be judged, not by outward appearances, but by the MESSAGE he brings.

You see, that's why we so desperately need to hear the message of grace! We need to hear it so that we can cling to it, so that we can discern error, so that we can see people for what they really are. I went to a very liberal seminary. My professors would all have said that they believed in Jesus, but they didn't teach that the Bible was inerrant. They didn't teach that Jesus Christ was the only way of salvation. They didn't teach that one must personally repent and trust in what Jesus did at the cross to have forgiveness of sins. In essence, they held to the principle, "Believe in Jesus and be a good person and all of us will go to heaven because God is a God of love." It was a Gospel of works, not grace. And the solid faith of many a student who came from an evangelical background was derailed and essentially destroyed. And he or she went out to share that same false Gospel in churches after graduation. God help us to CLING to the message of GRACE!

The Authority Of The Message Of Grace 1:10-2:10

I'd like to ask you a question. HOW DO YOU KNOW YOU'RE RIGHT? You're a Christian. You say a person is saved simply by trusting in Jesus Christ alone for salvation. You've been taught that. But how do you know you're right and everybody else who teaches that you must work for it is wrong? Have you ever thought about that? What authority does this message we have carry? Where did it come from? Well, you'll find tons of people out there who will attack your faith and say it is a man-made thing. And that's what was happening over in Galatia. As I told you last week, these false teachers, these Judaizers, had come among the churches and were teaching that salvation was by faith in Jesus PLUS being circumcised and keeping the Law. That was not what Paul had taught and, of course, they had to attack Paul's credibility when those Christians said, "Paul never taught us that". So they did. They attacked Paul's motive and message in order that the converts there would listen to them. Word of that got back to Paul and in verse 10 you can see implied the charge they were making:

I. The Charge: Pure Grace Is Pleasing Men (1:10) "Paul, you're not trying to please God. You're tailoring your message to suit your audience, to make it appealing and pleasing to the ear so that people accept it. The Christian faith is not like that. It's hard! There are rules and regulations to keep. After all, look at the Scriptures, look how much of it is given to things that we must DO in order to be acceptable before God. You're tickling their ears with what they want to hear when you say you don't have to DO anything!" And believe me, Paul is not the only one who will catch flack about this. You will too, if you try to share the message of grace. And here's why. There is:

1. the universal belief that we must DO something Everybody believes that. It is human nature. These guys were Jews and the Jews certainly believed that, so when they believed in Jesus, they just carried their belief in Jewish works of the law right along with them. Believing was just another work in the list. But the pagans believed the same thing. They offered sacrifices to idols and mutilated themselves and had all kinds of detestable things to do to placate the gods! And so you find it today. When you say, "Salvation is all by grace; it is purely the gift of God and there is nothing you must do to get it; it is already done; simply accept it!", all kinds of religious people will disagree with you and give you flak. Why? Because, not only have they been taught that they must WORK for it, they believe it by nature. Talk to non-religious people. If they think about an afterlife at all, they will universally say it is gained by the life YOU live. So, teaching:

2. pure grace is making it easy to attract converts Who wouldn't want to hear that you don't have to do anything to be saved? If you tell somebody that to be saved he has to believe in Jesus and then go get circumcised and then take every seventh day off of work and then celebrate X number of religious holidays, he might hesitate a long time about that. But if you tell him, "There's nothing to do; give your life to Jesus; He has done it all for you. You can have instant salvation by trusting in Him.", that sounds like a pretty good deal. Who wouldn't take that? Strangely enough, do you know that it doesn't work that way? In reality, it is much easier to convince people to be saved by doing certain things, no matter how hard they are. It is easy to start your own cult. All you have to do is speak with authority about what people have to DO and they'll do it. But just try to tell them that all they can do is believe and see how hard it is to convince them. It's against their very nature. If you want to please men, tell them, "Dress a certain way and give so much and eat certain things and repeat certain rituals". They'll love it and flock to it! So, to this charge, Paul gives this:

II. The Answer: Pure Grace Is Pleasing God What Paul is going to say, and what you and I who believe the message of grace must understand, is this: this message carries the very authority of God. And now Paul is going to spend a whole chapter proving that by means of his personal experience. First, he says:

1. it is a message originated by God (1:11) It is not something man made up. If it was, you'd hear it being said by somebody else someplace. But nobody else is saying this except Christians. It is not man's message, nor the message invented by some human group. It is a message originated by God Himself. But more than that:

2. it is a message revealed by God (1:12) Did you ever wonder where Paul got all the deep and wonderful things you find in his writings? Where did the book of Romans come from anyway? Did he take some intensive course in it? No, Paul didn't learn it; he wasn't taught it by any human source, either from other Christians or from the Apostles at Jerusalem. He received it directly by revelation from Jesus Christ Himself. He goes on to prove that by talking about his life:

a. Paul was opposed to it before conversion (1:13-14) For the first part of his life, he was the epitome of everything these false teachers wanted to be. He was an extremely zealous Jew. He was steeped in the traditions of his fathers. He HATED anybody who opposed them and when the Christians came along, he led the persecution. And it's not like he tapered off. At the very moment of his conversion, he was engaged in a trip to persecute people. He didn't have a change of heart; He didn't have time for one. In the middle of the highway, God blinded him with a light and threw him to the ground and talked to him. That's what changed his mind! He never learned about salvation by grace before that! And:

b. Paul was not taught it after conversion (1:15-24)

(1) he immediately spent time in solitude (15-17) His life, everything that he was, was instantly shattered. Having thought himself to be God's favorite, he now found himself having been God's enemy. His message of zeal for the traditions was wrong. He'd been reading the Scriptures wrong. He needed time to think, to be alone, so he went away into the desert, into Arabia, to be alone with God. And there in a tent in the solitude alone with God, with no other Christians, with nobody, he got from God the message of grace alone. That's where the book of Romans came from! Oh, he wrote it later, but that's where all that new understanding of the depths of what grace means came from. God poured it into him there. There was nobody there to instruct him. Then:

(2) he visited Jerusalem only briefly (18-20) three years later. The reason he went (Acts 9 tells us) was that his life was in danger and he had to flee Damascus. So he went to see Peter, the head of the church to get acquainted with him. But his visit only lasted 15 days and he never did get to meet the other Apostles except James the Lord's brother. It seems that he started to preach in the synagogues again and the Jews tried to kill him, so he had to flee. There was no time there to get all of his doctrine from these men. In haste, they sent him off to Cilicia, to his home town of Tarsus, and nearby Syria, which means:

(3) his early work was far away (21-24) He spent 10 years out there preaching where there were no previous Christians for the most part and he had no face to face contact with the churches in Judea where the Christians would have been most numerous. So he didn't get it from them. Well, if he didn't get it before conversion and nobody taught it to him after conversion, then where'd he get it? How did he learn the message he preached?

c. Paul learned it directly from God (1:15-16) What wonderful verses these are. Here's what happened to Paul and what happened to each of us:

(1) God's grace planned it beforehand Now that he was saved, he could look back and see that God had planned it all from the beginning. He'd been at work from his mother's womb to bring him to this place. Only the grace of God could have made him what he was and then changed him into what he became!

(2) God's grace called him on the Damascus Road God stopped him in his persecuting little tracks and Jesus told him what he was thinking, "It's hard for you, isn't it?!" There was no preacher, no Christian present. There was a voice directly from heaven. Paul knew nothing about Christianity, nothing about the doctrine of grace. And then a most marvelous thing happened.

(3) God gave an internal revelation of His Son Not only was there the external revelation to his senses, but the Spirit of Christ came inside and God revealed His Son, who He was and what He did, inside Paul! And then:

(4) God told him to preach it to the Gentiles He didn't decide on that himself. At the very moment of his conversion the Lord told him that he had saved him to take the message to others. So, when we read what Paul wrote, when we believe what Paul preached, we're trusting in a message that came directly to him from Almighty God! The revelation of who Jesus was came directly to his heart in that blessed moment on the Damascus Road. And the doctrines of grace came to his heart in those precious years in Arabia! And do you see the great parallel here? In that moment when I received Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit came in and whispered assurance to my heart that indeed I was a child of God through trusting in Jesus. And over the years there have been those precious moments alone with His Word, wrestling and struggling and finally coming to understand truth. You see, Christianity is more than just accepting what somebody says. It involves a personal revelation. God reveals His Son in you and you know the message of Christ alone is true. It has nothing to do with logic and persuasion. It is an experience of Jesus Christ. But, the critics say, "How do we know you didn't just invent this all by yourself out there in the desert? Maybe the sun got too hot and fried your brain!" Paul answers, "When I finally did get together with the other apostles, I found that they had the same message!"

3. it is a message confirmed by the other apostles (2:1-2, 4-5) Fourteen years after he was saved (Acts 15) he went up to Jerusalem to the apostles to set this whole issue of grace and law straight and to make sure that they agreed with him. These false teachers had come out from Jerusalem and he wanted to set the record straight once and for all. Paul said, "Grace is all; the works of the law are not required." And what he reports about his visit is that:

a. it was followed by them (2:3) He took a Gentile, Titus, with him as a test case and the apostles received him as a brother without requiring circumcision. So, their practice was the same as his. And his message:

b. it was not added to by them (2:6) They didn't say, "No, Paul, you must teach them to be circumcised and keep the law." They did not add ONE requirement for salvation beyond trusting in Jesus. But on the contrary:

c. it was recognized and affirmed by them (2:7-10) They recognized the same Holy Spirit was at work in both Paul and them, that both were preaching the same message, one to the Jews and the other to the Gentiles. What's the point? If God tells person A something and God tells person B over here something about the same subject, then the two things ought to agree, right? Peter carried the message as it was revealed to him by Jesus over three years of teaching and then in the intervening years through the additional things we watch him learn in the Book of Acts. Paul carried the message as it was revealed to him in a tent in the desert with nobody around. Yet when they compared notes, they found they had the same message. It had to be from God! It had to be truth. It had to be right!

And so, Paul quickly sent out this letter to the Galatians to assure them he was right and they were right in believing that salvation is by grace alone, apart from the works of the law. And by it we also stand assured. God gave the message to Peter one way. He gave it to Paul another way. He confirmed the same thing in my heart when I was saved. It is true. I'm right and I know it!

The Example Of The Message Of Grace 2:11-18

As I told you when I began this series, one of the reasons I avoided the Book of Galatians for so long was that I had a hard time relating to it. It was written to Christians who were trying to live under the Jewish law and I knew that I was saved by grace alone and would certainly not go back to a law I was never under in the first place! What did it have to do with me? Maybe some of you feel like that right now. We need an illustration of how this applies to us, an example, something with flesh and blood, something we can relate to. And as we move into the middle of the second chapter of Paul's letter, that's exactly what he gives us, an example of what he's talking about, followed by an explanation.

I. The Example Of Turning From Grace (11-14) In these verses we have the story of something that had only recently happened to Paul, that made this issue very clear. He told about a person who as a believer had started to turn away from grace in his life:

1. the offender: Peter (11) Peter came to visit the church at Antioch and during his visit, he did this very thing; he turned away from grace and back to law. Now wait a minute, Peter? The head of the church? The leading apostle? The great preacher filled with the Holy Spirit who had won thousands of Jews to trust in Christ? Yes, Peter himself was subject to this error. And guess what! If he was, then so are you! Don't think this issue of law and grace is somebody else's problem! It's a problem you face and wrestle with, a temptation you are prone to, and you may not even recognize it. Now what was:

2. the issue: dietary law (12a) Peter was a Jew. All his life Peter, the good Jew, had followed the Levitical dietary law. There were foods that were declared unclean, like pork for instance, or most wild animals. Of course, those foods were commonly found on Gentile tables. So, it was very difficult for a Jew to accept a dinner invitation from a Gentile and it eventually evolved into an entire practice. Jews did not eat with Gentiles, even though it does not strictly forbid that in the Old Testament. So, Peter never ate with Gentiles, but then one day Peter had an experience. Look at Acts 10:9-16. And as he was lying there trying to figure out what God was saying, three Gentiles showed up at his door. Now, the effect of this vision was two-fold. First, it showed him clearly that the old dietary law was now null and void. All foods are clean. And secondly, he could go with and fellowship with and eat with Gentiles. He could no longer call any man impure or unclean. It changed his life. When Peter came down to visit Antioch, he ate and fellowshiped openly with the Gentile believers there and treated them as equals. But something happened:

3. the action: hypocrisy (12b,13) A group came down from Jerusalem, from James, Peter's co-leader there, and they belonged to the circumcision group. They were believers, but they were originally Jews and were still continuing their Jewish observances, only with new meaning now as Christians. They wouldn't eat with Gentile Christians at Antioch. And after they arrived, Peter began gradually to withdraw from it himself and to follow their example. Verse 13 says it was hypocrisy on his part. Now, a hypocrite is an actor, somebody who acts differently from what's really going on inside. Peter really didn't believe in what he was doing, withdrawing from Gentiles. God had made that lesson clear to him. He had been living that way for some time, but here he was acting the old way again, returning to what he knew wasn't right. Why did he do it?

4. the motive: fear (12c) He was afraid. Afraid of what? Afraid he would be accused of not being a proper Christian! Afraid somebody would point a finger at him and say, "You can't be a Christian; look how you live!" Afraid somebody would go back and tell James or the church at Jerusalem and they would look down on him. Right here is a good principle to learn. The true motive of law is FEAR, fear of what will happen if I "don't". The motive of faith is LOVE! And perfect love casts out fear! Now, I think this would be a good place to stop and give some more current examples. Most of us are no longer worried about eating pork or keeping Jewish feasts. The issues have changed and it seems like they always will. Within the memory of many of you, they have become issues like smoking, dancing, attending of movies, or teetotaling. Or perhaps it was hair length on men or skirt length on women. It might be whether you read another version of the Bible other than the KJV or whether you'd let a woman teach a class that had men in it. I've been in services where I felt looked down on if I didn't raise my hands and others where I would have been looked down on if I did. The issue could have been makeup or wearing slacks or shorts. It could have been whether you allowed any beat in your worship music or how many times you attend church each week or whether you go out door-to-door visiting or not or whether you worship on the right day of the week or whether you would shop or work on a Sunday. You see, the circumcision party is alive and well today in Christian circles. They're the ones who want to give you a list, who want to say, "You're not a good Christian, not a REAL Christian, if you don't do this or if you do that." I'm not talking about moral issues, about things the Bible clearly speaks to as not being part of true Christian character. I'm talking about people who want to impose upon you a law of conduct as a Christian that they say is necessary to please God, but is not found in the Scriptures. The church is full of people like that, even today. And when you're around them, just like Peter felt, there is a great pressure to conform, to agree or to at least act like you agree, because you're afraid; you don't want to be looked down on or thought wrongly of. And just like Peter:

5. the result: division (13) These guys from Jerusalem started it and then Peter joined them and then those at Antioch who were from Jewish background followed him. Even good old Barnabas got in on it. And what you had was a split church! Believers who were of Jewish background could no longer eat with those who were Gentile; they were separated. You had two churches which could only grow further apart. And that's always the result of legalism! Christians divide. They separate from one another. They split. They refuse to fellowship. And Christ's kingdom suffers! So what do you do?

6. the remedy: rebuke (14) Paul was not afraid. He spoke openly to Peter's face in front of everybody. He said, "Peter, this isn't right. This has got to stop. You're a Jew and yet you haven't been following the Law. How come all of a sudden you're trying to live by it and by example are causing others to live by it and making these Gentile Christians feel like they have to become circumcised and keep the law in order to be real Christians?" The only remedy for legalism when it appears in the church is to face it openly and squarely, to recognize it for what it is and to declare what it is, whether that's popular or not! So now Paul proceeds to explain to Peter what he's doing. You see, there is a blindness about legalism. People who are legalistic are often blind to it. They have no idea what it is. They think they are pleasing God. They think they are loving God by being careful in all these areas. That's how Paul was before he was saved. That's how the Pharisees were. And that's how you will find believers today. So, Paul helped to sweep away that blindness in Peter with:

II. The Explanation Of Turning From Grace (15-18) This quotation actually goes to the end of the chapter but we're going to stop at verse 18. First, Paul reminds Peter, and us, of what we already know and believe:

1. I am justified by faith not law (15-16) I am declared righteous before God, not on the basis of what I have done, but on the basis of what Christ has done. Now that:

a. it is true for Jew as well as Gentile Paul includes himself with Peter. He says, "Look Peter. We were Jews by birth. We were not 'Gentile sinners', not 'dogs of the Gentiles,' as Jews love to call them. We were keepers of the Law. But we discovered that you cannot be justified by law. We had to come and place our faith in Jesus Christ to be saved. Today we are saved people, justified people, and we got that way not by keeping the law but by trusting in Christ alone. Well guess what, that's the same way our Gentile brethren got that way. They too gave up on their vain attempts to find God through their idolatry and simply trusted in Christ." You see:

b. it is impossible to be justified by law Why weren't we justified by the law? Because by observing the law no one will be justified! Oh, I wish I could print that on a sign a mile high and five miles wide and plant it where the world would see it. NO ONE, NOT ONE SINGLE PERSON, Jew or Gentile, black, white, red, or purple, nice or nasty, priest or criminal, NO ONE, will be justified by what he does, by his actions, his deeds, his works! It is impossible! And what that does is this:

c. it levels all men (17a) It puts us all in the same place. Gentiles are sinners. But so are Jews. Christ died for the ungodly and that's us, every one of us. We all have equal footing. We all have equal standing. We were all sinners. We are all justified simply by faith. No one of us is better or different than the other. As long as we are all clearly trusting in Christ, we have no valid reason and basis to look down on each other or set up standards for each other. The Jews were saying, "Look, when a Jew comes to Christ, you tell him he doesn't have to live like a Jew anymore, that he can live without the law. You lead him into sin. You make Christ responsible for promoting sin!" But Paul says, "NO WAY!" On the contrary:

2. I sin when I return to law (18) The real sin is not dropping the law; it's returning to it! He says, "Peter, you knocked down the law. God used you to show us that it's invalid. You abandoned it. Now by your actions you're trying to rebuild the very thing you've stood against. That's the real sin!" The real sin is not when I tell somebody, "Sunday is not the Sabbath; you're free to do whatever God leads you to do and moves your heart to do on this day." It's when somebody comes along and says, "Hey, you're not honoring the Sabbath to keep it holy! What kind of Christian are you?" The real sin is enslaving people to the yoke of law, rather than the freedom of grace. And have no fear, if Christ really lives in the person and is Lord of their life, they're not going to fall into a life of sin. They're going to respond to the LIFE within them and live out of it and live LIKE it! And that's far better than any law you could ever write!

The Explanation Of The Message Of Grace 2:19-21

I would like to look with you at just three verses this morning. Please notice that in the middle of verse 14 there is a quotation mark but there is no close quote mark until the end of verse 21. These verses are part of what Paul said to Peter on that occasion when Peter came to Antioch to visit and turned away from grace by refusing to eat with the Gentile believers there. Last time we looked at verses 14-18, which are his words of rebuke to Peter, his "chewing out" of Peter, as it were. But verses 19-21 go far beyond that. They are an explanation. Paul explains to Peter, instructs Peter, reminds Peter what the message of pure grace really is. These three verses are the explanation of what grace means to the believer in a nutshell. There are five key principles that he mentions here that are fundamental to our understanding of what it means to be saved by grace and to live under grace. The first is:

I. The Principle Of Death To Law (19) I died to the law. But I want you to know something. In the Greek there is no article, the. It simply says to law I died. Paul is not just talking about the Old Testament law to which Peter was trying to return. He is talking about law as a principle, as a way of pleasing or being acceptable to God. You see, I died to law as a way of relating to God, the concept of maintaining a relationship to God by keeping a list of commands. I died to that. Now, what does that mean. Well, let's compare Rom. 7:1-6. The result of death is RELEASE. Death releases a wife from the marriage bond so she is free to marry another. Death releases you from all kinds of things. You don't have to pay taxes. You don't have to keep the speed limit. You don't have to work. I know that sounds absurd. That's because you already know that death means release from all those earthly laws and obligations. Paul says, "You know what God did, He killed you. He put you on the cross with Christ. And you died there."

1. what this means: I am released from law My death with Christ means I am completely, totally released and freed from law as a means of relating to God. I am not like the Old Testament Jew who had a law to keep in order to live. I live by a whole new principle. And that means two things:

a. release from law as a means of salvation I have not one thing to do to get or keep my salvation, not one deed, not one good work, not one act of sacrifice. None of those things affect my salvation, my relationship with God, in the least. My relationship with God is on a different plane. God gave it to me by grace as a gift. He put His Son on the cross in my place and took away my sins, and then He put His Son in me and made me His child. That had nothing to do with me! Nothing I did before or after that affects my relationship to God. I am His child and that's that. Isn't that glorious? I don't have to wait and wonder and worry whether I've done enough or been good enough. Grace has made me absolutely free from all of that! I'm dead to it. I have about as much to worry about in that regard as a dead person has to worry about whether his socks match or his driver's license has expired! But that's not all. To the Christian, grace also means:

b. release from law as a mode of living Rom. 7:6 says that through death we were released from law as a way of living, a way of serving God. The old way was this, God gave a written code; God gave a command. With all my strength I tried to keep His command which was contrary to my nature. But now I have a new way, the way of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit came to live in me and changed my heart, so now I love the very things God loves; I want to do the very things God wants. His law is written on my heart on a tablet of flesh instead of stone. He rules my life personally from the inside. So, I am dead to law as a way of life, as a way of pleasing God and serving God. I am finished with it, done with it. It is over with. The way I live now is to be filled with the Holy Spirit and let Him control my life! I'm dead to law, but let's look briefly at:

2. how I was made dead Obviously God did it, but there appear to be two things listed as agents in the verses we've looked at. First, I died to law:

a. through the conviction of law Galatians 2:19 says it was through law itself that I died to law. Law convicted me of sin. Knowing what was wrong convicted me of doing what was wrong. And the harder I tried, the more I found I could not keep it. It was trying to live under law that drove me to abandon law as a way of being acceptable to God and to flee to Christ. As Paul writes in the next chapter, The law was put in charge to lead us to Christ that we might be justified by faith! Law is good and has a purpose, which is to drive us to the Savior so we might die to law and live by grace. But this death is actually accomplished:

b. through the person of Christ Rom. 7:4 says we died to law through the body of Christ. It is in His person on the cross that I died. That's the concept of being crucified with Christ which we'll discuss in a moment. But before we move on to that, let's ask:

3. why I was made dead Why did God kill me? For two reasons:

a. that I might be joined to God You can't be married to two husbands at one time. If you're bound to law, you can't be joined to God, because the law can't justify you; it can only condemn you. So, God caused me to die so I could be free from law and its curse and be joined to Him.

b. that I might bear fruit to God Rom. 7:4 again says that under law I didn't bear any fruit to God. All I could produce were dead works and sins. But now God has planted the Seed of His Son in me and my life bears the fruit of it! Now my life bears the fruits it was meant to bear: love, joy, peace, and so on. Well, now it's time to look at the second principle:

II. The Principle Of Crucifixion With Christ (20) This is one of the first Bible verses I ever really memorized as a young teen before I was saved, and it has stuck with me ever since. I've been able to quote it for years, but never really understood:

1. its meaning: my old self died What was crucified? What died? Is that just symbolic language or did something actually happen to me? Compare Rom. 6:6. My old self was crucified, the old me, my old nature, who I was before salvation. I had a body and that stayed the same. I had a mind and a will and emotions, a mental part, and that stayed the same. But at the core, I had a spirit, a nature, a heart, which the Bible says was deceitful above all things and desperately wicked. Jesus said my wicked heart or spirit was the source of every evil thought, word, and deed. What happened to that? Is it still around? No, the Bible says God crucified it! He killed it and gave me a new spirit, a new nature, one just like His. My old self is dead and gone. How did that happen?

2. its means: union with Christ It was accomplished on the cross. When I came to Christ, God united my life with His life, which means that in reality, I was on that cross with Him. When He was crucified and died, my spirit was in Him and was crucified and died. Don't ask me to explain how that works, but just trust me it does! But do you see what that means:

3. its permanence It is permanent! It is done and accomplished. I don't have to go out and fight that old nature, crucify myself, put myself to death. It is already done and has been since the cross. All I have to do is learn to appropriate it and live in the light of it! So, I am dead to law and my old nature is crucified, but there is a third principle:

III. The Principle Of Indwelling By Christ (20b) I live and Christ lives in me. You see, as I mentioned earlier:

1. there is a new self created in me There is a new man created there, a new heart, a new spirit, a new nature, one that is like God, holy, righteous, and pure! So, I got a brand-new start in life. God didn't just tell me to improve the unimprovable. He made me perfect at the core. But there's another factor:

2. Christ Himself lives in me He indwells me with all His power, all His strength, all His wisdom, all His love. He lives in my spirit, my new self, and is joined to it as one! Why? So that now I not only want to live the life that bears fruit to God, but I have the Divine power to live that life. Here's a poem I read that illustrates the difference:

*"Do this and live the Law commands, but gives me neither feet nor hands.
A better word the gospel brings. It bids me fly and gives me wings!"*

Can you see it? Law said "Do," but I couldn't. Law was powerless to help me keep it. It was like commanding a man to fly. It set up demands but I could not meet them. Then grace came and gave me wings! Now I can live the life God wants because He has taken me out of the system of law, killed me, and given me His life. So how do I live now?

IV. The Principle Of Living By Faith (20c) I live by faith. What does that mean? Well, there is one important fact that I didn't mention. God has set all of this in place. It is true the moment you accept Christ. However, the result, producing the life God wants, is still contingent on one thing, my will. I have been given the freedom to choose. I can either live out of the glorious resources of Christ which have been placed in me or I can choose to live out of my own, out of my flesh, even as I did before I was saved. The deciding factor is this, Who is Lord? Who controls my life? Now when I moment by moment yield myself to the Lordship of Christ, then here's how it works:

1. I no longer do my own living I no longer choose my own will. I no longer do what I want. And I no longer try to do what He wants in my own strength. I realize that the Christian life cannot be lived by me out of the meager resources I have so:

2. I trust Him to live through me Moment by moment I trust Jesus to love, to give, to help, to forgive, to witness, to preach, to sing, to do whatever He chooses to do through me. Living by faith is not really a matter of money, of trusting God to meet my needs. That's only a small part. Living by faith means moment by moment depending upon and calling upon Christ in me to love my wife, to control my anger, to make my decisions, to give me the right words to say. It means depending upon Him for every moment of my life in exactly the same way I depend upon Him for my salvation. That is the new way of serving God that Paul talked about in Romans 7. Grace means depending upon God to guide me into what is right and empower me to do it. There is no law in that! I am dead to that old way of living, finished with it. But I should mention:

V. The Principle Of The Danger Of Law (21) I can choose to ignore this and go back to trying to keep a list of rules in my own strength. I can set aside and frustrate the grace of God and try to live in the flesh and attain righteousness in my own strength. But what a fruitless, crazy exercise! If you could do that, Christ wouldn't have had to die, His death was useless, vain, needless. If all I have to do is to try harder, then what use is there in Christ indwelling me and giving me a new nature, providing all this wonderful stuff for me? Yet somehow, there is always the drive in my mind to slip back into living the old way, trying to live under law, trying to keep a set of rules in the flesh. But it frustrates the very thing God wants to do in me. It actually keeps me from bearing the fruit God wants because in my own strength I can't do it. Yet that drive, that tendency, is there in me and I must guard carefully against it. It's almost like this:

Once there was a man lost in the desert, near death from thirst. He wandered aimlessly through the burning sand for many days, growing weaker. Finally, he saw an oasis in the distance. Palm trees indicated a source of water! He stumbled forward and fell under the shade of the trees. At last, he might quench his tortured thirst. But then he saw something strange. Instead of a pool of water or a well the man found a pump. Beside it was a small jar of water, and a note. The note explained that a leather gasket in the pump must be saturated with water for the pump to work. Within the jar was just enough for this purpose. The note also warned the reader not to drink from the jar. Every drop must be poured into an opening at the base of the pump to soak the heat-dried gasket. Then, as the leather softened and expanded, an unlimited supply of sweet water would be available. The note's final instructions were to refill the container for the next traveler's use. The man faced a dilemma. He was dying of thirst, and he had found water. Not much, of course, maybe not even enough to save his life. But it seemed the height of folly to pour it away, down the base of the pump. On the other hand, if the note was accurate, by pouring out the small quantity of water, he would then have all he wanted. Would he do things his own way or believe the note? I'll let the ending up to you but the moral is this: there is a strong compulsion in your mind to live by law, to do things your own way. God says it doesn't work like that. You must do it His way. You must trust Him to live, not yourself. What will you do?

The Proofs Of The Doctrine Of Grace (I) 3:1-9

At chapter 3 we enter the second major section of this letter Paul wrote. The first two chapters have been personal in nature. Paul gives his own testimony and experiences and shows how God gave Him the message that salvation is completely by grace and verified it through his experiences with the other apostles. Now at chapter 3, his writing becomes doctrinal. He's now writing to teach, to teach the fact that grace is and always has been God's method of salvation. The outline of this section is:

- | | |
| I. Grace: God's Message through Paul (PERSONAL) | Chs. 1-2 |
| II. Grace: God's Method of Salvation (DOCTRINAL) | Chs. 3-4 |
| 1. the proofs of grace | 3:1-18 |
| 2. the purpose of law | 3:19-25 |
| 3. the position of the believer | 3:26-4:7 |
| 4. the plea for steadfastness | 4:8-31 |
| III. Grace: God's Means of Living (PRACTICAL) | Chs. 5-6 |

The first issue he addresses is the proof that salvation is by grace alone. How do you know that, anyway? All around you are people, even religious people, who believe and teach that a person's eternal destiny is determined by his deeds. They challenge you on every hand. How do you know that you're right? Why do you cling to the crazy notion that God gives salvation only as a free gift and it can only be received by simply trusting in Jesus Christ? What keeps you holding on to that? Well, Paul lists four proofs that may not mean much to the world, but to you as a Christian they give sound assurance that the message of the gospel of grace you have accepted is true and trustworthy. We'll look at two of those proofs today and two next time. The first is:

I. The Proof Of Your Experience (1-5) Paul says, "How could you be so foolish, so blind as to want to turn from grace to law? It's almost as though these false teachers around you have bewitched you, have put you under a spell. It doesn't make any sense." And then he proceeds to tell them, "Just look at your own life, your own experience." My friend, perhaps the greatest available proof that salvation comes by faith alone is YOU! He asks them four heart-searching questions:

1. How did you receive the Spirit? (2) "How did He come to you? How was your life changed and made different? Was it through deciding to keep the law of Moses? Was it through being circumcised? Was it through keeping the Passover and the feasts? No, you never did any of those things. Even if you were a Jew and you did, that was not what brought the Holy Spirit into your life. You remember when He came in. He came in when you simply believed what I preached, that Jesus died for your sins and that through faith in His name you can have forgiveness." The moment you believed, the Holy Spirit came. Keeping the Law never once brought the Holy Spirit to anybody. When you trusted in Christ, the Holy Spirit came into your life and bore witness with your spirit that you belonged to God. He gave you a new heart. He changed your life. You see, there is one proof the skeptics can't argue with! There is a miracle, a repeated miracle, that happens. I've seen it time after time. When a person trusts simply in Christ, his life is changed, sometimes dramatically, but always surely. It happened to me; it's happened to hundreds of people that I know. Trying to be good and to be religious and to go to church never did that for me. But when I prayed to ask God to give me eternal life by grace, it did. Why would I ever want to go back to something that didn't work in the first place! Now then, in case you would say, "OK, but law will make me a BETTER Christian", Paul asks:

2. How are you being sanctified? (3) You have a goal, a goal of being sanctified, of enduring and becoming like Jesus. If you couldn't save yourself, why on earth would you think that it is your own effort that can sanctify you? If it couldn't change you into a Christian, why would you think it could change you AS a Christian? Sanctification and Christian growth is a work that God does in us, as we are yielded to and obedient to His Spirit. It does not and will never come just by doing somebody's list of do's and don'ts! Then he asks another question:

3. Did you suffer in vain? (4) Here he's referring to the events in Acts 13-14 when he came to Galatia to preach the Gospel the first time. At Antioch, the Jews there got so mad at Paul's preaching that in two weeks they stirred up the Gentile leaders of the city against him and had him thrown out. At the next town, Iconium, they hatched a plot to stone him. At Lystra, they DID stone him and dragged him outside the gate so his carcass would rot there, but he lived. This was where these Galatian Christians lived. Do you think their lot was much easier than Paul's? Paul says here in verse 4 that it wasn't. They had suffered much for becoming Christians, SO much. They had risked danger, defied the system. Paul says, "What was that for? Was it meaningless? If you go back to what those people believe, you won't have any troubles at all. Did you suffer in vain? Or will you stand by what you gave your hearts to?!" And then he asks:

4. Why does God work among you? (5) "Why does He do miracles there? Is it because you kept the law or is it because you believed in Jesus Christ?" Compare Acts 14:3. At Iconium God confirmed the Gospel by doing miraculous signs and wonders. At Lystra He healed a man who had been crippled from birth and never walked. Now, did that happen by keeping some law or by believing on Jesus? And God is still in the business of doing miracles and answering prayer. He's still visibly working in your life. Why? Because you keep the rules or because you believed in Jesus? Your own experience tells you that trying and struggling and doing gets you nowhere. It doesn't save you; it doesn't bring about wonderful works of God in your life; it doesn't really sanctify you or change you. Salvation from first to last has to be all of God! So, stop and think about your own experience and you'll never believe anybody who says, "No, in order to be a real Christian, you must be baptized and you must join our group, and so on. I'm never going to change my belief. God has done too many things in my life as a result of believing! But there's a second line of proof that Paul moves on to pursue:

II. The Proof Of Scripture (6-9) Now remember, these Galatians did not have the New Testament yet. In fact, Galatians was one of the first parts of it to be written. To them, the Scripture was the Old Testament. So, if all you had was the Old Testament, somebody might easily say, "Well, the Scripture says you must keep the law; what about that?" In fact, that's a problem even today. People do not understand the Old Testament and very often believe it teaches that a man is saved by living according to God's law and they read the New Testament in the same light. So, Paul goes back to where it all started, to Abraham, to the ancestor of the whole Jewish nation, and says, "Let's look at what the Scripture says about Abraham."

1. Abraham was justified by faith (6) This verse quotes Gen. 15:6 where God had made Abraham a promise. God said, "I know you haven't had a child and you're 85 years old, but look up and count the stars. That's how many offspring you're going to have. Trust Me!" And verse 6 says Abraham simply believed what God said and then it makes a comment, God put that to his account as righteousness. He was declared righteous, justified before God, simply on the basis that He believed what God had said. Now let's think what that means, and to do that we'll cheat and get some help from Romans 4. First of all:

a. it was apart from works - Rom. 4:1-5 Verses 4 and 5 are important. There is the principle. If you work for something, it is OWED to you. It doesn't have to be credited to you. You don't need a gift put on your account. You deserve what you get. Abraham didn't do anything. In the matter under discussion, there was nothing he could do. He couldn't produce offspring for himself, that was clear. He simply believed God and that believing was the basis on which God declared him to be righteous. That's how Abraham was justified and that's how we are too. We don't try to work for it. We simply trust in God who justifies the wicked (us) and He stamps our account with Him "RIGHTEOUS". Further:

b. it was apart from the Law Abraham wasn't declared righteous by keeping the Law, because there was no law to keep. Gal. 3:17 reminds us that the Law was not given until 430 years later. God had never given Abraham a single command to keep in order to be made righteous. He never kept the Passover or the Feast of Tabernacles or offered the daily sacrifices. He was justified simply by believing. And further:

c. it was apart from circumcision - 4:9-11a One of the big things with the Judaizers in Galatia was circumcision. They would say, "Abraham was circumcised and all who are to be children of Abraham and share in his blessing and his covenant must be circumcised." Well, read carefully. Abraham was declared righteous before he was ever circumcised. Circumcision didn't make him righteous. It was just a symbol of the righteousness he had already gotten by faith BEFORE he was circumcised. Listen, God's method of saving people has always been the same. Not a single Old Testament person was saved by works or by the Law. Any who were saved were simply saved by believing God and trusting Him! Then Paul goes on to add this:

2. all who are justified by faith are his children (7, 9) His real children are not those who are circumcised in the flesh. His children are those who are saved in the same way He was. Now go back to Romans 4 for the spelling out:

a. this applies to Gentiles - Rom. 4:11b Most of these Galatians were Gentiles. They had never been circumcised. They simply believed in Jesus and were saved, just like Abraham was and therefore, they are His spiritual children. We're just 21st century Galatians, Gentiles, saved the same way! And not only is this for Gentiles:

b. this applies to Jews - Rom. 4:12 People who are Jewish, who are already circumcised, have to be saved the same way. It doesn't matter. They still have to come and trust in Christ if they want to be true children of Abraham! Now, Paul's point is that:

3. God predicted this in Scripture (8) He's quoting Gen. 12:3, "All nations will be blessed through you, Abraham!" You see:

a. God knew He would justify the Gentiles by faith God already had it in mind that Gentiles would be included in the blessing He promised Abraham. It wasn't just for the Jew according to the flesh. It was for the Gentiles as well. And that blessing would come, not simply as a result of their contact with Abraham's descendants. God would bless them directly through Abraham, through his method of being justified by faith. And:

b. He spoke of it beforehand to Abraham He was simply telling Abraham in advance about it, "Millions upon millions of Gentiles will be blessed along with you because, like you, they will trust me by faith! You are their example, their forerunner, their father. Your offspring will be innumerable, not only those whom I will build into a great nation, but those from all nations who will simply believe ME like you do."

Oh, the Bible teaches it from cover to cover. In Genesis Abraham believed God and it was counted to him for righteousness. In Exodus they simply believed God and put the blood of the Lamb over their door and were saved. In Joshua they stood still and believed God and shouted and the wall fell down. Jehoshaphat prayed, "We know not what to do, but our eyes are fixed on YOU" and God destroyed the invading army. Hezekiah simply spread out the enemy's letter in the Temple before Almighty God and the next day 185,000 Assyrian soldiers woke up dead. When Daniel knew the king's order was signed, he opened his window and prayed like he always had, knowing His God was able to deliver him from the mouths of the lions and He did. Habakkuk wrote it down, The just shall live by his faith. And on it goes until you come to Revelation where you find that they overcame Satan by the blood of the Lamb. It is always, always, always, God, not us. It is always, always, always, grace not works. My life and my Bible both say so. I'm never going back to trying to be a law-keeper, are you?

The Proofs Of The Doctrine Of Grace (II) 3:10-18

We are talking about the proofs that grace is and always has been the only way to be saved, about how we KNOW that salvation is a pure gift and not a reward for our works. Last time we talked about what I'd call "look-and-see" proofs. Paul said, "Look at your own life and see what has happened to you since you simply believed the message about Christ. And look and see what the Scripture says, even the Old Testament. Abraham was justified before God simply by believing. So are you." Today we're going to talk about two of what I'd call "just-think-about-it" proofs, logical proofs. You see, it makes no sense at all to rely upon the principle of keeping THE law or A law to make yourself acceptable before God. It doesn't work; it can't work. It's ignorant and foolish to think it can. That's why Paul starts chapter 3 saying, O foolish Galatians! They were not thinking straight. So, let's see if we can think straight with Paul and let's look first at:

I. The Proof Of The Curse (10-14) You see, what everybody all around us who is trying to appease God by keeping some kind of law code forgets is this:

1. law brings a universal curse of death (10-12) There is a curse attached to keeping the law. Failure to keep it brings a curse. That is a universal truth. Paul quotes Deut. 27:26 which is part of the Mosaic law, but you can find the same fact elsewhere in the Bible. Under law, sin is lawbreaking and Ez. 18:4 says, The soul that sins shall die. Rom. 6:23 says, The wages of sin is death. Even in the garden of Eden, God said, "If you break my one law and eat of that tree, you will die" and then when they did, God placed them under the curse of the law and they eventually died. Failure to keep law must be punished by death; that is a universal curse. Now, you might ask, "But how much do I have to fail?" Well know this, if you plan to be accepted by God through what you do, the:

a. law demands perfect performance Law is inflexible. It does not forgive. It does not recognize degrees of failure. Its standard is perfection. The Jew under law was bound to keep EVERYTHING written in the Book. Check out James 1:10-11. It doesn't matter which piece, which part of the law you break; breaking any part breaks the whole thing. The smallest failure makes me a lawbreaker and puts me under the curse. And everybody knows:

b. man is incapable of perfect performance Solomon said, There is no man who does not sin. That's all over the Bible. There is none righteous, no not one! If you are, please stand up! In his fallen state, man cannot keep the law; it is impossible!

c. hence law cannot save; only curse The only thing law can do for us is to tell us what God's standard is. It cannot save us because we cannot keep it. The man who does these things will live by them; but we can't DO them. So that leaves us to the negative side of the law. It can only put us under a curse. And that's why even:

d. the Old Testament recognizes that life is by faith Hab. 2:4 says, The just shall live by faith, not by keeping the law! That's why Abraham was counted righteous when he believed God, not through obedience. That's why David wrote, Blessed is the man whose sin the Lord does not count against him! - Ps. 32:2. If life, if salvation, is to come to anyone, it must come as an undeserved gift from God, simply through trusting Him. And here's how that was made possible:

2. Christ redeemed us from the curse of law (13-14) We were under that curse, you know! The Jew stood directly under the curse for not keeping the Old Testament law. But we Gentiles were cursed too. Compare Rom. 2:14-15. In other words, God built the principles of moral law, of right and wrong, into our heart, our nature, and our conscience condemns us for not doing what we know by nature is right! Man is without excuse. Every man stood under the curse of law. Every man was bound to die. But Christ:

a. He redeemed us by becoming a curse for us In other words, the penalty of the curse that should have been ours, He took. In the Old Testament, if we sinned, they would have stoned us to death and then displayed our body on a stake or hung it on a tree as a sign that the curse of the Law had been carried out. Jesus was hanged publicly on a tree, on a cross, a sign that the Law's demands, its curse, had fallen upon Him. But that curse was not His; it was ours. He took our curse and in so doing:

b. He released us from the claims of law I died in Him. The curse which was on me is carried out and finished. It is no longer there. I am released from any claim the law had against me; I am already killed! The law cannot forgive; it cannot forget the deed done; it must pass sentence. But once the sentence is carried out, the prisoner is free. And the result of our freedom is that:

(1) the gift of justification and the Spirit is passed to us through Christ (14) God cannot give life to a sinner deserving of death, without his dying. But now that we have died, that blessing of justification which was given to Abraham can come to us through Christ. The indwelling Holy Spirit can now come and live in us because we've been redeemed from the curse. And how do we get it:

(2) we receive that gift by faith like Abraham did, by simply believing that Jesus died for us and trusting ourselves to Him. Law can only bring a curse upon a sinner, never justify him. Only Jesus can justify a sinner. And if that's so, then why on earth would any believer ever want to try to go back to a system of law-keeping as a means of pleasing God. Who, knowing freedom, would want to try to live under law? It's doomed to failure! It's stupid. It's nonsense. If law doesn't work, why keep trying to use it? Why try to come to God as a believer and say, "Here God, look what I've done; aren't you pleased with me?" when God is only well-pleased with His Son and what pleases Him is you trusting His Son to live through you. That pleases Him, not the keeping of a set of rules. Now let's move on to another proof of grace:

II. The Proof Of The Covenant (15-18) Now Paul talks about the covenant. What's a covenant? A covenant is more than an agreement or a contract or a deal. It is a sacred and unchangeable commitment made by one party to another. Paul even turns to the legal profession to talk about:

1. the nature of a covenant Even in human commitments like a business contract or a marriage vow, two things are true:

a. it cannot be annulled The person who made it cannot just set it aside and say, "I don't want to do it any longer." Of course, today we've got legal loopholes to get out of just about any kind of covenant we enter. But it did not use to be so. A covenant was binding and permanent and could not be escaped from at a whim. And further:

b. it cannot be added to The terms can't be changed part way through. You can't decide to change the terms of the deal in mid-stream like my bank did on me last week. They just decided to change the terms of my account. In fact, that's a good illustration. I had totally free checking and now the bank says I must keep a large minimum balance and write a certain number of checks, and pay certain charges. Sometimes it looks as if God was like that; He had totally free salvation for Abraham but then He later gave a law to keep. Listen, I'm changing banks and if my God was like that, I'd change gods! So, let's talk about:

2. God's covenant with Abraham To better understand what the text says, let me tell you a hypothetical story. Let's suppose I am a wealthy man and early on in my marriage before I have children, I decide that I am going to leave my fortune to my first great-grandchild. I put it in writing and have it properly registered as a will. Then along comes my first child and he grows up and I give him a house and tell him that to keep that house you have to work regularly in my business. Then my son grows up and has a grandchild and I give him a house and tell him he must work for me. Then my grandchild has a great-grandchild. Now, does my whole fortune belong to him or not? Yes! On what basis? Does he have to work for it? No. What if my child and grandchild object and say that they had to work for it? Does that change anything? No! How I dealt with others in between and the terms I had with them doesn't matter. The covenant was a promise directly to my great-grandchild and nothing in between affects it. So, what's this story have to do with anything. Well, God's covenant:

a. is directly with us through Christ Verse 16 makes a key point. God's promise was made to Abraham and to his seed. The word seed is not plural but singular in the Hebrew of Genesis 12 and 13. It is not talking about the many offspring Abraham would have who would form the Jewish nation. It is talking about ONE PERSON, about Christ Himself. In you (Abraham) and in your Seed (Christ) I will bless all the families of the earth. Now, what is that blessing? Remember verse 8. The blessing is that the Gentiles would be justified through faith. God's promise to Abraham meant that one day through Christ, God would justify all the families of the earth the same way he was, by faith. So we are saved because of a promise that came from Abraham to Christ to us, because we have been included in Christ. Now, that blessing of being saved:

b. is based purely upon a promise of grace God did not lay down a single condition for Abraham to keep. His covenant did not depend upon a single work, a single act. It was totally one-sided. God graciously gave it to Abraham and thereby to Christ and thereby to us. So that promise:

c. cannot be annulled by the later law 430 years later God turned around and gave a law to Israel and told them they had to keep it to remain in the land and be blessed. But that covenant with Israel did not throw out or make void or annul the first one given to Abraham. It still stood. God would justify Jew and Gentile alike by faith. The law had an entirely different purpose, which we'll look at in the next section. But it could not change God's promise. God is not like my bank; He is unchanging. He did not change His mind, invalidate His covenant or replace it with a different one. And further His promise:

d. cannot have the terms of law added to it His promise was that we would be justified by believing like Abraham did. He cannot turn around now and say, "Well, yes, you have to believe, but now you also have to keep a law or a set of standards." That's what the Judaizers were saying, "God changed the rules. Believe and do and you will live." But God can't do that. You see:

3. our inheritance comes by the system of grace It does not depend on the law or on performance. My salvation is free and is given to me as a gift by God when I believe. To think otherwise is to think that God can change, that He can revoke His promises and back out on His commitments. We may do that, but He never does. To do so, He would have to deny Himself for He is faithful.

Law can't save and God can't change His mind. Those two things are immutable. Any thinking Christian knows that. Then why on earth would he or she want to try to go back to living under law, keeping this and keeping that, things which don't amount to a hill of beans to God, when he knows he's been freed from the curse and has God's unchanging promise of faith? It's silly. No, it's tragic.

The Purpose Of The Law 3:19-25

All the way through this series we have been saying things like this: "We are dead to the law. We are not under law. Law cannot save, only curse. God never saved anybody by law, only by grace." And the more we say those things, the more it raises a very important question. If that's so, then why did God ever give the law in the first place? If God saved Abraham by grace, why would He then turn around and give Israel a law that He knew they couldn't keep? What is the purpose of the law? Why did God give it? Is it a bad thing or a good thing? That's what I'd like to talk about today and I hope that it will maybe help you to see the Old Testament law in a brand-new light. First, Paul explains to us here:

I. The Nature Of The Law (19-20) There are three things that you must understand about it:

1. it was supplementary The law was ADDED. The covenant of grace came first to Abraham. Later on, the law was added. Now, that word is important. There are two wrong impressions we might get from the word unless we're careful.

a. it did not replace or add to grace The word add definitely does not mean to replace. The law was an addition, not a replacement. God's covenant with Abraham of saving people by faith alone continued to be in force. It was not set aside or rendered invalid. It continued to operate from the Garden straight through the cross and on to today. God did not say "OK, now for 1000 years I'm going to set that aside and save people a different way, by keeping a law I'll give them." But the other danger is to think of adding in the terms of adding to what's already there, that God added new terms to what He required of man for salvation. "It used to be that believing was enough, but now new terms have been added. Now he must also keep the law." That's what the Judaizers in Galatia were saying. But the word does not mean that at all. Rather:

b. it functioned alongside of grace The word added here literally means put in place toward. The law was put in place toward sins. Rom. 5:20 uses another word. It too says, the law was ADDED, but there the word is pareiserchomai which means it entered in alongside or entered in parallel with. It functioned from the time of Moses on alongside of grace. God was still saving people by grace, but He put the law in place alongside that for an entirely different function. It was a supplementary thing. In my courses in school there was always supplementary reading, reading that was not the main assignment, but added to or reinforced the information you already had. Grace was the main thing going on. Law was alongside it to reinforce what grace already taught!

2. it was temporary It was put in place UNTIL the SEED to whom the Promise referred should come, that is, until Christ should come. The Law had a beginning and an ending point. God put it in place through Moses and it was intended to last until Christ. Now, even as I say that, I think of the words of Christ in Mt. 5:17-18, Do not think that I have come to abolish the Law or the Prophets; I have not come to abolish them but to fulfill them. For truly, I say to you, until heaven and earth pass away, not an iota, not a dot, will pass from the Law until all is accomplished. Now what does that mean? Well, the Law and the Prophets is a Jewish way of referring to the entire Old Testament. Christ did not come to throw the Scriptures away and set in place a new set of teachings and promises. He came to fulfill and complete what was already there. When He hung on the cross and cried, IT IS FINISHED, one of the things that meant was that the law was fulfilled in Him. He had kept the moral law and the ceremonial law, the commandments, perfectly. And thus, because we are in Him, He became the end of the law to us who believe. But the Old Testament is full of God's truth, full of information, full of predictions of things that are yet future to us. And every bit of it will have that same fulfillment. What Paul is saying is that law as a system was given to Israel for a temporary period. It served a purpose until the time when, through Christ, God made possible a new way of serving Him through the indwelling spirit and the law written on the heart, instead of the old way of the written code.

3. it was inferior It was an inferior system to grace. Grace was better. And the evidence Paul cites for this is that the Law was given by a mediator. Now, this is a little hard to grasp, but the mediator he's talking about is Moses. God gave the law through angels to Moses to the people. So:

a. it was mediated, not direct It required middle-men. God was still far off. But God's promise to Abraham was directly between him and God. That's how grace operates. God directly gives justification and righteousness to each individual person. And further:

b. it was two-sided, not one-sided A mediator represents the interests of both parties involved. Under law God promises blessing to man and man promises obedience to God. There must be performance on man's part. But grace is one-sided. God gives it without condition or requirement to each person freely, just as He did to Abraham. Now, which do you think is a better system? So, if the law was inferior and temporary and only intended as a supplemental thing to work alongside grace, then just what was:

II. The Function Of The Law (21-22) Was it opposed to the promise of God? Did God give out two different sets of standards? Did He say one thing and then change His mind and say another? Absolutely not!

1. it was never designed to impart life When God gave it, He knew nobody could ever keep it. Nobody could ever be totally righteous and perfect through obeying it. And He never gave it for that purpose. He never gave it to save, to give eternal life. Then why did He give it. Well:

2. it revealed the nature of sin (19) It was put in place toward sin, not toward salvation. The law was God's means of revealing to man just exactly the nature of what he was doing. Compare Rom. 7:7, 13. You see, without law a person would still practice sin; he would still do wrong. He might feel bad about it, but he would never understand what an offense it is against Almighty God unless God had said so! If nobody ever told me, Thou shalt not covet, I would still have coveted, but I wouldn't have seen the moral character of what I had done. Now it's time for a Greek lesson. The common Greek word for sin is hamartia which means to miss the target, to fall short, to fail. I have a bow and arrow and often shoot at a target. I often miss. I try my hardest but I recognize the fact that I err sometimes. However, that doesn't make me feel too bad; I just try to average better. That, by the way, is how many people feel about sin anyway! The word Paul uses in Gal. 3:19 is parabasis which means to step over a boundary, over a limit. God gave the law so man would know that he was stepping over the limit. It is not hard for man to admit that he has shortcomings, that he fails. But law shows him the truth that when he sins, he deliberately and directly steps over the boundaries set by God and he is responsible for it. It reveals what sin really is, how utterly sinful sin is.

3. it externally limited the practice of sin This is not even in the text, but is another important purpose. Remember what happened before the flood, in a time when there was absolutely no law at all, no standard for human conduct? The race fell so far into sin that just about every person on earth was lost. How was God to keep that from happening again? Well, after the flood He gave a law, not to save man, but to control man. He said, If a man sheds blood, by man must his blood be shed. He said, "Here is one boundary you cannot step over and if you do, you know the penalty." That was the foundation of all government and all law and order. The race needs external limits to put a lid on things or their behavior will run constantly to wickedness. Just imagine that we lived in a land that had absolutely no laws. What chaos there would be! Without law, the nation of Israel would have done much sooner what they eventually did anyway, fallen into total idolatry and sin. In a general way, law makes human life possible on this earth.

4. it brought personal conviction of sin Now look at Rom. 3:19-20. Through the law we become conscious of sin. It not only shows me what sin is, but it points a finger at me and says, "YOU HAVE SINNED". Law is a continual reminder of sin. Conscience you can ignore and salve, but written law won't go away. Every time you stare at it, it points its righteous finger at you and says, "Guilty!" Before you want salvation full and free, you have to realize you need it. The law is God's means of showing you your need through conviction. So:

5. it pointed to the way of grace It condemned the whole world, showed them that they were bound in the prison house of sin, so they were ready for a Savior. The law, by showing a man he can't keep it, is designed to point a man to Christ so he can be saved by faith. In other words, the system of law was put down alongside to point men to their need of the better system of grace! Now, let's reinforce these points by looking at:

III. The Pictures Of The Law (23-25) which Paul mentions. First:

1. it was a jailer (23), a jailer that kept us locked up in prison. Have you ever been in prison? Well, the one thing you want the whole time you're there is a way OUT! The law was the jailer that kept us locked up:

a. it confined us to the consciousness of sin It wouldn't let us forget our sins, wouldn't let us forget the penalty, wouldn't let us tell ourselves we were OK and:

b. it pointed us to the only way of salvation It wouldn't let us stop looking for a way out until we found Christ! It kept me locked up and looking out through the bars until I saw the Savior willing to rescue me without any merit on my part! So, that's one picture. Here's another:

2. it was a guardian (24) In the Greek. Paul says the law was our pedagogue. The KJV says, schoolmaster, but that's not correct. In the Roman world the pedagogue was the term for a household slave who was designated to have charge of a child for the purposes of keeping them out of trouble. He was not an instructor or teacher but more of a guardian to protect them from harm and prevent them from wrong behavior. He was more like a lunchroom monitor or principal. So, a guardian was placed in charge of the child until he reached adulthood when he was free to act for himself. Now, lest you think that weird, we still use a similar system. When a child is young, we use a law system to guard them. We make rules to limit and protect them and keep them out of trouble. They often don't understand the rules or even agree with them because they can't yet. But the goal is that when they are of age, they will have internalized the principles of right behavior and will act right without our rules. So, whether you're talking about THE LAW given to the Jews or the system of LAW which we are all under before we receive Christ, the picture still holds:

a. it was placed in charge to protect Law guards us and protects us from going too far over the edge. It keeps us out of some very serious trouble by externally limiting us to whatever degree.

b. it was necessary before maturity Before we came to Christ and had our hearts changed so that we now WANT to do right, we needed that! Just like a child MUST have rules and discipline while he is young. Law did guard us and was a benefit to us in that way but:

c. it was designed to be replaced The job of guardian has a mandatory retirement! When adulthood is reached it ceases. So when we come to Christ and are regenerated, we no longer need the guardianship of the Law because we live out the Law of Christ from our very hearts. We live from the inside out instead of trying to live outside and make it change the inside. So the bottom line is that for the Christian there is no longer a place for law. I am saved by grace. I am changed by grace. I must live by grace, by obeying the Christ who lives in me and rules my heart, not by keeping external rules. Yet I can be thankful for law because it kept me from what might have been horrible things; it made me conscious of my sin and it pointed me to the Savior to find life.

The best illustration I can think of is this. John the Baptist was like the law personified. He was sent by God, used by God to convict people of sin and produce repentance. He pointed them to Christ to find forgiveness. And when Christ was on the cross, he was gone. His followers he sent to Jesus. His own words were, He must increase but I must decrease. He prepared the way, but was not the way. And that's the exact function of law in our lives. It was a blessing from God to prepare the way, but it is not the way, and if we persist in it, we defeat its very purpose. It indeed becomes sin to us, just as it would have been sin for John's followers to continue to follow his memory instead of coming to Jesus.

The Position Of The Believer 3:26-4:7

I want to talk to you today about who you are. Now you might think of that in terms of your relationships, such as "I'm a mother or father or a husband or wife." Or you might think in terms of your occupation or the position you hold at work, such as, "I'm a carpenter" or "I'm a supervisor or a manager." You might think of it in terms of your gifts, for example, "I'm an artist or an outdoorsman or a teacher." But I want to cut through all that low-level stuff that's part of your earthly identity and let Paul tell you who you really are. Read verse 26. You are a son or a daughter, a child of God! How did you get to be that? Simply by exercising faith in Jesus Christ. The minute you believed on Him as your Savior, you became a child of God. Remember John 1:12. God gave you a special gift, a special privilege. He made you His child. That is who you are and that shapes how you think and how you live and how you relate to people and circumstances. You're a child of God. Now let's explore further:

I. The Fact Of Sonship (3:26-29) I guess I should tell you why we're talking about this. It has a purpose. And it's not simply to make you feel all warm and gushy and secure, although if it does; that's a side benefit. The fact of your sonship means something when it comes to this whole matter of law and grace and of whether you live by a system of law or a system of grace. That's where we're going, so follow with me step by step. Here are the deeper ramifications of sonship. First:

1. we have a spiritual union with Christ (27a) We have been baptized into Christ and he's not talking about water here. He's not saying, "All of you who have been baptized are children of God." Baptism never saved anybody or made them a child of God. He says, "All of us are baptized or placed into Christ and so have put on Christ." You see, at the moment of our conversion, the Holy Spirit baptized us into the body of Christ. He placed us into a spiritual union with Christ by coming to indwell us and uniting Himself with our spirit. We are actually one with Christ. There is a spiritually organic union between Him and our spirit. So:

2. we have the singular identity of Christ (27b) We have put on Christ like a fresh garment. Who we are is all wrapped up in Jesus Christ. What He is, we are. What happened to Him, happened to us. What is true of Him, is true of us. We are in Him. He is our identity. And the next verse makes it even clearer:

3. we have the same life in Christ (28) We are no longer doctors, lawyers, and Indian chiefs or red and yellow, black and white. While we may be all of those things, none of those things is our real identity any longer. We are the body of Christ. We all have one and the same mind, the mind of Christ. We all have the same common life, the life of Jesus Christ, lived out through each one of us by the Holy Spirit. Stop looking from the bottom up and start looking from the top down for a moment. Sit in heaven. There is Jesus living in you and you and you. And what do you see, Jesus living out His life through thousands of believers. How many lives do they have? One, His! And that makes them all the same. It takes away all our differences, breaks down all our walls, makes us one in Christ. But, on the other hand, when we stand down here and look from the bottom up, we find another truth:

4. we have the special position of Christ (29) If we are united with Him, then His position is our position. What does that mean? Well, go back to verse 16. God's promise was to Abraham and to His Seed (singular), that is, Christ. Now if we are in Christ and He is my identity, then what do we find:

a. we are sons of Abraham and God Jesus is God's Son and our relationship to God is through Him. We are joined to Him, so we are all sons of God through faith. And likewise, if He is Abraham's seed, then WE are Abraham's seed! The promise given to Christ belongs to us and therefore:

b. we are heirs of God's promise That promise given to Abraham belongs to us in Christ. It is ours by inheritance as we are the very seed of God, the sons of God in Christ. Now, what does that mean? Well, you see, the Judaizers were teaching these Galatians that in order to be children of Abraham and to be heirs to the promise God made to him, they had to go back under the law and be circumcised and all that. They had to do something to merit it. But Paul says, "NO. We have all the position we'll ever need right now by grace. We are already God's children and Abraham's children in Jesus Christ! We don't need to keep the law!" Now, let me press this whole issue a bit further. What does sonship do for us besides get us into heaven? Well, let me show you:

II. The Meaning Of Sonship (4:1-7) And to do that we have to compare who we are now with what we used to be. Here is:

1. the slavery we once knew (1-3) Now, to understand what he's talking about you have to understand:

a. the image of Roman adoption It had nothing to do with taking in a child from another family. Every boy had an adoption in the Roman culture. It was a "coming of age". His father would set a time for it, a certain age when it would happen. Before that time, he was a minor and was subject to the ruling of a pedagogue, a child-trainer, a guardian. Others took care of his possessions for him and made his decisions for him, even though he might be the heir to the whole estate. He was not much different from the household servant or slave who was always told what to do and how to act. But then that great day came when he was declared a full-grown son with all the attendant rights and privileges. He was responsible for his own actions and decisions and possessions. He lived under a new system and was free from the control of guardians. And if you think about it, you'll see:

b. the dual application of the image

(1) Israel: enslaved to the Old Testament law The Old Testament period of the law was like the minor years of a child in the family. The Jew was subject to the Law as a guardian, as something to manipulate and control his affairs. He was a slave to the law, having to do what it said externally. And this also applies to:

(2) us: enslaved to the system of law (3) We may not have been Jews and been under the Law of Moses, but the other week we looked at Romans 2 and saw that the Gentiles have the law of God written on their hearts. Here he calls it, the basic principles of the world. We were under the system of law. Before we were saved, we had a heart that was wicked. We needed external control. We lived under law to keep us in check and curb our behavior. So, we were enslaved to the system of law. But along comes Christ:

2. Christ's purpose at the cross (4-5) You see, God set a time just like the Roman father would. And at that time, He sent forth His Son out of heaven to do something about our situation. And what He did was this, He went to the cross and died there for a purpose:

a. to replace the system of law with grace God didn't want servants; He wanted sons. He didn't want people to do what He said, to follow His rules. He wanted children with hearts who loved Him and lived out of that love. So He bought us back out of the slave market by paying the price of death. And in doing so He took us out of the realm of the law in order:

b. to give us the full rights of sonship, so we would now relate to Him in all the full privileges of sonship. The cross was the end of the system of law! Historically, God was done with it; it had served its purpose. So every Jew should have gone to Christ to find fulfillment. But personally, when I got saved that same thing was true of me. Up to that point I was under law, but now I have a whole new set of privileges. I am under grace.

3. the privileges we now have (6-7) Here's where Paul finally spells it out! We have three great privileges because we are His sons:

a. the privilege of relationship We can call Him Abba, "Daddy". The law never gave anybody a relationship with God except as a Judge or Umpire to decide whether they had kept it. The law makes God your Judge. But grace which comes by Jesus makes Him your Father! And He pours out His love on you and you can come to Him with everything that is on your heart. You are one. Your relationship with the Father is through His Son Jesus and that makes you His son. And everything that is true in the relationship between the Father and the Son is true between the Father and you. You have love, access, protection, and everything else.

b. the privilege of the Spirit As His son, you are indwelt by the Holy Spirit and that gives you a new means of living. You live from the inside out, instead of from the outside in. You live by the direction and power of the Spirit of His Son who lives in you, instead of by the external guardian of the law filled with regulations and principles. You live no longer as a child who must be told, but as a full son whose heart wants to.

c. the privilege of heirship All that belongs to Jesus, all of His inheritance, His rights and privileges, belong to you! You are a joint-heir with Jesus Christ. You, my friend, shall not only inherit the earth, but eternity.

So, back to the point of it all. God saved you to be a son or daughter, to live as a son or daughter lives with all the full rights and privileges of sonship. Why would you ever want to go back to living like you did in childhood, living under a system of law, instead of living like the son or daughter that you are! And, in case you may be wondering why it is so important to talk about this, let me tell you. I know people, Christians, who have spent their whole lives trying to meet a set of obligations, trying to live up to a set of standards, trying to gain acceptance by meeting God's expectations and everyone else's, instead of knowing the freedom they have in Christ to simply be guided and empowered by the Holy Spirit, who will produce in them the life He wants. If I could only tell them, "You're free; you can stop that futile process now; you've been accepted; you're a SON; you don't relate to God by performance anymore; you're His child and He is well-pleased in you.", it would change their lives. You see, once you understand who you are, you will start to live like who you are. Believe it, my friend. You are not some law-slave to God, some servant keeping His rules. You are His SON or DAUGHTER!

The Personal Plea For Steadfastness 4:8-20

Did you ever watch somebody you love in the process of making a big mistake? Do you remember how much that hurts? Maybe it's one of your own kids who is in the process of making wrong choices or getting involved in a wrong lifestyle and you try to talk to them, you plead with them, as they persist in this direction and your heart is breaking. Maybe it's somebody you've been ministering to. I remember some years ago a young lady we met at the prison who had accepted Christ. We developed a relationship with her. When she was released, some of us took her into our homes. She got a job and got her life together. She became part of our fellowship; she sang in our choir. We cared about her. But there was this guy she had met in prison. He was much older than her. He had a history of years of alcohol problems and deceptive behavior. He had been divorced once and lived with other women. But he said he had become a Christian and he was bent on marrying her. And she bought it. She planned to marry him upon his release. Several of us warned her; we begged her, we pleaded with her not to go through with it. We could see how Satan could use this to take apart her vibrant spiritual life and keep her from fruitful service and involve her in years of personal misery and struggle. It broke our hearts. Suffice it to say, we turned out to be right, but that's another story. I told you this for a reason. That's how Paul feels about these Galatian Christians. False teachers have come among them teaching them that they must keep the Old Testament law in order to be true Christians. And little by little, they're buying it. Paul sees where that's going to lead, away from Christ, and his heart is breaking. He has led these folks to Christ. He loves them. And so, in our text today, he pleads with them on a personal basis; he begs them to consider what they're doing and turn from it and it is every bit as serious as marrying the wrong person or getting involved in drugs. And what this really shows us is how God feels about us, what God would say to us when we turn from grace and begin to try to live by law as a way of seeking Him. Paul asks them, in essence, three very piercing questions:

I. Why Would You Want To Go Back? (8-11) This is the very question God is asking you when you as a believer try to live under the rule of law. Why would you want to go back? Now, in order to understand the question, you first have to understand:

1. where you were (8) before you came to Christ. Do keep in mind that these Galatians were pagans before they were saved. They actually worshipped idols. But their situation is no different from ours. First, they and you were:

a. not knowing the true God These folks hadn't even heard of the true and living God before Paul came; how much less could they have known Him? And I don't care how religious you are, how sincere you are, how much you pray, before you are saved you don't know God. You don't have His life and are separated from Him. And you are:

b. influenced by demons Actual idols are nothing. They are pieces of wood or stone or gold. They have no life and no power. But Paul is not talking about statues here. Behind every idol is a demon promoting its worship. Compare 1 Cor. 10:19-20. In other words, though the person might not recognize it and even be horrified by the thought, when he is praying to his god, he is actually praying to a demon, falling under the control of demonic influence and power. Millions of Muslims praying to Allah, millions of Hindus praying to a Hindu god, all are demon-influenced, and so are you before you are saved. Of course, you live in a Christianized society so that thought is almost revolting. But 1 Tim. 4:1 tells us that people who depart from the faith follow deceiving spirits and things taught by demons. The false things we believe about God before we are saved are deceptions foisted upon us by Satan and his demons. Who do you think invented the idea that a man can be saved by his works, by being good, by being religious, or by offering prayers? Not God! We bought Satan's teachings and so we were:

c. bound to elementary principles to reach God Verse 9 calls them weak and miserable principles. The word principles there is the same word as in verse 3, the elementary principles, and it is a reference to the system of law or performance as a way to reach God. The unsaved man is bound in this demonic way of thinking that somehow law works, that somehow his performance can achieve a relationship with God, and it can't work; it's weak. And it makes you miserable because you can't do it. You can't live under law; you constantly sin.

Now, that's where you were before you were saved, whether you like to admit it or not. But look at what Paul says about:

2. what Christian legalism is He spells it out in verse 10:

a. observing Old Testament elementary principles (10) They had begun to observe the ritual of the Sabbath day every week and the feast of the new moon every month and the Levitical calendar of the seasons of fasting and feasting and the concept of the Sabbath year. The false teachers had gradually taught them these things and told them they were necessary to be real Christians. They had begun teaching them that circumcision is necessary, as we find in chapter 5. Remember, these people were pagans. They had never done any of these things before, yet Paul calls what they were doing:

b. returning to where you were again (9) It has different trappings but it is going back under a system of law to make yourself acceptable to God! Listen, when you become legalistic as a believer, whether you try to make rules about Sunday being a Christian Sabbath or you set down rules about what you can and cannot eat or drink or certain modes of dress or certain versions of the Bible, you are going back right to where you were before you were saved, trying to make yourself acceptable to God by keeping a system of weak and miserable elementary principles and being influenced by demons to believe that it works! Now that's a strong statement and I'm sorry, but that's what it says! And that's why Paul's heart is breaking. He's saying, "Why, why would you ever want to go back to that when you have been set free and have been made God's child and heir by GRACE!" Makes you think, doesn't it? Now, on to a second question that Paul asks:

II. How Could You Change So Much? (12-16) Did you ever have anyone turn on you? It might be your own child who you loved and cared for and sacrificed for, who means all the world to you. But for their own good you warn them about something or forbid them something and all of a sudden that's all forgotten. You're the enemy. It happens in ministry. You pour your love and caring into somebody. You bring them to Christ. You nurture them. And then along comes somebody else and teaches them some off-the-wall thing and they buy it and their whole attitude toward you is changed. That hurts too. Paul felt it happening to him with the Galatians. See:

1. their original attitude toward Paul Acts 13-14 tell us the story of how Paul came to the region of Galatia and preached there on his first missionary journey in Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe. But here we find some information Luke didn't tell us there. We learn of:

a. Paul's disabling illness (13) Paul evidently didn't plan on staying in Galatia. He had his sights set further west, no doubt on western Asia minor and Macedonia and Greece. But he developed an illness, a disabling illness. We can't say for sure, but verse 15 and 6:11 seem to indicate it was a disease of the eyes. Some scholars suggest that it was a disease called ophthalmia, an eye disease common in the lowlands of Pamphylia through which Paul had just passed. It allowed ministry but prevented much travel and it gave him a repulsive appearance. Yet note:

b. their enthusiastic reception (14) Despite the fact that he was a Jew and they were Gentiles, that he hadn't intended to stay, that he was repulsive to look at, and that his illness could have been taken as a sign of the weakness of his God, they received him with open arms. They listened and they believed. They received him as a messenger sent straight from God, in the same way they would have Jesus Himself! In fact, see:

c. their zealous love (15) They loved Paul. They were so grateful to him for bringing them forgiveness in Christ. They would have torn out their own eyes and given them to him if they could have. Yet look at:

2. their current attitude toward Paul (16) Now that these false teachers have come along, all of a sudden, he's the enemy, the bad guy. He's the villain. And he asks, "How could you change so much? How could you understand that I and my message came from God and love me so much and now you've forgotten that altogether?" Whenever you're tempted to go back to living under law, remember that person who led you to Christ, who helped you understand that grace is free and you can't earn it. Remember their love and let that keep you straight! But finally, he asks them, in essence, a third question:

III. Don't You Understand What's Going On? (17-20) "Can't you see what these false teachers, these legalizers, are doing to you?"

1. the guile of false teachers (17-18) They're deceptive!

a. their process is to court you That whole phrase zealous to win you over comes from the realm of courtship, where a man has to "win over" his lady. And you know how courtship can be. You know how often a man uses flattery. He tells you sweet things he knows you want to hear. He says you are as radiant as the sun, moon, and stars, that you are the most beautiful girl in the world. These false teachers are wooing you. That's what false teachers do! They tell you nice things, things you want to hear, but:

b. their goal is to alienate you, to cut you off from the truth and from those who teach it. They wanted the Galatians to reject Paul and his message, to cut off that relationship. You watch. What do Jehovah's witnesses and others do, even legalistic Christians? They try to alienate you from the people that are influencing you spiritually, to turn you against them. Why?

c. their purpose is for you to court them, because when you're cut off from the truthful teachers, you have no place left to turn but to the false teachers! You will then court them and become their disciples! It's a deceptive process. It's a selfish process, not really intended for the good of you but for the good of them. It has to be. Any system of law, Christian or cult, is of necessity self-centered. It has to be, because it is MY performance that pleases God and whether I recognize it or not, you are a help to ME in that process! But contrast:

2. the sincerity of a true teacher (19-20) He has only one desire, to see the image of Christ manifest itself in them, to see them living out the life of Jesus Christ. And he has gone back into labor pains for them all over again. He is in anguish until they have come through and seen the truth again. A true teacher doesn't care about himself and his own benefit, or even that he's been wronged. He cares that you remain true to Jesus Christ and reflect His image.

My friend, whenever somebody's influencing you and you're tempted to live under law, to return to a system of rules and performance as a way of life, just stop and ask yourself these three questions: How could you ever go back to that? How could you change so much in your attitude toward the Gospel and those who brought it to you? Don't you understand what's really going on? Somebody is leading you astray for their own benefit. Every year hundreds of people are led out of Christian background into cults, into liberal forms that masquerade as Christianity, into the New Age Movement, or into churches which try to place them back under Old Testament rules for living. Some of the false teachers are very outspoken; many are very subtle in their influence. Don't give even an inch. Don't break my heart or the heart of God. Remain steadfast in Jesus Christ and cling to Him alone.

The Scriptural Plea For Steadfastness 4:21-31

This paragraph is the capstone of Paul's doctrinal section, where he is defending the fact that salvation and the Christian life are both by faith. He sets law and grace up as two complete opposites, systems as different from each other as earth is from heaven and as opposed to each other as slavery is to freedom. These verses are a call to take a stand, to quit riding the fence, to choose to live by law or grace once and for all, instead of trying to cling to both. Now, you must understand that at the time this letter was written, half or more of the Christian church came out of Jewish background, lived in Israel, and still clung to the Temple and many of the trappings of Judaism and they weren't willing to let go. In fact, they were trying to enforce their view on the Gentiles and they were succeeding! So, Paul is really drawing the battle lines. Like Moses of old, he's crying out, I have set before you life and death...therefore choose life! And like Joshua, Choose this day whom you will serve...but as for me and my house we will serve the Lord! And he does that by using:

I. The Biblical Illustration: Two Sons (21-23) To those who are trying to go back under law, he shows them an illustration from the Law itself (Genesis, written by Moses, was considered part of the Law). He reminds them of the life of Abraham. Abraham had two sons in the early part of his life. The story of the first, Ishmael, and how he was born is found in Gen. 16 and the story of the second, Isaac, and how he was born, is in Gen. 21. I'm going to assume that you know those stories and not turn back there. Instead let's look at what Paul has to say about:

1. Abraham's son Ishmael First of all, he was:

a. born of a slave woman Hagar was an Egyptian maidservant, a slave in Abraham's household. Sarah ordered her to go and lay with Abraham and get pregnant so she could use her as a sort of surrogate mother. But she did not become a real wife. She was always a slave. And therefore, her son Ishmael, though half of Abraham, was still half of her and he would never have the same status as the son of a real wife. He would always be tainted with slavery. Second, he was:

b. born as a result of self-effort God didn't have anything to do with it. It wasn't His idea. It was Sarah's and Abraham bought into it. But if you analyze it, it was simply an attempt to fulfill their dream of a child without God's help or perhaps to help God along a little bit. So, his birth was a result of self-effort, man's trying and striving. Thirdly, he was:

c. born by the power of the flesh There was no miracle here, only a natural process of the flesh. Man and woman get together; baby results. It was happening everywhere to everyone all around because flesh is able to do that, but there is nothing supernatural about it. However, 14 years later came:

2. Abraham's son Isaac What a contrast! He was:

a. born of a free woman Sarah was Abraham's wife. Isaac was not his servant but his full son, with all the attendant rights and privileges. He was the sole heir. Sarah even said that Ishmael could never be a joint heir with her son. She knew the difference and so did Abraham. So Isaac was born a son, not a slave. And he was:

b. born as a result of promise His birth was God's idea. God promised Abraham that Sarah would have a son. They were old. They would have given up long ago, except that God kept reminding them time after time of His promise: you will have a son. So, Isaac was born as a result of the promise of Almighty God, not as a result of the self-effort of man. And finally, he was:

c. born by the power of the Spirit (29) Verse 29 uses another phrase to describe him. He was the miracle boy. He was born of the power of the Holy Spirit. Sarah was not only barren; she was past childbearing. She could not have children. The Scripture says of Abraham that his body was now dead also. Yet God worked a miracle and brought Isaac. He was born as a result of supernatural power! And of course, you see his point, don't you? All human beings are pictured by one of these two sons, aren't they? You're either like Ishmael, simply born of the natural process, a child of the flesh, or you're like Isaac, a child of God born supernaturally in your spirit by the miracle of the new birth at the hand of the Spirit of God and according to the promise of God that whoever believes in His Name becomes a child of God! You're either a creation of God in slavery and servitude to Him, or a child of God with all the attendant rights and privileges! Which are you? Well, anyway, Paul goes on to give:

II. The Symbolic Interpretation: Two Women (24-27) Now he focuses, not on the two sons, but on the two women and says that this is an allegory, a picture, a symbol, that can teach us a lesson. While the stories are literally true and factual, the two women, Hagar and Sarah symbolically represent:

1. two covenants (systems), two systems of relating to God. First there is:

a. Hagar represents the covenant of law The law was given at Mt. Sinai and, just like Hagar's son Ishmael was a slave, so those who are born under the covenant of law are children of slavery. They are doomed to try to succeed by self-effort but can't succeed because they have only natural power. On the other hand:

b. Sarah represents the covenant of grace, the covenant which promised Abraham, in you and in your seed will all the nations of the earth be blessed, with no strings attached. And just as Sarah's son Isaac was born a son, free, heir to everything his father had, so those who become subjects of the covenant of grace are set into their position by the hand of God and can't lose it! And Paul goes on to say that these women therefore represent:

2. two cities (groups of people) In Paul's day the Law no longer went forth from Mt. Sinai; it went forth from:

a. Jerusalem which represents Judaism Hagar is the picture of the Jews as a people and their religion, Judaism. It is law. It means achievement, the keeping of rules and standards. It is slavery. But there is another city:

b. Heavenly Jerusalem which represents Christianity You read about this city in Rev. 21 where it comes down from heaven and see how beautiful it is. It is the home of the saints of all the ages, those who were saved by faith. So, the heavenly Jerusalem represents Christianity. That's the contrast he's trying to make.

These Galatians are trying to be Jews, to live under the covenant of law. He's emphasizing the fact that Christianity is a whole different thing, a whole new covenant, a new way to live. It is entered by a new means and it produces a new freedom. So these two women have:

3. two types of children Hagar and Judaism have:

a. those who are slaves under law, those who struggle day after day to be righteous by self-effort, keeping the infinite rules and regulations. While Sarah and Christianity have:

b. those who are free under grace, having been placed into their position by faith in God's promise and born of the Spirit of God and are now free to live out the life of God inside them.

See, you are either Hagar's child or Sarah's child, either living under a covenant of law or under grace. You are either in slavery to the elementary principles of this world or free as a child of Almighty God and heir to the whole thing. There is no middle ground. Now so far, this has been a nice story. Maybe you've understood a little more about a particular piece of Scripture, but so what. We need to make:

III. The Personal Application: Two Actions (28-31) And I'll give them to you in a moment but first be reminded of:

1. our status: free (28) We who are born again are, like Isaac, children of promise. We are free. We are not under law. We do not have to do one thing as a means of being acceptable to God; we are already accepted by Him. We serve Him out of love and the desire of our hearts. But do you know what you can expect?

2. our expectation: persecution (29) When Isaac was born, they had a party to celebrate his weaning (a strange custom to us), but at the party Ishmael, the older son, mocked and made fun of Isaac. He was jealous that this little baby had come along to take his favored position! What happened in the early church? The children of law persecuted believers; Jews were the first to stone them and riot and punish them any way they could. And let me tell you something. When you stand for grace, you're going to get persecuted by those who love to live under law. Years ago, Art Bailey of the Billy Graham organization, told me he got at least five calls a day from legalistic brethren who accused the organization of compromise and liberalism, because they exercise their freedom and cooperate with ANYONE who knows Christ, regardless of denomination! Just exercise your freedom and go to a good movie and you'll find some good brother to tell you it is against "Christian law (principles)". Dance with your wife at a reception and somebody will criticize you for it. On the other hand, tell some nice, moral, unsaved person that he can't earn his way into heaven by being good and watch the ear-full you catch. Expect it. We're told to. People under law don't like people who are free under grace. But that's not important. What's important is:

3. our actions: Here's where Paul puts his neck right on the line and gets direct. He stops talking just in pictures and gets straight to the point. He says:

a. reject the proponents of law (30) He says, "Abraham threw out Hagar and he threw out her son because God told him to. That's what you need to do!" He's saying, "You need to throw out those false teachers, those legalizers who have been teaching and influencing you. Kick them out. Call them what they really are and get rid of them!" Just wait until he gets to writing the Book of Hebrews (if he did). Do you know what he's going to say there? "Come on outside the camp. Leave your Jewish heritage. Forget the Temple and the sacrificial system. You've got everything far superior in Christ. Cut the apron strings and let go and walk solely with Christ!" And folks, we need to reject those who try to get us to come back and live under law. I don't mean that we should hate them. I mean we have to stop their teaching and halt it right where it's at. There are far too many folks in pulpits and in Sunday Schools teaching law instead of grace and we need to be careful it doesn't happen here. But secondly, he says:

b. remain steadfast in your freedom (31-5:1) Christ didn't die for us and set us free to watch us become slaves. The price was too high for us to throw away our freedom and try to slip back under a system of law and live like a Jew or an unsaved person. We need to BE what we ARE, to stand firm and let nobody drag us back under law, even a little bit, no matter how influential they may be!

To reiterate, like Moses of old, Paul is crying out, I have set before you life and death...therefore choose life! and like Joshua, Choose this day whom you will serve...but as for me and my house we will serve the Lord! Which will you choose in your life?

A Life Activated By Faith 5:1-12

When we come to chapter 5 of Galatians, we move into the third section of Paul's letter and again, here is the outline to refresh your memory. While the first section was personal in nature and the second was doctrinal, these last two chapters are practical. They tell us how to actually live by grace and what a difference it makes in our life. As you can see, there are five results of grace, five things it produces when it operates in us:

- | | |
| I. Grace: God's Message through Paul (PERSONAL) | Chs. 1-2 |
| II. Grace: God's Method of Salvation (DOCTRINAL) | Chs. 3-4 |
| III. Grace: God's Means of Living (PRACTICAL) | Chs. 5-6 |
| 1. it produces a faith-activated life | 5:1-12 |
| 2. it produces a service-oriented life | 5:13-15 |
| 3. it produces a Spirit-controlled life | 5:16-26 |
| 4. it produces a responsible life | 6:1-10 |
| 5. it produces a crucified life | 6:11-18 |

The basic issue we face in living is not knowing what is right; it is the issue of power, the ability to do what we know is the right thing to do. Listen, there are plenty of drug addicts who know that the right thing is to "Just say no!" but they can't; they have no power. And there are plenty of Christians who know what God's standards for right living are, yet the question remains of how I find the power to live that way. Well, there are only two sources of power available to you, your own limited human strength and the almighty power of God. And those two sources of power are the root of the two systems we've been looking at all through this letter. The system of law says that you can live the life God wants by your own human strength; the system of grace says that you can't! He alone has the power to live that life and that He must channel His power through you! It may seem like only words to you, but, my friend, it's the difference between day and night, between victory and failure, between power and weakness. So let's look first with Paul at:

I. The Weakness Of Slipping Back Under Law (1-4) These Galatians were leaning toward the system of law. They had started keeping some of the Old Testament feasts. But their false teachers were telling them they had to be circumcised in addition to their faith in Christ in order to truly belong to God. This they had not yet done, but they were seriously thinking about it. They had started out by grace alone, but were slowly slipping back into law. So, Paul warns them, "Look! If you accept circumcision as being necessary for salvation, that is adding works to grace and returning to law and here's what it is like." First, if you do that:

1. it is a forfeiting of privilege (1,3) It is carrying a burden you've been set free from and don't need to carry any longer. And that privilege is freedom. Nobody on earth has it but you, believers in Christ. To say that circumcision, or baptism, or communion, or church membership, or anything else, is necessary for God to accept me is to throw away the great privilege of knowing that I am totally accepted by Him because I'm in Christ and I'm free. My debt is all paid. I'm sin-debt free and I don't want to be burdened by spiritual payments anymore! Do you remember what it was like when you turned 18 or 21? Do you remember what it was like to be able to at last have the freedom of making decisions on your own as a mature adult instead of simply being constrained by Mom and Dad's rules? You might have done the very same thing; you might have come home at 11 PM anyway. But you did it because you wanted to and you made a choice and not because you had to! Would you ever want to go back to where all your decisions are made for you and all you do is keep the rules? NO! It would be forfeiting the most wonderful thing you have, freedom! Well, in Christ you have been made free, free to live the righteous life that the Lord wants you to live, not by keeping a bunch of rules and laws, but by simply making the choice moment by moment to yield control of your life to Him. That freedom is a great privilege, one that you might as well not have if you're going to live as a slave under law.

2. it is a forfeiting of advantage (2) Now don't get Paul wrong. He's not saying that you lose your salvation, because he goes to great lengths in many places to prove you can't. He's talking about living here and he's saying that it is doing you no practical good to have Christ in your heart and life, living inside you. You see, you have a great advantage over every person in the world outside of Christ. Christ lives in you. He has placed His Holy Spirit inside you. But when you decide to live on the basis of law by your own strength, you've thrown away for all practical purposes the effect of Christ's being there. You've invited Him to come and sit in you and watch you live the life you think He wants! You've forfeited your great advantage. And that great advantage is power. So, turning back to law:

3. it is a forfeiting of power (4) Again, Paul is not saying you have fallen out of the grace of God that saved you. He's saying that you have let go of your hold on the system of grace and become alienated from Christ. The word alienated is not a good translation. It is the Greek katergeo which means to render powerless or ineffective. You've made Christ powerless and ineffective in your life. When you start depending on your own strength to produce righteousness in your life, you throw away the greatest asset you have, the very power of Christ who came into you to live the life He wants by that mighty power. It's like facing the enemy in battle with your slingshot while your machine gun is strapped on your back! It's like pushing your car down the street instead of turning the key and unleashing its own vast power to carry you! You see, there is one thing that characterizes a life under law, weakness! When I live out of my own resources, I am weak and I fail and fail and fail. So why would they or I ever allow ourselves to slip back into that? Well, let's skip ahead a bit and look at:

II. The Reasons For Slipping Back Under Law (7-12) You see, somebody else is at work here. Verse 8 says that going back under law isn't God's idea; it's not His leading, His doing. It's like you were running a race and you were running it well. But all of a sudden, somebody cut in front of you and broke your stride and slowed your progress. Did you ever have that happen? Well, did anybody ever cut in front of you in traffic and you had to slam on the brakes? You see:

1. it is a stratagem of Satan (7-10) He doesn't like to see you progressing, running the race well, living by the power of God. So, by means of false teachers and false teachings He tries to cut in front of you and slow you down. It's an old strategy of his that has two purposes. It is:

a. designed to keep you from truth (7) If you know the truth that Jesus Christ lives in you and stands ready to live through you and you act on the truth by letting Him do it, you run the race well. You make spiritual progress. And you become an effective tool for Jesus Christ. Oh, does Satan hate that! He has to cut in somehow and stop it. So what does he do? He simply plants a doubt. He sends somebody to tell you that where you are is not enough, that something more is required, that you must be circumcised or do this or do that in order to be fully accepted and right with God. You must add something to what Christ has done. He plants just a little seed and it takes root and grows. You see it is:

b. designed to spread (9) like yeast in a lump of dough. There was a lady in my first church who kept a lump of sourdough in the refrigerator and every time she wanted to make cookies, she would mix it up with a fresh batch of dough and the yeast would spread very quickly through the whole dough. Then she'd take a lump of that and save it for next time and make cookies out of the rest. A little bit of yeast mixed in spreads quickly. So does this concept of law, the idea that I must add something to what God has done, that I must keep some law. It spreads quickly:

(1) to the whole of your life You can see it in Galatia. They started by keeping the Sabbath and the feasts. Now it was, "You must be circumcised". Verse 3 tells us where it was going, to the whole law. It starts with one thing and then there's something else and something else and pretty soon your whole life is built on the wrong foundation, trying in your own strength to be acceptable and pleasing to God. But it also spreads from person to person until it gets:

(2) to the whole of the church It was happening there in Galatia. It happens today. One person starts preaching law, making rules, and it's contagious. People hop on the bandwagon because it looks good and right, but the wagon has no wheels. It isn't going anywhere and Satan impedes the progress of whole churches by this! So that's reason number one; we slip back under law by falling prey to Satan's influence. We get duped! Secondly:

2. it is an attempt to avoid persecution (11) Somebody must have even said that Paul still preached circumcision. Boy, did that rile him! He said, "Man, do you think I went through all this stuff I suffered when I was in Galatia because I preach circumcision? They stoned me and dragged what they thought was my carcass outside the city wall and left me there! The Jews would never have done that if I was saying, 'You must be circumcised and become a Jew to be a Christian!'" Yet that in itself was probably one of the very reasons these folks were slipping back. The pressure was on. They didn't want to experience the persecution that Paul received. If they submitted to the Law, the Jews would receive them as brothers and they would have peace. Sometimes law is the easy way out. It keeps people from being offended. And then thirdly:

3. it is an imitation of paganism (12) This has got to be the strongest statement that Paul ever wrote, but the NIV kind of overdoes the translation to make it seem more crass than necessary. Go all the way and... is not in the Greek. It is derived from one particle which is normally translated and or even. The NAS says, Would that those who trouble you would even mutilate themselves. Galatia was the center of the worship of a pagan goddess called Cybele, the goddess of fertility, and her priests actually castrated themselves. I think Paul's comment is a reference to that, that he's saying, "They might as well go all the way and do like the pagan priests do. There's no difference between the two. They are both systems of trying to reach God by law, by human effort. But if they went all the way people would see it for what it is." Sometimes we slip under law by unknowingly trying to imitate the pagan practices around us, only "Christianizing" them. It happens all the time. The church imports all the latest psychological techniques for fixing people's problems by self-effort, sticks the word God in here and there, instead of telling a person that they have to be changed by the grace of Almighty God and helping them yield themselves to Him. Oh, Satan works so hard to get us to slip back under law one way or another but look at:

III. The Power Of The Life Of Faith (5-6) Don't read these verses too quickly, because in them is the key to the Christian life and we might miss it. Let's take them apart. The first thing we see is:

1. the goal: righteous living Now, I do not believe he's talking about the end times and the return of Christ and having a new body without sin. That's out of context. Righteousness here is a righteous life, a holy life, right here and now. He says that's the goal. We eagerly look for it. That's what we want, what we hope for, what we expect. But how do we expect to get it:

2. the agent: the Holy Spirit It is produced by the power of the Holy Spirit who lives inside of us. The Holy Spirit says "no" to drugs and immorality. The Holy Spirit says "no" to hate and prejudice. The Holy Spirit enables me to forgive instead of retaliating. That's how it's going to come. God's grace, His mighty power, is going to shape my life into that righteous life I so desire. And what will it look like?

3. the result: love When He is in control and running my life by His power, it will be full of love and guess what love is (verse 14). Love is what the law was really all about but couldn't mandate. Love was what God really wanted, for me to care about others and sacrifice myself for them. Love is the life God wants for me that my own effort can't produce. The Holy Spirit can. So, how does it work; what must I do? Well, here's:

4. the key: faith Faith means I trust God to do it, not me. That is living by grace. Gal. 2:20 says here's how I live life. I trust Christ to live His life through me. I throw myself at His feet and say, "Lord, I'm yours; I can't do it but you can. Do it!" That's so simple that it's almost comical, but it works. The life of grace is a faith-activated life. Moment by moment, situation by situation, I yield control of myself to Christ and the Holy Spirit and ask them to do through me what they want!

And it works! Oh, does it work! On the radio I heard a former homosexual who is now a Christian talking about what he would tell somebody who is involved in that sin right now. His answer was, "They need to know that Christ and only Christ has the power to change them and actually make them into the person He wants them to be. If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation. The old things pass away." Folks, that's not just for homosexuals. That's for all of us! Christ has the power to make in us the righteous, pure, holy life of love that He wants. All we can do is exercise our faith and trust Him to do it.

A Life Oriented To Service 5:13-15

There is a nagging question that has to be lurking somewhere in the dark recesses of your mind. We have been talking for months about the fact that we are free from the system of law. We are not under law. In fact, I even quoted to you from Donald Barnhouse saying, "I will never obey another commandment again!" Now, somebody has to be wondering, "Wait a minute! Isn't this emphasis on freedom going a little overboard? Surely you can't mean that we are free to do anything we want to do? You tell me I am free from the law which says, Do not steal. Does that mean I am free to steal? I am free from the law which says, Do not commit adultery. Does that mean I am free to commit adultery? Isn't preaching freedom dangerous, like putting a hole in a dam or opening the door on the lion's cage?" Paul gives a very strong answer to that question in Romans 6:15. No way! God has set in place a very strong guard against that possibility that our freedom will result in more sin and that guard is:

I. Love: The Guard Against License (13) We must be very careful to distinguish between the kind of freedom that we have as Christians and freedom in the sense that the world often uses it. That freedom would better be called license.

1. worldly freedom: License It's the old, "I can do anything I want, I'm free! I can say whatever I like, it's a free country" attitude. Now let me point out that that kind of freedom is only an illusion, an idyllic dream that people have. All of life is constrained by limits. You have freedom of speech under the first amendment of our Constitution, but that doesn't include lying under oath, for which you can be jailed or slander for which you can be sued. Freedom doesn't in itself give license to do that which is inherently wrong. License is the abuse of freedom. But freedom can degenerate into license if it is not guarded against. And that same thing can happen in the Christian life. You see, our freedom from the law in Christ:

a. it can be a base of operations for the flesh The word indulge in verse 13 is a Greek military term which refers to a base of operations. Every army needs a base of operations to work out of, from which it can be directed and supplied. The NIV sinful nature is literally flesh. Remember that flesh in Scripture is that combination of our mind and body (not our Spirit which is brand new in Christ), which is still indwelt by the principle and power of sin. And when my flesh is under the control of sin instead of the control of the Holy Spirit, it can use my freedom from law as a base of operations to get me to sin. For example, I no longer have some law-type requirement as to how many times I have to worship God, that is, go to church. God does not say I must attend X number of services per week or month. I am free in my worship. However, my flesh can easily use that to operate in me by saying, "Well, you're tired today; don't go to church; after all, you're free!" And pretty soon the flesh can repeat that logic so often that I don't worship God hardly at all with fellow believers and tear my spiritual life apart. It can do the same thing with the idea that I'm free in my diet. I am free to have a glass of wine. And I am. And it can take that freedom and start a habit in me that is utterly sinful in the end. The flesh can cause me to use my freedom to flaunt it in the face of others who are weaker brethren and don't understand and offend and damage them. It can use this freedom in SO many ways and when I let it do that:

b. it results in service to sin Mark it down; license always leads to slavery! What is called freedom ends up in slavery. The power of sin that indwells my flesh ends up making me subject to its control and I serve it, even though I'm a true believer. That must be carefully guarded against. However, God has done something in me as a believer to do that guarding and that makes our freedom something entirely different from license.

2. Christian freedom: Love When I was saved, at that moment, God did a wonderful work inside me. I was born all over again in my spirit. The Holy Spirit of God came to live there, so I have at my core the very nature of God. And He came to produce in me His characteristics. And they are listed a few verses further on:

a. the Spirit of God produces love in us (22) The first fruit or first effect of the Holy Spirit dwelling in me is LOVE. It is not simply a command I'm to follow. It is not simply a test I'm to use in behavior. God loves because God is love. Love is a part of who He is. And when He comes into me, it is also part of my nature as a new creature in Christ to love and to love with His love! You see, I am FREE from law but I am BOUND by love! I may not be under a command not to bear false witness about my neighbor, but I love my neighbor, so I won't lie about him! I may not be under a command not to commit adultery, but I love my wife so I wouldn't destroy her by doing that and I love that other woman with the agape love of Christ and I wouldn't damage her life that way by using her. You see, the resultant action is the same, but the motive is a whole lot different! Before, it was just keeping rules to protect me from punishment. Now I'm free from that, but my nature binds me to love others from my heart and to treat them properly. So, love:

b. it results in service to others My life becomes, not self-oriented as it is under law, trying to do what's best for me, but others-oriented. Love makes me serve others. That becomes the core and focus of my life! I no longer HAVE to; I WANT to! So, it is my very freedom in Christ from having to satisfy some law that binds me to serving others. Now, as I was thinking about this, the Lord brought to mind:

3. two beautiful illustrations from the Old Testament.

a. the voluntary slave - Ex. 21:5-6 Do you remember that in Israel every 7 years the slaves were to go free? But if a servant didn't want to go free, if he loved his master and his family that he knew in service and didn't want to go, he could stay and become a permanent servant in that household. If so, he got an identifying mark. They took him to the door and pierced his ear, not so he could wear an earring, but so everybody would know that this man was not being kept in service by law or by his master, but by love! He loved it and wanted to do it! I tell you what, if I was a master in Israel and had servants, I'd rather have one of that kind than 15 of the kind that were only there because they had to be and who think only about getting out or cutting corners rather than about the quality of the service they rendered! That's what we are, freed by law but bound by love to serve the Lord and others. And that brings us to the ultimate example:

b. Christ Himself - Ps.40:6-8 This is a prophetic Psalm. It looks ahead to the time when Christ would come into the world to die for our sins. Verse 6 says God didn't want the sacrifices made under the law of bulls and goats. The Greek translation of this verse and the quotation of it in Hebrews 10 says, but a body you have prepared for me! I come to do Thy will, O God! The Father wanted the Son to take a body and come into the world and go to the cross voluntarily. And look at the end of verse 6. The pierced ear is here a symbol for the loyal servant who loves to serve. Christ says, "I am at the doorpost; pierce my ear; I love you and want to serve; I willingly go, Father!" Christ served the Father and also the world, out of the love that was in His nature. We must do the same! That is our freedom. And when we do it, lo and behold, we find in verse 14:

II. Love: The Fulfillment Of Law (14) Now along with this quick one verse summary, we had better read Rom. 13:8-10, which spells it out more clearly. If you are sharp, you can discern here:

1. two meanings of the term law In the one usage it is:

a. the set of commandments given to Israel, the Ten Commandments and all the rest, a set of rules and laws that must be obeyed. They were given to Israel, not to the church. From this we are free in Christ. But law is also used in another sense to mean:

b. the eternal absolutes of right in God's nature You see, there are absolutes that are unchanging, that go beyond any rules that society or even religion may make, things that are at the very basis of the moral universe because they are in the nature of God, things like truth, honesty, love, and so on. These things are right because they are right. They are eternal "law". They are what the external law of statutes and commands was designed to produce in the first place. So, there are really:

2. two meanings of the statement about love First:

a. the command to love sums up all commands Jesus Himself said so. All the law springs from that command to love your neighbor. Love to your neighbor does not murder, does not steal, and so on. That is the most obvious meaning. But the greater point here is:

b. the practice of love fulfills both laws When I as a believer serve others in love, the law stands fulfilled! Its purpose has been accomplished. I have practiced the eternal absolutes to which the earthly statutes pointed! Anything that law ever wanted to accomplish in me has been accomplished when I live out of the love that is in my new nature. So, I don't need the external statutes to keep; I have an internal nature that drives me now, a nature of love, a nature that does a far better job of causing me to practice the eternal law of moral absolutes than an earthly rule ever could! I now live a life of service to my brothers out of my very heart. And that results in another consequence:

III. Love: The End Of Conflict (15) Something has been going on in Galatia that Paul has not yet mentioned in his letter. There is conflict. The church there is divided. They are quarreling among themselves, just like the Church at Corinth later. Over what? We are not told, but probably over this very issue. Some were siding with the false teachers and buying the line about having to be circumcised. Others were refusing it and a great division was going on there! And that brings out a point:

1. law-observance produces conflict - James 4:1-3 James warned the early Christians about the fighting and quarreling going on among them. Where does it come from? From the desires that battle within you, that is, the FLESH! The flesh is using that base of operations again to divide believers, to divide them over the issue of freedom. And how it usually works is that those who favor law will attack those who cling to grace! The practicing of law, the keeping of commands, tends to create a bad attitude toward those who don't. A lot of the conflict within Christianity today is a result of this. It breaks up the church. But:

2. love produces unity When the Spirit of God is in control and I love my brethren with the love of Christ, that will only draw us together in unity. It can only unite, not pull apart. Mutual love binds! So, the practice of love is the end of conflict between believers. It was the remedy for the sad situation in Galatia and it is the remedy for today's conflicts as well.

How do you live the life of grace? Well, first you trust Jesus every moment and lean on His strength, not your own. Then you ask the Holy Spirit to control you and fill you with His love for others, and your life becomes a life whose focus is not on yourself but on caring for the needs of others. Years ago, the Salvation Army was holding an international convention. Their founder, General William Booth, was so physically weak he could not attend. He cabled his convention message to them. It was one word: "Others!" Law says, "Self!" Grace shouts, "OTHERS!"

A Life Controlled By The Spirit 5:16-26

This passage is where the rubber meets the road when it comes to actual living. If you want to know how to live the life Christ planned for you to live, there is only one way. It must be lived under the control of the Holy Spirit or, to put it another way, you must be filled by the Spirit. Now, please understand that when you got saved, at that very moment the Holy Spirit came to dwell inside you and joined Himself to your spirit. That is true of every believer. You don't have to ask for it or wonder whether you have it. If you have trusted in Christ, He is there. But He is not like a demon. He does not take over automatic control of your mouth and make you say only the words He wants, does He? He does not take automatic control of your temper and make you only act like He would, does He? No, He will only control in your life what you place under His control and only for as long as you place it there. Now take your pencil and underline, circle, and star the 16th verse. It is:

I. The Promise Of Spirit-Control (16) This is what God says works, which makes it a promise. You can take it to the bank. You can mortgage your house against it. You can jump out of an airplane tied to it and be safe. If you live by the Spirit, you WILL NOT gratify the desires of the flesh. But before you jump, you'd better understand its two parts. There is an "if" and a "then". It's a big "if", but it's also a mighty big "then".

1. if you depend continually on the Spirit And I emphasize the word CONTINUALLY. The Greek uses the word "walk" because it is talking about a continuing process, one that is part of every hour of every day of your life. You cannot depend on, "I surrendered myself fully to the Lordship of Christ when I was 16" or "5 years ago" or even "last week." Being filled with the Spirit or controlled by the Spirit is a moment by moment process. In EVERY MOMENT I must consciously depend on and look to the Holy Spirit for both the direction of what to think, say, and do, and the power to do it! I must continually through the day be saying, "Lord, You do this; You show me what to say; You help me to react right..." This is yielding yourself to the Spirit's control and when you are under His control:

2. you will never gratify the desires of the flesh This is a double negative in the Greek for emphasis. You will NOT, NEVER, NO WAY, live out the sinful desires that your flesh has. The Spirit of God in control of you will not hate, will not have fits of rage, will not be jealous, and so on. So, in every moment you are under His control, you can bank on it that you will not sin. You will have victory over everything facing you. Count on it. It is sure! So, the more moments you are yielded to His control, the less moments you will fail and fall into sin. And if you are CONTINUALLY living under His control, then your life will be one continual victory. Of course, since the Bible recognizes clearly that there is no human being who does not sin, none of us actually manage to be absolutely under the Spirit's control every moment of our lives. However, don't lose heart. The more we learn to depend on Him, the more victory we'll have and that process will just keep on growing and growing. Now let's move on to:

II. The Explanation Of Spirit-Control (17-18) Why do I find it so hard to stay yielded to the Spirit's control? When the Spirit is not in control, who is? Well, you must understand:

1. the conflict between flesh and Spirit (17) Please keep in mind that the "sinful nature" (NIV) is literally flesh. There is a war going on inside of you all the time. When you were saved, the Holy Spirit came and dwelt in your spirit. In fact, He created in you a brand-new spirit, a new nature, one that is like God, holy and pure. But your flesh, your mind and body are still indwelt and corrupted by sin. Sin is a moral law, a principle, a force that is active. So, the power of sin in you is always trying to control your mind to make it think sinful things and to control your body to make it do sinful things. At the same time the Holy Spirit wants to control your mind and body to make them holy and live out the life Christ has for you. The difference is that the Holy Spirit will not force His hand to control you. Unlike sin which exerts its force against your will all the time, He only operates by permission. When given permission, He will bind the power of sin and take control of your mind and body, but only with your permission. The key factor is your will. Your will has been freed from bondage to sin in Christ. You have to choose to yield yourself to Him and to call upon Him to do the work. Now, what happens is that much of the time instead of turning to Him to defeat sin, we simply try to do it ourselves, try to make our own will control everything and sometimes it seems to work, but verse 18 points out:

2. the impossibility of winning by self-effort (18) When your mind knows what is right and sets out to achieve what is right by itself, that is living under law. God sets a standard and I force myself to live up to it. That is law. But if I am led by the Spirit, that is, if I have fully yielded myself to the Spirit and am under His control, I will not be trying to do it by self-effort. I will not be trying to do it by my own strength. And I will succeed. When I try it on my own, I fail. When I live under law I fail! You see, law is just another ruse in the war. If sin can convince you that you can conquer it by yourself without the Holy Spirit's power, by simply keeping the standards, then you are doomed to failure and the flesh wins! What does the promise say? When I depend on the Spirit, I will not fulfill the desires of the flesh. When I don't, I will, sooner or later. In fact, I already have fulfilled its biggest desire, which is to resist the Holy Spirit! Oh, it's so simple and yet so hard to grasp! Now how do I know when the Spirit is really in control of me? Well, in the next paragraph Paul gives us:

III. The Test Of Spirit-Control (19-23) That's what these verses really are. They are a simple yardstick to measure whose control we are under. They are like a litmus paper test. Dip this passage into your life at any moment and it either comes up red or green, flesh control or Spirit-control. Here's:

1. what flesh-control produces (19-21) It produces sinful actions. It produces:

a. sins of an immoral nature like sexual immorality, impurity, and debauchery. When the flesh is in control, my mind has lustful thoughts; I am tempted by other women or men; I am tantalized by sexual perversions and stare longingly at the filthy scenes that continually appear on my TV screen. Now, when you sow a thought, you reap an act; when you sow an act you reap a habit, and then, a character and then, a destiny. Verse 21 says that people who actually habitually live this way are obviously not born again and are bound for hell. But the same flesh that is in them is still in you. By God's grace, if you're saved you will not habitually commit the deed, yet if your thought life is full of it, if the desire is there, then it's a sure sign the flesh is in control! The same is true for all the other sins.

b. sins of an idolatrous nature like idolatry and witchcraft, fascination with other religions, with other belief systems, with the occult, fortune-telling, and so on. If those things fascinate and draw you, then the flesh is in control.

c. sins of an interpersonal nature Now this is where it catches most of us: hatred, discord, jealousy, fits of rage, selfish ambition, dissensions, factions, and envy. Let me boil those down to two simpler tests. When you find yourself thinking and acting self-centered or when you find yourself angry and divided from other people, the flesh is in control. That covers everything from gossip to holding secret grudges, to talking behind people's backs, to looking down on them and you name it. And don't sit here and pretend none of this goes on in your life. I know better! I hear too much of it (and do a little of it myself!) The point is that when you find yourself feeling bad toward someone, wake up! The flesh is in control and dragging you toward sin! And finally, there are:

d. sins of an indulgent nature like drunkenness and orgies or any other addictive, compulsive behavior where the flesh just totally takes control and goes wild. But now look at:

2. what Spirit-control produces (22-23) Instead of taking this very familiar text apart, I'm deliberately standing back a little so you can see what it's really here for. When the Spirit is in control of you, He produces:

a. God-like internal qualities Love, joy, and peace. When the Spirit controls, you love and care with the love of God; you have His attitude toward the world. You are full of joy and peace, the confidence that all is well because He's in charge.

b. God-like treatment of others Patience, kindness, and goodness. You act unselfishly, kindly. You do what is right and you are patient and forgiving. That is the sign that He's running your life!

c. God-like consistency in living Faithfulness (or dependability), gentleness, and self-control. When the Spirit is in control you find that your reactions are controlled, your life is consistent and committed, and you don't take any of the credit or feel puffed up; you give it all to God.

Now, I don't think this list of fruit is meant to be exhaustive, any more than the list of sins above it (which actually adds and the like). The list is not the point. The principle is. When you're under the Spirit's control, you live like God. When you're under the control of the flesh, you sin! It's as simple as that and very obvious. So, in any given moment of your life you can test yourself. You can step back and look at how you're feeling, thinking, or acting and recognize who's in control and do something about it if it's the flesh! Now let's sum up. How do I make a habit of practicing Spirit-control?

IV. The Practice Of Spirit-Control (24-26) It's no big secret. I simply need three things:

1. a confident knowledge of the Spirit's work (24) First, if you don't know clearly and surely what Christ has done, you'll fall into the trap of thinking that this inner war is just a given fact of life and that you're just a poor sinner with a sinful nature and you can't help falling into sin; you're just doomed to it. All you can do is ask forgiveness afterward and try to do better next time. NO! My friend, that is a lie! God has given us everything we need for life and godliness. In Jesus Christ I am a brand-new creature. I am dead to sin. It has no power over me. And therefore, when sin tries to pump its desires through my flesh, in Christ I am dead to that flesh, to that sin. That has no power over me. Only if I choose to let it! And in Christ I have absolute freedom to choose not to let it! But I need to know that, to realize that and be sure of it! And then I need:

2. a constant yielding to the Spirit's control (25) Keep in step is literally walk and here's what it means: When I get out of bed in the morning, I put my hand in His and say, "Take control of me today." When I get to the breakfast table and the baby dumps the bowl of cereal all over the floor, I say, "Spirit, control my reaction". When I'm driving down the freeway and some guy cuts in front of me and nearly runs me off the road, I say, "Spirit control my temper". Then at work when I have a difficult decision to make or I have to talk to somebody about a difficult matter or I'm having trouble getting along with somebody, I say, "Spirit, give me your wisdom, act through me, give me the words." And I do the same thing moment by moment through the day until I close my eyes at night. That is walking in the Spirit and if you do that, the flesh hasn't got a chance! But I must have:

3. a clear stand against flesh-control (26) Wuest translates it, "Let us STOP becoming..." You see, since my will is free, I must take a clear stand. I must know what flesh-control looks like and I must take a stand, "I am NOT going to become like this; this is going to STOP!" And then I yield myself immediately to the Spirit and depend on Him to stop it. You see, the final danger is this. I will not live a spirit-controlled life if I don't want to, if I enjoy my sin and am not willing to give it up.

That's a choice you have to make. God has put everything in place for you to live holy. Now you must choose to do it. Trust Jesus to do it in you. Yield to the Holy Spirit. Right now.

A Responsible Life 6:1-10

When we live by grace, when we live under the control of the Holy Spirit, what is our life going to look like? What kind of life will be produced in us? Well, our text today tells us that it will be a responsible life. As I say that, I want to warn you not to think of these verses as another list of things to do in your own strength, another set of rules to keep. The only way you can do any of the things put forth here is by the power of the Holy Spirit. Think of it this way: these actions are what the Holy Spirit will produce in us when we yield ourselves freely to Him. Our very freedom in Christ will give us a new depth of responsibility, both horizontally toward other people and vertically toward God. First, if the Spirit is controlling our life, it will be:

I. A Life That Cares About Brethren (1-2) And he has in view here primarily other believers. Certainly, we are to love unsaved people and care for them and seek to win them. But Jesus' primary command to His disciples was that we love one another as He has loved us. When the Holy Spirit controls our life, He will produce in us a deep sacrificial love, His love, for our fellow believers. First, we will care specifically:

1. about sinning brethren (1) Sometimes one of us will be caught in the snare of sin, caught so that we are not able to get out of it on our own. It can be serious. It could be immorality. It could be a falling away from spiritual things. For example, a church down the road from our previous church discovered that their treasurer had embezzled money for his personal use. Now, I would trust our treasurer with my life, but suppose some other nameless person was our treasurer and it happened here. How would you react? Well, if the flesh is in control, first there will be a burst of anger, then will come, "press charges, and finally, "throw the bum out of the church!" But look what it says, you who are SPIRITUAL. That doesn't mean pious or saintly. That means controlled by the Spirit. If He's in control:

a. the goal will be restoration The first concern will be to restore a fallen brother; it will be for his spiritual well-being. We Christians tend to be like sharks; we eat our wounded. But if I say, "Holy Spirit, how should I treat this person?", the answer will be "gently, not harshly!", "With love, not condemnation." The goal will be restoration, not the justice of the law. The Greek word for restore is used in the Gospels of mending a broken net, restoring it to effective usefulness and service. That's what the Holy Spirit wants to do. However, there is:

b. the warning of caution in our restoring We must be careful that we are not tempted by the same thing. The pastor who followed me at my previous church several years later was counseling a woman in the process of divorce. In trying to rescue her from sin he became involved with her and left his wife and three children and married her. I have heard that story many times over about others in similar circumstances, not all pastors! If we try to help people in the flesh, our flesh is susceptible to the same sins! It can be tempted too. That's why we must be sure, before trying to help someone else, that the Holy Spirit is firmly in control of our life! My friend, who is there that you know that is caught or has been caught in sin. What's your attitude toward them? Who is in control of your life? Think about it! Next, we will care:

2. about burdened brethren (2) The word here means a heavy load. Some of our brothers and sisters seem to have those, don't they? Some live under the load of a physical illness or handicap. Others are going through things so difficult mentally and emotionally that we can't comprehend them, like losing loved ones or being abused or watching a child in utter rebellion or having a marriage on the rocks. Others struggle under financial loads like the mother trying to care for several children on her own or the family that's been out of work for more than a year. Every situation I've just mentioned exists in this fellowship and more. Now, how do you react to that? Well, if the flesh is in control, you think about yourself and your own needs. The response comes out something like, "Oh well, it's their own fault" or "They'll get over it." But if the Holy Spirit is in control:

a. the goal will be relief I will realize, "They can't carry that alone!" My heart will be broken for them. I will want to see them get relief. Could you rest easy if you knew one of your children was lying in agonizing pain? No, love won't let you! And if the Holy Spirit is in control, you can't rest easy if a brother or sister is in pain, either! Listen to 1 John 3:17, If anyone has material possessions and sees his brother in need but has no pity on him, how can the love of God be in Him? The love of God is produced when the Holy Spirit is in control! If He is, you'll care and you'll want to do something. Well, God lays out:

b. the method: carry If you saw me trying to lift our old heavy pulpit up onto the stage by myself, you would instantly realize that it's too heavy. What would you do to help? You would pick up an end or find someone who could, wouldn't you! The answer is simple: HELP THEM. Meet their need however you can. If the need is monetary and you have some, give it! If the need is emotional, give them the listening ear and the time and the kind words they need. If the need is physical, help out with your own strength. That's the Holy Spirit's method. Take whatever resources you have and get under the load and help the person carry it! Friend, who is there this morning that you know in the body that is struggling under a heavy burden? Have you just sat back and ignored it? Who is in control? Thirdly, if the Holy Spirit is in control, we'll care:

3. about all brethren (3-5) A person who thinks he's something when he's nothing, do those words bring anyone to mind? What does he or she look like? Like anyone you saw in the mirror this morning? Folks, that's a description of all of us when the flesh is in control. We are self-centered. We forget that without Christ we can do nothing and without Him we are nothing. And we get an inflated view of ourself. It usually comes out when we're provoked, when we're angry. The person in authority may say, "Well, I'm the boss and what I say goes!" The person under authority may say, "Well, I don't want to listen and I'm not going to." It's the same thing. It happens at home and it happens between brethren in the church. The flesh causes us to deal in pride toward others. There are people we look down our noses at, though we'd never say it out loud. Yet we feel it in our hearts. But if the Spirit is in control:

a. the goal will be humility toward all our brethren! Paul wrote in Phil. 2:3, Do nothing out of selfish ambition or vain conceit, but in humility consider others better than yourselves. That doesn't mean the Spirit will give you an inferiority complex. It means that you will count the needs and the well-being of others as more important to you than your own. That will be the attitude the Spirit of God will produce in you. But here's:

b. the method that you can use to allow Him to create that humility First:

(1) do not compare yourself to others It is so easy to get an inflated estimate of yourself when you compare yourself to others. For instance, I might feel that I have quite a lot of hair if I compare myself to somebody that is bald as a cue ball. But that wouldn't be too accurate a standard, would it? My flesh always wants to compare me to others so I can feel superior. It's a protection mechanism that it's built up over the years. I see somebody act a certain way and I smugly say inside, "I'm not like that," which leads to, "I'm better than they are". I would make a terrible parishioner because every time I sit and listen to someone preach, my flesh starts to think of how I could have said it better and I have to ask the Spirit of God to take control of me and make me really listen and apply the truth being taught! Now, before you point the finger, remember that I know that you have the same flesh I do and the same problem! Your flesh is constantly pushing you to compare yourself to those around you. But God has a good answer for that, Who are you to judge another man's servant; to his own Master he stands or falls! Instead:

(2) evaluate your own actions Test your own thoughts and actions; hold them up against God's standards. Take 5:19-23 and dip it into your life like we said last week and see how you measure up. I guarantee that will keep you humble! Don't compare yourself to others; compare yourself to the Word of God and ask the Spirit of God to let you see yourself clearly. You see, when it comes to this, unlike the burdens we face in life, we must all carry our own load, our daily pack. We are all responsible to God for our own actions and attitudes. That's where our focus should lie and the Spirit of God will use that to create genuine humility in us. How about it? Is there humility in your life toward ALL? Or is there someone you're not very humble towards? Who is in control? Well finally, if the Holy Spirit is in control we will care:

4. about teaching brethren (6) There are those brethren who instruct us, our teachers, our Pastors, our Bible study leaders, our Elders. If the flesh is in control, we'll react to them a certain way. We'll resent them a little bit because they're telling us things our flesh doesn't want to hear. We'll be critical of them and they'll have a hard time teaching us. But if the Holy Spirit is in control of our lives, we will love and care about them and:

a. the goal will be fellowship Now, about half the commentaries think that Paul has suddenly switched subjects here and is talking about money, saying that those who are taught have a responsibility to provide materially for those who give their time to teaching. That is true and it's taught in many other passages. But I don't think that's what he primarily has in mind here. Many of these Galatian Christians had turned away from their original leadership to follow the new false teachers that had come teaching legalism. They had broken fellowship and turned critical of those who were trying to instruct them in the truths of grace and that included Paul himself. The flesh was in control. If the Spirit is in control there will be a oneness of heart with those who teach us and we will love them and that will result in:

b. the method: sharing That may mean sharing the material gift of something good. On the other hand, it probably means much more than that, sharing your life, your heart, your blessings, your progress, your joys with them. Wuest translates, "Let the one who is being taught the Word constantly be holding fellowship with the one who is teaching in all good things." If the Holy Spirit is in control, you'll love them and want to share every encouragement you can with them. How about it? How are you relating toward those who teach you the Word, your pastor, your Bible Study leader? Who's in control? Let me close with this:

Some pranksters once rubbed limburger cheese on the end of a man's nose while he was asleep. When he awoke, he sniffed and sniffed, but always found the same odor wherever he went. Finally, going outdoors, he exclaimed, "The whole world smells!" The real trouble, however, was with him! It is so easy to let the flesh be in control and let an uncaring attitude develop toward our own brothers and sisters in Christ. Remember, the problem does not lie with them. It lies with me, with who's in control of me.

A Responsible Life (Continued) 6:7-10

This is the second half of the message I started to bring last week, putting forth the idea that the kind of life that God will produce in us through the Spirit when we let Him is a responsible life. We said last week in verses 1-6 that it is a life that is responsible toward other people; it cares about brethren. Today we want to see that the life the Spirit produces in us is responsible toward God as well. I want to start in verse 7 by teaching you a law. You know, for as much as I'm glad to live by grace, I'm also glad the universe runs by laws, by principles you can count on that are unfailing, like the law of gravity. The particular law in view here I call:

I. The Law Of Consequences: You Reap What You Sow (7c) Now any farmer or gardener knows this to be literally true in the agricultural realm. If you plant corn seed, corn grows. If you plant wheat seed, wheat grows. If you plant eggplant seed, it grows eggplants. Never ever will you plant a watermelon seed and harvest a cantaloupe! Furthermore, the amount you reap is directly related to how much you sow, isn't it? You can't expect to freeze dozens of ears of corn and have planted only 1 dozen seeds, can you? The more you plant, the more you reap, and the less you plant, the less you reap, but you always get the same KIND of thing you planted. Gardening would be a very interesting experience if that law did not operate! But God is not here concerned about growing food. He is saying that there is a corresponding law in the moral realm, that what we do with our life has consequences and the consequences are of the same character as what produced them. That's an immutable law. And Paul spells it out in verse 8.

1. flesh-control has consequences (8a) If you as a believer live your life letting your flesh be in control of you and letting it make your choices, you are going to reap consequences that correspond to that. What does flesh-control look like? Compare Phil. 2:21. Believers can live their lives like that, always thinking, "What do I want, what's best for me..." instead of, "What does Christ want; what is His will?" That's flesh-control and it has three basic consequences that are summed up in one word, destruction. First, it brings only:

a. a temporary benefit If something is destroyed, that means it's temporary; it doesn't last. Compare 2 Cor. 4:18. The things you can see are only temporary. Choosing what the flesh wants may actually benefit you in terms of what you can see. It might make you a bunch of money. It might get you a nice big house. It might get you a lot of instantaneous pleasure. BUT none of that will last. None of it is eternal. You can't take it with you. One day you'll die and leave it all behind. If you invest your life in the things your flesh urges you to, any benefit you get out of it is only short-term. Secondly it leads to:

b. eventual corruption That's the literal translation of the Greek here, corruption. The flesh is indwelt by what? Sin! And if you're not in tune with the Spirit and the flesh is making your decisions, guess where you'll end up! In sin! Oh, maybe not right away, and maybe not in what looks outwardly horrible, but apart from the Spirit of God, every step you take is one step further out of God's will and into sin. Your life becomes decayed spiritually. In fact, it becomes:

c. a living death All that God wants to do in your life is destroyed, ruined, done away with. You choose your own path and live your own life and His whole design and purpose for you is thwarted. 1 Tim. 5:6 says that a person who lives for pleasure is dead while she's alive! She may be alive physically, but she's cut off from God and the life He wants to flow out through her. Compare Rom. 8:6, 13, 8. It is not that you will lose your salvation. If you are genuinely saved, that is impossible. But if you as a believer are continually living in the flesh, it will be impossible to please God; your life will be a continuing life of displeasing Him (which is sinning), no matter how nice it looks and since, in effect, you have cut yourself off from His work in you, it is a living death. Just like that of an unsaved person who is physically alive but spiritually dead toward God. And the flesh-controlled Christian is doing exactly the same thing! He's living the same way, cut off from God's plan, a living death, as it were, and if he were unsaved, it would indeed lead to death, eternal separation from God. If you sow to your flesh, you will from your flesh reap corruption and death. But here's the converse truth:

2. Spirit-control has consequences (8b) If you let the Spirit control your life, it will have wonderful consequences. And Phil. 1:21 pictures what that means. To live is Christ. A Spirit controlled life says, "What does Christ want? What is His will? Yes Lord, do that through me!" When you live like that, there are consequences. The first is:

a. an eternal benefit Living that way produces benefits that last forever. Compare 1 Cor. 3:1, 12-15. You can be one of two ways. You can be worldly (KJV carnal), which in the Greek is fleshly, which means that the flesh is in control. Or you can be spiritual which means that the Spirit is in control. If you live fleshly, all those things you produce in life are like wood, hay, and stubble because they were not the work of Christ through you and they all go up in smoke when you stand before Him. But that which was done by the Spirit abides forever and is rewarded with an eternal reward! Nobody else on earth may notice it here and now, but God does and it will not be forgotten for eternity. Secondly, instead of continual corruption, it produces:

b. continual transformation - 2 Cor. 3:18 Under the Spirit's control you are gradually changed into the likeness of Christ in stages, step by step. You grow more and more righteous and holy and loving and kind and gentle and patient, and so on. Instead of ending up in sin, building a heap of disobedience, you end up changed from glory to glory in the image of Jesus. And so, you end up living:

c. a genuine life - Rom. 8:11 Now when they see this verse, most folks think it is a promise of our future resurrection. But that's totally out of the context of all he's talking about before and after. He's primarily talking about right now. The Spirit of God puts the Divine life of Jesus Christ inside us and if we yield Him control, we will live out of that life. Compare Rom. 6:4, 8. We live a new life. We live with Him! He lives through us. Our life is His life and that is real living! That is the abundant life Jesus said that He came to give! That's the life we experience when we live under the Spirit's control. Now let's go back to verse 7 and pick up:

II. The Warning From The Law Of Consequences (7a) Here is:

1. the fact: the Law stands You will reap what you sow. That stands. It is immutable, unchangeable. It is as sure as the fact that the sun will come up tomorrow morning or that tomorrow you'll be one day older. If you live under the control of your flesh, you may reap a temporary benefit, but you are living in growing corruption and living a life that is spiritually dead. If you live under the control of the Spirit, you are laying up eternal benefits, growing in the likeness of Christ and living the abundant life God gave you in Him. You can't live one way and get the opposite result any more than you can shoot forward and hit a target behind you. If you shoot forward, you hit that target. If you shoot the other way, you hit the other target. And here's:

2. the reason: God cannot be outwitted The Greek word mocked here is used of a person who talks nice to your face and makes cynical gestures behind your back. You kids do that in school sometimes, don't you? To your teachers! You look like a little angel, but when they turn their back, you snicker or make mocking gestures. Well, that doesn't work on God. You can fool people into thinking you're living a nice wonderful Christian life and all the while be living in the flesh. But you can't fool God; He knows whether He's controlling your life or not! You see, here's the great:

3. the delusion: we can escape the consequences Oh, we believe this so easily in life, "I can sin and get away with it." It is Satan's number 1 lie: You will not surely die! You can be sexually active and never get pregnant, never get AIDS. You can do drugs and never get addicted, never get caught. You can lie and nobody will know, steal and not get caught. But God has a law: you reap what you sow. You can no more escape that than you can the law of gravity. If you sin, consequences will follow. And there are a lot of Christians who have been deceived into thinking that since they're saved and know they're going to heaven, that they can now just live a nice moral life and pursue their own goals and not be fully surrendered and yielded to the Holy Spirit and everything will be OK. There won't be any consequences. Yes, there will; you reap what you sow! But let's talk about the good side of this:

III. The Benefit Of The Law Of Consequences (9-10) Paul didn't just write this to people who were living in the flesh, but also to people who were living in the Spirit, because he knew that:

1. we may get weary of doing good without results We may be yielded to the Spirit and following His direction, but when we do a good thing, many times we don't see a result from it. Or we may see a negative result. We may tell the truth and be castigated for it. We may reach out in love to help and be totally rejected. We may put our heart and soul into something the Lord leads us to do and see no visible fruit from it whatsoever. And that can make you mighty weary, especially if you live in some kind of difficult day to day situation like a bad marriage or a terrible work environment. We can get bone-weary of being obedient to the Spirit and feel like chucking the whole thing. Don't you get there sometimes? Well, listen to this good news:

2. we are guaranteed results WILL come in due time There is a law. YOU WILL REAP WHAT YOU SOW! Whether you can see them or not, you are reaping the three benefits I mentioned earlier right now. And the actions you are taking under the direction of the Spirit of God will result in a harvest at God's proper time. They will have their intended result. I don't ever have to wonder whether what I do counts. It COUNTS! God doesn't do anything without purpose and reason and if He's doing it through you, then it counts! It will produce the consequence it's supposed to produce at the time. You may be wholly unaware of it. The result may be known only to God, but you can trust Him that each and every thing the Spirit of God does through you will make an eternal difference. Consequently:

3. we must never cease to yield to the Spirit We must never grow faint and give up and give in to the flesh, for that would have dire consequences. We must determine that whether we can see any results or not, we are going to yield ourselves to God completely. But verse 10 takes it one step further:

4. we should be constantly seeking opportunities for the Spirit to work good through us (10) See the therefore? Let me tell you what it's THERE FOR! It means that because there is a law of consequences, because every action we take in the name of Spirit of God will result in a harvest, we should seek opportunities for the Spirit of God to work good through us to everybody, and especially in caring about our brethren, as we emphasized last week. And the Greek doesn't just mean, "Whenever opportunity knocks, do good". It indicates that we should have an attitude that welcomes opportunity, that looks for it, seeks and desires it, one that says, "Spirit of God, use me in the life of this person and that person; I want to be used of you!" Since I know that it WILL make a difference, I should WANT to be used!

A Crucified Life 6:11-18

Today we come to the conclusion of Paul's letter to the Christians in Galatia and with it, the conclusion of our study. But I don't want to pass over it lightly. People tend not to read the endings to letters, thinking they are filled with things that are not very important. But, on the contrary, it is here that we find Paul's final statement of just how important this letter and what he has said in it really is.

I. Paul's Final Statement Of Importance (11) Now I know that verse doesn't look like much, but there are two things I want you to notice here about the way Paul wrote this letter.

1. he wrote it all personally I assume you're aware that Paul dictated most of his letters to others who wrote them down for him. The people who did this are mentioned by name in other books; Tertius, for example, is named in Romans. But this letter is different. The tense of the verb in Greek is past, not present. I wrote to you. He's not just adding a few personal lines in his own handwriting at the end; I think he wrote the whole thing! Now, I know what that means. I have had a secretary myself, and she could take a letter faster than I could dream of writing it myself. But the ones that are the most serious and the most personal, I spend the time to write out myself, laboring over every word and phrase. And what made that even more significant is that:

2. he wrote it with difficulty There were two styles of writing the ancient Greek language. The average person used the common cursive script, much like we do. But the professional scribe used what is called the Uncial script, with letters about an inch high and formed separately without connecting, like our printing. Paul wrote this letter in the large uncial script because, as I shared with you earlier, I believe he had an eye problem. He could not see well. And so, he had to carefully and laboriously print out the whole letter in this huge script and I'm sure it must have been very difficult for him. Why would he go to all that trouble?

3. its message of grace is IMPORTANT! This issue we've spent all these weeks on, this issue of living under law or under grace, is IMPORTANT. It is central. The whole of the Christian life hangs in the balance. You can't sweep it aside and say, "Oh well, it's not important whether you believe circumcision is necessary for salvation or baptism is necessary or taking communion is necessary or joining the church is necessary, as long as you believe in Jesus." Yes, it is! Jesus plus ANYTHING is salvation by works. And then if you grant that, but hold that salvation is done by Jesus, yet your sanctification is done by you obeying the law, that is sanctification by works. Listen, salvation and the Christian life are both by grace; they are both completely the doing of God. Miss that and you miss the boat. It's important!

That's why we've spent so much time on it. And then, to wrap it up, Paul gives a final summary of the problem the Galatian Christians were having with the Judaizing false teachers.

II. Paul's Final Summary Of The Problem (12-15) There is a great contrast here. In verses 12-15 Paul talks about the Judaizers. In verses 14-15 he contrasts himself with them. The key word that distinguishes the two you don't even see in verse 12. The word outwardly is literally in the flesh. There's that word again. These folks who were troubling the Galatians were operating under the control of the flesh. And in that regard, they can be a good picture of me. When I let my flesh control my life, I have the same basic set of desires they did.

1. when the flesh is in control, I desire: (12-13)

a. to appear well to others (12a), to make a good impression. Like the Judaizers, I'm not concerned about what's on the inside, what's in the heart. I'm not concerned about motives and inner thoughts. I'm simply concerned about how I look to everybody else and what they think of me, about appearances. Do you know anybody like that? They smile and pretend their marriage is great, but at home they fight like cats and dogs. They act very pious and religious under certain circumstances, but when nobody's looking, they're greedy or dishonest. That will be me if I let the flesh win. Then my second desire will be:

b. to avoid pain to myself (12b) The Judaizers who professed belief in Christ didn't want to get persecuted by the actual Jews. They didn't want to suffer what happened to Paul in Galatia. And if they preached the law along with Jesus, the Jews would lay off. So, avoiding personal pain was more important than the truth! Do you know anybody like that? I won't speak up about something wrong because it might jeopardize my job. I won't do it the right way because it'll cost me money. I won't talk to that person and settle the issue because it might be painful; I'll just sweep it under the rug. And that'll be me if I let the flesh control me. And then, in the flesh I desire:

c. to achieve recognition by my efforts (13) The Judaizers wanted to be able to boast about how many they had circumcised, about how many they had won to their cause. They wanted to get recognition. The flesh is proud, isn't it? The flesh seeks recognition and applause. The flesh-controlled Christian wants everybody to notice what he's done, how much he's given, how much he knows, how gifted he is, how many people he witnessed to last week, how much he helped and sacrificed. He wants the "ooohs and aaahs and the wows!" because it builds self up and self, or the flesh, thrives on that. And he also thinks somehow that it impresses and pleases God. You see, the flesh puts me under the system of law or works and that's the result. I live a life that looks religious outwardly, but doesn't deal with the heart. I impress others but inside I live selfishly. I seek to avoid pain and difficulty and to get recognition from people or from God any way I can. But:

2. when the Spirit is in control, I have: (14-15) a totally different attitude in life! The Spirit keeps my heart mindful of grace, that anything whatsoever of value that is in my life is God's doing, not mine! It's a gift, not an achievement. And so, when I let the Spirit be in control of me, I have:

a. no boast but the cross (14a) I can't boast about looks; God gave my appearance to me. I can't boast about intelligence or ability or talent or even possessions; anything I have He gave. I can't boast about spending years in the ministry; if He hadn't kept me there, I'd have quit years ago. I can't boast about helping people; any help they get comes from Him. I can't boast about being a good husband or father; I fail every day and have to pray for His forgiveness and power. But I'll tell you what; I'll boast all day long about my Jesus and what He did for me at the cross! At the cross He took all my sins, every last one, and purchased my eternal forgiveness when I deserved hell. At the cross He identified me with Himself so that my old man, my old spirit, was crucified with Him and I am a brand-new person on the inside. At the cross He united me with Him, rising to a brand-new life on the third day so that now He has come into me in the person of the Spirit and I live by His resurrection power. You see, He did it all for me at the cross. I have nothing to boast about, nothing to glory in, except in the cross! And because of that, I have:

b. no attachment but to Jesus (14b) I have been crucified to everything this world has to offer and it has been crucified to me. Notice it doesn't say, "I AM BEING," but "I HAVE BEEN". It is not a slow dying out. Crucifixion means death. I have died to the world and it has died to me. I have no attachment to it any longer. It may offer me pleasure, riches, fame, recognition, you name it. Or it may threaten me with hardship, persecution, suffering, sickness, or even death. But none of that holds a candle to what Jesus gave me at the cross. As long as I yield myself to the Spirit of God, none of that has any attraction and none of it holds any fear for me. I don't love any of it. I love Jesus! He died for me. He rose for me. He loved me. And I love Him more than life itself! So then when the Spirit is in control I have:

c. no concern but new birth (15) I don't argue and fight with my brethren over side issues. Circumcision or uncircumcision don't matter. How you baptize doesn't ultimately matter, nor does the time of the rapture or whether I can argue theologically that the atonement was limited or unlimited. What matters is that I have been made a new creation in Christ, that I have been transformed by Him. And what concerns me is that others might know Him, not that they might agree with me. To me, all the world is divided into two clear groups, those who have been made new in Christ and those who haven't. Those who have are my brothers and I must love them and minister to them. And those who haven't must be told, must be reached.

Oh, the Spirit will give me a one track mind: Jesus, Jesus, Jesus. Boasting only in Jesus, attached only to Jesus, caring only that people know Jesus! That's the mind Paul had and you can see that as you look at:

III. Paul's Final Wishes In Parting (16-18) And what Paul wishes for the Galatians is what God desires for me as well. First, He desires that I would have:

1. His peace for my mind (16) This rule is living by grace under the control of the Spirit. His peace is for all who live that way, for the Galatian Gentiles and even for the "Israel of God," for those who are Jews but have become new creatures in Christ. God desires every believer to have His peace, His calm, His assurance that He is in control and all is going according to His plan. Then He desires me to recognize:

2. His ownership of my body (17) Paul was covered with scars. In Galatia he'd been stoned and left for dead. That left visible marks on him. And he calls these marks in the Greek stigmata, the brand of ownership that would be placed on a slave to show who his master was. These scars were Paul's brand; they showed who owned his body. He was saying, "Don't mess with me, I'm God's property and if you don't believe it, just look at the brand marks!" And Paul wrote in Romans 12:1 that every believer ought to present his body to God as a living sacrifice. That's our reasonable service. That's what God really wants, that we recognize that our body is His to direct and use and do with what He wants. But He also wants me to know:

3. His grace with my spirit (18) And grace in this use is almost a synonym for power. He wants us to know the gift of God, the power and presence of the Lord Jesus Christ working together with our new human spirit to produce in us the life He wants. In short, He wants us, mind, body, and spirit, to be wrapped up with one thing and one thing only: HIM-SELF!

A.B. Simpson put it this way in his hymn entitled "HIMSELF":

*Once it was the blessing, Now it is the Lord
Once it was the feeling, Now it is His Word;
Once His gift I wanted, Now, the Giver own Once I sought for healing, Now Himself alone.*

*Once 'twas painful trying, Now 'tis perfect trust
Once a half salvation, Now the uttermost;
Once 'twas ceaseless holding, Now He holds me fast
Once 'twas constant drifting, Now my anchor's cast.*

*Once 'twas busy planning, Now 'tis trustful prayer
Once 'twas anxious caring, Now He has the care;
Once 'twas what I wanted, Now what Jesus says
Once 'twas constant asking, Now 'tis ceaseless praise.*

*Once it was my working, His it hence shall be Once I tried to use Him, Now He uses me;
Once the pow'r I wanted, Now the Mighty One Once for self I labored, Now for Him alone.*

*Once I hoped in Jesus, Now I know He's mine
Once my lamps were dying, Now they brightly shine;
Once for death I waited, Now His coming hail
And my hopes are anchored, safe within the veil.*

*Chorus: All in all forever, Jesus I will sing;
Everything in Jesus, and Jesus everything.*

EPHESIANS 1-2: WHO YOU ARE IN CHRIST

Privilege #1: You Were Chosen To Holiness 1:1-4

The whole point of this series of messages is to help you understand who you are in Christ and what has happened to you in becoming a saved person. It is so fantastic, so wonderful, so unbelievable, and yet there are a great majority of believers who go through their whole Christian lives and never really comprehend what has happened to them or what they have as believers in Christ. Disney has an animated movie called the Sword in the Stone, a fabled story about a young boy in ancient England who was raised as a servant in the castle, whose greatest hope of being anything was of being a squire and polishing the armor for some knight. All his life he was treated poorly and with contempt and he lived content that way. But in the castle courtyard there was a sword with the point embedded into a stone and an inscription which said "Whoso pulleth this sword from this stone is the rightful king of England". Nobody had been able to pull it out for centuries. But one day the boy needed a sword and he just grabbed it without thinking and it came right out. One by one the whole crowd fell to their knees and began to say, "Hail to the king...King Arthur!" The little servant boy all his life never knew he was the king until that moment, but he was the rightful king all along. Of course that's just a fable, but it is tragically true that all too many of us Christians go through life living spiritually as though we are only squires when indeed we are actually kings (literally) and indeed much more than that. You have been given privileges beyond your wildest imagination in Jesus Christ. After his greeting to the Ephesian Christians, Paul tells us:

I. The Nature Of Your Privileges (3) He calls them blessings. But note four things about them. First:

1. they are all yours NOW Note the past tense. He has already blessed us with these privileges; they are not something we wait for, something we get after we die or later on as we mature. They are all yours RIGHT NOW, this very moment, as a believer in Christ and they have been yours, as we'll see later, not just for a few years but from eternity past. Second:

2. they are spiritual in nature What do I mean by that? They have to do with your spirit, with that part of you that is the real you, your soul. We are not talking about material blessings, about financial blessings, about fleshly things. God has not blessed you with health and wealth to claim at will. But these are far more valuable. Third:

3. they are heavenly realities We are blessed in the heavenly realms. Where is that? Verse 20, that's where Christ is seated right now and we are seated there with Him, as we'll learn later. We have the spiritual blessings that are visible and true in the heavenly realms right here on earth, right now. And fourth:

4. they are all yours IN Christ Now I want to take some time to explain and think in detail about that little phrase "in Christ" because wrapped up in those two words is the wonderful method by which God has made all these things true for us in our lives. He has given them to us IN CHRIST. That phrase occurs 14 times in the Book of Ephesians and 6 of those are right here in chapter 1. It is used to indicate a 2-fold relationship that you have with Christ. First of all:

a. He is IN you When you got saved, Christ literally came to live, to dwell inside you, in the person of the Holy Spirit. But it's not just that He came to live in you; He JOINED Himself to your spirit. He united His Spirit with yours so that the two of you are inseparably one. Now, what does that mean? It means that what is true of Him is true of you. When I say that you get all spiritual blessings in Him, one thing I mean is that His presence in you makes all those things that are true of Him true of you; it makes what is His, YOURS. Take, for example the illustration of LIFE in 1 Jn. 5:10-12 Here's how you get eternal life. Eternal life is Christ's life, the life of God. It is eternal, from everlasting to everlasting. How does God give it to you? He doesn't simply decree that you have it, though I guess He could. He gives it to you by uniting you with Christ so that Christ's life becomes your life. You got that blessing of eternal life IN Christ. You also got His throne, His nature, His access to the Father and a whole host of other things. You got all these things in Him because He is IN you. But other times when the phrase "in Christ" is used, it points out the reverse truth:

b. you are IN Him A spiritual transaction occurred when you received Christ. You were placed IN HIM spiritually. Now what in the world does that mean? Well, let me use:

(1) the illustration of Levi - Heb. 7:9-10 Levi was the great grandson of Abraham. On one particular occasion in his life Abraham did something, he paid a tithe to a priest named Melchizedek. God's comment is that since Levi was in Abraham, when Abraham acted, Levi acted or in other words Abraham acted for Levi and what he did, Levi did in Him. Abraham acted for the entire line descended from him. Now let's look at something more extensive:

(2) the contrast of Adam - 1 Cor. 15:22 says, Just as IN ADAM all die, so IN CHRIST shall all be made alive. You came into this world IN ADAM. Compare Rom. 5:12. That doesn't say "Death came to every man because every man sins." It says that all "sinned". When? In the one man's sin, in Adam. We are all descendants of Adam. When Adam acted in the garden and chose sin, he acted for the entire race descended from him even though we were not yet born. Your existence is in the person of Adam and so you are born with his nature and his destiny. BUT, when you come to Christ, He takes you OUT of Adam and his line of descent and puts you INTO HIMSELF and His line of descent. So that your life is no longer derived from Adam but from Christ. And your nature is no longer the one derived from Adam but that of Christ. And your destiny is that of Christ. Now whether you catch all that or not, the point is this: what happened to Him happened to you. When He died, you died; when He rose, you rose; when He ascended, you ascended; now that He sits on the Throne, you sit on the throne in Him! So, all the spiritual blessings you have are yours because you are in Him and what happened to Him happened to you. Now that's a bunch of heavy stuff. So, let's look at more heavy stuff. Here is your first privilege in Christ:

II. The Privilege Of Being Chosen (4) You, my friend, are chosen! Did you know that? Now, what does that mean?

1. what chosen means: you were selected for Himself The word elect is from the same root word as chosen. It means to select out from among and it is in the middle voice so it means to select out from among for yourself. My friend, there are currently over 7 billion people in this world and out of all of them Almighty God has chosen YOU to be His own possession, to be His and spend eternity with Him. Oh, this is a love-note from God whispered in your ear, "I chose YOU!" Did you ever whisper that to your wife? "Out of all the girls in the world, I chose you because I wanted you!" How sweet that is to your ear! Out of the billions of people that have ever lived, you are part of the few chosen to belong to God for His very own! Every now and again you'll see on TV a movie about a kid who's adopted and he'll be wondering why his real parents didn't want him and his adoptive parents will tell him, "Yes but remember this. We didn't have to take you. We chose you. We wanted you for our very own." Oh, that's special and that's what God has done for you. He didn't have to love you; He didn't have to pick you. But He did. He wanted to. It was an act of His will. He wanted YOU. Knowing all your faults and flaws and hang-ups. Knowing all the rotten things you would ever do. Knowing all the secret things that lie at your very core. He still chose YOU! Now let's talk about:

2. how you were chosen: in Him Now, let me just mention very kindly:

a. the 2 positions on election There is a large section of the Christian community including most Presbyterians, many Baptists, and a host of others who hold that election was a simple sovereign choice made by God. Simply put, God chose before ever creating them, who would be saved and therefore who wouldn't be saved based on nothing other than His simple right to do so as God. That's one position. Then there are another whole host of us who hold the position that is my choice, that God's choosing is according to His foreknowledge as 1 Pet. 1:2 says, who have been chosen according to the foreknowledge of God the Father... God in His omnipotence knew how He would work in your life and how you would respond to His Son and chose you accordingly. You can view it whichever way you like. Either way, you end up with the same result. You are chosen. But the point of our text is really to support neither one of these, but to say that your privilege of chosenness is a result of being IN HIM. You see:

b. Christ is the Chosen One Lk. 23:35 says, He is the Christ of God, the CHOSEN ONE. Is. 42:1 says, Here is my Servant whom I uphold, my chosen one in whom I delight... Christ is the true CHOSEN ONE of God. He is the Father's eternal choice. And remember what I said earlier? What is true of Him is true of you. What happened to Him happened to you. When you came to Christ you were placed IN HIM and united with Him in such a way that the Father's choosing Christ is the Father's choosing YOU:

c. you were chosen in HIM, not based on YOU God did not sit in heaven and watch you live and see all your good and bad points and your attitude and all about you and decide to save you. He didn't even sit back before creation and look down the corridors of time at your life and all your characteristics and decide to save you. He chose Christ and YOU were chosen IN HIM, so that your chosenness, your belonging to God is not based, even one iota, on anything you are or do. It doesn't depend on you! Your chosenness depends on Christ. Now let me ask you this? Is the Father ever likely to get tired of the Son and "UN-choose" Him? Never! And neither is He likely to un-choose you because your chosenness is IN HIM. In fact, look at this:

3. when you were chosen: eternity past He chose you IN Him before the foundation of the world. Before time began. He chose you in eternity past in the eternal choice He made in Christ. What does that mean? Simply this: you are secure! On the grand time clock of God, you've already been chosen long before your birth or your parents or their parents or the birth of Christ or David or Moses or even Abraham. Thousands of years ago, before Gen. 1, before God ever said, Let there be light, you were chosen to belong to God and be His very own. It's old hat to Him and it's as sure and steadfast as the mountains you admire or the very earth you stand on. But there's one final thing to understand:

4. what you were chosen to: holiness You were chosen not simply to belong, but to be something. To be holy. God chose way back then, not just to have you but to make you something, to make you holy. And my friend because you are in Christ, right now today:

a. you are holy in position You are blameless before Almighty God; you stand before Him HOLY in Christ. He died on the cross and when He died you died in Him. And your sins were done away with right then and there, all of them, first to last. That's the blessing of being in Christ. That's how come you can be a child of God bound for heaven even though you still sin. You are in Christ and in Him you are absolutely blameless. But it's not just your position:

b. you are holy in being On the other hand, when Christ came IN YOU, he made a brand new you. He created a brand-new spirit in you, a new nature that is holy and just and pure. Your old sin-saturated spirit is dead and gone and your spirit is as holy as that of Christ Himself. That is not blasphemy; that is truth. Read it in Colossians. You are blameless because you are IN HIM and you are holy because He is IN YOU! He has chosen you to be so! Well then, how come some of you are wandering around earth wondering how God could ever love you, how He could ever want you with all your faults and failures and shortcomings. You think you could never please Him and you never do anything right anyway. You don't even like yourself. And maybe you worry about your salvation, about whether you're really going to make it after all as you look at your life and how you sin again and again. MY FRIEND, IN JESUS CHRIST YOU WERE CHOSEN BEFORE THE CREATION OF THE WORLD TO BE HOLY! That's what God says about you. And all your life you've been walking around living like a squire; you've been crawling around like an ugly caterpillar hoping that someday you'll be the least little bit like that beautiful butterfly you admire. And what you don't know is simply that GOD CHOSE YOU TO BE A BUTTERFLY BEFORE TIME BEGAN. You may not look like a butterfly, but you are ALREADY A BUTTERFLY just as surely as Jesus Christ is alive.

Privilege #2: You Were Predestined To Sonship 1:5

We could sum up the theme of this series in one word: identity, that is, who you are. If you know who you are, it will determine how you live. Yet so many Christians go through their entire lives with a wrong understanding of who they are, never realizing the privileges that have been given to them because they are in CHRIST. The first privilege we talked about is in verse 4; you were CHOSEN, selected by God before the creation of the world from among all the people who would ever be born to belong to Him and to be made holy in His presence. You are not simply a person who continues to be a sinner, yet saved by grace. You are a person who used to be a sinner, but who in Jesus Christ was transformed and given a new spirit and made righteous and holy and pure, so that right now you are a SAINT! It doesn't matter how you feel about yourself or that sin still lives in your flesh and sometimes you give in to it. You have been made a saint. God never asks you to become something you're not; He simply asks you to LIVE like what you already ARE! Now today, let's look at verse 5 and talk about privilege #2: you were predestined to sonship.

I. The Meaning Of Predestination: To Determine Beforehand Predestination is admittedly a very deep and difficult subject. Strong Calvinists, like our Presbyterian and Reformed friends, love to talk about it. People from a more dispensational background like mine usually hate to talk about it, because we're too busy shouting "Whosoever Will may come!" And sadly enough, it has become for many of us something we almost don't believe in. Yet the Bible teaches it and we can't ignore that. So let me clearly say that I believe in predestination. It is one of the most blessed sweet truths that God has whispered to us as His children. The Greek word means literally to mark out the boundaries or limits of something beforehand, to determine something before it starts. When you hear predestination, think predetermination; the outcome of it is fixed. Jesus Christ is coming again and Satan is going to rot for eternity in a lake of fire. That fact is predestined. It is determined and fixed right now, before it ever occurs. So predestination involves two things on God's part:

1. it involves an act of decision God decided something; He decreed something, if you like. I do not, by the way, believe in fate, that what will be will be. I believe that God determines things. He decides they will be. Predestination means that God made a decision about YOU. But it also involves something else very important:

2. it involves the power to ensure the carrying out of the decision I can predetermine that my child will be president of the USA. I can make that decision, but I'm missing something. I have no power to make what I have decided come true. God, on the other hand, is omnipotent. He has the power to ensure that whatever He has determined will come to pass. It cannot fail to happen, because its occurrence is rooted in His Almighty power. So, God has predestined you. He has decided ahead of time certain things about you as His child and His power will see that they are accomplished. Now in verse 5 you can see:

II. What You Were Predestined To: The Adoption Of Sons The Greek word is not a verb, but a noun here. It is not "to be adopted AS His sons" but to "the ADOPTION of sons". I emphasize that because the Greek word huiothesia used here does not refer to the modern practice of taking a child from another family into your own and officially making him yours. Indeed, the biblical doctrine of adoption really has nothing to do with that at all. You don't get INTO God's family by adoption; you are BORN into it by the new birth. Adoption means "to place as a son" and it refers to a rite of passage that EVERY male child in the Roman world went through right in his own family. Let me illustrate from Paul's own writings:

1. its meaning: to receive full rights - Gal. 4:1-5 Every boy had an adoption in the Roman culture. It was sort of a rite of passage, a "coming of age". His father would set a time for it, a certain age when it would happen. Before that time, he was a child, a minor, and was subject to the ruling of a pedagogue, a child-trainer, a guardian. Others took care of his possessions for him and made his decisions for him, even though he might be the heir to the whole estate. He was not much different from the household servant or slave who was always told what to do and how to act. But then that great day came when he was declared a full-grown son and invested with all the attendant rights and privileges. He was responsible for his own actions and decisions and possessions. He lived under a new system and was free from the control of guardians. That is the adoption which every son experienced in Roman times; it referred to the time when you were invested with the full rights and position of an adult son and heir. Now, Paul uses this figure in two ways. In the Galatians passage it has:

a. its present application: You SERVE now as a full son Because you are in Christ, you serve God, not as a child under law, but as a full son under grace. It's not that you have a heavenly Master who tells you what to do. You have a Heavenly Father who has put His Spirit in your heart and you serve Him out of love. Your heart longs to please Him as the heart of a son is united to that of his father and wants to live a life that mirrors His in its character and quality. But that's another sermon. In Ephesians and in other passages Paul uses the same image of adoption and gives it:

b. its future application: Turn over to Romans 8. Just as in Roman culture the father would set a day on which his son would be transformed from a child into a man and would be invested with all rights and privileges, so God has set a time for every one of us when we His children will go through a similar transforming experience.

(1) you will be glorified at Christ's return - Rom. 8:23 In the one sense we are already full sons and invested with the full rights of sons right now. But in another sense, we are not yet fully invested with everything we're going to get. We are lacking something, the resurrection of our bodies! Our spirits are brand new, regenerated. We are new inside. But sin and its effects still dwell in our bodies and affect our minds. Consequently, we groan because we are not yet complete. We yearn to be made whole, to become fully all that we were created to be, all that we're going to be and that will occur at Christ's return, at the Rapture of the Church, where we will all be transformed in a moment in the twinkling of an eye, instantly glorified and caught up to heaven to be with Him forever! That's the moment our eyes are fixed on, that moment when we are fully invested with all our rights and privileges as the sons of God, when we are made like Him in every way, body, mind, and spirit, and when we sit down with Him on His throne, coregents, joint heirs with Him. That is "the adoption" Paul is talking about. And what Eph. 1:5 is teaching is that God made a decision about you long ago that you would have that moment and He will certainly carry it out. It is teaching that:

(2) you were predestined to be like Christ - Rom. 8:29-30 Predestination in all of its uses in Scripture is not really a doctrine about salvation; it is about glorification. God decided that YOU would be made exactly like His Son, that You would be made one day like Jesus Christ, that you would have His glory, all of it! He did not simply want Christ to fellowship with forever; He wanted a whole race of beings made like Himself to share His glory and His image and to spend eternity in fellowship with Him. Now let's look at some other passages to help you see it more completely:

2. its explanation - 1 John 3:2 says that we don't know yet what we shall be. You can't comprehend all of that and it hasn't been given to you. But you can know one thing which covers it all: in that moment when He appears (at the Rapture) that you will be made like Him! That means:

a. you will be made fully like Him in body - Phil. 3:20-21 Your lowly body, this body which shows all the effects and scars of sin, which is slowly aging and dying and wrinkling and crinkling and aching and paining, will be exchanged for a glorious body made just like His, a spiritual body which never does any of those things. It never hungers or thirsts or grows weary or old or knows pain. It is just like His. Then:

b. you will be made fully like Him in behavior - Col. 1:22-23 At that day God is going to present you to Himself and you will be completely holy and without blame. All trace of sin will be removed from you. The sin principle or the law of sin which infected all your members will be removed, so that your every thought, your every word, your every act will be just like His, holy! And then:

c. you will be made fully like Him in position - Rev. 3:21 says you will sit down with Him on His throne and share it just as He sat down with the Father on His throne. His position will be your position, His authority your authority, His dominion your dominion, His possessions your possessions.

Oh, what a grand and glorious day that will be, that day of adoption, that day when you are placed as a son and invested with everything that is yours in Christ. There's not much in our culture to compare with this. You might think of the anticipation and the "I can't wait" feeling you had about getting your driver's license or about getting married. But nothing compares to this, being made like Jesus on that glorious day. But the best part of it is that you can't miss it, because you were predestined to it. God chose to do this to you and He has the omnipotent power to carry it out. Now, if you really want to knock your socks off, think about this:

III. When You Were Predestined: Eternity Past Verse 4. He chose us in Him before the creation of the world. He predestined us. That choice, that determination that you would one day be a glorified being like the Son of God was made in the councils of eternity before anything was created! It has already stood for thousands of years, more immovable than the Rock of Gibraltar and nothing can shake it. Jesus said, "My Father is greater than all and NOBODY is able to snatch you out of His hand". Nobody and nothing is big enough and strong enough to change what God has predestined to be. It WILL be. Did you hear it? Those He predestined He also glorified. It is done! It is finished. For Him to think it or will it or speak it is for it to be accomplished! That meets the first of my basic needs, security. I am absolutely secure and nothing on earth can change it. What comfort! And here's:

IV. Why You Were Predestined The reason is the last two words in verse 4, about which nobody is sure whether they belong to the phrase before or after them, to election or to predestination, but it doesn't really matter since it applies to both actions. Whatever He has done for us:

1. it was out of His love He loved you. That's why He decided that one day you will be glorified and made like Him! You say, "Me? Poor old me? Sinful, rotten, failing, ugly, little me? Me who has nothing about myself to love?" Yes, you! Moses told Israel that the Lord did not set His love upon you based upon anything in you but because He loved you. He loved you because He loved you. What difference does it make why? That's just the kind of God He is! And whether anybody else ever loves you or not, whether your mother or your father ever love you or your children ever love you or your friends ever love you, God loves you. And He loves you knowing all about you (after all He created you). Oh, just sit back and bask in it, "Jesus loves me this I know, for the Bible tells me so!" That meets the second of my basic needs, to be loved. You have always been loved and you always will be. And catch this, the end of verse 5 tells us that:

2. it was according to His desire It was in accordance with His pleasure and will. That is, because He wanted to. Why did He love me and predestine me to glory? He wanted to! He wanted to glorify me and place me in His presence and give me everything He had. And that addresses the third of my basic human needs, the need for significance. I am worth something. I matter. I have eternal value. Why? Because God wants to do something in me and with me. He wants me! Finally, just notice God's method:

V. How You Were Predestined: Through Christ It was by being placed into Christ and Him being placed into me that my life was merged with His into one. God's determination that His Son would be glorified and reign forever and ever is now mine. My future is as secure as His. The love God has for me is as great as His. I am predestined for glory!

A friend passed on to me the words of this poem by A.B. Simpson:

Oh, what a wonderful place Jesus has given to me! Saved by His glorious grace, I may be even as He. When with my Lord I appear, Like Him I know I shall be; But, while I walk with Him here, I may be even as He.

One in His death on the tree, One as He rose from the dead; I from the curse am as free E'en as my glorious Head. One on the throne by His side, One in His sonship divine; One as the Bridegroom and Bride, One as the Branch and the Vine.

One in His merits I stand, One as I pray in His name; All that His worth can command, I can with confidence claim. One in His faith and His love, One in His life I may be. Sealed by the heavenly Dove, I may be holy as He.

One in the sorrows He bore, One in His service so true, Even His tears I may share, Even His works I may do. Even His peace and His joy Jesus hath given to me; What can distress or annoy? I am as happy as He.

One in the rapturous hour, When He shall come for His own; Raised by His glorious power, I shall sit down on His throne. All that He has shall be mine, All that He is I shall be; Robed in His glory divine, I shall be even as He.

Privilege #3: You Were Given Grace 1:6

I want to talk about something today that's very hard to talk about. Now I know you thought that when I talked about election or being chosen as our first privilege in Christ that that was hard to talk about. And then last week when I talked about predestination as our second privilege, you thought that was hard to talk about. But this third privilege of ours in verse 6 is really hard to talk about! You were given grace. Now, why is that so hard to talk about? Because grace is one of those words that is so common and you use it all the time in talking about your faith, yet it is hard to detail its own meaning. When I was in the sixth grade, I got in trouble for something (which I really didn't do) and, as punishment, was told to write an 800 word essay on the meaning of responsibility. Have you ever tried that? You know what responsibility is, but try to define and describe it. After the first couple sentences, I wound up giving a long list of examples of it, such as a captain's responsibility is to his crew. You almost have to use the word in talking about its meaning. And that's what you end up doing with the word grace. You know what it looks like in action, but it's very hard to talk about the concept itself. But let's take a stab at defining:

I. The Meaning Of Grace: GOD'S FREE UNDESERVED FAVOR That's a good definition. It contains three key words we have to talk about. First, the word FAVOR. What's that? It's a word we don't use too much. It refers to the attitude which one person has toward another. In this case:

1. it refers to the attitude of favor which God has toward you The dictionary says it's an attitude of friendliness toward someone. But it's more than that. Persian law in the time of Esther said that no one could approach the king in his chamber without being called. The penalty was death, unless the king extended his scepter and showed favor to the person. Queen Esther dressed up and approached the king anyway to save her people. When he saw her in all her royal splendor, he extended his scepter and showed her favor. Favor can mean liking someone and tolerating them because of it. Some people see grace that way; God tolerates us even though we've sinned. But grace is more than that. Cain and Abel each brought God an offering and Gen. 4:4 says the Lord looked with favor on Abel and his offering not on Cain. So, God was pleased with Abel and what he did. But grace is more than God being pleased with someone.

a. it is not merely tolerating nor being pleased, but LOVE Grace is rooted in the concept of LOVE! In LOVE He predestined us to the adoption of sons and His grace has been freely given us IN THE ONE HE LOVES, Jesus Christ! He loves us like He loves Him! God does not just put up with us and tolerate our presence. He is not simply pleased with us and glad for how we act. He LOVES us. He loves us the way He loves His own Son! When the Bible says you have been given grace, it means that God has chosen to love you! You are the object of God's love and:

b. it is a permanent standing - Rom. 5:1-2 We stand in this grace, in this relationship of love that the Father has established toward us. With earthly kings, favor is something you fall in and out of. But Israel was told, The Lord has set His love upon you... And the Psalmist says, The steadfast love of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon those who love Him. Grace means that God has decided to love you forever and ever. You have been placed in His eternal favor. And then:

2. it refers to the way in which that favor came about Let's look at the other two words in the definition. First of all, that grace, that favor, that eternal love:

a. it is free; you DO NOTHING to obtain it The word grace is almost synonymous with the word gift. A gift is something that is free. You don't pay for it; all you do is accept it. This attitude of eternal love that God has for you came to you as a free gift. It was not based on you or anything about you. It was not because of your looks or your IQ or even because of your good moral nature, kindness, prayers, or piety. Absolutely nothing in you moved God to choose to love you. He loved you freely. Isn't that how you want somebody to love you? Yet it is not only free:

b. it is undeserved; you DO NOT DESERVE to have it It's not just that God didn't choose to love you for something He saw in you; it's that He chose to love you IN SPITE OF what He saw in you! What was that? SIN! And what is the one thing that our Holy God hates? SIN! As the old saying goes, you were a sinner both by nature and by choice. You were born with a nature that was utterly opposed to God and you chose all through your life to do things that offend the righteousness of God. You still do sometimes! By rights, justice demands that you deserve to die, not to be loved eternally by Almighty God! To illustrate, grace is not you having pity on a starving man and feeding him. Grace is you saying, "I love you" to the man who stole all your money. Grace is you saving the life of the man who murdered your child. It is love you do not deserve. Now please don't let your reaction be, "Oh, I feel so guilty; God loves me and I'm so unworthy of it; I don't deserve it; O what a wretch I am!" God never expected you to deserve it or be worthy of it! Your reaction ought to be, "Hallelujah, I don't deserve it but God loves me anyway!" So, at its root, grace is God's favor or love for you that is both free and undeserved. But the word grace can also:

3. it refers to the benefits you receive as a result of that favor All the things you have as a result of the fact that God loved you and established a relationship with you can be called graces or, we might say, acts of grace or gifts of grace. For instance:

a. salvation is the result of grace - Eph. 2:8 Your salvation comes to you as a result of grace. You do nothing to obtain it and you don't deserve to have it. Yet God gives it to you as a gift. Now we all understand that. That is fundamental to becoming a Christian. If you don't realize you are saved by grace, you're still trying to climb up some other way, but it won't work. However, many times we think of grace as ONLY extending to salvation and see the areas of our Christian life as areas where WE WORK. Well, the Bible says:

b. spiritual gifts are the result of grace - Rom. 12:6 The spiritual gifts you have, whether you can teach or preach or sing or organize or help or serve or whatever, are gifts of grace. They come to you as a result of God's love for you and you do not obtain them or deserve them. They are gifts, freely given by God to you to exercise in His service. For instance:

c. sacrificial giving is the result of grace - 2 Cor. 8:7 The ability to give is an act of grace on God's part, not something you work up yourself. The very ability to give to someone else goes against the nature you were born with and it is the grace of God that puts in you a giving heart! But these gifts are not simply abilities God has put in you and left you alone to exercise:

d. power for service is the result of grace - 1 Cor. 15:10 Paul is referring to his missionary career. He says he worked hard and yet at the bottom line, it was not him, but the grace of God that worked in him! Grace is often a synonym for power in the New Testament and it refers to the fact of the presence and power of the Holy Spirit living in me to live out the life and will of Christ which I could neither obtain or deserve. God in His love does it! So God gives me grace to serve Him and that means that out of His love for me He gives me the thing I need, the power, wisdom, or whatever. Do you get the point?

Any Connection Between You and God Is By GRACE! Whether it's salvation, or Him helping you, or Him working through you or living the Christian life or exercising your gifts or having a ministry. It all stems from grace, God's free undeserved favor and love for you! Where you get into trouble is when you think it depends on you and you try to do it apart from expecting God's grace to operate in it. Listen, every breath you take is grace! Every finger you lift is grace! Every choice, every action, every right word, it is all grace! The right thing to do is to simply recognize that and to ask for grace in everything you do! Ask for His strength to work in and through you, for His wisdom to guide you in every task, for His comfort in every sorrow. It is all yours by grace. Now, let's talk about:

II. The Receiving Of Grace How did I receive this attitude of eternal love that God has toward me which I couldn't earn and don't deserve. Well, verse 6 gives us three important facts:

1. it has been given to YOU freely If in English you could take the noun grace and turn it into a verb, you'd understand what Paul did here in Greek. It doesn't say merely that God GAVE us His grace; He literally "graced" it to us! He gave it to us freely and undeservedly! Further:

2. it has been given to you once and for all The Greek verb is in the aorist tense, which means an action that has been fully completed once and for all in the past, one that has happened and is over with. A gift is given at a particular time and place and once it's given, you have it. The act is done. And God's favor and love have been given to you once for all, permanently. It's not like human love, something that is growing and maybe you'll have it all someday. It's not like human favor something that can be given and retracted. No, God's favor and love have been set upon you completely and forever, freely and with nothing on your part to obtain it or deserve it! How?

3. it has been given to you IN THE ONE HE LOVES In His Son Jesus Christ. When God gave you the gracious gift of His Son coming into your life and merging your life into His so that His life became your life, then something marvelous happened. The attitude that God has toward His Son became the attitude He has toward you. The favor that He has toward Jesus is the favor He has toward you. The love that He has toward His own beloved Son is the love that He has toward you! Think about it! He loves me the same way He loves Jesus. Oh, that's grace! And that's why we need to close by mentioning:

III. The Nature Of Grace Paul describes it in verse 6. He says:

1. it is glorious I don't have words to describe it. There are no words to convey the wonder of grace. We use words like "amazing", "marvelous", "wondrous", and so on. Maybe this year someone will write a new song, "awesome grace" or something. Just to think that the God who made the universe, Almighty, Holy God, would set His love upon me and choose me and predestine me to share a glorified eternity with Him, even though I was a guilty sinner, lost and bound for hell, that is glorious! And so:

2. it must result in praise Paul says He did all this to the praise of His glorious grace. You know what Romans 8 says? The whole universe is waiting for the unveiling of the sons of God. One day when God unwraps His finished work (us!), not only will we sing His praises, but as the hymn puts it, "The universe with joy shall sing when grace has won the day!"

Paul knew what grace was. A blasphemer and persecutor of the church who tried to stamp it out, God freely gave him grace on that Damascus Road and by grace gifted him to become the greatest apostle Christendom has ever known. John Newton was the son of a sea captain who was engaged in Mediterranean trade. His mother died when he was 6. After 2 years of formal school, he joined his father's ship at age 11. His early life was one of immorality, debauchery and failure: rejected by his father, in trouble with employers; jailed and degraded. Later he served on slave ships and even became a "slave of slaves" after incurring the hatred of his employer's negro wife. He was brought to his senses by reading "The Imitation of Christ", by Thomas a Kempis. His actual conversion was the result of a violent storm in which he almost lost his life. He became a minister at age 39 and on his tombstone is this epitaph, "John Newton. Clerk: once an infidel and libertine, a servant of slaves in Africa, was by the rich mercy of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ preserved, restored, pardoned, and appointed to preach the faith he had long labored to destroy." It was the pen of John Newton which gave us the song "Amazing Grace." He knew what a privilege it was to be given grace! Oh my friend, do you? Let's fall at His feet together!

EPHESIANS 1-2: WHO YOU ARE IN CHRIST

Privilege #4: You Were Redeemed And Forgiven 1:7

Thus far we have studied that in Christ you were chosen to holiness, predestined to sonship, and given grace. What more could there be? Well, verse 7 tells us you were REDEEMED and FORGIVEN! Now, like the word grace, those are terms we use all the time. They're in all the hymns that we sing. Yet most of the time I think we just see them as synonyms for being saved or becoming a Christian and never really think what it means that I have been redeemed and I have been forgiven. So, let's start by talking about:

I. The Meaning Of Redemption There are at least four different Greek words translated redeem or redemption in the New Testament, each with a slightly different shade of emphasis: 1) agorazo which means to buy in the marketplace, emphasizing that God PURCHASED you, 2) exagorazo which means to buy OUT OF the market (you are off the market, not for sale any longer), emphasizing the permanence of that purchase, 3) lutrosis which means to set free or release, emphasizing that God FREED you from something that bound you, and 4) apolutrosis which means to free away from, a strengthened form of 3), emphasizing the COMPLETENESS of your freedom. And that is the word used here. All of these words carry two basic elements of meaning:

1. it means to set free from bondage It may in some instances be the bondage of debt or in others the bondage of slavery or even the bondage of prison or a sentence of judgment. But, however it is used, the person or the object is in bondage and is set free, released. But also:

2. it means by the paying of a price or ransom There are a lot of ways to set somebody free. You can liberate a captive by physical force, by helping the prisoner escape. But these words all mean to set free by the paying of a price. A ransom is paid. Something of great value is given in exchange for freedom. So, now let's talk about:

II. The Nature Of Your Redemption Your bondage, of course, was not physical but spiritual. It was a bondage to sin. In fact, there are three kinds of bondage you experienced, three ways in which you were bound. And so, there are three ways in which you have now been set free in Christ. First you have:

1. freedom from the penalty of sin, that is, forgiveness or justification Now in order to illustrate the various aspects of the freedom you have, I'd like to look at some illustrations of things that were redeemed under the Old Testament law as examples. There was, for example, the redemption of a forfeited life in Ex. 21:29-30. Here is a man whose life is forfeit. He has committed a crime of neglect by refusing to chain up or destroy his destructive animal and it has killed another man. By inference HE has killed another man and the penalty is death. The sentence is proclaimed and it hangs over his head. He is going to die. He is going to be put to death. He has only one hope: that he might be redeemed, that a ransom might be paid to spare his life, to give him his life back again. And, my friend, that's exactly:

a. the nature of your penalty Before you came to Christ, you were a criminal condemned to die. God had pronounced sentence, The soul that sinneth, it shall die! You were guilty. Your life was forfeit for all eternity. The only prospect before you was eternal hell. And you were bound to that penalty. You could not escape it. No matter how good you were and how many nice things you did, you could not erase the crime nor remove the eternal penalty. But by dying in your place, Christ took the penalty upon Himself. He paid the price to redeem you from the forfeiting of your life by giving you His own. And redemption in that sense, verse 7 calls forgiveness.

b. the nature of your forgiveness The word forgive means to send away. To forgive sins means to send away their penalty. In the Old Testament on the Day of Atonement there was a scapegoat. Actually, there were two goats. The leaders would confess the sins of the people over them and symbolically transfer their sins to the goats. Then the one goat would die to show the price of the redemption from sin's penalty. And the other goat would be led out into the wilderness and released never to be seen again, symbolizing that by means of death the sins were separated from Israel and removed completely. The freedom was complete. Redemption means you are absolutely, completely FREE from the guilt and penalty of your sins! The sentence is lifted. Rom. 8 says there is therefore NO CONDEMNATION to those who are in Christ Jesus! You will never suffer the penalty for a single sin that you have committed throughout your whole life in eternity. You don't have to wait and worry until you die to see whether God's going to be in a forgiving mood. Christ redeemed you from that. You are FREE RIGHT NOW from the penalty of your sin! But that's not the only freedom you have; you have:

2. freedom from the power of sin, that is, victory or sanctification In the Old Testament we have another example, the redemption of a slave in Lev. 25:47-49. Here's a man who, for whatever reason, extensive debt, unexpected emergency needs or foolish spending or whatever, has fallen under the control of another man. He has forfeited his ability to control his own life and it has been given to another. He has become a slave. And his only hope is redemption, that somehow the price can be paid which will set him free and give him back control over his own life. Now, you may never have realized it but the Bible says clearly that before you were saved, you were a slave!

a. the nature of your slavery - Rom. 6:17 You and I used to be slaves to sin! What does that mean? It means that the principle of sin was our master; it controlled us. We committed sins because the drive to sin or the law of sin was inside us and thoroughly saturated every part of us and, even though we tried hard to fight it much of the time, we couldn't win. At the bottom line, it controlled us! You were a slave to the nature and principle within you. You had no control! Your only hope was to be redeemed from that slavery. And Christ did that; look at verse 18:

b. the nature of your freedom - Rom. 6:18 Christ set you free from that slavery. How did He do that? He killed that old nature inside of you and gave you a brand new one, one that is pure and holy and righteous like His. And by identifying you with Him in His death, he made you dead to sin. You are set free from its power; it no longer has control over you. You don't have to sin! If you do it anyway, it's your choice. You have victory over the power of sin in your daily life; you're free! You're not doomed to the empty way of life that was passed down to you by your fathers; you have freedom to live God's way because you've been redeemed from sin's power. But that's not all the freedom you have in Christ. One day you'll have:

3. freedom from the presence of sin, that is, liberty or glorification Look at this Old Testament illustration, the redemption of a possession in Lev. 25:25-26. Here's a man who owns a piece of land, but because he's in debt for whatever reason, he's been forced to sell that land to a stranger. It was his possession, but it was not his to use or to have completely. Somebody else lived on it or farmed it and used it. Unless it could be redeemed. Unless a price could be paid by him or someone else that would fulfill that obligation and return it to him. Now, instead of imagining that you are the owner, this time pretend that God's the owner and you're the piece of land, that you're the possession. And then read verse 14 to see:

a. the nature of your current state - Eph. 1:14 A number of times when the word redemption is used, it is used in the future sense, pointing to that time of Christ's return. Your current state is something like that land. Though the payment has been made and your freedom has been bought, God is still not in complete possession of you. The presence of sin still dwells in your body. Your spirit is redeemed; it's free, but your body isn't. Compare Rom. 8:21-23. This lifetime is one of groaning. It is one of longing to be free, free from the effects of sin altogether. But one grand and glorious day Jesus Christ is going to call you unto Himself and accomplish what you've been waiting for, the redemption of your body, when it too is set free! And look what it says about that:

b. the nature of your future state Rom. 8:21b, 23b Right now we have the first fruits; we have the down payment, the guarantee. We have the Holy Spirit present in us. But we're waiting for the glorious liberty of total redemption when our bodies are redeemed totally from the presence of sin and it can't touch us anymore! My friend, you are COMPLETELY FREE if you are in Jesus Christ today! You are from sin's awful penalty, you are free from its awesome power and you have the guarantee that one day you'll even be free from its annoying presence! You are delivered, set free, REDEEMED! But verse 7 also tells us there was a price.

III. The Price Of Your Redemption: His Blood A price was paid. A ransom was put forth. There was a cost to provide that redemption for you and the price was the blood of Jesus Christ. The price was that He laid down His life for yours! Now, you can only fully appreciate redemption if you understand the value of the price that was paid to procure it. In this case you need to see:

1. the eternal nature of the price - 1 Pet. 1:18-19 Notice the contrast here between being redeemed by corruptible things or a precious thing. The Greek word for precious means "of great value". Silver and gold are corruptible things, things that are perishing. Do you see the contrast? What is truly valuable is what is lasting. Silver and gold may buy an earthly slave freedom out of an earthly bondage, but they are not nearly valuable enough to buy somebody out of slavery to sin. They are temporary and perishing. The blood of Jesus is precious because it is eternal, forever. The value of His life given for us is infinite and therefore, so is:

2. the eternal nature of the benefit - Heb. 9:12 What kind of redemption did His blood purchase for us? ETERNAL. Our redemption is not just freedom from this thing, until the next thing comes along. It is ETERNAL REDEMPTION. I AM FREE FOREVER AND EVER. I WILL NEVER BE A SLAVE AGAIN. NOBODY AND NOTHING CAN PUT ME IN BONDAGE EVER BECAUSE I'M FREE! And then be sure to look at verse 7 again and check the tense, because that tells you:

IV. The Possession Of Your Redemption: Now WE HAVE redemption, present tense. You have it right now. You may be waiting for the final piece of it to be delivered, but it was paid for up front in advance. It is all yours, every bit of it, right now. You don't have to wait to be set free. You're free now, and even being set free from the presence of sin is guaranteed to you because Jesus shed His blood to pay the price and gave you the Holy Spirit as a down payment guaranteeing that which is to come. In the pre-civil war South, a slave could be redeemed; he could be set free or buy his freedom. And then he was given "free man's papers" signed by his former owner which told the world he was a free man. My friend, here in Ephesians are your "free man's papers". You are free! And they are signed by God Almighty! And finally note how you got that way. How did God do it?

V. The Method Of Your Redemption: In Him He took you and placed you into Jesus Christ so that when He died, you died and the penalty of your sins was exacted, leaving you free. When He rose victorious, you rose with Him to a brand-new life with a new spirit in you that is free from sin. And when He ascended on high and sat down, you ascended with Him and are seated with Him there, guaranteeing your actual arrival there in His full image one day. It's all IN HIM. He is your life. He is your redemption. You are set free.

G. Campbell Morgan told of a miner who came to him at the close of one of his services and said, "I'd give anything to believe that God would forgive my sins. But I just can't accept the idea that all I have to do is trust Him. It's too cheap." Morgan looked at him, "My dear friend, have you been working today?" "Yes, I was down in the pit." "Did you pay to get back out?" "Of course not. It didn't cost me anything. I just got in the cage and was pulled to the top." "But weren't you afraid? Wasn't the ride too cheap?" "Oh no," he said. "The ride was free, but the company paid a lot of money to sink the shaft and make it safe." Suddenly the truth broke upon the miner's soul. He saw that salvation was free. But he also realized that it had cost God a tremendous price to come down from Heaven and rescue fallen man. My friend you have absolute freedom today and you have it absolutely free. Live in it, enjoy it, utilize it, claim it, but never, ever forget the price that was paid to obtain it.

EPHESIANS 1-2: WHO YOU ARE IN CHRIST

Privilege #5: You Were Given Wisdom 1:8-10

Let me review the first four privileges that you have in Christ.

- (1) you were chosen to holiness (4)
- (2) you were predestined to sonship (5)
- (3) you were given grace (6)
- (4) you were redeemed and forgiven (7)

And now we come to the fifth privilege in verses 8-10. YOU WERE GIVEN WISDOM! Now, let me ask you this. Did you understand what those verses say? Those are 3 deep verses, the kind you'll read over and often ignore in your devotions. However, if we will subject them to study and cross-reference, they yield up to us some very important truths. First, they tell us that we as believers in Christ have:

I. The Privilege Of Receiving Wisdom (8) Now, there's something I should tell you that I haven't yet. In the Greek, verses 3-14, which list our privileges, are all a single, long, run-on sentence. There are no periods. In fact, it was originally unpunctuated. That's why you have the marginal notes in the NIV at verses 6 and 8. It's hard to tell whether words belong to the phrase before or after them sometimes. It's hard to tell whether verse 8 is saying that God lavished His grace on us with all wisdom, or whether, as the margin suggests, with all wisdom He made known to us the mystery of His will. Both things are obviously true. God obviously has all wisdom and He used it in dispensing His grace to us. But the point verses 8-10 seem to be making is the opposite, that God has given us all wisdom and understanding to know His will. We have the privilege of having received the very wisdom and understanding of God. Now, let's examine the words to see:

1. what it is There are two distinct words here:

a. wisdom (sophia) is insight into the nature of things From this we get our word sophomore (wise one). It seems to indicate more than just knowing an abundance of facts. An encyclopedia merely has knowledge, not wisdom. Wisdom is insight into the way things really are and the meaning of them. Let me try to illustrate the difference at a simple level. Knowledge is knowing the fact that a skunk walked into your office. Wisdom is the insight to realize that this event will have a profound impact upon your life. It will ruin that newsletter you planned to write this afternoon and put production behind schedule. It will ruin the lovely dinner you had planned for this evening. In fact, it may ruin the entire relationship you have with your girlfriend. Wisdom is seeing the true meaning and nature of things and the consequences they have.

b. understanding (phroneo) is knowing how to act in light of your insight Knowledge says, "There's a skunk". Wisdom realizes, "This will ruin your life". And understanding says, "If you scream, he'll squirt you; you'd best feed him the sandwich you packed for lunch and edge quietly out the door and go home early". Now, we have received both wisdom and understanding. God has not given us all the facts there are to have in the world. We couldn't contain them in our finite minds. But He has given to us wisdom, not just in the simple terms I've described, but in terms of having genuine insight into the nature and meaning of life and of mankind and of the world we live in. In our generation alone the human race has gathered reams of information, volumes upon volumes of facts about life and about man and about the natural world. But man in himself has no real wisdom about these kinds of things. A relative dragged me to a seminar one time where they talked on and on about what it meant to be "truly human". But at the bottom line they had no idea as to what man was really like in his nature; in fact they had no idea what the purpose of life was nor where the world was headed. And the room was filled with high level management executives. The Mayor of Philadelphia was even there as a participant. And so, they had developed an understanding of how to act that was totally flawed, that behavior is neither good nor evil; it is simply constructive to the purpose of building human relationships or not. Whatever you do is OK. But there may be better or more useful ways to act. It sounds good. But it makes clear to me this fact which God long ago recorded: The man without the Spirit does not accept the things that come from the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him, and he cannot understand them, because they are spiritually discerned." - 1 Cor. 2:14. They don't have it and can't get it. But WE HAVE BEEN GIVEN IT! How?

2. how we get it: in Christ There is a lovely passage over in Colossians that helps to explain this. It says that:

a. all wisdom is found in Him - Col. 2:2-3 He is the treasury, the storehouse in which all the valuable, precious things, both facts and meanings, knowledge and wisdom, are carefully stored up and hidden away. Just like you would take your precious jewels and cash and bonds and hide them all in a carefully chosen spot, your treasury, so all the precious treasures of wisdom are found in Christ, who, because He is God, not only knows everything but knows the meaning and purpose of everything and how to act accordingly. So, all of this is IN HIM. And where is He? IN US! That's why it says:

b. He IS our wisdom - 1 Cor. 1:24, 30 To us He has become our everything. By His presence in us, He has become our power to act. but He has also become our wisdom to know! So, the obvious implication of this to me is that GROWTH IN WISDOM DOES NOT COME SIMPLY FROM GATHERING INFORMATION; IT COMES FROM A DEEPENING KNOWLEDGE OF HIM! That's what Paul prayed for the Colossians, that they would have a growing knowledge of HIM. That's why James writes that if you lack wisdom you should ask of God and He will give it to you. The closer and more intimate your relationship with Christ, the more you will know about spiritual things, the more of those hidden things He will reveal to you. Your growth in wisdom, in understanding the meaning of things and in how to act accordingly will be directly proportional to the depth of the relationship you develop with Him! Now, while we're on the subject of getting wisdom, notice in verse 8:

3. how much we get You see, when we get Christ, we don't just get SOME wisdom:

a. we get ALL wisdom Look at 1 Cor. 2:10-16 with me. Did you see what we have? Since we have CHRIST, we have the MIND OF CHRIST in us. The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of Christ indwelling us, so the very MIND OF CHRIST, the storehouse of all that wisdom, is right there inside us, all the deep things of God. They are all there, even though the Spirit chooses what and how much to reveal to us according to our need. But we have it all! We have all we need. In fact:

b. we have more than enough He LAVISHED His grace on us in all wisdom and understanding. He POURED IT OUT. He caused it to superabound, to fill up and flow over! What a comfort that is! If we need wisdom in life, we can cry out to God who is right inside us and He will never rebuke us for wanting to know, but will give us what we need to know liberally! He's not stingy with it! It may not come instantly. It may take weeks and months, sometimes years, for God to prepare us to understand what we want to know, but it is all there and the closer we get to Him, the more we'll know. Now, in verses 9-10 Paul goes on to talk about:

II. The Special Wisdom We Have Received (9-10) There is a particular aspect of God's wisdom that we know that is very important and yet the world has no idea of it. You see:

1. God has revealed to us a secret, a mystery, something that was hidden to all the generations before Christ came into the world, something that remains hidden even today to all the great minds of the world who are without Christ. And here's:

2. what that secret is Let me spell out the ideas in these verses in simple outline form for you. First, He has revealed to us that:

a. the whole universe is ordered toward a time goal All of history, all of the existence of the world, is moving toward a particular point, a specific goal. Paul tells us:

(1) there will be a time of completion The world has had many times, many eras, many ages or epochs. But they all point toward a fulfillment, a completion, actually toward a single day that we know as the return of Christ, when Jesus Christ visibly becomes King of Kings and Lord of Lords over the entire universe. Now, that in itself is contrary to anything that mankind thinks. He doesn't think the universe is going anywhere. It is evolving and changing who knows where and the best we can do is to help make it a better place in some small way. But, my friend, on the calendar of God there is a day marked down when all of history, when all of the universe will come to experience what it was created for. Jesus talked about it in Mt. 19:28. He said, At the renewal (or regeneration) of all things when the Son of Man sits on His glorious throne... When Jesus sits visibly on His throne the whole universe will be renewed, recreated, remade. Peter said in his sermon in Acts 3:21, Christ must remain in heaven until the time comes to restore everything... that is, for everything to be returned to its originally intended state, the way God wants it ultimately to be. There is a time on God's calendar when that glorious event will happen and:

(2) God is managing everything toward that time He is orchestrating and administering all of human history, all of the events in the world, arranging and governing them toward that day, the same way that you might manage all the affairs of your household toward a particular event like a wedding. You see, God didn't just wind the universe up and let it run. He is executing a plan from beginning to end; He has a will that is being carried out.

And it all culminates in that one time, that one day, in the exaltation of His Son. Now, what's going to happen at that time?

b. at that time Christ will be the sum of all things is literally what it says. The verb in verse 10, to bring together literally means the sum or total of a column of figures, which in those days would be written at the top of the column. When you "add up" everything in heaven and earth, everything in the whole universe, it all will all add up to Christ. What does that mean? It means, as the NIV says, that:

(1) all things will be placed under Him - Phil. 2:9-11 says that God exalted Him to the highest place and gave Him the name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, in heaven and on earth and under the earth, and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. And on that day that is going to happen. Everything in creation is going to submit itself to the Lordship of Christ and fall under His direct control and further, it means that:

(2) all things will be restored in Him - Rom. 8:18-21 The entire physical universe is wrecked and ruined by sin and it is groaning and decaying. It is waiting expectantly for the same change you and I are waiting for, to be released from the bondage of decay and the anarchy and distortion that was brought on by sin and be restored to what it was created for! The universe is going to be put back the way it was created to be. Human beings will relate to God the way they were created to be. Everything will be summed up and focused in relationship to Jesus Christ, the King of Kings and Lord of Lords! What a day! It's a mystery, a secret that the world doesn't know about. But the wisdom of God has revealed it to us! What for? So that we might, because of the wisdom given to us, live in hope, so that we might live in the confidence that God's will and plan are in place, that the universe and our lives ARE on track and all of it is going toward that seemingly impossible goal. Oh, some days it doesn't seem that way, does it? Some days life doesn't seem to have that meaning and purpose; it doesn't seem to make sense, to go anywhere, but God is still at work orchestrating the whole thing toward one goal, the day when Jesus is exalted.

In India many years ago there was a war. A young soldier was assigned the difficult task of carrying a heavy gun to the top of a high and brushy overgrown hill, a strategic but inaccessible location. After trying three times, the recruit returned to his superior saying, "The mission is impossible!" He replied "Impossible? Impossible? Why, I've got an order for it right here in my pocket!" So the soldier went out and faced the seemingly impossible hill again and this time made it to the top. Oh, sometimes life seems almost like an impossible mountain, like what God has called us to face or to do is a task beyond us, like our life doesn't make sense and God doesn't really know what He's doing. But I've got a Book that says it does here in my hand, a Book that tells me that the plan of God is at work and will not be thwarted and ultimately will come together in the exaltation of Christ. And that same Jesus is already in me with all the wisdom and understanding I'll ever need. Be encouraged, dear friend; one day that plan will come together and with the whole universe you will bow and confess that Jesus is Lord, high and lifted up!

EPHESIANS 1-2: WHO YOU ARE IN CHRIST

Privilege #6: You Were Made His Inheritance 1:11-14

The sixth and final privilege we'll study in the first 14 verses of Ephesians is this: You were not only chosen to holiness, predestined to sonship, given grace, redeemed and forgiven, and given wisdom; you were made His inheritance! Now we need to talk about:

I. The Concept Of Being Made An Inheritance, because when I say the word inheritance, immediately you think of something YOU're going to get someday. You think of passages like 1 Pet. 1:4 which says that God has given us new birth into an inheritance that can never perish, spoil, or fade, kept in heaven for you. Passage after passage talks about YOUR inheritance, the things God has prepared for YOU in heaven. But that's not what I want to talk about this morning and that's not what the verses of our text are really talking about, even though in our English translation it may seem so at first. In verse 11 the NIV says, chosen. But in the margin it says, made heirs. The KJV says, obtained an inheritance. The Greek word kleroo used here is used only one time (here) in the New Testament and it means to assign a portion by the casting of lots. And it is in the passive voice, so it is something done TO us. Literally, it means that WE have been chosen or assigned as God's portion, as God's possession, as God's inheritance. You see, the Bible declares very plainly that God Himself has an inheritance and that:

1. God's inheritance is His people To really understand Paul's concept, you have to understand:

a. the Old Testament concept: Israel - Deut. 32:9 This is an ahead-of-time reference to the way Moses and then Joshua were told to divide up the land of Canaan. Each tribe was assigned an inheritance, a portion to possess for themselves, by casting lots. Now understand that this was not simply an impartial way of choosing (like "let's flip for it"), but it was Israel's way of letting God choose. They had the "Urim and Thummim" kept in the High Priest's breastplate which were cast as a means of showing God's will. So, God by this process assigned an allotted portion to each of the 12 tribes which would become their possession forever. And then God turns around and says, "And I also have chosen a portion, a possession, an inheritance for Myself; it is YOU, Israel! What I choose for Myself is not a plot of ground, not even a vast kingdom, not even great wealth. I have chosen YOU to be My special possession forever." Now look to Eph. 1:18 and see:

b. the New Testament concept: the saints (18) It is not FOR the saints or TO the saints but IN the saints. We who believe, the church of Jesus Christ are God's chosen possession, God's inheritance, God's treasure, His riches! Now pause and let that concept sink in a little while I point out that:

2. God's inheritance is not yet completely possessed (14) When the 12 tribes were assigned their portions, they owned them but did not fully possess the use of them immediately. Some of those sections were still under the control of Canaanites that had to be driven out, so the land could be finally freed and actually occupied. Then later when the Israelites did occupy it and it was divided up to individuals, each man got his inheritance, but the occupation of it could be lost. A man could end up in debt and have to sell it or forfeit it. It remained his but it was under the control of another until it was redeemed, until a sum was paid and it was set free and returned to his control or until the year of Jubilee came when every portion was returned to its rightful owner. And God's inheritance is like that. We are His possession; we belong to Him. We have been bought with a price. But we have not been fully and completely possessed yet. Sin still dwells in us; still has a claim on our bodies. But there will come a day of redemption, that day Rom. 8:23 talks of, when we are placed fully in the position of sons through the redemption of our bodies. So, as His inheritance, our eyes are fixed on and waiting anxiously for that day when He redeems us and possesses us completely. God does not yet have His treasure completely in hand. But He has done some wonderful things to make sure that He will. Let's talk about:

II. The Stages Of Being Made An Inheritance Three things happened to you that made you God's inheritance. First:

1. you were chosen to become God's inheritance (11) In eternity past before the foundation of the world God selected and chose you in Christ to be part of that treasure composed of a portion of the human race that God would enjoy with Himself forever and ever. Now just imagine:

a. the privilege of selection What a joy to think that God's treasure, the thing He has chosen to be His and enjoy forever is ME! Out of all the wonders of creation, the galaxies of stars and planets, the beautiful hills and mountains, all of the graceful animals, He chose people to be His. The thing He really loves, really wants, is people. And of all the people that have lived, of all the geniuses and kings and generals, of all the beautiful and handsome and talented people the race has ever produced, He chose ME to be His portion! And He did it before I ever existed and knowing everything I would ever do. Hallelujah! What a privilege to be His inheritance! But that inheritance has not yet been made up completely and finally possessed. God hasn't got me all the way yet. I am chosen to be His inheritance, but what is it that makes sure that I will actually BE His inheritance on that day when Jesus comes? It is:

b. the surety of predestination God has determined that it will be so ahead of time. And God has this wonderful thing that none of us have. He makes a decision or a plan and then has the power to make everything work out according to that plan! God has DETERMINED that I am His inheritance, His portion to enjoy and HE WILL HAVE ME, because He works out all things in the universe according to His will. Nothing can escape it! So that was stage one. God CHOSE you in eternity past. Then, there was a time when:

2. you were included in God's inheritance (13a) It was chosen to be true of you before you ever existed in eternity past, but in the working out of that plan there was a time when you were actually and actively included in God's inheritance. And it happened through a three-fold process:

a. the process: First there was:

(1) hearing You heard the word of truth, the Good News of your salvation, that salvation had been already provided for you through Jesus Christ. Then came:

(2) trusting You believed. You trusted what you heard. You said, "It is true and I want it" and trusted Jesus Christ to save you and, in the instant that you trusted, you were included, placed in Christ and then came:

(3) marking God marked you as His own with the seal of the Holy Spirit, signifying that you were included. We'll spend more time on this in a second, but just notice:

b. the time of inclusion: at salvation You were chosen in eternity past to be His inheritance, but your actual inclusion as part of it came to pass the moment you trusted in Christ. You were sealed as His, right then and there. You don't have to wait or hope for it later. It is an accomplished thing right now and that mark, the Holy Spirit, was already applied the moment you believed. Don't you let anybody tell you that you don't have Him if you know you have Christ! You became everything you're ever going to become and got everything you're ever going to get the moment you believed! So, you were chosen and then you were included and then in that same moment:

3. you were sealed to guarantee God's inheritance (13b-14) Today we don't know much about seals. To us a seal is a slimy animal you see at the zoo or what you do to a Zip-loc bag or a letter. But we still have seals of a similar variety to the biblical pattern. A notary public has a legal seal to verify documents. This church has a corporate seal that we use on legal documents to verify them. In those days all men of stature had a seal, a ring with a distinctive carved image on it which could be pressed into clay or wax and give official authority to what it was located on. A seal was used much like our concept of a signature. Now, when God included us in His inheritance, He stamped us with His seal:

a. the identity of our seal: the Holy Spirit The Holy Spirit did not seal us; He Himself is the seal. God marked us in a way that separated us out from all other human beings by placing in us His Holy Spirit. Now why?

b. the purpose of our seal The Holy Spirit was placed in us for many reasons, but in this sense, He is three things:

(1) He is a mark of ownership: God's title Seals are often found on clay jug handles and pots as a mark of ownership. The seal says, "This belongs to so and so". God's placing the Holy Spirit in us says we are His property, that we are His possession; we belong to Him and no one dare claim us or touch us or try to take us out of His hand for we are His. Secondly:

(2) He is a mark of approval: our assurance In 1 Cor. 9:2 Paul says the Corinthians were the seal of his apostleship, the proof that he really was a God-ordained apostle. The presence of the Holy Spirit in our lives is to us a proof-mark that we are His. The fact that the Holy Spirit (Rom. 8:16) bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God is proof to us that we belong to God. The fact that He works through us and empowers us and works His gifts through us and bears His fruit in us is our continuing assurance and proof that we belong to God, that we are indeed His inheritance. And finally:

(3) He is a mark of security: God's guarantee Pilate's seal was placed on Christ's tomb as a mark of security. It could not be opened or altered. It was secure. Compare 4:30. The Holy Spirit is our seal for the day of redemption; He is God's guarantee, not that WE will GET an inheritance as verse 14 seems to read, but that GOD will get HIS INHERITANCE which is US. A guarantee is simply a commitment that says you absolutely will get the merchandise you paid for. Listen, God paid for you and God is going to get you! The Holy Spirit's presence in you guarantees it! You see, the Holy Spirit is actually God Himself and the Bible says He has come into your spirit and literally joined Himself to your spirit so that you are ONE and inseparable. That's what guarantees that God will have you and enjoy you forever! Now, in closing let's consider this. Why would God want us for an inheritance anyway?

III. The Reason For Being Made An Inheritance: Praise (12, 14b) It's simple. It is all for the praise of His glory. God's glory is the awesome splendor of everything that God is and has done. On that day when the veil is lifted and Jesus returns and God's finished, polished possession, His church, is presented to Him, what will be evident is the greatness of His person, His glory. And when His glory is fully revealed, it will result in praise by His creatures. First:

1. we will praise His glory Read the book of Revelation and watch what you're going to do when you get there. The 24 elders fall down and worship and say, "Holy..." The saints all sing a new song unto God. In chapter 19 they sing the Hallelujah chorus to the Lord together. Oh, we'll spend eternity praising His glory which He demonstrated in choosing us and including us and sealing us and then finally redeeming us fully! But it will not only be us:

2. the universe will praise His glory - Rom. 8:18-19 tells us that the whole universe is waiting for that moment when the Sons of God are revealed, when God takes the wraps off His finished inheritance, His most precious possession, and says to the universe, "Here, look at this and see My glory." 2 Thes. 1:7-10 says His is coming on that day to be glorified in his holy people and to be marveled at [IN] all those who have believed. This includes you, because you believed our testimony to you.

Oh, God wants to take you and me and hold us up and display us before a watching universe which will ooh and aah in wonder at God's glory in doing such a thing. My friend, this includes you, if you know Christ. God chose you, included you, and marked you as His. You are a trophy of His grace. You may not look like much right now. I knew an older guy whose hobby was restoring antique cars. He would take what looked like the ugliest piece of junk from the 40's and 50's with rust and dents all over and roll it into his shop. And when he was all done with it, it emerged as a thing of beauty with shining paint and plush upholstery, a joy to the eye, and you would say, "Wow, that's beautiful" without even thinking about it! And he was proud to display it because its beauty told something about who he was. Each car was a trophy of his own ability. You are God's trophy. And when He is done with you in that day, you will shine like no trinket on earth ever did. You will reflect His glory. And the universe will erupt in praise to God for you will display the splendor of God. If those antique cars had feelings and could talk, how wonderful and privileged they would feel to belong to that man and to be the trophies of his work. I cannot even imagine how wonderful and privileged we will feel to be the trophies of God's grace.

EPHESIANS 1-2: WHO YOU ARE IN CHRIST

Your Experience: What You Need To Know 1:15-23

In studying the first 15 verses of chapter 1 we talked about your PRIVILEGES in Christ. Now we're going to cover the text through 2:10 and talk about your EXPERIENCE in Christ. When you came to faith in Jesus, it was not simply an intellectual decision to believe. It was an experience you had in which all kinds of wonderful things occurred both inside you and concerning you. It was kind of like the experience of being born. When you were born, incredible things happened to you. You emerged into a whole new world you had never seen before. You went from living in water to breathing air. You quit taking in nutrients through your navel and started to drink with your mouth. You could see light for the first time and hear sounds clearly. Now, it took years for you to understand that experience, but it happened to you nonetheless. The same is true of your new birth in Christ. It was a tremendous, momentous experience, even more radical than your physical birth, and you are not prepared right away to understand it. With most of us it takes years to get any kind of an in-depth understanding of that experience and to learn to appropriate all that we received through that experience. Now, Paul was a praying man. He prayed for all the churches he had planted and he prayed regularly for the Ephesians. And in verses 15-17 he tells us what he prayed for them and, by extension, for us. You see, Paul recognized that your chief need and mine is not to be healthy or to be happy or even to be busy:

I. You Need To Know Him Better (15-19) The Ephesians were a mature, well-grounded church. They were doctrinally sound and busy working for Christ. They were not unlike us. One would think that what they needed was success in the ministry. Paul says, "No, I pray that you will know Him better! That's what you need!" I don't care who you are, what office you hold in the church, how long you've been saved, or how much Bible education you've had. You and I have one and the same greatest need, no matter what we think we may need: to KNOW HIM BETTER! Paul revealed his own deepest desire and need when he said in Phil. 3:10, ...that I may KNOW Him and the power of His resurrection and the fellowship of His sufferings. And that's what you and I need. Now let me mention:

1. the way you need to know Him (17-18a) First:

a. you need a proper mental understanding of the facts You need God to reveal to you the things about Him and about yourself that you need to know, through His Word and through other people. Much of what we know or think we know about God has been "caught" along the way in bits and pieces from things we've heard people say to us or impressions we've had through the things we've experienced. And not all of those things are right. For instance, you may have been raised in a very legalistic background and have this picture of God as the Heavenly Rulekeeper that you have to please somehow so that He doesn't crack your knuckles with His heavenly ruler. Or you may have been given just the opposite picture, that God is so nice and so loving that He would never punish anybody for anything. It is absolutely vital that you know the truth about who God is and what He is like and what He is doing and He reveals that to you gradually over the years as you read His Word and as you are taught by others who know Him. But you need more than an academic understanding of knowing the facts:

b. you need a deep heart experience of the Person Many years ago I married LuAnn. I didn't know her very well at that time. We had known each other a lot less than I now recommend to all our young couples! However, as a married couple we spent time with each other. We experienced the things that happened to us together and reacted to and with each other. Now we can almost read what the other is thinking at a given time. It's uncanny and yet I'm still getting to know her better; I'm learning things about her even now that I never knew before. And so it is with God. You need to walk with Him and talk with Him in the garden of life and in each event that happens as you run to Him He lets you experience for yourself more of His love, His power, His sovereignty, His heart, or whatever. You need that process to be happening to you. The shame of it is that there are lots of saved people walking around who know that they are saved, but have never really gotten to know their Savior in an experiential way and the result is that they have never grown much, so God cannot use them very much. Now, Paul points out three of:

2. the things you particularly need to know about Him (18b-19a) in order to live this life properly. First, you need to know:

a. the future which He has planned for you, ...the hope to which He has called you. Hope in the Bible is usually a reference to the future that God has planned for us. To many of us and even to me too many times, heaven is sort of a vague thing; my eternal future is kind of a happy, but blurry, ethereal concept. However, there have been a few Christians I have known over the years who talk about heaven as though it is a real place (which it is) and about their new body as something they're really going to have (which they are) and about their Savior as Someone they're really going to see (which they are). When they faced death, it was not with fear, but with certainty and anticipation. Friend, you need that and I need that! We need to know Him in such an in-depth way that He becomes more real to us than the people we see each day, that spiritual things become more real to us than the house we live in and the job we have now. Oh, if you really knew the hope to which He has called you, you would live so much differently; so many of the things that take your time and attention would take second place to things that really matter. Then in order to live properly you must know:

b. the value which He has placed on you, ...the riches of His GLORIOUS inheritance in the saints. That's what we talked about when we were dealing with your privileges. Oh, you are His riches, His inheritance, His precious treasure. You and others like you who believe are the thing that He values most in the entire universe, the thing on which He has set His heart. And everything in His entire plan for the whole world has always been and is now pointed at one goal, to create through faith a people for His own possession, to bring many, many sons and daughters to glory with Him forever. That is God's value system and you need to understand that. Then thirdly, you must know:

c. the power which He has placed in you, the mighty resource which He has made available to you to live the life He has called you to. That's the subject Paul goes on to talk about in verses 19-22 and that's what I'd like to spend the rest of our time this morning talking to you about:

II. You Need To Know His Power (19-22) Understanding, experiencing, and appropriating the power of God is the very foundation of the true Christian life. Now, in verse 19 we have:

1. the description of that power (19) It's not so obvious in English, but in the Greek Paul uses in this verse every word at his disposal for power. He says:

a. it is a superior power (uperballon megeqos) It "throws further in greatness" than any other. It is far above and beyond any other power; no other power in the universe, no physical power, no material energy, no spiritual force, not even Satan, has anything close to it. It is omnipotent power. Secondly:

b. it is a capable power (dunamis) This is the Greek from which we get "dynamite". It means to have inherent ability, to be able. God's power means that He's able. We sing it, don't we? "He's able, He's able, I know He's able..." Compare 3:20. God is able to do immeasurably more than all we can ask or imagine! Then:

c. it is an effective power (energe) That's energy. Energy is power at work doing things, having an effect, accomplishing things. Phil. 2:13 says, for it is God who works in you to will and to act according to his good purpose. God's power is at work in you, it gives you thoughts and actions. It is involved and at work in every area of your life. It works in your behalf. Fourth:

d. it is a mighty power (iscus) This word means strong and speaks of sheer overwhelming strength. He is the Mighty God! No one can compare to Him for sheer might. Here it's an adjective modifying the next word:

e. it is a dominating power (kratos) This is power which dominates, which controls things. It is sovereign power, power which takes charge.

Words can't do it justice. Power like God's can't be just talked about and described; it must be experienced, so God gave to us once and for all:

2. the demonstration of that power (19b-22) in Jesus Christ. What did God do by His mighty power? Well, first:

a. He raised Christ from the dead He took a dead man who had lain in the tomb until the third day and made Him live again. There is no miracle in the natural realm which strikes us like this one. In all our experience there is one thing we are sure of, a corpse will not get up. We can take life away, but try as hard as we can, we cannot give life once it is gone. Compare Acts 2:22-24, 31. God's power did that! Yet not only did He raise Christ by His power, but:

b. He seated Christ at His right hand He transformed and glorified Him and caused Him to ascend to heaven and sat Him down on the throne at His right hand! And that, my friend is not simply a choice seat, it is a place of authority, of equality with the Father. So, by His power:

c. He exalted Christ above all angelic authorities, above all the rulers of earth, above all the forces which exert themselves on this world, above every name that you can name, past, present, and future. He is set over every other being in this universe and there is not a thing they can do about it because:

d. He subjected all things to Christ He put everything under His feet and made Him Lord. That means everything, not the least of which is the church, you and I, of which He is the head. Think of it. A dead man, a lifeless corpse, yet God has placed Him in control of every being and object in this universe. That is the power of God. There is no power to match it! There is none like it. But go back to the beginning of verse 19 and notice:

3. the direction of that power That same power that was demonstrated in Christ is active in YOU! It is directed toward YOU! It has already worked in you:

a. it saved you from your past When you came to Christ, He did it all over again. He made a dead man live. That's what 2:5 says, He made you alive when you were dead. By His power, He once more brought forth life out of death -- inside of you. And that's what we'll talk about in the next messages. But that mighty power not only saved you in the past:

b. it supplies your present right now. It is inside you in the person of God the Holy Spirit to deliver you from the POWER of sin, to empower you to live the holy, righteous, pure life God wants you to live. It is in you to live the life God intends for you, whatever that may be. But not only that:

c. it secures your future That power will last into the ages to come. It has already seated you with Christ spiritually and it will see that your body gets there and catches up with it! The same mighty power which saved you and supplies you also secures you forever.

And that, my friend, is the entire key to the Christian life that you need to know. You need to understand and experience and appropriate that mighty power of God in your life right now, today, so that you live by His power and not your own. The Christian life is a supernatural life and it is lived by supernatural means. It is lived by the Divine Power of Almighty God flowing through you as you yield yourself and ask for it moment by moment. And it is also lived by seeing with the eyes of your heart the truth of God rather than looking at the world around you. I heard a pilot who was also a Bible teacher share this illustration one time. There are two ways to fly. You can fly by sight, which is how everybody starts out. You line yourself up by looking at the horizon and at the landmarks which you can see. But your flying is limited by your visibility. But there is another way to fly. You can learn to fly by instruments. And then you can fly in the darkest night or the thickest fog. There are times when you may feel like you're upside down or standing on one wing or like the right way to go is 180 degrees opposite. Yet your instruments tell you the way to go, the way to hold the plane and you trust your instruments and do what they tell you and the power of the plane carries you safely home. However, if you enter that storm and try to do it on your own, by your own understanding and your own ability rather than trusting the instruments and the power of the plane, you'll crash. Just so, there are two ways to live the Christian life. You can live it by sight, make the best estimate in your own knowledge of the way to go and the thing to do. And you might be OK while the weather's clear. But to make it through the storms you've got to really KNOW the Master and trust Him and do what He says and trust His power to get you through. Otherwise, you're in for a real crash. Paul's chief desire was to know Him and know His power. He knew the right way to fly. How are you flying?

Your Experience: What You Used To Be 2:1-3

Last week I told you that it often takes a long time for a believer to understand and appropriate what happened to him when he came to Christ. That's what we're going to spend the next couple of messages on. First of all, because coming to Christ was an experience that transformed your life, it is utterly impossible to understand what you are now, without understanding what you used to be! Now, all of us probably have a picture that we have painted for ourselves in our minds of what we were like before we were saved. Some of us who have had rather dramatic conversions and colorful pasts have a pretty good idea of how bad we were. We sold drugs, we drank, we cursed, we stole, and did all sorts of sordid things.. We saw a dramatic change in ourselves. However, many more of us had fairly moral, placid pasts. We don't see ourselves as having been "bad" people; we were nice people. We were simply mistakenly trusting in the wrong thing to save us. Indeed, a good many of us were children when we accepted Christ and did not really have any "past" to speak of, so our picture is that we were just cute little kids and fortunately our Christian parents led us to Christ before we could "fall into sin" very far. I don't know what your picture of your own past is, but I'd like to paint another one for you today, the one the Bible paints. I'll tell you up front it's not very pretty and it may be totally unlike the one you've got in your head. It may even make some of you mad. But Eph. 2: 1-3 is the portrait God has carefully painted for you to hang on the wall of your mind to remember what you were like. First of all, He describes for you:

I. The State You Were In: DEAD (1) Most of us read this and think it means that "you used to sin more back then". Let me shock you. You were born dead. Every last one of us is a stillborn child. You say, "What do you mean? I was alive!" God says you were dead. Now, what's death? Compare 4:18.

1. the definition of death is separation from the life of God You see, God is life. Christ is life. There is no genuine, eternal, forever life apart from Him. And you were born without Him! And not just without Him, but separated from Him. Babies are not like the new computer you buy that come with all the software you need pre-installed inside. You didn't come with God and His life installed inside you. You were separated and cut off from the presence and life of God because sin was inside you. David said in Ps. 51:5, "I was sinful at birth, sinful from the time my mother conceived me!" And the sin principle that was in you, that was passed to you from your parents, cut you off from the life and presence of God. You were dead, but not in body. Rather:

2. the realm of death was your spirit You are (at least in my understanding) a three part being. You have a body, a soul (mind, will, emotions), and a spirit. The spirit is that internal part of you that is designed to be the place that relates to God, where God is meant to dwell. It is the core of who you really are, your nature. And, instead of being born with God and His life dwelling there, sin was there; evil was present and God was not. You were spiritually cut off from His life. Now ask me to prove it. Alright:

3. the evidence of death was transgressions and sins Notice the plurals; it means acts of sin. If you were born with spiritual life inside you, before you were able to understand and make conscious choices, you would have lived out of your nature. You would have been loving, kind, gentle, unselfish, sinless. But you were not born like that, were you? Oh, you were cute, but almost as soon as you could act, you were demanding and selfish; you hit other kids and took things from them. You demanded your own way and threw tantrums and had to be TAUGHT to do things that were right, because by nature you did things that were wrong. That's because you were dead inside! You did not become a sinner because you sinned; you sinned because you were already a sinner; you had a nature of sin inside. Now just in case you're worried about babies or children that die, I believe the Bible teaches that God in His mercy takes them to Himself, that He loves little children and that they belong to His kingdom. However, that's not because they are good. It's because they have not yet been made accountable and responsible for their actions.

So, that's the way you were born: dead. What a baby picture, huh! And you stayed that way, no matter how nicely you were trained to behave, until the moment you received Christ and He put His life in you. Now let's talk about:

II. The Way You Lived: WRONG Whether you were 5 or 15 or 50, before you were saved, you lived in slavery. Rom. 6:17 says clearly, You used to be slaves to sin! You were not a puppet, exactly, but you were a controlled person, a person being controlled by forces inside and outside himself, driven to do things that were wrong and sinful and ungodly. You were basically controlled in three ways. First of all:

1. you were controlled by the world (2a) There's a good Christian word. Christians have been castigating "the world" for years. But what is it?

a. what the world is: the place/time environment you live in The Greek here is a very peculiar expression, literally, the age (era) of this world. You were born at a particular time in history in a particular place in a particular country in a particular culture, to a particular family with a particular background in a particular neighborhood. When you come into this world there is an ordered environmental system all about you which exerts its force upon you from the earliest part of life until the day you die. Before you are saved it dominates and controls you.

b. how it controlled you: you followed its ways You walked on the paths that system had laid out for you. You dressed in the manner it laid out. That's why you wear pants today instead of a kilt, men. You cut your hair according to its patterns. You listened to its music. You were inoculated with its general beliefs and patterns of thought, with its values and customs. And those things were ingrained in you to a great extent, even if you grew up in a Christian home which sheltered you from some of its effects. Unfortunately, as we'll see in a minute, the one who is controlling the thought patterns and systems of the world is Satan. So, the greater majority of the paths that have been laid out for you to walk in by the forces of your environment are self-centered, self-serving, and self-gratifying; they are sinful and opposed to God. But let me ask you this, when you walk through thick brush, where do you walk? Do you make your own path or go down the trails already there? You follow the paths, don't you, because there are too many obstacles to making your own; being different is too hard. And to top it off, inside you there are forces which make you WANT to go down those paths, as we'll see shortly. But at any rate, you were controlled by your particular world and then:

2. you were controlled by the devil (2b) It sounds terrible, doesn't it? We don't like to think of ourselves that way. But look at:

a. who the devil is: the ruler of your environment He is the prince with the authority over the air, that is, the surface of the earth, the world of men. He is called elsewhere the "prince of this world" and the "god of this world". He is the one controlling that world in which you live. What do I mean? Well, name me a society anywhere on the face of the earth that is an Israel, a society where God is in charge, where He sets the paths and the whole culture is dedicated to following Him. It's been tried for a few fleeting moments by little enclaves of Christians here and there, but basically there has never been one. The entire world has always been dominated by Satan and has followed paths that he has laid out. Now, his tactics are different at different places and times. Multiplied millions in Asia have been enslaved for centuries following false paths of religion that he has laid down in Hinduism, Buddhism, and more. Greek and Roman culture were led down a path of pleasure-seeking idolatry, which the USA seems to be bent on repeating. The devil has been allowed control over the systems of this world and he has ordered them in opposition to God. Now let's get personal and talk about:

b. how he controlled you First, the text says he was not only at work in the world around you to keep the gospel from getting to you, but:

(1) he worked in you You were one of those called "the disobedient" and he was at work inside you. How? Well, 2 Cor. 4:4 says he blinded your mind to the gospel. He worked in your mind to keep you from understanding spiritual things, from understanding God, from understanding your own condition. If God in His mercy hadn't reached in and turned on the light, things were so dark in there that you never would have seen! Think of how many years some of you labored trying to please God through religiosity and good works, rather than trusting in Christ. Satan blinded your mind; he worked in you. And then also:

(2) he worked on you For instance, Heb. 2:14-15 says he made you afraid. He was able to control you through the fear of death. He was able to hold you in slavery, to get you to do what he wanted through fear, particularly through the fear of dying. He could get you to believe wrong things, to worship wrongly, to get involved in all kinds of self-centered, self-preserving things that are ultimately rooted in the fear of dying. He uses many other means as well. One obvious means would be temptation. He knows your inner desires and weaknesses and used them to lure you to sin, much like you can call the horses into the barn by rattling the feed can. 2 Tim. 2:26 says unsaved people become captives of Satan at his will (KJV) or to do his will (NIV).

So, on many occasions in your life, you sinned; you did wrong, consciously or unconsciously simply because Satan was driving you to it and you weren't even aware of it. Then thirdly:

3. you were controlled by the flesh (3a) The words sinful nature in the NIV are always a not-so-good translation of the Greek word flesh. Inside you, there was a force controlling and manipulating you in the wrong direction. Now let me give you a simple definition of:

a. what the flesh is: your mind and body indwelt by sin I told you earlier that you have a spirit, a soul (mind, will, emotions), and a body. Another way to view the same thing is to say that you have a spirit and you have flesh, flesh being everything else that is not the spirit. The flesh is your mind, it is your emotions, it is your body with its drives and desires. Think of it as your self, the person you were apart from God. Now, the trouble is that your flesh is indwelt by and thoroughly saturated with the principle or force of sin. It is a spiritual force exerted on your being just like gravity is a natural force exerted on your body. Your flesh is not in itself evil, but it is indwelt by sin. And even now that you are saved, you still have it. You now have a new spirit, but still have flesh indwelt by sin. Before you were saved, this flesh controlled you and here's:

b. how it controlled you: by producing wrong ways to meet your needs You were born with a set of basic needs, primarily the need for love and acceptance. God created you with those needs so that He could fill them. But since you were born without Him, the sin principle in you began to connive all kinds of ways for you to get those needs met. You began to experiment and see how you could get those needs met and sin provided all kinds of creative solutions.

(1) it produced wrong (selfish) desires For instance, you could feel acceptance and worth by exercising power over others and dominating or controlling them. You could find it through having money and things and possessions, through having an image and a reputation and you name it. You could find the love you needed through performing right for people and doing what they wanted. Or if you didn't get much of it at home, you might try to find it through illicit sexual relations. The flesh produced in you from moment one all kinds of wrong and selfish ways of meeting your own needs, which then, as they were used time and again, became ingrained patterns of living and:

(2) it produced wrong (selfish) patterns of thought along with those desires. You developed wrong ways of looking at yourself and other people, for instance, seeing yourself as more important and treating others as objects to be used to serve your purposes, or being critical of others to make yourself feel better and meet your need for acceptance. It produced wrong views of yourself, as either inferior or superior, worthless or wonderful, and all of the above without God!

To think in practical terms, your flesh became your old ways, the ways you used to live because the power of sin in you dominated your life and built habit patterns for surviving and meeting your needs all by yourself without God. So, there you were, spiritually dead at the very core of your being, cut off from the very life of God, living a life where you were being controlled and driven by the world around you, by the devil manipulating you from within and without, and with flesh inside you filling you with desires to serve yourself rather than God. Theologians have a word to describe that. They say you were totally DEPRAVED, completely incapable of doing anything about the sin which completely engulfed you. Now, where we get into trouble is by comparing ourself with others. Nobody is trying to tell you that you were as bad as you could possibly have been or that nothing you ever did was nice or kind and no thought you ever had was positive. The degrees to which each of these things controlled us and the paths into which they led us are as varied as the number of persons in the room. But you see, God is not interested in talking about types and levels of sin, any more than you would be interested in talking about levels of disgustingness and classifications of garbage. Garbage is garbage and sin is sin and people outside of Christ are people outside of Christ. To one degree or another, in one variety or another, they are all the same, dead in spirit, living wrongly because they are without Christ, and here's:

III. The Destiny You Were Headed For: WRATH (3b) The first part of the verse already said that you were among them, the disobedient. You were one of them. Now look what 5:6 says:

1. God's eternal wrath comes upon the disobedient You're talking about all the wrath of God poured out upon sin. Your future contained a one-way trip to a black pit of fire where you would cry out in agony forever and ever. You're talking about eternal death. That wasn't somebody else; that was you. And notice what it says:

2. it was your destiny by nature - John 3:18, 36 Anybody who does not believe is ALREADY condemned. You have to come to Christ to get UN-condemned. The wrath of God REMAINS on all those who reject Christ. They're already under it. It was your natural destiny because of who you were!

And that, my friend, whether you like it or not, whether you agree with it or not, is the picture that God has painted of you. It's not very pretty. In fact, it is downright horrible. But in verse 4 come the two most wonderful words someone like you would ever want to hear: But God...! God loved us and God did something about us! He saved us, He rescued us, He delivered us from everything that we used to be and made us something new. The story is told of a famous blacksmith of medieval times who was taken prisoner and confined in a dungeon. He began to examine the chain that bound him. It had always been his boast that no one could break a chain that he had forged. So he began to examine the chain in order to discover some flaw that might make it easier to break it. As he turned it carefully in his hands, his countenance fell and he let the chain drop in despair. For there on the link were the marks, the initials of his own workmanship. That's how it was with us. We were bound with a chain we couldn't break. We had a nature we couldn't get rid of and we forged a life of actions that we could neither stop nor erase. And the weight of that chain was pulling us slowly into the pit forever. Today I just want you to sense the despair and hopelessness of that blacksmith, but next week I want you to see how God, the heavenly Blacksmith reached down and cut that chain completely off and set you free! Hallelujah!

EPHESIANS 1-2: Who You Are In Christ

Your Experience: What Happened To You 2:4-7

Last week I painted for you a picture of who you were without Christ from verses 1-3. If you remember, I told you that you were spiritually dead, that you lived a life of slavery, being controlled by the habit patterns of the world around you, by Satan himself, and by the self-serving desires generated by your flesh, and that, as far as eternity is concerned, you were an object of God's wrath, headed for hell. That was a sad but necessary first step in understanding who you are in Christ. Did you ever see one of those diet or exercise program (or hair treatment) commercials where they have before and after pictures? You can only appreciate the "after" picture when you put it beside the "before" picture. Last time I painted your ugly "before" picture. Today in verses 4-7 I want to paint your lovely "after" picture. I want to help you understand:

I. What God Did To You: He SAVED You! in every way. He radically changed you, transformed you, in every sense. He changed your state of being, your way of living, and your eternal destiny all in one fell swoop! To begin with:

1. He gave you a new state of being: ...He made us alive with Christ (5) The KJV had a good old-fashioned word, quicken. It means to give life to something dead. The Greek word means to give life together with. When you gave your heart to Christ, God placed you IN Christ, He gave you His life so that what happened to Him happened to you. God made Christ alive and God made YOU alive.

a. the meaning of this new state Now remember:

(1) your former state: dead, which means separated from the life of God (4:18) Your spirit, the core part of you, made as a place for God to dwell, was instead, full of sin and therefore you were cut off, separated from the life of God. But at that moment of salvation, you entered:

(2) your current state: alive, which means joined to the life of God - Rom. 8:10 Your body still has sin dwelling in it, but your spirit became alive. And here's how it happened:

b. the method by which He gave you life It was a radical operation, the spiritual equivalent of a heart transplant:

(1) Christ replaced your old dead spirit with a new one - Col. 2:11 He circumcised your heart. What does that mean? He cut off that old dead sinful spirit and threw it away. He killed it. You died with Christ and in its place, He created a brand new one. If anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation. And Eph. 4:24 tells us what this new spirit you have is like. It is just like God. It is righteous. It is holy. It is pure. It loves God. It loves to do right. It loves everything that is good and holy and just and hates evil. Now, how did He make this "new you".

(2) Christ entered you and joined His spirit to yours - 1 John 5:11-12 Christ is life. God gives you His eternal everlasting life in a Person, the Person of His Son. He gives you His life by coming and actually dwelling inside you and joining Himself to you. Rom. 8:11 says His Spirit is joined to yours and He gives life to your old mortal dying body by putting His life in your spirit.

So, begin to get a new picture of yourself. It's like an engine transplant in an old beat-up worn-out car. It had an engine that couldn't run, that was broken and had failed. The parts in it were no good. But the mechanic took it out and put a brand new one inside that purrs like a kitten, perfect. That's you. But that's not all:

2. He gave you a new way of living: ...He raised us with Christ (6a) Now, when it says raised, Paul's not talking about the ascension, about being raised up to heaven. The Greek word is the word for resurrection of the dead.

Compare Col. 2:12. And again it is a special verb that means "to raise from the dead together with", that is, to be co-resurrected with Christ. You are now in Christ, so when God made Christ alive, He made you alive; when He raised Christ to a new resurrection life, He raised you to the same:

a. the meaning of your co-resurrection ...we live a new life - Rom. 6:4 The KJV is more literal, "that we should walk in newness of life", that is, that our walk, our habits of life, our way of living should be brand new. Being made alive dealt with your spirit. Being raised deals with the way you live.

b. your method for living Now look back to verses 2-3 and see:

(1) the former way: controlled by the world, Satan, and the flesh You lived in slavery. You were controlled. You didn't have God so you looked for ways to get your needs met on your own. The world around you offered you some and Satan kept you from understanding that God wanted to meet all your needs and offered you some ways of his own. And the sin which dwelt in your body kept constantly generating new ways to get your needs met through wrong desires. You were, unwittingly, all the time being pushed and controlled by all these forces. But now you have been raised with Christ. You have a brand-new spirit. You are free! And so, you live:

(2) the new way: controlled by God Instead of the power of sin being the controlling factor in your life, you now have the very power of Almighty God living inside you, dwelling in your spirit in the person of the Holy Spirit. Plus, your mind has been unblinded, you can see. Your will has been freed; you can choose. And so:

(a) you submit to the control of the Spirit - Gal. 5:16, 25 Keep in step with is literally walk in. We live, not out of our own resources, but depending on the power of the mighty Spirit of God to live through us. We enter every situation saying, "Spirit, control me, speak through me, use me, YOU DO IT!" So that's a new way to live. When you react to a situation, instead of grabbing the wrong answers that the world or your flesh throw out to you, you see them for what they are and say, "I choose to let the Spirit of the living God control me!" And He does and you reject the sinful way of reacting and do it God's way! So, by your will you choose to yield yourself to God and then:

(b) you set your mind on heavenly things - Col. 3:1-3 Literally, it says, set your mind... Raised here is our word "co-resurrected" again. You've been raised to a new life, the kind Christ has. Now picture Him seated in heaven. You're seated there with Him anyway. Your life is hidden with Christ in God. Look around you at the splendor and glory of heaven; feel the love and acceptance of your Father wrapping His arm around you and saying "I love you." And now look down at the world and at your life from there and see your situation and your problems. They look different, don't they! The things that matter so much right now don't matter so much, do they? And things that are not very important right now are much more important than they seem here. What we just did is called setting your mind, fixing it on heavenly things. It is choosing to think and to see from God's perspective. And when your mind is set and your will is submitted, you will live out the paths that God has laid out for you, won't you?!

So, He made you alive by giving you a new spirit and He gave you a new way to live through the power of the indwelling Holy Spirit. But that's not all:

3. He gave you a new destiny: ...He seated us with Christ (6b-7) Now I know this one is a little hard to grasp, but if what happened to Christ happened to you and if His life is actually your life, then you are already seated right there on Heaven's throne with Him and in Him. Your spirit is joined to His, One, inseparable. His spirit is in heaven and so is yours in its connection with Him. What does that mean?

a. you have intimacy: you are already with Christ You don't have to wait to be with Christ; you are already with Him and He is with you. Your former destiny was to be separated from Him eternally and punished by His Wrath. Now your destiny is never to be separated from Him. You're joined, so completely that you are already with Him now. And it also means:

b. you have security: you are there now and for the ages to come For as long as Christ is seated there, you'll be there. You're already there and you'll be there through all the ages with Him! Nothing can separate you from His love, not a thing, nothing you say, nothing you do, not Satan, not the world, not the flesh, NOTHING! You are secure!

That's what God did for you in saving you! He changed your nature, your life, and your future, all in an instant of time! Look at your "after picture". You have now been given God's own nature, supplied with His own power to live His way and been secured to Him forever. You are saved from your condition, your way of life, and your destiny, all at once and instantly. Now why on earth did God do that for you? Why would God take you, all dead and enslaved and under His wrath and save you and make you His glorious child?

II. Why He Did It Paul gives us two reasons:

1. He loves you with a great love (4) An agape love, a self-sacrificing, absolutely committed, unconditional love.

a. it is a compassionate love: mercy Mercy is compassion on one who is in trouble and unable to help themselves. And God is rich in it. He knew you were dead and dominated and bound for hell. He knew you were as helpless as a man going down over a waterfall trying to swim up. And He cared about you! His rich mercy said, "I'm going to save that one." But what's even better is that:

b. it is an unmerited love: grace (5b,7) It's not just that we were helpless; we were sinful. There was sin in our hearts, sin in our lives, and sin in our future. Everything about us was diametrically opposed to God. We were doing it OUR way! But it was God's grace that loved us anyway. He is RICH in grace, grace that said, "I love that unlovely one; I'll save that unsavable one". You say, "But why? Why did He in His grace have mercy on me and love me?" I don't know. What is it that makes one person genuinely love another person? Is it the things they do? Is it the way they look or act? No, I hope not. True love is a one-sided thing; it demands nothing in return and doesn't love in order to get love back. It loves because it loves. I don't know why He loves you, but He loves you and that's all that matters. Bask in it. Understand it. Enjoy it! And know this:

2. He plans for you a great purpose: to display His grace eternally (7) For all the ages to come God is going to display you, His child, to whoever and whatever He creates, to whoever and whatever exists, and say, "Look at this one. I took a dead, dominated, hell-bound wretch and transformed him into this, My child, like Me in spirit, in mind, and in body. This is the trophy of My grace."

Oh, let that picture sink in, my friend, as you listen to this poem which describes the new you, the you which you are right now:

*Child of the eternal Father,
Bride of the eternal Son,
Dwelling place of God the Spirit, Thus with Christ forever one.*

*Dowered with joy beyond the angels, Nearest to the throne;
They the ministers attending

*Granted all my heart's petitions,
All things made my own;
Feared by all the powers of evil, Fearing God alone.*

*Walking with the Lord of glory,
In the courts divine,
Queen within the royal palace,
Christ forever mine!*

*Say, poor worldling, can it be
That my heart should envy thee?*

EPHESIANS 1-2: Who You Are In Christ

Your Experience: How It Happened To You 2:8-10

I spent the last two messages painting pictures for you, "before and after" pictures. From verses 1-3 we saw God's picture of you as you were before you were saved, spiritually dead, living in slavery, and bound for hell. Then from verses 4-7 we saw God's picture of you as you are now, spiritually alive with a brand-new spirit, living a brand-new way by the indwelling Holy Spirit and already seated with Christ in heaven. Today I'd like to paint another picture for you, God's picture of how you got that way, how this experience of salvation happened to you. You probably have a picture of it in your mind already. For some of you that picture is one of a little child tearfully asking Jesus into their heart and the joyous hugs of Mom and Dad. For others, you remember years of struggling and searching, maybe floundering deep in sin and finally running across somebody who told you about the Savior and the tears of joy as you sensed that your sins were forgiven. Now, those pictures are fine and I wouldn't in any sense want to discourage those fond memories. But I'd like to add to them. When you understand what the Bible says about how you came to be saved and how God views your salvation, it will enhance your appreciation of it so much the more! However, before we get to the heavenly picture, let's keep our feet on the ground and talk about:

I. The Earthly Mechanics Of Salvation (8-9) These are verses I memorized at age 15 before I ever got saved. They probably helped me to understand the fact that I needed to trust in Christ and stop trusting in my own being good to save me. And the same is probably true for many of you. However, though God uses these verses like that, they were never written to unbelievers to bring them to Christ. They were written to believers like you to help them understand the process by which they have already been saved. There are two key concepts that you must understand:

1. it is by grace, which means that the source of your salvation is God The prepositions here are extremely important. And I want to belabor that point. There actually is no preposition in the first phrase, just a dative case. It literally says For of grace... Then look ahead to the phrase not from yourselves. The word from is the Greek ἐξ which means out of. Verse 9 is the same, not out of works. Paul's talking about the source of your salvation, where it comes from, the well from which it is drawn. Your salvation is completely and entirely from the grace of God. Now notice he says:

a. it is not the result of anything you do (of works) It did not result from your own energy, from anything you have done. As we saw when we looked at the "old you", there was nothing you could do to save yourself. You sit here today as a saved person not for one single thing you ever did in your life. It was not because you were nice or because you were religious but misguided. It was not because you sought God. God drew you! Nothing you did could change your dead spirit; nothing you did could change your eternal destiny. God is the agent who changed it. Further:

b. it is not the result of anything in you (of yourselves) It did not result from your nature. We looked at that; it was dead, utterly cut off from and opposed to God. It did not happen because you were nice or had a sensitive conscience or even had any glimmer of hope for improvement. Being saved resulted from nothing that was in you. I think of what the Lord told Israel in Deut. 7:6-7. What's He saying is that there was nothing in you, nothing about you, absolutely no merit for this wonderful salvation on your part. Rather:

c. it is a present from God (gift of God) The dictionary says a gift is something freely given by one person to another for his benefit. It is not given out of any sense of obligation. There was absolutely nothing in you or about you that compelled God in any degree to save you. It was His gift. He handed it to you and said, "Here, it's yours; I choose to love you!" You didn't "find" God; He reached down into the murky darkness of your life and claimed you as His own. And that's the neat part. There was nothing about me likeable, nothing about me savable. But God loved me and saved me and made me His child anyway! I didn't work to get it and I don't have to work to keep it. It is God's free choice to love and save me and it is eternal! Hallelujah! That's how God wanted it, so:

d. you have nothing to glory in (boast) There is nothing in you or about you that you can glory in. Nothing in you or about you that is one whit better than any other human being. Compare 1 Cor. 26-31. It is of Him that you are in Christ Jesus and Christ Jesus has become to you everything you were not! Nobody can ever stand before God and glory in anything about themselves, not even their achievements as Christians. The only boast, the only thing we can glory in, is Jesus and of Him I'll boast forever! Jer. 9:23-24 puts it like this, This is what the LORD says: "Let not the wise man boast of his wisdom or the strong man boast of his strength or the rich man boast of his riches, but let him who boasts boast about this: that he understands and knows me, that I am the LORD, who exercises kindness, justice and righteousness on earth, for in these I delight," declares the LORD. You see, Jesus is everything and He saved me. It's all of Him. Now here's the second key concept:

2. it is through faith, which means that you receive your salvation by faith in Him Faith is the vehicle through which you received God's present of salvation. Now let me make a statement that may shock someone: Faith does not save you; God saves you. Faith is not a work. It is not something you did to get God to save you. Faith was your response when you understood the work Christ had already done for you. Perhaps it will help to talk for a moment about:

a. what faith is not First:

(1) it is not intellectual assent to facts It is not simply knowing and understanding the fact that God exists or that Jesus came and died on the cross for your sins. Yet that is as far as many people's faith gets. Most simply believe there is a God. The Bible says demons believe in God and tremble. They have a faith of sorts, but not the kind the Bible talks about. You see, the object of faith is not a thing. It is not a fact or a doctrine or a dogma. It is a person. Most of us believed the truths of the Bible for years before we had any genuine faith. And:

(2) it is not turning to God for assistance It is not asking God for some kind of temporary help and believing He will help you. Faith is not evidenced by the fact that you pray to get well when you're sick or for help when you're in trouble. Lots of people do that.

b. what faith is: complete transfer of dependence from self to Christ You see, it's not what you know or what kind of help you want, that saves you:

(1) we are saved by depending on Him as the source of eternal life Believing is depending, trusting. Salvation was provided for you before the world began, before you ever existed. When you simply recognized that and depended on that and quit depending on yourself in any way, Christ came in and changed you instantly. It wasn't when you raised a hand, when you went forward, or when you prayed a prayer. It was the moment you depended on Jesus Christ completely. Faith was the response of your will choosing to accept the truth of what Jesus did at the cross and depending on Him completely as the source of your eternal life. Now, there are a lot of Christians sitting in a lot of churches that don't understand that. They think evangelism is getting people to pray the sinner's prayer and that's why the "converts" don't last. They were told, in essence, "Do this and you'll be saved." But faith is not doing; faith is depending! You didn't do anything; you simply chose to depend on Someone to do it for you! Now catch the implication of this:

(2) we live by depending on Him as the source of daily life The new way of living that God gave to you is a life of faith, not trying to believe that God can do certain things, but simply depending on God through His indwelling Holy Spirit as the source of your daily living. It is depending on God to cook your eggs, depending on God to drive your car, depending on God to do your job, to parent your children, to love your spouse, to witness to the unsaved, and so on. It is depending on Him completely for everything, putting yourself in His hands, and then marching ahead in obedience, leaving the results completely to Him. Just like with salvation, you simply choose moment by moment who you're going to depend on, yourself or Christ, as the source of the actions and the reactions and the feelings you have.

Now, having understood these earthly concepts, let's take a trip up to heaven for a moment and see from God's perspective:

II. The Heavenly View Of Salvation (10), the picture as God sees it. Here's a picture that will change the way you live. It begins with a tremendous truth:

1. you are God's masterpiece The word workmanship literally means a masterpiece. Every skilled craftsman, at least in olden times, had a masterpiece, a work that displayed the best of his skill. Every painter had his greatest painting, every composer his magnum opus, his greatest single work which displayed the depth of his skill. And God has His. Compare Rom. 1:20. What has been made is literally "from the masterpiece." The entire creation is God's masterpiece, His fine work which displays His glory as a craftsman to anyone with eyes. If you find a fine gold watch on the ground, it immediately tells you something about the nature of the jeweler who made it. The creation is God's masterpiece to declare certain things about God, His eternal power and divine nature. Oh, the wonder and the splendor of the natural universe. Yet God has another, an even greater masterpiece:

2. He created you in Christ Jesus And I'm not talking here about your physical creation, which was amazing enough as Ps. 139 declares. I'm talking about the new creation God has made inside you, the new spirit which is righteous, pure, and holy, made just like God. You are His masterpiece, His finest work, the work that displays the most of Himself and His nature and His glory! Like we saw last week, when God wants to display to all the universe His glory and grace, He is not going to hold up the creation, He's not going to hold up Mt. Everest in its height and beauty or the Nile in all its power or the Grand Canyon in its divinely carved depths. He will hold up you and I and say, "This is my masterpiece, the thing that most clearly displays my grace and glory!" And when He created you:

3. He prepared in advance a path of good works for you to walk in For us to do is literally for us to walk in. God, in creating you in Jesus Christ, laid out beforehand a path of good works which He wanted to accomplish through your life, a trail of things He wanted to do through you and with you that is part of His grand plan for the Church of Jesus Christ. Now, living out that path, however, involves choices of your own will. You are not a puppet. You have to choose to cooperate with God by allowing Him to live out that path through you. The problem, of course, is that when you are saved, God doesn't hand you a manual that outlines every step of every day of the rest of your life for you. You have to recognize the path He has laid out beforehand. Now how do you do that? In two ways:

a. the character of that path is revealed to you in Scripture That's what chapters 4-6 are all about. God's path will always be holy, pure, honest, righteous, kind, loving, and so on. So, in many cases, knowing what God wants you to do is simply choosing the option that is in line with His character and yours. When you walk by the man who's been robbed and left for dead in a ditch, you don't have to sit and weigh out whether God's path is for you to help him! Living and making choices according to the principles of God's Word is always part of that path of good works but:

b. the specific steps in that path are directed by the Spirit They are only found by specifically submitting yourself to the control of the Holy Spirit each day, the Spirit of Himself, whom God has placed in you to guide you step by step. And as you place yourself in His hands and give Him freedom to live through you, then He orchestrates and directs the choices you make, so that indeed you do live the life God has planned out for you. Now let me emphasize that:

4. He created you in Christ Jesus to live out that path through you by faith He did not create you and lay out a path for you and say, "Go do it, go live it, go walk in it." He created you in Christ Jesus to live out that path of things He wanted to accomplish in your life by Him doing the living, not you! It is to be lived by you depending on Him absolutely and completely, exercising complete faith, complete trust, leaning on Him to accomplish that path. And frankly, that's the only way you can! You can't go about accomplishing the will of God in your own strength. It's not just difficult; it's impossible! You can only do it by faith, by allowing Jesus Christ to live it through you. Gal. 2:20, I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live. Yet not I but Christ lives in me. And the life I now live in the flesh, I live by FAITH in [by depending on] the Son of God who loved me...!

Oh, do you see the picture? God created you a masterpiece in Christ Jesus and laid out a master plan which He wanted to accomplish through you, a plan of truly good works, the actual works of God. You see, none of it has its source in you, not being saved, not living the life, not ending up in eternal glory. It is all of God and it is all by simply depending on Jesus Christ alone! A father sent a child from a woodland camp to carry a letter to the village. He pointed out a trail over which the lad had never gone before. "All right Father, but I don't see how that path will ever reach the town," said the boy. "Do you see the trail as far as the big tree down there?" asked the man. "Oh yes, I see that far." "Well, when you get there by the tree, you'll see the trail a little farther ahead, and so on until you get within sight of the houses of the village." And maybe that's the way you can picture yourself living the Christian life. Your Father created you and when He did, He laid out the path for you to follow. But you can't see it all. So, you must trust God, being willing to follow the direction of His Spirit and trusting His power one step at a time.

Your Purpose: You Were Made Part Of Christ's Body 2:11-18

At verse 11 we enter a third major section of the book and the last one we're going to consider together. In 1:1-14 Paul explained your Privileges in Christ, in 1:15-2:10 he explained your Experience in Christ, what it was that happened to you. Now, in the rest of the second chapter, he explains your Purpose in Christ, what God is doing with you and why. To this point these chapters have had the individual in view, what God has done for and in you. This section has a corporate view, what God is doing with you and all the other believers in the world together. Now in order to understand that, you have to think historically and you have to think in terms you are not used to thinking in. You have to stand in heaven with God and look with Him at His plan for the entire human race over the course of human history and then at how you fit into that scheme. So, let's begin by considering:

I. Your Position In The Human Race By Birth Verse 11 gives us two important facts about the Ephesians in Asia Minor in the middle of the first century that are equally true of you in America in the 21st century. Just like them:

1. you were a Gentile by origin (11) For 1800 years God had been talking about the human race as divided into two groups. In Gen. 12 God chose 1 man, Abraham, and declared that his descendants would become a great and mighty nation and that God would use that nation to bless all the families, all the peoples of the earth. So, for 1800 years after that, the whole world was either Jew or Gentile. There was God's nation and there was the whole rest of the world, the Gentiles. Like the Ephesians, all of us sitting here this morning (most likely) are Gentile by origin. We are not physical descendants of Abraham, not part of that nation which God had planned to use to bless the whole world. And so:

2. you were "uncircumcised" Circumcision was the mark of belonging to Israel, the sign of the covenant that God gave Abraham. Uncircumcised was the derogatory term that Israel came to use to describe all the Gentile nations who did not worship the true God. David called Goliath an "uncircumcised Philistine". You see, instead of seeing their role as one of blessing the nations of the world, Israel became proud and despised the Gentiles. So, to be uncircumcised means to be despised by Israel. You see, if it hadn't been for the cross, our ancestors were all idolaters, all pagans who worshipped false Gods, and today we'd all be sitting here as pagan as our ancestors, as pagan as any unreached tribe in the jungle. Think of it; the only nation in the world who knew the true and living God refused to tell our ancestors! The only people in the world who had any light refused to shine any of it! Generations of our great, great.... grandparents were eternally lost in darkness and so would you be, if God hadn't done something. In fact, Paul lists:

II. The Consequences Of Your Position As A Gentile First:

1. you were separated from Christ (12) The Jews may have been proud and self-righteous, but at least they had and recognized the promise of a coming Savior, a Christ who was to come and rule over the House of Jacob. We had no such promise. In fact, the Christ was to come and smash all the Gentile nations of the world with a rod of iron! Our fate was destruction and we didn't even know it. Then:

2. you were excluded from Israel Compare Rom. 9:4-5. They were the nation called God's Son. They had the visions of Divine glory. They had the covenants God made to their ancestors. They had the Law and the Temple worship and the Divine promises. And from them, the Savior came. We had none of those things. We were excluded from every privilege that God had granted to mankind.

3. you were outside the covenants of God, foreigners, aliens to it. The covenants, the promises, belonged to citizens of Israel and you were an alien, a foreigner, and had none of those things and so:

4. you had no future hope You were an object of God's wrath and without any hope of the knowledge of Him. Now, you personally were born in Christianized America where the Gospel is freely available and there are a lot of Christians in our day. However, for literally billions of people this statement is still almost as true today as it was of the Ephesians. They have no Bible, they have no church, they have no relationship to Israel, and no Savior. They are bound for hell with no one to tell them. They have NO HOPE! Generations upon generations have lived and died with no hope. How sad! And finally:

5. you were without God in the world The world is Satan's domain. He rules. Your only hope of withstanding Him is God, but here you were absolutely without God on Satan's turf, a victim waiting to be victimized.

There is probably no sadder phrase in all the Bible than this, without hope and without God in the world. Cut off altogether from the grace of God. That's your heritage, the heritage of your Gentile ancestors, and it would be yours in full if God had not stepped into the world and changed things through the cross.

III. The Changes God Made Through The Cross You see, the cross is the watershed of all human history. Jesus Christ, God's Son, came into the world and died upon the cross and rose again and that event changed God's purpose for the entire human race! It had three tremendous consequences that changed the entire subsequent course of human history. First of all:

1. He placed all men on equal footing (14-15a) After the cross, Rom. 10:12 says, there is no difference between Jew and Gentile. It was no longer to be that the Jews would be privileged and the Gentiles have no hope. Rather, all men would be placed on an equal standing before God. How did He accomplish that? Well, first:

a. He abolished the Law Jesus Christ came and fulfilled it in Himself once and for all and abolished it, put it out of business, removed it. It is no longer in force and we are not under it. Compare Gal. 3:19. The law of which Israel was so proud and was so privileged to have, was an addition to God's promise to Abraham. It was added to control and point out the character of sin externally and to bring conviction of the need for a Savior. It was only to last until the Seed (Christ) should come and when He came, it was cancelled! You might say He "crossed it out" at the cross! And in doing so:

b. He broke down the dividing wall The possession and keeping of the law was the dividing wall between Jew and Gentile. Now that there is no law to keep, all men are on an equal footing before God, lost and needing a Savior and so:

c. He killed the hostility by removing its source. Of course, all you have to do is read the book of Acts to see how hard it was for this hostility to die. Nevertheless, the hostile separation between Jew and Gentile received its death blow at the cross.

So, He removed the Law which separated Jew and Gentile and:

2. He created one new body, the Church (15b) He made a new man, a new creation, the Church of Jesus Christ. His plan was now to call out of all nations alike, Israel and the Gentiles, a people for His name. So, the division of the human race was changed entirely. It was no longer Jew and Gentile from God's point of view. It is now those who have His Son and have eternal life who are part of His body and those who don't have His Son and are not part of His body. Compare Gal. 3:28. You see, in this body, it doesn't matter what your national heritage is or what your physical characteristics are. We are all one in Christ Jesus and there are no distinctions between us along any of those lines because:

3. He reconciled all alike to God through the Cross (16a) Both Jew and Gentile, red and yellow, black and white, come to God the same way, through the cross. All alike are saved by God's grace, not on any merit or privilege of their own.

OK, let's review. The cross changed the status of the entire human race. For 1800 years it had been Jew and Gentile; now God created one new body, the Church, out of both, and for 2000 years the great distinction has been whether you are part of his body or not, and the opportunity to be part of it is equal to all. But why did God create this one new body? Verse 17 hints at it. He was going to use this one body to preach peace with God to all men, Jew and Gentile alike. Israel had not done their job. So now, to this new body, the Church, God gave the commission to take the message of Jesus Christ and the forgiveness of sins to the ends of the earth and for 2000 years it has been doing just that. And that is why you are sitting here today! Your Gentile heritage was one of no hope; it was this "new man", this Church of Jesus Christ, that brought you hope, that preached the Gospel to you and your family and brought you to find peace with God and to become part of that Body. Now, all of this is well and good, but it doesn't make much of a sermon in terms of my life here and now. So, let's finish by talking about:

IV. The Application Of This One Body Truth To Your Life First of all, from this we learn that:

1. you are united with Him as His body (13-14a) You who had the heritage of being far away from God have now been made near. In fact, you have been actually united with Christ as part of His body. Jesus Christ actually dwells in each one of us and together collectively, we form the physical body through which Jesus lives and acts and does His will on earth. That's what we're going to talk about in the rest of the chapter next time. But at the moment, my point is that we who were so far away as to be without hope and without God in the world are now actually so close to God as to be united with Him as His body! Then secondly, we learn:

2. you have the same privilege as every other believer; there is no difference (17-18) Our heritage no longer matters. You and I have the same privilege of access to God through the same Holy Spirit who lives in each of us. There is no distinction between us. There is nothing that one believer has in Christ that you do not have and no privilege given to someone else that is denied to you. All of us are equally loved, equally reconciled, equally equipped in Christ Jesus, and equally destined to the same glorious future. Now, we may be at all different levels of maturity, and God may use us differently, but every promise of God is equally ours. Don't ever feel inferior. There are no second or third class Christians. And on top of that:

3. you have a unity with every other believer; there is no division The division is between those inside the Body and those outside the Body, not between parts of the Body itself. You have a unity with every believer. The same Holy Spirit who lives in them lives in you, no matter where they are in the world or their background or their language or their customs or the way they worship or the way they interpret certain non-crucial Scripture passages. Now, I don't want to even get into the concept of why then there are so many denominations and church bodies. Let me simply say that the real problem is that many organizations which call themselves churches today have few or no members who are really part of the Body the Scripture is talking about because they don't have a personal relationship with Christ. The division between true believers and "Christianized" persons, who are actually non-believers, must always exist. However, among true believers everywhere there is no division in God's eyes and there shouldn't be in ours. For the longest time it was considered a "sin" for Baptists and good independents to fellowship with Presbyterians or evangelical Methodists or with Pentecostals and it really offends some of us to think that there are genuine believers inside the Russian Orthodox or Roman Catholic Church and if there are they must certainly be sinful for remaining there! Listen, there is no division between true believers no matter what label they wear or what circumstances they are in. We are all brothers and sisters, members of one and the same body. There is no division between your eyes and your hands and your feet, is there? That's ridiculous. And so is thinking that there are divisions within the Body of Christ. We are One! And finally,

4. you have a peace with every other believer; there is no hostility (14) He himself, the Lord Jesus, by His presence in us, is the peace between us. All hostility between us and other believers simply should not exist. All feelings of being better than some other believer or more capable or more gifted or jealousy, any sense of hostility or animosity, has no place in the Body. And yet we see it all the time, believers carrying grudges toward one another, offended and not forgiving, even deliberately hurting each other, when God has given us peace. That's what it means to be ONE body.

5. you have a purpose as His body; it is to take the Gospel of Jesus Christ to everyone who is outside the body and invite them to come into it. Israel refused to take the light of God to the Gentiles, so God created a body in which He could personally dwell and walk about and tell the world about Himself and the cross. But His biggest problem is getting his hands and feet to do what their head tells them to do, so the job can get done! We are His body and our Head is telling us to take the knowledge of Him to the uttermost parts of the earth, to every last people. If we don't, for many millions in the world, the cross will have meant essentially nothing. They will still be without hope and without God in the world. They will still have their heritage as Gentiles and never be able to escape it.

When Hudson Taylor reached China to begin his life's work, one of his early converts was a middle-aged Chinese man who was one of the leading officers of a sect of reformed Buddhists. He had studied long and hard but found no rest for his soul until he met Jesus Christ. Then he eagerly testified to the Buddhists of the peace he had and he began preaching Christ to his fellow countrymen. Shortly after his conversion he asked Hudson Taylor how long the Gospel had been known in England. When Taylor told him it had been known for hundreds of years, the man was shocked. He replied, "What! For hundreds of years, you have had these glad tidings and only now have come to preach it to us? My father sought after the truth for more than twenty years and died without finding it. Oh, why did you not come sooner?" It was that question that spawned the dream of the China Inland Mission to reach every province with the Gospel. The answer to it is that very often the Body has been busy doing other things than what the Head has commissioned it to do. God made you part of His body, a body that He designed to reach the world. Are you taking your place in that task?

EPHESIANS 1-2: Who You Are In Christ

Your Purpose: You Were Made Part Of God's Temple 2:19-22

Today we conclude our series in Ephesians. We finish chapter 2 with yet another picture of who you are in Christ as we conclude our look at God's purpose for you. It revolves around the Greek word oikeo, which occurs six times in various forms in these four verses. It means to dwell, to have a home, to build a home, to belong to a home. It's a very warm word, just like our concept of home. And it is the concept which completes the picture of what God did with us. Verse 13 told us that we Gentiles, who were once far off from God and without hope, have been made near to Him, have been made part of His body. Now we are told that we have been made His dwelling place, His home. Verse 19 is the transition verse which brings us to this concept and in it we see:

I. The Pictures God Uses To Express His Purpose For You (19) This verse begins with the first of three different images. First:

1. you became a citizen in His Kingdom You are no longer a foreigner, a xenos, a stranger, an alien, a non-member, like you were as a Gentile according to the nation of Israel. You are now a fellow-citizen with literally the saints of God, God's holy people. You've been made a member in God's Holy Kingdom with all the full rights of citizenship. Remember verse 12? As a Gentile, all the promises, all the covenants, all the privileges belonged to God's nation Israel; now they belong to YOU in Jesus Christ! In Phil. 3:20 Paul tells us that our citizenship is in heaven. You're a fellow citizen of that holy country where everyone is a saint and God reigns as King over all. But you became more than that:

2. you became a member in His Family You are no longer an alien, a paroikos, one who lives next to you, a neighbor, a temporary resident, a near person. You became an oikos, a member of the household, a family member, one who lives IN the home! God made you His own child. You're not just a subject of His Kingdom; you're His Son or Daughter, a member of His own family, sharing one Spirit with Him. That's how near God has brought you to Himself. But God's purpose for you was not merely to be a subject or even merely to be a member of His family:

3. you became a stone in His Temple/Dwelling (22a) You became part of God's oikos, His home, His dwelling, which verse 21 calls a temple. There are two Greek words for temple. The one used here (naos) is always used to refer to the inner part of the Temple, the Holy Place, the place where God dwells. You became God's residence, His dwelling place. And 1 Pet. 2:5 describes the image a little more fully for us. God's house is not a temple made with hands of bricks and mortar. The place where God dwells is a spiritual house. It is made of people and you are one of them. You are a living stone in the big building God's building. What a concept! A house, a dwelling place made out of millions and millions of stones, living stones, stones inside each one of which, the Builder Himself lives! And together they form His dwelling place, His home, the place where He lives on earth. Wow! Now let's examine:

II. The Process By Which God Is Building His Temple (20-21) And like good builders we'll start with:

1. the foundation layer Of course, the real foundation of the church, this "new man", this "new body" God has created is:

a. the person and work of Christ Paul has used this image before:

(1) He is the foundation; He supports the building - 1 Cor. 3:9-11 God is building a building and the foundation is Jesus Christ Himself. His person and His work support the building. There is no other foundation. Christ on the cross purchased the building by saving the people who would be part of it. And then He indwells them by His own Person. His very Spirit lives in each one of us. So He is literally the foundation on which this whole new entity that God is making, the Church of Jesus Christ, is built. Without Him it would crumble to dust. And then, back in Ephesians, Paul says:

(2) He is the Cornerstone; He orders the building Cornerstones have been reduced in our day to ceremonial objects which display the building date and in which you hide some relics for people to discover 200 years from now when they tear it down. But a real cornerstone was very important. It was the first stone laid in the building and it had to be perfect in its shape and situated exactly at the right angle on the foundation because the lines and shape of the entire building were taken from it. The church is all built on Him and shaped by Him. Then comes the foundation layer of the building:

b. the work of the apostles and prophets They were foundation layers. Remember what Paul said in 1 Cor.3, I have laid the foundation...

[Author's Note: I regret that the only the outline of the remainder of this message has survived in my electronic files.]

2. the rising building

a. it is a growing building: stones are being added

b. it is a designed building: stones are carefully fitted and joined

c. it is a holy building: stones have the character of the Cornerstone

III. The Purpose Which God Is Accomplishing Through You (22)

1. He dwells in us: the Temple concept

a. He has a vital union with His people

b. He has a permanent union with His people

2. He walks about in us: the Body concept- 2 Cor. 6:16

a. He has a mobile dwelling: the Tabernacle - Ex. 29:44-46

b. He accomplishes His work of building the Temple through us

PHILIPPIANS: THE CONSISTENT CHRISTIAN 1:1-11 - Consistently Caring In The Midst Of Suffering

Paul wrote letters to a lot of churches. They were as different as churches are today. The church at Corinth was full of divisions and squabbling, not to mention other kinds of serious problems like immorality. The churches of Colossae and Galatia had doctrinal problems. Thessalonica was doing well, but it was young and needed teaching. The church at Philippi, however, was a mature church, probably the most mature of all the Gentile churches Paul had started. It had strongly organized leadership. All through his later ministry they had sent gifts time and again to help support him. Indeed, the reason Paul is writing this letter is to acknowledge a gift that has just arrived from them, hand delivered by one of their own men, Epaphroditus. Philippians is a letter of encouragement. It is a letter to Christians who are doing well to encourage them to keep on doing well, to not give up, but rather to be consistent in their doing well. I want to study through Philippians with you, not to chide you, but to encourage you, to help build in you the thing I see the greatest need for in many of our lives, consistency. Now, here's how important consistency is in the Christian life. Accordingly, each chapter tells us something about it.

I. Consistency: Our Triumph Over Suffering	Chapter 1
II. Consistency: Our Basis For Acting	Chapter 2
III. Consistency: Our Sign of Maturing	Chapter 3
IV. Consistency: Our Key to Blessing	Chapter 4

In the next three messages we'll talk about chapter 1 and the subject of suffering. The Philippian Christians were going through some suffering according to verse 30. I don't think there's any one of us that doesn't go through some, and if you haven't, you will. But if you and I can learn to be consistent in our Christian faith through the midst of it, we can triumph over our suffering, instead of letting it conquer and defeat us. Paul demonstrated that in his own life in a marvelous way that I'm sure was a tremendous example to the Philippians, and I know it is to us.

I. Paul's Continual Suffering This letter was written late in Paul's life and ministry. Let's look at his circumstances:

1. he was imprisoned Compare Acts 28:16, 30. Philippians is a prison epistle. It was written during those two years that Paul was held at Rome. Now remember, though, that he had spent the two previous years in prison at Caesarea, so that means for at least 3-4 years Paul has been deprived of his freedom. He could not go where he wanted and do what he wanted. And lest you think that his preferential treatment at Rome sounds luxurious, notice that:

2. he was chained (1:13) He was not just guarded inside a house. He was chained by the wrist to a Roman soldier 24 hours a day. Now that's painful. They didn't have padded, sculpted shackles, I'm sure. But beyond that, it meant that Paul couldn't even move without making somebody else move. He had not even a moment of privacy, not when changing or going to the bathroom or talking with friends. And with many different soldiers on the other end of the chain, I'm sure that some days were pure misery! But beyond that:

3. his life was endangered (1:20) He was awaiting trial before the Emperor. The Emperor happened to be none other than Nero, the man who was steeped in every kind of vice you can imagine, the man who, a year or two after this time, blamed the Christians for the burning of Rome and had them thrown to lions and lit as human torches in his gardens. Paul honestly did not know whether he would live or die from day to day. And to top it off:

4. he appeared to have been forgotten (4:10) The Philippians had not contacted him for some time. It was not that they didn't care, but they hadn't had opportunity to send anyone. And you know how it is when you're hurting and no one seems to notice, when nobody calls! You feel forgotten!

So, Paul was continually suffering and had been for some time. Listen carefully. Satan's number one strategy when suffering comes into your life is this, he tries to get you to forget about the rest of the world and concentrate on your own problem. He tries to get you to become self-centered and consumed with that suffering, so that you lose all concern for others and thus, the real purpose of your life becomes negated and lost. But not Paul! Look at:

II. Paul's Consistent Caring (3-8) Look how consistently he kept on caring for them:

1. he kept thinking about them (3) He says, every time I remember you. Obviously, that wasn't every six months. He thought about them regularly and wondered how they were doing. What would you be thinking about in chains waiting to die?

2. he kept being thankful for them (3-5) Even though he hadn't heard from them for a while, he kept right on being thankful for them and for all the blessing they had been to him through the years. Did you ever notice how somebody can really love us through the years and then when trouble comes, if they don't respond the way we think they should, we're down on them for not caring. We forget how they cared through the years. Not Paul.

3. he kept praying for them (4) When we hurt, the focus of our prayer life usually turns inward. "Lord help me, Lord deliver me, Lord change this circumstance." Paul prayed regularly for others in the midst of his suffering. He kept up that habit of prayer that he had all along, interceding for others.

4. he kept caring about them (7) He says, "I have you in my heart. It doesn't matter whether I'm suffering or preaching, you are with me; you are part of what happens to me." When we suffer, very often we begin to care much more for ourselves and what happens to us. Paul cared about the Philippians and what happened to them.

5. he kept longing for them (8) It was more than human longing. He longed for them with the very deep affection and desire of Jesus Christ. They were the desire of his heart. When we hurt, very often our deepest longing becomes a way out, a way to stop suffering. You see, Paul's caring did not change with his circumstances. It was consistent. It didn't matter whether he was well or sick, in jail or free, near or far away. He was consistent in caring for them. And look at what Paul prayed for the Philippians:

III. Paul's Constant Prayer (9-11) He had two regular requests for them. In the Greek text, the first begins in verse 9 and stops in middle of verse 10 with the word best. The second begins there and continues to the end of verse 11. The first has to do with their love for others, the second with their lives. He prays for:

1. a consistent increase in the quality of their love Note he's not praying simply that they may have MORE love than they have now. He's praying that their love will increase MORE and MORE, that it will be continually increasing, consistently growing. Think of it in terms of your bank account. You don't really just want an account with MORE money. You want one that is consistently increasing more and more! How can love increase? It can grow to:

a. greater depth Literally, deep knowledge. He prayed they would have a deeper awareness of the needs of other people, one that would grow greater and greater in its ability to recognize when a brother is hurting and what needs exist!

b. greater discernment, the ability to perceive things and evaluate them and understand them from God's perspective. And then:

c. greater discretion, the ability to choose, not just what is good for the other person, but what is really the best for them, the best way to demonstrate your love and help them. You see, he prayed that they would consistently love better, with more commitment and yet with more wisdom in doing the right thing, not just the most obvious thing. The two are sometimes very different! But the bottom line is that he wanted them to be consistent carers like he was, though they were suffering! Then, he prayed for:

2. a consistent production of fruit in their lives There's nothing worse than an apple tree that only gives apples every now and again. He wanted their lives to bear fruit on a consistent, regular basis, suffering or not. He wanted them to have:

a. consistent motives The NIV pure is literally sincere and it means unalloyed, referring to a metal that is not mixed with any other, like pure gold. I think it's their motives in view here. Paul's desire was that they wouldn't be motivated by love one day and then by selfishness the next, that their motives would be consistent and unmixed.

b. consistent behavior Blameless is literally without stumbling. He prayed that they could walk without tripping spiritually, that they would consistently serve the Lord and obey Him without falling into sin in between times.

c. consistent character The fruit of righteousness is usually linked with the fruit of the spirit in Gal. 5:22, which for our purposes, means that he wanted them to display a consistent Christian character, to be consistently patient, kind, gentle, and so on.

So many times when we suffer, we let the fruit fall out of our lives. We develop selfish motives; we fall into sin because we're hurting; we change character and become impatient or bitter. You see, consistency is the key to really triumphing over suffering, consistently continuing to care about others more than yourself, consistently continuing to live a vibrant Christian life that turns suffering from an opportunity for Satan to drag you down into an opportunity for God to use you as a testimony to others (verse 11b). When you suffer in a godly fashion, God gets the credit. I don't know what difficulties and problems are in your life. I don't know what suffering you may face. But I want to encourage you to continue to be consistent in caring about others in spite of it! Years ago, the Salvation Army was holding an international convention. Their founder, General William Booth, was so physically weak he could not attend. He cabled his convention message to them. It was one word: "Others!" When you're suffering, don't let the most important word in your life become "Me". Let it be "Others". This is victory!

PHILIPPIANS: THE CONSISTENT CHRISTIAN

1:12-18 - Consistently Serving In Spite Of Suffering

We said last week that the first danger that occurs when suffering comes into our lives is that of becoming self-centered, starting to care more about ourselves and our problem than about others. So we need to be consistently caring about others while we are suffering. There is a second danger that occurs as well. Let me illustrate it through the life of a dear retired missionary whose life our church was part of. Anna Speak gave 25 years serving the Lord in the hills of Kentucky. She went with her husband Frank to schools and jails and homes and little country churches, sharing the gospel and teaching people. Then, Frank went home to be with Jesus and she entered old age, living with a niece here in Philadelphia. Her suffering was simply the limitations that came with old age and not driving. Yet she spent hours every day in prayer. She prayed every single day for the sheet of requests that I sent every two weeks. She did the same for Child Evangelism and a handful of other organizations. Yet when we would talk, she would always say, "I wish I could do something for God; I feel like I'm not doing anything!" Is that true? You see, the danger is to think that suffering is keeping me from serving God, that I can't serve God because of this problem in my life, whether it's health or finances or being married to an unsaved person. You see, there are:

I. Two Views of Suffering (12) The first is quite common:

1. suffering is a means of hindering the Gospel This is the view that Paul was worried that the Philippians might have about him and about their own suffering. Paul might easily have had it himself:

a. what Paul planned - Rom. 15:23-25, 28 Paul wrote to the Roman Christians from Corinth at the end of his third missionary journey and laid out his plans. "I've got to go to Jerusalem and deliver this love offering to the church there, but then I want to reach out and pioneer a new area; I want to go to Spain. And I want to stop by and meet you on the way, as I've wanted to for a long time." Now, I don't think that those were presumptuous or proud plans.

I'm sure Paul had prayed about them and felt the Lord's leading in that direction. But, you know about "the best laid plans..."

b. what Paul experienced Paul got to Rome alright, but not in the way he imagined. His stay in Jerusalem ended up in a two year prison term at Caesarea. The way he got to Rome was by appealing to the Emperor and the two years there, he spent as a prisoner! Now, you could look at that and say, "My, how the Gospel was hindered. Paul couldn't plant any more churches, couldn't gather any more large crowds and preach the Gospel, couldn't travel on and evangelize unreached Spain. Wow, Satan really hindered the Gospel!" Isn't that how we look at some of the problems that come into our lives? "If only I didn't have this problem, I could do that for God." But look what Paul said again in verse 12:

2. suffering is a means of advancing the Gospel In the Greek advance means to cut forward! It's the word used for a settler who clears away the brush on new farm land. The Gospel wasn't being held back; it was moving forward, clearing new territory. Compare Eph. 6:19-20. You see:

a. Paul adjusted his outlook He said, "I am now an ambassador in chains." He told the Corinthians that we are all ambassadors for Christ, that we have all been entrusted with delivering the message of reconciliation through Christ. Now he says to the Ephesians from prison, "Nothing is really different; I am just an ambassador in chains. I will represent and serve Christ within the confines of my chains, my circumstances." See:

b. Paul determined to serve while suffering He said, "Pray for me that I will be bold and open my mouth fearlessly to testify for Christ here in my prison." Circumstances weren't going to stop him from serving. They just changed the type and nature of his service. And that's what we need to learn to see! When problems and suffering come into our lives, we can continue to serve, just as we always have, but maybe in different ways. Maybe we have to pioneer some new ground, but we can consistently serve the Lord all our lives, suffering or not! So let's read on as Paul demonstrates in his own life to us:

II. The Effects of Serving While Suffering If you make up your mind to consistently serve God in the midst of your problems, it does three things:

1. it opens new doors of ministry You may not be able to do the old things you used to do, but God will open up new things for you if you're looking for them. For instance:

a. Paul ministered to guards (13) We would think, "Oh how awful to be chained to a guard all the time." Paul said, "Alright, I am chained to a guard 24 hours a day; that means I have a captive audience to witness to!" Paul was guarded by the soldiers of the Emperor's official bodyguard and, one by one, Paul shared his testimony of faith in Christ and over a period of time, guess what? Look at 4:22. They came to faith! Caesar's household would include his servants and guards. Paul was winning people to Christ under the Emperor's nose! That's what happens when you stop concentrating on what you can't do, look at those right around you and start saying, "Lord what can I do?"

b. Paul ministered to fellow Jews - Acts 28:17 He still had credentials as a Rabbi, privileges of respect among the Jews, so he took the opportunity to call them in to listen to him as fellow countrymen. It didn't work too well, but nevertheless, he got to do it, to minister to people he had things in common with. And then:

c. Paul ministered to visitors - Acts 28:30-31 He couldn't go out to them, so when people came to see him, he witnessed to and taught them, so much so, that in 1:13 he could say that his testimony was clear to the whole palace guard and everyone else. On top of that, while he was in prison, Paul wrote letters that we call the prison epistles. Some of the deepest and most poignant books in our New Testament (Philippians, Colossians, Ephesians, Philemon) we would not have, except that Paul had a ministry while suffering. When you say, "OK, I'm suffering, but I'm not going to waste it; I'm going to find ways to serve God," God opens up avenues you wouldn't have dreamed of. And:

2. it encourages other Christians to serve better Now:

a. some were encouraged by his example (14) It happened in two areas:

(1) the silent were encouraged to speak The local Roman Christians said, "If this guy can be under guard by the Emperor's own soldiers and speak out so boldly, then why are we being so timid about witnessing?" His example gave people the boldness they needed to overcome their fears. But I'm also sure that:

(2) the suffering were encouraged to stand Those who saw him minister in his suffering were encouraged that they could do the same. Compare 2 Cor. 1:3-7. Simply put, God brings suffering into our lives so that we can have a ministry of encouragement to people who suffer like we do! If we consistently serve God in the midst of our problems, others who face them will too! For example, think of Joni Eareckson Tada's ministry to millions of handicapped people. However, not all were encouraged by his example:

b. some were encouraged out of envy (15-17) Paul doesn't say enough for us to understand fully what happened, so we can only surmise. There were some genuine Christians who were envious of Paul's ministry, of the attention he got and the authority he seemed to have. And now they said, "He's out of the way so we'll get busy and do the work; we'll serve the Lord and people will notice us preaching the Word." Paul's reaction was, "I don't care, as long as Christ is preached; it doesn't matter whether my serving motivates others out of example or envy; it's just great that in the end God is using it!" So, when you consistently serve God in your suffering, it motivates others, whether for right or wrong reasons. But still, the work of God goes forward and that's what counts. And finally:

3. it changes your attitude about suffering (18) Most times when we hurt, we complain about it. Not Paul. Since he was serving God, he was able to rejoice. Now note:

a. Paul did not rejoice at the circumstances He didn't say, "Hallelujah, I'm in jail". Nobody expects you to say "Yay, I broke my foot!" or "Yay, I'm suffering!"

b. He rejoiced at God's use of his circumstances He rejoiced that God was using his circumstances to win others to Christ and to encourage the work of the Gospel. To use his own words from chapter 4, Rejoice in the Lord always!

So, if you want to sit around and mope about your suffering and complain about all the things you can't do, go ahead. But if you want to triumph over your suffering and turn it into a thing of victory for God, you can do it by determining to keep on serving in whatever way you can find! And by the way, do you remember Marah? When the children of Israel got there in their wandering, the waters were bitter and undrinkable. So, instead of trusting God, they grumbled and complained and had a big pity party. But God told Moses to take a tree and throw it in the waters and when he did something wonderful happened; the bitter waters became sweet and drinkable. And when you come to suffering in your life, you can do like them and pity yourself. But God has a tree. Jesus died on it for our sins. And if you will throw the cross into the middle of your bitter circumstances, if you will determine to serve Christ, to find a way to serve Him somehow even until the day you die, you'll find that a wonderful thing happens. The bitter waters you couldn't drink before, somehow become drinkable and even, in a sense, sweet, because your suffering is bringing glory to Jesus Christ.

1:19-26 - Consistently Seeing the Purpose of Living

Let me ask you a big question. What is the purpose of your life? Why are you living? Most of us never think about that. We just live. We go to work or go to school and go to church and cook the meals and whatever else. And then suffering comes into our lives. We get seriously ill or have to have an operation and then the thought of death pops into our minds or someone close to us dies, and down deep we're reminded that one day that will be us. And one of two things happens. Either we panic and become angry at God and wallow in self-pity thinking, "Oh why did this have to happen to me!" or we begin to think about the real purpose of our living. In the previous messages I told you that in order to triumph over suffering you must continue to care about others while you're suffering and you must continue to serve God however you can while you're suffering. But you can't do either one of those until you can do this, until you can consistently see the purpose of living. If you don't know why you live, then you can't live right and you can't suffer right. So Paul, sitting in confinement at Rome awaiting trial, not knowing whether he'll live or die, reminds us of:

I. The Goal of Living: to magnify Christ (19-20) The word exalted in the Greek is literally, magnified. It means to make great or enlarge. Now think about that for a moment. A microscope takes something little and makes it big enough for people to see. Something invisible is made visible. But I'd rather have you think of a telescope which takes something that may be very great, like a star or planet, yet it can't be seen because it's so far away, and it brings it up close so people can see it. That's what we are doing in life as Christians. We are the body of Christ. There is a wall of sin that separates people from Him. To them He is invisible. But in our lives, He is magnified, lived out through our actions and words, made plain so they can see Him. Literally, I am to be a living manifestation of Jesus Christ to people. So, Paul says he has two concerns:

1. I don't want to be ashamed of anything I do I don't want other people to see Jesus sin, to see Jesus hate, lie, fail or give up through me. One day I'll have to stand at His throne for my rewards and the criterion will not be simply, "How many church services did you attend or how much money did you give," but "How well did you represent ME?" I don't want to do anything in life that would bring Him shame. And particularly:

2. I don't want my circumstances to hinder me I want enough courage to face whatever might happen to me and still be a good testimony. I want to be consistent. I want to keep on magnifying Christ to people, no matter what happens to me, whether I live or die or suffer or whatever. If I live, I want them to see Jesus in me doing good things. If I suffer, I want them to see Jesus in me enduring suffering, just the way He did in the flesh. If I die, I want them to see me face death with the same confidence He had. Now, in order to do that, I have to understand:

II. The Nature of Living: to live Christ (21-24) Let's sort out what Paul says here very carefully because it lists for us some important facts about what living is and what dying is.

a. to live out Christ's life (21a) To live is Christ. That doesn't mean simply that to live is to serve Christ. It means that Christ is living out His life through me. Compare Gal. 2:20. I am dead. He lives out His life in me. If I fulfill Rom. 12:1 and present my body to Him as a living sacrifice and say, "OK, my life is not mine, it's Yours; live out your life through my body," then to live is to live out Christ's life not your own! That principle is known as the exchanged life. And when you get hold of that, it will change the way you live. It's not up to me to just do the best I can. It's up to Him to let His power flow through me and do what He wants. I don't live in my strength, but through Him who infuses His power into me. I don't worry because my life is His life and it's His responsibility. That's real living!

b. to carry out Christ's task (22a, 24) As Christ lives through me, my life becomes a carrying out of His task. My work is His work and His work is for the benefit of others. I don't live for me; my goal in life is not to do what's best for me, what I like. It is to do with my life what He wants, to fulfill His purpose, to do what is best for others. Sure, Paul would have liked to be freed from prison and he's even confident he will be, but he's ready to take living or dying or whatever comes, because the way that Christ wants to use him is the most important thing.

c. to long for Christ's presence (23a) This life is not supposed to be utopia, to be the perfect place where everything is roses. That's heaven. To live is to be in a state of longing for something better, to long for heaven, to long for Christ. If to have it all now is your goal, then you will not be able to magnify Christ and live out His life. You will live for you; you will live selfishly; you will do what feels best! Now, on the other hand:

2. dying is: not the ogre that the world makes it out to be. It is not the ultimate thing to avoid. If for us to live is Christ, then dying is:

a. interest on the principal of living (21b, 23b) Gain means profit. The principal is good, but the interest added to it is even better. If to live here is to have intimate communion with Christ and to live His life, then to die is even better!

b. freedom from the bondage of living (23a) Depart means to loose, to cast off, to weigh anchor, to be free from the bondage and the limitations of this life in the flesh that hold us back. Think of it; no more doubt, no more fear, suffering, pain, sadness, or any of those things. Instead, there is:

c. union with the Source of living (23b) It is to be at last with Christ who is our life, to be united with Him face to face forever! It's to experience the final fulfillment of what we're already living out in practice!

You see, that's what we say we believe. That's what our faith tells us. To live is Christ; to die is even better. We affirm that with all our hearts. But when we're out there on the street and we're suffering, that's what reveals whether we really are committed to what we believe. You see, here's:

III. The Dilemma of Living: to please Christ (23-26) Paul said he was in a dilemma, a struggle. He was torn between two things. So here's:

1. the struggle I must face (23-24) In Paul's case, since he might be facing imminent death, his struggle was over whether he would choose to live or die, if the choice was up to him. Would he choose what was best for him or what was best for others? And that's the struggle we all face. There are:

a. my personal desires (what's best for me) That is, what would feel good, what I would like, perhaps for the pain to go away or the situation to get better, for the conflict to stop. In Paul's case it was to die and be with Christ! But then there is:

b. God's will for me (what's best for others) Remember why I'm here. God put me here to magnify Christ for the sake of others so they can see Him. And sometimes for them to see Him, I have to be sick, I have to bear sorrow, I have to face pain and loss. Earlier in his life Paul prayed three times that God would take away his thorn in the flesh and God said, "No, in order for Me to display just how strong I am, you have to be weak!" What Christ wants and what I want may not always be the same. So here is:

2. the choice I must make (25-26) Paul said, "Since I know you need me, I'm sure the Lord is going to leave me here for your sake and that's OK with me." You see:

a. I must choose God's will over my desires That's what Jesus did in Gethsemane. He wrestled and struggled with what would be best for Him and the will of the Father which would be best for us. And He said, Not my will but Thine be done. Sometimes we may not be able to choose our way out of the circumstances. Paul couldn't choose to live or die. But he could choose how he was going to look at the whole thing. He could choose that he was willing for God's will to be done. That's how we need to pray. When we suffer, we often pray, "Lord get me out of this!" But we need to pray, "Lord, here's what I'd like but if you can better magnify Christ to people in me by leaving me in these difficult circumstances, then that's what I'd prefer, because that's what I live for!" And it's not just that I must choose and give assent to God's will, but:

b. I must be content with God's will I must not choose it, all the while grumbling and complaining inside. I must trust that His will is best for me. His life is better than the one I would choose. I must not only leave my life in His hands, I must be content with that.

What are you living for? Do you see that His will is best, that His life is best for you? Do you see it even though the road is tough and long? Do you see it when you hurt and struggle? It's only when you can consistently keep on seeing that you're not here for you, but you're here for Him, that you can turn suffering into victory. I know I've told you this story before but it's so powerful. During the Korean war, a lady and a two year old child were walking down the road. An enemy patrol threw a grenade on to the road. Just before it exploded, the mother threw herself in front of the child. It exploded and as she lay dying, she said, "Don't worry son; Jesus will take care of you." Later an American patrol came by and one of the men saw the boy crying over his mother. He took his hand and said, "Why don't you come with me; I'll take care of you." The little boy looked up and his eyes got wide with wonder. He asked, "Are you Jesus?" Friend, you are the only Jesus people will ever see. Do they see Him in you? Does His love touch them through you? Or do they see just another human being with a different set of beliefs, who lives for himself just like they do. What are you living for?

1:27-30 - Consistently Standing in the Face of Opposition

You remember that chapter 1 is dedicated to the subject of how consistency can bring triumph over suffering in your life. Now, not all suffering is sickness or losing your job. Some of it is opposition and persecution. When Paul founded the church at Philippi, he was jailed and then, even after an earthquake crumbled the prison, he was asked to leave town. Compare 1 Thess. 2:2. Verse 30 says the Philippians are now going through the same struggle of being opposed which Paul had and now he still has it as he sits in confinement at Rome. And some of your suffering, if you are living any kind of a godly life, will be more than just problems and pain; it will be people opposing you, sometimes making fun of you or trying to discredit you because you're a Christian, sometimes trying to prevent you from witnessing to others. Now before we get started, let me paint a clear picture. Everybody always thinks that we Christians are kind of planted here on Satan's turf and Satan and his hosts spend our lifetime pummeling and attacking us and all we're doing is trying to stand up in one spot! Think carefully on what Jesus said He is doing. Mt. 16:18 says that He is building His church and the gates of hell will not prevail or stand against it. Gates are stationary; they don't move. It is the church that moves. God is expanding His turf. His army is marching forward, pushing on the gates of hell, Satan's stronghold over the world, and they can't stand against it! When you get persecution in life, it is simply Satan resisting what God is doing to push forward through your life! It is his counterattack, because his gates are starting to crumble, so if you can stand firm like a good soldier through that counterattack, you can keep pressing on and victory is yours! So, soldier, let's look at how you can stand that heat when opposition comes and be ready to press forward.

I. The Soldier's Consistent Conduct (27) How should you act when people oppose you or try to persecute you? Well, if you're like me, there is a great temptation. You want to lose your Christianity for a while and return the favor! You want to get angry and do something nasty in return, don't you? But that can't be. A Christian must be:

1. consistently conducting himself, being a testimony His conduct as a good soldier must not change under pressure. That which he does in peacetime on the drill field, he must do the same in the battle under fire. The way you live now must continue when you're opposed. Now, if your conduct, the way you act, is going to be a consistent testimony for Christ, then it must be done:

a. in a worthy manner The Greek for conduct is literally live as citizens. If you fight under the flag of the USA which stands for freedom and the equality of all men, you don't take your prisoners and turn them into slaves and treat them like dirt and kill them at will like Hitler did. And you're a citizen of heaven. You serve under a greater banner, the banner of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. You represent Jesus to men. So, your conduct under fire must continue to represent Jesus, to be worthy of Him, to be something of which people can say, "Jesus would do that!"

b. with independent motivation Paul doesn't know whether he will ever get back to Philippi to check up on them in person or not, but he is concerned that whether he does or not won't make a difference in their conduct. A soldier has to be independently motivated, to conduct himself in a worthy manner, whether anybody is watching or not. You can't hate those who oppose you when nobody's looking and then pray for them when you're around others. If you're going to represent Jesus Christ to people who oppose you, you have to do it sincerely and do it even if you're the only person around. So, the first thing when someone opposes you is to be sure that you keep your conduct consistent. The second thing is:

2. consistently standing firm, having tenacity Standing firm is not retreating, not giving up. It is continuing to press forward, even if slowly, when the opposition is fierce. For example, there's a type of fish I like to catch, the bluegill or sunfish. It's only a small fish but it doesn't stop fighting, even when hanging on a hook in the air. That's tenacity, not giving up and throwing in the towel. When people oppose you, there's a real temptation to give up, to quit trying to be a witness, to hide your Christianity. To turn it into victory you've got to keep on, to be consistent. Then there's a third thing:

3. consistently striving together, using teamwork We're not a one man army! God has given us a local body of believers, a platoon if you will, to work together with us. When there is opposition, we need teamwork. Did you ever look at a squad of soldiers marching? They march in exact coordination, as one man! That's what we need. When some of us face opposition, we need to all work together to support them in prayer and presence and to keep on struggling forward together! Now, how can we do this? How can we keep on consistently conducting ourselves as soldiers of Christ, even when people oppose us and give us a hard time and work together and not give up? How can we have the courage and the fortitude to do that? The answer lies in:

II. The Soldier's Consistent Confidence (28) The reason that we can keep on is that we know that in the end we win! So we can fight on fearlessly! We don't have to be afraid! We may be set back. We may be hindered. We may be persecuted. We could even be killed. But we can't lose; Jesus wins! In the end we are delivered and those who oppose us spend eternity apart from God if they don't repent! If you know you can't lose, it makes it a whole lot easier to keep fighting when the going gets tough! That's the confidence we have. Now note:

1. its source It comes from God. It is not in ourselves. It's not because we are so great or so committed or so deserving. It's because our Captain is invincible. He controls the battle. God is greater than anyone who is giving me a hassle, than anyone who makes fun of me, than anyone who tries to sue me or persecute me! And in the end, His purpose will be done. Now that doesn't say God will always get me out of the suffering in the way I would like, but I can rest assured that whatever is happening is for the good and for His glory!

2. its extent Literally the Greek says, Not being terrified in nothing. I guess God wanted to make the point plain. We don't have to be afraid of anything. Jesus said we don't even have to fear those who kill our bodies because after that they have no more that they can do. They can't touch us! You can trust Him to take you through absolutely anything, no matter what form that opposition may take, whether it's being fired, being divorced, or being threatened, knowing that in the end it is glory.

3. its effect When you keep on being a testimony for Christ in the face of everything the opposition throws at you, here's what happens. Instead of you being terrified, it terrifies the enemy! Suppose, for sake of example, that you get in a fight and slug your opponent with everything you have and he just grins and keeps walking forward. Think of the fear that goes through your mind! And when those who oppose you see that they can't stop you, can't keep you down, can't make you give up your trust in the Lord, it can touch them; they can see the hand of God at work in you. Think of Saul standing by and watching Stephen get stoned and watching him not quit, but dying with the words, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge on his lips. You think that didn't touch Saul? It made him mad, drove him to throw himself wholeheartedly into persecuting the church. And the more he persecuted, the madder he got because he couldn't stop it. And that's what made him ready for the Damascus Road where he surrendered to Christ! My friend, you will have a far greater effect on your enemies by being a consistent testimony for Christ than by trying to hurt them back. So have confidence. The Lord is with you in your suffering and will use it to further His Kingdom. And there's something else you have to understand:

III. The Soldier's Privilege (29-30) Now, it probably seems foreign to you to think like this, but being a soldier is not a generous service on your part; it is a tremendous privilege. In fact, you have two tremendous privileges:

1. to believe on Christ It is only by God's grace that you've been saved. You could have been born in Russia or Libya and never heard the Gospel, but you weren't. You could have heard the Gospel and rejected it, but God worked in your heart and you didn't. Think about it; to you of all people it has been granted to believe on the Lord Jesus, to have eternal life, to go to heaven. What a privileged person you are out of all the billions on earth! But because of that you have another privilege:

2. to suffer for His sake He suffered for you! He bled for you and died for you. He gave his back to the smiters and his cheeks to those that plucked out the beard. He carried that heavy cross up Calvary's hill and made the supreme sacrifice for you. My friend, if you have to suffer for Him, to put up with opposition, it is not a burden, but a privilege, a sign of favor from God. Compare Acts 5:41. These men had just been flogged. Their backs were hurting and they were ordered to shut their mouths, but they saw beyond that. They rejoiced that they could suffer for the One who had suffered so much for them.

So don't give up! Don't be discouraged! Are you facing opposition today? Is there hardship for you because of your faith? Be consistent. Keep on acting like a soldier of Jesus Christ. And be confident. God's in control and He's working out His purpose. But above all, thank Him that He has granted you the opportunity to do something that costs for Him. Some years ago, a Hindu woman was converted chiefly by hearing the Word of God read. She suffered much persecution from her husband. One day a missionary asked her, "When your husband is angry and persecutes you, what do you do?" She replied, "Well, sir, I cook his food better; when he complains, I sweep the floor cleaner and when he speaks unkindly, I answer him mildly. I try, sir, to show him that when I became a Christian, I became a better wife and a better mother." Whether your persecution comes from within your own family or from without, it can only serve God's purpose if you consistently stand for Him through it. Are you willing?

2:1-11 - Consistently Imitating the Example of Christ

In chapter 1 we saw that consistency is what makes us triumph over suffering in our lives. In chapter 2 we shift gears. Here we find that consistency is our very basis for living the Christian life. Being consistent is the key to the kind of life Christ wants us to live. And the first thing we must be consistent about is imitating the example of Christ Himself. So let's look at:

I. The Life We Live: Imitation (1-5) Read verse 5 again. Our attitude should be the same as that of Jesus Christ. How often? Once a year? Now and then? No, consistently. All the time. Our life should be a constant reflection of Jesus Christ. Now see:

1. the privileges we continually enjoy (1) Paul's if you have is Paul's way of saying, "you know you have". We have continual privileges that we constantly enjoy through Christ. Paul names four:

a. encouragement - strengthening us when we are weak How many times has the Lord been there when you needed help, when you were ready to give up and didn't think you could go on, and He infused strength into you. He encouraged you.

b. comfort - consoling us when we are suffering How many times were you hurting and God was there to comfort you through His word or through a Christian friend who stopped by just when you needed it or through speaking peace to your heart?

c. communion - sharing with us and not leaving us alone How many times have you felt like nobody understood, like you were all alone in the world, but the Holy Spirit was there reassuring you of His presence and His caring and the fact that you are never alone, that He understands?

d. compassion - caring for us when we are in need How many times have you seen Him meet your need, exercise tender caring and mercy even down to the details of life?

On what basis does He do those things? When He feels like it? When it's convenient? No, continually; every time. You see, God treats us in a consistent fashion. So, we ought also to live and treat others in a consistent fashion. Now here are two of:

2. the principles we should consistently display Paul says, "It would really make my day (and God's too) if you would be consistent in displaying..."

a. harmony (2) I don't think that the sameness he's talking about is simply that we should all think alike. He means we should have the same mind toward others as Christ has toward us, the same love toward others that He displays toward us, the same purpose toward others that He has toward us. And all of us should be like that. The privileges, the mercies and the love we experience constantly from Him, we should consistently show toward others. And the way we do it is by displaying:

b. humility (3-4) Now here you have a biblical definition of true humility and it has three parts. Humility is:

(1) refusing to strive for yourself: your goal is not to advance you over other people; it is to minister to other people.

(2) elevating others above yourself: your attitude is not that everybody is better than you and you are a total nothing, but simply that you care more about others and their feelings and their hurts and their needs than you do about your own.

(3) considering others as well as yourself: your action, not that you totally neglect your own needs like rest or food, but that in every situation you always consider others and not simply yourself.

Now, if we're going to consistently display humility, here's the greatest example of how to do it. Simply imitate Jesus Christ. Do for others what He did for you:

II. The Example We Imitate: Submission (6-11) This is one of the most beautiful passages in all the Bible. It is deeply theological, but it is intensely personal. Paul reminds us that Christ was submissive. First:

1. Christ willingly laid down His privileges (6-7) Christ was in very nature God and equal with the Father. Now with that goes a lot of privileges like enjoying the glory of heaven, knowing no limitations of any human sort like tiredness or hunger or mobility, or not knowing. All these were His, but:

a. He who was God became a man Think what that means. He didn't stop being God. But He didn't count all those privileges He had as God things to be hung onto selfishly. He laid those privileges aside and took the nature of a man, a being who gets tired and hungry and knows pain and sadness. And He did it for us! So, to imitate Him:

b. we must consistently lay down our privileges You are privileged with many blessings God has given you, things which other people don't have. It might be a nice nest egg in the bank, a nice home, a schedule with lots of time for yourself, but when others have a need, we have to be willing to lay down our privileges. Christ's submission also meant that:

2. Christ willingly laid down His position (7) In heaven Christ was the Master of all. The angels jumped to do His bidding. Nobody could oppose Him; nobody could thwart His commands. But:

a. He who was Master became a servant He stooped down from that position to a new one. He came into the world as a servant. His most vivid illustration of that fact was that night in the upper room when He took a towel and washed the disciples' feet, something a household servant would do. And in doing that He showed us that:

b. we must consistently lay down our position, whatever it may be. Nothing must be beneath us when it comes to others. And don't think this applies only to those who have some high position in the business world or the community. All of us get served by other people all the time from the mailman to the man that repairs our car to the students in our class who have to do what we say. But when the need is there, we have to be ready to lay our position down and serve them. Christ's submission also meant:

3. Christ willingly laid down His desires (8) He was Lord. His will was done in heaven and on earth. His desire counted, but:

a. He who was Lord became obedient He laid down His own desires and submitted to the will of the Father. Think of that struggle in Gethsemane, of Jesus, desiring with every fiber of His being not to have to face the cross, but knowing it was the Father's will. He became obedient and went to the cross. So:

b. we must consistently lay down our desires We have to be willing to put aside what we want in favor of what the Lord wants and yield our desires to those of others. This affects so many areas of life, where you live, what you do, who you date or marry, the schedule you'd like to keep. It gets so practical. Maybe you want sausage on the pizza and the other guy wants pepperoni; maybe you want to go to the Zoo and they want to go to the ball game. Do you always insist on your own desires or are you willing to lay them down? Parents do this continually for their kids. Christ's submission went even further:

4. Christ willingly laid down His life (8) He is life. He created life. He is the giver and sustainer of all life and yet:

a. He who was the Life-giver went to the cross He was not forced into it. He laid down His life voluntarily on the cross for our need of salvation. And:

b. we must consistently lay down our lives Maybe literally if necessary, like Jim Elliot and Chet Bitterman and some of our missionary brethren, but this thought epitomizes Rom. 12:1 for me. He laid down His life for us. We lay our lives at His feet and say, "Here Lord, take my life; make it a living sacrifice for you; let it be what will glorify you the most." Submission is where it's at. That's what we're called to imitate, to put Christ and others first. The world looks at that and says, "Man, what a miserable life," but just look at:

III. The Reward We Receive: Exaltation (9-11) Christ submitted Himself totally, but the Father raised Him up again and He was lifted up to Heaven where He is seated in exaltation at the right hand of the Father and one day the entire universe will bow to Him. And the same will be true in principle for us. Ephesians tells us we are already seated in the heavens with Christ. Revelation makes it clear that we shall reign with Him, sharing His glory and exaltation one day. It will be worth it all!

Friend, are you consistently imitating Jesus Christ, living in a spirit of true humility? Or are you living for yourself, putting yourself on the throne of your life? A woman was enthusiastically telling her friends the value of her first-aid class that she had just completed. She said, "Why just yesterday I was driving down the street and heard this awful crash in back of me. So, I pulled over and ran back to find a car wrapped around a telephone pole. When I got to the injured driver, he was a horribly bloody mess. My knees went limp and I didn't know what to do. Then I remembered my first-aid training so I bent down and put my head between my knees, and it worked! I didn't even faint!" Sounds ridiculous, doesn't it? But an awful lot of folks, when the pressure's on, do the same thing; they do what benefits themselves first. Will you be consistent in putting others first? That's imitating Jesus.

2:12-16 - Consistently Exhibiting the Reality of Christ

I told you last time that chapter 2 is showing us that consistency is the very basis of the Christian life. The first part of the chapter told us that we must consistently imitate the humble attitude of Jesus Christ. Our text this morning tells us that we must consistently exhibit to others the reality of Jesus Christ. It would help us as we begin in verse 12 to get a clear understanding of:

I. The Nature of the Christian Life: Outworking (12) There is a continual process here, a thing that Paul wants to see happening in a consistent way in these Philippians. You see, the whole of the Christian life is a working out of your salvation. Now let me explain what that means. When we say "working out", we often mean making arrangements for something to happen. We work it out so that we can do something or so that we can buy something. The goal is out in front of us and we arrange things so we can get there. But that's not what Paul means at all. We don't work out the details of getting to heaven. That's salvation by works. Salvation in that sense is already settled and past. But sometimes we use "working out" in another way. We make a decision and then "work out" the effects of it later. For instance, you get married and then you work out who's going to take out the trash and what school the kids will go to and all the hundred other things that marriage brings. You take a job and then you work out the details of how to operate the computer, or learn the proper company procedures for things, and so on. The goal is behind you; you already have it and now you're living it out decision by decision and step by step. That's how salvation is. You have it from the moment you accept Christ, but you work out the effects of it in your life until you die! That's what the Christian life is, the working out of the salvation you received. Now, Paul says that:

1. it must be serious It should be done with fear and trembling. This is not fear and trembling because you are wondering about whether God will let you into heaven. It's the fear and trembling you get when you've been handed an awesome responsibility, like when you're walking down the aisle and the thought hits you, "What have I done" or perhaps when that first baby is born and the responsibility hits home. Living a Christian life is a serious thing; it represents Jesus Christ. We must take the way we live, the way we work out our salvation seriously, solemnly, carefully.

2. it must be self-motivated He already said this back in 1:27. He doesn't know whether he'll be released from prison or not, whether he will get to be with them or not. But he's counting on the fact that this process of being serious about living out their commitment is going to happen anyway, regardless of whether anyone is there to push them along or not! So our Christian life is a serious thing, but there's good news in verse 13.

II. The Source of the Christian Life: God (13) In 1:21 he said, To live IS Christ. Now he explains that further. The Christian life is not something I go out and do on my own. It's not a set of rules I keep or actions I take. It is not me working out my own life. It is God working in me, living in me, living out His life through me. That's what makes my life such a serious thing. God is at work in me doing something and I have to cooperate! Now, what is it He's doing in us?

1. He is the source of our willing He gives us the power to will to do what pleases Him. He shapes and forms our desires and our will so that we gradually come to want what He wants and desire to please Him. For example, the last thing in the world I wanted was to be a pastor; I told God that, but He worked in me until I wanted what He wanted! But not only that:

2. He is the source of our doing It is not up to me to simply act in my own strength. He is at work in me both to will and to do. The Greek word is energeo, which means to energize or empower. He empowers me to do what He wants! That's the Christian life. Once I'm saved, God lives in me and He works out my life; He shapes my will to be like his and He energizes me to do the things that please Him. That is, if I cooperate with Him and yield myself to Him. Now, what is:

III. The Effect of the Christian Life: Purity (14-15a) My life takes on a special quality that is very important, moral purity. Everything I have to face in life, everything I have to do, I should do without complaining or arguing. Complaining means murmuring. That's between me and God. That's the "I don't want to" that's down inside of me and even though I do the thing because I know God wants me to, I still don't like it inside. Arguing is external, how I react to other people. It's the "I don't want to" that I give to other people. So I argue and fuss with them. But God's goal, what He's trying to work out in my life, is that I become two things:

1. pure internally before God The Greek word for pure is used for a metal that has not been alloyed, but is pure silver or gold. That's talking about the sincerity of our motives. If we yield to Him, we become unmixed, not two-willed, but sincerely wanting what He wants, which is always that which is right and pure.

2. blameless externally before others Literally, the word means unblameable. God wants to build your life so that nobody can point their finger at you and say, "There, that thing in your life is wrong; you shouldn't be doing that!" OK, so thus far we learned that our Christian life is a serious thing because God is at work in us, shaping our wills and our actions so that we display purity, so that our motives are clean inside and our actions are straight outside. Now here is:

IV. The Purpose of the Christian Life: Shining (15b-16) Here's why God is doing all of this, so that we can shine, like luminaries, like stars in the darkness of space, like straight people in the midst of a generation that is crooked and depraved. You see, the point of the Christian life is really:

1. exhibiting the reality of Christ to others How will they know He's real except that they see the difference He makes in our lives compared to their own and those around them? That's why consistency will either make me or break me. If I consistently demonstrate a difference to them, they will know that Christ is real and He lives in me. I don't merely imitate Jesus Christ, I demonstrate Him; I put Him on display as an exhibit for all the world to see. Compare 2 Cor. 4:4-7. Unsaved people are in darkness, but the light lives in us. We are simple clay vessels. Yet if I can let the light shine through my clay exterior, others will see it and as a result I am doing something else:

2. holding out the offer of life to others The Greek term hold out would be used in a situation where there is a guest at a banquet and the host holds out a cup to them, offering them a drink. By our lives, we offer people a drink of the water of life, living water that will well up in their souls. But we are the clay vessel in which this precious treasure is kept and that's why the character and quality of our life is so important! I have to polish and make the glass clean so the light will shine through. When you wash windows, the thing that keeps the glass clean is consistency! The more consistent we are, the more clearly people see Christ living in us and the more real He becomes and the offer becomes to them.

Now, Paul seldom leaves a passage that reminds us of our responsibilities without saying something about our rewards and so we have:

V. The Reward of the Christian Life: Glorifying (16) Now Paul thinks ahead to that Day when we all stand in the presence of Christ and what it's going to be like. He says if they are consistent, he's going to boast. The word boast is not a good English translation here, because in English to boast is to brag and has a negative connotation. That is not necessarily true of the Greek word, which is why the KJV translates it glory in most places. It's not the concept of "Everybody look what I did," but rather, "Oh, just look what God did with me! I never dreamed...!" And you and I will do the same. If you live a consistent Christian life, then on that day you too will glory:

1. in the effect your life has had on others You'll marvel that God brought others to Christ through you and they brought others and so on. You'll shout Hallelujah and your eyes will well up with tears of joy and you'll worship the Lord because so many others have been touched by your life. But not only that. You'll glory:

2. in the fact that your life counted, that it wasn't in vain, wasted, useless, that you invested it in eternal things, things that last.

But if you want to glory on that day, you've got to be consistent in exhibiting the reality of Christ right now. What does consistent mean? Let me ask you a few questions. If your car starts 1 out of 3 times, do you consider it consistent? If the paper boy skips the Monday and Thursday editions, are they missed? If you fail to come to work 2 or 3 times per month, does your boss call you consistent? If your refrigerator quits for a day now and then, do you excuse it and say, "Oh, well, it works most of the time?" If your water heater greets you with cold water once in a while, do you call it faithful? If you miss a few mortgage payments each year, does the loan company say, "Oh well, 10 out of 12 isn't bad?" If God had to tell you your rating right now, would He call you consistent, consistent in your walk with Him, in your quiet time, in your assembling with other believers, your giving, your obedience, your attitude, your behavior? If we expect faithfulness from other people and things, does not God expect the same, if not more, from us?

2:17-29 - Consistently Appreciating the Ministry of Others

At verse 17 Paul digresses for the moment from what I call doctrinal or teaching material, and enters a block of personal material. After all, Philippians is a letter that Paul wrote to the church at Philippi. I told you in the beginning of this series that the occasion for writing this letter is that the Philippian church had sent Paul a monetary gift and he wanted to acknowledge it and thank them for it and then also to lay out some of his immediate plans which happened to concern two men, Timothy and Epaphroditus. The thing I want you to look for is the way that Paul appreciated the ministry that other people had toward him. First notice that:

I. Paul Appreciated the Philippians' Giving (17-18) What's going on in these verses doesn't strike us, because the concept of making an animal sacrifice is so far removed from our society. But, both to the Jews and to the pagan Gentiles, sacrifices were a vital part of their worship and were made every day. Paul is painting a word picture here. He sees their monetary gift as a sacrifice being offered to God. Compare 4:18. He sees the Philippians as priests serving God. And he sees the fact that his own blood might be shed by the Romans, as though it would be a drink offering poured out on top of an animal sacrifice. What he's saying is, "Thanks for your wonderful sacrificial gift; even if I am poured out on top of it as a drink offering (that is, even if they kill me), I am still glad and rejoice with you!" You know, most folks find it awfully hard to be appreciative of others when their own life is on the line, or even when they're going through a tough time. Not Paul. He appreciated what the Philippians had done, even though he might die and not get to use it. Here's why:

1. he recognized their sacrifice The very concept of sacrifice has in it the idea of cost. A sacrificial animal had to die. To offer a sacrifice was a serious act, even if that sacrifice was not alive. The Philippians didn't just write him a check out of their thousands in the bank. They scraped together an offering to send. They dug down deep and maybe did without something to give to him. And Paul knew that and he appreciated it. The fact that he was making a sacrifice himself by being in prison, that he might have to die, didn't lessen in his mind the sacrifice that they made for him. Also:

2. he recognized their service Service is the word for priestly service, the making of an offering to God. Paul saw that in their giving they weren't just feeling sorry for him. They were offering their best to God by giving to him. And Paul appreciated that. Ministers and missionaries are often in a better position to understand this because of all the special gifts people give them, but it's not limited to them. There are times in your life when people give you things too, things that are costly, things that they give to you because they love God. And often it happens in a time when your need is greatest. Do you appreciate them? But giving is not the only thing Paul appreciated:

II. Paul Appreciated Timothy's Caring (19-24) 1:1 tells us that Timothy is there with Paul as he is writing and is also sending his greetings. Paul has a plan for Timothy. He's going to send him over to Philippi soon so he can be with them for a while and then come back to Rome and report to Paul how they are doing firsthand. And then Paul shares the reason he appreciates Timothy the most. Timothy was like Paul; he didn't have any money to give, but he gave his love. In fact, Paul says:

1. he genuinely cared for others Here's an interesting thought. The Greek word translated care here is the usual word for worry. It's used in 4:6 where we're told not to be anxious. Timothy was genuinely concerned about other people. He like Paul worried (in the good sense of the word) about what was happening to them and whether they were progressing spiritually.

2. he sought the things of Christ Most people are not like that. They look out for number one, for themselves, for their own interests. But Timothy sought one thing in life. His primary interest was those things which matter to Christ. He was out to see that people got saved and that they were growing and maturing in Christ. Now, there's something we could imitate!

3. he proved himself by service Paul had watched him in action. They had labored side by side like father and son for years. He remembered that. He didn't forget all those things and let his mind be occupied by his current predicament. He appreciated the way Timothy had demonstrated that caring heart over the years. And he said so! Do you? Do you appreciate the caring that others have shown for you, those who have comforted you and worried about you and stopped by or called to check on you? But there was another man there with Paul and:

III. Paul Appreciated Epaphroditus' Coming (25-29) Epaphroditus was from the church at Philippi. The church had sent him to Rome to see Paul and to hand-deliver their gift. Now, don't forget that was no easy undertaking in those days. We're talking 700 miles as the crow flies. From the east side of the Greek Peninsula, across the Adriatic Sea to the west side of the Italian Peninsula. He almost certainly went part way, if not all the way, on a ship. It was a trip that took weeks, if not months, and was fraught with danger and especially so, since he was carrying a sum of money! But there were other dangers. Along the way somewhere Epaphroditus fell sick. Maybe he arrived at Rome sick and it got worse there, but in any event, he nearly died of the illness. Word of his illness was sent back to Philippi and now they were worried about him. However, he's well now and has evidently spent some time with Paul and Paul is going to send him back to Philippi carrying this letter to them. But Paul has come to appreciate some things about him:

1. he was a brother You see, other Christians are not just other people who agree with us. They are family; they are brothers and sisters. We share a common life and a common love and common concerns. Moreover:

2. he was a fellow-worker Epaphroditus was working for Christ right alongside Paul. So many times, the people we appreciate the least are those who labor alongside of us, those who give their time and energy to serve the Lord with us. It might be the other Sunday School teachers, the other members of the Youth Staff, the Properties Committee, or the people working to serve the dinner. Sometimes we fail to appreciate the work of others. But Paul noticed his fellow-workers and appreciated them.

3. he was a fellow-soldier Epaphroditus was not only working alongside Paul. He was fighting alongside him in the cause of Christ. Soldiers who serve together rapidly learn to appreciate each other, don't they? They fight together. They learn to depend on one another. They are committed to each other. They will often endanger themselves for one another. Christians ought to be like that. And that's what Paul appreciates most about Epaphroditus:

4. he risked his life (30) He almost died in serving Christ, in bringing the gift to Paul. But the point is not just that he almost died. It says he risked his life. The word risk in Greek means to throw aside, the way a soldier might throw aside his shield and expose himself to the enemy in order to save a wounded friend. Epaphroditus knew it was going to be hazardous going to Rome. But he threw aside the security of his home and situation. He risked his life to meet Paul's need and bring him the gift. And Paul appreciated it! Maybe somebody's gone out on a limb for you a time or two. Maybe they've risked something to meet your need, to be your fellow-soldier. That risk might have been physical like this one or maybe financial or legal or maybe they just stood by your side at work when you were taking abuse from the rest or at school when you were being picked on. Do you remember it? Do you appreciate it? What I'm driving is that:

IV. We Must Appreciate the Ministry of Others And I think we can glean three ways of appreciating people who have ministered to us and been a significant part of our lives from this passage:

1. rejoice over and with them (18) Rejoice is a term of ATTITUDE. If you want to appreciate somebody, your attitude toward that person and when you're with that person should be one of joy and gladness toward them. You should be glad for them and glad that you are with them. When you get a letter from them, does it stir a note of joy inside? If they show up on your doorstep, are you glad to see them? Appreciation is always expressed in joy.

2. receive them with joy (29a) Welcome is literally receive and is a term of RELATIONSHIP. In Greek it is prosdechomai which means to receive deliberately to yourself. Dechomai has at least 7 different prefixes. There is one that means "receive gladly", one "receive without reserve", one "receive under your roof as a guest", and so on. This one means, "receive to yourself". It's the word the Pharisees used in Lk. 15:2 when they said of Jesus, This man receives sinners. Jesus built personal relationships with them. He made them part of His life so He could reach them. Appreciation means more than just being happy for somebody. It means letting them into your life, building a personal relationship with them. You can't truly appreciate somebody and keep them at a distance. You make time for them in your life. You talk. You call. You pray. You give yourself to them.

3. reward them with honor (29b) Honor is a term of VALUE. Literally, it says, such ones hold in honor. Count them as being important to you, valuable to you. Tell them so when you have opportunity. Show them so by choosing them over less important things. If you want to honor your wife, don't just tell her how much you appreciate her; choose being with her over a night out bowling with the guys sometime! In other words, live so that your appreciation shows, so that the other person can see how valuable they are to you. And honor is not just a personal thing; it's a public thing. Tell others how valuable this person is to you, how much you appreciate and are glad for them. And treat them with respect and honor in front of others too!

Well, are you consistent in appreciating the ministry of others? I don't think any of us are. We all have people we just take for granted. We receive the blessing of having them in our lives without appreciation. And often it is those who are the closest to us. Let's make a new start in really learning to appreciate in a Biblical way those who mean the most to us.

3:1-9 - Consistency in Sound Doctrine

In chapter 1 we saw that consistency is what brings us triumph over suffering. In chapter 2 we saw that consistency is our very basis for living the Christian life. In chapter 3 we find that consistency is the sign of our maturing as believers. When you look at a young person, what is the sign that you look for to determine that they are becoming mature, that they become responsible, that you can count on them to do what they say, that you can trust them to behave properly without supervision? You look for consistency in their behavior. And that's how it is in the Christian life. The immature believer is like a roller coaster, up and down, on and off, obeying and falling. But a mature believer is consistent. The peaks and valleys have pretty well leveled off into a steady upward climb toward the goal, which is being like Jesus Christ. Now, if we're becoming mature, then Paul says it will occur in two areas. The first one is found in our text today and it is sound doctrine. The mature Christian is consistent in what he believes, not like a child blown about and tossed by every wind of doctrine, by every new theory that comes down the block, but holding fast to precious trust in the Lord Jesus Christ. Now, what we have here first is:

I. A Warning Worth Hearing (2-3) for all of us, whether we are new Christians or have been saved for many years. It's a warning:

1. against some dangerous people (2) There are some dangerous people out there and he's not talking about the Hitlers and the Castros and the persecutors of the world.

a. who they were The KJV calls them the concision, the flesh-cutters. They were false teachers who taught that it was not enough to believe in Christ, but that in order to be saved you also had to be circumcised as a Jew and keep the law. We commonly call them Judaizers and they crop up again and again in the New Testament. The church dealt with this issue clearly in Acts 15, stating plainly that circumcision was not necessary nor law-keeping, but people kept on teaching it and it spread throughout Asia Minor, to Galatia and Colossae and now it has crossed the water to Macedonia, to Philippi. It's almost like wherever Paul went and planted a church, sooner or later these Judaizers would come along and try to work on his converts to bring them into their own camp. But here's:

b. what they were really doing They looked good. They seemed to be Christians. They had a faith of sorts in Christ. They loved the Bible. They worshipped God. But Paul says they were really doing evil. He calls them dogs. Now, you have to understand that dogs in Bible times did not enjoy the privileged position they do today. Few families had a little pet dog to enjoy. For the most part, dogs roamed the streets and ate what they could; they were scavengers. When they killed Jezebel and left her body lay in the street for a couple of hours, the dogs ate her! A dog would look to steal any bit of food he could and that's what these false teachers were doing. They were trying to steal Christians away from true faith in Christ and bring them to their own cause.

There are still a lot of dangerous people out there today. They call themselves by various names like Jehovah's witnesses, Mormons, Christian Scientists, or New Agers. These groups are always looking to scavenge people away from true faith in Christ. Yet not all the false teachers are cults. The liberal theology which has all but taken over many of our mainline denominations, which denies the Bible, which denies the necessity of accepting Christ's atoning death, is the same thing! And here and there this false teaching will scavenge away somebody from faith in Christ alone. False teachers are everywhere and they are dangerous spiritually. Yet Paul is not merely warning against these dangerous people, but also:

2. against a deceptive principle (3) The problem with these folks was not so much their behavior or morality, but the principle of their doctrine, which is quite different from ours:

a. theirs is putting confidence in the flesh They believed in Christ, but they trusted in the flesh. It was Christ plus things that they had to do, works. Christ plus circumcision plus keeping the Law. Christ was not enough to be accepted before God. They trusted that their works, the things they did, made all the difference. That's the exact principle that all these false teachers today advocate. They want you to trust in the flesh, in works, in ceremonies, in joining their group, in anything except Christ alone. On the contrary:

b. ours is putting no confidence in the flesh We sing, Jesus paid it ALL. I put no trust in anything I do or say to save myself. I have absolutely no hope that my good deeds count one iota toward my salvation, either before I accept Christ or after. I don't save myself and I don't keep myself saved. I trust completely in Christ to save me. He says:

(1) we have circumcised hearts, not flesh Their hearts haven't been changed. They haven't been born again. They have circumcised flesh but we have circumcised hearts, hearts that are cleansed by God, whether or not we are circumcised in the flesh. Further:

(2) we worship by the Spirit, not the Law Our acts of worship are of the Spirit; they are moved by the Holy Spirit who lives inside us, not by mechanically doing what the Law requires. And the point is:

(3) we glory in Jesus Christ, not ourselves This is that same word boast from 2:16, remember? We don't tell God, "Look what I did; see how I kept the law". We simply stand in awe of the fact that Jesus did it all for us and shout "Hallelujah!" Now Paul gives us:

II. An Illustration Worth Comparing He gives his own testimony. He had everything the Judaizers were striving for and counting on. He was a supreme case. Here's:

1. what Paul previously trusted in (4-6) He had:

a. a good connection: Hebrew He was a native-born Jew, one circumcised the eighth day, not a proselyte. He was a Benjamite, a Hebrew son of Hebrew parents.

b. a good religion: Pharisee He was a law-keeper to the first degree. He was of the strictest sect of the Jewish religion. His ultimate concern was to keep God's law.

c. a good commitment: persecutor He didn't just go through the motions. He was sincere. He was zealous for his beliefs to the point that he persecuted those who disagreed with them!

d. a good record: faultless Nobody could point their finger at him and say, "There, you broke God's law". He was externally spotless as far as other men knew.

Lots of folks today trust in those things. They come from a good moral God-fearing family; they have a good religion (they are good Lutherans or Methodists or Jehovah's Witnesses); they are sincere (they get involved, they help the needy, they go to church often). And they are good moral people; nobody can accuse them of outright sin like greed or adultery. But they count on those things to make them acceptable to God. That's what Paul did once, but look:

2. what Paul did with it (7) Paul says, "Look, if I wanted to place my trust in fleshly things, in my own credentials, I have better ones than any of you! But none of them matter. I count them as loss, as wasted effort, compared to what Christ did for me!" You see, we have:

III. A Position Worth Holding (8-9) and Paul details it for us:

1. we count all things as worthless for salvation It's not that all the good things I ever did or will do are bad. It's just that when it comes to saving me, they are a loss, a waste of effort. In fact, they are more than that. They are rubbish or garbage or trash. Isaiah said that all our righteousnesses are like filthy rags when we try to hold them up to God and say, "This will save me". It's like holding up a wooden nickel to the cashier and saying, "This will buy that diamond". That's not the position I want to be found in when I stand before God. But we have a better position:

2. we have Christ's righteousness by faith I have the God-kind-of righteousness. I have the perfect righteousness of Jesus Christ Himself. 2 Cor 5:21 tells me we traded places. He took my sin; I got His righteousness. Compare Rom. 4:5. When I quit working for my salvation and simply trusted that Jesus bought it all for me, then God counts my trust in Christ as righteousness. So my whole hope of heaven, my whole confidence, is not one iota in me, but all in Christ Jesus! I wouldn't trade that for all the credentials in the world! But you already know that! Then why does Paul put this in the middle of a letter written to mature Christians? For that matter, why am I preaching it to you? Because it is:

IV. An Exhortation Worth Repeating (1) To hear it over and over again is safety; it is protection. You see:

1. we need a continual vigilance Satan's not stupid. He doesn't have his people go around chanting, "salvation by works". He'll put his point to you another way like, "Your neighbor Joe is alright; he's a faithful member of X church; you don't need to witness to him!" or "Those people over there are OK; they have their own way of worshipping God; they don't need a missionary!" or "After all, God's a loving God, how could he reject those thousands of faithful people who are striving with all their hearts and are so devoutly religious?" He might even go after you saying, "Are you sure you're saved? After all, you sinned yesterday and you never got baptized and you don't give very much to the church..." Do you see how clever Satan is? That's all salvation by works. We need to watch out, to be continually awake, and also:

2. we need a consistent avoidance We need to see those teachings for what they really are and consistently steer away from any other position than totally trusting in Christ alone. We need to consistently hold fast to sound doctrine.

One of the saddest things in my ministry has been a young man who gave his life fully to Christ in our former church. He grew and had devotions regularly. He began witnessing and I trained him and he began doing visitation evangelism with me. He began singing in church and giving his testimony. He got to where he would even preach. Shortly after we moved here, he felt called to the ministry. I urged him to go to come east and go to a good Bible school, but the pressures of family and illness and money weighed heavy and he went to a liberal college close by. He began pastoring some small churches. When I finally was able to visit him again several years later, he said, "You know, I've changed a lot. I can't really believe the Bible is verbally inspired anymore." When I asked, "Well, have you led anybody to Christ here?" his answer was, "I don't know. I hope so. Well, I mean I hope people are believing in Jesus as they worship." He was so bright, so on fire, so zealous for Christ. But he was scavenged by false teachers who lured him away from sound doctrine. And it can happen to you if you're not consistently vigilant and careful to avoid it.

3:10-15 - Consistency in Spiritual Growth

Chapter 3 is telling us that consistency is a sign of spiritual maturity. We learned last week that if we are mature then we will be consistent in sound doctrine. We will cling to our faith in Christ alone for salvation and never let go of it or waver from it. But there is a second thing that should be happening in our lives on a consistent basis and that is this thing we call spiritual growth. I've always felt that spiritual growth was sort of a nebulous kind of thing that you couldn't really put your finger on. It's hard to talk about. Physical growth is not something you can observe well each moment. If you want to know how much a child has grown, you wait a month or a year and then measure the effect the growth has had by the changes that have been made in them (height, weight, and so on). And spiritual growth is also hard to see in process. You can only tell whether it's happening to you by measuring the spiritual changes that have occurred in yourself over a period of time. Now, Paul tells us in verse 10 the changes that he wants to see occurring in his life, and by doing that, he gives us:

I. The Definition of Spiritual Growth (10) Spiritual growth means that four things are happening in my life and they are leading to a fifth. Growing means:

1. deepening my relationship with Christ Now obviously, Paul already knew Christ as his Savior. He already had established a personal relationship with Him. But the Greek word know means to accumulate knowledge by experience. Christ is a real living person. You can talk about knowing a person as an academic fact. "Yes, I know X; I met him once," indicating that you know who the person is and what they look like. But then you can talk about really knowing a person and you mean just what Paul does, accumulating knowledge by experience. When I met LuAnn, I knew her; when we got married, I had accumulated a lot more experience with her and knew her better. After many years of marriage, I've accumulated lots more experience and really know her! What does knowing someone mean? It means knowing how they think, how they feel about things, how they react to things, what they like, what pleases them. But it's more than knowing things about each other. It's growing closer to one another, being more dependent and involved with each other, being able to share and communicate at a deeper level. See, a growing relationship deepens and that should be true of your relationship w. Christ.

2. experiencing more of His power in my serving If you want to understand the power of His resurrection more clearly, compare Eph. 1:19-21. Power is the Greek dunamis, dynamite, explosive power that is incomparably great. It is so great that it not only spoke the world into being, but it raised Christ up out of the grave and caused Him to ascend to heaven and placed Him in authority over every other being in the universe! That power of God is for us. Compare Acts 1:8. It is planted inside of us in the person of the Holy Spirit and it manifests itself, not in miracles, but in witnessing, declaring the reality of Jesus Christ to others, whether in our words or our deeds. Paul said, "I want to be experiencing more and more of that power as I serve." Now, most of us think that spiritual growth is equal to doing more. The more a person is involved in the church, the more responsibility they take, the more we feel they're growing. But did you notice Paul's desire wasn't to do more? In fact, at this moment he was doing less than he had for years; he was in prison, confined! He didn't want to do more; he wanted to experience more of the power of Christ in what he did do. So many of the things we do, we just do. We prepare the lesson. We put on our robe and sing in the choir. We invite someone to the program or we cook the meal and take it over, with no thought that in order for there to be any value in it, the mighty power of God has to flow through that act to someone. It doesn't depend on you. The effectiveness of your service depends on Him. Spiritual growth is being more and more dependent on His power and less and less on your own human effort.

3. drawing closer to Him in my suffering It wasn't that Paul wanted to suffer. He just knew he couldn't avoid it. He wanted to suffer in a special way. Compare 2 Cor. 1:4-5. The sufferings of Christ in verse 5 are spelled out in verse 8 as Paul's sufferings. This is a bit of a mystery, but somehow when we suffer, we participate in the sufferings of Christ. Here Paul says we share in His sufferings and he says that as I share His suffering, there is a special thing, a fellowship, a communion, that He and I have together. When I suffer, I am drawn close to Him in a special way. And that is spiritual growth. When I suffer, does it draw me into a closer relationship with Christ? Do I love Him and lean on Him more? Or do I turn away from Him and lean more on myself to solve my problem?

4. surrendering more fully to Him in my living Becoming like Him in His death means that we become inside more the way He was as He went to the cross. And what was He like? He was sinless and pure and He was surrendered to the Father's will! His going to the cross was the final sign that He was fully surrendered, fully given over to the Father's will, without a hint of rebellion in Him. And if I'm going to be like Him, then I'm going to have to die, to die to myself and my own will and my own desires. Growth means that more and more I'm willing to lay my own will down and do His; I am more and more surrendered. Now, these four things are what growth is and, as they happen in me, the more I look forward to a fifth thing:

5. eventually joining Him at the Rapture (11) The word resurrection here is a special word in the Greek, used only here, and literally it means the out-resurrection from among the dead. In fact, in some manuscripts the preposition out is used in the verb and then again before the dead. He's talking about the time when some dead people will be raised selectively out from among all the dead. When's that? At the Rapture! On a surface level, the word somehow seems to mean that he's unsure about whether God will raise him from the dead unless he grows. But that's not it at all. The somehow indicates, not that he's uncertain about getting there, but that he's uncertain HOW he'll get there. Let me translate it like this, "So that I will arrive by whatever path at the out-resurrection, the Rapture". He doesn't know whether he'll get there by dying or whether he'll live on and be alive when it happens, but that's the ultimate end of growth. When I see Him, I will be made like Him, perfect and holy, full-grown!

Now that we have defined growth, let's talk about:

II. The Promotion of Spiritual Growth (12-14) I can't just go out and say, "I'm going to grow today". Spiritual growth is something that happens to me as a result of all the experiences I face and how I react to them. If I want to grow, what I have to do is to adopt the right kind of attitudes and habits that will allow me to grow when things happen to me. Growth requires four things:

1. it requires caution: watching for pride Paul says in verse 12, "I don't have it all; I am not totally mature" and then he says in 13, "And I don't ever count myself as being there; I'm ever climbing the rope but I haven't touched the top yet!" Spiritual growth will never happen if you become proud enough to think you have no room left to grow! Oh, watch out for that! It creeps in so easily! You start comparing yourself with others and look at how much more you do than they do and you feel pretty smug. You start to feel like there's little room for improvement, so you don't work on anything in your life! That's when you're dead in the water! Get ready for trouble!

2. it requires attention: forgetting the past When you're running, looking back slows you up. It doesn't matter how many hills you've climbed already, how far you've come. What matters is not what's back there, but what's between you and the finish line! It's wonderful that you've gained some victories and God has made some real changes in you. Thank God you're not what you used to be! But if you're going to grow, you can't focus on that. Growth requires giving constant attention to your life the way it is right now, recognizing the problems and flaws there now and working with God on those.

3. it requires effort: straining forward You don't just sit back and say, "OK God, grow me." Did you ever watch a track race as the runners come into the home stretch? Every runner kicks in with all he's got and sticks out his chest as far as it'll go and strains with every ounce of energy toward that mark, that finish line. Growing means doing what it takes. If it means getting up earlier to have devotions, then I get up. If it means giving up something I like, then I give it up. If it means changing the way I am, then I work at it with everything I've got, all the while counting on the Lord to do the real work. But if you're not willing to put out any effort to make changes in your life, then there's no room for growth to occur!

4. it requires stamina: pressing on Literally, the word is pursuing. If I'm pursuing something, then I don't let anything stand in my way. If there's a roadblock, I go around it. If there's a flat tire, I change it and keep on. But I don't quit. No matter how tough it is, I don't give up. Spiritual growth requires that kind of stamina, determination. No matter what disappointment, tragedy, failure, setback or trial comes to me, I won't stop. I'm going to grow. I'm going to get to be more like Jesus until I get to the finish line, the high calling, the upward calling, the calling to heaven, the Rapture, where God the judge gives out the rewards!

Now, before we quit, let's look at:

III. The Measuring of Spiritual Growth (15) How do I measure my spiritual growth. Well, here are two definitions to help:

1. maturity is consistently seeing these things in me For this life, spiritual maturity is not sinless perfection. Maturity is when I consistently see this attitude in me, when I consistently see that I want to deepen my relationship with Christ, to experience His power, to draw closer to Him when I suffer, and to surrender to His will! Maturity is when I realize I have faults and flaws and am putting my all into working on them with Him.

2. growth is consistently seeing God change me Where I differ from that attitude, where my thinking isn't like that, then I should see God changing me little by little. And when I consistently see that God is changing me, changing my priorities, changing my unwillingness, changing my attitude to want Him and what He has for me, then I am growing!

How about you? Is spiritual growth a consistent reality in your life? Do you see God at work in you? Are there changes in your habits, your personality, your attitudes, changes in those areas we've talked about? Or are you the same old you that you were last year? Somebody put it this way, "I'm not what I ought to be and I'm certainly not what I'm going to be, but thank God, I'm not what I used to be!" And that "what I used to be" isn't just before I was saved. It should be what I was last year or last month. The scientists have several tests for determining whether an organism is alive. One of them is growth. Growth is evidence of life. If somebody used this test on you spiritually, would they know you're alive?

3:16-21 - Consistency in Seeing the Future

New Year's Day is always a landmark in our lives. It's our official way of concentrating our thinking on the concept of the passing of time. Another year is gone; a brand new one lies ahead. People are always using it as an opportunity to evaluate themselves and to make resolutions to change things in their lives for the coming year. It's a shame that it takes a national holiday to do that. Time is something that should always be on our minds. The Bible has many admonitions about the importance of time, such as "redeeming the time", "numbering our days", "now is the time", and so on. And one of the signs of maturity in our lives as believers in Jesus Christ has to do with time. Think about children. They live for the moment. What's important to them is right now, whatever game they're playing, whatever fun they're having now. Tomorrow or next week or next year is a vague concept to them. It doesn't matter that if they eat all their candy today, there will be none left for tomorrow. But sooner or later they begin to mature and one of the sure signs of it is that they begin to see the future as well as the present. It may show in little ways like beginning to save money toward things they really want instead of spending it on the first thing they see. Of course, some people never grow out of that! But the sign of maturity is that we begin to focus our thinking not only on the present but on the future and we consider what we do now in light of what lies ahead! And so it is in the spiritual realm. A mature Christian is one who is consistently seeing the future and letting that impact on his life in the present. Now, Paul gives us here:

I. The Consistent Mindset of the Mature Christian (18-21) He does so by contrasting two different ways of life, the way that most people pursue and the way that we who love the Lord should follow.

1. how enemies of the cross live (18-19) Paul probably has in mind here the false teachers, the Judaizers from verse 2, but his description is really appropriate to the mass of unsaved people. They may have some degree of religion and some may be engrossed in this way of living more deeply or in a more openly vulgar way, but basically this is how the world lives:

a. their god is their bodily desires The Greek belly literally means the whole body cavity and is often translated womb. So here it stands for all the bodily desires from the stomach to sex and all the other desires of the old nature. Basically, people worship and live for what makes them feel good. That's what matters to them, whether it's having money or power over others or luxurious living or sexual gratification. It doesn't have to be bad things. It could be charity and helping the unfortunate or it could be family. They are committed to the things that give them good feelings inside.

b. their glory is the shameful things they do What they glory in or revel in is those things which make them feel good, things that in many cases are shameful things. People glory in having taken advantage of someone in a business deal, in having ripped the government out of taxes through some shady method, in gorging themselves with food or immersing themselves in music so as to forget every care in the world. In my late teens I worked in a machine shop and heard men brag about the girls they picked up and how drunk they got and heard women glory in the fornication they'd committed. That's what turns people on.

c. their goal is earthly things For most of them there is no concept of death and the hereafter. Their goal is here and now, to produce their own little heaven right here on earth, to have everything they want here and now. That's their goal in life. But:

d. their end is destruction Every human being ends up dead and will, unless the Lord comes first. And those that live this way end up, not annihilated, but separated from God in hell in torment forever and ever. They may get their little utopia now, but now is small drop in the bucket of forever. Yet that's how most of the world lives, consciously or unconsciously. Now here's:

2. how citizens of heaven live (20-21) There's a glorious truth here. We are citizens of heaven. The Philippians understood what Paul was saying perfectly. Philippi had a privileged status in the world; it was declared a Roman colony. That meant that all its residents had Roman citizenship conferred on them. So, even though they were living in Philippi, their citizenship was really in the city of Rome a thousand miles distant! And they were governed by the laws and privileges of Rome! Well, we've got a better deal! We're citizens of heaven. We live here, but here's not home. We are aliens and sojourners, pilgrims living abroad, in the world but not of the world. You see:

a. our God is the Lord Jesus Christ, Our Master The thing we worship is not ourselves and our own desires. It is the Lord Jesus Christ. He is what matters more than anything in our lives. He is the one who saved us and who freely gave us eternal life. Our highest allegiance, our first place, belongs to Him above everything else. And so:

b. our glory is to be like Him The thing that turns us on, what we want more than anything else, is not what makes us feel good, but it is to be like Him. The greatest thing in the world that can happen for us is for Christ to return and give us our brand new resurrected and transformed bodies. Compare 1 John 3:2-3. When He comes, I'll see Him and I'll be made like Him and that has an effect on my life right now! If that is the thing I really glory in, then I'll be striving to get as close to it as I can right now in this life. And so:

c. our goal: we await the Savior If we're mature and we realize that our Savior's coming, then we should live like kids anticipating Christmas morning, eagerly waiting, looking forward to that moment. Compare Col. 3:1-4. Our hearts and our minds are to be set on heavenly things, on the things of Jesus Christ, on the fact that we will spend eternity with Him! And of course:

d. our end is heaven We're citizens and one day there's going to be a census taken and all the citizens are going to have to come home and stay there!

So there you have it, two ways of living, one with the head buried in the sand and the other with the head lifted expectantly toward heaven. The tragic thing is that a believer in Christ can actually choose either one, at least to some extent. While a genuine believer is not going to stoop to all kinds of immorality and the like, it's very possible for him to live just like the world does, to invest all his time and energy into earthly things like making money and acquiring things and gaining a position and having a leisurely life, and never witness to anybody, never serve God or have any kind of ministry, never even develop much of a relationship with God. A mature believer has his eyes consistently fixed upward. He's alive with service to God, with things that count for eternity. He's always conscious that life is short and eternity is long and each moment is precious and what counts is heavenly things. Now, how is it that a Christian can keep that kind of a focus in life? Well, here's:

II. The Consistent Method of the Mature Christian (16-17) Paul gives us a couple of pretty simple things that can help to keep our eyes focused upward. First, the mature Christian is:

1. consistently walking in spiritual progress (16) What Paul's calling for is a commitment to never go backwards. Whatever state of maturity we get to, we commit ourselves not to revert to earlier levels. What a shame to see believers lick old habits, only to fall back into them years later, to see them move ahead and get excited for God and be serving diligently and then to see something get in the way and watch their service slack off and their excitement die out. The first commitment we have to make if we really want to mature is this: I will not go back! As I grow, wherever I get to, I will only stay there and go forward; I will not let myself return (relying of course on God's power to make it so). But then Paul gives us a very practical way to help make that happen and that is by:

2. consistently focusing on good examples (17) The Greek word here is the one from which we get the word mimic. We are to mimic or to imitate others who provide a good example for us. Isn't that how we grow as children? We try hard to do what others do and afterwhile we're doing it for ourselves and on our own. Then there's another word here that's important, the words take note, or KJV mark. It means to fix your eye on something, the way you would aim at a target, to focus on it and gaze at it carefully. One of the things that will really help us to mature is to pick somebody that is more mature than we are and focus on them and work to be like them in every positive way. Of course, we all have:

a. the example of Paul We have the biblical record of his life and ministry and his thoughts expressed in his letters. That provides for us a constant unchanging example that we can imitate along with every other Christian. But we should also imitate:

b. the example of others Now, please understand me carefully. I know that everyone has faults and flaws and if you fix your eyes on man, he will let you down. I know all of that and the warnings against it. I'm not advocating hero worship. But Paul is saying that we can easily find people within our circle of acquaintance who are mature and use them as spiritual examples. When I was a young Christian getting excited about Christ, I wanted to be like my pastor and a few of the older couples in the church who were witnessing Christians. And all along the way there have been others who have touched my life and displayed certain qualities of balance or humility or love or preaching style that I've tried to imitate and incorporate into my life. If you want to consistently go forward and continue the upward path of growth, look around you at the Christians you admire and respect and focus on them and learn what there is that you can from their example and strive to be like them in those ways and then move on to ever greater and greater examples, balancing it all the while by the biblical example that we have. You'll find it a great help.

Folks, I don't know when Christ is coming, but I know He is and that today it is closer than it's ever been before. An elderly lady decided to take a short railroad trip through an especially beautiful section of the country. It was to be her first experience of this kind, so she looked forward to it with great anticipation. After boarding the train, however, it took her quite a while to get settled. First, she couldn't find the right seat, then she spent a long time arranging and rearranging her baskets and parcels on the rack overhead. After they were finally in place, she took great pains to adjust the shade on the window until it was just right. When at last she was ready to sit back and enjoy the scenery, the conductor called out the name of her station and she had to get off the train. "Oh, my!" she lamented, "if I'd only known we would be here so soon, I wouldn't have wasted all my time fussing about those little things that really weren't important." What will you focus on? Will you bury your eyes in the little things of the present or will you focus them on your glorious future? The choice is yours.

4:1-9 - Consistency: The Key to Peace

Philippians has shown us over and over just how important a thing consistency really is in our spiritual lives. In chapter 1 we saw how consistency is what turns our suffering into triumph. In chapter 2 we saw how it is our very basis for living. In chapter 3 we saw how it is the mark or sign of our spiritual maturity. And now in chapter 4 we are going to see that it is the key to obtaining all the great blessings that God has promised to us as His children. As you know, Philippians 4 contains three of God's greatest promises in verses 7, 13, and 19, promises of His peace, His power, and His provision. And in each case, you'll find that, even though those things are promised to us, not all Christians obtain them. And the key that unlocks those blessings to us is consistency. So today, let's talk about the first blessing, peace. In verse 7 you have:

I. The Peace of God Explained (7) Most of the time we think of peace as some kind of special substance that God "zaps" us with when we're in trouble of some sort. Please notice that none of the verses in our text says anything about troubles or disasters. Peace is not something that is only for bad times. It is a constant attitude that should pervade your life. It is not something you get zapped with, but something you cultivate, an attitude with which you face life. First of all:

1. it is God's peace, the peace God has. Did you ever think about how God faces things? Does He worry when He sees a problem coming? Does He get afraid that things might not work out right? No, He faces everything with perfect confidence. He knows it is under His control. He knows nothing can shake or move Him or overthrow His plan and authority. So, God has a perfect calmness and confidence. Now, that is the very attitude that God has promised to you. You can face life like He does, without worry and fear, with absolute calm and confidence that God has everything under control and that He will perfect everything concerning you. Now note:

2. it is beyond human understanding There is a supernatural element to this. It is not merely positive thinking, working yourself up to believe that everything will turn out alright. There is a Divine transfer here. That peace which is God's, which Christ had when He said, Father into thy Hands..., that peace which He said is, My peace which I give to you, is actually given to us, placed in us by Divine action. Just like assurance is not simply a human thing but is the result of the Holy Spirit testifying with our spirit inside us that we are children of God, so peace is the work of the Holy Spirit inside us filling us with the unexplainable conviction that, because we are in Christ Jesus, everything is alright and God is in control, even when it looks like the world is falling apart. And here's what it does:

3. it guards the heart and mind Like an army of soldiers guards the fort, it protects both your heart, which points to your feelings or emotions, and your mind or your thoughts. From what? Well, you only have one Enemy! And what does he try to do to you? He attacks your mind to get you to doubt God's control and God's caring or even your own salvation. Or he attacks your feelings, trying to make you feel like God doesn't care, like things can't possibly work out. But when you have God's peace, it is like a mighty shield inside of you, protecting your mind from those thoughts of worry and anxiety and your heart from those feelings of self-pity and bitterness. Now, the big question is how do you get that peace in place in your life?

II. The Peace of God Obtained (1-6) That peace comes to you in the person of Christ Himself and the Holy Spirit who live inside of you. Verse 1 tells us that the key to obtaining it is how well we stand firm in the Lord. That is, how consistently we allow Him to be the very center and focus of our lives. And that means some very practical things about the way in which we live. First, if we are to know peace, it means:

1. consistent correction of strained relationships (2-3) Now here are two ladies in the church who have somehow gotten at odds with one another. They were evidently mature Christians and had worked side by side with Paul and a number of other key workers at Philippi. But now they can't agree or, it seems more likely, won't agree! Paul pleads with them to make peace with one another and asks others to help them do it. You will never have peace inside as long as you are willfully at strife with another believer. The whole world can be mad at you for being a Christian and that's fine, but you cannot allow yourself to continue in a state of bitterness or anger with a fellow believer and expect God's peace to pervade you. Rather, when you find a relationship with someone becoming strained, you've got to consistently do what you must to correct it! And the more consistent you are about doing that, the more you will experience of that peace you need.

2. consistent concentration on the Lord (4) Often we read this phrase too fast and think it means that we must try to be happy all the time. What it says is that we must consistently, always, when in trouble and when not, focus our attention on the Lord and what He's done for us and let that bring us joy. The very birthplace of peace is the cross. In dying on that cross, Jesus made peace for us with God. We are reconciled. We are at one with the Father. We are His and He is ours. And that is all that really matters in the whole universe! The earth can explode tomorrow; I can die; somebody can run a bus over me and what really matters is that He is in me and I am in Him. That secures me forever! And the more consistently you focus on that and concentrate on that and fill your mind with that, the more joy you'll have AND the more consistently you'll experience His peace!

3. consistent concentration on others not self (5) The KJV says moderation, the NIV gentleness, the NAS forbearing spirit, but the Amplified hits what I consider the key concept in the word, unselfishness. Whether it means holding back or being gentle with others or being fair with others, the key thought is focusing on others. The minute you begin to focus and concentrate on yourself and how you've got a problem and the great needs you have that are more important than others, you're dead in the water; your peace will evaporate. The Lord is near; in fact, He's right inside you and knows every thought. And if you're consistently concerned about yourself rather than others, it shows that you're not really concentrating on Him and depending on Him. So, peace comes as you consistently leave self to the Lord and concentrate on putting others first. But it also requires:

4. consistent communion with the Lord in prayer (6) Peace comes through consistently being in personal touch with the Lord daily and moment by moment. Now, that prayer needs to be:

a. when you are anxious Note the contrast here. Be anxious about no-thing, but be in prayer about every-thing. Whatever thing you don't want to be anxious about, pray about! Practically, this means that the moment you sense yourself beginning to worry or fret about something, just stop and pray and tell Jesus about it. And if you start to worry five minutes later, do it again. Keep on doing it until it quits! And do it:

b. with specific detail Petition and requests are specific words. Tell the Lord all about it. Tell Him what you need. Tell Him how you're starting to feel. Tell Him everything that's in your heart or mind and lay it all at His feet and say, "There, now it's yours and I trust you with it!" And do it:

c. in an attitude of thanksgiving, thanksgiving primarily for Him and for belonging to Him and for Him being in control. And when you get consistent at exercising prayer all the time, especially when you're worried or anxious, you'll find that that supernatural confidence of God is there and it protects you and you are able to sail through it all with an unshaken heart! So, consistency is the key to having God's peace in your life and it is also the key to seeing:

III. The Peace of God Sustained (8-9) Consistency not only brings it into action in you, but keeps it there and sustains it. And what keeps it sustained may be summarized in two things:

1. the consistent thinking of proper thoughts You can control your thoughts. You can choose what you think about. You can deliberately decide to think about things that are true instead of false, that are clean instead of dirty, that are right instead of wrong, that are positive instead of negative. You've got to consistently fix your mind on these things, let your mind dwell on these things instead of the other. And then there is:

2. the consistent practice of proper deeds You've got to be doing, putting into practice, the things you've been taught in church and have been told by others and been shown in the lives of the people who are your spiritual examples. You've got to develop behavior that is consistent. And when you do these two things consistently, you can count on:

3. the consistent presence of the God of Peace You see, our peace comes to us wrapped up in a Person, the Lord Jesus Christ. And that Person is not going to make His presence felt while our minds are not yielded to His control, but are focused on all the things WE want, nor while our bodies are not yielded to His control, but are focused on doing what WE want. Oh, His Presence will be there, but He's not going to let us sense it by giving us peace. That consistent yielding of the mind and yielding of the body to Him is what causes Him to give us continual and unshakeable peace of mind and heart.

You see, everything I've said could be summed up in one sentence spoken by Isaiah the prophet in 26:3, Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee for he trusteth in Thee. If you consistently trust God with every particle of your life, you'll have peace. If not, you won't. If God is everything to you, nothing else will matter and you'll have peace. If anything else is everything to you, the only peace you'll have will be the temporary kind you feel when you have a lull between problems and everything's going right. But Isaiah said that God's peace is literally "peace, peace", real, genuine, perfect peace, peace the world can't give and the world can't take away. And it can be yours. Fix your mind on Him.

4:10-13 - Consistency: The Key to Power

Paul pauses in verse 10 to say thank you to the Philippians for the gift they had sent him. It had been a long time since their last gift because they had no opportunity to send one. Paul rejoiced and thanked God, not only for the gift and what a blessing it was, but also for their continued love and concern for him. However, he wanted to be careful not to give them the wrong impression. He was in need, no question about it. He was under house arrest at Rome. He was living in a house that he had to rent with a soldier chained to his wrist 24 hours a day. He had to pay for the rent of the house and all his own food, but he couldn't leave the house to work and pay for it. Perhaps he was able to make a few tents while chained up and sell them from home but no doubt he lived also on gifts sent by his friends. It was a rough time for Paul, but the alternative was the Mamertine Prison which was free, but the last place anyone would want to go! So, gifts like the Philippians' were really important to Paul, a real lifeline. Yet he doesn't want them to think that his excited "thank you" meant that he was in dire need and hinting for more. Rather he made it clear that he was content in his circumstances, even though they were difficult. Are you? Some of you are living through difficult times right now, maybe physically difficult, maybe financially, maybe emotionally. Are you content where you are in life? Now first, I guess we'd better talk about:

I. The Meaning of Contentment Content in English conjures up pictures of a nap in the sunshine after Sunday dinner. It means enjoying your circumstances so much that you don't want anything in life to be different. But if that's what contentment means to you, I'm afraid you'll never have very much of it in life. The Greek word for content here means something you wouldn't even dream of; it literally means to be self-sufficient. Scriptural contentment is:

1. knowing we have the power to endure circumstances It is knowing that whatever circumstance comes my way, I'll have the strength to make it through. If my life falls apart, if the things I love are taken away, if I am in an accident and crippled, no matter what happens, I have full confidence that I will be strong enough to endure it. That's contentment. But it is more:

2. it is knowing you can endure without dependence on others It is knowing that your ability to make it through is not dependent on your wife or your husband being there, or your children being there, or your friends being there, or the government being there. Now, I want to clarify this so you don't get me wrong.

a. we can ask others for help Lots of people have the idea that they have to do everything in life by themselves without ever asking anyone to do anything for them. That's often rooted in pride. We don't want to admit to ourselves or anyone else that we need help. Even Paul asked people to do things for him. He asked Timothy to bring him his coat and his books and parchments. There's nothing wrong with asking other people for some help when you need it. God never made a person that could live without help from others. And:

b. God does use others to meet our needs Oftentimes, in fact almost always, other people are the answer to our prayers. I'm sure Paul was praying about his finances there in Rome; he prayed about everything else! And God moved the Philippians to send a gift. Contentment is not the feeling that I can lick the world by myself, that I don't need any help from anybody. What I'm saying is that:

c. our dependence cannot lie in others Contentment is knowing that my ability to make it through the circumstances is not dependent on any other human being. It is knowing that even if everybody in the world fails me or forgets about me, that I still have the power to make it through any circumstance. The sufficiency that I have doesn't come from counting on Mom and Dad or husband or wife or anybody else. That's what keeps a lot of people going. They know that they always can come home or that they always have someone to whom they can turn. Well, what if things change and that someone you're counting on isn't there? Contentment goes further than that; it is knowing that you can have the power to endure anything whether anybody's there for you or not. That's a tall order, isn't it? You're probably thinking, "How can I have that kind of confidence, that kind of power?" Well, Paul tells us here:

II. The Secret of Power And notice that he does say:

1. it is a secret The Greek word here is interesting. In Paul's day there were "mystery" religions, idolatrous religions who had certain teachings that they kept secret, for members only, much like secret societies today have special things they tell nobody, for example, the Masons. Paul says this is something the average person doesn't know! In fact, it is something that maybe the average Christian doesn't know, or at least hasn't really grasped. But Paul discovered it. And you can too. How?

2. it is learned in the experiences of life Paul says, "I learned it". Where? By being hungry, by being in need, by being shipwrecked and arrested and beaten and mocked and despised and stoned and a hundred other things that I'm sure Paul never thought he would face, any more than we thought we'd face the difficulties we've had in life. It wasn't something Paul read in a book and adopted mentally. It was something he had tested over and over again in the laboratory of life. He found that no matter what came along, he made it through; he had the strength for it. And here's what he figured out:

3. the strength is not mine but Christ's who lives in me I could never make it through all that Paul endured and come out standing for the Lord. Paul could never make it. But listen to what he says literally in verse 13, I have strength for all things IN HIM who in-powers me. That strength lies not in me but IN HIM and He lives in me, so He supernaturally releases His mighty power in me as I need it. That's how I get through things. Remember Acts 1:8, You will receive POWER when the Holy Spirit comes to live in you. You see, the doctrine of the indwelling Christ is not just a theological statement. The mightiest being in the universe, El Gibbor, the Mighty God, actually dwells inside me when I receive Christ. Therefore, the life I live is no longer lived merely in my own ability and strength. Paul put it this way in Gal. 2:20, ...I live, yet not I, but Christ lives in me. So I find that:

4. in Him I have strength for all things The Bible asks the question, Is anything too hard for the Lord? Well, is it? No, Christ has power sufficient for anything I might face and that means that I can have power for:

a. each particular circumstance, for whatever state I find myself in. Wherever you are right now, no matter how difficult or how hard, He has power sufficient to get you through it. Wherever you may be tomorrow, He has power for it. In every moment of your life, you can stop and look at it and say, "God can handle this!" So, you can have power for:

b. any kind of circumstance Paul lists a range of them from well-fed to hungry, from need to plenty, from not having enough to having more than enough. And you might add from sick to healthy, from fatigued and burnt out to energetic, from despised and rejected to beloved.

Listen, here is contentment, knowing that whatever circumstance you face in life, the Christ who lives in you will give you sufficient power to face it. If He brings it into your life, He will give you the power to endure it! Look back at your life. Hasn't He always brought you through since you've been saved? Haven't you always found that when you needed it, you had the strength? Well know this: that will always be true! Whatever He sends you, He'll strengthen you to endure! So, why are so many Christians so miserable and despairing and fearful when they face problems instead of having a calm assurance? And why do we sometimes not experience this power and strength? It's because there is a key that unlocks this power and that also unleashes true contentment. And, as you might guess, it is:

III. The Key of Consistency There are three things that I must be consistent about:

1. I must consistently remember my own insufficiency Whenever I think to myself, "I can handle this. I don't have to pray about it. I don't need God's help on this one", you can rest assured that God will let you try it without His help. As long as you feel that you are strong enough, don't expect God to be supplying you with His divine strength. His strength can only be made perfect in weakness. I have to consistently remember what Jesus told His disciples, Without Me you can do nothing! That must be my consistent attitude. I can't prepare a sermon, I can't preach, I can't counsel, I can't be a good father, I can't be a good husband, I can't do anything in and of myself. I need His power. Then:

2. I must consistently remember His all-sufficiency This is the key that unlocks contentment and confidence in my life. I have an all-sufficient Savior. I need to remember that, With God nothing shall be impossible! And when I am convinced of that, that God is bigger and His power greater than any problem I face, then I will be able to rest quietly in my circumstances, whatever they are, trusting in Him. When I forget that, I will be full of worry and anxiety and fear. And finally:

3. I must consistently look to Christ for strength I must depend on Him moment by moment, through each day. It becomes a matter of prayer. When I get up in the morning I pray, "Lord, live my life today; let me do everything I do in your strength." And when trouble or problems come, I go to God in prayer saying, "Lord, I thank you that you are sufficient for this and that I have your strength. I am relying on You." Whose strength are you relying on?

You know, if there's one line that I heard from my children when they were young, it was, "I can do it, Dad; let me do it myself." And that's healthy when you're talking about children learning life skills. But sometimes Dad knows they can't. And they try and try and get frustrated and get mad. And sometimes they walk away and never achieve what they want. But sometimes, they turn and say, "Dad, would you help me?" because they know that in their eyes Dad can do most anything. Folks, we have a Heavenly Father who really CAN do anything, who really can empower you to face anything life may throw at you. Won't you turn to Him in childlike faith every day and say, "Father, would you empower me to live my life today?"

4:14-23 - Consistency: The Key to Provision

What a beautiful chapter full of promises this is. Paul says that through Christ we have PEACE for every circumstance, we have POWER for every difficult situation, and, today, that we have in Him the PROVISION of our every need. Now, that concept is somewhat removed from many of us. If I were to ask how many of you prayed for your daily meals this week, not too many hands would go up. Why? Because you and I are used to the idea that our needs are met by things like paychecks, credit cards, loans, and insurances. We need to constantly remind ourselves that every penny we receive, every bite of food we eat, every piece of clothing we wear, is a gift that God has provided for us. Of course, He did it through means, like a job or something natural, probably, but nevertheless, it is from Him and He could cut off any and every one of these things if He wanted to. So, on what basis does God provide for me? Is it automatic, the way I provide for my children? Well, to some extent it is. God seems to somehow always keep His children from starvation, basically. And then there are plenty of Christians who never pray about finances and make an adequate amount of money and go through life without ever being in real need. However, the real question is, "When the time comes that I have a real need in my life, can I count on God to provide it? Can I know that God will not just keep me alive, but will meet the needs that He brings into my life if circumstances change?" To answer that, I'm going to share:

I. The Principle of Giving Luke 6:38 says, Give and it will be given to you. Here is a timeless, unchanging principle that you will find all through the Bible in different ways. God's giving to you depends on whether or not you are a giver. Now I know that is the exact opposite of every financial principle the world will ever teach you. The laws of economics say that to meet your needs, you must get all you can and keep it. Only give it away if you know it will come back with interest. But God has a different law; for Him to fully provide for your needs, you must be giving. I have noticed over the years that when Christians get into need, here's what usually happens first. They don't shut off the cable TV. They don't sell the new car with its expensive payment and get one they can buy for cash. They don't give up the family vacation or cut down on Christmas. The first thing they do is to quit giving! That's following the wrong principle. You live under a different one. If you want God to fully provide for you, then you must give. So let's talk about:

II. The Practice of Giving The Philippians had sent a substantial gift to Paul to meet his needs during his confinement at Rome. Paul is thanking them for it in this section, but in the process he is laying out some key things about the practice of giving.

1. it is participation (14) Let me make this clear. Paul is not saying, "You shared money with me when I was in trouble". He's saying, "You shared in my troubles with me by giving!" Giving is special. It is participating, taking a joint role in the situation. When my friend has been sick and off work and can't pay the mortgage and I give to him, in a very real way I am sharing his problem, taking it on my shoulders too. When I give to a missionary as we do, we are participating in the life and work of that missionary as a co-laborer, sharing with them in the ministry. When I give to the ministry of a local church, I am sharing in the life and ministry that local church has. The ministry our church has to every community family, to every soul we bring to Christ, to every Christian we encourage and build up, I share a part in that because I give. Giving is so much more than writing a check and subtracting the balance. It is sharing in the life of others. But:

2. it is against our nature (15) The Philippians were the only church that gave Paul a missionary support gift as he left them and went on. The churches of Cyprus and Asia Minor never did. Yet when he left Philippi, they felt obliged to give to his ministry. Why were they the only ones? Things haven't changed much. Do you know that the entire cause of foreign missions is supported by only 25% of the evangelical churches in this country? 75% give little or nothing to missions. Why? Basically, because giving is against our nature! What God asks and expects us to do goes against our grain. Don't expect other folks to understand the fact that you give significantly to God. And don't expect it to come easy at first. It may be tough to watch that money go off to the Lord's next project, when you have so many of your own! But as you do it, you'll discover how God really blesses you because of it.

3. it must be consistent (16) When Paul left Philippi, he went to Thessalonica. He stayed there a relatively short time, perhaps as little as two months and certainly not more than six, but during that time the Philippian church had sent him gifts at least twice (the NIV again is literally once and twice). Now Paul is confined at Rome at least 7 years later and they have sent another gift. No doubt they have sent gifts all through the years. Compare 1:5. The point is that they saw the need to give consistently, not just once and done. They gave as a way of life, a consistent habit. And that is the key that unlocks God's promise of provision! I wonder how many of us have a consistent habit of giving where we covenant with God to set aside 10 or 15 or 20% of all that God gives us to give to Him. The kind of giving God wants to see in us is the kind that is repeated and consistent, a way of life, so that it is as natural to put aside God's money each week as it is the grocery money!

4. it affects your account with God (17) God's an accountant, a bookkeeper; did you know that? And you have an account with Him in heaven. A record is being kept of your service for Him and part of that service is giving. Paul wanted to be sure that his readers weren't taking him wrong. He didn't intend them to see his words as a plea for money (neither do I want you to see this sermon that way), but he wanted them to understand that the Heavenly Father who sees you give in secret will reward you openly one day. So, the long-range effect of giving is that it affects the reward that we receive at the judgment seat of Christ one day. Like an IRA, you can't touch it now, but it has been carefully gathering eternal interest for that day! Now here's one further thing to realize:

5. it is toward God (18) When you give, whether it is to some individual or to a missionary or to the local church, it is far more than that. The act may be earthly, toward an earthly cause, but:

a. its fragrance ascends to God, just like the sacrifices that were made in the Old Testament. They were offered on earth and then the priests got to eat them for the most part, but Leviticus says time and again that their sweet savor ascended to the Lord. Close your eyes and picture Thanksgiving dinner at home; now smell it, can you? Remember how good it smells and the delight it gives you to smell it? When you give, it smells good to God. In fact:

b. it is an acceptable sacrifice for Him You don't bring a lamb to church, do you? Why not? It would not be acceptable to God, because, as far as salvation goes, your Lamb was already sacrificed on the cross. Ah, but your giving is just as much a very real sacrifice offered to God, just as the Israelite would bring his lamb. It is the sacrifice that God has designated for us to bring, the one that is acceptable to Him. And so you see:

c. it greatly pleases Him when you give When you make that sacrifice and give, the aroma of it satisfies and pleases Him. Think how you feel when you see your child be touched the need of poor children and give away a toy of their own. You are well-pleased. That child has a heart like you want them to have. They are becoming the kind of person you desire. So it is with God as we give. And because of that we have:

III. The Promise for Givers (19) Now please, if you're not giving seriously (and I'm not talking about quantity alone; the poor widow impressed Jesus with two coins because it was all she had), if you're not giving a significant portion of your income on a regular basis (and God's Old Testament definition of significant was at least a tenth), then please don't expect to hold God to this promise. It is for His children who are consistently practicing giving. But if you're a giver, look first at:

1. God's assets God is rich; He is wealthy. But notice Paul does not say, "His riches in the world". He says, His riches in glory. Frankly, I don't understand what that means. I imagine it has something to do with the verse, No eye has seen, no ear has heard, no mind has conceived what God has prepared for those who love Him. I can conceive that God owns the cattle on a thousand hills and the wealth in every mine. I can conceive that He owns heaven and earth. But His assets in glory are far beyond that, beyond what my mind can imagine and they come to me in the person of Jesus Christ! If I am in Him, then every one of those things God has prepared is mine and I will have it; I am a joint-heir with Him. But the point is that if I'm going to have someone guarantee my welfare, God is the One! I wish they would let Him cosign for me at the bank! There is never a need that you have that is too great for His resources! And here's:

2. God's commitment First:

a. to meet every need Financial needs, yes, but it's not limited to that. God's riches aren't limited to that either. It includes physical needs, emotional needs, spiritual needs, emergency needs, regular needs. It's not just that if you give money, God will give you money back when you need it. If you're pleasing God by giving, then God will see that every genuine, legitimate need you have is met, and not only that; He promises:

b. to completely meet it The word meet means to fill full, to fill the empty bag right up to the top. Listen, there are needs some of you have that you don't see how God could ever meet all the way. But God's not in the business of doing things half way. Of course, some things you think you need, are not really needs at all. But God has committed Himself to completely fill up every genuine need you have and you can bank on that. You can count on it. Most of the time He'll do it by using other people just like he used these Philippians to send Paul a gift. And in verse 18 he says that it fully supplied his need at that point!

Folks, I stand before you a living testimony that this is true. From the time I began to consistently give as a teenager, God has ALWAYS, without fail, met every need that I and my family have had. I have a lifetime of experience in proving that this is true. If you will trust Him and become a consistent giver, He WILL meet all your needs. Trust Him!

Colossians: Christ Who Is Our Life

Colossians is a short letter which is a very important part of our New Testament. Let me give you a brief:

Introduction: The Letter To The Colossians (1-2) First, note:

1. the circumstances of the letter: 4:10,18 tell us it was sent from prison.

a. the author: the Apostle Paul who was in prison in Rome about 60-62 AD. From there he is writing letters to the churches and individuals he cares so deeply about to encourage them in their spiritual walk.

b. the readers: the church in Colossae (which is reasonably near Ephesus in Asia Minor, modern Turkey). Now, Paul had not been to Colossae. He had not founded this church, but it was probably a result of the outreach that occurred during his three years at Ephesus and he felt a spiritual responsibility toward them.

c. the occasion of this letter seems to be a report from their founder Epaphras (7-8). According to Philemon 23, Epaphras somehow wound up in prison with Paul there in Rome. It sounds as though Paul had originally sent him out on a mission to Colossae, but now here he is in Rome sharing a report of all the wonderful things God had done in establishing the church there, how the Colossians were full of love and faith and how the church was growing. That filled Paul's heart with joy, but Epaphras also shared some of the problems that were going on there and that brings us to:

2. the content of the letter: it was sent for prevention, to prevent the church from falling into the things they were being confronted with by the world around them. So, the first half of it:

a. it is doctrinal: to guard true faith in the face of growing heresy - Chs. 1-2 There were false teachers around then, just as there are today. Some of them were legalists who were trying to make rules that believers must follow. "You must do this and you can't do that." They taught a gospel of performance. "If you do this and don't do that and do it well enough, God will accept you." Isn't that what the majority of the people around you believe even today? If they have any kind of a belief in God at all, it is usually based on this belief. Then there were others who would be called Gnostics, "people in the know" who thought they knew better. "Jesus was not really and fully God. He was someone God created, a great teacher, a moral example." And you know, that Gospel is preached even in church buildings throughout our land and, indeed, the world today. "Jesus was a great prophet and teacher but he cannot save you; you must do that!" So, Paul spent two chapters clarifying doctrinal truths, confirming who God is, who Jesus is and who we are in Him. Then after that you'll find this letter:

b. it is practical: to help believers apply their faith to their daily lives - 3:1-4:6 Paul talks about the process of holy living. He talks about the family, about husbands and wives, parents and children. And in the end, you'll find:

c. it is personal: to communicate his love for them and invite their prayers for him - 4:7-18. So, let's begin our study where Paul begins, by talking about:

God Our Father: The Builder Of The Church - 1:1-8

Read verses 3-8. First, let's look at what Paul says about:

I. Who God The Father Is Notice a very important fact in the end of verse 2:

1. He is OUR Father (2b) God has placed Himself into a special relationship with all of those who believe in His Son. Jesus taught us to relate to Him that way. He said, When you pray, say, 'Our Father.' He is the God of the universe, but He has entered into a family relationship with us where we are His children and He is our Father. That may not mean much to you, especially if you don't have a healthy image of a father to relate to, but it actually means everything. A missionary was teaching a Hindu woman the Lord's Prayer. Hindu gods are capricious and vengeful. You fear them and you try to appease them. So when he got to the end of the first clause, "Our Father which art in heaven," she stopped him. "If God is our Father," she said, "that is enough. There is nothing now to fear." All fear toward God ceases when He becomes our Father. Paul wrote in Rom. 8:15-16, For you did not receive a spirit that makes you a slave again to fear, but you received the Spirit of sonship. And by him we cry, "Abba, Father." The Spirit himself testifies with our spirit that we are God's children. If you have come to Christ, you have a Spirit inside you that calls God, "Daddy!" You run to Him with joy. You crawl up on His lap for comfort. You ask Him with confidence to help you. You trust Him to take care of you. When God is our Father, all fear is gone; it changes everything! He's no longer our Judge, no longer a shadowy dark angry figure we have to face when we die, no longer a distant being who rules the world and sends storms and earthquakes and tragedies to punish wickedness. Do you realize how many people around you and throughout the world see Him that way? They're afraid of Him. They dread Him. But He's our Dad; He's our Father and we are the very children of God! What a privilege to know Him in that way! But then notice in verse 3 that He is also:

2. He is the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ (3a) That identifies Him as being unique. He is not one of the gods that the Greeks or the Romans talked about. He is not the god that Mohammed later claimed to reveal to Muslims. He is not any of the gods mentioned by the Hindus or Buddhists. He is not the higher-power god talked about by new-agers today or the kind of idol god worshipped by tribal peoples. There is not "one god behind all religions". God our Father is the God whom our Lord Jesus Christ called "Father". He is the one and only true and living God, the One who in the fullness of time sent forth His Son, Jesus, to save us. Paul wrote the Corinthians in 1 Cor. 8:5-6, For even if there are so-called gods, whether in heaven or on earth (as indeed there are many "gods" and many "lords"), yet for us there is but one God, the Father, from whom all things came and for whom we live; and there is but one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom all things came and through whom we live. People are big today on saying, "It doesn't matter what you believe as long as you believe in God!" and they formulate a god in their own image. They say, "God would never send anyone to hell" or "Surely God is not against the kind of sincere love that two homosexuals have." People indeed have many "gods," but for us there is only one God, the Father who revealed Himself in Jesus, and all the rest are false. They don't exist! Thirdly, in the end of verse 6 we're told that our Father:

3. He is a God of grace (6b), a God who gives us what we don't deserve and could never earn, freely and unconditionally. He is a God who loves those who were His enemies and sent His own Son to die in order to rescue them from the penalty of their sins, a God who accepts us not on the basis of any merit or behavior or performance on our part, but who offers us His own eternal life as a free gift, if we will simply believe the good news and accept it. There is no other god like that! That is what sets Our Father apart from all the other so-called gods that men have invented and our faith apart from every man-made religion. Eph. 2:8, For it is by grace you have been saved, through faith--and this not from yourselves, it is the gift of God... Our Father is also in the end of verse 6:

4. He is a God of truth (6c) While the world is casting about asking with Pilate, "What is truth? Who knows!", our God cannot lie. He cannot deceive. With Him there is no variableness or shadow of turning; He does not change like shifting shadows as other so-called gods do. Everything that He has told us in His Word is true. Everything He says happened, really happened. Every promise He has made, He will keep. Truth is His very character; it is at the core of His being. John wrote in 1 John 5:20, We know also that the Son of God has come and has given us understanding, so that we may know him who is true. And we are in him who is true--even in his Son Jesus Christ. He is the true God and eternal life.

That's who our Father is! Now here's:

II. What Our Father is Doing: Building A Global Church (6-7) There is a process going on all over the world. Jesus said the world is like a field and a sower is going out into that field and scattering good seed. That good seed is:

1. the Gospel (the Word of Truth) and as it takes root and germinates, it is bearing fruit and growing. That process happened right there in Colossae. The Gospel:

a. it came to them through Epaphras and they heard it When Epaphras came to town there wasn't one believer in the whole city. Nobody had ever heard the name of Jesus Christ. Most everyone worshipped pagan gods. But Epaphras began to scatter the good seed; he began to tell the story of Jesus, of His life, of His death, of His resurrection. And as the people of Colossae heard it:

b. God enabled some of them to understand and embrace it His Spirit spoke to their hearts and said, "Let there be light" and suddenly they saw the truth of grace. Jesus died for their sins! And they believed it and they repented of their sins and reached out in faith to Jesus. They became believers and the church was born at Colossae. And this Gospel seed continued:

c. it produced spiritual fruit in them It changed their lives. It produced in them the very character of God. It produced hope and faith and love. And they kept on planting seed, sharing the Good News with others and some responded and the church was growing. That's the process that happened at Colossae and that same process is happening right here in Glenside. We're planting seed and people are responding. The Gospel is producing the firstfruits of a harvest. And Paul's point is that:

2. the Gospel is doing the same thing all over the world, not just here. You see:

a. our Father has a global heart The Colossians needed to know it was happening in Rome and in Corinth and in Thessalonica and in Ephesus and in Galatia. All over the Roman world from east to west the Father was planting seeds and growing a church for His Son. In our day those borders have expanded to include literally the whole world. In the farthest reaches of the globe, from the church that is mushrooming into millions in China on the east, to the islands of the Pacific on the west, from the tip of South Africa to far north Russia, our Father is sending out the Gospel to every people on earth and it is bearing fruit and the church is being born and growing. Among the remotest peoples, in the deserts and the jungles and the hard places, the Gospel is growing and bearing fruit. We live in the time of the greatest harvest the world has ever known. The point would be that:

b. we must be involved with Him in the process both here and around the world. And we are. Here is a letter written directly to all of you by our national missionary partner Urias who is an evangelist in the lowlands of West Papua among the 6000 Iraputu people. Listen:

17 June 2002

To Rev. Yohanes Kless, the one whose name we lift up,

We greet you in the name of God, to all you people, from our place here. We greet you in the name of the Lord Jesus also. From January to now I ask your forgiveness because I have not written to you. For one thing, I was sick in my chest, like liquid [probably bronchial pneumonia]. Then I went to a film seminar, then to other towns for seminars. I am thankful to God for the time now to write to you. It is important for us to write what is happening in Papua to all God's people there. Because all of you, God's people, can pray with power. Therefore, we want to tell you these things, so that you will pray and we can all give thanks to God also.

First of all, I thank God for helping me to show the Jesus film 5 times already. (Probably more by now.) Many who see Jesus dying on the cross, they cry too. I waited for the TV and generator from missionary Lunow to come. They are easy for me to carry and to run. We thank God for this because we prayed for them for 2 years. And now this year God answered us. And we thank missionary Lunow too for helping us get them. Also, when I showed the Jesus film, it hit one lady's heart and she returned a machete that fell in the garden. She found it and used it for a long time. But when she saw the film, she gave it back to the person it belonged to. The woman who owned it was someone from our group.

We also give thanks to Pastor Kless and all the people there, because you gave us as much as 5 million rupiah for fuel for the boat. Therefore, Ibu Lois and my children, and all the people here in Babo/Aroba-Papua here say thank you to you all too.

We also praise the Lord concerning the first lady that Lois brought to the Lord. She recently died. But a few nights before she died, she said she could see her name written on the cross of Jesus. We really praise God for this to show her name to her. Because when we first came to Aroba, we saw many people die. They all had hurting flesh and many became unconscious, but they only saw the darkness. But this lady told everyone she saw her name on Jesus' cross; she was going to be with him. This made their hearts wonder at our message too.

Please keep praying about the idol worship houses. The people have stopped going to them and the grasses and weeds are all growing up along the paths to them. Pray now that God's voice will be like a sword and cut their hearts from the idols, permanently. Pray that the ones who have asked Jesus already into their hearts that Jesus voice will be very important in their hearts. And that they will invite me into their homes to teach them....

A while ago I went to the head of the Catholic religion in my area to get permission to show the Jesus film in his area. He told me to only show the film and not to preach, or say anything to the people. He also told me not to teach against their idols. But I told him that this teaching against idols is not from me, it is from God's voice to all mankind, not to worship idols. So whatever he is speaking against, he is speaking against God himself. All of this teaching is in the 10 commandments too. So he told me to bring the letter about the film to him, and he would sign it. We truly thank God because he opened this leader's heart, just a little. In September I want to show the film in his area 3 places. Please pray for us in this. In June I showed the film to the children that we teach in Babo town. I think this is all. I will tell you more about showing the Jesus film another time. Now we greet you, Pastor Kless, our older brother in the Lord. And we also greet your wife and your children. And to all of God's people in Glenside, we give your life to you. May God himself watch over all of us. Your lives to you, from us, Urias and Lois, and children.

Literally all over the world, Our Father is building a global church, growing a harvest of souls who receive His grace and wait for His Son to return. And we are co-laborers with Him in that process. And, amazingly, no matter where the Gospel falls and is believed, it produces the same results in the lives of the people who receive it. So, let's look at:

III. What Our Father Produces In Us (3-5) Paul had heard what the Gospel had produced in these Colossians. Because of it their lives were filled with three things that we also have. First:

1. we have hope: What's hope? Biblically speaking, hope is a present certainty based on a future reality. I am absolutely sure right now about what is going to happen in the future because I've been told so by a God of truth and He has guaranteed it. So I'm just waiting and looking forward to it! That's why that dear Iraputu woman could die in peace. She was filled with hope, with that certain knowledge that she belonged to Jesus and she was going to be with Him in heaven. Jesus said in John 14:1-3, Do not let your hearts be troubled. Trust in God; trust also in me. In my Father's house are many rooms; if it were not so, I would have told you. I am going there to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come back and take you to be with me that you also may be where I am. Dear friends, we have a sure hope that is stored up for us in heaven. We're going to be with Jesus and we can live and die looking forward with certainty to it. That's what the Gospel has produced in us. Secondly:

2. we have faith: What's that? In New Testament terms, faith is an absolute trust in Christ Jesus alone. The Psalmist said some trust in horses and some trust in chariots; today some trust in money and some trust in their own ability and their own performance; some trust in their religion and some trust in their extensive knowledge. But we trust in the name of the Lord our God; we trust in the only name under heaven given to men by which we must be saved, the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. And so, just as we were saved by trusting Him, we now live by trusting Him. Paul said we glory in Christ Jesus and put no confidence in the flesh, no trust in our own ability, our own wisdom, our own power. We trust in Jesus alone; we run to Him with everything, with every care, with every problem, with every circumstance. That's what the Gospel has produced in us! And finally:

3. we have love: What's that? In this text it refers to a sacrificial caring for all our fellow believers. The world's philosophy is "me first", every man for himself. We come programmed with that. But when we came to Christ, Rom. 5:5 says, ... God poured out his love into our hearts by the Holy Spirit, whom he has given us. So, we love one another with our Father's love. And they loved not just a few select friends, but all their fellow believers, even new converts or strangers to the body, ones who are traveling and needed a place to stay, ones who were hungry or hurting or persecuted, the ones who were slaves and the ones who were masters. They loved all the brethren and so will we. That's what the church is to be known for and how it will impact the world. Jesus said, By this will all men know that you are my disciples, if you love one another. That's what the Gospel will produce in us.

As Paul wrote this, he was thankful. Every time he prayed for the Colossians, he thanked God for what the Gospel had produced in them: hope, faith and love. And you know what? When I see the Gospel produce these things in you, I'm thankful too, because I can see our loving Father at work building His church in your lives. Come to your Father. Thank Him for being your Father, for being the Father of our Lord Jesus who died for us, for being a God of grace and of truth and for giving you hope and faith and love for all the saints. And thank Him that all over the world His Gospel is producing a tremendous harvest of people just like you whom you'll be with forever.

I once saw a special on television about how Sept. 11 impacted people's faith in God. For instance, they interviewed the man who was on the 82nd floor, cried out to the Lord for deliverance and was empowered to break through a plasterboard wall and get all the way to safety before the tower collapsed. But they also interviewed a number of people whose belief in God had been shattered by 9/11, who blamed God for allowing it to happen, who couldn't bring themselves to pray to Him or who couldn't even believe in His existence anymore. It's always puzzling to me why human beings seem to blame God for the evil that they themselves do to one another. But the paradox is striking: on the one hand you have a Lisa Beamer who lost her husband writing, "God has whispered two words to me over and over: Look up...look up. Through that quiet voice I'm reminded to look beyond my own little life to the Creator of the universe. Without fail, looking up brings peace to my soul." On the other hand, is another woman who lost her husband and says, "I always prayed and talked to God for 35 years. I would say, 'God bless my husband or God bless my child or God bless this or that or thank you God for this or that.' You know, the way you talk to God. But I can't bring myself to talk to God that way anymore." What's the difference? How can one be drawn deeply to God and one be moved to reject Him? I think the answer is in what we studied last week from the end of verse 2 and following. It's in whether we know God truly as Our Father, personally, instead of merely as the God who's in charge of things, who I hope will like me and help me. When we receive Jesus Christ personally into our heart and life, everything changes in our relationship with God. In that moment He becomes our Father and we become His child and all our fear, all our doubts, melt away. He's our Dad; we're His child whom He loves and nothing that happens can change that. Adversity and tragedy drive us into His loving arms because He is our refuge, our Father. Now, this morning we're going to move ahead and talk about:

I. The Life That Our Father Intends For Us (9-10a) Let's start with verse 9 and take these phrases apart. Paul was praying about the lives that the Colossian believers lived. He wanted them to live the life that the Father intends for His children to live. Very often we tend to define that life in terms of specific behaviors. If I asked you what a godly person was like, you might be tempted to give me a list like: he goes to church, he reads his Bible, he prays, he tithes, he is honest and doesn't lie or cheat, and so on. But that's not what Paul prays for them. The life he prays for them to have:

1. it is a life that is filled with the knowledge of His will He prays for them to have:

a. spiritual wisdom Translated into practical terms that means knowing what He wants us to do. And also, he prays for them to have:

b. understanding which means knowing how to apply it in my life, in the specific details.

And the goal is for us to be filled with that kind of knowledge. That word filled is a special word. It's used again over in 2:9 where it says that in Christ all the fullness of Deity lives. It means the complete fullness, all of it. The life our Father wants for His children is simply one that is completely filled, completely occupied with one thing, seeking, knowing and doing His will, right down to the specific details of life. "How does my Father want me to greet my family when I get up in the morning? How does He want me to get in the car and drive? How does He want me to respond to the kid I sit next to in school or the one who pushes me at recess? When does He want me to spend time with Him and listen to Him in His Word? When does He want me to talk to Him and when and how should I worship Him?" It's a life where I think about Him and what He wants every moment of the day in every situation, where He Himself is the central focus of my life, not simply the keeping of a list of rules. Now, how am I ever going to have such a life?

2. it is a life that is experienced through continual prayer Paul said, "I never stop praying for you that this will be the case, that you will have this kind of "want to please Him in everything" life. And that's what it means for us too. It means praying, talking to Him continually, "Lord, what do I do with this? How do I respond to that? What should I say to him?" and then listening with my heart for the answers. Nehemiah was the cup-bearer to the King of Persia, but his heart was broken over the fact that his native city of Jerusalem was lying in rubble. He sensed that God wanted him to go back and rebuild it. But he knew he had to ask the king for permission and that was a scary thing. So, when that day came and the king asked him, "What is it you want?" Nehemiah says, "Then I prayed to the God of heaven and I answered the King..." I can imagine that quickly-breathed prayer, "Lord, what do I say? Lord, speak your words through me; say what you want said!" That's how we live the life God intends. We pray to the God of heaven and do what He wants. When we deal with the misbehavior of our kids, when we have a disagreement with our spouse, when we are mistreated or when the unthinkable happens, we pray to our Father in heaven and say and do what He wants. If I am consumed with doing the will of God, I will be constantly in prayer, constantly seeking that will in everything! Now in verse 10 Paul uses another phrase to describe that life:

3. it is a life that is described as:

a. a walk You don't see that in the NIV, but live a life is literally the Greek word walk and whenever the New Testament tells us to "walk" in a certain way, it is referring to a consistent manner of daily living, a habitual way that we live, something that characterizes our life on a continual basis. For instance, we are told to "walk in love", to "walk in the light", to "walk as Jesus did". It means a consistent, continual pattern of living. But in this case Paul calls it:

b. a worthy walk, a consistent manner of daily living that is worthy of the Lord (Jesus). Now what does that mean? What is a life that is worthy of Jesus? Well, that word worthy means "of equal worth or weight with the object of its comparison". Let's look at how the word is used in two other places. To have a walk worthy of Jesus means that:

(1) it represents Him - Rom. 16:1-2 The Romans are to receive Phoebe in a way that is worthy of the saints. That doesn't mean "receive her as you would receive a saint". It means, "receive her in the way that one who is a saint (like you are) should receive her". In other words, your behavior is worthy when it matches what you are! Now, in Colossians, we are the Lord's. We belong to Him. We bear His Name. He lives in us. We are His people. Our daily walk is worthy when it matches and displays our relationship to the One whom we profess. And secondly it is worthy when:

(2) it reflects gratitude to Him - 1 Thess. 2:12 This verse has a different meaning of worthy. The sense is, "God has done a marvelous thing for you; He called you into His kingdom and glory; your life should be proportionally affected by what He has done for you." A life that is worthy of the Lord Jesus is a life that is impacted to the very core by what He has done for us. When we understand and believe that Jesus died for us, that should impact us to our very core; the entire rest of our life should reflect our gratitude continually.

A walk that is worthy of the Lord, Paul continues, is one that is so completely impacted by Jesus that it is:

c. a pleasing walk: one that pleases Him in everything That becomes the goal of our whole life, not to keep a rule or behave in a certain way in order to impress Him and win His approval or gain some reward, but simply and genuinely to be so filled with gratitude and love for Him that in every moment of every day my chief concern is not what I want, but it is to please Him, to know what He wants me to do and to do it.

Now, what does that look like? How can we tell if that's really happening? Paul goes on to mention:

II. The Marks Of The Life That Our Father Intends for us (10b-12a) There are four of them and for you English students, they are all participles. First, when our life is consumed with pleasing Our Father:

1. we are bearing the fruit of good works A good tree naturally brings forth good fruit on its branches. And the natural fruit of a life controlled by God's will is going to be a continual flow of good works. In fact, Eph. 2:10 says that we are created in Christ Jesus to do good works, which God prepared in advance for us to do. They're part of His plan. They come naturally when we seek and follow His will. Our life is filled with them because we want to please our Father. Secondly, when our life is consumed with pleasing Our Father:

2. we are growing in the knowledge of God Not book knowledge, not knowledge about God, but deep experiential knowledge of Him. The more we want to please Him, the more He reveals of Himself to us. I know so much more of His grace than I did when I met Him at age 15. I know so much more of His ways than I did then. I know so much more of His heart for the world and I have seen so much more of His power at work doing great and mighty things. Pleasing the Father leads to a continually growing experience of Him. And it also leads to this:

3. we are being strengthened with all His power: Now by that, Paul doesn't particularly mean that we run around doing miracles, healing the sick and raising the dead, displaying His power in signs and wonders. He's focused in another direction. The result of being strengthened by his power is that we display three things. First, we display:

a. endurance, which means we continue without quitting If we know and experience His power and live out of it, we persevere when the going gets tough, even when it gets impossible, because we're living out of His resources, His almighty power, not our own. And we display:

b. patience, (in the Greek longsuffering) which means we suffer without retaliating We go through injustice and persecution and ill treatment and still love our enemies and bless them and pray for them. That's the mark of His power. And thirdly we do it with:

c. joy In the Greek, with joy belongs, in my humble opinion, to what precedes it, not to what follows as in the NIV. To all endurance and longsuffering with joy... That means that in the midst of our struggles and suffering we rejoice without ceasing; we rejoice in the Lord always. We find joy in Him and nothing in all our circumstances can take it away! That's a sure mark that we are living out of His power, because that's not in us! And finally, Paul says in verse 12, if we are living a life that is consumed with pleasing Him:

4. we are giving thanks; we continually thank our Father instead of complaining. We never lose sight of what He's done for us. Let me tell you a story that illustrates what I've been trying to say to you this morning very vividly:

*A ragged boy with a violin under his arm roamed the streets of a great European city. Because he had no home or family, he wandered around for food and shelter. He had a strange gift for music and had somehow gotten hold of a violin, and would stand on the corners and play for the crowd. When he finished, they would toss some coins and this is how he lived. In the same city was a famous musician. One day he happened to hear the boy playing and was impressed by the quality of music. "Son, to whom do you belong?" he said, "I don't belong to anybody," the boy answered. "Well, where do you live?" was the next question. "I don't have any place to live. I just sleep on the streets or wherever I can." The man thought for a moment and then asked, "How would you like to be my boy and come to live with me? I'll teach you all I know about how to play the violin." The boy's eyes sparkled, and he said, "Mister, I'd love it." So the great musician took him to his own home, had him cleaned and dressed up, and the man became like a father to him. For several years he poured into the eager young mind and heart all he knew about the violin. Finally, the boy was ready to appear on the concert stage for his first public recital. The house was filled to capacity. At last, the boy came out, put the violin beneath his chin and began his concert. He played beautifully and there was much applause. But the boy paid no attention. He just kept his eyes turned upward and continued to play. The audience was mystified by his behavior until someone said, "I don't understand why he is so insensible to all this thunderous applause. He keeps looking up all the time. I'm going to find out what is attracting his attention!" Moving about in the concert hall, the observer found the answer. There in the topmost balcony was the old music master, peering over the banister toward his young pupil. He was nodding his head and smiling, as if to say, "You are doing well, my boy; play on!" And the boy did play on, not seeming to care whether the audience laughed or applauded. He kept his gaze upward. You see, he was playing to please the master only. Oh, do you see that we were that boy? Lost, hopeless, bound, dead in our trespasses and sins, but God reached out to us and said, "Would you like to be My child? Would you like to belong to Me and come live in My house?" We said "yes" and He redeemed us, He clothed us and fed us and poured His love into us all these years. And that should have impacted us so deeply that now we can imagine only one way to live. We live to please the Master only. That's all that matters. Forget the applause. Never mind the criticism of others. His "well done" is the very heartbeat of our lives every moment of every day and it shows in the way we live. That's what Paul prayed for the Colossians and for us and that's what we must pray for continually. I leave you with *Phil. 2:13, For it is God who is at work in you, both to will and to work for [His] good pleasure. (NASB).

Colossians: Christ Who Is Our Life God Our Father: The Source of Our Salvation - 1:12-14

May I remind you that the first half of the letter to the Colossians is doctrinal and it opens with some deep truths about God our Father. First, in verses 1-8 we saw what our Father is about: He is building His church all over the world and He has called us to be involved in that process where we are. Then we saw in verses 9-12 that our Father is the source of all our living, that the primary purpose and goal in our lives as His children is simply and only to please Him. Today in verses 12-14 we'll see why pleasing Him is all that really matters to us. It's because our Father has saved us; He is the source of our salvation. Now, that's a word we use so often and so broadly that it often loses meaning for us. LuAnn heard the story of a woman who was buried alive in the rubble of the World Trade Center. She was in darkness; her head was wedged between pieces of concrete; her limbs were immobilized by steel girders and debris so that she couldn't move, yet she was conscious. Periodically she yelled for help. She could sense that eventually the full darkness of night came and could barely sense when morning came. After hours and hours, a hand reached down through the rubble and grasped hers and a voice said, "My name is Paul. I'm going to stay right here and hold your hand until we get you out." Hope came alive in her heart but it took still more hours to free her from her concrete tomb. When she was at last free, she asked, "Where is Paul; I have to thank him; he held my hand." And the rescuers said to her, "Paul? There is no Paul on this squad; none of us held your hand." She could only conclude that God had sent an angel to her in her hour of deepest despair and had saved her. Her experience is a pretty good picture of what happened to us. Our Father saved us when we were lost in darkness, dead in our sins and without hope in the world. He reached down His mighty hand and lifted us out of our dark prison. No wonder we are driven to thank Him! Verses 12-14 spell out three aspects of how our Father saved us that should fill us with gratitude. First:

I. Our Father Has Given Us An Inheritance (12) In modern terms an inheritance is something that is promised to a child or an heir upon the death of the giver. Its biblical meaning is a little broader; it means simply "a promised possession". For instance, Heb. 11 says God called Abraham out of Ur to go to a place he would later receive as an inheritance. God promised him that his descendants would possess the land; it would be theirs. For hundreds of years that promise was repeated to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph and when Joshua finally led them into it, God gave them their "inheritance", the land He had promised, and they divided it up by lot. So, Paul says our Father has given to us an inheritance; He has caused us to possess something very special that He has promised and he explains:

1. the nature of our inheritance Notice that:

a. it is an inheritance we possess right now We are not waiting to receive our inheritance; we have already been made partakers of it, participants in it. That is, we have it, we possess it right now. Then notice that:

b. it is an inheritance that belongs only to saints Please keep in mind that Paul is writing in the first century. There was not even a hint of a concept of a saint as a specially designated person. The word saint means "holy one", "one who is holy and pure" and it is the term that God used way back from the days of Samuel and on to refer to His people, His holy ones. What our Father has given us is an inheritance that only people who have been made holy, who have been made God's holy people can have. And that inheritance:

c. it is the light of His own presence In the NIV the words "kingdom of" are inserted. They are not found in the Greek texts. God has caused us to share in the inheritance of the saints IN LIGHT. Light is the object; light IS our inheritance. Now what does that mean? Well, let's look at a couple of other scriptures that can help us understand. First, Paul told Timothy that:

(1) God dwells in unapproachable light - 1 Tim. 6:16 Light is the symbol of His holiness, His absolute purity. God lives in absolute purity and holiness, light so bright that no one can come near it. No one can approach it. No one can look at it or see it in all its glory. No creature with the slightest taint of sin can draw near without being utterly destroyed. When God was on the mountain, no person could even touch the mount because of sin. Even men like Moses and Elijah in the Old Testament had to cover their eyes or be hidden in the rock when God's presence passed by. John said, God is light and in Him is no darkness at all! He dwells in unapproachable light. But Peter says:

(2) God called us into His light - 1 Pet. 2:9 Look at that! We have been made a holy people, a people belonging to God. How? We were in darkness. We were in sin and destined for death. But He reached His hand down and called us out of that darkness into His wondrous, marvelous, amazing light, the very light of His Presence. We have the privilege of approaching and dwelling with Him who is unapproachable. But how could He do that? There is more:

(3) God put His light into us - 2 Cor. 4:6 Just as on the day of creation God said, Let there be light! and suddenly in the midst of a dark void light came into being, so on the day that we received Christ, God's light, His very own holy, unapproachable, ineffable Presence shone in us in the person of Christ. He placed the holiness of His very person in us. That is our possession! We believers have what no other human beings on earth have, the very person of the Living God of the universe dwelling in us. Compare Col. 1:27. Christ, the true light that lights every man, lives inside us, His people. That is the glorious mystery. That is our hope of glory. Christ in us! When Joshua divided the land, one tribe, the Levites, were not given any inheritance in it. They were told that the Lord, the God of Israel Himself was their inheritance! Folks, that's us! Our Father has caused us to share in the greatest inheritance a human being could ever have, a personal relationship with Him where His own holy presence dwells in us! Now go back to 1:12 and look at:

2. how we came to share in it Our Father qualified us. You see:

a. we did not qualify Compare 2 Cor. 3:5-6. The word translated competent here is the same word translated qualify there. In and of ourselves we were not competent to qualify for anything! We could never approach God; we could never come into His holy Presence. We could never be sufficient, never be enough. But what does it say? HE HAS MADE US COMPETENT or in Colossians, our Father has QUALIFIED US!

b. our Father fitted and equipped us to receive it by grace Only saints, only Holy Ones, could approach His presence; only in saints could He dwell. So, by His grace HE MADE US HOLY ONES, SAINTS! He made us pure and holy so that we might know Him and so that He might live in us and that we might live with Him forever and ever. Listen, our inheritance is not just a bunch of jewels and crowns and mansions and rewards and bliss in heaven someday! It is the unimaginable act of being made holy and His presence entering us right now!

Is anybody ready to stand up and shout hallelujah yet? Glory! Our Father has qualified us to share in the inheritance of the saints in His glorious light! But that's not all. In verse 13 we read a second thing:

II. Our Father Has Rescued Us From Our Slavery (13) Some years ago I saw a movie that was on TV. The basic story went like this: There was a father who was a soldier during the Vietnam War and was captured. After the war he was still being held powerless in a prison camp in North Vietnam. So, his young son, together with some friends, staged a daring raid right into the heart of enemy territory, broke into the prison, freed the father and brought him back home to freedom. If, in your mind, you can reverse the places of the father and the son in the story, so that the son is in the prison and the father comes to get him, you have a pretty good picture of:

1. the meaning of rescue You see:

a. we WERE under the power of darkness If light is the symbol for purity and holiness and God is light, then in the Bible darkness is the symbol for evil, impurity and Satan, who we refer to as the prince of darkness. We were captives. We were under the power and authority of darkness. Elsewhere Paul says that we were slaves to sin, that we were taken captive by Satan to do his will, that we all at one time followed his ways as the prince of this world. Jesus sent Paul to the nations of the earth to turn them from darkness to light and from the power of Satan to God. That was us; that's who we were! But:

b. we are NOW under the rule of His beloved Son We were rescued from that old sphere of authority, from that old power, from that old slavery, from that old fate of destruction and placed under the legitimate authority and rule of the Son He dearly loves, Jesus Christ! We were given a new Master who is the object of the Father's love and in whom WE become the object of the Father's love! One of our missionaries wrote from the Brazilian jungle and said, I would like to ask special prayer for Bianca, the 11 yr. old we are trying to give in adoption to a Christian couple... The people here will likely pressure Bianca's father to refuse to give her up. They will promise to care for her, which will all sound wonderful to an outsider. However, the truth is that if Bianca returns here, she will again be mistreated, neglected and used as a prostitute. This abuse had already begun several years ago... Bianca has had such a hard life and that has been hard to watch. Please pray with us that she will be successfully given to this Christian couple. Poor girl! 11 years old and she has lived a life of suffering and abuse because she's been under the authority of an evil, wicked father who uses her for his own purposes! If only she could be legally transferred to the authority of a father and a mother who genuinely love her! That's a living picture of what happened to us! She's who we were; we were under the authority of an evil, wicked father who used us; we were under the dominion of darkness, but our Father rescued us by transferring us into the kingdom of the Son He loves! And notice:

2. the method of rescue: The words brought us are literally, he removed us to. They indicate complete removal from one sphere of authority to the other. The same is used where Jesus said that with faith you can tell that mountain to be removed from here and cast into the sea. It's not here anymore; it's there. Bianca is away from her father right now but still under his authority. She needs to be completely removed and given to a father who loves her. And we were. Aorist, past tense! The dominion of darkness has no longer any authority over us. It has no power over us except for that which we voluntarily choose to give it! We are set free from the power of sin, free from slavery to it, free from bondage to Satan's will because our Father rescued us from our slavery. But that's not all:

III. Our Father Has Redeemed Us From Our Punishment (14) The word redeem means "to free by the paying of a price". The freedom that we now enjoy as children of God was not easy; it came at a price:

1. the price was the blood of Christ, which you'll notice is in the margin of your NIV (which simply means that not all of the manuscripts of this verse have those words). But Paul wrote the identical phrase in his letter to the Ephesians and there it says, In him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, in accordance with the riches of God's grace. - Eph. 1:7. The blood of Christ, His very life, is the precious price that was paid for us. And make no mistake, it was not paid to Satan to buy us out of his service. It was a price our Father paid to His own justice and righteousness and holiness. The Father dwelling in unapproachable light could not let sin into His presence, but we were sinners. He had to separate us from our sins and remove it so that His justice could be satisfied and He could remain holy and at the same time have us! So, He sent His dear Son to die in our place, to take our sentence, our punishment, to shed His blood for ours, to take our sin upon Himself, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him! The father paid that horrible price and:

2. the result for us was the forgiveness of sins And forgiveness is not just forgetting about sins. A just God can never overlook sin, can never excuse it and pardon it at whim. It must be paid for. So our forgiveness means, first of all, the:

a. satisfaction of the penalty The punishment for sin has always been death, but because the blood has been shed, that penalty has been paid, that punishment has been exacted. Christ took it. He paid for it, so it is no longer hanging over our heads. We are free and clear. We are truly pardoned; there is now NO condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus! But forgiveness goes even deeper than that. It is:

b. separation from the act itself The Greek word means “to send away”. Every year in Israel on the Day of Atonement the High Priest would take two goats and he would lay his hands on the head of each one and confess over them the sins of Israel. Thus, symbolically the sins of the people were transferred to the sacrifice. The one goat was slain and burned as a sin offering outside the camp. His blood was offered on the altar. That took care of the penalty! But the second goat was known as the “scapegoat”. He was taken out far away into the wilderness, “carrying those sins” and there he was released, never to be seen again. The sins were not only paid for; they were GONE, remembered no more. When my Father looks at me, He doesn’t say, “Now there’s my child with his bunch of paid-for sins. I don’t hold them against him.” Hebrews says, “Our sins and our iniquities He remembers no more!” He has chosen to separate them from us, to remember them against us no more. When He looks at me, He doesn’t see “my son, the forgiven sinner, my son who used to be dead in sins”; He sees “my son, the saint; my son whom I have made holy, my spotless, pure precious child!” That’s what forgiveness means!

No wonder verse 12 says that our life should be constantly characterized by giving thanks to the Father. He has forgiven us all our sins; He has rescued us from the dominion of darkness and transferred us into the Kingdom of His beloved Son and He has qualified us to share in the inheritance of saints, the light of His own presence dwelling in us! Our Father has saved us!

Jesus Christ: The Supreme Lord of All Creation - 1:15-17, 19

At verse 15 in this doctrinal portion of his letter, Paul moves from talking about who God the Father is to talking about who Jesus Christ is. After all, that is a primary question, isn’t it? Jesus asked it of His disciples, “Who do people say that I am?” And they answered, “Some say this and some say that...” Then He pressed them, “But who do YOU say I am?” And Peter confessed, You are the Christ, the Son of the living God! There is a big difference between who people say Jesus is and who He really is. Some say this and some say that! Paul warned in 2 Cor. 11:4 that someone might come to you and preach a Jesus who is other than the Jesus he preached. In Colossae that was certainly the case. There were false teachers there who also taught about Jesus, but the Jesus they taught about was different from the one Paul believed in. Their Jesus was a created being, a sort of half-god, half-angel who mediated between God and created things. He was not Jesus, God the Son, the second person of the Godhead. And Glenside is really no different from Colossae or Corinth. There are false teachers right here who preach another Jesus. You’ll see their literature. You’ll see them run ads on TV. Some of them will knock on your door and try to talk to you about what the world is coming to. Some of them preach in the pulpits of churches down the street. They write religious columns in newspapers and articles in magazines. They come with all kinds of labels. Some we call cults; some we refer to as liberals or modernists; some are proponents of other world religions. But the thing they have in common is this: their Jesus is somebody other than Paul’s Jesus, somebody less than the true Jesus of Christianity, the One we believe in. Let’s read verses 15-17. There are two major facts about our Jesus in these verses that I want to make clear. The first is that:

I. Our Jesus Is God (15a, 19) He is the image of the invisible God. When we think of image, we think of a photograph, something that looks like the real thing but is not the real thing. The Greek word for image would translate into English as “icon” and it means “a visible representation”. If you have a computer, you’re familiar with “icons” on your desktop, little pictures that you see. They are visible representations of programs you can’t see, invisible files stored away on your hard drive, but the presence and the nature of the program is revealed through that icon so that when you see and you touch that icon you see and touch the hidden program. This is a poor illustration, but Jesus is not simply something like God; He is the visible representation or expression of the invisible God. He is God in seeable form, as compared to God in unseeable form. Now, this is a deep concept so let’s take it apart. First:

1. He is the revelation of Deity Look with me at two other Scriptures if you would. First, Heb. 1:3. The Greek word here for exact representation means the impression left by a seal in clay. Have you ever played with Play Dough? When you take a coin, for instance, and press it into the clay and then carefully peel it away, what do you have? An exact representation of the coin. The markings correspond point for point and detail for detail. So Christ is the exact image of the being of God, not something lesser. So much so that Jesus could freely say, He who has seen Me has seen the Father. Philip had asked on that occasion, Show us the Father and Jesus replied, Have I been with you so long a time and you do not recognize Me? Now look at Jn. 1:18. No one had ever seen God, not even Moses who spoke with Him face to face. They saw only manifestations, not His real being. But Jesus Christ who is God the One and Only, who is with the Father, has made Himself seeable and knowable by becoming man! God who is invisible revealed Himself visibly in the person of Jesus Christ so we could know Him! Secondly, notice:

2. the completeness of His Deity (19) He repeated it again over in 2:9. That word fullness means complete fullness. Everything there is of God was in Christ. He was not part God and part man. He wasn't half-God, and half-man. He was fully God, of one substance with the Father. And thirdly, in verse 19, notice:

3. the permanence of his Deity The word dwell implies a permanent continuing. Some have tried to say that God came upon and into the man Jesus at His baptism and left Him at the cross. Not so; Jesus always was God; He is God and He will always be fully God!

Now, that's the Jesus I know! He's not the Jesus the Mormons talk about! He's not the Jesus the Jehovah's Witnesses speak of. He's not the Jesus the Unitarians discuss nor is he the Isa presented in the Koran. When Thomas finally believed who He was, fell at Jesus' feet and cried, "My Lord and my God!" Why am I making such a big deal out of this? Because it's easy to be completely sincere and yet be badly mistaken! Tom Olson told about a physician who was administering a controlled mixture of oxygen and anesthetic gas to a patient in a New York hospital. When one of the tanks was empty, the doctor used a new one marked Oxygen. Almost immediately the patient died. The coroner's autopsy revealed carbon dioxide poisoning. Upon investigation the second tank was found to contain pure CO2 and had somehow been mislabeled. The manufacturer denied any wrongdoing. No one knew how it could have gotten by the inspectors. The doctor had no doubt that he was using oxygen when he administered the lethal gas. No one wanted the tragedy to happen, yet they were all sincerely wrong. Lots of people are religious and sincere, but this is a matter of life and death. If you put the label "Jesus" over the wrong commodity and administer it to a person who is in danger of death, the person doesn't live; they die! Forever! But if you give them the REAL Jesus they live forever! Our Jesus, the real Jesus, the true Jesus, the only Jesus that can save anyone, is fully and completely God! And then verse 15 gives us a second major fact:

II. Jesus Is The Lord Of All Creation (15b-17) Another way that people mislabel Jesus is that they see Him as sort of "second-in-command", somehow a little bit less than the Father (who is the real boss) because He is the Son. But here Paul says:

1. He is the Firstborn over all things What does that mean? Often we think that in the same sense that Jesus was Mary's "firstborn" son, that He was also God's firstborn. But the scripture is careful never to say that. It uses the term Firstborn of Christ only a few times and each time, just like here, it does not describe His relationship to the Father, but to the creation or to the church. In relationship to the Father Christ is the "Only-begotten" or "the One and Only Son". It is in relationship to created things that He occupies the position of Firstborn. In my family there were three kids. My brother was the firstborn; I was last, 18 years later. Today that would mean basically that he gets old before I do. But in Old Testament times it would mean much more. Not only would it mean that he was around before I was, but that he would get a double share of the inheritance when the parents die and he would also get to be the leader, the ruler in charge of the family clan. I've always been glad we don't live back then! But that's what Paul is implying about Jesus. Verse 17 points out that:

a. He exists before all things And you'll notice the present tense. It's not just that He was around before all things but that He eternally IS before all things. All other things had a beginning, but He had none. He is eternally pre-existent, not part of the creation. He told the Jews in John 8:58, ...before Abraham was born, I am! and they tried to stone Him because they knew He was saying, "I am the eternal God, the great I AM". As firstborn, He exists before us and:

b. He rules over all things Look what God said about David in Ps. 89:27, I will also appoint him my firstborn, the most exalted of the kings of the earth. David was not a firstborn; he was a last-born in his family, like me! But God appointed him to the position of firstborn, the position of rule and authority. And that is a picture of Jesus who is the real Firstborn in relation to all the kings of the earth, or to put it another way, King of Kings and Lord of Lords. It is to say that everything in all creation is under His authority and control and that includes:

(1) the material creation mentioned in verse 16, the things in heaven and things on earth, visible and invisible. From the farthest stars to the tiniest microbes. Earth, sun, sky and sea, animals and mankind. Christ has authority over all these. But it also includes:

(2) the spiritual creation in the end of verse 16. Thrones, powers, rulers and authorities are orders of angels that he's talking about. In Eph. 6 he used the same words to describe the orders of Satan's demonic hosts. Christ is Lord and Master over all the angelic beings, good or bad. 2:18 tells us that in Colossae some people worshipped angels. Jesus is not just the chief angel, the greatest angel who is next to God; He is Lord of all the angels.

He is Lord of all things, because He is Firstborn over all things! Then, verses 16-17 remind us that:

2. He is the Creator of all things There are three prepositions you should note in these verses. Paul says all things:

a. they were created IN Him The NIV word by is literally in. It means that He is the SOURCE of all things, the spring from which all created things flow. Without Him there would have been no creation; without Him the world would not exist. All of creation is wrapped up in His person. Then at the end of 16 we read again that:

b. they were created BY Him or literally, through Him. That is, He is the AGENT of creation, the One who actually did the creating. John says, Through him all things were made; without him nothing was made that has been made. - Jn. 1:3. Not one piece of anything in the whole creation was made by anyone else but Him. He made it all. When we read in Genesis that God said, Let there be light, it was Jesus saying, Let there be light along with the Father and the Spirit. That's why God spoke to Himself in the plural on the sixth day and said, Let US make man in OUR image. Jesus created you and everything you have or see! And finally, verse 16 says:

c. they were created FOR Him He created them for Himself; He is the BENEFactor of all things; they are for His benefit. Look back to Heb. 1:2. He is the heir of all things, the owner of them. They belong to Him and He can use them to suit His purpose. We think the world should be here to suit us and things should go our way, but the truth is it's here to suit Him and He can do with it and with me whatever He wills! It's a good thing He loves us! And finally, Paul tells us that:

3. He is the Sustainer of all things (17b) Jesus didn't just create it and set it all in motion and sit back and watch it run:

a. He holds the universe together He makes it all stay together in a compact organized unit, right down to the very molecules that make up your body! It is His sustaining power that makes the law of gravity function and the seasons change and the earth rotate. It is His sustaining power that causes wounds to heal and birds to migrate and all those marvelous mechanisms of creation to operate. Without Him it all falls apart. And Heb.1:3 tells us how He does it:

b. He carries it by the power of His Word Literally, "He carries it by the power of His spoken Word". He said the word, "Let there be..." and the universe is still obeying the authority of that spoken Word today, moment by moment without fail! That is the power He has over creation!

Now, that's the Jesus I know; that's the Jesus of Christianity. He's the Eternal God; He's the Lord over all Creation who took on human flesh and came to earth and died on a cross to save you! That's the Jesus who lives inside of you to be the power out of which you live! Dr. Paul Ferris remembers as a boy in 1952 how he watched in fascination as Elizabeth was crowned Queen of England. Even on black-and-white TV, the ceremony in Westminster Abbey was colorful. One intriguing aspect of the whole process came right before they placed the crown on the new queen's head. The Archbishop of Canterbury called out to the audience that was sitting north of the dais, "Sirs, I present to you the undoubted Queen of this realm. Are you willing to do her homage?" Their response was resounding. Then he turned around and faced those seated on the south and repeated the question, "Sirs, I present to you the undoubted Queen of this realm. Are you willing to do her homage?". Again there came a hearty affirmative response. Only after he had done the same thing in all four directions did they put the crown on the head of Queen Elizabeth II. [Servant, Winter 1997. Page 2.] Ladies and gentlemen, I present to you today, Jesus, the Eternal God and undoubted Supreme Lord of All Creation. And each of us must answer this question, "Are you willing to do Him homage? Are you willing to bow down and worship Him? Are you willing to submit your life to Him and place it at His feet, yourself at His disposal?"

Colossians: Christ Who Is Our Life

Jesus Christ: The Supreme Head of His Church - 1:18

In verses 15-19 Paul is declaring who Christ is. Last week we saw that He is God and that His is the Supreme Lord of all Creation, creating it, sustaining it, directing it, and owning it. Today we're going to single out one verse, verse 18, which tells us the third important fact about Him: He is the Supreme Head of the Church. You see, we've talked about His relationship to the Father; we've talked about His relationship to all created things; now we must look at His relationship to the church. But what is the church? Well, many times in the New Testament, the church means a local body of believers like us this morning who gather in a particular place to worship. But in Ephesians and Colossians Paul takes a higher and grander and broader point of view. Here the church is the sum total of all the redeemed, every person ransomed and rescued by Christ's work on the cross and indwelt by His Holy Presence. So that includes every true believer anywhere in the world. But it also includes those that have already lived and died and those who will yet be born and born again in the future. It is every person Jesus has ever saved or will save from the day of Pentecost to His return. And therefore, it is YOU! What Christ is to the whole, He is to the part; what He is to the Church; He is to the individual Christian. So, what we're talking about today really is His relationship to YOU! And Paul tries to help us understand that relationship by using the symbolic picture of:

I. The Relationship Of The Head To The Body, Christ being the head and the church being his body. Look with me at Eph. 1:22-23 which gives a slightly fuller picture to us. Now let's see if we can understand this in human terms. First, we have:

1. the head is the foundation of the body That seems backward, doesn't it? You always thought your feet were the foundation of your body. But by foundation, I mean that on which the existence of the whole body rests. You can see it in the different ways we use the word head:

a. it sustains the body We talk for instance, just as the ancients did, about the headwaters of a river or the head of a canyon. And by that we mean the source or the place from which something begins or originates or continually flows. The head is like that because it sustains the body. Without the head it will die. Sever the spinal cord and the body just lies there. Take away the brain and the body has no life of its own. It draws its source, its life, its meaning, its existence from the head. You can cut off any limb and live; replace any organ with a machine and live. But not the head. The head is, in a real sense, the life of the body. Next:

b. it coordinates the body It brings unity to a bunch of vastly different parts and pieces and makes them function as a unit. The head of a committee, for instance, is what turns a room full of people into a group functioning with a purpose. Imagine if all the parts of your body just did their own thing whenever and wherever they wanted. You would have no life. The head coordinates and makes the pieces into a unified body. This concept of the head is not really in view in Colossians, but is more so in 1 Cor. 12. And it also:

c. it directs the body We talk about the head of an organization or the husband as the head of the home. Head implies authority, the one in charge. That's because the head is in charge of the body. All the senses report to it and all the organs and limbs respond to it. It makes decisions and evaluations and then directs the whole body. But there is a complement to these truths:

2. the body is the fullness of the head A head without a body is head over nothing. The body is the completion, the fullness of the head. So, in a special sense, Paul says that even though Christ is the absolute fullness of God and the one who fills everything in every way, yet we are His fullness, His completion. A head needs a body to carry out its purposes. And Christ needs us as the body to carry out His purpose in the world. So as a body part, here are some things to remember. First:

a. it lives out of the head If a body part loses its connection to the head, it dies. Or even if it doesn't die, it lies there having a kind of paralyzed life that is not life. And that's what Paul's telling us in this whole letter: Christ is our life; we must live out of Him. We can't live out of anything else; it doesn't work! Second:

b. it functions out of the head If a body part ignores the head, it disrupts the function of the whole body; it cannot function properly together with other body parts. The whole body is unable to fulfill the purpose which the head is laying out for it. Third:

c. it listens to the head If a body part refuses to listen to the head and takes control of its own movements, not only is the coordination of the body destroyed but it places itself in great danger and endangers the rest of the body. If the head says, "Hand, turn the wheel left", but the hand turns right... well, you get the picture. The body's role is to listen to the head. Now, before you think that this whole sermon is an anatomy lecture, let's go back to Col. 1:18 and apply these principles to:

II. The Relationship Of Christ To His Church Christ is the Head both to the whole Church and to me. What does that mean. Well, first of all it means this:

1. He is its Source: Verse 18 says He is the Beginning The Greek word is arche, the cause, the origin, the root, the spring, the source! Just as the head is the source of life to the body, so Christ is the very source and life of the church. First of all, He is:

a. the source of its existence He told Peter, "I will build My church". He in His own Person was literally its beginning. He brought it into being. It was His life, death, and resurrection that began it. It was His power that brought those first converts to faith on the day of Pentecost and that worked the miracles at the hands of the apostles. And He is the beginning of your spiritual existence too. You didn't find Him; He reached out and touched you and brought you to Himself. And by the entering of His person into you at that moment, He became the source of your life so that you no longer live but Christ lives in you. You as a believer in Christ at this very moment exist in the very life of Jesus Christ who is in you! Then as the Beginning, He is:

b. the source of its supply All the needs of the body are met in the head. If the back needs scratched, it sends word to the Head who supplies the hand to scratch it. That's our problem. In the flesh we are always trying to get our needs met some other way. We think that changing circumstances meets our needs or that another person can meet our needs. Just as Christ is both the initial Creator and continuing sustainer of the Universe, so He is the initial Savior and continuing supplier of all our needs. The head of a river keeps on gushing forth water and Paul wrote in Phil. 4:19 that God would supply all our needs according to His riches in glory HOW? IN CHRIST JESUS. Christ Jesus is the source and supply of all our needs and in having Him we have them! Look at 2:19a. The most vital thing in life is our connection with the HEAD. Now individually, once Christ is in you, He never leaves. But if you don't rely upon that connection, there is no supply. One night Canon Wilberforce of Southampton said to a gathering of believers, "We will sit around the fire and give our spiritual experiences." One by one they spoke. F. B. Meyer, who was a young convert, talked much of yielding all to Christ. An old clergyman at the other end of the circle rose and said, "I am very startled that Mr. Meyer has nothing better than that. You would suppose that all one must do is to give something up. Now, my religion is taking in first, and dropping and giving up afterwards. When you get gold, you part with dross. I came to the end of myself one afternoon when some children refused to listen to my teaching. I was on the point of losing my temper when I turned to Christ and said, 'Christ, be my sweet temper.'" Of that testimony, Meyer later commented, "From that moment on, I have tried to live that way, and whatever I have needed I have said, 'Christ, be this in me.'" Christ in you is the source and supply of all your needs. So, when you have a need, look to Him; PRAY! Then as the Beginning, He is also:

c. the source of its growth Look at 2:19b. Funny how we've discovered that growth hormones come from the pituitary gland in the head, isn't it? God causes the church, his body to grow through its connection with the head. He forms His body the way He wants it. (Don't you wish you could?) Unlike you, He's not stuck with what He's got. He grows and shapes it as He wills. And that also makes Him the source and root of your spiritual growth. You won't get growth just by getting more education, more information, or going to more things. Growth comes from Him. Look to Him; go to Him. He is the church's Source! Secondly, we read:

2. He is its Life: Verse 18 calls Him the Firstborn from among the dead. In verse 15 He was firstborn in relation to all creation. Here He is firstborn literally, out from among the dead. Now, that means obviously:

a. He is the first to be resurrected He is the first of all dead men to experience a resurrection (not a resuscitation like Lazarus, but a spiritual transformation). And that's what it means in Rev. 1:5, but here it means even more, it means:

b. He is the guarantee of its life He is FIRSTBORN out from among the dead, even from the realm of death. And since we are in His family, the rest of us will follow. So He, in the glory of His resurrection, is the source of the church's eternal life, of my eternal life. God gave me eternal life how? In the person of His Son. Do you see? He is my beginning; He is my middle; He is my forever; HE IS MY LIFE! That's what Head means! But also, to be Firstborn, means to be ruler. He is Sovereign God, sovereign over creation, sovereign over death itself, and sovereign over all those who will be raised as He was. And that's why Paul goes on to say that as Head of the Church:

3. He is its Lord: God appointed Him the Head, the Beginning, the Firstborn, so that He alone might be Supreme in everything, in all things of first rank, of first importance, in first place. You see, as Head of the Church:

a. He decides its goal and purpose The head decides whether to go to work or go fishing. The head decides whether to stand and fight or run away. It is His position as Head to decide on the goal and purpose of our lives. It is not what we want in life that is important. We're feet and arms. It's the Head that ranks FIRST. And so, like the head and the body:

b. He directs its movements He directs us. He tells us what we are to do. He sends us here and there to do this or that. That's His function as our Head. But here's:

c. our responsibility To listen and obey! To submit to the Head. You see, He is Supreme Lord of the Church. That's His rightful position. It's an unalterable fact. But that also means that He must become Supreme Lord of our lives personally! Paul put it this way in 1 Cor. 11:3, Now I want you to realize that the Head of every man is Christ... But realizing it is not enough. Over in Eph. 5:23-24 he adds, ...Christ is the head of the church, his body, of which he is the Savior. Now as the church submits to Christ, so also wives should submit to their husbands in everything. The church submits to Christ in all things; in all things He alone is to have the supremacy.

A few months ago, one of the men I pray with weekly asked prayer in tears for his daughter who was well into pregnancy, but was in grave danger of losing the baby. He begged and pled with God for the life of this little one. I didn't see him again until this past week when I asked him what had happened. He replied, "It was a tragic thing. She lost the baby. And I went into a state of depression for a while because God didn't answer my prayers, not the way that I wanted Him to, anyway. But now I'm back on track in my thinking and He's blessing me." That's kind of where the rubber meets the road, isn't it? In all things, even life and death and sickness and health, He alone must have the supremacy because He's our Head! It's what He wants, not what we want. A young woman who was greatly troubled went to a Scottish preacher, asking how she could resolve the question of her own desires when they seemed to contradict the will of God. The minister took out a slip of paper and wrote two words on it. Then he handed it to her with the request that she sit down for 10 minutes, ponder the words, cross out one of them, and bring the slip back to him. The woman sat down and looked at the slip. It had two words on it, "No" and "Lord." Which should she cross out? It did not take her long to see that if she was saying no, she could not say "Lord", and if she wanted to call Christ "Lord", she could not say "No". Herein lies the secret of discerning God's will for our lives. From the limitless options before us, we cannot know God's choice until we put ourselves unconditionally at His disposal. We must turn over all our rights, saying, "Yes, Lord!" to anything He asks. He is the Supreme Head of the Church!

The Christian: Reconciled in Christ - 1:20-23

At 1:20 we move into the third portion of the doctrinal section of this letter. To review, we've spent three messages looking at who the Father is and two messages looking at who the Son is. So, now Paul is going to show us who WE are as believers in Jesus Christ.

Doctrinal (Chs. 1-2):	I. God our Father	1:1-14
	II. Jesus Christ	1:15-19
	III. The Christian	1:20-2:23

Before you can really know how to live as a believer, you have to know who you are. There is an ancient story about a Persian King named Astyages who determined to do away with a royal infant by the name of Cyrus. He summoned an officer of his court and told him to kill the baby prince. The officer in turn delivered the youngster to a herdsman with instructions that he should take him high up into the mountains where the baby would die from exposure. The herdsman and his wife, however, took the child and raised him as their own. Growing up in the home of those humble peasants, he naturally thought they were his real parents. He was ignorant of his royal birth and his kingly estate. Because he thought he was a peasant, he lived like one. Eventually though, he became the Persian King Cyrus mentioned in the Bible. If you and I don't know who we are, if we fail to realize all that is ours in Christ, we will live like the rest of the world does. We will live as spiritual peasants, when we should be living as children of the King. And the first fact that Paul tells us about ourselves is this: we are reconciled to God. That is at once a very simple and a very complicated fact to understand, so let's begin by looking at:

I. The Meaning Of Reconciliation (20) God reconciled all things to Himself through the cross. Now here is a basic definition. Reconciliation is a complete change in relationship between God and man. And the Greek word is a special strengthened form, meaning, not just a change, but a complete change. Verse 20 describes that change as making peace. Apart from the cross, God and man were not at peace. Man was the enemy of God because of God's wrath toward sin which was in man. But now through the death of Christ, peace has been made and there is a complete change, an absolute removal of all the enmity that separated me from God. You see, God and man once had a relationship at the time of creation. But man chose to disobey God and in so doing turned his back on God through sin. Then God, because of His holiness, was forced to turn His back on man, to separate from him, making him the object of His holy wrath. But God did not want it that way; He loved man so He sent His own Son to die on the cross and take away man's sin. Now He could face man again with open arms. That's what it means to say, "God reconciled me to Himself by the death of His Son." Then, when I turn toward God by receiving Christ, I am fully and completely reconciled to God. There is complete peace between God and I. That's reconciliation. Now notice:

1. its only source: the blood of Christ on the cross This is not like two people making up after an argument or a fight. It's not like apologizing and bringing flowers or a gift to express your sorrow to your spouse. The division caused by sin was real and final. In fact, it was terminal! It was enough to put you and I into an eternity in hell. "Sorry" couldn't fix it. Bringing gifts to God couldn't fix it. An entire lifetime of penance and good deeds couldn't fix it. God could not overlook it and pardon it because He is just and holy. It took a death! And only the death of Jesus, the shedding of His blood and the giving of His life upon the cross, could do it! I am reconciled IN HIM. But then notice:

2. its universal extent Verse 20 says God reconciled "all things" to Himself through the death of Christ. What does that mean? In one sense:

a. it applies even to the whole universe, to things on earth and things in heaven (or literally the things in the heavens), the physical creation. Turn with me to Rom. 8:19-23. At the fall God's relationship to the whole world changed. Sin impacted the whole of the created order. The ground was cursed. There was animosity in the animal kingdom. Even our own bodies are impacted by sin and are in the dying process. But because of what Christ did at the cross, the whole universe will be set straight one day at His return. It is all looking forward and waiting for that day when the effect of Christ's victory can be applied to it and it will enter into the same glorious liberty from sin we will enjoy. All things in the universe will be brought back into their proper relationship with God through the death of Christ, but I believe there's another thought in view here. This reconciliation:

b. it applies to the whole world Turn with me to 2 Cor. 5:18-20. Here's what I think that means. Reconciliation through Christ's death is for the whole world; John said that Christ died not only for our sins but also for the sins of the whole world. That doesn't mean that every human being is saved; it means that the death of Christ was sufficient in its power and effect for the whole race. Because of the death of Christ, God's face is now turned toward man. But reconciliation is only completed, or made effective, when man turns toward God in repentance and trust in Jesus Christ. That's why God has sent us out into the world with the message in verse 20, Be reconciled to God! Notice it is a passive command (if that makes sense). There's nothing you can DO to reconcile yourself; it is already DONE at the cross. Reconciliation with God has been provided; it's been paid for; it's been made possible for you, so BE reconciled, receive it, accept it!

But, back to Col. 1:20, the point is the amazing truth that God was pleased to use one and only one thing, the cross, for such a universal extent of reconciliation, to reconcile ALL things, the physical creation, the entire human race, and in particular you and I; all of that is wrapped up in His act of making peace by His blood shed on the cross. As we would say, "That's awesome!" Then, so we can appreciate fully how this applies to us personally, in verse 21 Paul goes on to remind me of:

II. My Former Need Of Reconciliation (21) Don't read this and think he means somebody else. "You" means ME and "You" means YOU! It includes every single person born into this world. The cold, hard truth is:

1. I was separated from God I was alienated from Him; I belonged to another tribe, another master; I was a foreigner, a stranger. Look with me at Eph. 2:11-12. That's us; that's our history, not just as ethnic non-Jewish peoples, but personally. I was separate from Christ, without hope and without God. I was not a Jew, so none of the covenant promises applied to me. I was born absolutely separated from God. Why? Because I was a child of my first parents, Adam and Eve. Lions are born with the nature of lions. Cows are born cows. And sinful human beings pass on their nature generation after generation the same way; I was born with a nature that was evil, depraved, wicked and hated God. Now, you can take the baby lion and raise him in your house as a pet, but in his nature he's still a lion and sooner or later he's going to act like a lion somehow. You can train me to behave better, but inside from birth I have that nature to sin and it will come out and it did! That's why Paul says:

2. I was evil in my behavior Right from the crib I began my self-centered behavior of taking what I wanted and pushing others away! Eph. 2:1-3. I may have been nice, moral, upright, a good student and even religious, but God says ALL OF US in our unsaved condition lived in slavery to our evil nature, following its desires and gratifying it. That doesn't mean I did every sinful thing a human being can possibly do; it means that sin was the ruling force and power in my life. I gratified those evil self-centered desires. And further, verse 21 says:

3. I was an enemy in my thinking Now, I may not have consciously thought about hating God or being His enemy, but James 4:4 says, ...don't you know that friendship with the world is hatred toward God? Anyone who chooses to be a friend of the world becomes an enemy of God. The nature that was in me chose the world constantly. It lived for the self-centered, self-gratifying things of this world. It was opposed to God and counted Him as the enemy.

People who don't know Christ have a hard time understanding that. They see themselves as nice and kind and friendly toward God. And that's to be expected because the natural man can't understand spiritual things; that requires the Holy Spirit! I used to think like that too. When I came to Christ, I was convicted of my sins, of course, but it is only now that I know Him that I can see how bad I really was! There was no way God and I could have a relationship. We were worlds apart! But look at what has happened to me. In verse 22 Paul states:

III. The Fact Of My Present Reconciliation (22) Wow, there has been a complete change, an absolute transformation in my adversarial relationship to God. I am now at total and complete peace because I have been once and for all reconciled to Him. How? Once again:

1. the means of it: by Christ's death Christ who was fully God came to earth and took a physical body. He became a real human being just like me so He could take my place and get what I deserve. The penalty of eternal separation from God that should have been mine was placed on Him and thereby totally removed. All my sin from first to last was removed from me and borne by Him in His own body on the tree. He also nailed that sinful nature of mine to the cross together with Christ, but that's not in this verse (it's coming up in another sermon). At any rate, here's:

2. the effect of it: I stand beside Him... That word present means literally to set beside, to place beside. And I don't believe it means "so that one day in the future He will place you beside Him". It means that right now I am in a new position. Once I was far off; now I am brought near. Once I was alienated; now I am standing right there beside Him; I am in His presence! And here's how I'm standing there. I am standing beside Him:

a. without a sin to separate me I am holy! Now let me clarify that. God is not stupid. He knows that as long as I'm in this world I will still sin at times. And I'm not stupid either; I know that too. For me, that problem will be taken care of one day. When I get out of this body and get to heaven, I'll be completely like Him and sin will be totally removed from me. But for God that is taken care of right now! He is not bound by time. The things that are to us future are already present and accomplished to Him. Christ didn't just remove my past sins and now it takes care of my current ones one at a time as they occur. It took care of them once and for all, forever, at the cross. My slate is clean from first to last. I stand holy and without sin beside God because I am in Jesus Christ. And I stand there:

b. without a blemish to be ashamed of I don't have to hang my head in shame when I come to Him as though there are still so many things wrong with me that I can hardly look at Him. I am not flawed. Those were nailed to the cross! I stand before God perfect and without blemish in Jesus Christ. And I stand there:

c. without an accusation to be brought Nobody, not even Satan himself, the ancient accuser of the brethren, can find anything of which to accuse me before God. Everything I ever did and ever will do that I could be accused of is nailed to the cross and I bear it no more! Praise the Lord, praise the Lord, O my soul!

Now that doesn't sound like a lot of Christians I know. Some are worrying about whether they can lose their salvation, whether God is still going to accept them because of what they did last week. Others are groveling and ashamed, afraid to hardly even talk to God or they're worried about their secret sins which surely have to be there somewhere and someday will have to come out. Listen to me, if you are in Jesus Christ, right now you are reconciled to God. You have perfect peace with Him. There is not one iota of enmity or condemnation left. You are right now to God everything you're going to be in physical reality! You are reconciled and that is that! It's settled! How do you know that? In verse 23 Paul gives:

IV. The Evidence Of My Reconciliation (23): The evidence that I am reconciled is simply this: I continue in my faith! I continue to trust Christ, to rely on Him and nothing else. That word if in English makes it sound tentative; it makes it seem like I must do something to maintain my salvation, but actually it is saying the exact opposite of that:

1. I do not continue in order to be reconciled That would be saving myself, salvation by works. And the problem with that is that I can't do that, no matter how hard I try. In the Greek the word can equally well be translated since. You see:

2. the fact that I continue proves that I am reconciled! If Christ is really in me, if I am truly reconciled, the evidence of it is that I will continue firm, steadfast and unmoved to the end, until the day He calls me home. If I can quit and throw it away in the middle, it's only something I was doing in the first place. If it's something He's done, it will last. It's a permanent thing that can never change. That's Gospel; that's the good news that has been proclaimed for every creature under heaven. You are reconciled to God!

And you need to know it. Fred Craddock, a well-known professor of preaching, was vacationing with his wife in the mountains. As they sat in a little restaurant, they saw a man going from table to table greeting diners as if they all knew who he was. Eventually, he made his way to the Craddock's table and, learning that Fred was a minister, he told them his story. The man said he had been born just a few miles from that spot, across the mountain. His mother had not been married when he was born, and the outspoken criticism directed at her over the years also hit him and hurt. His schoolmates learned from their parents to ridicule him so that the boy stayed to himself at lunch and recess, lest their insults strike too hard. Even more difficult were trips to town with his mother when he would feel the looks and shaking of heads, and he heard the question, "I wonder who his father is?" When he was about 12, a new pastor came to the little community church. People talked about his skill as a preacher, and the boy began to go hear for himself. He was fascinated by the preacher, but he was always careful to slip in late, sit in the back, and leave early, lest someone catch him and ask, "What's a boy like you doing here?" One Sunday, though, he was so caught up in the service that he forgot to slip out before it was over. Suddenly, he felt a big hand on his shoulder, and as he turned around, he saw the face of the preacher. The preacher said, "Who are you, son? Whose boy are you?" His young heart sank at the question, and his face must have shown it, for the preacher went on. "Wait a minute, I know who you are. The family resemblance is unmistakable. You are a child of God." With that he slapped the boy on the back and added, "Son, that's quite an inheritance. Go and claim it." As the boy grew to manhood, that biblical reflection affirming who he really was gave him confidence. The old man in the restaurant said to Fred and his wife, "That one statement literally changed my whole life." He explained that his name was Ben Hooper, and he had lived a successful and respected life and twice been elected governor of Tennessee. This was all made possible by a small-town preacher who cared enough to encourage a young boy and reflect to him whose he really was, a child of God. [Clergy Journal, Apr 1996. Pages 38-39.] Knowing who you are is the first step to living like what you are. You are a child of God. You have been reconciled to Him. You are standing beside Him, holy, without blemish and without accusation. Go and claim it!

The Christian: Indwelt by Christ - 1:24-29

In this doctrinal section of the Colossian letter, we are now in the process of studying five major truths about who we are in Christ. The first truth was this: I am reconciled to God through Christ. Today we'll look at the second major truth: I am indwelt by Christ. Now, you won't find big sections on this in the theology books, but it is one of the most fundamental doctrines of our faith. Christianity is not just a religion, not just a set of teachings you embrace or a set of facts you believe. W.H. Griffith Thomas wrote a book called "Christianity is Christ". That says it all. It is the only faith in the world that is wrapped up in a personal relationship with its founder. Whether you are a Christian or not is not a matter of whether you believe the right things or whether you act the right way. At the bottom line a Christian is one who has Jesus Christ living in him! Christ in you is what makes you a Christian. So, let's read Colossians 1:24-27 and examine:

I. The Fact Of Indwelling: Christ IN You (27) When I was in college, I had a professor who taught a course in Colossians and when he came to this verse, he said, "Paul never taught that Jesus comes into your heart like you always hear in the hymns. "IN" here means "among" and the mystery is that Christ would let even Gentiles believe in Him." Now, it is a wonderful thing that all the peoples of the world are included in salvation as part of the church of Christ, but when Paul says "Christ in you", he means Christ INSIDE of you, Christ INDWELLING you. That professor's problem was that he didn't believe in a literal resurrection and without a living Jesus, it's a little hard to believe in an indwelling Jesus! But let's take a quick overview of this whole fact of indwelling right from the beginning. First, I want you to notice that:

1. Jesus promised to dwell in us - John 14:23 It's the night before He goes to the cross. Jesus is laying out some future promises for His disciples to sustain them through the cross experience. The whole message of these Upper Room chapters is, "I'm going away. I'm going back to heaven, to the Father." But He makes this promise: "My Father and I will come to each individual who loves Me and will remain there, make a home there." How is this going to be possible? Well, compare verse 17 and note the prepositions. "The Holy Spirit whom I will send will be no longer with or among you (yet outside); He will be IN you, inside you! God will personally indwell you; He will live inside your body. That is what Jesus promised His followers. Now, in his first letter John clearly tells us:

2. Jesus comes to live in us personally to save us - 1 John 3:24 What do you see again? "HE LIVES IN US" Compare 5:11-13. Understand this: eternal life is not in a belief in a theology or in a creed. It is in a person, a living person, a living being who lives forever, Jesus Christ. God did not give you eternal life by a decree. He gave it to you by giving you a Person, Jesus Christ His Son, to live in you so that His life becomes your life. If you have Christ in you, you have God's life; if you don't, you don't and it's as simple as that! It is the personal indwelling of Christ in us that saves us and gives us eternal life! But let me clear something else up:

3. Jesus comes in the person of the Holy Spirit - Rom. 8:9-11 Most times when the Bible speaks about indwelling, it speaks about the Holy Spirit indwelling us. But notice how the Holy Spirit is identified here. He is the Spirit of Christ and then in verse 10, where you would expect to hear Paul say, "if the Spirit is in you", he says, "If Christ is in you". You are indwelt by the Triune God. The Father is in you, Christ is in you, and the Spirit is in you. Just as Christ could say, If you've seen Me, you've seen the Father; I and the Father are one, the Son and the Spirit are also One. The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of Christ; He is the person of Christ indwelling you. Now, I don't pretend to understand that. But just don't think of Jesus being in heaven and sending His underling, the Holy Spirit, to live in you! He himself lives inside you in the person of the Holy Spirit. But where inside you does He live?

4. Jesus lives in our spirit In a conversation with a nine-year-old boy, a youth worker told the boy that Jesus died to pay the penalty for his sins, and that if he would ask Him into his heart, He would come in. That night the boy invited Jesus to save Him. A few days later the youngster said, "I don't have to talk to God long distance anymore." "Why not?" the youth worker asked. The boy pointed to his heart and replied, "Because He's only ten inches away." We often talk about Jesus coming to live in our hearts and even the Scripture mentions Christ dwelling in our hearts by faith, but we're not talking about our physical heart, are we? 1 Cor. 6:19 tells us that the Holy Spirit lives inside your body. But where? The arm? The leg? The heart? Verse 17 is the clue. Man has a body, soul and spirit, or a body, mind and spirit or however you want to think of it. It is not simply that Jesus inhabits the flesh or that He possesses the mind. These things even a demonic spirit can do. But Jesus does more than that; He becomes one with your spirit, that part of you which you can't see or touch or cut out or lose, that eternal part of you which lives forever, which responds to God. According to Rom. 12:1-2, the body and the mind have to be voluntarily surrendered to His control. It is your spirit where He lives and is permanently joined to you, never to leave. Now let's go back to Colossians and think for a moment about this:

II. The Concept Of Indwelling (26-27) Paul notes two things about this wonderful fact:

1. it is a new truth It was a mystery, a sacred secret that God had kept hidden for ages and generations. Adam, even though he walked with God, never knew that one day God would dwell inside each and every human being who trusted in Him. Abraham, the friend of God, in all the promises God gave him, never understood that one day God would live inside those who are his children by faith. Moses, who wished that God would put His Spirit on everyone and that all the Lord's people would be prophets, never dreamed that one day God would do it and put His Spirit in every one of His people! God hid it for ages and ages. It's a brand-new concept that belongs only to the church of Jesus Christ! Sometimes we long for the old days, to see and experience the things David and Elijah saw. But what a better privilege we have as saints in the church age, the personal indwelling of the Lord Jesus Christ! And that's why Paul says:

2. it is a glorious truth He says this mystery is our glorious riches. This is greater than anything else that God could give you; it is better than anything else that God could give you, for when you have Him living inside you, you have everything, since 2:3 says in Him are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. You have wisdom, you have power, you have help, you have comfort, you have joy, you have everything you'll ever need for life and godliness. You have HIM and HE is your life and your eternity! Now let me show you what I mean by talking about:

III. The Effects Of Indwelling Paul mentions three of them:

1. it assures me of the future (27b) Christ in me is my hope of glory. Now, what does that mean? Well, as I say over and over, hope in the Bible is the present certainty of a future reality. If I have hope, then it means that I am absolutely sure of something that is yet future and am waiting for it. I have the hope of glory, the absolute certainty of the future that awaits me in glory with the Lord. And the basis of that hope is Christ in me. Compare 2 Cor. 5:5, Now it is God who has made us for this very purpose and has given us the Spirit as a deposit, guaranteeing what is to come. Here you have the same concept expressed about the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit indwelling us is our deposit, our down payment, our guarantee of our eternal future. And it's because of Him, Paul says in verse 8 that we are confident that when we die, we will be with the Lord. Put simply, He is in us now so we'll be with Him then! Christ lives inside me now and that guarantees that I'll be with Him then. Simple as that. In his book Divine Lord and Savior, theologian Dr. Pieters tells about a man who was known as "Old Pete." Although he had little education, he had a good grasp of God's Word. On one occasion when he was visiting Dr. Pieters, Old Pete made a simple yet profound observation. He said, "If God should take me to the very mouth of hell and say to me, 'Here you go, Pete; this is where you belong.' I would say to Him, 'That's true, Lord, I do belong there, but if You make me go to that place, Your dear Son Jesus Christ must go with me. He and I are one and we cannot be separated anymore.' HE is my guarantee, my assurance of glory. If He didn't want me then, He wouldn't be living in me right now! His indwelling assures me of my future! He that has the Son has eternal life...these things have I written that you may KNOW that you have eternal life! That's what His indwelling does for me! Moreover:

2. it enables me for service (28-29) Paul is talking about his spiritual work, his service for the Lord, warning and teaching men, ministering to them for their own spiritual benefit. And how does he do it? Well, there is a beautiful paradox here. He says:

a. I labor in His service And the word labor means hard toil. And then he describes it as struggling, which is the Greek word agonizomai, which obviously means, to agonize! Paul says, "I serve and it's hard; it's a struggle. I don't serve the Lord a little bit now and then; I serve Him with every fiber of my being," but then he says:

b. He supplies the power He energizes me. Literally, He works in me in power. Over in Phil. 4, Paul talked about how he had learned the secret of enduring any kind of circumstance, of being hungry and in want, and so on. That secret was 4:13, I have strength for all things through Christ who strengthens me. I am never without power for service because the Omnipotent God of the Universe, the Lord Jesus who can still the storm and heal the sick and raise the dead, lives right inside of me! I am never left to do things on my own. All I need to do is learn to tap into His power and call to Him to empower me to do that which He's called me to do! His indwelling enables me to serve. And finally:

3. it cheers me in suffering Go back to verses (24-25) Now, remember where Paul was when he wrote this. He was sitting chained to a guard at Rome awaiting trial before Nero. He'd been through shipwreck on the way. His freedom was taken away. All that for the sake of building the church. And yet he writes, "I REJOICE IN WHAT I SUFFERED BECAUSE I AM FILLING UP THE MEASURE OF CHRIST'S AFFLICTIONS." Wow! What does that mean? Well:

a. Christ is not done suffering for His body Paul says there was something lacking in Christ's sufferings, something that is being completed by the sufferings that are happening in my life. What does that mean? Does it mean that we have to suffer in order to complete the process of providing salvation? No, His sacrifice is complete, once and for all. So, what does it mean? Well in Phil. 2:30 Paul speaks about a messenger named Epaphroditus who was sent by the Philippians to deliver a monetary gift to him. But in the journey Epaphroditus fell sick and suffered greatly and Paul writes... he almost died for the work of Christ, risking his life to make up for the help you could not give me. Now think about this: the gift of their love was complete. It had been made; it had been given. What was lacking was the presentation to Paul. The ideal would have been for the whole church to be there in person to hand it to him, but that wasn't possible. So, they sent a messenger to stand in for them and deliver that gift as a visible representation of their love. He did so by risking his life. Christ's gift of salvation to His people is absolutely complete. He suffered to provide it at infinite cost. Yet it lacks one thing. It has to be presented to the intended recipients, to the world and He can't be here visibly to do it. So, what does He do? He sends us as His messengers. But that task of taking the gospel to the whole world requires sacrifice and suffering, so Christ is doing that suffering in the person of us, his messengers, so that His church might be built all over the world. 2 Cor. 1:5 says the sufferings of Christ overflow into our lives. You see, because of indwelling, Him living in us:

b. my suffering is His suffering When Jesus appeared to Saul on the Damascus Road, do you remember what He said? Acts 9:4-5, Why do you persecute ME? I am Jesus whom you are persecuting! In making Christians suffer, Saul was persecuting Christ. Their suffering was His. How can that be? Because He indwells each one of us, that's how! And by indwelling me, He's feeling what I feel, He's afflicted with my afflictions, and it is His presence that gives me joy as I suffer for the sake of building His body, the church! It's not meaningless! My suffering has meaning. I am finishing out what's left to be done of Christ's suffering so that His church will be built just the way He wants it. He's living in me and doing His eternal work; what a privilege I have to be part of it! I don't rejoice that the suffering hurts; I rejoice that Christ in me is completing His eternal purpose and touching the hearts and lives of others!

What a privilege, to be personally indwelt by the Lord Jesus Christ. It secures my future, it supplies my present, and it gives joy in the midst of my suffering. What glorious riches! I have Jesus living in me! In an evangelistic meeting in Ireland the speaker was explaining [how to apply this]. Concluding his message, he repeated several times, "It means that in every circumstance you can keep on saying, 'For this I have Jesus.'" The meeting was then opened for testimonies. The young lady who had been at the piano stood up and said, "I have to leave shortly so I'd like to be the first to testify. Just a few minutes ago I was handed this telegram. It reads, 'Mother is very ill; take train home immediately.' When I saw those words, I knew that tonight's message was meant just for me. My heart looked up and said, 'For this I have Jesus.' Instantly a peace and strength flooded my soul." After pausing a moment, she continued, "I have never traveled very far alone, but for this I have Jesus. And for all the strain and suspense that goes with the thought of Mother's severe illness, I praise God that for this too I have Jesus." Three or four weeks later the evangelist received a letter from the same woman. It read, "Thank you again for the message you gave that day. Life has become an uninterrupted psalm of victory, for I have come to realize that no matter what life brings, for this I have Jesus." And, I might add, when I come to that final circumstance and the river of death lies before me and bids me cross, I can step boldly into the waters in complete confidence, because for this I have Jesus living in me!

The Christian: Wise in Christ - 2:1-10

Today we come to the third major truth that Paul tells us about who we are in Christ. First, we learned that we are reconciled to God in Christ. Second, we are indwelt by Christ. And now, Paul says, we are WISE in Christ. But before we get to that, we have to consider the context in which Paul was writing it. We begin with a look at:

I. The War In Which We Are Engaged (1, 4-5) Paul had a deep concern for these Christians at Colossae and those at Laodicea and I'm sure he would have the same for us. It is summed up in verse 4, that no one may deceive you. It's written again in verse 8, that no one takes you captive... and again in 18, don't let anyone disqualify you... Paul was strongly aware that in his day, as in ours:

1. there are many deceivers dispensing false "wisdom" There at Colossae there were false teachers. They would later be given the label Gnostics (silent G as in gnu) from the Greek word gnosis which means "knowledge". These teachers came in several varieties, but like any cult in any age, they had two distinctions. First, they claimed to have secret knowledge in the spiritual realm, a deeper knowledge that only they possessed and people outside their group didn't have. And second, they claimed that Christ was not fully God, but rather that He was simply the first among an order of created angelic beings who were mediators between God and man. Sounds strangely like the New Age movement, doesn't it! Secret knowledge and the worship of angels. Or how about Jehovah's Witnesses or Mormons; they have their own writings with secret knowledge given only to their own prophets and Jesus is NOT fully God, but merely God's son, whatever that means to them. But they're not alone. You can turn on the television or the radio and find a speaker almost any day of the week who will ask you to follow him, to accept his teachings and if you listen closely and long enough, you'll find that Christ alone is not sufficient to save you; you must do something. What's even sadder is that you can walk into the sanctuary of church after church across the land, including some in our own community, and hear quite clearly that we have better knowledge than those first Christians, that the Bible is simply a human writing and subject to error and that Christ was not really, fully God, so we are saved by our own behavior. You can enroll in colleges and even in seminaries across this land and be taught that same thing; I was! False teachers are everywhere and they infiltrate the church! That's why Paul wrote to Timothy in 1 Tim. 6:20-21, Timothy, guard what has been entrusted to your care. Turn away from godless chatter and the opposing ideas of what is falsely called knowledge, which some have professed and in so doing have wandered from the faith. You see, those false teachers and teachings:

2. they are capable of leading us astray from our firm faith in Christ Paul delighted in how orderly and how firm the Colossians' faith in Christ was, but he was deeply concerned that what is falsely called knowledge being propagated by these deceitful people could impact them and draw them away from standing firmly on the Gospel he had brought to them. Chuck Colson writes: "Several years ago a newly appointed Anglican bishop, David Jenkins, created a ruckus in England when he questioned the virgin birth of Christ. Jenkins evidently enjoyed the furor; in a second pronouncement he dismissed Christ's resurrection as a 'conjuring trick with bones.' That colorful phrase was widely reported by an amused secular press. A few days later a dramatic event turned the story into front page news: Yorkminster, the beautiful cathedral belonging to the diocese of Jenkins' archbishopric, was struck by a mysterious bolt of lightning that knocked its 13th-century oak ceiling beams to the flagstone floor. A flood of articles ensued, most provocatively headlined, 'Coincidence or the Wrath of God?' But the story soon faded. Just as well, I thought. It was, after all, merely the prattle of a heretical bishop, sensationalized by the media. (It was not all that startling either, considering the views of Jenkins' colleagues: a poll had just revealed that of the 31 Anglican bishops in England, 19 said that to be a Christian one need only believe that Jesus was God's supreme moral agent. Only 11 bishops said that one must accept Jesus as fully God and fully man!) But Jenkins' blasphemous statement did not just blow over, as I discovered during a subsequent visit to Sri Lanka. When I asked Desmond Goonasekera, an Anglican rector, about the growth of the Christian church in his country, he shook his head. 'We're losing badly to the Muslims,' he said. 'It all began with the Jenkins business.' He explained that aggressive Muslims were visiting Christian communities and using Bishop Jenkins' quote as authoritative proof that Christians need no longer believe in Christ's resurrection. Since Muslims and Christians now see Jesus as merely a prophet, they argued, why not worship together in the mosque? 'They are killing us with our bishop's own words,' Goonasekera concluded. What I had dismissed as one man's heresy had become a stumbling-block to Christian faith halfway around the world—a sobering reminder of the grave consequences of trifling with the truth.' [The God of Stones and Spiders by Charles Colson. Crossway, 1990. Pages 128-129.] Some time ago, my good friend who was an Episcopal rector that I prayed with (he is now with the Lord), asked prayer because he was going to a meeting with his bishop and was thinking about challenging him with the need to repent and receive Jesus Christ! He ended up telling him that he was in grave spiritual danger and that his decision to defrock another man who was an evangelical was ungodly! Harold Camping, the owner of the Family Radio network, began to teach that the church age is over and the church is apostate. He said God has abandoned it and you should flee it. According to him, you'd be sinning just by sitting here this morning. Never mind that Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it to cleanse it and present it to Himself without any blemish or wrinkle one day! False teachers are everywhere and their influence is powerful. Therefore, Paul demonstrates for us the fact that:

3. their work must be battled intensely in prayer He began by saying, "I'm struggling for you...I'm, literally, agonizing for you..." How was he doing that there in prison at Rome? In prayer! He wrestled against Satan and his treacherous henchmen on behalf of the Colossians every day as he prayed on their behalf! Want to protect your kids from being led astray when they go off to school and sit under the influence of some unbelieving college philosophy professor? Pray! Want to see your neighbor set free from the deceptive brand of religiosity that binds him? Pray! Wrestle! Struggle! Agonize in your praying! We're in a war. Our adversary the devil is walking about like a roaring lion seeking people to devour, people to pick off, people to steal away. Resist him, standing firm in the faith! How? Stand in the gap between him and his victims in prayer. Now we're ready for Paul to tell us about:

II. The Wisdom Which We Have Been Given (2-3) Most of the time we think that wisdom is the accumulation of information, that there are all these facts out there in the universe waiting to be gathered and that the wise person is one who has gathered a substantial number of these facts. But the Bible says:

1. all wisdom is found in a person: Jesus Christ In Him are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge! The reason for that is simple: He is omniscient; he knows all things. He knows everything about everything. He made it, He sustains it and He's causing it all to work together for good according to His purpose. In 1 Cor. 1:24 Paul writes, He is the wisdom of God and in verse 30 he continues, Christ Jesus has become for us wisdom from God! You see, if all wisdom is in Him and He lives in us, then:

2. all wisdom is given to us in the person of Christ Now that doesn't suddenly make me a nuclear physicist because Christ lives in me. It is not raw information that God is primarily concerned to give me. In fact, He lets me actually have to glean most of that from the world around me by hard work (it's called studying!) Research and discovery are an integral part of His plan for the human race. The wisdom that is given to us is spiritual wisdom, wisdom about spiritual things, wisdom about God Himself and His relationship to the world and to human beings. For instance, Paul says that:

a. we understand the mystery of God, namely Christ. Turn with me over to 1 Cor. 2:6-8. We know who Jesus is: the Lord of Glory! If Herod or Pilate or the Jewish leaders had known that, they wouldn't have crucified Him! If the leaders and the people of this world today knew that, they would fall down at His feet and worship Him. But we understand who He is. And we understand what He is doing in the world; He died on the cross for our sins and rose from the dead and now He is calling out from among all nations a people for His name and when He's all done building His church, He'll come back again and set up His Kingdom and reign forever and ever as King of Kings and Lord of Lords! The world doesn't know that mystery; it's hidden from them; they're blinded to it. But we know it! We're the ones who have the true secret knowledge of God; we know who He is and what He's doing! But Paul says even more:

b. we have been given the mind of God - 1 Cor. 2:11-12, 16 The very Spirit of God lives in us. The Spirit of Christ, the Holy Spirit, knows all things, all the thoughts of God, all the deep things of God. And He is placed inside us so that He can reveal them and show them to us as we need them by revealing them to our minds. In Him we have the very mind of Christ dwelling in us to be our wisdom! And that's why Paul explains that:

3. our growth in wisdom comes from a deepening knowledge of Him His purpose or goal in praying for them was that they would have the full riches of complete understanding of God's mystery in Christ. What that says to me is this: the closer and more intimate my relationship with Him, the more of Him that I know, the more of His wisdom I will appropriate, because it's all in Him! My growth in spiritual wisdom will be directly proportional to the depth of the relationship that I develop with Him.

Now back to that war we're engaged in with false teachers and teaching. Here's:

III. The Way In Which We Win The Battle for ourselves (6-8) There are two things we must do to keep from being led astray. The first is obvious:

1. we must continually walk in Christ (6-7) Those words continue to live in are literally, walk in in the Greek. Having received Christ, you've already been rooted in Him; the wisdom that you need is already there, planted in you. Now it is a matter of continuing to appropriate it by walking with Him on a daily basis. It's a matter of spending quality time with Him in His Word and prayer on a daily basis. It's a matter of moment by moment calling on Him for wisdom to know what to do and then the power to do it. It means asking for His wisdom, His leading, His direction, every day, in every situation, in every choice. That's walking in Christ and here's what it does for us; Paul says:

a. it increasingly builds us up to maturity Receiving Him is only the foundation, the root. Walking in Him is building the house. As you seek His wisdom and He gives it, that wisdom accumulates and it translates into experience and maturity. At the same time Paul says:

b. it constantly confirms what we have believed Your faith is confirmed daily as you commune with the Lord and He leads and directs you and helps you to understand the things occurring in your life and the things you find in the Word. Your faith will be confirmed and strengthened over and over as you go to Him and watch Him answer and meet your needs with His wisdom. And ultimately, Paul says:

c. it causes us to overflow with thanksgiving The more you walk with Him, the more His wisdom will fill you and the more your joy in Him will spring up and overflow. But walking continually with Him is only half the battle. The other half is this:

2. we must continually watch for the snare of false teaching (8) See to it is literally, Watch! Watch out! Be on your guard that somebody doesn't come along and catch you in their snare, their trap, and lead you away as their captive, their spoil, their prisoner of war! That snare is hollow and deceptive philosophy, false ways of looking at the world. The culture you live in is constantly bombarding you with falsehoods, with lies like these:

- Human beings are basically good at their core; if you can change their environment, the good will come out. Discipline inhibits children.
- Man is a higher species of animal; if he's deformed before birth or if you simply don't want him to be born, you can terminate him.
- Right and wrong are always relative; they depend on the situation; there are no absolutes. What's right for you is what matters. In fact:
- You are the center of your world; what's good for you and what feels good to you is what really matters.
- Marriage is an outmoded, binding thing. People should be free to choose and change partners. Sex is a natural drive that people should be free to engage in as they choose. In fact, it is bigoted to limit sexual expression in whatever form it takes. Homosexual unions are just as valid as traditional marriages and should be legally recognized.
- Science has proven that the universe is the product of natural forces and the laws of cause and effect at work over billions of years. There is no God who created it.

These kinds of philosophies and hundreds more like them are thrust at us in our schools and in the media from every direction. They are false wisdom, and false wisdom, according to verse 8:

a. it is empty It's hollow. It has no true value to you and what's worse:

b. it is deceptive Verse 4 says it often comes in fine-sounding arguments that are promoted by people with lots of "credentials". But the truth is, it's a lie. Where do things like this come from?

c. it is rooted in human tradition Man thinks it up. And that's scary when you realize that in some centuries educated people believed the world was flat and had an edge. And for many centuries people thought you had to bleed a sick person to make him better. The false philosophies of our day are no less lies, human invented ideas that don't come from God. In fact, they are:

d. it is rooted in demonic revelation You'll find that same phrase, the basic principles of the world, in Gal. 4:3, 8-9, where it's clear that it refers to the idolatrous pagan worship that the Galatians and the Colossians had come out of. It has demonic roots. 1 Tim. 4:1, The Spirit clearly says that in later times some will abandon the faith and follow deceiving spirits and things taught by demons. Satan has invented these lies. Do you know that in portions of Africa there is a widespread belief that having sex with a virgin cures the AIDS virus? Tell me who invented that lie to spread and multiply misery to children! All these lies are demonic ideas foisted on the human race to multiply our misery. They are all opposed to the truth God has given us in His Word and we must watch carefully to see that we don't get sucked into following them. Test the philosophies that you are taught out in the secular world against the Word of God. And when it comes to religious teachers, here is:

IV. The Test Of All True Teaching (9-10) When you hear a preacher or a priest or a religious leader teaching, here are the two things that identify genuine truth. First:

1. it affirms the complete Deity and humanity of Christ (9) True Christianity has always taught that Jesus Christ is fully and completely God and that He is fully and genuinely man in a real body. Any teaching that says He's less than God or is not fully man is error. And secondly, genuine truth:

2. it affirms our completeness in Christ (10) We have been given all fullness, everything we need, in Him. When someone tells you that you need to do this or you need to do that to be accepted by God, you know immediately it's a lie. "You must be baptized, you must take communion, you must join our organization, you must give something." Nonsense! I have been given all fullness in Christ. Just as all the fullness of the Godhead is in Him, so all the fullness of Him is in me. Don't let anyone drag you away from that.

When I was in college, I had a rude awakening. After about a year in this liberal arts college, it dawned on me that not everything I was being taught was truth, particularly in the religion department. I began to realize that there was great danger in accepting some of the false thinking that was there about God and the Bible and man, and so on. One semester I wound up in a sophomore philosophy class and as I sat there waiting for the professor to start, I looked across the aisle at the fellow next to me. He had his notebook lying closed on his desk and in big letters he had written these words from the King James: Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." - Col. 2:8. It was like a message from the Lord. I took that verse home and I took it to heart. I memorized it. In fact, I think I wrote it on MY notebook, because it made something clear to me. I was not wise in the eyes of this world. I was a 19 year old kid, putty to be molded and shaped at the hands of the educators, in their eyes. But I had a wisdom that they had no idea of. I had Christ! So many of my fellow students who came there with some faith bought the lies and left it. But God warned me to beware. So He warns all of us. Christian, the world may think you're dumb; it will certainly tell you you're foolish. But if you have Christ and you're walking in Him day by day, then you have all the treasures of knowledge and wisdom there are and as you have the need to access them, He'll make them plain to you.

Colossians: Christ Who Is Our Life

The Christian: Transformed by Christ - 2:11-12

Today we come to major truth #4 that Paul shares with the Colossians about who we are in Jesus Christ. Let's review. First, we are RECONCILED to God in Christ. Second, we are INDWELT by Christ. Third we are WISE in Christ. The fourth truth is this: we are TRANSFORMED by Christ. Now to understand that, let's use a crazy image like this: Many folks would think that Christ in me is like a perfect driver getting inside a car with a worn-out, oil-guzzling, malfunctioning engine and trying to drive it and make it perform. If you've ever owned one of those old worn out used cars, you know the kind of frustration I'm talking about. It'll never start when you want it to and when it does, it misses and carries on and doesn't have the power to make the hill or to accelerate suddenly when you need it to. So, in this view, Christ, the perfect driver, has come to live inside sinful old me, the car with the no-good powerplant, and He's trying to make me put out a perfect performance, which is impossible. But here's the true picture: Christ, the perfect driver, took out the old engine and put in a perfect brand new one the moment He got in the car! So now His car may have a "used car outside," but it's got a brand new inside, one that is capable of responding to the performance He demands. So Christ made a profound and deep transformation inside of me when He came to live there! And notice I chose the word transformation instead of reformation. He didn't just overhaul the engine or change the plugs and give it a tune-up. He put in a brand-new engine! There was a deep and permanent transformation that occurred inside of me at the moment of my salvation. God often uses analogies (maybe not as crazy as mine!) to communicate spiritual truth. The Scripture speaks about our transformation in several ways and each one emphasizes a slightly different aspect of this truth. For instance, one common description of it is being born again. He describes what happened inside us as a spiritual birth, because we can understand that from our experience of human birth. Well, here in Colossians Paul uses two more ways to describe our transformation. First, he says:

I. We Have Experienced Spiritual Circumcision (11) Circumcision might not be a common topic on our discussion list today, but in Colossae it was evidently a hot topic. Look over in Philippians where Paul gives:

1. a warning about physical circumcision - Phil. 3:2-3 Not only were there Gnostics at Colossae who denied the Deity of Christ, but there were other false teachers. The churches of Asia Minor had particular problems with those whom we'd call legalizers, those who wanted to make Jews out of Christians and get them to keep the Law. And the big tenet of these false teachers was circumcision. They taught that believing in Christ was not enough for salvation; a person must also be circumcised according to the Jewish law. Paul warns against them and says they are the conci-sion, the flesh cutters. WE are the true circumcision! And here in 2:11 he tells us we've BEEN circumcised. So, the circumcision he's talking about is not a physical one; it has nothing to do with the physical practice of circumcising male babies.

2. the type of circumcision that we have experienced is spiritual. He says it clearly in Rom. 2:28-29. Most of the Colossians, the Philippians, and the Romans were Gentiles. They were not circumcised in their flesh, either before or after their conversion. Yet Paul says that doesn't matter. True circumcision is not a matter of the physical body:

a. it is done in the human spirit The heart is a Biblical metaphor for the deepest, innermost part of man which determines his nature. Jesus said that the actions of a man proceed from his heart, from the nature that is his, deep inside. If you want to think in simple terms, think of man as a body, soul, and spirit, or a body, mind, and spirit. Our heart is neither the body nor simply the mind. It is the spirit, the innermost core of what we are that contains our nature. It is there that we are spiritually circumcised and who does it?

b. it is done by the hand of Christ Romans says it is done by the Holy Spirit. Colossians says it is done by Christ. It is not something you make up your mind to do. In fact, that cannot be done. Jeremiah wrote in 13:23, Can the Ethiopian change his skin or the leopard its spots? Neither can you do good who are accustomed to doing evil. The spirit of man, the heart of man, is corrupted by the fall. We are born with a depraved, evil, wicked, unregenerate heart. We can't just decide to be good, any more than a lion can decide to eat grass. This circumcision can't be done by the hands of men. However, when we are saved, Christ circumcises our heart spiritually. Now, what does that mean?

3. the meaning of spiritual circumcision The word means "to cut around" or in a circle. When a baby boy is circumcised, his foreskin is cut off and discarded. It is put off from him or removed. And so, our spiritual circumcision:

a. it involves a complete removal The word translated putting off in verse 11 occurs only here in the New Testament in this strengthened form. Its root means to strip off clothes or arms and put them away from yourself. It is what you would do after playing football in the mud; you'd come inside and completely strip off every bit of your soiled clothing and cast it away from you. Just as in physical circumcision that bit of flesh is cut off and thrown away as unclean, so in spiritual circumcision something is completely removed from inside of us. What is it?

b. it involves our "old nature" or "old self" The NIV words sinful nature in this particular verse in the Greek is a difficult phrase. It is literally, the body of the sins of the flesh. It means something like "the whole of our evil nature". Compare 3:9-10 where Paul refers to that same part of us that is removed and calls it the old self or literally the old man. It is the innermost person that I was by birth with that nature that I inherited from my first parents. Now, the meaning of this is understood differently by different people, so let's just focus on what 3:9 clearly says:

(1) my corrupted human nature is "put off" I am not the same rotten, awful, sinful person deep down inside anymore. And, it's not just that I've changed in my behavior. My very nature, the very person that I used to be, is put off from me. And:

(2) a brand new nature is created in me - 2 Cor. 5:17 says, ...if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; the old has gone, the new has come! I am a brand new creation on the inside. The old me is gone, removed, put off, and there's a new me, a transformed me, a new man that God has put inside. 3:10 calls it a new self, a new me inside, and one that is like God, holy and righteous. When a Christian gets up to testify and says "I'm not the person I used to be," that's not just a metaphor! He's not kidding. The innermost core of his being has been transformed. He is a brand new person at the very depths of his being.

Now, before you go home and say, "The pastor is a heretic; he said I don't have sin in me anymore", let me clarify. Your spirit or nature was not the only thing corrupted by the fall. When Jesus got into the car, He put in a brand new engine, but the body still has 20 or 40 or 60 years of dents and scratches and is rusting away and the interior still shows significant signs of wear! You still have a corrupted mind and a decaying body. That's what the Bible calls the flesh. And because you still have it, you still sin; the principle of sin is still in you, that is, in your mind and your physical body. But at the core of your being, your very nature has been fundamentally changed. You have been transformed. Oscar Cervantes is a dramatic example of Christ's power to transform lives. As a child, Oscar began to get into trouble. Then as he got older, he was jailed 17 times for brutal crimes. Prison psychiatrists said he was beyond help. But they were wrong! During a brief interval of freedom, Oscar met an elderly man who told him about Jesus. He placed his trust in the Lord and was changed into a kind, caring man. Shortly afterward he started a prison ministry. Chaplain H. C. Warwick describes it this way: "The third Saturday night of each month is 'Oscar Night' at Soledad Prison. Inmates come to hear Oscar and they sing gospel songs with fervor; they sit intently for over two hours; they come freely to the chapel altar... What professionals had failed to do for Oscar in years of counseling, Christ did in a moment of conversion." He is the Master Transformer. You can see that transformation so clearly in a man like Oscar. You and I may not have become so notorious outwardly in our sins as he did, but that same fundamental change occurred in us when we received Jesus. The person we were, that old man, was removed from us and we were made brand new. Our hearts were circumcised. And now Paul moves on from the metaphor of circumcision to talk about the same thing using a different image. He says:

II. We Have Experienced Death And Resurrection (12) To understand this fact we have to understand:

1. the concept of identification as is expressed in the phrase "with Him" The word identify today has come to mean "to relate to or to understand by similar experience," as in, "I can identify with that". But it is not simply that my experience is "like that of Christ when He was buried and resurrected". The Biblical doctrine of identification is much more literal than that. Verse 12 in Greek actually says I was "with-buried of Him" and "with-resurrected" of Him. The prefix "co" works better in English to express the thought. I was co-buried and co-resurrected together with Him at the same time and in the same experience. You see:

a. at salvation I was placed IN Christ Not only was He literally placed inside of me, but spiritually I was placed in Him. My existence, my life, was joined inseparably to His, so that we literally co-exist. We exist together. I have been given His life and His life has become mine. So:

b. what happened to Him happened to me When He died, I died; when He was buried, I was buried; when He rose, I rose; when He ascended, I ascended; and now that He's seated on the throne, so am I! I'm seated in the heavenlies with Christ, because He's there and my spirit is joined to His. The only limitation is that due to the earthly phenomenon of time, my body simply hasn't caught up with that reality yet, but it will one day! Nevertheless, since God has placed me in Him, what is true of Him is true of me. So here Paul talks about just two of:

2. the facts of our identification First, he says:

a. I have been buried with Christ (12a) That's odd. He could have started by saying, "we died with Christ". Why burial? What's so important about burial? Paul even includes burial in 1 Cor. 15 as part of the Gospel, the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. Death and Resurrection we easily see as important. But why burial?

(1) burial is the seal of death Burial signifies the absolute completeness and finality of death. To be dead is one thing, but to be "dead and buried," even in English slang, is a sure thing. There's no coming back from it. It is to be completely removed from this life. 3:3 describes this change that God made in our core as a death. You died. The old you died and further, it is buried and gone! When Christ was buried, the old me was buried with Him! It's gone forever! And, Paul adds:

(2) baptism is the symbol of that burial He doesn't mean that the act of water baptism is what actually transforms your heart. He means that the very first meaningful act of your Christian experience, baptism, is to be a reminder and a display of the death and burial of the old you. Look at Rom. 6:3-6. The old me, that old man, that old self, died with Christ and my baptism is a visual display of that; it is a way of telling all the world that the old me is dead and buried, once and for all, and:

b. I have been raised with Christ (12b) The very power of God that raised Christ from the dead did the same thing in me. I rose with Him and that's why Rom. 6 tells me that:

(1) I now live a new life The power of God worked in me. It put off the dead old me and buried it once and for all and made in me a new me, a transformed me, a resurrected me, that lives a brand-new kind of life! And that change from the inside out affects my whole life. That's why a genuine Christian cannot go on living a life of sin. He cannot, because, 1 Jn. 3:9 says God's seed remains in him and he cannot sin; he's been born of God; there's a new person planted in him that is like God. It HAS to change his life! And this transformation:

(2) it was done by the power of God when I believed The moment I placed my trust in the God who raised Jesus from the dead to save me, that very same thing happened to me! By faith I became a brand new resurrected, transformed creature in my innermost being.

My friend, if you're saved today and you know it, you're transformed at the very center of your being. You're not the person you used to be. You are brand new. Hallelujah! Praise God for it. Your heart's been circumcised. The old you is dead and buried and the new you is righteous and holy. You are a child of God, a citizen of heaven. You are not a reformed sinner; you have been transformed into a son or daughter of God by faith in Jesus Christ. A woman was contacting her high school classmates about their 35th reunion. Many were excited about seeing their old friends. One man wrote back to the woman, "I have the 5 Bs--baldness, bifocals, bridgework, bulges, and bunions." A woman quipped, "I wasn't half the woman then that I am today" (referring to her weight). But another woman said, "I can't wait to see everyone. I've changed completely. In high school I was the class 'tramp.' I had no standards and everybody knew it. But a few years after high school I received the Lord Jesus as my Savior. My life was transformed. Because of Christ, I'm not the person I was, and I want my classmates to know about it." How about you? Because of Christ you literally are not the person you were! You've been transformed. Do you want the world to know it?

Colossians: Christ Who Is Our Life

The Christian: Made Alive With Christ - 2:13-15

Let me review briefly what we've learned in Colossians so far. The first two chapters are DOCTRINAL. Paul began in chapter 1 by talking about who God the Father is. Then he went over who Jesus Christ is. Now from 1:21 on, he's been telling us important facts about who we are in Christ:

1. we are reconciled to God in Christ
2. we are indwelt by Christ
3. we are wise in Christ
4. we are transformed by Christ

And today the fifth fact we'll study is this: we are made alive with Christ. The English language no longer has a good individual word that means "to bring to something to life". Old English used to have the word quicken, which meant "to give life to something", to make it live. It's hard for us to conceive of something dead that is brought to life. In fact, the reality of it is scary to us. Bruce Larson in his book, Living Beyond Our Fears, tells a great story about a judge in Yugoslavia who had an unfortunate accident. He was electrocuted when he reached up to turn on the light while standing in the bathtub.

His wife found his body sprawled on the bathroom floor. He was pronounced dead and, as was the custom in that particular town, he was placed in a room under a crypt in the town cemetery for 24 hours before burial. In the middle of the night, the judge came to, realized where he was, and rushed over to alert the guard, who promptly ran off terrified. Fortunately, he returned with a friend, and they released the newly revived judge, whose first thought was to phone his wife and reassure her. He got no farther than, "Darling, it's me—" when she screamed and fainted. Next, he went to the houses of several friends, who were sure he was a ghost. In a last desperate measure, he called a friend in a distant city, who had not heard of his death, and who interceded for him with his family and friends. [Dynamic Preaching, Mar 1991. Pages 41-42.] You see, we instinctively know that when a thing is dead, it's dead. It cannot come to life. Death is permanent. And therein lies the miracle of:

I. The Action Of God in our lives: He Made Us Alive (13a) Now, here's a good picture of:

1. our former state: we were spiritually dead This is talking about the state we were born in, the way we came into the world. We were physically alive, but we were spiritually dead. What does that mean? We were completely separated from God. God told Adam, "In the day you eat the fruit of that tree you will die!" and he actually did. He died spiritually. He was cut off and separated from the fellowship he had with God. That's why he was hiding in the bushes when God came walking in the garden. His sin had separated him from his God! And he had kids who were born just like him, who had kids born just like them, and so on, until you and I came along who were born the same way. Paul says in Rom. 5:12, Therefore, just as sin entered the world through one man, and death through sin, and in this way death came to all men, because all sinned [in him]. His death was transmitted to his descendants, so we were born dead, separated from God, spiritually stillborn. And there is something permanent and final about death. Dead is not the same as asleep; it is not the same as unconscious or "in a coma". Death carries no hope with it that there will ever be life. A dead thing cannot live again; it cannot change itself; it cannot help itself. We were in a spiritual state from which there was no return and that dead state manifested itself in that:

a. we committed sinful acts We were dead in sins, plural, individual acts of sin. Our deadness toward God moved us to commit sinful acts; we broke His laws and commands. And we had no power to stop doing it because:

b. we had a sinful nature "An uncircumcised heart" is not literal but it better gets the meaning across. We did not sin simply because we chose to, as Adam did originally. Lions kill prey and eat meat because the nature of a carnivore is in them; they'll never eat grass, no matter how well they're trained or how hard they try. They act like what they are. And so do human beings. We sin because we are born with a nature that is sinful, that is separated from God and given to evil and so we acted like what we were! And, over in Ephesians, Paul added:

c. we followed Satan's ways - Eph. 2:1-3 Satan had paths laid out for us to walk in. He had proven and tested patterns of evil waiting to ensnare and trap us and lead us on and we unknowingly followed those ways. They were built into the culture and the circumstances around us and we walked in them. We were under his influence and he led us on and if God had not intervened in our life, the end result of being spiritually dead in this world is the second death, to die after we die, to be separated from God eternally in hell after we leave this world! That was our destiny. But God did intervene. He did reach into our lives. As we studied in verses 11-12, He transformed us by a spiritual operation; He performed a spiritual circumcision on us. He took out that old nature; he removed it and threw it away and implanted a brand-new nature in us, a brand-new spirit, one that is like Him. Another way of describing this is verse 13, He quickened us; he made us live; He spoke to the spiritual corpse that we were just like He did to Lazarus' corpse that had been lying in the tomb four days, "Lazarus come forth!" And the dead corpse lived and got up and walked. So He said to us, "John, come forth; Sally come forth!" Put your name in there. And in that moment, we came to life! One moment we were like that judge lying dead in the crypt waiting only for burial of the remains; the next we were standing there alive and walking and talking. Now what does that mean? It means that in:

2. our present state: we are spiritually alive, which means we are fully connected to God. In fact, we are so connected that we are literally joined to Him. We are one with Him in our spirit, so that His life is now flowing through us. This new life we have is His life. This new nature we have is His nature. That's the point of verse 13:

a. it was done by God We couldn't do it. We couldn't make it happen. A dead thing can't decide to live; it can't give life to itself. Life has to be imparted from outside. That's what God did; He infused His life into us. It was an act of grace. It was an act of love. It was an act of mercy. He didn't have to do it but, because of the kind of God He is, He chose to do it! And then notice that Paul tells us how He did it:

b. it was done together with Christ When Christ's body was given life in the tomb that Easter Sunday morning, we were given life together with Him. Remember the truth of identification: I am placed into Christ and His life became mine, so what happened to Him happened to me! When He died, I died. The old me was crucified with Him and died with Him. I was buried with Him; the old me was laid to rest once and for all. And when He was given life, I was given life. Look with me at Eph. 2:4-5. We were made alive together with Christ, but look at verses 6-7:

(1) we were also raised up together with Christ That's the word to resurrect, to cause a physically dead body to arise from sleep and stand up again. Christ was given life and then His body was raised up to walk in that newness of life. So, we were given life together with Him spiritually, but our bodies will also follow suit! They will be raised to a brand new resurrection life one day at His coming, however, the truth is that this time thing we're stuck in clouds our perception. It is already done. We are already raised up together with Him. In the economy of God, it's not simply "as good as done"; it's done! And not only that, but:

(2) we are seated in the heavenly realms with Christ We're already seated there on high reigning with Him on His throne. How can that be? We're still here! That's only true in time, but the fact is that since we are truly joined to Him and He's there, we're there in Him! Someone once asked a born-again Scotsman if he was on his way to Heaven. "On my way?" he replied, "Why man, I live there!" Can you see it? I've already arrived, together with Him and in the ages to come when my body has finally caught up in time to reality, He's going to spend all the ages to come being worshipped for His grace which gave life to the dead and I'll be His living proof of it! So will you!

And the greatest irony of it all is that the instrument by which God gave this glorious life to me was man's cruelest instrument of death:

II. The Method Of God: was The Cross (13b-15) The cross means more than a piece of wood; the cross means the death of our precious Savior, Jesus Christ, who died upon that piece of wood in our place! The cross is an event; indeed, it is the central event, the pivotal event upon which everything about our salvation, upon which the very life that has been given to us, hinges. At the cross God did three things that allowed Him to call us out of spiritual death into life. First:

1. He graciously forgave ALL our sins (13b) There are two Greek words for forgiveness. This one has the word grace as its root. We didn't deserve it; we couldn't earn it. It came out of nothing in us but simply by His pure grace He pardoned all our sins. How? 1 Pet. 2:24, He himself bore our sins in his body on the tree [on that piece of wood, that cross], so that we might die to sins and live for righteousness... God took our sins and put them on Christ and they were nailed to that cross with him. His one act of dying paid for them all and therefore, they are gone. We are forgiven, once, for all, forever. And, if that's not enough, in the process He also did a second thing:

2. He completely removed the law (14) The Law, with its commandments, stood against us; it condemned us. It said that we were lawbreakers, that we had offended the holiness of God and deserved to die. It said, "You shall not steal" and we stole. It said, "You shall not lie" and we lied. And if you say, "Wait a minute, I'm not a Jew, the Law wasn't given to me!", Paul said in Rom. 2:14-15, Indeed, when Gentiles [non-Jews], who do not have the law, do by nature things required by the law, they are a law for themselves, even though they do not have the law, since they show that the requirements of the law are written on their hearts, their consciences also bearing witness, and their thoughts now accusing, now even defending them. God wrote a portion of the law in our hearts; it's part of being made in His image. We inherently know it's wrong to kill, to steal, to lie, to commit adultery, and so on. So, the Law of God, both on paper and in our hearts, had lodged a set of Divine charges against us. We had a rap sheet, a criminal record. And God has only pronounced one sentence: the soul that sins must die! But when Christ was nailed on that cross, we were nailed there together with Him and two very wonderful things happened. First:

a. He removed its charges against us by taking the penalty upon Himself and meeting it. The law said we must die and so He died and took us there with Him. In the eyes of the law, justice was done; judgment was satisfied, the penalty had been meted out. As far as the Law is concerned, we are dead; we are already executed in Him. But do you know what that means? It means:

b. He removed its authority over us When we died with Christ, we died to the Law. Turn with me to Rom. 7:1-6. Did you hear that? When you die, the law has no authority over you. You don't have to pay taxes (although the IRS has found a way around that for at least a short time!); you don't have to pay bills; you can't get a speeding ticket. You're dead! You're not on the books of the law anymore! The same is true in the spiritual realm with God's law. If your husband dies, the law of marriage no longer applies. He's free from it and so are you. Death severs the authority of the Law. So, when Christ died and you died with Him on the cross, it's like the law was left there nailed to the cross. And you are free! Free for what? To sin? No. Free to serve God in a new way. Verse 6 says we are freed from serving God through the principle of law. That principle of law says, "I please God by keeping the law; my actions merit reward or condemnation." That way of relating to God was nailed to the cross; it's over. We died to it. We serve God in a new way. Instead of following rules, we act like God wants us to act because we've been changed on the inside by the Spirit. We're a brand-new person who is like God and wants to live like God wants. We end up doing the very things God requires in the Law because it's our nature. But the good news is that when we fail to live up to who we are, there is no remaining condemnation. The law has nothing to say against us; we're already dead! Hallelujah! At the cross we were set free from the Law so He could give us life! And here's the final piece of good news. At the cross:

3. He fully vanquished the Enemy (15) What powers and authorities is he talking about? Satan's demonic forces sought to control us. Remember we read in Ephesians that when we were dead in sins we walked in Satan's ways, His paths. He exercised control over us. But listen to Heb. 2:14-15, Since the children have flesh and blood, he too shared in their humanity so that by his death he might destroy him who holds the power of death--that is, the devil-- and free those who all their lives were held in slavery by their fear of death. Satan holds us in slavery all our lives by keeping us afraid of death and its penalty. As long as he keeps us afraid of dying and facing the penalty of our sins, he can get us to do anything! But at the cross Jesus

a. He stripped away the Enemy's power He "destroyed" him, that is, his work. He put him out of business. Colossians says He disarmed him! He stripped off all the enemy's weapons and took them for Himself. Just like when you defeat an enemy soldier and take all his armor and all his weapons so that all his power is gone and he has nothing left to fight you with. That's what Jesus did at the cross! By dying He said, "Here, Devil, take that! All your power over all my children is gone. They can't die anymore because they died in me. They are free and you can't scare them into following you anymore!" That's what Jesus did at the cross, but in the end:

b. He publicly displayed it in the Resurrection Just like a returning Roman general would come back into the city and display his victory by leading his triumphant army with a host of captives following behind him, so Jesus gave public proof to the world by walking out of that tomb! Satan held the keys, but when Jesus walked out alive and we walked out with Him, He was saying by that act "I HAVE THE KEYS! I am the Victor! I win! Satan is vanquished forever; his doom is sealed! And my people are FREE!"

In his book Forever Triumphant, F. J. Huegel told a story that came out of World War II. After General Jonathan Wainwright was captured by the Japanese, he was held prisoner in a Manchurian concentration camp. Cruelly treated, he became "a broken, crushed, hopeless, starving man." Finally, the Japanese surrendered and the war ended. A United States army colonel was sent to the camp to announce personally to the general that Japan had been defeated and that he was free and that he was in command. After Wainwright heard the news, he returned to his quarters and was confronted by some guards who began to mistreat him as they had done in the past. Wainwright, however, with the news of the allied victory still fresh in his mind, declared with authority, "No, I am in command here! These are my orders." From that moment on, General Wainwright was in control. Huegel made this application: "Have you been informed of the victory of your Savior in the greatest conflict of the ages?... Then rise up to assert your rights....Never again go under when the enemy comes to oppress. Claim the victory in Jesus' Name." Huegel observed, "We must learn to stand on resurrection ground, reckoning dead the old-creation life over which Satan has power, and living in the new creation over which Satan has no power whatever." You see, nobody has a claim on me, not my sins, not the Law, not the Devil. I was set free by dying with Him at the cross and as a free man, Jesus gave me life. In fact, that's what life means: freedom. Like the judge, I was dead but I came to life and Jesus opened the crypt and let me out. Now my task is to go back and convince those I love that I'm alive in Him and they can be too!

Colossians: Christ Who Is Our Life

The Christian: Free in Christ - 2:16-23

With this message we complete our study of the first half or the first two chapters of Colossians which are DOCTRINAL. Today we consider the last of six important facts that Paul tells us about who we are in Christ. Let me review them one last time:

1. we are reconciled to God in Christ
2. we are indwelt by Christ
3. we are wise in Christ
4. we are transformed by Christ
5. we are made alive with Christ

Now the sixth fact, the one we'll study today, is this: we are free in Christ. Jesus gave a very important principle in John 8:32. He said: "...you will know the truth, and the truth will set you free." Some years ago, a very bizarre incident was reported. A 16-year-old girl was kidnapped and held prisoner for four months. Where? In the attic of a church in Memphis, Tennessee. Week after week that congregation gathered to worship, to sing, to pray, to enjoy Christian fellowship--and for four months in that very same building there was a terrified human being needing to be rescued. Until she was discovered and released by two men on the church's maintenance staff, that girl was a helpless captive, a prisoner in church! But sadly, there are more people who are captives in church than we realize--people who are still living in bondage because of lies that Satan has perpetrated on them, people who have not fully experienced the true spiritual freedom that is theirs in Jesus Christ. Here in Colossians 2, Paul clarifies for us three specific areas in which we need to understand and use our freedom. He begins in verse 16 with the word Therefore, which ties what he's about to say with what he's just said. Because of what Christ did at the cross, because He hung us there in Him to die with Him, because He took the law, that rap sheet of charges which stood against us to condemn us, and nailed it to the cross so that we are dead to the law and we are free from it, therefore, he says:

I. We Are Free From The Judgment Of Legalism (16-17) There is always somebody waiting to judge us because we do a certain thing or we don't do a certain thing which they are convinced is a rule from God that we have to keep, isn't there? This was a particular problem in the early church in Jerusalem and Judea where most of the new Christians were from Jewish background and they had to wrestle with the question of the Old Testament. There were all these things given in the law like circumcision, feasts they were to keep, dietary laws they were to observe, resting on the Sabbath and a host more that they had always been following because they were from God. And they continued to follow many of them after they were saved. But as the Gospel spread and Greeks and Romans and other peoples began to come to Christ, people who didn't know about and didn't do any of these kinds of things, great conflict arose. Don't they have to keep the Sabbath? Don't they have to eat kosher? The apostles and elders held a big conference to seek God about this issue in Acts 15 and decided once for all, "NO!" Non-Jews were free from the law. They didn't have to keep these things. In fact, neither did the Jewish believers! But legalism dies hard. It followed Paul around wherever he went. And it was there in Colossae. People were saying, "You have to do this to please God" or "You have to do that to please God" or "If you do this, you aren't pleasing God..." And that's what prompted Paul to give these:

1. Paul's illustrations of our freedom He says that:

a. we are free from the law of diet No one can judge you by what you eat or drink. If you eat pork, another believer can't criticize you for it, and, even if he doesn't, and you can't judge him for not eating it. That's probably not an issue for you, but what about a Muslim who comes to Jesus who's always been forbidden to eat pork all his life? If you drink a glass of wine, another believer can't judge you for it and you can't criticize him if he doesn't. Yet for how many years did many churches categorically teach that it was wrong to touch a drop of alcohol, even though Jesus Himself did! We are free from the law of diet. Why? Rom. 14:17, For the kingdom of God is not a matter of eating and drinking, but of righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Spirit Where do these ideas come from? Look at 1 Tim. 4:1, 3-4. Satan wants to keep people in bondage to rules like this so that they won't experience the freedom that comes from knowing that God has created all food and drink to be enjoyed and to be received with thanksgiving to Him! He'd rather have them watching and condemning and criticizing one another and worrying about whether God will condemn them for what they eat or drink, when the truth is that we're free from that. And likewise, Paul says:

b. we are free from the law of days We don't have to keep the annual Jewish feasts like the Passover or the monthly New Moon festival or even the weekly Sabbath day. If you want to keep it, you can keep it and I can't judge you, but if I don't, you can't judge me. Yet whole branches of the church have tried to make Sunday into the New Testament Sabbath (which is actually Saturday!) by making rules saying you can't work on Sunday, you can't do homework on Sunday and you can't play sports on Sunday. The truth is you can't judge me if I do, and I can't judge you if you don't; neither of us is more spiritual. We are free from that law of days. And here's:

2. the reason we are free from these things (17)

a. these things were merely shadows of things that were to come Heb. 10:1 says, The law is only a shadow of the good things that are coming--not the realities themselves. For this reason, it can never, by the same sacrifices repeated endlessly year after year, make perfect those who draw near to worship. Have you ever looked at your shadow? It looks like it's you, but it's not really you. It's a dim, shifting, temporary reflection of reality. That's what the Law was, but:

b. the reality is ours in Christ We don't need sacrifices; His one sacrifice was enough once for all. We don't need Sabbath days; they were to teach us to rest in His finished work! We don't need a Passover because Christ our Passover has been sacrificed for us. We don't need dietary laws to prove our obedience to God, because whatever we eat and drink, we regard as a gift from His hand and take it with thanksgiving! These rules and regulations were nailed to the cross and we are free from the judgment of legalism! Aren't you glad? Don't let anybody lead you back into bondage to it! Now, Paul says secondly:

II. We Are Free From The Snare Of Mysticism (18-19) What's that?

1. what it is: seeking spiritual experiences apart from Christ, you know, in visions and dreams and such. It's a common phenomenon in the world. The Muslims have their Sufis who seek mystical spiritual experiences; Native Americans went on "vision quests"; Buddhists meditate themselves into deep trances to find "spiritual truth".

a. it occurs outside the church The Gnostics were running around in Paul's day there at Colossae. They claimed to have secret deep spiritual knowledge that others didn't have. They believed God was unapproachable by man and that He related to man through a host of intermediary angelic type beings. And they wanted to include Paul's Jesus as one of those. Most of their so-called knowledge came from visions and dreams and the like which stood in contradiction to the Scriptures, but that didn't matter. Mormons owe their origin to the mystical experiences of Joseph Smith seeing an angelic vision and having revealed to him the things that became the Book of Mormon. The Swedenborgians owe their origin to the mystical experiences of Emmanuel Swedenborg and none of these acknowledge that salvation is through faith in Jesus Christ alone. The world is full of people pursuing mystical experiences to gain spiritual truth and that tendency:

b. it is mirrored even inside the church People who are truly Christians sometimes want to buy into these mystical tendencies. Their focus and their emphasis may be on, "I had a vision", "I had a dream", "I have a prophecy", "God told me to do this..." Now don't get me wrong. God does reveal Himself in visions and dreams, even today. Especially in the Muslim world, He is appearing commonly by these means and drawing people to Jesus. But when we seek a vision or a dream or a mystical experience for its own sake, instead of seeking to know Jesus Himself and to align our lives with the Word of God, something's wrong. Here's:

2. what's wrong with it Paul says first:

a. it leads to worshipping wrong things It led the Gnostics to worshipping angels. It leads the cults to preach a Jesus that is not truly God and to teach that salvation is actually by works. It can lead real Christians to seek an experience more than the Savior, to savor being caught up in beautiful worship music and never really connect their hearts with the Savior it was meant to praise. Second:

b. it breeds a false humility that is really pride The Gnostics saw themselves as merely humble human beings who couldn't dare to approach a transcendent God and had to approach him through intermediaries. But in reality, the Gnostics were quite proud of this secret knowledge they had. They would go into great detail about what they saw or thought they saw and get puffed up by it and look down on Christians who didn't know what they did. And the deathtrap of mysticism when it creeps into the church is pride also. "You didn't see what I saw!" "You didn't experience what I did!" "I'm more spiritual than you are!" In fact, Paul goes so far as to say in verse 19:

c. it indicates a lack of connection to Christ the Head He says the so-called "Gnostic Christian" of his day was no Christian at all, any more than the new-ager or the cultist of our day. He was never a true part of the body of Jesus Christ.

But I am! I am connected to Jesus Christ, my Head. I am in Him and He is in me and I am free from having to seek after mystical experiences to know Him. Nobody can judge me and say, "But you haven't had the experience I've had; you haven't spoken in tongues; you haven't seen what I've seen!" I'm free from that because I am in Jesus Christ and God is causing me to grow exactly the way He wants me to as a part of the body! Now, finally Paul says:

III. We Are Free From The Self-Denial Of Asceticism (20-23) Asceticism is a fancy word:

1. what it is: trying to please God by self-denial Man sort of has this inbred notion that repeatedly comes up that he can somehow please God by giving up legitimate things, by depriving himself, by abstaining and refraining and sometimes, even by hurting himself.

a. an ancient illustration would be: the Pharisees who were like this in some ways. They fasted twice a week, refusing their food and gave away a tithe of everything they possessed down to the herbs in their garden. They laid down rules all around the Scriptural commands to make sure they pleased God. They took "do not handle" and turned it into "do not even touch". They would never touch or eat with a Gentile, for instance. They had elaborate ceremonies for washing pots and pans and washing hands before eating. All of these were ways of trying to show how they carefully denied themselves in matters that others did by course. Centuries later, the Christian church itself developed monasticism. Whole orders of believers dedicated themselves to vows of poverty, to eating minimal food, speaking as little as possible and in general afflicting themselves, in the hope that it would draw them closer or make them more acceptable to God. The idea hasn't gone away either.

b. a modern illustration might be: ultra-separatism Some years ago I heard a preacher say something like this: "I am a fundamentalist. I don't smoke or drink or cuss or chew or sniff. I don't even take vitamins. My hair never touches my ears or my collar and my wife never wears slacks, jewelry or makeup. I only read one Bible, the God-given King James version. I don't go to movies, dances or the theater and I don't fellowship with those that do. I am a fundamentalist and I'm proud of it!" It seems funny now, but that kind of thinking permeated the evangelical church for the entire first half of the last century; it colored the lives of a lot of you older folks and it's still alive and well in some circles. You'd be surprised what people ask when they call to "check us out" as a church sometimes. Do we do this or do that? And much of it is a modern-day version of asceticism: I please God by self-denial, by how many things I don't do. And again here's:

2. what's wrong with it First, Paul says:

a. it is of wrong origin God didn't invent it. Asceticism is not His principle. He gives us all things richly to enjoy. It is one of the basic principles that belongs to this world system that is all around us and you know who invented that system and set up its basic ideas! God never said the way to please Him is to afflict yourself on earth. Second:

b. it concerns things with no eternal value Food and drink perish with the using. Hair length and dress styles have no eternal value. It's not that God doesn't care about your hair or how you dress, but those are small secondary issues in light of the things He's really concerned about. In a real sense focusing on these issues is much ado about nothing. Third, like mysticism:

c. it breeds a false humility which is really pride Again, the ascetic is trying to be humble toward God and show what a servile creature he is, but he inevitably ends up proud in heart and looking down his nose at other believers who don't do what he does. "I'm a fundamentalist and I'm proud of it!" Remember the Pharisee's prayer, "I thank Thee that I am not as other men are...especially this publican!" They feel other Christians can't be real because they do X, Y or Z. However, the real problem is that:

d. it inflames the flesh rather than restraining it The more you tell your flesh, "You can't have this!", the more it wants it. Trying to deny yourself to please God stirs up the sinful passions of your flesh; it Increases your temptation, but gives you no help against it. It says, "Don't," but can't help you not to! But look in verse 20. Here's:

3. why we are free from all these things, we died with Christ! And when I died with Christ, I died to the Law and I died to having to try to please God by making rules and by denying myself and by seeking after special spiritual experiences. I am dead to all that stuff because I am fully and completely in Jesus Christ and accepted in Him. Nobody can judge me on the basis of any of those things, I am free.

And all that remains is for me to go out and live like it! But that's so hard. So many forces try to keep me frozen in fear that I must keep rules, that I must seek after experiences, that I must deny myself and give up things, that somehow, I am not really and fully all that God says I am. "The Desperate Hour" is a drama written by John Haye. In one very intense scene, a family is being held hostage at gunpoint. The climax of the scene is when Ralph, the young son, is targeted by the gunman, who tells the rest of the family that he will kill the boy if he moves. But the intruder is unaware of the fact that the father earlier managed to take all the ammunition out of the pistol. The tension builds as the man points the gun at little Ralph's head. Then the dad quietly speaks to the frightened boy and says, "Son, listen to me. I've never lied to you before, and I'm not lying now. That gun isn't loaded. I'm telling you the truth. The man can't hurt you. When I count to three, I'm going to open the door, and I want you to run out." One, two, three, and Ralph pulls away and runs out the door to freedom. The frustrated gunman stands there just clicking the trigger. There were no bullets. The boy was freed by the truth, and that's the same way we come to freedom. [Pulpit Digest, Sep/Oct 1996. Page 20.] When we know the truth of who we are in Christ, that we are reconciled in Him, that we are indwelt by Him, that we are wise in Him, that we've been transformed by Him and made alive together with Him, then we can run out the door to freedom and live free and nobody can keep us in bondage. As Paul put it in Galatians, It is for freedom that Christ has set us free. Stand firm, then, and do not let yourselves be burdened again by a yoke of slavery. - Gal. 5:1.

Colossians: Christ Who Is Our Life

The Christian Life: Basic Understanding - 3:1-4

We spent several months looking at the first half of the book. Let me review the outline:

I. Doctrinal (What We Believe)	Chs. 1-2
1. who God our Father is	1:1-14
2. who Jesus Christ is	1:15-19
3. who we are in Christ	1:20-2:23
[because you live out of who you believe you are!]
a. we are reconciled in Christ	1:20-23
b. we are indwelt by Christ	1:24-29
c. we are wise in Christ	2:1-10
d. we are transformed by Christ	2:11-12
e. we are made alive with Christ	2:13-15
f. we are free in Christ	2:16-23
II. Practical (How We Live)	3:1-4:6

Now, at the beginning of chapter 3, we come to a major turning point in the book. Here Paul is going to tell us how we live because of what we believe. He turns from the doctrinal to the practical aspect of our faith. He will tell us about what things we must put off from our old life and what things we must put on in our new one. He will give us specific guidelines for husbands and wives, parents and children, slaves and masters. He'll talk to us about prayer and about how to relate to those outside the faith. However, before he gets that specific, he lays down in 3:1-4:

I. The Basic Principle Of Christian Living Did you see the principle? The Christian Life Can Only Be Lived By God's Power! In other words: Only Christ can live the Christian life! When Ludwig Nommensen, a pioneer missionary, arrived among the Batak tribesmen of the Philippines, a village chief gave him only two years to learn the customs of the people and to convince them that he had a message worth hearing. At the end of that period, he was asked how the Christian religion differed in its moral rules from the traditions of the Batak. "We know what is right," said the tribal leader, "for we too have laws that say we must not steal, or take our neighbors' wives, or tell lies." "That's true," the missionary answered quietly, "but my Master supplies the power needed to keep these laws." The chief was startled. "Can you really teach my people to live better?" he inquired. "No, I can't, but if they receive Jesus Christ, God will give them the strength to do what's right." Being permitted to remain another six months, Nommensen preached the Gospel and taught the villagers how the Holy Spirit works in the lives of believers. At the end of that time, the chief said, "You may stay longer. Your religion is better than ours, for your God walks with men and gives them strength to do the good things He requires." Do you see the point? We know what to do! Yet we have no power to do it in ourselves! However, God gives us the very power to do what He expects us to do! Look at our text and flip back a few pages to compare what it says with Ephesians. First, it says:

1. God's power raised me with Christ As a believer I have been raised together with Christ. When He was raised from the dead, I was raised together with Him to a brand-new life. And note the passive voice; I did not raise myself; I've been raised. How? Look at Eph. 2:6a. God raised me up with Christ! He did it by His mighty power. We learned this back in chapter 2; the power of God transformed the very core of my being so that I am a brand-new creation inside. But there's more:

2. God's power seated me with Christ in heaven Christ is now in heaven seated at the right hand of the Father. But look at Eph. 2:6b. God's power seated me there with Him! You see, it's not just that He's up there and I'm down here. He's up there and because my spirit and His Spirit are bound eternally in one, where He is, I am. I'm up there in Him, even though my body hasn't caught up to that destination just yet. Do you see what Paul's saying?

3. my life is Christ's life Look at verse 3 of Colossians. I died and my life is hid with Christ in God! The old me that was in Adam, my old self that was of the earth, died and I was given a brand-new life, the very life of Christ. The new me is in Christ and I am seated up there in Him. Paul wrote this same truth to all the churches. Flip over to Gal. 2:20, I have been crucified with Christ and I no longer live, but Christ lives in me. The life I live in the body, I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me. There it is again:

a. my own old life died That person I was before I was saved, that old self dominated at the very core by sin and totally depraved, that person was crucified with Christ at the cross. When Jesus died there, I died with Him. Yes, He died there for me; that purchased forgiveness for my SINS. But I died there with Him and that gave me release from my SIN, from the power of sin which had long enslaved me through my old nature. When I died the power of the force of sin over me was broken. Yet even though I died, I still live, only now it's not me anymore. It's Christ living IN me. So, the Christian life is not the old me trying to live a new way. How do I live? The life I now live in this body, I live by faith in the Son of God who loved me. I live it by trusting in Him to do the living by His mighty power. What Paul's saying is that:

b. God's power lives my life Look at Eph. 1:18-20. Do you see what he's saying? Or rather what he's praying? That same power which raised Christ from the dead and seated Him in heaven and that raised me from the dead with Him and seated me up there with Him, that same incomparably great power now lives in me in the person of Christ and is flowing out through me, making me a person like Him, doing His will. The only one who can live a true Christian life is Christ and that's exactly what He is doing in me, living out His life through me. And so, in a very practical sense Col. 3:4 says:

4. Christ is my life (4) The words who is are not even in the Greek text. Literally it reads, When Christ, the life of you, shall appear... He is more than Savior; He is more than Lord; He is my very life, living His life out through me and producing all those wonderful symptoms and indications of His presence that we love to talk about such as love, joy, peace, and so on.

An elderly couple had no means of support except a weekly gift of money from a man in their church. One Sunday the church scheduled a special meeting in the afternoon. The couple's supporter, who lived quite far away, wanted to remain in the area for the afternoon service. So he said to the old couple, "Would you mind if I joined you for dinner after the morning service?" Immediately the couple thought of the half loaf of stale bread, a bit of butter, and some cheese that was the entire contents of their cupboard. How could this friend dine with them, they thought? But the man interrupted their worries by adding, "I have brought a basket of things with me and there will be plenty for the three of us." When he arrived at the poor, bare cottage, he unpacked the basket. Soon the three of them were gathered around a table that was spread with fried chicken, homemade bread, country butter, and apple pie. The man had not only come to dine with them, but he had also brought all that was needed for the feast. That's what Jesus did for us! When He came into our lives, He didn't just ask us to live a life like His; He brought everything we need to live it with Him and gave it to us. His mighty power is in us to do all that He wants done. So what's my part? What do I do? How do I engage in:

II. The Constant Practice Of Christian Living Well, there is another principle that is very important. When it comes to working IN me, God will not violate my will. Oh, He may send all kinds of things into my circumstances that are not what I want, but when it comes to doing His work in and through me, He will not do that without my permission. He will not save me, unless I want it and ask for it. He will not force me to obey His lordship; I must yield myself to Him. And He will not live out His life through me unless I choose to let Him; otherwise, I would be a puppet or a robot. So, in our text Paul reminds us that:

1. there are two contrasting realities First, there is:

a. that which is above and when we hear that phrase, we usually think about glorious mansions and heavenly music and all the other good stuff that God has prepared for us in the future. But look at what the text says. The word things isn't even in the original. It literally says Seek the above! What's above? Christ seated at the right hand of God and me in Christ. "The above" is me being in Christ and my life being totally consumed and hidden in His. But then there is:

b. that which is on earth and again we usually think of houses, lands, pleasure, and so on. But again, the Greek has no “things”, simply “Seek the above, not the on earth.” What’s on earth? Me in the flesh, my body which still has the force and power of sin living inside it and which would like very much to rule and reign over it.

So, on the one hand, the real me is the one in heaven with Christ, the new creation that I am in my spirit where Christ dwells with His mighty power to live out my life. But on the other hand, that real me is still in the flesh. As long as it’s in this world it has wrapped around it a body and mind which are heavily corrupted and tainted by sin. And these two things are in a constant state of tension. Listen to Rom. 6:17-19, But thanks be to God that, though you used to be slaves to sin, you wholeheartedly obeyed the form of teaching to which you were entrusted. You have been set free from sin and have become slaves to righteousness. I put this in human terms because you are weak in your natural selves. Just as you used to offer the parts of your body in slavery to impurity and to ever-increasing wickedness, so now offer them in slavery to righteousness leading to holiness. Do you see it? My part is simply to choose! Who do I let live through me? Do I give myself to the power of Jesus and let Him live through me or do I give myself to the power of sin and let it live through me? I have a choice! So:

2. there are two things I must do Paul says in verse 1 that I must:

a. seek the above: I must set my heart on it. I must yearn for it. I must want it, desire it. Do I want the pleasures of sin and all the misery that I know comes with it? Or do I want that “above kind of life,” that “Christ kind of life”. The choice is mine; God gives it to me. Moment by moment, hour by hour, situation by situation and circumstance by circumstance, I have a choice to make. Do I yield to Christ and let His power live out His life in that moment or do I yield to sin and let it do its work through me? I must choose what I genuinely desire. I have to stop and say, “Lord, I am a new creature in You; You are my life. Lord, here’s the situation. Now use my mind and my body; I give them to you. Live out your life through me!” I know that sounds really simple, but it is no small order. We have all these habits where we’re trained to act and react in an earthly way instead of in God’s way. That’s called our flesh. It’s so easy to just do what we’ve been patterned and trained to do by the world around us instead of stopping to yield ourselves to Him. We forget so easily. A situation comes up and “Boom”, we react instantly without thinking and yielding and we let our flesh do the acting instead of Christ. And Paul knew that, so in verse 2 he urges us to:

b. focus, to set our minds, to fix them. He says I must concentrate on the “above” life. I must focus my mind on the fact that I’m in Christ, that I’m a heavenly person, that the old me is dead. The more I focus on Jesus seated there at the right hand, far above all things, and me seated there in Him, the more likely I am to yield myself to him at a moment’s notice as difficulties arise.

*Located in the White Mountains of New Hampshire is a famous pass known as Franconia Notch. And high on one of its rocky walls protrudes a granite formation that resembles the profile of an old man peering intently over the valley. It’s called “The Old Man of the Mountain.” From that unusual rock formation Nathaniel Hawthorne drew his inspiration for “The Legend of the Great Stone Face”. The story goes like this: A boy by the name of Ernest lives in a valley from which he views daily a face fashioned in the mountain. His mother tells him that someday a venerable man who bears that image will visit the valley. Years go by. Great men from all walks of life come, but no one has the resemblance of the face. Ernest reaches old age, disappointed that he had not seen his mother’s prediction fulfilled. Finally, a renowned poet visits the area and listens to Ernest himself deliver a discourse to his neighbors. And what does the man notice? He sees in the face of Ernest the likeness of the great stone face on the mountain. Having gazed on that figure daily for many years, Ernest, now a venerable old man, has gradually come to bear its image. The lesson of the story? We take on the characteristics of the things we concentrate on. We become that on which we focus. That’s why Paul said, set your mind on “the above” not on “the earthly”. The writer of Hebrews said, Let us fix our eyes on Jesus...who sat down at the right hand of the throne of God. Focus constantly on Him and you in Him and you’ll choose what you desire; you’ll yield to Him and He’ll live through you and that brings us to verse 4 and:*

III. The Glorious Promise Of The Christian Life (4) Right now Christ is hidden in heaven with God and my life in Him is hidden with Him up there, but:

1. one day Christ will appear He will show Himself to the world. He’ll return in all His power and glory and reveal Himself before the whole universe and you know what:

2. I will appear with Him in glory! He’s my life; I’m in Him. When He reveals Himself to the world, I’ll be revealed with Him in that same glory because He and I are one!

So what if yielding to Him means the way of the cross! So what if it means suffering and enduring hardship! So what if it means being misunderstood or mistreated or even hated and persecuted for His sake. Paul said, I consider that our present sufferings are not worth comparing with the glory that will be revealed in us. The [whole] creation waits in eager expectation for the sons of God to be revealed. – Rom. 8:18-19. One day you will be revealed with Him in all His glory as the universe shouts for joy. He will appear and you will appear with Him, for He is your life. So focus on Him and you’ll choose the desire of your heart and He’ll live out His life through you in mighty power.

The Christian Life: Putting Off The Old - 3:5-11

Having explained the basic principle of living the Christian life in verses 1-4 (which is that Christ has to live it through me!), Paul gets right down where the rubber meets the road to that issue we encounter every day of our lives: the issue of sin. Put simply, the question is like this: "OK, now I'm a believer. Jesus lives in me. But I still sin! How am I going to stop sinning?" Read with me Paul's answer to that in 3:5-11. Paul says, "Rid yourself of it!" in verse 8. Literally, "put it off" or "put it away from you". And the verb tense indicates that it's a finished action: "put away from yourself for good these things". Now let's look first at:

I. What I Must Put Off: Paul lists some things quite explicitly. And, if you compare the list in Gal. 5:19-21 which is nearly the same, he calls them there The Deeds Of The Flesh. These are the sinful acts that result when your flesh is in control of you, instead of the Spirit of God being in control. First, he mentions:

1. sins of the body (5b) ...sexual immorality, impurity That first word in the Greek is porneia which covers the whole gamut, including sex before marriage, sex outside of marriage, sex with someone when you're married to someone else, getting money for sex or giving money for sex, pornography in all its forms (even on the internet, the fastest growing type), incest, rape, homosexual behavior and any of the other deviant ways we've invented to make God's holy gift of sex impure. That was Greek culture; that was how people lived; that was how the Colossians lived before salvation. Unfortunately, that's how too many Americans live! Now that I'm in Jesus, my body is the Temple of the Holy Spirit and I need to be rid of those things! Secondly he mentions:

2. sins of the desires (5c) ...lust, evil desires, greed (idolatry) These happen in the mind and the heart. Whether it's lusting sexually after a person, lusting selfishly after power or lusting greedily after money (which Paul says is idolatry, loving money more than God!), these things have no place in my life. They're all around me, but they have no place in my life now; I need to rid myself of them. Third, he goes on to:

3. sins of the attitude (8a) ...anger, rage, malice Quietly seething anger in my heart, sudden flare-ups of uncontrolled rage, or cold hatred of other people for whatever reason, these things have no place in my life in Jesus Christ. And now he really gets to meddling and talks about:

4. sins of the mouth (8b-9a) ...slander, filthy language, lying Talking bad about other people, telling dirty jokes, cursing and being vulgar in the way I talk and especially, intentionally lying to conceal the truth, these things have no place in my life in Jesus. I must be rid of them!

Of course this list was not meant to be exhaustive; it's only some of the types of sin that have occurred in our lives, but if we're honest, I don't think any of us have a perfect score so far, have we? We may not have done all of these, but we've all done some of these. In fact we likely still do some of these. But the point is that these types of things have to go, once and for all; they have to be decisively put away from my life and here's:

II. Why I Must Put These Things Off First:

1. these are the very things that bring God's wrath (6) They are why Jesus is coming back to judge the world. Listen to what John writes in his vision of the Tribulation period in Rev. 9:20-21, The rest of mankind that were not killed by these plagues still did not repent of the work of their hands; they did not stop worshiping demons, and idols of gold, silver, bronze, stone and wood--idols that cannot see or hear or walk. Nor did they repent of their murders, their magic arts, their sexual immorality or their thefts. Same basic list. Mankind won't stop doing these things, no matter what. That's why Jesus is coming back. They'll be destroyed in the winepress of His wrath at His coming for lives filled with these very things! So, do I want them in my life? The very things that sent Christ to the cross to take the full wrath of God upon Himself in my place, do I want these things back in my life? And what's more:

2. these things belong to my old self (7) If you remember from verse 1, the new me is seated in heaven with Christ. These things don't belong there; they don't belong to that person. They belong to the way I used to live before I came to Christ when my old sinful depraved self ran my life. For some of us this is real plain; before we were saved we did some awful things. Others may be thinking, "But I was saved at 5 or 6 years old; I never lived like that?" You were never angry or threw a temper fit or hated somebody or coveted what they had or took something from someone else? You still had the nature that did those things, even if you were too small for them to become full-blown! You and I were born with an old self, a sinful nature bent on doing those things; that's why we did them. I was saved at 15 but looking back on some of those early teen years, I knew how to cuss like the best of them and liked to see if I could get away with it. I remember lusting after girls; I remember stealing and lying to protect myself. Did you notice that's 90% of Paul's list and I was basically a "good" kid compared to others I knew! You see, it wasn't just somebody else; I used to walk in those ways in the life I once lived! So did you! But:

3. I have already put off my old self with its practices (9) I wish you could read Greek, because there's a beautiful point here you would see. That word put off here is a different word from rid yourselves in verse 8. It means to strip off from yourself and throw away. It's what you do when you come in from mowing the lawn in 100 degree heat; you strip off all your smelly wet clothes and throw them away from you and hop in the shower to be clean. We saw that word back in 2:11. That's what God did with my old self, my sinful nature; He circumcised it; He cut it off and threw it away from me. These behaviors belong to the old me that is gone; when He put off the old me, they belong with it. They don't belong in my life anymore because:

4. I have put on a new self which is like God (10) You see:

a. my new self, the person that I am now in my spirit, is already righteous and holy. Eph. 4:24 says, ...put on the new self, created to be like God in true righteousness and holiness. My spirit, my nature inside, is righteous and pure and holy; the Holy Spirit has joined His holy self to it forever! Those unholy behaviors don't belong in the life of a holy man or woman who is one with the Holy Spirit of Holy God! But notice carefully that Paul says that my new self:

b. it is being continually renewed in its knowledge Knowledge has to do with the mind, not the spirit. My spirit has been made righteous already, but you see, my mind is full of lies the enemy has planted there over the years, even from childhood. He has infected my thinking in all kinds of ways that I don't even realize. That's why over the course of my life God has to renew my mind, my thinking, to match His, to know the truth of who I really am and who He is. That's a gradual process and the more that I experience God's renewing of my mind, the less these sinful behaviors can have any place at all in my life. You see:

5. my only identity is in Christ; all earthly distinctions have ceased (11) I am seated up there in Him and He is in me; that's who I am. I am no longer a Jew or a Greek or a foreigner from some uncivilized culture or even a despised terrorist Scythian. I am no longer a slave or a free man or (Paul adds in Galatians) even a male or a female; those things are not my identity. I am in Jesus Christ and He is in me; I am a Christian, one who is made like Him on the inside, one who bears His very nature!

So, those old things have no place in Him and they have no place in me and in my life. They have to put away from me; I must rid myself of them. And yet it does not happen automatically. These habits and behaviors are not instantly gone from me the moment I receive Christ. So, the big question is:

III. How I Put These Things Off: Look what Paul says: I Must KILL Them (5a), Literally, I must put to death [my] members which are on the earth. You see, even though my spirit is made brand new and even seated in heaven with Christ, my members that are still on the earth; my mind and body are still plagued by the power of sin which is in them and has not been removed. So I still find the power of sin drawing my mind toward those unclean things and drawing my body toward unholy behavior. And to just say, "Stop doing this!" isn't enough. I can't just stop doing these things on my own. I can try until I'm blue in the face and it won't work. I will become miserable and cry out like Paul did in Rom. 7, "What a wretch I am... Help!" But remember the lesson last week? The basis of the Christian life is this: God's power lives my life. Christ is my life. I live by trusting Him to do the work. So, when Paul says, "Put to death your members on the earth", he doesn't mean to shoot yourself literally. He means to make a choice to allow Christ to kill those things out of your life and rid you of them. To understand what that means, let's go to another passage, Rom. 6:6-13. Putting my flesh to death involves a four step process. First:

1. I must KNOW: (6:6-10) Did you hear it? We know...we know... I have to KNOW, not just hope, suppose or think. I have to KNOW:

a. that I died with Christ and am free from the power of sin What does that mean? When Christ died, I died with Him and a person who's dead is free from the power of sin. There is no force or power in this world, not the Devil himself, not the power of sin that's in my body and mind, that can MAKE me sin. I'm free to choose not to. And I must know:

b. that I live with Christ a new life unto God The same power of God that raised Christ from the dead to a brand-new life is in me and is available to me to live my life. Without knowing these two facts, I'm sunk. So I must KNOW that I don't have to sin and that Christ is in me to empower me not to sin, yet it can't be merely academic knowledge:

2. I must COUNT these things as being true of myself (6:11) In other words, I must take a stand. I must say, "These things are true of me!" I must count on them as being true for me. I must count myself:

a. as being dead to sin and free from its power I am dead to sin; I am free; I don't have to sin; I can choose! And I must count myself:

b. as being alive to God and full of His power I am raised with Christ; I have a new life; His power is in ME! You see, this is where faith comes in. It's one thing to know the tensile strength of a piece of rope and know it will hold 200 pounds. But it's quite another thing to be willing to slide over the edge of a cliff holding onto that rope and counting on the fact that it will hold me! I have to make a decision; I have to choose to trust the rope. Now, it may not feel to me like I'm dead to sin and free from its power. I may feel compelled, even driven toward it. But the truth is I'm free and by faith I must count it so! What's really true about me is that I am seated up there with Christ in the heavenlies above; I AM that person whose life is hidden with Christ in God's mighty power, not this earthly struggle I feel. Once I count that as being true, I'm ready for step 3:

3. I must REFUSE:

a. to let sin rule over me (6:12) I must stand up and say, "No, sin, you're not going to control me; you have no power over me!" And I must refuse:

b. to let sin use my body (6:13a) "Sin, I am not going to loan you my body to do the things you want to do. It's mine and I choose who rules over me!"

Make a choice; make a conscious decision. Exercise the freedom and authority you have. Decide, "I am NOT going to let sin use me like it used to; I am not going to let it rule my life and use my body for a playground to get what it wants!" But instead, here's what I'm going to do:

4. I must OFFER: (6:13b) myself to God. That word offer means "to place beside", to give something to someone and place it in their hands. It's the same word used in Rom. 12:1, ...offer your bodies as living sacrifices, holy and pleasing to God--this is your spiritual act of worship. It means offering:

a. myself to God's control, saying "Lord, here I am; I'm yours to control. Live through me!" And it means offering:

b. my body to God for His use "Lord, live out your life through me; use my body as a tool to do righteousness; carry out Your will through my body!"

And when you offer yourself to Him in that way, He does the very thing you're counting on! He lives through you. So, here I am and along comes a feeling of lust or a situation where intense anger is developing in me. What do I do? That's my flesh rising up in me. How do I kill it? How do I put it to death? I stop right there and pray in my mind and say, "Lord this thing does not belong in me; I am a new creation in Jesus Christ. I know your power is in me and I'm counting on it right now. I WILL NOT give myself over to this sin. I give myself to You and I ask that Your mighty power would flow through me and keep me from this sin. Live through me, Lord!" Now, I realize that's the longer, more theological version of the prayer. The short version is Peter's prayer when he felt himself sinking, "Lord, HELP!" It doesn't matter; God understands shorthand prayers! But that's how you put off sin; you count on Christ living in you to live through you and remove it. And it works. I KNOW it works. It may mean going through this process a dozen times a day. Those verbs in Rom. 6 are all present tense...keep on counting, keep on refusing...keep on yielding. Moment by moment, day by day, keep on doing it and you will see those things put off from your life. It sure beats trying not to sin in your own strength and failing and repenting and trying harder and doing it all over again. Christ really IS your life! He is our victory over sin! F. B. Meyer used this analogy to illustrate how it is possible to be victorious. He wrote, "When I was a boy, I'd go to the Polytechnic in London where my favorite diversion was a diving bell. It had seats all around the rim, and at a given time it was filled with people and lowered into a tank. We used to go down deeper and deeper into the water, but not a drop ever came into the diving bell, even though it had no bottom and the water was well within reach. You see, the bell was so full of air that though the water 'pushed against' the air and the air 'pushed against' the water, because air was being pumped in all the time from the top, the water could not do what it otherwise would; it could not flood in and fill the bell. Likewise," Meyer wrote, "if you are full of the Holy Spirit, the flesh- life is underneath you; and though it would surge up, it is kept out." When Jesus is in control of you and living your life, His power keeps the power of sin under your feet. All you do is yield. If you think you can do it on your own, if you think you have strength and wisdom to live life, you'll soon find out otherwise. Alan Redpath the Bible teacher and commentator, talked about the lesson that God had to teach him through severe difficulty. He said: "The only good thing about Alan Redpath is Jesus." Paul said, I know that nothing good lives in me, that is, in my flesh... – Rom. 7:18. The only good thing in me is Jesus. When I realize that and learn to cry out to Him to live my life, then I walk in victory over sin.

Colossians: Christ Who Is Our Life

The Christian Life: Putting On The New - 3:12-17

Let me review for you once again where we are in the book:

- Chapter 3 begins the practical portion of the book which tells us how to live the Christian life.
- Verses 1-4 gave us the basic principle: Christ is our life and our task is to recognize and realize that and let His power live His life out through us.
- Verses 5-11 tell us about the negative side of what that means: putting away from ourselves things that are sinful by His power.
- The process was for doing that was this: I stop and remember who I am in Christ, count myself as being a brand-new creation in Christ, refuse to yield to sin, and yield or offer myself to the power of Christ to put sin away from me.

However, putting away the old sinful life is not enough. It's like emptying all the old, broken furniture out of a house and sweeping it clean. That's only half the task. Unless you fill the house up again with new things, it can't fulfill its purpose. The Christian life is not only putting away from me the things that characterize the old man, but it is also putting on or clothing myself or filling my life with the things that characterize the new one! Christ made me a brand-new person on the inside. And now I have to put on the new clothes that go with the new person that I am. I have to clothe my life with the characteristics that go with this brand-new Christ-like person that I have been made inside. So, in verses 12-14 Paul gives us a sampling of:

I. What I Must Put On (12b-14) This list is, of course, not meant to be exhaustive. It only has seven items. One could also include truthfulness, righteousness, honesty, and a host of other qualities. But these seven certainly form a core description of what Christ wants to produce in your life. Let's just briefly define them. First is:

1. compassion: deep caring about the ills of others Jesus looked on the multitude and had compassion on them; He was touched deep in his heart with their spiritual plight, because they were like sheep without a shepherd. They had nobody to take care of them. Christ wants to build in us a caring about others' needs and problems; He desires that we are moved when we see them suffering or in trouble. And with that goes:

2. kindness: acting in a helpful fashion to others This is the action step. It is doing something about the needs of others, helping their plight. It is directing them if they're lost, feeding them if they're hungry, stopping to help them when their car breaks down, or taking the time to sit with them when they're lonely. A third thing is:

3. humility: valuing the needs of others above mine It does not mean thinking that everybody else is better than I am, that I am a worthless nothing. In a minute we'll see what you are. Rather, it means a conscious choice to be selfless, to place meeting the needs of others above my own needs, to choose caring about them over caring about me, just as Jesus did. Then there's a thing called:

4. gentleness: not contending with God or others Meekness is the older and perhaps better translation. It means accepting what comes my way without contention. It means not arguing with God or blaming Him about my circumstances and doing the same thing toward others. It means not arguing with others and blaming them or trying to push them down so I can climb up. Gentle Jesus, meek and mild; gentle me... Then comes:

5. patience: self-restraint when provoked by others This is the old word long-suffering which means exactly what it says. It is the ability to endure suffering or provocation a long time without striking back. It is being slow to anger, standing in the grocery line without muttering or sitting in the traffic jam without laying on the horn! Or more seriously, it is tolerating true wrongs without retaliating in kind. And along with that goes:

6. forgiveness: extending unreserved grace to others It means, not only that I choose not to retaliate, but that I actually, unreservedly forgive them as Christ forgave me, no strings attached. Not 7 times but 70 times 7. And finally, Paul mentions:

7. love: the goal which sums all these and binds them Jesus said that the entire law of the Old Testament was summed up in this, love your neighbor as yourself. The command He gave His disciples was to love one another, to have that self-sacrificing, agape love of God that He had for us in going to the cross. And that love produces all these other things. That is the goal, to love others the way God loves them, the way God loves us, to love them with the very love of God. And that is not natural. To love with God's selfless love is not in my flesh. I must make a deliberate choice; I must choose to clothe myself, to fill my life with these things. Now let's go back to the beginning of verse 12 and examine:

II. Why I Must Put Them On (12a) And listen, the reason is not because God said I must. This is not a "go out and do some things for God" list. I MUST put these things on because of who I am! Look at who God says I am! First of all:

1. I am chosen by God Do you remember that process of choosing up teams when you were a kid? To play baseball or football, two kids would be captains and choose their teams. I wasn't really athletic so I was always about last to get chosen. Can any of you relate to that? To knowing that you're no good, that you're a lousy player and nobody's going to pick you? Unfortunately, a lot of us feel that way about God. I have to be a good player for Him to pick me. I have to work really hard at humility and forgiving and so on. But look what it says, I am not some loser trying to do as good as I can to impress God. I am a person that Almighty God has chosen, a person He wanted on His team! I'm not trying to get God to choose me; He already has and because of that:

2. I am holy Did you hear that? This is not God standing here with His binoculars looking years into the future when I get to glory and saying "Oh yes, you'll be holy some day!" I am holy right now in Jesus Christ. God put a new person, a new nature inside me when I was born again and that new man, that new me, is absolutely pure and holy like God. Every religion in the world says, "Work to become something that you are not; become better". Christianity's message is exactly the opposite, "Become what you ARE! God made you something; He made you holy and pure, a brand-new person. Now get the flesh out of the way and let it shine. Let what you really are inside come out!" And here's what else:

3. I am continually loved by God Dearly loved. I don't have to try and earn or merit that love; I already have it. I am God's own beloved child. You see, I must put on this new clothing in my life because it goes with the new me. The rags I wore before in my old life don't fit my new person. I am compelled to have a life full of love and compassion and kindness and forgiveness because that's who I am: a person made on the inside, at the deepest level, like Jesus Christ, who is seated in the heavenlies in Him! Now, of course, the big question is:

III. How I Must Put Them On (15-17) Well, verses 15-17 hold the key, but before we look at them, I want to show you:

1. the principle Do any of those things in that list we looked at sound familiar? If you'll look with me over in Galatians, you'll find:

a. these things are produced by the Spirit - Gal. 5:22-25 This term fruit is a bit meaningless to us because most of us are not agricultural types. We might picture the Spirit as some kind of fruit tree and all these qualities as the fruits hanging from His branches. But this is not a verse about Him; it is a verse about us. The term produce might help our thinking. These qualities are the produce of the Holy Spirit in the life of a person; they are what He produces, the fruit that His control in a life bears. So, if we want these things to appear in our lives, how do we get them? By just deciding, "Well now, I'm a Christian, I've got to be more compassionate?" No, the things in verse 19 are acts or works of the flesh; they are how people live when the flesh is in control. The things in verse 22 are how people live when the Spirit is in control. The key is in verse 25; did you see it?

b. I must be living by His power We live by Him. It is His power that produces these things in us, not our own strength. So, for our life to be clothed with these Christ-like things, we must somehow learn to live in the power of the Spirit who is in us and not in the mere human fleshly strength we can come up with. So, how do you do that? Well, let's go back to our text and look at:

2. the process: yielding and thanking Notice three things in verses 15-17. Each verse contains a passive command followed by an admonition to be thankful: "Let something happen or be...and then be thankful." It's not, "Go do something" (even though verse 17 seems that way at first glance). It's "Get out of the way and let Christ do something and then be thankful". It's a two-fold process of yielding and thanking; yielding to God for His power to work through you and thanking Him for doing it. Just like you have to yield yourself to Christ and count on His power to remove the negative things in your life, so you have to do the same thing in putting on the positive ones. You can't remove the old yourself and you can't put on the new yourself. But He can and He will, if you will choose to allow Him to do it. Now consider the first instruction:

a. let Christ's peace direct your heart (15) Christ has a peace, a personal peace that He gives inside every believer by means of the Holy Spirit who bears witness with our spirit. It is described in Phil. 4:7. It's not something the world can understand or describe. It is the peace that belongs to God, that sense of absolute calm no matter what is happening around you that God's power has everything under control. It is a personal peace and it is given to each believer to guard or protect our hearts and our minds from worry and doubt. Now, that peace is to rule. The word for rule here comes from an old Greek word that means to be the umpire or judge in a sporting event. It means to decide or to direct or be the judge of what goes on. We are to let that peace direct our hearts. As a believer, you can tell when Christ's peace is there in your heart about something and when it isn't. When you have Christ's peace about something, you yield to the urging of the Holy Spirit and do it; when you don't, you refrain. You say, "Isn't that kind of subjective?" It could be if it is not coupled with the constant practice of PRAYER, Phil. 4:6. I'm not saying, "Sit around and wait for a feeling to come". I'm saying, "Spend so much time asking, seeking and beseeching God to control your life and to give you wisdom that that sense of inner peace characterizes your daily life. Then when that peace fades or is missing, you'll notice it!" It's an experience that you were called to as part of the body of Christ. It's not just for someone else. If you learn what that experience of His peace is like, you can let the Holy Spirit direct your heart to the right thing to do in the given situation by it. Let me give you an example. There's a disabled lady in the community that we've helped several times on your behalf with rent or groceries. A couple months ago she learned that she would have to find another place to live, which is awfully hard on $600 a month. We made a few efforts and looked up a couple agencies and so on. But soon the deadline was only a few days away and we had no answers, and the best we could do was say, "We don't know how to help you." I went home that night and I was just troubled. I had no peace; here was a disabled lady who was going to be on the street in a couple days. I couldn't just do nothing. My colleague came in the next morning with the same feeling. We began to brainstorm for alternatives and make calls and to really pray. At the last minute God granted her a 30 day extension! There's more to the story, but the point is that Christ will produce the right qualities in you when you let Him choose what you do by directing you with His peace. You won't have peace without compassion, without being kind, without being gentle, without forgiving. He will remind you in every situation who you are and what course a person like you should take by His peace in your heart and mind. Listen to that peace and then when He does move you, verse 15 concludes, learn to give thanks. That's the first thing but it must be coupled with a second thing:

b. let Christ's Word fill your mind (16) You know what it means to dwell in something richly; it means abundantly, to let the Word of God have a full, rich, abundant effect in us, to just be full of it, consumed with it. Christ will produce the things He wants you clothed with when your mind is filled with His Word. Now, how will that happen? We're told first, by the:

(1) constant exposure to teaching of the Word Like the experience of peace, it doesn't happen off by yourself. It happens in the context of the ministry of the body. It comes as you are continually taught and admonished by others and they in turn by you. God speaks to your heart through His Word and that's how it comes to dwell in you richly. And it is kept there by a most unusual thing, by the:

(2) constant expression of singing to the Lord Did you ever stop to think why we sing? It's not just because our forefathers did so since time immemorial. Singing is our worshipful response unto God based upon His Word. It is keeping His Word on our minds as we sing it back to Him in praise. So often I find myself when I'm in the car, when I'm in the shower, when I'm working alone, just singing the songs and hymns and spiritual songs that we sang on Sunday. They stick in my head. Music is important! It is a means of letting the Word of God dwell richly in my mind and have full effect. So, Christ will produce the things He wants in me when I let Him direct me by His peace and when I let His Word fill my mind. It will come alive to me and when it does, according to verse 16, my heart will well up in gratitude. And then there's one last thing:

c. let Christ's Name characterize your actions (17) Everything you do or say, every action is to be done in the Name of Christ. Now what does that mean? The apostles healed the lame man in the name of Christ, remember? Listen to Acts 3:6,16; 4:7-12. They made it quite clear what that meant. It was not them that did it; it was the power of Christ and so they also did not take any of the credit for it. Doing everything in the name of Christ means just that. It means:

(1) constantly depending on His power It means recognizing that in you there is no power to do that which pleases God unless He does it through you. So when you have let Him direct you to WHAT He wants you to do, then you call on Him to let the power to do it flow through you. "Jesus, I know what you want me to do; You want me to help; you want me to forgive; you want me to be gentle or patient. So YOU do it through me!" It is living in constant dependence upon Him to produce in you the fruit of the works that He desires and then:

(2) constantly giving Him the credit Not assuming any of it for yourself; always pointing back to Him, sharing with any who see it that it is not you, but Christ and meaning that.

So, here you are; a situation is in front of you. A person has a great need that has come to your attention or someone offends or hurts you. How do you react? Your mind is already full of the Word of God because you've been saturating yourself with the teaching of the Word and song and the Spirit is using it to make clear to you the right thing. He's also using the sense of internal peace to make the right choice clear to you because you've had a consistent daily walk of prayer. So you know what to do, both in your mind and your heart. Now, you simply tell the Lord, "OK I know what's right, now you have to do it through me. I yield myself to You to be your channel, your vessel." And what results in your life will be actions of compassion, longsuffering, forgiveness, and so on. The Holy Spirit will produce His fruit in your life. In her book The Hiding Place, Corrie Ten Boom tells of her suffering in a German concentration camp during World War II. After her miraculous release, she traveled extensively, telling of God's grace through those horrible years. On one occasion in Munich, a man came up to her when she had finished speaking and she recognized him as a former prison guard. Not realizing that she had been one of his prisoners, the man said, "How grateful I am for your message, Fraulein. To think that Jesus has washed my sins away!" As he extended his hand to her, vengeful thoughts boiled in Corrie's heart. Instantly she saw how sinful they were. "Forgive me, and help me forgive him," she prayed. She struggled to raise her hand, but it remained at her side. She felt not the slightest spark of warmth. Again she prayed, "Jesus, I cannot forgive him! Give Your forgiveness." Corrie wrote, "As I took his hand, the most incredible thing happened. From my shoulder along my arm and through my hand a current seemed to pass from me to him, while into my heart sprang a love...that almost overwhelmed me." You see, she knew the right thing to do, first of all because she knew what the Word said about forgiving, and she had taught it to others! She also knew instantly that her vengeful unforgiving thoughts were wrong; God's peace disappeared in a moment. She knew what He wanted her to do, but she had no power to do it. So she called upon the Lord Jesus and He poured the fruit of His love into her and out through her to this man. That's how you clothe yourself with the character qualities of the new person you are. You learn to sense His desire and cry out to Him, moment by moment, situation by situation. You see, Christ really is your life. He is your putting off and He is your putting on! Will you let Him be what He is waiting to be in you?

Colossians: Christ Who Is Our Life

The Christian Life: Family Relationships - 3:18-21

In Chapter 3 Paul is telling us how to live the Christian life. Verses 1-17 have been concerned with giving us the principles to do the job. We have seen that Christ is our life and that His power must live our life. We have learned how to PUT OFF the things God wants eliminated from our lives by yielding to His power. And we have learned how to PUT ON the things God wants to grow in our lives by depending on His power. So now, Paul proceeds to give us some very practical guidelines that relate to specific life-situations. He begins in verses 18-22 by giving us:

I. Principles For Family Relationships I think it's obvious that in four verses Paul does not intend to paint for us a complete picture of family life. There is so much more to family relationships than the few principles mentioned here. However, one thing is for certain: God knows what is in man. And as you look around you at the families you know, you begin to realize that what God has done here through Paul is to put His finger right on the single most needy spot in each of these relational situations. He's picked out the key area in which each person in a family relationship is most prone to struggle. And if we look closely, we can see that for each person there is something to PUT OFF and something to PUT ON. He begins with:

1. husband - wife relationships (18-19) and he has a word for each. First:

a. wives (18) A key area where problems arise in marriage for the wife is often this area of authority. God has designated a leadership structure in the home. Eph. 5:3 says, For the husband is the head of the wife as Christ is the head of the church, his body, of which he is the Savior. The husband is in the leadership role and the wife is in the supportive role. Now, that has absolutely nothing to do with equality or worth for we just read back in verse 11 that in Christ there is neither male or female. He's all that matters. As far as our relationship with Him goes and our service for Him goes, there is no distinction. A woman is not in any sense a second-class Christian. Men are not better than women, either spiritually or in any other way. Yet within the structure of a family, there is a difference in function. The husband is to be the head, the leader under God, the one who constantly seeks God and provides continual direction, protection and provision for his family. The wife is to choose voluntarily to submit to and support him in that role of leadership. And therein lies the rub. It's not in our flesh to submit to anybody or anything. Our flesh is self-centered and self-serving and struggles to be in control, unless it is under the power and control of Jesus Christ. So that's why Paul implies that wives must:

(1) PUT OFF self-centeredness, or self-serving, that way of thinking that says, "What about what I want? What about my plans? I want it my way!" That way of thinking went with the old life, the person you used to be. It has to be put away. You are in Christ. And as believing wives, Paul says, you have to:

(2) PUT ON submission The term submit is a military term. It means to rank under, to voluntarily place yourself under the authority of a person serving in a superior position. Did you hear about the man who was extremely intimidated by a bossy, domineering wife? During one argument, she began chasing him around the house with a broom. Finally, he dashed into the bedroom, dove underneath the bed, and slid back toward the wall as far as he could. Prodding him with the broom handle, his wife shouted, "George, you come out from under there!" Covering in the darkness, he cried out in a trembling voice, "I won't do it! I don't have to. I'm the head of this house!" Now, none of us are that domineering, of course, but if you could get genuine honesty, you might be surprised at how many husbands have a sense that they find themselves doing what their wives want more than listening to God and leading them. And I don't think God is as much concerned with the outward action as the with inward attitude. Wives, He wants in you an attitude which gladly, and not grudgingly, acknowledges, "Husband, you're the leader here; I support you; I follow you". Of course, the first thing you may be thinking is, "Aren't there exceptions?" Sure, there are some exceptions, but exceptions are just that, abnormal cases. Paul's giving us a normal scenario. That kind of submission, the kind that Christ displayed toward His Father throughout His life is the kind He wants to produce in you as wives. Now Paul moves on to:

b. husbands (19) Men, you see, God knows you too. Here's where our key problem lies, in the abuse of that very position in which we're placed. Our flesh tends to be self-centered too and to forget about the feelings and the needs and the problems of our wives, to think about ourselves and act in our own interest. If I had a dollar for every wife who has told me in tears about a husband who either treats her in a harsh, uncaring fashion or simply operates with no real concern for his family, I'd be a rich man today! And if I had another dollar for every wife who doesn't say anything but I can see it happening on my own, I could retire in style. Husbands, here's what God says to us:

(1) PUT OFF harshness toward your wife. That went with the old life. And I'm not just talking about physical abuse. I'm talking about being inconsiderate, about just not being there when you're needed, about the way you talk to her, about anything that stings and hurts her! And instead, God says:

(2) PUT ON love And do note that the Greek word does not mean romance. It is agape, that sacrificial, self-sacrificing, putting the needs of the other first, kind of love Jesus displayed in going to the cross for us! Eph. 5:25, Husbands, love your wives, just as Christ loved the church and gave himself up for her. That's what God wants to produce in you, dying to self for the good of your wife. That's what characterizes a Christian husband, not how many meetings he attends nor the office he holds in the church nor how much Christian activity he is involved in, but the love he displays at home to his wife! Ann Landers says that based on the mail she receives, 70 percent of the women who work outside the home still do 90 percent of the work around the house. They handle most of the shopping and almost all of the care of the children. Some men even refuse to pick up their own clothes. Others go so far as to insist that their wives change the oil in the car and fix a tire when it goes flat.

Ephesians ... makes Christ's love for us the pattern of our love for our wives. Let's be sure we do not expect them to slave at tasks that we should share. Our role as leaders is to serve, not to be served.

2. parent - child relationships (20-21) and he starts with:

a. children (20) Kids, you can wake up now! The key area of problems you face in your family probably have to do with the struggle between doing what you want to do and doing what your parents want you to do, don't they? Well, God knows that; He knows you struggle with that. The word obey means "to hear under", to listen to what the person who is over you says and to do it. That's hard, isn't it? Particularly when you don't feel like doing it. But God is wise and He put your parents in charge of you and He says that as children you have to:

(1) PUT OFF rebellion If you have Christ, rebelling against your parents doesn't go with your new life. Being disobedient to parents doesn't fit with having Jesus in your heart. God says you must take that off and:

(2) PUT ON obedience, not just because you have to, but because you really want to. I'm sure we've all heard the story about the little boy who was standing up at a time that was inappropriate and his parents told him to sit down. But he didn't want to and they told him again more sternly to sit down. Finally, he said, "All right, I'm sitting down, but I'm standing up on the inside!" That's not what God wants! He wants hearts in us that are willing to lovingly listen to our parents, even when we don't feel like it, because we know God has given them and their wisdom to guide us. But now let's turn to:

b. parents (21) Of course, I'm sure this would apply to mothers as well, but, again, God knows us, doesn't HE? If there is a problem in the home between parent and child, it is usually with the father and it is the father who is most prone to do what this verse talks about. Fathers, we need to:

(1) PUT OFF provocation and discouragement How many fathers think discipline means being demanding, setting up high standards of expectations that a kid can't achieve and always being critical, pointing out flaws, never giving out praise. These things do a great deal of damage in the hearts of our children. And in fact, the flesh in all of us fathers is prone to be that way. I know I'm like that! I want my kids to be like little adults and to always remember everything an adult would and think like an adult would. And sometimes it's just not fair and it makes them frustrated and angry with me and if I keep it up it will discourage them. It will make them give up and quit in life and take a "who cares" attitude. If I do it strongly enough it will drive them away or drive them to utter rebellion. No, this kind of thing has to go from my life. It belongs to the old life, not the one I have now. Instead, I must:

(2) PUT ON child-training Eph. 6:4 is the parallel to this verse and it adds that I am to raise my children in the nurture and admonition that comes from the Lord. There are God-given principles of both correction and instruction that I must follow and apply. I can't just react to my children; I have to raise them the way God is raising me! That's what God wants to produce in me, a loving, patient, encouraging, guiding, forgiving, continual influence toward godliness!

So that's the picture. For all of us, there are key things that must go from our lives as members of a family and key things that must come to characterize us. Of course, the problem is, "How will this come about?" Let's talk about:

II. Practicing Family Relationships, and before we talk about how, let's mention why. Again, this is not just another list of rules that God has set up for us to keep, another list of do's and don'ts that I have to pay attention to if I want God to be nice to me. Notice carefully how Paul mentions:

1. the reason for these changes He says:

a. these things are fitting to our nature (18b) We are in the Lord, in Christ. These things literally "measure up to" being in Christ. It is not congruent for a wife to be in the Lord and be in rebellion against her husband. It is a contradiction for a husband to be in Christ and be harsh and un-loving to his wife. These are not just things to do. These are changes God has made deep down inside of us and they must be coming out in our lives. And further Paul says:

b. these things please our Master (20b) The only way we can be in the Lord and not have these things being produced in our lives is that we are letting the wrong master run our lives. We are letting sin, which dwells in us, be our master; we are choosing to let it use and run us, to live in the flesh, instead of letting Christ be our Master and yielding ourselves to Him. You see, the putting on of these positive qualities is well-pleasing and acceptable to Christ. You can't be a disobedient child and be living under the Lordship of Christ. You can't be a provoking, discouraging parent and be living under His Lordship. If we are in Christ and have Him as our master, these things are not options. They MUST BE in our lives. But how? Well, simply mentally erase the break in your Bible between verses 17 and 18 and you'll see:

2. the method of making these changes (17) How do you stop being the wife or husband or child or father you used to be and become the one you are in Christ? We already know the answer. We saw two weeks ago that putting off things can only be done one way. I must:

a. yield to and depend on the power of Christ I can't just decide I've got to go out and be a better husband; I don't have the power. I have the desire and the nature but the power has to come from the Holy Spirit living inside of me. It has to be done by yielding myself to Christ my New Master and asking Him to put off these old behaviors from my life. Neither can I go out of here and say "I'm going to be more obedient or more loving." It's not in me to put ON any more than to put OFF. I must do it in the Name of Christ, depending on His power, calling upon Him and saying, "Lord, live out your life through me; be through me the father you want me to be or the wife you want me to be." I call out to Him every day and in every situation by His power to make me what I already am in Him. And then I must:

b. offer up all the praise to Christ Praise and thank Him. Give Him all the credit and the glory for the changes that come in my life.

In my opinion there has never been an hour in American history when the family has been in more danger than it is now. And I don't just mean out there somewhere. Christian families are in trouble. They are being shipwrecked by the multitudes and the children are paying the price. There is only one remedy for it. Family members, husbands, wives, children, parents need to do two things: 1) to place themselves under the absolute unconditional Lordship of Christ and 2) to learn the secret of not trying to live in their own strength but appropriating His, letting Him be their very life. Dr. F. E. Marsh tells the story of a Christian lady who confessed to him that she found it impossible to show affection toward her daughter-in-law. "I've tried again and again to be different, but still my heart is cold," she wept. "You can't hope to succeed, so just give up," said Marsh, hoping to shock and test her. She cried, "But doesn't God expect me to love her?" "Yes, but you can't do it by yourself. You have tried in your own strength and have failed. The only thing you can do now is to surrender yourself to God and let Him fill your heart so completely that He will love your son's wife through you!" She yielded herself fully to the Holy Spirit and the daughter-in-law soon noticed a great change. The mother's sharp tongue was quieted, and she was full of courtesy and consideration. The girl was attracted by this new and appealing attitude, and soon the two were knit in the bonds of love. Says Dr. Marsh, "This principle always works, for when the Spirit dominates, He never divides but always brings about holy unity." That's the message of Colossians for any family relationship, for husbands and wives, for mothers and fathers and children. You can't do it in yourself! But when you yield to Jesus and cry out for the power of His Spirit, He will make you that husband, that wife, that mother or father or son or daughter He has called you to be! You've heard of the rule when you're on fire, "Stop, drop and roll!" The rule for God's children in every situation is, "Stop! Refuse! and Yield!" Stop before you react, refuse to let sin control you and yield to Jesus in prayer. He will take over and make you what you could never be on your own!

Colossians: Christ Who Is Our Life

The Christian Life: Authority Relationships - 3:22-4:1

In this section of his letter Paul is giving practical guidelines for how we must live as believers in our day to day relationships. The first obvious area of concern was FAMILY relationships, which we talked about last week in verses 18-21. Husbands and wives, parents and children have things that by God's power they must put off and things they must put on. But the very first word in verse 22 brings us to another kind of relationship: SLAVES.... Yes, the institution of slavery was alive and well in Paul's day. In fact, many of the early believers were slaves and a not a few were slave owners. It was the situation they found themselves in in life. It seems strange to us, but Paul never attacked the institution of slavery itself. Instead, he just brought slaves and masters to Christ and a marvelous thing happened according to verse 11. In Christ slave and master became one; they were equal; they were changed in their relationship to each other. Paul wrote to Philemon that his returning slave Onesimus was now a brother in the Lord. Philemon was to treat him as a brother and he would serve Philemon as a brother. You can see how that would just about dissolve the institution of slavery altogether. At any rate, Paul was writing to these folks about a relationship which to them was a daily thing. We would probably consider this text irrelevant to us if we'd choose to concentrate on slavery itself. However, almost every one of us faces life every day in a similar relationship of some kind, in what I would call an AUTHORITY relationship. We may be in a situation where we are UNDER authority, for example, as a student under the authority of the teachers, an employee under the authority of various bosses, a soldier under authority of superiors, or something similar. Or we may be in a situation where we have authority OVER others, for example, where we are the teacher, the employer or boss or foreman, the officer. So, although it may not be as absolute in degree as slavery was, almost every one of us exists in some form of authority relationship day after day. So, I'm a Christian. How do I live as a student, as a teacher, an employee, a boss? Well, in our text Paul gives us:

I. The Picture Of Authority Relationships First let's talk about:

1. the person UNDER authority (3:22-24) The key thing to characterize a person under authority, whether they are a slave or a student or an employee is OBEDIENCE. So, any Christian who lives under authority has some:

a. things that must be PUT OFF There are things which are not congruent with his new life in Christ. They just do not fit and have to be put away for good. I see three of them here. First:

(1) disobedience: refusing to obey There is nothing more out of place than a student who refuses to do his assignment or an employee who refuses to do the work he's been given. Of course, to refuse is natural. The flesh in us doesn't like to submit to anything or anyone. It will oppose all authority, including God, just for the principle of it. But it is no longer natural for a believer. A believer does not rebel, whether it is against the teacher or the government. But sometimes disobedience takes subtler forms like:

(2) deception: pretending to obey Some people under authority obey only when their eye is on you, only when the police car is visible, only when the boss is watching, only when the teacher is looking. But just let that authority figure walk out of the room and its siesta time or party time! However, when the footsteps are heard, there's instant busyness. Know what I'm talking about? That's hypocrisy; that's deception; that's pretended obedience and it has no place in a Christian. It has to be put off. So does a third thing:

(3) selfishness: obeying only for reward It is obeying only to win their favor. There are those who do what they're told purely out of a selfish motive, purely to impress the teacher or the boss. They only do it to get ahead, to get a good grade or a promotion, while the whole time they despise it in their hearts. A Christian under authority must put off selfishness. Instead, Paul tells us there are some definite:

b. things that must be PUT ON, such as:

(1) obedience: obeying in everything Everything? No exceptions? Well, of course there are exceptions. If the boss orders you to steal or do something illegal, you certainly should disobey. But as I mentioned before, exceptions are just that, exceptional. Except for those rare instances, those under authority are to obey. Their only other option is to get out of the relationship. Quit the job. Change schools. Move to another country if you don't want to pay taxes! But as long as we're under someone's authority, a Christian must put on obedience in everything, and that with:

(2) sincerity: obeying trustworthily The obedience must not be feigned or pretended. It must be real. The teacher or the boss or whoever must be able to count on you. They must know that your bottom line is not to see what you can get away with, but rather to do what you're supposed to. That makes you trustworthy! But even that is not enough. The bottom line in obeying is:

(3) reverence: obeying spiritually Paul says literally, fearing God. That doesn't mean obeying because you're afraid God will zap you, but obeying out of a reverential motive of respect for and acknowledgement of the authority of God in your life. Put simply, you obey because that's what a person who has Christ does. And true obedience is characterized by:

(4) thoroughness: obeying well You know how you can be told to wash the dishes and just hit each one a lick? Or told to do a paper and write three sentences but make the type size really big? No, a Christian does what he does with all his heart. He does a good job, the kind of a job that Jesus would do, whether it's designing a building or sweeping a floor! So, when you function as a person under some kind of authority, that's what God wants to produce in your life. Now let's look at the other side of the relationship; how about:

2. the person WITH authority (4:1) The chief thing to characterize a person in authority is LOVE, whether it's the husband or the leader, the teacher, the boss, or the foreman. As a Christian, the person in authority also has some:

a. things that must be PUT OFF The primary problem of any person in authority is the fleshly tendency to abuse that authority. We've all seen videos of police beating a man on the news at one time or another. When we see it, we're horrified, but that tendency to abuse power is in our flesh and all it takes is the security of a little bit of authority to let it out. There are all sorts of ways to abuse authority but here are two that must be put away from us if we are Christians in authority over others. The first is:

(1) injustice: wrong treatment Sometimes a boss will use his employees; he'll demand of them to produce what they cannot produce or to do what they cannot do, for his own benefit. Sometimes a teacher will treat his students wrongly and demand work they cannot possibly complete. Or the teacher will be prejudiced in giving grades or form opinions about students that aren't fair and that they can't change. Sometimes a pastor will use his people to get rich! There's no room for an unfair grade because I don't like someone or the holding back of a bonus that was deserved. Injustice must go from my life and so must:

(2) unfairness: partiality in treatment, treating one person under my authority well and another poorly. Favoring one student over another or promoting one employee ahead of another, in spite of the facts of who deserves it is partiality. I'm a Christian. These things must go; they must be put off and here are the:

b. things that must be PUT ON if I'm in authority. The first thing is:

(1) love: concern to meet their needs The word here is provide for those under you. What does that mean? It means knowing what their needs are. It means being concerned for what their needs are, not just your own. Larry Burkett tells the story of a girl named Sherri: "Sherri's father was a successful businessman and a Christian, but he had always used his position to rule rather than lead people. His attitude was bad enough, but one day he made a decision so unfair that it would have a lasting impact on Sherri. After returning home from work, he announced, 'I fired the whole office today. We had someone stealing,' he explained, 'and I offered them a chance to confess or it would cost everybody their jobs. No one confessed, so I fired them all!'" From that point on, Sherri secretly harbored a fear that maybe God was like that too. She had decided that when she was on her own, she would stop going to church, and she did. But then she was hired by a Christian employer, a Mr. Rhone, who lived up to his claims. During the next three years, he had to correct her work often. The first few times she went home crying and worried about her job, but over the years Mr. Rhone proved his concern for her as a person. He corrected her, but he never humiliated or demeaned her. As a result, she eventually developed into a highly efficient, very confident secretary." [Money Matters, Sep 15, 1993. Page 6.] In short, providing for those under you means love for those under your authority, love for your employees, your students. It means caring whether they can live on what you pay them. It means the bottom line is not whether you get ahead, whether you get something from them, whether you make a huge profit. When you stand before God that's not what He's going to ask, is it? Jesus said the one who is first should make himself the servant of all! Try that and it'll revolutionize your business! Or your classroom! You're there for them, not for you! And the second thing that must be put on is:

(2) reverence: concern to please the Lord No matter how much authority you have, you've still got a greater Master. And He's not interested in how much money you make, in how much prowess you achieve. He's interested in such seemingly unimportant things as truth and justice and fairness and caring. So, we need to lead with a sense that we too are under authority and must exercise our own authority under His direction. Now let's sum up the key to this whole thing. Whether you are in authority or under authority, here is:

II. The Principle of Authority Relationships It is three fold. If we will just realize this and apply this, it will steer our course right. First, remember that:

1. our position is service to the Lord (23, 24b) From top to bottom it's the same. Every Christian is serving, not men but the Lord. The janitor serves God in his sweeping and the president in his far-reaching decisions. I must learn to see that I make shoes for God or I type letters for God or I run this department for God or I teach for God, even, that I do my homework for God! Several years ago, the authorities in a small village gave an elderly man a summer job of keeping the streets free of litter. A visitor, observing that he obviously enjoyed his task, complimented him. In broken English, the worker replied, "You like de work I do? I too! Me--I help God keep things beautiful." It is Christ we are serving. That will transform our daily life! Just think if He were sitting there supervising, how different would I be? Well, He is! Visible or not, we are serving Him and so:

2. our reward will be from the Lord (24a) Sometimes we think He doesn't see; we wonder whether anyone notices how we do our little part in life. But He does. He never forgets even a cup of cold water, a kind hug, a little bit of patience with someone, that extra effort beyond what was required, that time taken to do the job right. Nobody noticed but He did. It will be His "Well-done" that will delight our soul in eternity. But also remember this:

3. our discipline will be from the Lord (25) This isn't talking about losing your salvation and I don't know that it's talking about eternity particularly. The Bible says you reap what you sow. Any believer who chooses to continue to live like the kind of person he is not, will definitely find discipline. And it doesn't matter how great my position is, I'm not immune to God's chastening hand. I can't escape accountability to Him!

Well, once again we come to that tough question, "How am I going to do this? How am I going to put off these negative things and put on obedience and love?" Once again, let me go back to verse 17 and remind you of:

III. The Power for Authority Relationships (17) As I keep saying, you have no power to be the kind of servant God wants. You have no power in you to be the master God wants. Go out and try any of this on your own and you will fail miserably. Verse 17 tells us, "Do everything in the name of Christ." For wives, that means submitting, for husbands, loving, for children, obeying, for parents, training children. For those under authority it means obeying those over me with all my heart, serving them as unto the Lord, and for those in authority, it means loving those under me and caring about them as Christ would. How can I do this? I am to do this in the Name of Jesus Christ, by absolute, complete dependence on His power, by daily and moment by moment yielding my life to Christ as a vessel for His use and asking His power to flow through me, so that I serve or I lead the way He wants me to. Leonard LeSourd writes about the great baritone Roland Hayes: "Before each concert, Roland Hayes would stand quietly in front of his audience, silently praying, 'Lord, You are my strength. You are my voice. Help me get Roland Hayes out of the way so that You can sing through me, so that Your music and words and can touch the hearts of these people.' 'If I forget to say this prayer,' Mr. Hayes said, 'then I tend to think of myself and how I'm doing. As a result, the concerts just don't seem to have the same power and impact. What God does through me is so much greater than what I can do on my own.' He told the story of the toughest audience he ever faced. It was in Germany before World War II at a time when racial hostility was rampant there. When he appeared on the stage, some of the people started to boo and hiss because he was black. Roland Hayes never faltered. He closed his eyes, folded his hands, and silently prayed: 'Lord, You sing through me and melt this hatred.' Minutes went by while the hissing continued. The quiet figure on the stage never moved. Finally, the huge hall was quiet. Then he began to sing very softly. For an hour and a half he sang, while the spectators sat there as if transfixed. At the end the audience rose as a body and gave him a tremendous ovation. 'The glory goes to God,' Mr. Hayes said. 'There's nothing He can't do through us if we would only get ourselves out of the way.'" [Strong Men Weak Men by Leonard LeSourd. Chosen Books, 1990. Pages 160-161.]

How can you serve or lead like Christ did? How can you obey with a willing heart when your boss is unreasonable or doesn't seem to care about you? How can you do the kind of job Jesus would be proud of when the conditions you work under discourage you all the time? How can you care about the students you teach when they have such a terrible, unmotivated attitude and they need disciplined constantly? The answer is, go out on that stage, school or work or wherever it is, and every time you arrive, stop and pray, "Lord, You are my Strength. Serve through me, learn through me, lead through me, react through me! Put off those things that need to go; put on those things I need to have. I ask for you to do it all through me today!" And then pray it again 5 minutes later when the boss snubs you and 5 minutes after that when the class is rowdy and keep on doing it all day long. And Jesus will do it through you! That's the secret of authority relationships; that's the secret of the Christian life. Practice it!

COLOSSIANS: CHRIST WHO IS OUR LIFE

The Christian Life: Prayer and Witness - 4:2-6

Before Paul closes his practical section on how to live as a Christian and then the whole letter, he pauses to give some guidelines on two areas which are CENTRAL and VITAL to the life of a Christian, prayer and witness. I say they are VITAL, because without them there is no truly Christian life. Without prayer I have no power to live from God; I am left to my own resources. Without witness I have no purpose to live, no reason to be here instead of in heaven; I'm useless. I call them CENTRAL, because they are not to be at the periphery of my life, not things that I do now and then. Rather they are to be integral parts of every day of my life, things that my life is full of, and if Christ truly is my life, then they will be. Paul begins by exhorting us about:

I. The Importance of Prayer (2-4) and the first thing he describes is:

1. the manner of prayer: I'm to be devoted (2a) Sometimes we stand in awe of the early church and what God did through them, with thousands of people converted, whole cities turned upside down for Christ. We wonder what their secret was. Well, it's not really a secret. Acts 2:42 says, They devoted themselves to prayer! In chapter 3, Peter and John were going up to the Temple at the regular time of PRAYER when they healed the lame man and a whole crowd was converted. In chapter 4 when they got arrested for it and then released, they hurried back to the brethren and they all raised their voices together in prayer! In chapter 12, Peter was arrested and sentenced to death, but the whole church was gathered together praying and an angel came to the prison, bailed him out, and he stood knocking at the door of the prayer meeting, a living answer. They devoted themselves to prayer. Prayer was their life. It was vital. It rated first place. Paul is not trying to tell me that I SHOULD pray. He's telling me that I MUST pray! It is my lifeline. It is my source of power. It is to my spiritual life what breathing is to my body. If I breathed like I pray, would I still be alive? The word devote here is a strong word in the Greek. It implies two things. First, to be devoted to prayer means:

a. praying continually God wants to build prayer into a constant and continual part of my life. He wants to make it as normal as eating and sleeping and breathing, intertwined through my days in a continuous stream of communication with Him. Sometimes having long talks in time set aside for Him, sometimes only fast chats in momentary circumstances, so that, as Paul put it in another of his letters, I pray without ceasing. That doesn't mean I do nothing but pray. It means that I pray in all I do, in private, at work, at school, when driving, when talking to someone, when tempted, when I see a need, when I have a problem, when I'm writing a letter or seeing a client. The famous Civil War General "Stonewall" Jackson apparently had learned this lesson well. The great military leader said, "I have so fixed the habit of prayer in my mind that I never raise a glass of water to my lips without asking God's blessing, never send a letter without putting a word of prayer under the seal, never take a letter from the mailbox without a brief lifting of my thoughts heavenward, never change my classes in the lecture room without a minute's petition for the cadets who go out and for those who come in." God's design is, in all things by prayer and supplication... And secondly, being devoted to prayer means:

b. praying intensely Now we're talking about the quality of our praying, not simply the quantity. There is a phrase I have heard from little on up about this subject that bothers me greatly when I hear it. It is the phrase "to say a prayer" or "say your prayers," as though prayers were things, pieces of poetry or prose to be recited to God. And that's exactly how some people conceive of prayer. Prayer is the reciting of our meal prayer or our bedtime prayer or our daily prayer list. And many people have built a habit of praying that is nothing more than repeating a set of things they think they are supposed to say to God. I did that as a child, but I also listened to a lot of grown-up adults do it in church! Thomas Brooks, said, "Cold prayers are as arrows without heads, as swords without edges, as birds without wings; they pierce not, they cut not, they fly not up to heaven. Cold prayers always freeze before they reach heaven." ... Bishop Hall said: "It is not the arithmetic of our prayers, how many they are; nor the rhetoric of our prayers, how eloquent they may be; nor the geometry of our prayers, how long they may be; nor the music of our prayers, how sweet our voice may be; nor the method of our prayers, how orderly they may be; nor even the theology of our prayers, how good the doctrine may be--which God cares for. Fervency of spirit is that which availeth much." Real prayer is talking to God from the heart! It is the communication of the soul with Almighty God. Prayer has to be sincere, genuine, intense. Now, in the rest of verse 2 we are given:

2. the parameters of prayer (2b) There are two more elements that must characterize all our praying. The first is:
a. watchfulness The root of this word means to stay awake, which for many of us is a very literal problem when we pray, isn't it? But I don't think he's talking about the physical here. He's talking about being spiritually alert. Like 1 Pet. 5:8 which says Be alert! Your enemy the devil prowls around like a roaring lion looking for someone to devour. In one dimension, prayer is worship. But in another, it is also warfare! It is a battle being waged on spiritual ground against the forces of the enemy. We must stay watchful, alert for what the enemy is trying to do in our life or the lives of others, whether we sense him trying to bring discouragement or to destroy opportunity or to deceive or whatever his tactic may be. And we must come against him with the weapon of prayer. That should be a normal part of our praying, as should:

b. thankfulness If we're praying about everything, then we pretty much have to be seeing answers almost daily, don't we? We pray for God to help us with a job interview and He does. Then we have something to be thankful for. I ask Him to give me the words for a sermon like this and He does, so I thank Him. Every day there is something new to be thankful for, in addition to all the stuff that's unchanging, like our salvation. Thankfulness should be woven through all our praying. Then Paul actually gives to the Colossians a prayer request for himself and asks them to pray together with him about it. For us this request reveals:

3. the focus of prayer: witness (3-4) Let's think a moment. Where is Paul? In jail! Verse 3 says he's in chains. He was chained at the wrist to a Roman soldier 24 hours a day. He had not yet stood trial and his life was still hanging in the balance. What would your request be? Freedom? Protection? Paul's wasn't! He prayed to be a witness where he was! Oh, that speaks volumes to me! How much of our praying is concerned only with changing our physical circumstances to meet our liking, healing our sicknesses, getting our needs met, making things better for us. And how little of our praying is concerned with what we are really here on earth for, to be a witness of Jesus Christ! That's convicting. Not that we shouldn't pray about all those other personal needs. We should. But far and away the focus of our praying should be that we would fulfill God's purpose for us in the world, that God would use us as a witness in the specific circumstance in which we are! In verse 3 Paul asked prayer for:

a. the opportunity to witness (3) Paul says, "Ask God to open a door for me, some way that I can be a witness here. God has me here for a reason but I'm not seeing much opportunity to do what I was saved for, to declare Christ. Ask God to make a way." That's one prayer God ALWAYS answers positively! Focus prayer on asking God to open doors of witness for you at work, at school, in your neighborhood, on your sports team, in your coaching. And pray also for opportunities for others, for your brothers and sisters at church in their situations, for your missionaries where they are, and so on. Then in verse 4 Paul asks prayer for:

b. the clarity of witness (4) He wanted to say the right thing. He wanted to have the Spirit's guidance and wisdom, so that when the door opened, he could communicate Christ in an understandable and clear fashion whether it was to a Jew or a Roman, to an educated person or a fellow prisoner in chains. And we need to pray for the same thing as we'll see in the verses to come. But before we move to them, let's take a moment to look at:

4. the answer to Paul's prayer - Phil. 1:12-14, 4:22 Philippians was also written from that Roman imprisonment, but slightly later than Colossians. And look at the door of opportunity God opened! They prayed and God began to use Paul right where he was, to be a witness to the very soldiers of the palace guard which guarded him. Some came to Christ. It even spread into those who served as part of Caesar's own household! What a wonderful God we have! Just focus your prayer on witness and see what He will do! And while Paul is asking prayer for his witness, he gives some guidance to the Colossians about their own. So, after the importance of prayer we have:

II. The Imperative Of Witness (5-6) Now please note that I've chosen the word WITNESS, not EVANGELISM. That's because I don't want you to think of something you go out and do like passing out tracts or visiting door-to-door or teaching a Good News Club for kids. Those things are great, but not everyone is gifted or led into them. Yet every believer is a witness for Jesus Christ (either good or bad) by what he does and says. We communicate Christ to others; it is the very function and purpose of our life! It is imperative! First Paul mentions our:

1. witness in actions (5) Actions speak very loudly, often much louder than our words. Ten thousand good words may never correct the impression left by one wrong action, either toward someone or seen by someone who is not a believer. So, I need wisdom to know how to act and that is:

a. God's part: to give me wisdom which is knowing the right thing to do. It is not in me to be able to act right or even to always know the right thing to do. That has to come from God. How do I get it? James wrote, If anyone lacks wisdom, let him ASK of God. Prayer! That's why Paul asked the Thessalonians to pray for his witness! Unless we are walking in a life saturated with prayer, focusing on our witness, we are not going to know what is right in God's eyes. So, I must depend completely on God for wisdom and yet I must do:

b. my part: which is to be in readiness to use every opportunity When God opens that door to act, to help, to give, to share, to talk, whatever it may be, I have to be willing to go through it. I have to make the most of that opportunity. I have to literally "buy up" that moment, redeem it and use it before it passes and is gone. William F. Taylor writes, "We travel through this world only once; so let us live to some purpose. The day that dawned this morning will never come again. The opportunities it brought will never return. If we fail to fill our measure of time with the service it requires of us, there will be no possibility of returning to this day to repair the mischief. The wheels of time's chariot have ratchets on them--they move only forward!" So, when that moment of action comes, I must be ready to seize it. And then Paul has something specific to say about our:

2. witness in words (6) The way we talk to unbelievers is important. Our conversation either wins them or drives them away and that's why we need:

a. God's part: grace seasoned with salt, that is, the right thing to say. Our speech has to be gracious and pleasing but it has to have the salt of actual witness in it. It cannot be harsh or cutting or demeaning; we can't "beat 'em over the head with the Gospel". But neither can it simply be nice pleasant conversation. Our conversation has to be gracious and yet mention the Lord in just the right way. And there's no memorizable plan for that. Rather, it means depending upon the Holy Spirit to speak through you and to give you the right thing to say in the very moment you need it. It means breathing a silent prayer, "Lord, guide my words" as you go to talk. And God will do just that. But again, here is:

b. my part: I must be in readiness to answer everyone. Just as I have to be willing to act, I also have to be willing to speak, ready to share as God opens opportunities. Robert Morgan was on vacation in a quiet resort town when he found the window of his van smashed by an unknown vandal for no good reason. He writes: "I reluctantly called a glass company, and soon a young man arrived. I watched with admiration as Jim systematically disassembled the van door, removed the splinters, and slipped a new window into place. His young assistant resembled him, and I asked if they were related. 'He's my little brother,' Jim said. 'He's filling in till I can find someone to replace my co-worker who died last week.' 'Died?' 'Yeah,' said Jim, growing quiet. 'He had a wife and two kids. Just 42.' 'How'd he die?' 'Heart attack,' Jim said softly. Nothing more was said for a moment, then I replied, 'We never know if we'll be here tomorrow, do we?' 'No. Sure don't.' 'That's why we always need to be ready to meet the Lord...' I said, taking a deep breath. 'Life's too uncertain without Christ.' He nodded, continuing his work and listening quietly as I sought to share with him a simple witness of the gospel, the hope of a Savior who had died to free us from death. Then I knew why the Lord had allowed an unknown hoodlum to shatter a tiny piece of our world." [Moody, Jul/Aug 1995. Page 44.] Robert was ready. He breathed a quiet prayer and seized the obvious opportunity and began to talk. His speech was gracious, but seasoned with the truth. Opportunities like his abound if we'll stand in readiness to take advantage of them. But how can we do that? How can we be a genuine witness to our faith in Jesus?

Well, at the bottom line, it's back to verse 17. Do everything and say everything in the name of Jesus Christ in absolute dependence on Him and His power. Fill your life with prayer and focus it on witness and let Him be your life. That's the normal Christian life!

Conclusion: Complete In Christ 4:7-18

This morning we come at last to the end of Paul's letter to the Colossian Church. And like any letter that you or I would write, it contains a list of greetings and salutations to different folks who are at Colossae and from different folks who are with Paul in Rome. We might write, "Say hi to Sue and the kids and her sister...Joe and Jane told me to say hi for them too." We do that all the time. The difference is that Paul took his letter writing more seriously than we usually do and so, instead of the light kind of "Hi, how are you, what's happening" kinds of things we might write, he actually teaches in his greetings and salutations! Now, if you're like me, I bet you find it very tempting to read over the endings of New Testament epistles like this very quickly and forget them. A bunch of names...so what! DON'T EVER DO THAT! If you stop for a minute and think about some of these people and look closely at what Paul says and look up some of the cross references, you'll be amazed at the golden truths you can mine out of what looks like a useless pile of rocks. So let's do it together, shall we? We begin by looking at:

I. Paul's Personal Companions (7-17) In this closing Paul names 10 people individually, 10 persons that were companions of his either currently or previously. All of them are believers, mature believers, people who were either co-workers with Paul at some point or were involved in their own ministry. And about each one or to each one of them he has something different to say. Each one, except one, has an outstanding characteristic that God has produced in their lives. And when you take them all together you have a pretty complete picture of the kind of maturity that God wants to produce in us as we live according to the principles of the last section in chapter 3, putting off the old things in our lives and putting on the new things, all by absolute dependence on His power. Here's what God produces in us as He brings us along to maturity. First:

1. God makes us dependable: Tychicus (7-8) Tychicus was the person who was going to carry this letter from Rome to Colossae in Asia Minor along with the letters to Ephesus and Philemon. Tychicus was from Asia Minor and joined Paul at Ephesus on his third missionary journey. He accompanied Paul all the way back to Jerusalem and saw his arrest and imprisonment there. Now he has come to Paul at Rome and Paul counts him "a faithful servant", someone he can really depend on. In Timothy and Titus, we read of Paul sending Tychicus twice more on later occasions. The flavor of what Paul says about him here is, "He will tell you the real scoop of what's going on; trust him; he's dependable." Wouldn't you love to have people say that about you? To have the Lord say that about you?! When we live and walk in the power of Christ, God makes us dependable. The up-and-down-ness, the inconsistency, goes from our life. We are no longer unstable and blown about by the winds of what somebody says or the waves of our circumstances. God makes us to be like Him, dependable, faithful, the same yesterday, today, and in the future. Now, the second person in Paul's list shows us that:

2. God transforms our lives: Onesimus (9) It may not seem so at first glance, but this is really remarkable. Onesimus was a runaway slave. He belonged to a friend of Paul's who lived at Colossae whose name was Philemon. And somehow Onesimus came to Paul at Rome and in the process, he met Jesus Christ. So now Paul is sending him back with Tychicus as a different man, a transformed man. Look with me at Philemon 10-11, 15-16. Paul sends this letter along with Onesimus to clear him with his owner and to testify of the transformation in him, that the old has passed away. Verse 18 implies that Onesimus did wrong to his owner and stole from him. He was a useless and rebellious servant. But now he is a brand-new person, one who will serve and be useful, a "faithful and dear brother". That's what God does in you and I through the power of His Spirit. He doesn't just want to give us fire insurance by accepting Jesus and let us go on being the same old person we were. He has made us brand new on the inside and by exercising the putting off and putting on principles he wrote about, He wants to totally transform our lives into something new, changed, different, to make them in the image of Jesus. Then:

3. God uses us as fellows: Aristarchus (10a) Aristarchus was from Thessalonica and evidently had joined Paul on his second missionary journey. He was with him on the third journey and even on the voyage to Rome. He rode with Paul on the ship with the load of prisoners being taken to Rome and endured the shipwreck on Malta with him. And now Paul calls him a fellow-prisoner. Somehow, he seems to be sharing the Apostle's imprisonment even as he had been sharing his life for several years earlier. You know, it's hard to endure any difficulty alone whether it's going to a strange place on the mission field or suffering in a jail. Aristarchus was Paul's "fellow", his companion in the same situation, who was there and who was feeling and experiencing everything he was. One whom he could talk to freely and expect understanding, one whom he could pray with and share the same intensity. That's what God wants to do with us. He wants to make us fellows to somebody, companions to those who are going through the experiences of life with us and sharing them. He wants to build, not the surface relationships of immaturity, but the deep support of "fellowship" where our hearts become united as one and we rejoice with those who rejoice and weep with those who weep. Some years ago I got a prayer letter from a lady who was a missionary physician in Kyrgyzstan for 8 years. Her husband decided that he wanted out of the marriage, so she was now back in England with her two teenage boys, devastated and trying to figure out how to adjust to this life change. She planned to go back to Kyrgyzstan for two weeks to pack up the family home, sell off or ship her possessions and say goodbyes. She wrote this: It has been recommended to me to try to find someone outside of the situation to come with me. A woman with two small children who had to return to Kyrgyzstan to pack up after her husband had died of cancer said that bringing someone with her was the best thing she did. Here's what she wrote: 'She was there to talk to at night after the crowds left. I'm so happy she came with me. If you can get such a friend, bring them.' At first, I didn't think this was possible and when a Canadian friend from my course in Wales (who is now living in Sweden) spontaneously said on the phone that she had such an urge to come with me to Kyrgyzstan, I didn't think further about it. But now I am thinking that this would be a good idea. This past week we discussed it and since then I have received the following from her: 'I am completely in awe of how God has sorted some major things out over the last 48 hours to make this possible.' She needed a "fellow", a companion, someone to share the agony of the path she had to walk and thank God for this female Aristarchus who rose to the occasion. God wants to do that with me, with you, to put us into someone's life to be their "fellow-whatever". Then here's a fourth lesson:

4. God uses us after failure: Mark (10b) Mark is there in Rome. You remember him, don't you? Mark deserted Paul on his first missionary journey. He caked out and went home instead of continuing on in the work. And you remember how Barnabas and Paul argued over taking him along on the second journey and they even parted company over it. In Paul's eyes, Mark was a failure, a deserter, one who could not be trusted for the long haul, but look, here he is restored. In fact, in 2 Tim. 4:11 Paul later writes during the second time he is in prison, "Bring Mark, he is helpful in the ministry!" Oh, there is great hope in this character, isn't there? We don't have to be perfect; in fact, none of us are perfect. We fail God; we fail each other; we fail to put off what we ought to put off and we fail to put on what we ought to put on, but God wants to use us after failure. If you're discouraged today, know this: no matter how we've failed, how we've fallen, God is not done with us. He's not through. He wants to use us again. He wants to produce usefulness and service in our lives even after we fall. Now here's a fifth thing:

5. God comforts through us: Jesus (Justus) (11) You understand, of course, that the name Jesus was not given only to our Savior. Many others also had it, including this man who is unknown apart from this verse. All we know is that he was a Christian from Jewish background like Paul, that he was serving in ministry with Paul and this one key thing, that he, along with Aristarchus and Mark, was a comfort to Paul. The Greek word is paregoria which is a medical term from which we get our medicinal word "paregoric" which means "that which soothes irritation and brings relief." And the source of this comfort seems tied to the fact of his Jewishness. Paul was a Hebrew of the Hebrews; his life had been consumed with Jewish culture and religion for many years. Culture shock is not something that was invented in our day; for years Paul had found himself living in a Gentile world among people who did not and could not think like he did, people who came from a life of empty idolatry, had Roman and Greek customs, were used to Roman and Greek justice. Remember when Paul was at Athens how he was so greatly distressed to see the whole city so full of idols? To an Athenian believer that might have been par for the course, something he was used to and could live in the midst of. But among Paul's fellows there were Jesus and his two friends who were Jews. They understood; they were what Paul was; they felt what Paul felt. And when Paul became vexed and irritated and the circumstances of life around him got him down and he longed for home, Jesus the Just was a soothing relief to Paul. God used him to bring great comfort to Paul and that's what God will do with us too. He will comfort and relieve others through us. As we learn to yield to Him and let His life flow through us, we will become a soothing relief to those who are hurting or suffering. Number six:

6. God makes us people of prayer: Epaphras (12-13) According to 1:7-8 Epaphras was the one who had brought the Gospel to Colossae and started the church during the time Paul was at Ephesus for three years. Now Epaphras had come to Rome and told Paul about how the church was doing. Philemon 23 says he is Paul's fellow-prisoner. Somehow, he too seems to have gotten jailed with Paul. But he remembered all the false teachers and the problems back in Colossae. And God made him a real man of prayer. Paul says he agonized, he wrestled with God in prayer for them. He worked hard for them in prayer, along with other neighboring churches. He prayed they would stand firm in Christ and be mature and not be swayed by the Gnostics and the Judaizers, the false teachers who were trying to lead them astray. He realized he could not assure that but God could and so he prayed. He became what verse 2 says, devoted to prayer. I never knew a really mature Christian yet who wasn't. That's what God wants to build into our lives. If you will walk with Him and draw on His life, He will make you a man or woman of prayer. You will learn to wrestle and agonize and work hard in praying. Here's a seventh thing:

7. God produces loyalty in us: Luke (14a) Luke traveled with Paul on his second journey and rejoined him later on his third and on his voyage to Rome. He was a doctor and possibly tended to Paul's infirmities, but most importantly Paul calls him a "dear friend". In fact, in 2 Tim. 4:10 In his final imprisonment when he is at the end, facing death, Paul writes, Only Luke is with me... Luke was loyal to the end. Everybody else was gone but not him. He was the friend that stuck closer than a brother. That's the kind of loyalty God will build into our relationships as we mature. They will not be come and go, on and off friendships. He will build deep unconditional loyalty and friendship where we will never desert or forsake the ones we love, even if it means endangering our own life in the process. But in contrast to this, through Demas:

8. God warns us that we can fall: Demas (14b) About Demas Paul says at this writing nothing, other than he is obviously with Paul in Rome. Philemon 24 mentions him as a fellow-worker like the others. But the real lesson from his life is this, compare 2 Tim. 4:10. In Paul's last imprisonment Demas is in contrast to Luke. Luke stayed even when his life was in danger. Demas fled, because he loved this world; he wanted to stay alive physically in this world, rather than go on to glory with Paul. He would not risk laying down his own life for his friend like Luke would. He did not love that much. In Demas there is a warning. No matter who I am, I can still fall. I am not beyond it. No matter how mature I may think I am and how much ministry I have been involved in, if I do not lean on God and His life and power in me, then I, like Demas or like bold Peter in the garden, can also fall. The warning of Scripture is, Let him that thinks he stands take heed lest he fall! Let that thought drive you to the Savior and His keeping power. The ninth lesson is:

9. God involves us in a body: Nympha "et al" (15-16) Here Paul mentions three local church bodies, one at nearby Laodicea, one meeting in the home of a person named Nympha and, of course, the one he is writing to at Colossae (you). But do you see the point? God involved Nympha in a local body. He involved the Laodicean believers in a body; the Colossians were a body, a whole, not a bunch of pieces. That's what God does with mature believers. He involves them deeply in the life of a body, a local assembly, a church. That is God's normal plan for all believers; God knows that we need the functions of a whole body, a whole group to mature and grow us and, if we walk close to Him, that's where we'll end up. How involved are you in the life of this body? Does it matter to you whether you're here or not? Is it vital in your life or just something you go to when it's convenient? Finally:

10. God makes us persevere: Archippus (17) Archippus lived in Colossae. Compare Philemon 1-2. From this personal letter it sounds like Philemon was the father, Apphia, the mother, and Archippus the son in the same home. Since Philemon was an old friend saved under Paul's ministry, he may have known Archippus as a young boy or youth and now he was grown up and serving side-by-side with his father in ministry. To him Paul says, "You have received your ministry not by your own doing. You received it in the Lord. It is His. Watch carefully so that you may fulfill or complete it." In his book The Best Is Yet to Be, Henry Durbanville issues this pointed warning: "With the mind at rest regarding the past, and the heart reveling in the consciousness of being at peace with God, you may have entertained the thought that all dangers are over, and that you will have no more problems as you journey to the Better Land. But that is not so.... Noah, after long years of faithful walking with God, failed ignominiously. Moses, near close of his career, lost his temper. Samuel, the man of prayer and the prophet of God, put family interests before loyalty to God and His people. Solomon began magnificently, but ended disastrously. Uzziah, after a glorious reign, deliberately transgressed the ordinance of God, finishing his days as a leper. The records of all these good men, temporarily drawn aside from the path of fellowship with God, point to the fact that youth, adulthood, and old age--each period of life--has its own temptations and hazards." We need to finish well and when we walk with Him, God makes us to persevere, to complete the work He has given us to do, to be the faithful servant to whom He can say, "Well done!"

The point is this, friends: everything we need is in Jesus Christ and we have Him, so we have it. If we will only learn to draw on what we already have, God will make us into a complete, well-rounded, mature servant of His, one who is gloriously changed, dependable, comforting, loving, loyal, persevering to the end, and all the rest. In short, He will make us everything that He is. And finally, at the very end of the letter we come to:

II. Paul's Personal Closing (18) Here we have:

1. his closing assurance: his own hand Paul dictated this letter as he did all his others. But he signed it with his own signature for the same reason that we do. That personal signature is our assurance, our guarantee that the document really came from the author's hand. Paul's signature on Colossians is our guarantee that this letter is from God. It is not some cunningly devised fable or falsehood. These truths we've studied come to us from the hand of God through the pen of his apostle, Paul. We must listen! Then we have:

2. his closing request: remembrance Remember my chains. Why? So I have your sympathy? So you'll send a gift? So you'll pray me out of this? No, look at verse 3. Paul says, "Pray God will give me a ministry here in these chains" and as he closes, he's saying, "Don't forget to pray that request for me". So many times we hear the request of a brother and don't pray. Paul begs us to remember! And finally, we have:

3. his closing wish: grace Grace be with you. Not "good luck" or "I hope you stay well and healthy" or "I hope something good will happen to you real soon". That's not what people need. They need grace, the grace of God, the undeserved, unmerited power of God to flow into and through their lives.

And as we leave the book of Colossians, that is my wish for you, that God's grace will fill each of you and flow through you. That's the real need in your life, whether you know it or not.

This One Thing: The Keys To Relationship Col. 3:18-4:1 Wives: The Key Of Submission

Every time I buy a new electronic or computer gadget of some sort, it almost always comes with two things anymore. The first is some sort of instruction manual that may be 20 pages or a hundred pages. It tells the user in detail how to go about using that piece of equipment, how to set it up and adjust it and troubleshoot if there are problems with it. But if you're anything like me, you're pretty much 100% likely to turn the thing on without ever reading the manual. Am I right? So that's why manufacturers have gotten smart and they have started including something else, a Quick Start card, a one-page set of 5 or 6 simple key instructions, many times drawn out in picture form, that will tell you the absolute most important facts you have to know to turn the thing on and use it, because they know that's what you're going to do anyway! And they figure you'll read a one pager, even if you don't touch the manual! Well, the core of our lives revolves, not around gadgets, but around relationships, around marriage relationships, parent-child relationships and even work relationships and it is extremely important that we know as believers how to make those relationships work, isn't it? And, of course, the Bible is our instruction manual for living. It has an awful lot to teach us about parenting, for instance. There is story after story showing examples of parenting, both good and bad. There is lots of good advice through Moses in the law and from Solomon in Proverbs. There is New Testament teaching in several books, but to form a complete picture you have to seek out all of these passages and put them together and because God knows that not all of us are going to take the time to read the index and search out all of the information, He has given us our own sort of "Quick Start Card" in Colossians 3:18-4:1. Nine short verses that, in my opinion, give us what I'm going to call in this series:

I. The Keys To Relationship Just read 3:18-21 with me for a moment. Do you see what I mean? It's just like a "Quick Start Card". Wives, do this! Husbands, do this! Children, do this! Parents, do this! Simple, straight forward, one step instructions. Now, what's the point of Paul doing that? You can't possibly tell wives what they need to know about being a wife in one phrase! You can't even tell them half or a fourth or a tenth of what they need to know! But you can tell them, one thing, can't you? You see:

1. this passage is a focused summary It is an intentionally incomplete picture. It is not meant to tell everything there is to be said in one place. It is intended to do exactly the opposite, of all the things that could be said, to boil them down to the one most important thing that could be said and say that. I love the story of Sir Winston Churchill who, near the end of his life, was invited back to his prep school alma mater to address the students. The headmaster announced his coming by saying, "In a few days our Prime Minister will be here. He's one of the greatest orators of all times, so listen carefully and take plenty of notes!" The morning came, and the 5-foot 5-inch, 230- pound leader was enthusiastically presented. Sir Winston graciously acknowledged his introduction and then said, "Young gentlemen, never give up! Never give up! NEVER GIVE UP! Never! Never! Never! NEVER!" And with that, he sat down. That one point comprised the sum total of his speech, but none of the students ever forgot the point he made that day. That's what God is doing in our text. Of all the things He could tell wives, He's boiling them all down to this one thing. Of all the things He could tell husbands, He's boiling them all down to this one thing. And what that means is that:

2. for each relationship role, ONE THING is key I am a husband and I know I have many roles. I am to be a provider. I am to be a protector. I am to be a leader. I am to be an example, and so on. There are a dozen things I'm supposed to be doing in my role, but when you boil them all down, if I do THIS ONE THING, if I love my wife, all the rest will fall into place. You see:

a. that key point is our most important responsibility There are plenty of husbands who are great providers but they're really self-centered and when the relationship gets rocky and the wife expresses her needs and what's lacking, they justify themselves by saying, "Look how I provide for you!" My point is that when we stand before Jesus what's going to matter in that day is now how well I provided but whether I loved my wife. It's my chief assignment; it's the one thing above all that He wants me to do. But the bad news is that:

b. that key point is often our most intense struggle What do men struggle with most? Loving their wives like Christ loved the church and sacrificing their own self-interest for them! What do children struggle with the most? Obeying their parents! This ONE THING is also likely where your greatest struggle is in your relationships.

So over the next 6 weeks we're going to take Paul's set of mini-instructions here in Colossians 3 apart and look at the six keys that he has given us to the various relationships we have in life. And we start today in verse 18 where Paul starts with this:

II. The Key Thing Commanded For Wives Is Submission (3:18a) Now that's not a very popular message today; you don't hear anyone dare to speak that out loud much anymore! In our society's quest to correct the horrible injustices that have been perpetrated upon women throughout the centuries, we have nearly thrown out the baby with the bathwater. But no matter how you twist it, you can't get around the fact that the Bible teaches clearly that God commands wives to submit to their husbands. However, when I say that, we need be certain we're all on the same page in our understanding, so let me explain:

1. what submission does NOT mean First of all:

a. it does not mean a wife is inferior to her husband or that women are inferior to men in general. This is not a statement about value, worth or ability. Women are people. Men are people. Children are people. Every single one of us is worth more than all the world to God and we are all the same. In Christ Jesus there is neither male nor female; we are all one in Him. Spiritually, I hate to say it, but I've found that women are often more responsive, more on the ball and more mature than men. Think about this. 1 Cor. 11:3 says, Now I want you to realize that the head of every man is Christ, and the head of the woman is man [that is, her husband], and the head of Christ is God. Those relationships are parallel. If a wife is inferior to her husband that would have to mean that Christ is inferior to God the Father, but the whole teaching of Scripture is that He is coequal, coeternal and of one essence with the Father. He is not inferior. Rather, He chose to submit Himself to His Father. Everybody submits to somebody; it is about order and position, not value, worth or ability. Then while we're at it, let me also say that this verse:

b. it does not mean that women should generically submit to all men A wife is to submit to her own husband. Hey, this is good news for all you single ladies out there. Sure, you may have to submit to your parents as a daughter or to submit to your government as a citizen or to your boss as an employee, but you don't have to submit to your male friends or to your boyfriend. If he wants to go to the ball game and you want to go to the mall, you can say, "See ya!" and do whatever you and God want with your life! You are as free to make decisions or choose things as any man. But when you sign up by saying, "I do", you're placing yourself under the leadership of your husband, so you'd better think long and hard about WHO you want to be led by the rest of your life! Thirdly, men:

c. it does not mean a husband can demand obedience This instruction is given to wives. Nowhere in Scripture are husbands told that they have any right to force it upon their wives. Look with me at 1 Pet. 5:3. The instruction to leaders is NEVER to "lord it over" those entrusted to your care. You are never to use your position to demand your own rights as an entitlement and force your own will, not in the church and certainly not in marriage. God's instruction is exactly the opposite. Look back to 3:7. Husbands NEVER get to say, "I'm the husband and you have to do what I want!" Husbands are always to be considerate and to treat their wives with respect; they are not bosses and lords demanding their own way. That is not what submission means. And it certainly:

d. it does not mean a wife should disobey God or suffer abuse This command is assuming a normal marriage situation. If your husband is trying to make you do something immoral or illegal then, of course, Acts 5:29 applies, ...we must obey God rather than men. If he wants you to lie for him or cheat on your taxes or to play "wife swap" with some other man, he's lost all right to your submission; turn him in! If he beats you or cheats on you or abuses you in some other way that violates his marriage vow, this verse is not telling you to stay there and take it! Tell someone, get free, be safe! Again, this command to submit assumes a "normal" marriage situation and finally, please understand that:

e. it does not exclude mutuality It does not mean you have no input, that you must be quiet and have no say in what happens. Every issue and decision made should come out of discussion together; you are heirs together of the grace of life. Marriage is a true partnership, not a dictatorship, and any husband worth his salt understands that and acts accordingly.

So, now having gotten all the disclaimers out of the way, let's talk about:

2. what submission DOES mean The Greek word means "to place yourself under". It is a military term. It means to voluntarily place yourself under the authority of a person serving in a superior position. God has created everything with order; He establishes positions of leadership within every institution. Within society we're told that the "powers that be", the ruling authorities are ordained of God and serve His purpose and we're to submit to their leadership. In the church God has ordained the leadership of overseers or elders and we're to submit to their leadership. In the home parents occupy that position of leadership and children are to submit to it and between the husband and wife in marriage, the husband is invested by God's authority as the leader. Now, the Greek word submit is NOT the simple word for obey. Wives are not instructed to simply obey their husbands. It is rather a term that has more to do with respect and honor for who they are than simply doing what they say. Submitting to your husband means two things. First, it means that:

a. you must enable your husband's leadership The saying goes, "If you want to know whether you're a leader, turn around and see whether anyone is following!" If nobody follows you, you can't be a leader, no matter how wonderful you are! Wives, your husband can't be a leader unless you follow his leading! Your husband is supposed to be walking with God and seeking His direction and wisdom for you and your family. He is supposed lead you on into good decisions and into maturity in attitude and action. And you must enable him to do that by voluntarily choosing to follow as he leads. When I was a kid, we had ponies and I remember trying to load a year old unbroken colt onto a truck one day. We had a lead rope on his halter and two guys pulling forward trying to lead or drag him up onto that truck and he just sat down on his behind and dug his feet in and they couldn't budge him! He would not be led! If your husband says, "Honey, I think the Lord is calling us to be involved with the youth ministry" or "I think the Lord is directing us to put our kids into a Christian school", you have a choice. You can dig your heels in and pull backwards and insist on what you'd rather do, or you can trust your husband and let him lead as God has called him. Now, of course, God will likely also be moving you to the exact same conclusions and you'll be praying together and hearing from Him together, but the point is that your husband is to be one indicator of the direction God is moving in and that you're to recognize that and be willing to follow. However, as I said, it is about more than action. It is about your attitude in the process. So secondly, I think this command to submit means that:

b. you must encourage your husband's leadership How? By genuinely respecting his role as your leader. By looking to him in that role. By asking him what he thinks the Lord wants, by seeking and valuing his advice and opinion and by telling him you trust his judgment and his walk with the Lord and that you're willing to go with him in to anything, if he's convinced it's right. Bruce Larson, in his book Wind and Fire, wrote about sandhill cranes. He said, "These large birds, who fly great distances across continents, have three remarkable qualities. First, they rotate leadership. No one bird stays out in front all the time. Second, they choose leaders who can handle turbulence. And then, all during the time one bird is leading, the rest are honking their affirmation." He cites this as a good model for church leadership, but I just want you to hear the last point. Wives, while your husband is leading, God wants you to be "honking your affirmation" the whole time.

Now, out of all the things Paul could have told you, THIS is the one thing Paul chose. Why? Because God wants us to understand:

III. The Tremendous Importance Of Submission He wants you to understand that:

1. it is the MOST important of all your responsibilities When you stand before Him the issue for your reward is not going to be how great you always looked. It's not going to be how great you always cooked or how faithfully you always ran the kids to all their appointments. There are a thousand things a wife has to be; you all know those better than I. But of them all, THIS ONE THING is really all you need to do. Respect your husband by following and encouraging his leadership. I already told you that:

2. it enables your husband to fulfill his God-given responsibility He can't lead unless you follow. He can't be all that he could be without you. But on top of that:

3. it models for your children how to relate to those over them The way they see you relate to your husband's leadership is the way that they're going to learn to relate to leadership in their lives. If they see you pull back and press for your own way all the time, guess what they're going to do in school! Guess what they're going to do toward you as a parent eventually! Guess how they're going to relate to their bosses at work and their leaders at church! They will learn from what YOU model. It is SO important, but here is the bottom line:

IV. The Reason Wives Must Submit To Their Husbands is not because of any of that. Read the second half of verse 18 (3:18b) You see, this thing of leadership and submission:

1. it is the way that God has decided to structure the family It is the way that HE set things up. So:

a. it is not based on the husband's personality or performance Sure, you could probably do a better job than your husband; sure, you're smarter or more capable; sure, you're more on the ball than he is, but it doesn't matter. Sure, he has failed you a hundred times, he's made mistakes. He's pursued selfish ends sometimes. You know, in the army they have a saying, "You salute the uniform, not the person". It doesn't matter who's wearing it; their position demands the respect of following. And in the home the leadership of the husband:

b. it is based on the husband's God-assigned position You have to trust that God knows what He's doing. He set things up this way for His reason and purpose. It is what He wants. So submitting to your husband's leadership:

2. it is the key thing that will glorify God Here's what God wants you to know. Go back to 1 Peter and look with me at 1 Pet. 3:3-5. Wives, that's what God wants. That quiet spirit of willing submission is a beautiful thing and it is of great worth in God's sight. It makes you beautiful to Him because it makes you look just like His Son, who said, "Yes, Father" and went to the cross and saved the world.

The greatly loved Bible teacher Henrietta Mears taught this, A bird is free in the air. Place a bird in the water and he has lost his liberty. A fish is free in the water, but leave him on the sand and he perishes. He is out of his realm. So, young people, the Christian is free when he does the will of God and is obedient to God's command. This is as natural a realm for God's child as the water is for the fish, or the air for the bird. Wives, real freedom in the realm of marriage does not come through taking over, through getting your way, through domination and control. It comes from submitting to the will of God by submitting to the leadership of your husband. It is fitting in the Lord. It is what He wants. It is what He can use. Will you give it to Him?

This One Thing: The Keys To Relationship

Col. 3:18-4:1 Husbands: The Key Of Love

In order to refresh our memories and catch up those who may have missed last week's message, we've begun a new series called:

I. This One Thing: The Keys To Relationship In the end of Colossians 3 Paul gives us a simple one-phrase command for each of the primary relationship roles that we find ourselves living in as wives, husbands, children, parents, servants and masters. And I've suggested to you that this implies that:

1. each relationship role has ONE primary responsibility, one thing that is the key to making relationship work when you're in that role, one thing that God cares that you do in that role more than anything else. For wives that key most important thing in verse 18 was submission, enabling and encouraging their husband's leadership. That is the key most important thing a wife can ever do out of all the things she does. But I also suggested that in each of these cases:

2. that key point is often our most intense struggle If you're only going to say one thing, you choose the thing that the person needs to hear most, the thing that will help them the most, the thing that addresses their deepest need. Many times, the toughest thing a wife does is to keep herself from taking over the leadership role and dominating her husband and choosing to enable him instead. Now today we'll move on to husbands. And we read in verse 19 that:

II. The Key Thing Commanded For Husbands Is Love (3:19a) Of all the things the Holy Spirit could have moved Paul to write, He did not say "Husbands, protect your wives!" or "Husbands, provide for your wives!" He has only one thing to say, Husbands, LOVE your wives, because it's the most important thing. And when you stand before Him to receive your reward for what you've done in this life, His one criterion is going to be, "How well did you love your wife?" So, we had better begin by talking about:

1. what the word love means As I'm sure you've heard many times by now, the Greek language has three words that can all be translated by our English word love, or to put it another way, we use the English word love to mean three different things. The Greek word eros (from which we get the word erotic) refers to romantic love or passion. And we often hold this concept up as being the chief factor in a marriage. We say, "Do you love each other?" and we mean "Are you romantically attracted by each other? Do your glasses steam up and does your heart race at the thought of being with her?" We often call it, "being IN love". But Paul does not use this word; when he says, love your wives. This command:

a. it does not refer to romantic love The second Greek word is phileo and it refers to the kind of deep attachment that we would call family love or friendship. It's reflected in our idiom, "I loved him like a brother!" It's that deep attachment that we have to our parents, our siblings and our children and even our good friends, that natural human caring that causes us to take care of one another and enjoy one another's company and walk through life together sharing experiences. But this command does not refer to family love. The word used here is a third Greek word: agape. It is a word that was hardly even used in the common Greek of the day, but the Holy Spirit latched onto it and gave it to the New Testament writers like John and Paul to use. It has pretty much become a "Christian" word, because agape:

b. it is love defined by the sacrifice of self for the good of the other Even though a husband should certainly show and express romantic attraction toward his wife and he should certainly express his attachment to her and care for her as a family member, when Paul says, Husbands, love your wives... he is saying, Husbands, sacrifice yourselves for the good of your wives. He's not telling us how to feel; he's telling us how to look at and regard our wives and how to act toward them. And this word agape:

c. it is forever defined by Christ's love for us on the cross Turn with me to that familiar verse Eph. 5:25, and look at the explanation that Paul puts with it there. ...as Christ loved the church and gave Himself up for her. He literally gave up His own right to have and to live His own life; He died to that and chose to allow Himself to be sacrificed for us, His Bride, on the cross. Romans 5:8 explains that God ...demonstrated His own agape for us in this: while we were still sinners Christ died for us. And we husbands are to die for our wives, to give up our own right to have and to live our own life for ourselves the way we want and sacrifice that for the well-being of our wives. Husbands, the moment you said, "I do", you were saying, "She comes first; I give up all rights to use her to my own advantage, to force my own way on her, to live with ME at the center of my life. Next to Jesus Himself, I make her the center of my life. I am here to serve her." Didn't know you were signing up for that, did you? Look with me at 1 Cor. 7:33. Now don't read that as a bad or wrong thing. If you're single you have only one concern, how you can please the Lord! You are free to do whatever He and you choose. If the Lord doesn't care about you picking up your dirty clothes, you can leave them lay and spend more time in devotions! If He wants to send you on a 3 month mission trip to Zimbabwe, you can sign up without hesitation. But the moment you say "I do", you have a new responsibility right next to the Lord; when it comes to what you choose in this world you HAVE to consider your wife and what will please her, not in the simple sense of what will make her happy, but in the deeper sense of what will be good for her, help her and meet her needs. To put it another way, to love her is to die to what you want and continually choose what is best for her.

Now right off the bat, let me again make a couple of disclaimers about:

2. what sacrificial love does NOT mean First of all:

a. it does not mean a husband must do everything his wife wants or says, any more than submission means that for the wife. The expression on a coffee mug I saw for sale reads like this, "The only words a husband needs are "Yes Dear", "You're Right" and "I'm Sorry!" Loving your wife is not a sentence to an endless round of satisfying her every whim. Do you love your children? Of course! Do you give them everything they want or do everything they ask you to do? Of course NOT! Your love means that you give your children only what is good for them and do only what is good for them. You love them enough to choose their welfare from a perspective of genuine understanding and that's what you must also do with your wife. Second, loving your wife:

b. it does not mean a husband must relinquish everything he enjoys You don't have to live the life of an ascetic, denying yourself every possible comfort and joy and doing only things that she enjoys. You can still play golf! You can still go to the races. You can still watch TV! But loving her means you must do those things taking into consideration the effect and the impact it has on her and choosing to do them in a way that is good for her and not simply for you. Her well-being is part of the equation of everything you do and every choice you have. Thirdly, loving your wife:

c. it does not mean a wife can demand sacrifice of her husband This verse is not a license for a wife to get whatever she wants from her husband. A wife cannot say, "The Bible says you have to love me" and that means you have to give up what you want and do what I want so we're doing this!" Just as the Bible never gives husbands the right to demand submission from their wives, it also never gives wives a right to demand sacrificial love from their husbands. It is all voluntary! A wife must choose to submit and a husband must choose to love and sacrifice because he wants to. Without that either concept is meaningless! And finally, loving your wife:

d. it does not mean a husband should disobey God to please his wife If your wife wants you to do something that is wrong, that is immoral or illegal or absolutely out of the will of God, she may say, "If you love me, you'll do this!", but that's not true and you'd better not. Abraham should never have yielded to Sarah's idea to take Hagar as his second wife in order to have a child! Any more than Sarah should ever have agreed to Abraham's selfish plan for her to say she was his sister! If you love your wife, you will always give her the example of obeying God no matter what.

So, with those disclaimers out of the way, let's think together about:

3. what sacrificial love DOES mean It's very simply, really. It means that in every situation and circumstance in your life:

a. you must consistently choose your wife's well-being over your own For instance, let's just talk about daily life in your house and who does what. Ann Landers wrote a syndicated advice column in American newspapers for some 45 years until her death in 2002. She once said that based on the mail she received, 70 percent of the women who work outside the home still do 90 percent of the work around the house. They handle most of the shopping and almost all of the care of the children. Some men even refuse to pick up their own clothes. Others go so far as to insist that their wives change the oil in the car and fix a tire when it goes flat. Based on my experience with young couples, this attitude is changing more and more today, but think about it. Husband, you work long and hard all day at your job. You come home and you want a nice dinner and time to rest. But for many of you, your wife works too, at least part of the time. I bet she'd like a nice dinner and time to rest too! Everything you don't do or help with, she has to do. When I get out of bed in the morning, LuAnn is usually already up. I am tempted to just leave that bed unmade, but in my mind this little voice whispers, "If you don't do it, LuAnn will." I think it's the Holy Spirit. So making your bed or picking up your clothes or doing a load of laundry or sweeping the carpet or fixing a dinner becomes an act of love, of thinking about the load she carries and sacrificing your own rest and pleasure for her well-being, so that she can have the rest she needs too. The same thing is true with the kids. She's had them all day (and that's a full-time job), so when you get home or on the weekend, it's an act of love to relieve her and give her a break because she needs it! Think about your work life. You may climb the business ladder well if you work tons and tons of hours, but would that be good for her? Would that bless her and help her to grow and make her a happy and satisfied person? You may need to deliberately choose to be with her and sacrifice opportunities you might otherwise have because she needs you home! The same would be true of your recreational life or even your church life. Some men have become so involved in ministry itself that their wives suffer all the time for it. Paul wrote to all of us in Phil. 2:3-4, Do nothing out of selfish ambition or vain conceit, but in humility consider others better than yourselves. Each of you should look not only to your own interests, but also to the interests of others. That applies double for wives! Husbands, do nothing out of self-centered, self-serving motives. Choose to consider your wife's needs as more important than your own. In every choice you make, every activity you pursue, every part of your life, consider what stake she has in it, how it impacts her and choose what is best for her over what is best for you! That is what you are commanded to do! But for it to be true agape love there is a further test:

b. you must do it unconditionally, that is, expecting nothing in return It's easy to meet her needs and give up your own when she sees that and is appreciative, when she thanks you and encourages you and builds you up and brags on you. But what about when she doesn't? What if she is a complainer and a nag and is never satisfied with anything you do? What if she criticizes you and yells at you and is a demanding, bossy thing? Do you still sacrifice yourself for her? The world's answer would be "NO! If she isn't living up to her half of the deal, dump her!" God's answer is, "Love her all the more!" Genuine love is without any condition, without any expectation. You do not love your wife to get something in return, as wonderful as that would be; you simply love your wife because that is what God has called you to do by being her husband and a husband always loves unselfishly and sacrificially! But here's the real rub. To be true agape love, you can't just do this because you HAVE to:

c. you must do it willingly, that is, because you want to Jesus laid down His life on the cross to save us, not simply because it was the Father's will, because He had to. He wanted to. He laid down His life freely and voluntarily and that's how we are to love our wives. Look with me again at Eph. 5:28-29. Husbands ought to love their own wives the way they love their own bodies. So how do you love your own body? Well, unless you have some type of psychological disorder where you hate your body, basically you very carefully meet its needs every day. You make sure that it has enough food if at all possible. And you meticulously care for it. You wash it and groom it and trim it and make it smell good and look pretty. You figure out what it needs and lavish your care on it. Why do you do that? Grudgingly because you have to? No, you just naturally love your body! You seek its well-being and you want to do it! Well, your wife is now ONE flesh with you; she IS an extension of your own body. When you love her, you are in a sense loving yourself and loving her should be as natural and as free and willing as loving your own body! Then finally, if you are to genuinely love your wife:

d. you must do it sensitively, that is, you must do it understanding her needs Look at 1 Pet. 3:7. That phrase is literally live with them according to knowledge. To love your wife, you have to truly know her, to know what she likes and what she values and what she needs from you to feel secure and significant. She is NOT you! She probably has a weaker body than you (but also probably prettier!) She has more sensitive emotions than you. What you need is not what she needs and you can't love her properly by sacrificing yourself to give her what YOU need or what you THINK she needs. You have to ask her; you have to find out what is really going on inside her and be sensitive to what her true needs are.

Well husband, what do you think? It's a tall order, isn't it? And, you know what? This primary responsibility we have is also:

III. The Primary Struggle That Husbands Have In Loving Their Wives Look at the warning Paul gives in the second half of our text (3:19b). Now if you're reading something other than the NIV, your Bible probably says do not be embittered against them, which is a more literal translation. Husbands, here's what happens to us if we're not careful. First:

1. we develop a wrong attitude toward them Often:

a. we become frustrated with them when they don't respond the way we think they ought to. We think we're doing our best and loving them all we know how and some days they still kick and scream at us and it hurts. And over time we take that frustration and that hurt to heart and:

b. we allow ourselves to become embittered toward them We begin to give back a bitter and a nasty attitude because we're holding that grudge of how they've hurt us after all we've done. We make a conscious decision to stop trying to win them with love and take a defensive posture and then:

2. we begin to act wrongly toward them out of the bitterness that we hold inside. We begin to treat them harshly to make them taste the bitterness. And they react in kind and the cycle of "You hurt me so I hurt you" spirals around and around and down and down until it ends in divorce. I've seen it repeated many times. That's why God says, Husbands LOVE your wives and DO NOT [under any circumstances, no matter how they treat you] let yourself become bitter toward them and begin to treat them harshly and make their lives bitter.

Your call is to love your wife like Christ loved you, for better or for worse! And to do it all your days, from the day you first stand at the altar until the day that death parts you. You put her well-being first on your mind and heart. Dr. Carroll B. Freeman was at his father's bedside as he lay dying when his father looked up at his three sons and whispered quietly, "Do you remember what our Lord said as He hung on the cross? It was, 'Behold thy mother!'" He writes, "No elaboration was necessary, and I do not remember that any further word was spoken. It was a sacred moment as the deepest concern of a great Christian father was indelibly etched in our minds and hearts." Even in death he was loving her, putting her before himself. What a thing to model before your children! Husbands, love your wives the way Christ loved the church. Love them to the uttermost, to the very end, and never ever let yourself give up and become bitter and treat them harshly.

Col. 3:18-4:1 Children: The Key Of Obedience

In our text at the end of Colossians 3, Paul is giving us six very simple, straightforward keys to the primary relationships we find ourselves in in life. In verse 18 he told wives that the single most important thing for them to practice is submitting to their husbands, encouraging their godly leadership. In verse 19 he told husbands that the single most important thing for them to practice is loving their wives, continually giving up their own desires to care for the needs of their wives. Now in verse 20, Paul addresses children, so today I'm going to talk to kids, to young people. I know you all like to tune out during the sermon because you think it's for the adults, but this one is for you. And you adults can listen in and learn something if you like, because you just might have opportunity to teach this to a kid someday. OK? Kids, if you look with me at Col. 3:20, I want you to read it out loud with me right now. Will you do that? Now what that means is that:

I. The Key Thing God Wants Children To Do Is OBEY Parents (3:20) During this stage of your life, that is your most important job. Oh, I know you have to go to school and all, but Paul doesn't say, "Kids, get good grades and God will be happy with you!" And I know many of you play sports or learn musical instruments or take dance, but Paul doesn't say, "Kids, be great athletes! Be real musicians!" Or "Be marvelous dancers and God will be pleased!" He doesn't say, "Kids, be popular! Find a great boyfriend or girlfriend! Look beautiful or handsome; God thinks that's important!" I know all those things are on your minds and hearts at different stages, but Paul only says one thing, Children, OBEY your parents! Believe it or not, that is your most important assignment, to obey your parents! If God were to take you to heaven for a moment right now and sit down to talk with you about your young life, His first question would not be, "Hey, how are you doing in school? Did you do your homework? Are you popular; do the kids like you?" No, it would most likely be, "Are you obeying your parents?" Because that's what's on His heart for you to do. Now I know you don't want to hear that, do you? You'd rather hear, "Children, do whatever you want!" So, to ease your pain a bit, I'm going to start by telling you exactly:

1. when you DO NOT have to obey your parents OK? There are three times I can think of when you absolutely don't have to do what your parents say. You might want to write these down! First, you don't have to obey your parents:

a. when they tell you to disobey God If they tell you to lie about something or they tell you to cheat on a test or to steal, to take something that doesn't belong to you, you absolutely don't have to do it! In fact, you shouldn't do it, because you should obey God first! If they tell you to hate somebody or to put somebody down or to get even with someone because they hurt you, they aren't being godly parents and you don't have to do that thing. Of course, I don't think your parents would probably tell you those things, but you'd be surprised what some parents tell their kids to do. Second, you don't have to obey your parents:

b. when they expect you to do something you literally can't do If your dad is at your game and gets all excited and yells, "Go out there and hit a home run!" and you are the kind of player who strikes out a lot like I did or you typically hit singles and you simply CAN'T hit a home run, you don't have to! If your parents tell you that you have to get an A in math, but you just don't understand it and you simply can't get all the questions right, that's OK. You don't have to do it. God won't mind a bit. You just do the best you can at whatever you do and He'll be happy, even if your parents aren't. You might not know this, but some parents really load their kids down with unrealistic expectations. That means they expect them to do more than they themselves could do or sometimes they want to live out all their dreams through their kids and expect their kids to be something they're not. But when they do those things, they're not being very godly parents and if you just do the best you can do, God will be happy. Now thirdly, you don't have to obey your parents:

c. when you move out of their home and don't depend on them When you have your own place to live and you pay your own bills and Mom and Dad aren't the ones who are feeding you and clothing you and buying the gas for your car and paying so you can watch cable or have internet, then you absolutely don't have to obey them. You might want to listen to their advice, but you don't have to obey them anymore; you're free to make your own mistakes and learn the hard way. But until that time, I don't care if you're 18 or 20 and fully grown up physically, as long as they take care of you, you're still in the position of a child and God wants you to obey them.

Now in these three cases, when they tell you to disobey God, when they tell you to do something you can't do or when you move out and take care of yourself, you don't have to obey your parents, but in every other case, I'm sorry, but God says, Children, OBEY your parents! So, I guess we'd better talk about:

2. what it really means to obey your parents You're smart enough to know that Paul didn't write in English, did he? He wrote in Greek. And the Greek word he used in this command has two parts. One part means "to hear" and the other is a preposition that means "under". "To hear under". It comes from the army. When an officer is in charge and giving orders, the rest of the men, because they are "under" him, hear what he says and they do it. That's kind of how God has created your family to work. He has placed you under your parents' authority for your own good. And because you are under them, He expects you to do three things. First:

a. you must HEAR them, that is, you must give them your ATTENTION. Now let's teach your parents something, OK? How many of you know how to "tune your parents out"? You can act like you're listening to them but your mind is really a million miles away and you're not really listening to a thing they're saying. Do you ever do that? See, parents, you thought they were such smiling innocent children, didn't you? But kids, did you ever think that might be the reason your parents always say things like, "Did you HEAR me?" "Don't you ever listen to what I say" "Didn't I tell you?" God wants you to stop tuning your parents out and:

(1) genuinely listen to what they have to say - Prov. 1:8-9 says, My child, pay attention to what your father and mother tell you. Their teaching will improve your character as a handsome turban or a necklace improves your appearance. (TEV) If you take the time to really listen to them and understand what they're telling you, it will really improve and better your life and make you a better person, even though you might not be able to see how that could be right now. So much of the stuff they tell you to do is kind of like work, isn't it? "Brush your teeth. Take a bath. You need to go to bed now. Mow the lawn. Make your bed. Do your homework." But they really don't just want to make your life miserable; they know doing those things is good for YOU. So listen to what they say and, by the way, you:

(2) parents can promote this by listening in return If you give your kids an "I'm the parent here and you're the dumb kid, so what I say goes" attitude, you're modeling for them exactly how they're going to learn to act. But if you sincerely take the time to listen to them and let them tell you how they feel about things and explain their viewpoint and be respectful about that, it'll certainly make it easier for them to listen to you! But kids, obeying means more than HEARING your parents; it means:

b. you must HEED them, that is, you must do the ACTION they require. Mom says, "Jeffrey, please clean up your room!" And you say, "I will Mom!" An hour later Mom comes by the door and you're still playing on your PlayStation and clothing is still all over the floor. Sound familiar? Let me read you a story that Jesus told: "But what do you think about this? A man with two sons told the older boy, 'Son, go out and work on the farm today.' 'I won't,' he answered, but later he changed his mind and went. Then the father told the youngest, 'You go!' and he said, 'Yes, sir, I will.' But he didn't. Which of the two was obeying his father?" What do you think they said? They replied, "The first, of course." (Mat. 21:28-31TLB) You see:

(1) obedience is shown by doing, not promising, isn't it? Just saying you'll do what your parents ask isn't really obeying. To heed them means that you actually have to DO what they ask, even if it may be unpleasant or you really don't feel like it. You have to be honest and mean it when you say, "Yes Mom," by carrying it out. But, of course, you:

(2) parents can promote this by modeling truthfulness in return, can't you? It would really help if whenever you make a promise to your kids, that you actually do it! They learn from you; they imitate you. If they see you tell them, "We'll do this" and hours go by or it doesn't happen altogether, you're setting them up to do the same. You should be modeling for them that what you say, you mean. What you say is true. It will teach them to live by the same value. OK kids, I'm sorry, but there is still one more thing. God not only expects you to HEAR your parents and to HEED your parents but thirdly:

c. you must HONOR them, that is, you must do it in a respectful ATTITUDE. You remember the 5th of the 10 commandments, don't you? Ex. 20:12 (TLB) "Honor your father and mother, that you may have a long, good life in the land the Lord your God will give you. Honor means respect. It means treating them respectfully because they are your parents. And that means:

(1) obedience should be a willing choice, even if you don't like it I'm sure you've heard this story before. A mom was disciplining her little son for something he'd done one day and she told him to go sit in the corner. When she came by a few minutes later to check on him, he said to her, "Mom, I'm sitting down on the outside but I'm standing up on the inside!" That's what I'm talking about. Inside we can be all mad and angry and thinking bad things about our parents, even while we're doing what they've told us. We can say disrespectful things about them to our friends like, "Yeah, my old man says I gotta be home at 10. He's such a pain." God wants you to do what your parents say willingly, just because they're your parents, even if you don't understand why or disagree and I know that's tough, but you:

(2) parents can promote this by modeling a respectful attitude When they ask "Why?", instead of giving them the, "because I said so" or "because I'm your father," you might try speaking to them in a respectful way and being kind and patient. Parents are big on, "That's the way it is, like it or not" speeches, but all that models for your kids is that when you're in charge of something you get to do whatever you want and nobody else matters. If you want your kids to treat you with respect, try going first and treating them that way. What you model is what they will learn!

Now kids, can we go back to that verse in Col. 3:20 for a moment? I'm afraid I have to tell you another thing you probably don't want to hear. Do you see what it says?

II. God Wants You To Obey Your Parents in what? IN EVERYTHING! In all things. Now what does that mean? First:

1. it means every time, not just the times when you feel like it or when you're in a good mood or when it fits in with your plans. Every time they tell you to do something, God's instruction is for you to do it. Second:

2. it means right away, not 10 hours later or next week when you feel like doing it. If they ask you to take out the trash, it means get up from your TV show and take out the trash or set the table or whatever. Doing what they tell you, but only long after the fact, is really you trying to assert your control and doing what you want and God's not happy with that. Third:

3. it means whether or not you agree with them And no, you don't have to agree with them. You are entitled to your feelings and opinions. You don't have to say, "Yes, you are right and all knowing and I am wrong." But you still have to do what they tell you out of respect for who God has made them to be in your life. They are your parents. And fourth:

4. it means whether or not they are being reasonable or understanding You are entitled to think they're wrong or unreasonable or they're not seeing your side of the issue. In fact, they may BE wrong. They may NOT understand. Your mind is your own. You can choose what to think. Of course, don't be surprised if you start to think a bit differently when you grow up and you're a parent! But you still have to respectfully do what they say and if they're wrong, let the Lord handle it between Him and them!

Now, I'm sure by this point some of you young people are asking, "Why? This is really a raw deal! Why do I have to do this? I have to listen to my parents and do what they tell me and do it with a respectful attitude and I have to do it every time and right away and I have to do it even if I think they're wrong; what a bum deal! Why should I do that?" Well, the answer is in the last part of Col. 3:20:

III. You Should Obey Your Parents Because This Pleases The Lord You see:

1. it is not because your parents deserve it; quite honestly, they may not! We parents are people with problems. We sometimes take out our frustrations on you. We yell at you sometimes when we have no right to. We are impatient with you and make you feel bad about yourselves sometimes. We often hurt your feelings by the things we say to you that we would never say to an adult. You don't obey us because we are so great and wonderful; of course, sometimes we are, but many times we're not. And you don't obey your parents:

2. it is not because they are always right; in point of fact, they are not! We make mistakes! We don't always take time to listen to you and understand what you're faced with. We make you do things sometimes simply because that's the way we did them and that may not even make sense. Of course, sometimes we really do know what we're talking about and do know more than you do, but that's not why you're supposed to obey us. What did that verse say?

3. it is because this is the right thing to God and pleases Him - Eph. 6:1 Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right. This is the way God has made the world to work. Parents have authority over children for their own good to teach them and protect them and train them. And when you cooperate with His plan and obey them simply because you love HIM and you want to do what HE says, that really pleases Him!

*I read a little story about a father who had to punish his little daughter for something she had done. She was very upset about it at first, but later on that day she came to her daddy who was sitting in a chair and climbed up onto his lap. She hugged him tightly around his neck and she said, "Daddy, I do love you." He was a little surprised because he knew how upset she was and he asked, "Why do you love me, honey?" And she said, "Cause you try to make me good." [Louis Albert Banks, in his book Windows for Sermons] You see, that's what we parents do. We try to help you become the person God wants you to be. It's not an easy job, even if it looks like it to you. But you can make it a whole lot easier for us if you can realize what that little girl realized, that God put us as parents in your lives and we're trying our best. It really helps us if you love us and try to please God by doing what we tell you. *Children, obey your parents in everything for this pleases the Lord.

Col. 3:18-4:1 Parents: The Key Of Encouragement

We've been studying together the end of Colossians 3 where Paul gives us six very simple, straightforward keys to our primary relationships in life. We began in verse 18 where he told wives that the single most important thing for them to practice is submitting to their husbands, encouraging their godly leadership. Then in verse 19 he told husbands that the single most important thing for them to practice is loving their wives, continually giving up their own desires to care for the needs of their wives. In verse 20 he told children that their most important assignment in life is to obey their parents by hearing them, heeding them in doing what they say and honoring them with a willing attitude. So, of course, in verse 21 Paul turns to address parents. But before we get into the text, there is a big disclaimer that I want to make. One preacher said, "When I was 20, I had five theories about raising children and no children; now I've got 5 children and no theories!" That's pretty much my own testimony! Parents are always looking for some kind of guarantee that if they will do all the right things, their children will grow up to be everything they're supposed to be. So we read all the latest parenting books; we watch videos and attend seminars. We try to squeeze guarantees out of verses like Prov. 22:6 to somehow say that if we just do it right when they're little, that when they're big God will somehow make sure they follow what we've taught them. We're desperate for our children to turn out right because we love them and if they don't, we blame ourselves and live with shame and guilt because somehow, we live under the delusion that there is some magical recipe out there for raising children that if we follow it will give guaranteed results. But here is the painful truth; in the end our children have freedom to choose how they will live and what they will believe. The fact that there is a powerful force called sin living inside their bodies and the fact that they are surrounded by many powerful forces in the world which influence their choices means there can be no guarantees. We've all seen children with the best of homes and parents make terribly wrong choices. Some of us have BEEN those children. None of us can live life for another person; each one ultimately makes their own choices. All we can do as parents is be the best influence we can possibly be. My theories have been reduced to this: the best thing you can do for your kids is to model in front of them consistently what it means to be in love with Jesus and encourage them to join you. Then, put them in God's hands and trust that He loves them enough to work in their lives the way He did in yours. So, Paul is not giving us parents a formula in verse 21. He's giving us a warning! He has just told children that their responsibility before God is to obey their parents in everything. That puts parents in a really powerful place. So now he's warning us about:

I. The Potential Effects Of Wielding Parental Authority (21) The way that you use your position of authority and control over your children produces a tremendous impact upon them. Paul doesn't mention it here, but the:

1. underuse of it tends to produce a spoiled child unprepared for life There used to be an old cultural proverb, "Spare the rod and spoil the child," which is essentially biblical. If a parent does not discipline and correct a child and provide the healthy limits and boundaries he needs, he will be spoiled. The generation that my parents were in believed that strongly. Unfortunately, the philosophy that prevailed in the last couple decades of parents is that children are basically good. They need to be free to make all their own choices in life and they will become the best they can be. That's a lie from the pit! Sin is bound up in the heart of a child and if parents don't use their authority and guide and train and limit, sin will drag that kid straight away from God and into all kinds of evil! And there's another lie we've got, "I want my kids to have it better than I had." So, today we give our kids everything and don't make them work for it. We give them a car, pay their insurance, pay for their college in full, give them a credit card and don't make them get a job. That's not how the world works and that produces a child who thinks the world owes him a living, that he can do whatever he wants, and who is unprepared for the struggles and disappointments and plain hard work that is the reality of life. But Paul's warning about authority here is just the opposite:

2. overuse of it tends to produce a bitter, angry child You've seen parents who use their position of authority to overlimit and restrict too tightly, parents who give their kids NO freedom, no choice, restrict their every activity and dominate every moment and every area of their lives. Some of you LIVED under parents like that! Maybe some of you've BEEN parents like that! Over-restriction and control, especially if there is no emotional bonding, builds a tremendous amount of frustration in a child. God has created each of us in His image. He has given us, not merely the freedom to choose, but the very need to be able to make choices. And when that is taken away from us, we grow more and more frustrated. We grow angry inside; we grow bitter against those who control us. And in a child that:

a. it may result in rebellion. Rebellion is simply the determination to gain control, to get out of the prison he's forced to live in. Many kids who are raised in overly strict homes go off the deep end as soon as they grow up and can get free to choose. They make a decision that as soon as they can, they will get free and do what they want. And the parents who think they were protecting them all those years by limiting their choices, end up driving them to the very things they were trying to keep them from! Paul warns, Parents, do NOT embitter your children. In Eph. 6:4 he says, Parents, do not EXASPERATE your children. Do not demand more of them than they can do. Do not limit them so much that they feel like slaves living under your control. Do not make them feel like they are living in a prison from which they must escape. Do not build that anger and bitterness in them by overusing your authority. It may not only cause them to rebel later and reject everything you've stood for, but even worse, Paul warns:

b. it may result in discouragement The Greek word means to lose heart, to become without passion, to lose the will to try. It may cause them to make the decision to give up, to just check out. Checking out can take many forms. In the extreme it may mean suicide. It may mean escaping into music or drugs or whatever allows them a way out of the pain of their situation. Or it may just mean a listlessness, a floating through life, exerting as little effort as possible, existing rather than living, with no goals and dreams and desire to accomplish anything.

You see, to turn this warning around and state it positively, as Paul did in Eph. 6:4:

II. God's Primary Goal For Parents Is To Encourage Their Children, to bring them up in the training and instruction of the Lord. To clarify this, let me tell you a story I heard: A company wanted to motivate their sales force, so at the end of the year they had a banquet and honored their two top salesmen. But to make a point they sent both out of the room and had everyone get up and arrange the tables in a simple maze. Then they brought the first man back into the room with a blindfold and the others were told to help him negotiate the maze in this way. Every time he made a wrong turn, they would hit his leg or his arm with a spoon, kind of like smacking his hands. Every time he made a right turn, they did nothing. Every time he took a wrong step, Whap! Whap! Soon, every step was taken with timid caution and he walked in fear of the next step. It took him 7 1/2 minutes to navigate that room and when they took the blindfold off, he was furious. The second man came back in with his blindfold and this time they did things differently. Every time he took a wrong step the crowd did nothing. Every time he made a right step they applauded. He made it through the maze in 90 seconds and felt wonderfully affirmed! What's the lesson? Positive reinforcement and encouragement works a whole lot better on human beings than continual negative correction! I bet that's why the warning about the negative comes first in this verse. INSTEAD, Paul says use encouragement! Now, in our case:

1. the direction of encouragement is toward the Lord It is the training of the Lord and the instruction of the Lord. The direction that we are influencing our children in is toward the Lord, toward His Word, toward His heart, toward relationship with Him. That's what matters. That's our goal, not material success or a great job or an important position. Not success in sports or in school or academics or popularity. We are to bring every resource we have to bear upon influencing our children toward Jesus. And our tools are two-fold. First, this:

2. it involves the positive pressure of instruction They need taught about the Lord. They need to learn about Him and His heart and His ways. And you can't say, "Well, that's why I send them to Sunday School!" That may help, but they need it from you. They need it from you, not so much in a classroom-like setting of sitting them down and "instructing" them, but in walking them through the daily experiences of their lives, showing them how to consider Jesus and what He wants and what He would have them to do in each thing they encounter. In other words, it is "on the job training" that really makes the difference more than "book learning". If you can show them step by step how to live a godly life as they encounter bullies at school or deal with difficult teachers or see bad content on TV, that will train them how to put all the facts that they learn from teaching into practice. This positive encouragement toward the Lord is an extremely powerful influence. However, your responsibility also:

3. it involves the negative pressure of correction That word training means discipline, correcting when they make a misstep, when they choose wrongly. You MUST correct them, but HOW you do that is all important. You can use those wrong steps as a training, teaching, learning experience to correct their path, to get them back on track and help them know that you love them enough to stop them from a wrong path. Or you can use those occasions to build frustration and anger in their hearts. It all depends on how you react. Now remember, from Col. 3:21:

III. God's Primary Command To Parents Is Do NOT Embitter Your Children It's the only one of Paul's six commands that is a negative rather than a positive command. Your chief responsibility is to NOT DO something, to make sure that you DO NOT build anger and bitterness in your children. So, let me give you six positive suggestions that come to mind as to how to encourage them instead of embittering them.

1. accept them for who they are not for what they do Every child, every person, needs to experience unconditional love and acceptance. And children need to get this from you first, so that they will later be able to accept it directly from God. If you shower them with attention and acceptance when they excel and put them down and criticize them when they fail, you teach them a lie, that acceptance is based on your performance! So many of us believe that! Your child needs to hear, "I love you just because you are my son, my daughter. I'm proud of you for who you are!" When they come home with a D or an F, your question ought to be, "Did you honestly do your best?" and if they did, reward it. If they didn't, say, "I love you anyway and I love you enough to want to help you change this, so what can we do together?" Cheer when they win the game; but tell them they did a great job even when they lose! Make them know that nothing they do will ever affect your love and acceptance of them and they will bloom in that security. Take that away and you'll embitter them. Next:

2. show them physical affection Hug them! Touch them! Hold them! Even as they get older. Human beings need physical affection to know that they are loved; that's how they experience it. And if you don't give it to them in that healthy and secure way, eventually they will seek it from someone else in a wrong way. And I don't care if you weren't raised that way or it's just not who you are. Do it anyway! Loving on your kids is one of the best ways not to embitter them. Third:

3. listen to them with undivided attention A little boy at the supper table suddenly shouted, "Pass the potatoes!" His mother indignantly insisted that he go to his room for behaving so rudely. Later that evening, the father disclosed that he had bought a new cassette recorder that day and had secretly taped the family chatter at suppertime. As everyone listened eagerly, they heard loud laughter and excited talking. But in the background, they detected a tiny boyish voice saying, "May I please have some potatoes?" A bit later the same voice said, "Please, somebody, will you let me have some potatoes?" The chatter continued, and then it came, the great shout, "Pass the potatoes!" When you don't listen to your children, when you don't give them your attention and let them express themselves and their needs to you, you build anger and frustration. Love to kids is spelled T-I-M-E. If you are always too busy, too involved with something else, if you keep brushing them aside, they will resent it and it will embitter them as they grow older. Next:

4. give them responsibility that fits their maturity in life Don't expect a 5 year old to carry a heavy load of chores every day. Don't expect your kid to come home from 7 hours at school and then immediately spend 4 more hours doing homework before they can play. Would you live like that? Let them have the time and opportunity and the freedom to be a child and enjoy things. If you don't, it will embitter them as they grow older. On the other hand, if your 17 year old is laying around playing video games all the time, never helping with a thing, not working and expecting you to do everything for them, there's something wrong! Much less if they're 30 and living at home and doing the same thing! As they grow older, give them more and more responsibility for their own lives and well-being; prepare them for life. It will build confidence and assurance. You can embitter them by expecting too much and by expecting too little, by not having confidence to expect enough. Fifth:

5. discipline them instead of punishing them Punishment is never your job; it is God's. You are not His agent to punish the evil of their sins. You are a parent. When they do something wrong you don't simply beat their butt because they've been bad. That will build frustration and anger. Instead, you discipline them; you correct them in love by taking the kind of action that will help them to learn from what they've done. Now, that action will still likely be painful and it may even involve a tap on the backside if that is the appropriate correction. But it can NEVER be simply you taking out your frustration and anger on them physically. If you do that, they will learn to obey you because they'll learn to fear you, but inside there will be anger and bitterness because it's not right. Discipline, don't punish. And finally:

6. model consistently for them the life you want them to live Your greatest influence is your life, the way you live. And kids can smell hypocrisy easier than you can smell a skunk. If you say one thing and do another it will make your kids angry. If you make them be honest and then they see you cheat, if you push them to always tell the truth and they see you lie, and if that is a consistent pattern, they'll become angry and bitter. If you want to encourage them, model for them genuinely what you want them to be.

Then, in closing, let me remind you that the fact that Paul chose this one thing to mention, not only means that it is our primary responsibility, but that:

IV. Our Greatest Struggle As Parents Is To Keep From Embittering Our Children It's a tough line to walk and we fail a lot. Instead of providing true encouragement through teaching and correcting in love we flip out and take out our frustrations in ungodly ways. And you'll note that this is addressed particularly to fathers. Why? Not that mothers never have a problem with this, but we fathers are the greatest offenders. We are the ones who are prone to take this precious authority that we've been given over our children and beat them over the head with it in an insensitive fashion, because after all, we're tough and we're in charge!

Ken Blanchard writes: "When my son Scott was a senior in high school, he used to cause problems by parking his truck in the driveway. Nobody could get in or out because his truck was big enough to go to war. I always told him to park it out in the street. One day I came home to find he'd not only blocked the driveway with his truck but had gone away and taken his keys with him. I was furious. Three hours later he showed up, and I was waiting for him. I stormed out of the house and let him have it. I didn't leave him in doubt about what he'd done wrong and how I felt about it. As I was walking back to the house, Scott raced after me. He followed me into the kitchen. 'Dad,' he said, 'you forgot the last part of the reprimand--you know, the part about 'You're a good kid, I love you, and this is so unlike you.' I cracked up laughing. We hugged. Scott never left his truck in the driveway again. And I got better at reaffirming at the end of a reprimand. [Every-one's a Coach by Don Shula and Ken Blanchard. Zondervan, 1995.] Parents, particularly fathers, DON'T embitter your children. You might kill the precious seed of a life that God is nurturing inside them. Always encourage your children toward Jesus Christ in all that you do.

Col. 3:18-4:1 Servants: The Key Of Obedience

We've been studying together the end of Colossians 3 where Paul gives us six very simple, straightforward keys to the primary relationships that we function in throughout life. His first obvious area of concern was family relationships which we have been looking at in the last four messages. Beginning in verse 18 and continuing through 21, wives and husbands, children and parents are each commanded one key thing that by God's power they must practice. Wives are to submit; husbands are to love. Children are to obey and parents are to not embitter them, but rather encourage them. However, the very first word in verse 22 gives a command to people who were in a very different kind of relationship:

I. This Command Is For People Who Are UNDER Authority (3:22) SLAVES, obey your earthly masters.... Yes, the institution of slavery was not only alive and well in Paul's day; it was a common, ordinary part of life and society. The system of slave labor was a basis of much of the prosperity of the Roman Empire. We have no idea just how prevalent this was. One source I read estimated that fully one third of the population of Rome and of Italy itself were slaves. Another source guessed that as many as half of the Empire's population were in that situation, though that seems questionable to me. Slaves came from the many nations that the Roman legions conquered as prisoners of war and they were bought in quantity from nations outside the empire. They were not all one particular race and they functioned in every area of life from household servants to teachers, accountants, craftsmen, all the way down to field laborers. They often married and had families within their households, another source of new slaves. So the hard truth is that:

1. many of the early believers lived in slavery and not a few were slave owners. It was the situation they found themselves in in life. It seems strange to us, but Paul never attacked the institution of slavery itself. He wrote in 1 Cor. 7:21-22, Were you a slave when you were called? Don't let it trouble you--although if you can gain your freedom, do so. For he who was a slave when he was called by the Lord is the Lord's freedman; similarly, he who was a free man when he was called is Christ's slave. Paul did not fight the institution of slavery, instead he just brought slaves and masters to Christ and a marvelous thing happened. Look at verse 11. In Christ and in the church, slave and master became one; they were equal; they were changed in their relationship to each other. Paul wrote to Philemon that his returning slave Onesimus was now a brother in the Lord. Philemon was to treat him as a brother and he would serve Philemon as a brother. You can see how if that was practiced it would just about dissolve the institution of slavery altogether. At any rate, Paul was writing to these folks about a relationship which to them was a daily thing. But we would probably consider this text irrelevant to us if we choose to concentrate on slavery itself. However:

2. all of us live in relationships under authority today Almost every one of us faces life every day in a similar relationship of some kind, in what I would call an AUTHORITY relationship. We all live in situations where we are UNDER authority. For example, at school you may be a student who is under the authority of the teachers. At work you are probably an employee who is under the authority of various bosses and supervisors. If you're in the military, you are obviously a soldier under the authority of superiors in the chain of command. As citizens we all fall under the authority of police and judges and officials and they law which they are to uphold and enforce. So, although it may not be as absolute in degree as slavery was, literally every one of us lives under some form of authority relationship day after day. Now, I'm a Christian, so how do I live as a student, as an employee, as a soldier, as a citizen? Well in our text Paul seems to spell out for us that:

II. The Greatest Struggle We Have With Authority Is Obeying (3:22-24) The key thing which is to characterize ANY person who is under authority is obedience. But there is something inside of us that has a tremendous struggle with that. There's a power or a force called sin that lives in our members and it influences us to steadfastly resist the idea of laying down control and submitting to people who are in authority over us. Then there's our self-centered flesh, that old way that we learned to live where WE are at the center of our own universe and always ask, "What's in it for ME?" That's why, even though our new nature wants to obey God, we still struggle to do it, because our flesh continually wars against what our spirit truly wants. So, whenever the teacher or the boss or the captain over me says, "Do this!", I have an instant and immediate urge not to and that may be expressed in three forms, as Paul points out here. First, it may come out as actual:

1. rebellion: we refuse to obey The teacher gives us an assignment and we simply don't do it. The boss gives us a project and we do something else we'd rather do instead. Our taxes are due and we don't pay them. Of course, there are consequences associated with doing this, like failing the course or losing the job or being court-martialed. And if we're grown up and wise enough to know and fear these consequences, we make take a different course. We might opt for:

2. deception: we pretend to obey Paul says some people under authority obey, only when their eye is on you. Only when the police car is visible. Only when the boss is on site. Only when the teacher is in the room. But just let that authority figure walk out of the room and it's siesta time or party time. Then, when footsteps are heard, everyone is instantly busy. We give the appearance of obeying, but we disobey every time that we can get away with it. Do you know what I'm talking about? Our fleshly tendency is to obey only when we have to in order to avoid the consequences. Or just the opposite, we may be driven by:

3. selfishness: we obey only for reward We obey, to win their favor. We do it to make a good impression on the teacher in the hopes of improving our grade or gaining some privilege. We obey to impress the boss so we'll be in line for a raise or a promotion. We don't obey for God's sake or because it's right; we do it merely to get something out of it for ourselves.

And, of course, any kind of feigned obedience is really flawed obedience. It's not really what God intends for us at all. You see, what Paul's telling us here is that:

III. The One Key Thing God Wants People Under Authority To Do Is Obey Now, that word obey means the same thing in this verse that it meant for children back in verse 20, as they relate to their parents. It means that we are to HEAR what those in authority over us tell us, to HEED by doing what they say, and to HONOR their position of authority by doing it with a willing spirit from the heart. And Paul pretty much spells out for us in these verses what God expects from us, the manner in which He wants us to obey those who are in authority. First of all:

1. He wants us to obey continually Verse 22 says, obey your earthly masters in everything. Everything? Are there no exceptions? Well, of course there are exceptions. If the teacher demands that you do something that denies your faith, you refuse. If the boss orders you to falsify records or do something illegal for the company, you certainly should disobey. But as I mentioned in previous messages, exceptions are just that, exceptional. Except for those rare instances, those who are under authority are to obey those whom God has put in charge of us on earth as a continual habit, a way of life. Our only other option is to get out of the relationship if we have opportunity. A slave could save money and eventually buy his way out. You can quit the job. Change schools. Move to another country if you don't want to pay taxes! But as long as we're under someone's authority, a Christian is commanded to exercise obedience in everything. John Kenneth Galbraith, in his autobiography, A Life in Our Times, illustrates the devotion of Emily Gloria Wilson, his family's housekeeper: It had been a wearying day, and I asked Emily to hold all telephone calls while I had a nap. Shortly thereafter the phone rang. Lyndon Johnson was calling from the White House. "Get me Ken Galbraith. This is Lyndon Johnson." "He is sleeping, Mr. President. He said not to disturb him." "Well, wake him up. I want to talk to him." "No, Mr. President. I work for him, not you. When I called the President back, he could scarcely control his pleasure. "Tell that woman I want her here in the White House." [Houghton Mifflin in Reader's Digest, December, 1981]. Emily illustrates what we're talking about here, continual obedience IN EVERYTHING. And that also means that:

2. He wants us to obey faithfully Paul says, do it, not only when their eye is on you, but do it whether their eye is on you or not. The obedience must not be feigned or pretended. It must be real. The teacher or the boss or the person in charge must be able to count on you carrying out the responsibility you've been given, even in their absence. They must know that your bottom line is not to see what you can get away with but rather to do what you're supposed to. That makes you trustworthy! Joseph was sold into slavery against his will in Potiphar's house. He didn't want to be there, but he obeyed his master faithfully. He proved trustworthy and was eventually put in charge of everything. He was so faithful that when Potiphar's wife wanted an affair with him, he would not betray his master's trust; he was faithful to him. Then he got thrown in jail. He didn't deserve it; he could have been bitter and angry, but again he demonstrated faithful obedience to the chief jailer and wound up being entrusted with care of the whole prison. That's what God wants in us, that we obey, that we carry out the responsibilities that those in charge have given us, in a trustworthy fashion always. But even that is not enough:

3. He wants us to obey thoroughly Paul says, do it with sincerity of heart...whatever you do, work at it with all your heart. You know how you can be told to wash the dishes and just kind of hit each one a lick? Or told to do a paper and write one page but make the type size really big to expand it to two? No, a Christian does what he does with all his heart. He does a good job, the kind of a job that Jesus would do whether it's designing a building or sweeping a floor! So, when you function as a person under some kind of authority, you obey thoroughly. God wants us to carry out fully what we know the person in authority wants done. And finally, the bottom line in obeying is that:

4. He wants us to obey spiritually Paul says, work at it as working for the Lord, not for men...it is the Lord Christ you are serving. Put simply, you are not obeying a human being; you are obeying Jesus. You are not serving a human being; you are serving Jesus. In doing what they want, you are doing what HE wants and that's what He rewards! A missionary to India told about an army officer who stopped to have his shoes shined by a poor Indian boy on the street. The lad launched into his task with such enthusiasm and vigor that the man was utterly amazed. Instead of an ordinary, slipshod performance with an eager hand outstretched for a tip, the boy worked diligently until the leather sparkled with a brilliant luster. The officer asked, "Why are you taking so much time to polish my boots?" "Well, sir," was the reply, "last week Jesus came into my heart and now I belong to Him. Since then, every time I shine somebody's shoes, I keep thinking they're His, so I do the very best I can. I want Him to be pleased!" That's our motive! We obey authority because we want HIM to be pleased! Many years ago, a Boston newspaper printed an article about a cleaning lady who for 40 years did the same humdrum tasks in the same office building. She was interviewed one day by a reporter who asked her how she could stand the monotony and boredom of doing the same thing day in and day out. The woman gave this reply: "Oh, I don't get bored. I use cleaning materials that God made; I clean objects that belong to people God made, and I make life more comfortable for them. My mop is the hand of God!" John Oxenham wrote in his old hymn, No work is commonplace, if all be done as unto him alone; life's simplest toil to him is known who knoweth all. His service is life's highest joy, it yields fair fruit a hundred-fold: be this our prayer--"Not fame, nor gold, but--thine employ!" If you obey because you are doing it for Him, that truly is obedience; that is what He wants to produce in you.

And, of course, Paul says if you do it that way, you know that you will receive an inheritance from the Lord as a reward! God will reward your faithful obedience to HIM expressed in obeying THEM! In Ephesians 6:8 Paul tells servants, you know that the Lord will reward everyone for whatever good he does, whether he is slave or free! Good is good and evil is evil whether you're a servant or a master. You don't obey those in authority over you for a pat on the back or to get ahead somehow; you do it so that one day when you stand before Jesus Christ, HE will say, "Well done! You did that just the way I wanted you to!" That's all that ultimately matters! However, the opposite is also true and as we come to verse 25, we see:

IV. The Warning God Gives To Those Under Authority (3:25) I see three things in that warning. First of all:

1. when we disobey, we will receive the consequences of it and much of the time, they will be right here and now. God spelled out His view of how authority works in Rom. 13:1-6. God uses authority to keep the world in order and He puts people in places of authority, whether that is political authority or at work or school or parents at home. And authorities do hand out consequences for wrong-doing. If we choose to disobey, we will pay a price. A slave in that day might be whipped. We may lose our job or get suspended or be fined or even jailed. So, a healthy fear of doing wrong because we'll pay a price is actually a good thing. And while we're talking about this, please understand that:

2. God will not excuse evil because you suffer under someone's authority If the person over you is abusing their authority and it is causing you pain, as wrong as that may be, it does not give you the right to do wrong in return. You can't say, "My employer pays me shoddy wages; I'm going to do a shoddy job!" Right is right and wrong is always wrong. God does not play favorites. He does not say, "There you poor suffering child, it's OK for you to lie and cheat and steal; they're doing those things to you!" The life of many of those early Christian slaves was not pleasant! Probably much more unpleasant than it is for you in whatever you might have to suffer at the hands of those in charge of you. The temptation to spit in their master's food or to use the sword they carried to carve him up instead of protect him was likely strong for many of them. But two wrongs never did make a right; evil still does not justify evil. His will is for you to obey just the same, even those who may be causing you suffering. But do remember this. Because you are doing it for Him:

3. God will reward you because you suffer for His sake Look with me at 1 Pet. 2:18-25. I bet you didn't notice that that beautiful truth, He himself bore our sins in his own body on the tree, was written first to slaves, to those who are suffering unjustly and wrongfully under those in authority over them. Christ gave us an example. He suffered for us, He endured the pain of unjust suffering on the cross at the hands of those in authority over him and that's what saved us. And He calls us to do the very same for His sake, trusting that the real reward comes later. And it will because God wants to use your faithfulness, your selfless true obedience, even in the face of suffering, to shine His grace as a beacon into the lives of others, perhaps the very ones who are mistreating you now.

I think that God has a special spot in His heart for servants. When His Son came into the world, He took the form of a Servant. He is spoken of prophetically through Isaiah as the Servant of the Lord. And He knows that being a servant and obeying is often a drag. It is long and difficult and hard and often painful. Thomas a Kempis wrote these words back before the reformation in the first person as though God Himself were speaking, just to encourage faithful servants. He said: "Do not be worn out by the labors which you have undertaken for My sake, and do not let tribulations ever cast you down. Instead, let My promise strengthen and comfort you under every circumstance. I am well able to reward you above all measure and degree. You shall not toil here long nor always be oppressed with griefs. A time will come when all labor and trouble will cease. Labor faithfully in My vineyard; I will be thy recompense. Life everlasting is worth all these conflicts, and greater than these. Are not all plentiful labors to be endured for the sake of life eternal? Lift your face therefore to heaven;

behold I and all My saints with me--who in this world had great conflicts--are now comforted, now rejoicing, now secure, now at rest, and shall remain with Me everlastingly in the kingdom of My father.

Servants, you who are under authority, obey your earthly masters in everything... with sincerity of heart and reverence for the Lord... since you know that you will receive an inheritance from the Lord as a reward. It is the Lord Christ you are serving.

Col. 3:18-4:1 Masters: The Key Of Justice

Today we come to the conclusion of our study of the end of Colossians 3 where Paul gives us six very simple, straightforward keys to the primary relationships that we function in throughout life. In verses 18-21 we have commands that relate to family relationships: the key thing for wives is to submit; the key for husbands is to love. The key thing for children is to obey; the key for parents is to not embitter them but rather encourage. In verse 22 Paul addressed slaves and told them their key thing is to obey and we were able to apply that to ourselves whenever we find ourselves UNDER any kind of authority, whether at school, at work, in the military or under our own government. In closing, Paul now turns the tables and gives a:

I. This Command Is For People Who Are IN Authority (4:1) The word masters is literally the word lords and it indicates a person in charge, a person in ownership or authority who has the power of control over others. It may surprise you to think about the fact that:

1. some of the early believers were owners of slaves - 1 Tim. 6:1-2 All who are under the yoke of slavery should consider their masters worthy of full respect, so that God's name and our teaching may not be slandered. Those who have believing masters are not to show less respect for them because they are brothers. Instead, they are to serve them even better, because those who benefit from their service are believers, and dear to them. These are the things you are to teach and urge on them. There were believing masters in the church. As I explained to you last week, the practice of slavery was tremendously prevalent in the Roman Empire of Paul's day and many, many of the early believers were slaves. But not a few of them were owners of slaves! And Paul didn't simply tell them to set their slaves free. Rather, he taught believing slaves to see their believing masters as brothers and love them and believing masters to see their believing slaves as brothers and love them, so that in their new life in Jesus Christ they became one and entered into a whole new relationship that would not be unlike that of boss and employer today. In fact:

2. many of us live in relationships where we are IN authority today A good many of us are parents, of course, and exercise authority and control over our kids. Some of us are teachers and in that classroom, we are lord; we're in control. Others of us are bosses or supervisors or foremen or even employers or owners of businesses where we have people under us, people who answer to us and whom we direct. Some may be in the military and rise to authority over whole squadrons or platoons of soldiers; others are police officers or judges or officials who are given authority over ordinary citizens. Some of us have even been placed in positions of authority within the church as elders or pastors or leaders and I would dare to say that every one of us at one time or another ends up in some position where we have authority over others so Paul's words do apply to us. Now the very fact that Paul commands masters and people in authority not to do wrong tells us that:

II. The Greatest Struggle We Have When In Authority Is Abusing It You've heard the saying, "Power corrupts; absolute power corrupts absolutely!" It was written by Lord Acton in a letter to Bishop Mandell Creighton in 1887. He said, "Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power corrupts absolutely. Great men are almost always bad men." History has proved that and scripture testifies to it as well. The cruelty of kings like Pharaoh who abused his power to oppress the Israelites into slavery and Herod who slaughtered all the infants of Bethlehem to protect himself is legendary, but right up there with them are the Hitlers and the Stalins and the Mao Tse Tung's of our own day. Power creates the opportunity and the temptation to abuse it. We know the history of the church has its Inquisition and its persecution of the reformers and the anabaptists and many others but it's easy to think that, after all, we are above that. We would do well to remember that even David, the man after God's own heart, once he had power, used that power to steal the wife of another man and to commit murder to cover it up. Paul warns masters about three temptations that come to masters, to those who are in authority. The first is:

1. selfishness: When we are in authority, we are prone to consider our own needs instead of those under us. A master tends to think about how little he can get away with giving his servant, rather than about how much he can afford to give him. How many times in recent years have you heard of businesses closing down whole divisions or plants, ruining the lives of hundreds of their employees and disrupting local economies because they can make more money having their products made or their service departments located in China or India. For many in charge, profit is the bottom line, not people. Power breeds self-centeredness; it focuses our eyes on us and our own needs and desires and away from caring about the needs of those who are below us. And it also breeds:

2. injustice: we do things that are wrong because we can get away with it. When we're the boss, if we want to steal company property and use it for ourselves, who's going to stop us! When we're important, we can get our traffic tickets fixed and our infractions dismissed and that makes us prone to commit more of them. When somebody answers to us, we can make them do things we'd never expect of ourselves, just because we have the power to do it and we want to. We can demand unreal hours of our employees or load unbearable work on our students and make their lives miserable, as any med student will testify. As parents we can break promise after promise or speak to our kids in abusive language or vent our anger on them and who's going to stop us? Power breeds injustice! And power also breeds:

3. unfairness: we do what we prefer instead of what is fair to others. When we're in charge and we like somebody, we give them time and attention, but if there's somebody we don't like for whatever reason, we tend to ignore them or make things hard for them. If we're in charge we can help when we want to and refuse when we don't, whether it's fair or not, whether that person has been in line for 4 hours already or not. We can punish the whole class for the offense of 1 student, even though it's not fair, just because we can and we want to demonstrate our superiority. Power breeds unfairness.

But by now you're saying, "What is he talking about? I'd never do things like that!" Chuck Colson, wrote an article entitled "The Problem of Power" in which he said, "Christians need to hold one another accountable. Though I know intellectually how vulnerable I am to pride and power, I am the last one to know when I succumb to their seduction. That's why spiritual Lone Rangers are so dangerous--and why we must depend on trusted brothers and sisters who love us enough to tell us the truth." Power also breeds blindness! And that's why Paul wrote this challenge to Masters in Scripture! Don't see it as for someone else; see it as God speaking to YOU! Whether you're the CEO of a company or an elder or a Sunday School teacher or a doctor or the guy at the service counter helping a line of people or simply a mom or dad, listen, this command is for YOU and you need it:

III. The One Key Thing God Wants People In Authority To Do Is To Be Just Whenever you are in ANY situation where you exercise some degree of control over somebody else's life, God has put you in that place as His representative and He wants you to act like He acts! He wants you to be just! Now what does that mean? Well, from our text, it means three things. First:

1. He wants us to willingly meet the needs of those under us That word provide means to reach forth, to offer. It has the sense of willingness in it. Masters ought to willingly and freely supply their servants with the things they need to have a decent life. Employers ought to pay their employees wages and provide other benefits that allow them to live decently to whatever extent they can and they should WANT to do it! Teachers should WANT to give their students a good educational experience every day, one that thinks about what they really need in order to understand and grow. The person at the counter should really WANT to help the people in the line with their problems and any parent should every day WANT what is best in the long run for their children and not for themselves and mirror our Heavenly Father. That attitude of willing service to those under our care should pervade our lives. Secondly, Paul says:

2. He wants us to treat those under us rightly There should be NO injustice. Look with me at 1 Tim. 5:21. The context is about how to deal with an elder who is accused of sin and it spells out what true justice means. When you deal with people under you, you should do it:

a. without prejudice That word partiality means prejudice, which is making up your mind before the facts are known. Rom Eaton spent 16 years in prison even though he was innocent. At the end of that time behind bars, he made this observation: "I didn't have a dime in my pocket or a friend in the world when they put me on trial for armed robbery. That's why I spent 16 years in prison for a crime committed by two other men while I was 1,700 miles away. I am free now, completely vindicated. Life played a dirty trick on me in Circuit Court." Somebody, a prosecutor and a jury, obviously made up their minds based on limited information before all the facts were known. You cannot let your treatment of a person be influenced by their appearance or race or by things that are purely circumstantial. You can't make up your mind ahead of time. By wrongly blaming your child or your student, you can make an impact every bit as devastating emotionally as what happened to Rom Eaton. Then, verse 21 adds that our treatment of those under us should be:

b. without partiality That word favoritism means a prior inclination; it means bias based upon your own preference. You may not like men to have long hair and earrings and dress in black leather or teenagers with an "in your face" attitude and torn blue jeans, but if you're in charge of them, you treat them the same as people who dress more "normal" in your eyes or who treat you more respectfully.

Doing what is right toward a person cannot be affected by your own feelings and must be based upon all the facts; it must not be about YOU but about them! And the third thing God tells us in Col. 4:1 is that:

3. He wants us to treat those under us equally That word fair is literally equal. Everyone under our charge gets treated alike; there is NO favoritism. James had a lot to say about that; look at James 2:1-9. Can't you just see that playing out on Sunday morning here at GBC? Some new visitor shows up in a three piece suit, kids all dressed spiffy and carrying their Bibles and we say, "Yes sir, sit right up here, let me escort you, we're so glad to have you!" And then some homeless guy wanders in and he's dirty and doesn't smell good and we kind of hide him in a back corner somewhere and make sure he leaves quick! Oh, we'd never do that! Or would we? Or DO we? God wants us to treat every human being, especially those who are under us:

a. without discriminating because of appearance or economic status and we literally do this all the time, at least in our minds. But the real point was in verse 8, Love your neighbor as yourself. God expects us to:

b. have a genuine love for them as a fellow human being Your neighbor is anybody you run across who needs help, anybody you find lying in a ditch or who wanders in or who sits in your classroom or stands in line at your counter. God loves them simply because He made them and He expects us to love them as human beings just like ourselves, equally, regardless of how they look or their intelligence or how much money they seem to have or how well they speak our language! No discrimination! God wants us to serve those under us willingly, justly and equally, but there is one thing more:

4. He wants us to treat those under us kindly Turn with me to Eph. 6:9. In what same way? It refers back to the context of verses 5-8 where God tells servants how to act. It means:

a. we are to treat them the same way God wants them to treat us This is almost Jesus' Golden Rule, Do unto others as you would have them do unto you! Treat them with the same respect that God wants them to have for you, even though they're under your charge. Serve them and meet their needs genuinely; do it from your heart. Model it for them! Lead them by your example. Treat them with true kindness and gentleness and SHOW them the way God wants them to relate. And Paul makes a particular point here. He says, Do not threaten them! In other words:

b. we are not to use the fear of our authority to take advantage of them Of course, there is a day to tell the student that if he does not do his homework, he's going to fail the class. Sure, there's a day to tell the employee that if he keeps on goofing off, he's going to lose his job. Obviously, there's a moment to tell your child that if he lies to you, you are going to discipline him. Those are not threats; they're just being honest, telling the truth and stating facts, with the good of the person in mind. Threatening is, "Do what I want or I'm going to fire you." "Do this or I'm going to flunk you." Threatening is using your authority to make that person afraid of you in order to get what you want and Paul says, "Put it away!" Treat those under you kindly, not harshly. And that's tied right in with:

IV. The Warning God Gives To Those Who Have Authority Why should you do all this? Col.4:1b ...because you know that you also have a Master in heaven. Think about that! No matter how important you are. No matter how powerful you are. No matter if you're President of the United States or Chairman of the Board or Warden of the prison:

1. you have a Master in heaven, which means that you are also a servant. People may serve you; they may be under you, but you're also under Somebody and serving Somebody they way that they're under you and may be serving you. And guess what? Eph. 6:9 says that:

2. He is your Master and also theirs You both serve the same Master and you stand equal before Him! Judge and convict, foreman and laborer, distinguished professor and freshman, elder and visitor, parent and child, ALL are servants of One and the same Master and answer to Him. And:

3. He does not discriminate! He has no favorites! He judges rightly between us and treats everyone with equal love. So, your position will not afford you privilege! You will have no license to mistreat those under your charge! If you abuse it, don't expect Him to overlook it!

The attitude God wants to build into us is the one displayed by a young man named Ross who had an interesting experience while working as a waiter during his college days: "I didn't know the couple who'd come into the restaurant. They were maybe in their mid-50s. Seemed like nice enough folks. I soon saw, though, that Kim, a new employee, was having a hard time with their order. She brought them the wrong entree, forgot their drinks, and was on the verge of tears because she believed the entree mix-up was their mistake, not hers. I saw she was upset, so I went over to offer my assistance. Kim pulled me aside and asked if I'd please take over waiting that table. She just couldn't work with this couple. I agreed. After I assured the couple that their order was coming and quickly brought them their drinks, they thanked me warmly. After their dinner arrived, I went to the manager and told him the story. I asked if we could give them their meals for free since there had been such a mix-up. The manager agreed. When I told the couple their dinners would be 'on the house,' they thanked me profusely. 'You've given us fine, fine service,' the man kept saying to me. As they were getting their coats, I went to say good-bye and thanked them again for coming. The man was removing his coat from the coatrack, and as he did, I saw the name of our restaurant chain on the back of his jacket. 'Oh, do you work for our chain?' I asked. 'No,' the man responded, 'I'm the owner of the chain.'" Ruth Senter, Ross' mother-in-law, comments: "I was proud of my son-in-law. He's not only a man of faith, but also one of integrity. By tending to the couple's needs as he did, without knowing who they were, Ross treated them as we should treat each other--and as Christ treats us." [Power for Living, Jan 21, 1996. Page 8.] Jesus said, inasmuch as you did it to the least of these, my brethren, you did it unto Me.

The way you treat those under your charge is the way you are treating the "Owner of Your Chain". Masters, provide [those under your authority] with what is right and fair, because you know that you also have a Master in heaven.

1 Thessalonians: Jesus Is Coming! Three Tenses Of Our Christian Life - 1 Thess. 1

In my devotional reading some weeks ago I came to the Thessalonian epistles and at the same time I was asking the Lord what we should study together next. It occurred to me (and I later double checked my files) that I had never preached a series on these books in my entire ministry and I took that as a nudge from the Holy Spirit that this was my answer. So here we go! Let me begin with a brief:

I. Introduction To 1 and 2 Thessalonians (1:1) Both letters begin with the exact same words. Paul wrote them to the believers in the city of Thessalonica and here's the background story as to how he came to write. On his second missionary journey, Paul and his missionary partner Silvanus (or Silas as he is called in Acts) and their young helper Timothy crossed from Asia Minor into Greece and the two were eventually imprisoned in the city of Philippi after planting the church there. Then God bailed them out with an earthquake and they all left town headed west along the main road to Rome, the Via Ignatia, which people still walk on today. 100 miles later they stopped at Thessalonica, the capital city of the Roman Province of Macedonia, a thriving commercial port with a population of about 200,000 in that day. Let's read the story of how:

1. Paul and Silas planted the church in Thessalonica in Acts 17:1-4 In those three weeks a good number of people already came to Christ, but his letters seem to indicate that Paul stayed on there a while longer, making tents and discipling these new converts, even though Acts does not mention it. However, ultimately:

2. they were torn away from these new believers after only several months by persecution which evidently continued after they left - Acts 17:5, 10 The mob did not find Paul, but the disturbance was great enough that these new brothers sent them all out of town for their own protection. Paul's description and reaction to this is in (2:17). He was worried how they would survive in such a hostile environment. He desperately wanted to go back and make sure they were OK, but he couldn't. They went on 50 miles to Berea, but were run out of there in short order by angry Jews who had followed them from Thessalonica. So, leaving Silas and Timothy there to disciple these new believers, Paul caught a ship and sailed on 300 miles south to the city of Athens in the province of Achaia. Silas and Timothy caught up with him there, perhaps three months later, but he still could not get the Thessalonians out of his mind, so:

3. from Athens Paul sent Timothy back to encourage them and probably sent Silas back to Philippi (3:1-2, 5). Paul was desperate to get news and find out whether these new believers were weathering the storm of persecution and wanted to send them someone to help and encourage them. So, they went off and after a difficult solo ministry there, Paul moved on to Corinth, where he continued for a year and a half. It was early in his ministry there, probably some 10 months after they had all left Thessalonica, when in Acts 18:5:

4. Timothy arrived and brought a good report to Paul at Corinth (3:6-7). So now Paul's heart was comforted at long last and immediately:

5. Paul wrote the first of these two letters, followed fairly shortly by the second letter. They are very personal letters, filled with Paul's own concern, joy and thanksgiving, unlike his more teaching-oriented letters like Romans or Ephesians. He wrote them for three reasons. First of all, like a good father he wanted:

a. to further encourage his spiritual children to persevere in persecution, to shore up their faith and help them to stand firm. Second, He wrote:

b. to refute some false charges that had been made to them by enemies against him and his associates in the time since he left. They were accusing him of seeking personal gain and other things that might lower the Thessalonians' trust in him and what he taught them. And most importantly, he wrote:

c. to deepen their understanding of proper behavior and the Lord's return Each of the five chapters of the first letter end by talking about the coming of the Lord and the second letter is just filled with it. It's as if in these letters Paul is saying, "Remember: Jesus is coming, Jesus is coming, Jesus is coming, Jesus is coming!" They show us how to live life in light of the powerful truth that Jesus IS coming!

So, let's embark on the study of Chapter 1 which is really an expression of how thankful Paul was for these dear folks he had left at Thessalonica, now that he knew at last just how well they were doing. Let's read (2-10). See, Jesus is coming! But, going back to verse 2, Paul prayed for these dear folks all the time because they were on his heart. He prayed for all of them, and I'm sure that means he prayed for all those he knew personally by name, the way that we should. And as he thought of them and prayed, he was always filled with thankfulness to God for them. He was continually thanking God for them, and notice that:

II. Paul's Thankfulness For The Thessalonians Involved Three Tenses, past, present and future, and all three tenses are summed up in verse 3. First of all:

1. he prayerfully remembered their past "work of faith" (3a) He remembered the brief months he had spent with them and how they had come to believe in Jesus and how that faith had transformed and changed their lives, just as it had his own. Throughout the chapter he gives us more pieces of exactly what he remembered and it might do us good to look back at our own lives from time to time and be thankful for the transformation that our faith in Jesus has made in us. Look at verse (9a). The NET says, ...people everywhere report how you welcomed us... Many of the people of Thessalonica were pretty hostile to Paul and his companions but, for some reason, these who believed had:

a. they welcomed the messengers and the message with openness Paul remembered how warmly he was received by them, how they were gracious to him and came to hear him time and time again and said, "Yes, we want to hear this; tell us more!" And they believed what they were being told as truth instead of dismissing it. THAT was the Holy Spirit! Most of us are not brought to faith like Paul was, knocked down, blinded and forcefully told to believe. Rather, somebody came to tell us and God moved in our hearts to receive that person warmly and to trust what they had to say to us, even though we might not have naturally been inclined to do that. Paul remembered that about the Thessalonians and also how, as they listened to him and the others:

b. they fell under deep conviction by the power of the Holy Spirit (5a) The Holy Spirit did His convicting work and they realized the awful situation they were in before God because of their many sins. They came to see that only Jesus could save them and their hearts turned to Him. I still remember the deep conviction I felt for some time before I received Christ, even at the age of 15. I was now listening to the preaching and the Holy Spirit made it real to me how lost I was, how my sins were separating me from God and how much I needed Jesus. Paul remembered that about the Thessalonians and then how, in the end:

c. they turned from false idols to serve the true and living God (9b) A great many of them were not Jews, but pagan Greeks and even Romans, who worshipped a whole pantheon of gods and goddesses, whose statues and temples were everywhere. But God enabled them to understand that there is only one true God and He's a living God; their gods were just dead lifeless idols! What a powerful thing that they would give up the false things they had worshipped all their lives and give themselves wholeheartedly to serve the real God, Jesus! We see it in India today when we go, how God moves these dear people when they hear the truth to realize that Jesus is alive and their statues and pictures that they have worshipped from infancy are lifeless nothings and they throw them away! What a miracle! Most of us, of course, didn't come from that kind of background but we still worshipped our own false idols; we were still serving the things that were our "gods", whether it was pleasure or personal advancement or acquiring material things. Whatever we lived for, whatever we pursued or served, God moved us to lay that down and serve Jesus with all of our hearts.

God's work to bring us to Christ was truly a miracle of grace and, like Paul, we should often pause to remember how He did that for us and thank Him for it. But as Paul thought about the Thessalonian believers, he also:

2. he prayerfully rejoiced in their present "labor of love" (3b) From that time when they had first turned to Christ, they had thrown themselves into vigorously laboring for Him out of the love they had for Him. In these intervening months they had been working hard for Jesus. To begin with:

a. they became imitators of Paul, and then ultimately of the Lord (5b-6a) Instead of living like pagans lived, a lifestyle where sexual immorality and drunkenness and dishonesty and revenge were prevalent, they did what we all did in our early days; they started to live like the person who brought them to Jesus. They imitated Paul and ultimately realized that it wasn't about living like Paul, but about living like Jesus. And so, our lives began to change; more and more we began to put away unholy things, things that displeased God, and began living a life that was increasingly holy, modeled after Jesus and His purity of thought and deed. As Paul prayed, he rejoiced over this change in their lives but also over the fact that:

b. their joy was not hindered by the persecution they encountered (6b) The same angry people that called the mob together and dragged some of the believers before the authorities and caused Paul to leave town were still there and you can imagine that they were not making life easy for these new believers after he left. But that never stopped them from continuing to serve Jesus and it didn't dampen their joy. We get so little of this here, but some of us really were given a hard time. We live in an environment or work or study in an environment where people are angry and upset that we believe in Jesus and serve Him. Maybe our own family members were upset with us. But, like the Thessalonians, that didn't stop us because we had found a joy in our hearts in what Jesus did for us, a joy that the world never gave us and that the world could never take away from us! Paul rejoiced in how they had joyfully stood firm in their faith, refusing to give it up, but even more than that, in how:

c. they "radiated" the Gospel throughout their region (8a) They became evangelists like Paul! They zealously shared the Gospel which had changed their lives with their friends and neighbors and relatives and, like a stone thrown into a puddle, it began to ripple outward in rings throughout their own province of Macedonia and the southern state of Achaia. It rang out from them like an echo in the mountains repeated over and over as it bounces on out of hearing. As Silas and Timothy returned to Paul in Corinth overland, they found people who had heard the Gospel and believed because of what started in Thessalonica when Paul was there 10 months earlier! I remember when I first really got serious about surrendering my life to the Lord at 19, I wanted to share about Him. I looked for opportunities among my college classmates. I prayed for opportunities with the people I knew and I saw several people come to Jesus in those early days. I remember what a thrill that was to see God work and arrange Divine appointments and change hearts. Paul rejoiced over how these folks had so passionately shared the Good News about the Lord and were continuing to do so. But that was not the only thing that had become known:

d. the testimony of their lives also “radiated” everywhere (7, 8b-9) Throughout the whole region everybody was talking about the tremendous change that had come over this group in Thessalonica, how they had thrown away their idols and were serving Jesus and living morally clean lives. The whole story of how Paul had come and they had believed was already being told and retold all over the place, so much so that Paul didn't need to add anything to what people already knew! When Paul was transformed by Jesus, his reputation spread all over his home region. He says, I was personally unknown to the churches of Judea that are in Christ. They only heard the report: “The man who formerly persecuted us is now preaching the faith he once tried to destroy.” The testimony of the tremendous change in him spread widely even to those who didn't know him. The same happened to the Thessalonians and the same will be true of us. The testimony of the change in our lives will radiate far and wide; our love for Christ will become widely known and impact and encourage others.

Paul truly rejoiced to see his beloved children in the faith having a love for Jesus that was so zealous that the message and their reputation had spread far and wide in such a short time. But his thanksgiving was not done:

3. he prayerfully reveled in their future focus, in their “steadfastness of hope” (3c) When he was with them, he had taught them the simple basic truths of the faith and one of those is this: Jesus IS coming again. And Timothy must have reported to Paul how everyone knew that the Thessalonians were:

a. they were waiting patiently, expecting Jesus to come again (10) These crazy people were living in hope; they were staking their all on something that they were absolutely certain was going to happen in the future. And none of the difficulties and pressures that they were enduring was enough to shake that hope. You see, they believed that:

(1) Jesus is God's living Son, as was proved by His resurrection We celebrate that at Easter, but I sometimes wonder whether we really get the message. If Jesus is risen then He's ALIVE right now! He's not just a historical person who came and died for our sins and rose long ago, He's alive right now. We can talk to Him; He can talk to us! And one day:

(2) He will literally come down “from the heavens” just as He left When God's plan for this age is all wrapped up and finished, He will get up off His throne in heaven and come back for us! Oh, hardly nobody believes that any more. Large segments of the Christian church have virtually abandoned the concept for all practical purposes. Jesus is only there for us after we die “spiritually” - maybe; the world will just go on and on as it is. No, no, no, He's living, in a glorious, real, resurrected body and one day He is going to rend the heavens and come down. In fact, He's going to come with all the armies of heaven and set up His Kingdom and rule on the earth! How's that for alive and real! Our Jesus is real enough that He's going to show up in person and we, like the Thessalonians, are just crazy enough to believe He's coming and be waiting expectantly for it to happen! But there's more; Paul says:

b. they were confident that He will deliver us from the “coming wrath” Now what does that mean? Well, Paul taught clearly, John taught clearly, in fact JESUS taught clearly that:

(1) a time is coming when God will pour out His wrath on the human race for their utter rebellion against Him. We call it the Tribulation Period or the Great Tribulation, as Jesus described it. From Revelation and Daniel, we know that this awful time of trouble will last for 7 years and that it will immediately precede Jesus' return to the earth to set up His thousand year reign which we call the Millennium. It will be an awful time, Jesus taught, unlike anything the world has ever seen before or since - and the world has already seen some awful stuff! It will be so bad, He said, that if God had not limited it and cut it short, the entire human race would be destroyed. However, the Thessalonians were not looking to enter and go through that horrible time. Rather, Paul had taught them to believe that:

(2) by His coming Jesus will rescue us “away from” that awful period. The Greek uses a special preposition. Jesus is coming from (the ordinary word, from) heaven, but He is coming to deliver us, to rescue us away from (a different preposition) that time of wrath. He's not going to protect and preserve us to live through it; He's going to come and lift us out of this world to Himself before it ever starts. We call that the Rapture of the Church. Like the Thessalonians, we're not only crazy enough to believe Jesus will come again, but to believe that He will take us all up into the air to meet Him and go safely to heaven with Him, while the unbelieving world endures the awful wrath of God! Why? Because ...God has not destined us for wrath, but to obtain salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ -5:9! Hallelujah! Jesus is coming for us!

Oh, how glad Paul was that they got that and they believed that and they were living like they believed that. He rejoiced every time he prayed for them because of all these things, so in his letter:

III. Paul Assured Them These Responses Prove God Has Chosen Them to belong to Him (4). Because of their work of faith, their labor of love and their endurance of hope, because everybody knew these things about them, Paul says, "I KNOW that you are genuine, that you are real, that you are actually among the elect, the ones God has chosen to belong to Him forever. Their transformed lives were the evidence of their tremendous privilege of belonging to Jesus for real. His heart was settled and assured concerning them at last.

Let me ask you a question. If Paul knew you and was remembering you and was getting news about you, would he have that same assurance? Is there in your life a deep faith that produces works? Is there a fervent love that serves Christ with joy and spreads the word concerning Him and your own testimony everywhere you go? And is there a steadfast looking for Jesus to come again from heaven and take you to be with Him? A. B. Simpson says Christ's return can be viewed by believers in at least two ways. He writes, "There is a looking FOR it and a looking AT it. We may regard it with a keen intellectual interest and yet have it mean nothing to us personally. On the other hand, we may know little about the theology involved in the subject and still enjoy a deep longing for the Lord's appearing. Let me illustrate. When a wedding occurs, the public looks AT it, but the bride has been looking FOR it. May the theme of the return of Christ not only be our study but also our personal hope, for 'unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation.'" An unknown poet has written:

*"What would He find, should He come just now;
A faded leaf or a fruitless bough;
A servant sleeping, an idle plow;
What would He find should He come just now?
What would He find should He come tonight,
Your garment soiled or a spotless white;
Your lamps all burning or with no light;
What would He find should He come tonight?"*

Thessalonians: Jesus Is Coming!

Effectively Making Disciples - 1 Thess. 2:1-12

I shared with you last week as we began our study of 1 Thessalonians that these two letters are very personal in nature, that Paul was constantly praying for these dear new believers in Thessalonica and remembering the special time he had with them there as they first came to faith in Jesus. I mentioned that one of the concerns Paul had was that evidently some enemies were trying to discredit him so that the believers would be tempted to think less of him and of the message that he had brought to them, which they had believed. That's what prompts Paul to begin the second chapter with this thought in verse (1). The NET translates more clearly: For you yourselves know, brothers and sisters, about our coming to you – it has not proven to be purposeless. "You know that it was effective because it changed your lives!" To the Corinthians Paul wrote something similar, If to others I am not an apostle, at least I am to you, for you are the seal of my apostleship in the Lord. - 1 Cor. 9:2. In other words, "YOU, the fact that YOU have become what you are, fervent followers of Jesus with transformed lives, YOU are the proof, the seal, the guaranteeing evidence that I am a genuine servant of Christ and that my coming to you was effective!" Paul's brief ministry to the Thessalonians was indeed powerfully effective, as we saw in chapter 1, so, as he goes on to review in more detail what his time among them was like, we can apply that to our own lives. As he reviews in verses (2-6) the way in which he came to Thessalonica and shared the Gospel with those who were interested, we can see:

I. The Qualities That Make Us Effective In Sharing With Non-believers Let's read (2). First of all, to be effective:

1. our sharing must be bold, undaunted by fear of consequences As I told you last time, Paul came to Thessalonica from Philippi. If you remember the story, Paul and Silas cast a demon out of a slave woman and her owners dragged them into the marketplace to the magistrates who literally tore their clothes off of them and had them beaten with rods as a punishment. This was a Roman form of punishment but it could not be applied to Roman citizens, as it was considered degrading. One source says: The rods were usually made of birch wood, and the Roman soldiers would beat their victims mercilessly all over their entire body. [<http://jerichoventures.com/beaten-with-rods/>]. Acts says they were beaten with MANY blows and then, cut and bleeding, severely bruised and in terrible agony, they dragged them into the town prison and fastened their feet in wooden stocks so that they couldn't move or stand up and left them there to spend the night in the cold! That's what Paul means when he says, we had already suffered and been shamefully treated at Philippi! Now, if that had just happened to you, and you walked 100 miles down the road to the next town, do you think you would be a little more hesitant to get up in public and preach? I probably would, but Paul wasn't; he immediately got up three sabbath days in a row and preached Jesus in the synagogue and kept on going afterward! The fear that suffering might come (again) didn't hinder him at all! Of course, here we're not so much afraid of physical suffering if we share, yet often things like embarrassment, rejection, discrimination or something like that make us afraid to share with others. And that is Satan's tool to stop us from sharing our life-giving message. Now, I'm not saying that you have to accost everyone you meet wherever you go and obnoxiously foist yourself upon them as some believers do. I'm just saying that if we want to be effective in sharing, we have to be unafraid to take risks, to not live in fear of what might happen. Then Paul says this (3). Second principle:

2. our sharing must never come out of wrong motives, just like Paul. He mentions three of them:

a. we must be sure our message contains no error, that all of what we are communicating about Jesus is true and that we do our best to make sure our listeners don't misunderstand what we're saying. When we stand up and say, "Come to Jesus and He will absolutely heal you if you only have enough faith" or "Jesus will give you absolutely anything you pray for because He wants His children to be materially prosperous", we misrepresent Jesus. And there are believers all over the world doing irreparable damage to hearts and lives because they are bent on spreading their pet error along with the truth! You may not realize how I try to make sure that everything I say to you is true; I try to even verify every illustration I use as much as possible, to double check any statistics I share, to dig deeply to be certain of what a word or a verse really means, to make sure that I'm not spreading error along with the truth because truth matters very much to God. We must be sure we're not promoting error. Next:

b. we must be sure our lives contain no impurity That is, we must be people who have integrity, who live the way that we SAY people should live. Our walk must match our talk. If there is a hint of immoral desire or of dishonesty or of hot temper or any other unholy quality, it will invalidate our message. As Ralph Waldo Emerson put it, "What you do speaks so loudly that I cannot hear what you say." And not only will it keep people from hearing, it will dishonor the reputation of the Lord Jesus whom we are trying to share with them! And finally:

c. we must be sure our methods contain no deception, no trickery. All the time in Kyrgyzstan new believers are accused of "selling their religion"; the culture assumes they must have been paid to convert. Among poor cultures like those in India or Africa we must beware of making "rice Christians", people who choose to believe what we say and join us because we feed them or give some other personal advantage. Jungle villages in the Amazon want their own missionary couple to come because they get machetes and axes and trade goods. Like Paul, we must be careful never to lure people toward believing with false promises or improper expectations. Third, look at verse (4). Paul says that:

3. our sharing must come from an overwhelming drive to please God That must be our deepest and most profound motive. We share the Good News with others, not even as much out of concern for them and their eternal destiny, as out of an overpowering desire to do what God has asked us to do. Notice it says:

a. He entrusted us with delivering the Gospel message That is a sacred trust. It's on the order of knowing the cure for cancer or aids, something that could save millions of lives. We can't fail to deliver the news of something so vital and God put the responsibility for delivering His Good News to the world squarely in our hands. He signed off on choosing us to do it and left it with us, so:

b. our first concern must be to please Him who knows our very hearts by sharing it with the people who so desperately need it. Then Paul mentions three things, things that are really issues of the heart, that cannot be part of our sharing. The first is in (5a):

(1) we cannot share because we seek acceptance by people What is flattery? It's when you praise somebody insincerely for your own interests, to ingratiate yourself with them and be accepted by them. Our first concern for nonbelieving people can never be that we want them to like us and accept us and stop rejecting us or being offended by our message. It can't be that in our hearts we really want them to like us and that's why we want to see them believe. It's about them liking Jesus. Secondly, look at (5b):

(2) we cannot share because we seek gain from people, because we want something from them in some fashion, because we hope that if they believe they'll be a help to us in some way. It can't be that in our hearts we really want them to do something for us; it's about them serving Jesus. And thirdly, look at (6a). Paul says:

(3) we cannot share because we seek praise from people, because when we do, they complement us or say nice things about us that make us feel good. It can't be so that we'll be thought to be religious or pious or godly by them; it's about them giving praise to Jesus, not us.

It can be such a subtle thing that creeps in. Pride and self-centeredness are never far from us, even when we are doing something so important, something that is not about us, because sin still lives in our flesh.

Well, now Paul moves on to remind the Thessalonians about the way in which he lived among them once they had come to faith, so as we look at verses (6b-12) we can learn from him:

II. The Qualities That Make Us Effective In Discipling New Believers, in helping them grow and mature and gradually change into the image of Christ. I should point out that since there are neither verse numbers nor punctuation in the Greek, there is some debate as to whether the thought in the end of verse 6 really belongs with the first part of the verse or with the first part of verse 7, so I'm going to read it that way (6b-7). The first principle Paul gives us for growing new believers is that:

a. we must nourish them with tender patience like a nursing mother caring for her own baby. Parents don't get angry at their baby when he messes his diaper or when he throws up on their shoulder. They don't treat him roughly when he cries because he disturbs their sleep or wants them to feed him. We're always tender, we're always soft and gentle with an infant and careful to do for him all the things that nourish him so that he will grow. And that's how we should be with people who are infants in the faith. That gentle, loving, tender treatment is what will help them mature and grow in Jesus, whether we're talking about discipling our own children or others that have recently come to faith. That's why Paul chose not to do the opposite, to demand that they now stop everything they were doing and immediately do everything in a new and different way. He's showing us that:

b. we ought not demand behavior in an authoritarian manner We can't use our authority as those who gave them the message to order them about and tell them that now they must do this and that. It is so easy for them to learn to perceive their new faith as a religion of do's and don'ts, to make it about rules instead of a loving relationship with Jesus in which we seek to please Him in all things. When you demand things in an authoritarian fashion, you may get obedience for a time, but eventually you'll get rebellion or create frustration. Gentle, patient love is what really bears fruit. Second, let's read verse (8). Paul admonishes us that:

2. we must share our lives with them, not just the message Chuck Swindoll writes, "For a number of years after I became a Christian, I messed around with spiritual things... I ran around with church folks, I learned the God-talk, I sang the hymns, I even memorized the verses. I prayed pretty good prayers, I carried my Bible to church Sunday after Sunday, I sang in the choir... But my life was MY life... I was a Christian, but certainly not a disciple." Then he joined the Marines and he testifies, "While overseas I met a man who saw behind my tough mask and was determined to help me come to terms with the Christ I claimed as my Savior. He disciplined me. Month after month, we met together, talked together, played ball together, laughed together, wept and prayed together, studied the Scriptures and witnessed for Christ together. Like Jesus with His men, this man took the time to help me peel off my mask of religion and absorb the authentic message of Christ. I found myself slowly changing down deep inside. I got to the place where I hated the hypocrisy of my former religious lifestyle. I got into the Scriptures on my own, and they became my bread and meat. I even addressed the priorities, the goals, and the objectives of my life. I opened each door of my inner house to let Christ in, room after room. Not suddenly, but slowly. Quietly." [Strengthening Your Grip by Charles Swindoll. Word, 1982. Pages 123-125.] That's what I think Paul is talking about. It's not enough to simply teach people what Jesus wants; we must live life together with them under all kinds of circumstances so that our lives literally "rub off" on theirs! And as we're doing it:

a. we must long for their growth to maturity That's what Paul means when he says he was affectionately desirous of them. He longed for them to grow up in their salvation, to change, to mature, to bloom to become all that Jesus wanted them to be. And that longing is a longing based on love for them. That's what Paul means when he says ...you became very dear to us...

b. we must come to love them unconditionally They must literally become beloved. That word dear has the word agape in it; we must love them more dearly than ourselves, sacrificially, putting them first, the way Jesus loves us! That's what will really rub off on them and mature them! Then look at verse (9). There's another principle:

3. we must not become dependent on them as we're teaching them How was Paul going to survive as he came to Thessalonica? He certainly didn't have much money with him and there was no "support structure" for his missionary endeavors. He either had to depend on the hospitality of those who believed or to work and earn money. So he chose to work and to work hard at his craft, which was making tents. Everybody needs a tent, don't you know? Why did he do this? He didn't want to burden the new believers with supporting him, even though that would have been entirely proper. He didn't want them to have even the opportunity to get the idea that he was profiting by their faith, that he had come to them to "get something" from them. So, he taught them even as he worked night and day! We must be careful in the same way to be sure that we are not a burden on those we are discipling in the faith, that we are not depending on them to help us or meet our needs, whether physical or emotional, in a way that they could misconstrue. And of course:

4. we must be an example of holy, righteous and blameless conduct (10) The word holy here refers to the fact that we must be an example in our devotedness to God. Righteous refers to our right and just conduct toward other people and blameless means that we live so that no one can point a finger at us and charge us with doing something wrong. If we want them to grow to exhibit the character of Christ and the fruits of the Spirit, we have to model that kind of godly behavior in front of them and together with them, on an ongoing basis. And finally, look at (11-12). Paul says:

5. we must train them as a good father does his children We must be tender with them like a mother but at the same time train them and shape them like a father, and Paul spells out three aspects of that. First, exhorting means:

a. we must passionately urge them to live in a manner worthy of God, like a father continually urges his children to remember what God wants of them. That phrase worthy of God is worth pausing to ponder. Since we belong to God and we represent God, we must always live in a way that not only pleases Him, but represents Him well. He has called us to belong to His Kingdom. He has called us to share in His glory. He is coming to take us to be with Him and experience it. We should live in a manner befitting all that God has done and will do with us! What a great principle to instill in your kids as you have opportunity in every teaching moment God gives you, as well as in new believers! Second, like a father:

b. we must tenderly comfort and encourage them in their trials They will fail; they will mess up. They will fall back into old ways and habits at first. They will yield to temptation. And a good father, instead of condemning them, will encourage them to do better next time, to lean on the Holy Spirit instead of their own strength. Failures will become teaching moments. They will also endure painful suffering in life, maybe even persecution, and a good father is there to put his arms around them and comfort them and console them, urging them to hold to the faith and keep on. And lastly, like a good father:

c. we must testify to them of our personal experience with God That word charge is literally to testify to. We have to tell them what we have seen and heard and learned of God. We have to tell them the great things God has done for us, how He saved us, how He answered our prayers, how He rescued us and healed us and protected us. Any good father is a story teller and his children love it. So do young believers. We must tell them of the great works of God that we have seen to build up their own faith!

Yes, it seems that effectively making disciples is a lot like raising children! And conversely, raising children actually IS making disciples of them! An unknown author describes the role of a good father like this:

He teaches kindness by being thoughtful and gracious even at home.

He teaches patience by being gentle and understanding over and over.

He teaches honesty by keeping his promises to his family even when it costs. He teaches courage by living unafraid with faith, in all circumstances.

He teaches justice by being fair and dealing equally with everyone.

He teaches obedience to God's Word by precept and example as he reads and prays daily with his family.

He teaches love for God and His Church as he takes his family regularly to all the services.

His steps are important because others follow.

I think that's essentially what Paul is trying to say to us about being effective in making disciples, whether they are our own children or others we have brought to Christ. We teach with our lives even more than our words and each step we take is important because others follow. It's a huge responsibility to say as he did: Be imitators of me, as I am of Christ. - 1 Cor. 11:1. Are we willing to truthfully say that?

Enduring In The Face Of Persecution - 1 Thess. 2:13-20, 3:3-4

As we continue our study of 1 Thessalonians in chapter 2, Paul is continuing to look back at the brief time he spent with them there in Thessalonica and remembering the persecution that erupted there. Acts 17 tells us that after only three weeks, so many people had believed Paul and joined in meeting with him that the Jews became so jealous and angry about his message that he was forced to quit speaking in the synagogue and only meet with the new disciples in their homes. Then, after only a few weeks more, the Jews became so upset that they gathered some troublemakers and formed a mob, attacking one of the house meetings in Jason's house, obviously looking for Paul. They had hoped to drag him out and let the mob deal with him physically, but since he wasn't there, they dragged Jason and some others of the group before the authorities, creating an uproar in the whole city in the process. The magistrates fined them and released them, but now the whole city was set against them and that's the hostile environment in which this fledgling church was left to grow when Paul left town. And that didn't go away, yet still the church grew and multiplied and its influence was felt throughout two whole provinces. So how is that possible? How do we endure persecution when it comes, as the Thessalonians did, despite the fact that they were so young in the faith? Paul gives them and us several very important truths in his letter and the first one is in verse (13).

I. Our Foundation: The Message We Believed Is The Very Word of God When Paul preached at Athens later on, the Athenians responded by saying, ..."May we know what this new teaching is that you are presenting? For you bring some strange things to our ears. We wish to know therefore what these things mean." - Acts 17:19-20. To them the Gospel was just some new idea, some "strange things" they had never heard before, some "new teaching" that somebody dreamed up. When the Thessalonians heard Paul's message, in their hearts they said, "This is God's message; this is HIS word. It is truth." And they believed it! That is the fundamental issue that every one of us has to face before anything else. Is the message which is now written down for us and contained in this Book, actually the Word of God, the very WORDS of God Himself or not?

1. it is vital that we grasp that it is not merely the words of men Now, you have to realize that for many centuries most people who knew about it, thought it WAS the Word of God; some simply chose to defy it anyway! But about 1900 a movement arose in Europe which is known as the "Higher Criticism" of the Bible. Its basic premise was that the Bible is a human book written by fallible human authors and, while they might have some good things to say, ultimately, WE must decide what parts of it are truly from God and what parts can be disregarded because we now know better. That movement spread like wildfire. The college I went to taught the Bible like that. The seminary I attended taught it like that. The majority of colleges and a good number of seminaries in the US today teach it like that. In pulpit after pulpit across our land and even in other regions of the world, that's the way it is presented. It is "inspiring" but we only believe those parts that "inspire" us! Each one of us has to choose for ourselves. Is this the actual Word of God Himself or is it merely some good human words? If that's all we believe it is, it will have little effect and little impact on our lives and it surely will not sustain us when somebody says they're going to kill us if we don't stop believing it. But if we believe this Word truly is from God, as the Thessalonians did:

2. because it is God's word, it works powerfully in our lives Knowing what GOD says is powerful and when we yield to it, it transforms us. It changes our lives and our behavior. It sustains us when we face trouble and suffering. If we are convinced that what God says is true, then we live in that as our reality and that gives us power to stand firm when others try to dissuade us or even harm us and hate us. If we are right with God and know what He says about us, His love for us, our salvation and our eternal future, then nothing else in the world matters as much as that and we are able to stand firm and endure, even when persecution comes. Paul was so thankful to know that the Thessalonians were standing on the Word as he went on to verse (14). Here we see:

II. Our Heritage: The Suffering Of Persecution The early believers in Jerusalem and Judea were the first to experience persecution. It began with the ruling council, the Sanhedrin, arresting the apostles, but soon Stephen was stoned and at that point serious persecution broke out. Believers fled out of the city into the Judean towns to escape it. And at the root of it was Saul (now Paul) himself in those early days, leading the charge, pursuing them everywhere to drag them off to jail and worse. Paul knew firsthand what he had done. And now, he says, the same thing had happened to the Thessalonians. In the same way, their own countrymen were now making life hard for them and persecuting them and, like the Jewish believers before them, they were also standing firm. Now I'd like to skip ahead to the third chapter and look at just two verses, because in them Paul explains what he had already taught the Thessalonians and from it we can learn:

1. what is true about us - 3:3-4 Read those words carefully. Paul says:

a. we are destined to suffer persecution It is not simply that it is inevitable; we are destined to suffer it; we are appointed to have to face it by God Himself. It is our lot, our very heritage as Christians. All genuine believers face persecution for their faith at some level. Look with me at 2 Tim. 3:12. It is not just for believers who live in certain parts of the world; it is for all of us. Open Doors says, Christian Persecution is any hostility experienced from the world as a result of one's identification with Jesus Christ... Jesus also defines the word for us in Luke 6:22 using four verbs. He says, "Blessed are you when men HATE you, when they EXCLUDE you and INSULT you and REJECT YOUR NAME as evil, because of the Son of Man." So, when someone holds animosity toward you because of your faith, when they discriminate against you and refuse to help you, when they insult you and call you names, or when they count you as being evil and wrong, all of those things that we might experience here are persecution, as well as the torture, murder, rape, and imprisonment that our brothers and sisters suffer in some places around the world. Never assume that severe persecution cannot happen here; it easily can. and maybe will, depending on the direction our country takes. But regardless, all of us will experience persecution to some degree or other in our lives. Therefore, just as Paul had taught this to the Thessalonians very early on:

b. we have been taught this and must expect it The New Testament teaches this everywhere. After Paul had been stoned earlier at Lystra, he got up and went back into the city and, in fact, to the last three cities where he had been run out of town, strengthening the souls of the disciples, encouraging them to continue in the faith, and saying that through many tribulations we must enter the kingdom of God. - Acts 14:22. He taught these new believers to expect troubles and persecutions like the ones he had just experienced, that it is our lot and our destiny to experience these things before we finally enter our home in God's Kingdom at last. That was a large part of Paul's discipleship course! In the Upper Room before He died, Jesus taught His disciples the same thing. Look at Jn. 15:18-20. You don't find that in many of the study helps for new believers! I don't ever remember hearing a Sunday School teacher give a lesson on it or even a pastor preach it. Yet Jesus and Paul taught it as basic information, "If you sign up to follow Jesus, you sign up to fight in a war and the enemy WILL throw everything he has at you including persecution; expect it!" It is natural; it is normal. It is the way things are. And:

c. this knowledge keeps us from being shaken by it The Scripture tells us this ahead of time so that we will expect it before it happens, recognize it when it occurs and our faith won't be shaken by it. Peter said, Beloved, do not be surprised at the fiery trial when it comes upon you to test you, as though something strange were happening to you. - 1 Pet. 4:12. Persecution is not strange; it is normal! And through it God will prove both to you and to the world that your faith is the genuine article. He will get glory through your testimony! That's what's true about us. Now let's return to chapter 2 where we can see:

2. what is true about those who persecute us (14b-16) Here Paul is continuing to spell out what the Jews did in their persecution and I'd like to apply it by saying that what was true of them is true of everyone who persecutes us believers in any time and place. First of all:

a. their kind killed and persecuted those who went before us Those who went before us endured the same thing. The Old Testament prophets experienced it. Persecutors sawed Isaiah in half; they threw Jeremiah into a cistern to die. Zechariah (not the author of the Old Testament book) was slain in the Temple itself. Others they persecuted and drove out. Our Lord Jesus Himself they crucified! And people like that drove Paul out of Thessalonica and a great majority of the other places he ever visited for very long! Down through the ages they have thrown us to lions and burned us at the stake and beheaded us on the shores of Libya. When we endure persecution of whatever sort, we stand in a long line of the faithful who have endured for Jesus' sake. Jesus said, Blessed are you when others revile you and persecute you and utter all kinds of evil against you falsely on my account. Rejoice and be glad, for your reward is great in heaven, for so they persecuted the prophets who were before you. In other words, you're in good company, the best company, the company of all the faithful witnesses that have gone before and stood the test. You are one of them and great will be your reward! Second our persecutors:

b. they displease God even though they think they are pleasing Him Jesus said, ...in fact, a time is coming when anyone who kills you will think he is offering a service to God. - Jn. 16:2. That time has already come many times in history and you're seeing it again now. Terrorists fly planes into buildings thinking they are pleasing God and slit the throats of believers to shock the world because they believe Allah is thrilled! But God is NOT pleased when people like this harm His children! He is GREATLY displeased and what makes it worse is:

c. they are enemies of all men because they hinder our saving efforts Their hostility keeps the Gospel from being preached and in essence, sends people to an eternity without Christ. If government and religious leaders would just get out of the way in places like the Middle East and China and Central Asia and a host of other lands, literally millions could be swept into the Kingdom! Persecutors of Christians are in reality enemies to all of mankind, but Paul says:

d. their sins are piling up and up and up, however, God has a limit and when their sins have expanded to their fullness, to all that God will tolerate, God's wrath will fall upon them. That's true of particular individuals and groups. God only tolerates their persecuting of His children so long before they meet their doom. That phrase points especially to that end time period we call the tribulation when God will pour out His wrath powerfully on a world that has rejected His message of salvation and persecuted His children, piling up their sins to the limit so that He cannot wait in mercy any longer. And the Scripture says, It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. - Heb. 10:31. They may be free to make us suffer today, but unless they repent, their doom is coming, because Jesus is coming! And still we're called to love our enemies, to pray for them and to seek their salvation in spite of all they do to us!

Now Paul shifts gears in our text. He begins to talk about the thing that broke his heart in it all. And in that we are able to see:

III. Our Heartache: The Enduring Of Separation (17-18) That persecution in Thessalonica had forced Paul to be separated from those he loved:

1. persecution often separates us from one another Millions of us around the world have literally been driven away from our towns, our homes and our loved ones as refugees. Hostile governments and officials keep us from being near those we love in Jesus. Paul uses a special word in (17a) where he says he was torn away from them. The Greek term contains the word orphan in the middle of it. They were literally orphaned, left without a parent when he was driven out. So, when persecution comes and we are driven apart, in one sense:

a. it is actually a form of bereavement The pain of being cut off is like losing someone altogether in death. There is a deep grieving that we experience, as Paul did, and yet:

b. it does not quench the love that we have for one another Our hearts are still bound as one, even though we can't be with each other or communicate with each other. And on top of the separation:

2. our desire for reunion may be repeatedly thwarted Paul says he deeply wanted to come back to them, that he tried for months to make a way to return to them, not just once, but again and again, yet through one circumstance or another he was just never able to do it. And he describes this frustrating process by saying at the end of verse 18 that:

a. Satan is the immediate cause of hindering us I personally wish Paul had explained exactly how Satan hindered him, but I'm sure that he used both hostile people and adverse circumstances to do it. Satan is at the root of driving people to try to stop our ministry and lining up circumstances to stop us from serving Christ or from being reunited with those we love in the Lord. He does everything he can possibly do to hurt us and thwart the work of God from going forward, but:

b. ultimately God chooses to allow these hindrances to happen Satan is not in control. God limits what he can do to serve His greater purpose. Therefore, God allowed Paul to be hindered from going back to Thessalonica for reasons and purposes known only to Him and Paul had to accept that. So must we. When persecution, hostility and adverse circumstances keep us from ministering and serving and being joined to people we love in the Lord, it has not taken God by surprise; He may have let Satan do these things, but ultimately, He has a plan and a purpose and we must trust Him to fulfill it, regardless of whether our earthly longings ever get satisfied or not. And we can do that for the reason expressed in (19-20). Didn't I tell you? Jesus is coming! And:

3. our great longing for each other will be fulfilled at Jesus' coming When we stand reunited with one another before His throne, that will be our joy; that will be our glory, the thing that makes us shout praise to God; that will be our great reward, our crown that makes us boast, "See, it was worth it all!" That is our hope, the thing we have fixed our eyes upon with absolute certainty and the thing we are willing to endure torments of the enemy to reach. We will stand together around His throne, forever reunited, never to part again.

So don't lose hope! Don't give up! Keep standing firm on God's Word! Jesus is coming and when He does, it will be worth it all! On Feb. 15 the world watched in horror as ISIS militants lined up 21 captured believers on the seashore in Libya and tortured and beheaded them. It was intended to strike fear into the hearts of the whole world, but especially of Christians. It was to send the powerful message, "We are coming for YOU!" But Sam Solomon, himself a convert from Islam, writes this: Unbeknownst to the executioners, this apocalyptic moment-by-moment staged filming of the process of torture and beheading of these 20 Christian workers from Egypt and one from Africa accomplished what for ISIS was an unwanted and unforeseen result—as it echoed in living color the prophecy in Revelation that foretold this event as recorded in the vision by the Apostle John from his captivity on the island of Patmos, "... and I saw the souls of those who had been beheaded because of their testimony about Jesus, and because of the word of God..." (Rev. 20:4). Thus, the intended "victory" proclaimed by their executioners was instantly and permanently nullified by the steadfast voices of the 21 -- putting their trust in Christ to sustain them, not in whispers but in shouts, "Yasouh, Yasouh, Jesus, Jesus", even as the deed was being done—literally for the world to see and hear!! And we know this was not the end of the story, according to the promise of our Lord in Rev. 2:10, "...Be faithful, even to the point of death, and I will give you life as your victor's crown." <http://www.christianconcern.com/our-concerns/international-persecution/victory-over-isis-found-in-last-words-uttered-by-christians>. Like the great company of witnesses that had gone before them, from the apostles and the Thessalonians down through history, they stood firm and would not deny the Lord who bought them, staking their eternity on being with Jesus and the fact that one day Jesus is coming in glorious victory to set up His Kingdom. Oh, all that we have seen this morning should encourage us to stand firmly for Him wherever He puts us in life and share His message!

Encouraging Those Who Face Persecution - 1 Thess. 3

As Paul was laboring diligently for the Lord in Corinth, his mind was continually on those dear new believers 300 miles to the north in Thessalonica that he had been so suddenly torn away from 10 months earlier. His mind was in agony over them because of the serious persecution which had driven him away and which he knew they had to live with all this time. Had they stood firm in their faith in Jesus and what could he do to help them? These questions plagued him. Earlier, from Athens, he had sent Timothy back to do whatever he could to help them and to bring him back a report of how they were doing to calm his own fears. And sure enough, Timothy arrived where Paul was at Corinth and brought him just a glowing report and out of the joy of that arrival comes this first letter that he wrote them and particularly this third chapter of it. Paul's words in this chapter are tender and personal, written as it seems by a father for his children, but, as with everything in Scripture, it was also written for our edification. We can learn from it. So, as we see Paul's care for these dear believers who faced persecution, we can learn a great deal about:

I. The Deep Concern We Should Have For Those Who Face Persecution I'm afraid that we here think that there are very few who face it, but the Ethics and Religious Liberty Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention shares the following five facts about Christian persecution. 1) Christians are the most persecuted religious group worldwide. An average of 180 Christians around the world are killed each month for their faith. 2) According to the U.S. Department of State, in more than 60 countries Christians face persecution from their governments or surrounding neighbors because of their faith in Christ. 3) One of the worst countries in the world for the persecution of Christians is North Korea. ...Christians in North Korea face the risk of detention in the prison camps, severe torture and, in some cases, execution for practicing their religious beliefs. 4) In 41 of the 50 worst nations for persecution, Christians are being persecuted by Islamic extremists. 5) Christians face persecution even in countries with a large Christian population. For instance, in Colombia Christian political rebels specifically target leaders because many people have left the rebel groups after coming to Christ. As of last November, according to Fox News, a total of 3.2 MILLION Christians and other religious minorities had fled their homes in Syria and Iraq, driven out by ISIS militants, and are living in refugee camps in surrounding nations! We cringe at statistics like those and think, "But what can we do, besides give money to relief organizations? How can we even pray effectively for such massive things?" So, think about those who are persecuted that we know. Our partner David Dayasagar in South India found this posted note recently, "Your Christianity is a 'PROBLEM', so our mission is 'RECONVERSION'. Now onwards NO CHRISTIANITY... NO BIBLE... Either convert or leave our 'HINDU NATION' soon. Will erase Christianity by 2021... We are ready to die for 'Hindu Nationalism'. David and all the HBA evangelists and the new believers in the villages live constantly be under the threat of violence. Our partner Pari lived under constant surveillance when she was in NW China and fear of deportation and had to meet in secret with any new believers. Our many friends in Kyrgyzstan, like my friend Almaz, are often threatened in the villages and not allowed to bury their dead in the cemeteries. Our partners Lamin and Nene Kante in Guinea have lived with threats from Muslim Fulani for years. For years David and Angela Morris helped believers who escaped from Iran to the island of Cyprus to find a new life. Persecution is closer to us than we think; it affects people that we know and love and when we realize that it moves us, the same way that it did Paul (1-2a) Just as Paul could not bear not knowing about the Thessalonians and not helping them any longer:

1. we ought to feel a strong internal compulsion to help those who face persecution We ought to be deeply moved, to the point where we can't resist doing something because we can't get their plight out of our minds and hearts. And if we have that genuine compassion:

2. we ought to be willing to endure personal sacrifice to help them Paul was willing to send Timothy back to Thessalonica (and Silas probably to Philippi) and to be left to share the Gospel alone in the big city of Athens. I would say that meant a willingness to face danger alone, considering how he'd been treated everywhere else. Helping them meant a personal sacrifice of his own comfort, help and probably, safety. And if we really care about those we know who face persecution, we will be willing to put them above ourselves and endure sacrifices of our own to help them. Now here's why this is so important. We need to understand:

II. The Grave Danger Of Those Who Face Persecution which Paul spells out for us in verses (2-5). Paul's great fear for them is the same for anyone in their shoes today. It is that:

1. Satan could shake the faith of some through their suffering Persecution is the work of Satan, but the real issue in it is not as much the actual things he does to people, as the way that he tempts them to think while they are enduring it. He wants to "shake" their faith the way a dog shakes his tail; he wants them to waver in their trust in Jesus Christ and to throw it away and here are some of the ways he does that. Obviously:

a. he tempts them to believe that the reward is not worth the pain When someone puts a gun to your head and says, "Convert to Islam or I kill you!" there is a great temptation to believe that faith in Jesus is not worth dying for. Through the centuries it has always been, "Deny Jesus and we won't throw you to the lions, we won't put you in the prison, we won't burn you at the stake, we won't shoot you or drive you out of your home." To stand firm they must continue to believe that the eternal reward is worth the pain they are experiencing here, whether that's the danger of loss of life, being shunned by the community, loss of job or whatever. In some people:

b. he tempts them to believe Jesus is too weak to help them "If Jesus is really God and really has all power, why doesn't He rescue me from this? Why did He let my husband die? Why does He let us be driven from our homes?" They are tempted to believe Jesus can't really help them and to go back to the gods of their persecutors who appear to be helping them! In other people:

c. he tempts them to believe Jesus doesn't care enough to help them "If Jesus really loved me, He would not let me endure this. He would not let me lose my child to a land mine or let my daughter be raped by the soldiers who came." In any suffering it is easy to become angry at God, rather than letting yourself experience His deep love in the midst of the pain. And then in a few people:

d. he tempts them to believe they somehow deserve the suffering, that somehow it is their fault, that if they had just been stronger or had more faith that their persecutors would not have the upper hand. He tries to get them to blame themselves.

This list of the ways that Satan tempts people who face persecution is not exhaustive, of course. He may tempt them to do or to believe all kinds of things in their suffering; he'll do anything to drag them away from trusting completely in Jesus and continuing to follow Him. The real issue is how we help them face this serious danger and one way is in verses 3-4:

2. teaching or reminding them that we are destined for suffering helps greatly We studied the truth in these verses last week, that persecution is actually something God has appointed us to experience and is a normal part of following Christ. Paul had taught the Thessalonians this back when he was among them and disciplining them; now he was reminding them of what they already knew. Being certain that the fiery ordeal is a part of God's plan for us and that He will walk through it with us and that it is designed for His glory and greater good is what sustains us during any suffering. So, helping people to really grasp and hang on to this truth, as Paul was trying to do here, is one way to help. But it takes more than teaching; when we suffer, we need people to stand alongside us and bear the burden with us. So, since Paul couldn't go, he sent Timothy to them in his place. That tells me that:

3. we are God's means to come alongside persecuted people as they are suffering Notice why Paul says he sent Timothy at the end of verse 2; the NIV says to strengthen and to encourage you in your faith. When we come into the picture alongside them, we do these two things. First:

a. we confirm their faith and steady them as they endure it We affirm together with them the truths they know, that Jesus DOES love them, that He IS powerful, that He uses our sufferings for His greater good in His plan. We strengthen them and help them to stand firm so that they don't listen to the tempter and waver. And second:

b. we comfort and console them in their pain and grief Suffering for Jesus hurts and it hurts severely. My friend Aziz found his young son hanging dead on a barn post one morning because he was the only believer in his village years ago. 20 years later there are still only 2 believing families there. Our brothers who suffer hurt deeply and they need encouragement and comforting and consoling. They need to be loved on by us, just as any of us do when we suffer. Now, how are we going to accomplish these two things for them? How can we strengthen them and also encourage them? Well:

c. we may do it by personally going to them like Timothy did Timothy went to Thessalonica in person and hugged and loved on and prayed with and taught and stood with these dear folks for a time and then went back to join Paul. We can do some of that today. When we go to India in the summer it is a tremendous encouragement to the HBA evangelists who suffer greatly in the work among the Yenadi in the villages and to the 50 or 60 faithful pastors of struggling little churches in the slums of the city of Hyderabad. When we go to Kyrgyzstan and spend time with dear believers there it is a tremendous encouragement to them to stand firm in their faith. Today there are ways we can actually make a hands-on difference personally, but more often:

d. we may do it by praying and writing from a distance like Paul did As we'll see a few verses later, the one thing Paul did to help them every day was to pray. That is tremendously important and we'll spend time on it in a few moments. But this very letter which Paul wrote must have been a tremendous means of confirmation and consolation to them when they got it. And today we are not only confined to paper letters. We have instant electronic communication all over the globe by email and skype and text and telephone. I talk with David Dayasagar by phone every two weeks or so at great length, thanks to Magic Jack; I write Pari pretty much weekly and she counts on that. I talk and pray with brothers in Kyrgyzstan by WhatsApp nearly every week and especially when they suffer. We can even send monetary gifts to help in emergencies by MoneyGram or Western Union as and have done so a number of times.

Of course, we can't personally encourage 3 million refugees, but we can certainly pray and we can give as God leads us to organizations like Voice of the Martyrs or Samaritan's purse who will actually go there in our place and bring real tangible help. They need us, but here's something we seldom think about: we also need them! Why? Because:

III. The Strong Faith Of Those Who Face Persecution Encourages Us (6-9) The wonderful report that Timothy brought back to Paul thrilled his heart and blessed him. And likewise:

1. we receive good reports about those who face persecution, reports of their firm faith, of their love and of their warmth toward us who care about them. You can find many of them on the internet, but I'll share just one: In Uganda a 14 year old girl named Susan believed in Christ when an evangelist came to her school. A month later, when her Muslim father found out that she had become a Christian, he locked her in a small room with no windows. Though he commanded her brother not to feed her, he tried to help his sister by roasting bananas when their father was away. He also dug a hole under the door where he could pour water through. "My sister could drink water using her tongue. But most days she could only feed on mud," he said. She was locked in that room for 6 months until finally the brother feared she would die and told a neighbor who called police who rescued her. She had lost use of her legs and spent 10 months in a hospital; today she lives with a family of Christian workers in Kenya and when asked how she is feeling, she confidently responds, "I am happy and not in pain. I would never leave my Jesus who died for me." [\[http://www.onewiththem.com/stories-of-persecution/susan/\]](http://www.onewiththem.com/stories-of-persecution/susan/) What do the many testimonies like Susan's do for us?

2. it encourages us to endure our own experiences of suffering Paul himself was comforted and encouraged to go and endure just as they had! So are we. Their faith in facing dreadful suffering shows us who have never been put to such a severe test that our Jesus really is real and that He is enough and that He will be with us and carry us through any suffering that we might have to endure for His sake. It confirms us and comforts us and helps us to stand firm and unshaken! And:

3. it fills us with joy and thanksgiving to God We read reports like this a lot of Wednesday nights in our World Watchers prayer group. And every time we hear one, it thrills our hearts and fills us with joy and we end up thanking God for all the wonderful, marvelous things He is doing in so many places around the world, just as Timothy's report about the Thessalonians thrilled Paul. It refreshes our own faith; it infuses fresh life into our own walk with Christ. But as we said earlier, one of the most important things we can do is to pray. And now in the end of the chapter Paul tells us:

IV. How We Should Pray For Those Who Face Persecution in verses (10-13). To begin with:

1. we should pray for them fervently and continually as Paul did (10a) "God, please bless our persecuted brothers" just won't cut it. As we hear news and reports of those who suffer for Christ, it should touch our hearts to pray for them with passion and earnestness and not just to pray once and then forget them. Especially for those we know, we should pray continually, that is frequently, whenever God brings them to mind. When Paul listed the long litany of all his sufferings for the Gospel in 2 Cor. 11, he ended by saying in verse 28, Besides everything else, I face daily the pressure of my concern for all the churches. Even in the midst of his own suffering, he was praying continually for the believers in all the churches he had planted, many of whom were suffering just as he was. That should be a model for us. Secondly:

2. we should pray for ways to encourage them personally (10b-11) Paul still prayed that he could go back and encourage them personally, and indeed, God did give him that privilege to visit several years later on his third missionary journey. It might not be appropriate for us to pray to visit personally, but we sure could pray for other ways that we can be personally involved. "God what would you have me to do, how would you have me involved, what do you want of me that would help and encourage these suffering folks?" Thirdly:

3. we should pray for them to increase and abound in love (12) Suffering can make you bitter and angry. You can still love Jesus, but it's easy to learn to hate the people who have hurt you or to learn to hurt others because you were hurt. Satan tries to use suffering to produce the opposite of what God wants, so it's important that we pray for brothers and sisters who have been badly hurt to be filled with love and to abound in it, both love for the others around them and even love for their very enemies. Fourth:

4. we should pray for them to remain holy and blameless (13a) Suffering can also drive you to sin. Hunger can make you steal; fear can make you lie. Being pursued could make you willing to murder someone, as it did David's men hiding in the cave with him who urged him, "Kill Saul, now's your chance!" Two wrongs never did make a right and being evil treated never justifies evil treatment. So, we need to pray for those who suffer that they will remain holy before God and not choose an evil path that men will bring blame against them for. And lastly, as we pray for that:

5. we should pray with a view to the coming of Jesus with all His saints (13) To remain firm means we need to fix our eyes on this one thing: Jesus is coming! That's what really matters. We may hurt and be in agony now, but Jesus is coming! We want Him to be pleased with us when He comes. So, we should pray that our suffering brothers and sisters will keep their eyes fixed on that grand day when all the saints of God, both they who have suffered and we who have supported them, will be together in Jesus' presence and what a joy that will be!

In a village in Ethiopia, a believer named Tamirat had a disagreement with a Muslim friend over money. That man assaulted him and accused him of insulting Islam so he cried out for help and people from a nearby village came to his rescue, however after learning the grounds for the assault, they turned on him as well. The local police arrested Tamirat and put him into a 13x13 foot cell with 40 other inmates. Inmates had to take turns to simply lie down. Tamirat felt alone and wondered whether God had forsaken him. He says, "The police wanted me to confess that I insulted Islam. The interrogator explained that if I confessed to the charges, he would let me go." Refusing to do this, Tamirat was given a form to sign, but the content was in Somali which he did not understand. Unaware of what it said, he went ahead and signed it. The next day in court Tamirat realized that he had signed a confession. Desperately pleading his innocence, the judge ordered him to be silent and gave his verdict; Tamirat was sentenced to three years in prison. "The first year in prison was the hardest," Tamirat says. "Sharing the cramped cell with fierce Muslim criminals I feared the reaction if my faith was exposed. But it was impossible to hide it for too long." Once it was discovered, a group beat him so severely he struggled to walk and eat for seven days afterwards. Isolated, he received no news and felt forgotten; he had no idea that his lawyer and friends were fighting for his appeal. "For many months I didn't know that Christians were praying for me," Tamirat said. Finally, his appeal went through. While in court, when the judge called Tamirat's name, out of the corner of his eye he saw men bowing their heads; he knew they were praying for him. For the first time in months an indescribable joy came over him. The judge changed his verdict saying that they could not find enough evidence to prove his guilt, but instead of releasing him, his sentence was reduced to two years... Five months later, after almost two years in prison, Tamirat was finally released to his wife and two daughters. He rejoiced saying, "May all glory be unto Him who has sustained and kept me through the dark hours. He has made me stronger and has built my faith. Thank you for your ongoing support, concern and prayers." <http://www.onewiththem.com/stories-of-persecution/tamirat-woldegorgis/> Tamirat's faith was sorely tested, but he was not shaken. His story encourages our faith. But above all, we can see the value of those who stood with him in fervent prayer and worked for his release. Let us be like them.

Living To Please God (Part 1) - 1 Thess. 4:1-12

With the words Finally, then... at the beginning of chapter 4, Paul moves from the personal section of his letter to the teaching and instructional content that he wants to give to the Thessalonian believers, and through them to us. These first 12 verses contain practical instructions for our daily living. I am calling these "Part 1" because when we reach the end of this letter, there are additional and similar instructions that we will call "Part 2". But they all fall under the same heading of "Living To Please God" and the reason is in verses (1-2). Paul had taught them a lot of things, given them a lot of instructions while he was with them, but he summed all of them up by saying this:

I. Our Primary Motivation In Daily Living Should Be To Please God Now, please note that it is one thing to know how we ought to live, to have a list of rules that tell us what is right and what is wrong; it is an entirely different thing to realize why those things on the list really matter. Our goal is not legalism; it is not to keep a list of rules, to behave in a certain way so as to get into heaven or to get brownie reward points with God or to avoid being punished. The point is that we WANT to please God! God has saved us; He has rescued us from the penalty of our sins by the blood of His own Son, Jesus. More than that, He has taken us and made us His own children who will live with Him forever and He has transformed us by placing His very Spirit inside of us to empower us. He's given us a new nature that wants to please Him and we should WANT to please Him! The strongest desire at the core of our being should be to please the One who died for us! Paul told the Corinthians, So whether we are at home [in the body] or away, we make it our aim to please him. - 2 Cor. 5:9. In light of all that God has done for us, our gratitude should be so great that pleasing Him is our very reason for living and we want everything we do in our lives to do just that. Now, coming from that viewpoint, we KNOW what pleases Him because:

1. we have instructions from the Lord Jesus through the Scripture Paul had those instructions from Jesus directly and also from the apostles who had lived with Him. He passed them on to the Thessalonians orally by teaching. Fortunately for us, godly men moved by the Spirit wrote them down and preserved them in a book, so that even today, 2,000 years later, we KNOW what pleases God and there can be no mistake about it. We know exactly what pleases God and what displeases Him about the way we live because He has told us, so if we truly WANT to please Him:

2. we should be growing in obedience to what we already know As we grow up and mature in our faith, we ought to be bringing our lives more and more into line with the things that we know please God. Granted, it's a process and it doesn't happen all at once. There are a lot of things about ourselves that we don't really see and it takes God a whole lifetime to reveal some of them so that we can really please Him in those areas. But then there are some things that are obvious and up front and in our faces that we recognize immediately. Paul goes on to spell out two areas in which we really need to please God and this first one is that sort of thing. In verses (3-8) Paul makes it very clear that:

II. God Has Told Us To Maintain Sexual Purity That is what pleases Him! Look at verse (3). Paul makes it very plain:

1. to live a holy life, a life that is set apart to God and pleases God, means to abstain from sexual immorality. That word in the Greek language is the word porneia (sound familiar?) and it refers to every form of sexual activity other than the legitimate union of a husband and wife. Now, it used to be here in the US that everyone knew what immorality is, but that is not true in this generation, so I hope you'll pardon me for being so specific, but I want to explain it in no uncertain terms. When God says He wants us to abstain from sexual immorality:

a. this means abstaining from all sex apart from marriage The King James had a good word that covered it all; it used to be called fornication. That means not having sex before you are married. It means not living together with someone without being married. It means no casual one night stands with strangers. It means not engaging in prostitution. Think of it this way. Marriage is like a box with a husband and wife inside it. All sexual activity belongs inside that box. Any sexual activity that is outside that box of a husband and wife in a marital relationship is illegitimate, wrong, sinful and utterly displeasing to God. Pleasing God means you stay sexually pure until you are married and if the marriage ends you remain pure afterward unless you should get married once again. Sexual activity is only to be done with your husband or wife, period, and if you don't have one of those, it is not to be done at all. Now, of course:

b. this includes not violating the marriage vow by engaging in sexual activity with someone other than your spouse while you are married. That's called adultery in Scripture and it is just another form of porneia. And the very sound of that word should remind us that immorality also:

c. this includes pornography, whether it's watching X rated videos or looking at pictures on the internet or in a magazine or going to this sort of a club. It is all outside of marriage and involves doing the act in your mind with some other person, even if you never touch them. Married men often try to justify this because, "Its only pictures!" No, it is lusting after and committing mental adultery with someone other than your wife and it is adultery just as much as the physical act and God is utterly repulsed by it just the same. And I have to mention that abstaining from immorality also:

d. this includes deviant sexual behaviors like homosexuality and some other repulsive sexual practices which are inappropriate to mention with young people present. I just want to reiterate again that homosexuals are not “born” that way; that is a lie our society has invented to justify behavior that God says is wrong. Porneia includes all of these behaviors, but the reason Paul had to talk about abstaining from them and that we also need to talk about it is that:

2. all of these are common practice in the culture surrounding us (4-5) The Greek and Roman culture of Paul's day was saturated with sexual activity. What God calls immorality was not only normal practice, but was encouraged behavior. Sacred prostitution was part of the worship of their pagan gods in their temples; that is, sex was a part of pleasing the gods! Men openly had mistresses and even homosexual lovers in Roman society. Parties became orgies and nobody saw anything wrong with it. That is how the Thessalonian believers themselves used to live before they came to Jesus. They were part of all those practices. So, when Christians abstained from all of these things and were pure, everyone around them saw them as different and strange. Peter wrote, For the time that is past suffices for doing what the Gentiles want to do, living in sensuality, passions, drunkenness, orgies, drinking parties, and lawless idolatry. With respect to this they are surprised when you do not join them in the same flood of debauchery, and they malign you. - 1 Pet. 4:3-4. Doesn't that sound like our own culture? Sex is everywhere, all over the media, even in so many of the commercials. It is lauded and encouraged on every hand. We are bombarded with suggestive images all the time. This generation of which we are a part has grown up being taught by everything around them that these things are NOT immoral, that they are normal and desirable and we have absorbed the message and are paying a dear price for it! Why? Because, Paul says in verse 5:

a. those who don't know God strive to fulfill the lusts of their bodies They don't know God so they don't have a frame of reference for right and wrong. They simply want to fulfill the drives that are in their own bodies, to maximize their own pleasure and satiate the rush that it gives them. They act much like the animals do by instinct. Just watch any stallion or bull around a herd of females, especially if any are in a condition of receptivity, and the females when they know their time is right go looking for the male. If you think about it, humans without the knowledge of God to restrain them often act no differently; they simply seek to fulfill the drive to mate as often and in any way they can! That's where our society is going more and more as we erase the Judeo-Christian moral foundation that it was built on. But we can't fall into that trap. Paul says in verse 4 that we must live differently:

b. we must learn to control our own bodies in holiness and honor By relying on the power of the Spirit of God who lives within us, we must learn to exercise the fruit of self-control, of choosing to fulfill the drives that God has placed within us only in the way that He intended, so that we live in a holy fashion and one that will bring honor to Him. Without going into it, you'll notice that the ESV and NIV have footnotes on verse 4 with an alternate reading suggesting that the Greek word translated body is also sometimes used to refer to a wife and if it does, it means that:

c. we men, particularly, must learn to live with our own wives in holiness and honor by keeping ourselves sexually pure, which is in reality saying the same thing. Now Paul gives us:

3. the reasons we must maintain sexual purity in the next 3 verses. First look at (6a):

a. sexual immorality wrongs the other people involved It takes something from the other person that does not belong to you. It steals something from the other person's husband or wife or even from their future husband or wife that they may have some day. It wrongs them. It also wounds them emotionally and creates scars they deal with for life rather than good memories that last a lifetime. Immorality hurts people even though they don't realize it at the moment. Second, (6b):

b. sexual immorality is sin and must be judged by God He is the avenger, the one who hands out the just punishment for evil deeds. He is the one who declares that those who do such things as sexual immorality and impurity and orgies and the like shall NOT inherit the Kingdom of God (2 Cor. 5:21) and that the sexually immoral will never be allowed into the Holy City (Rev. 22:15). So why would we even consider doing things that are sin against God, when Jesus Himself died for those very sins? Third, (7):

c. by saving us, God has called us to holiness, not impurity We are called to live a pure life. He didn't save us to live the way we always lived or to live the way everyone else lives. He saved us to live holy lives. And finally, (8):

d. rejecting this is rejecting God and it is violating His Spirit Look with me at 1 Cor. 6:13b-20. When believers sin sexually, we drag the Holy Spirit with us into that very evil He detests. We violate His temple, our body, which is supposed to be holy.

Why spend so much time emphasizing this? Because immorality is all around us; immorality is in the church, among believers; it is among US. It is in the lives of people that we know and love, among our friends and in our families. It needs to be proclaimed, not just by me, but by all of us, over and over; the will of God is for us to abstain from sexual immorality and be pure and if we really love Him with our hearts and want to please Him, that's how we will strive to live. Now in the next 4 verses Paul focuses on a second thing that pleases God. He says:

III. God Has Taught Us To Love One Another (9-10) Even though the command to love one another is found all over the place in the New Testament, what Paul is saying is that it is more than a mere command:

1. love for our brothers is an inborn trait God births in us - 1 John 3:14 says, We know that we have passed out of death into life, because we love the brothers. Whoever does not love abides in death. Love for each other is the very evidence that we are saved, that God has regenerated us and given us life. He plants it in us; indeed, it is the very first fruit of the Spirit's work in us. We love our brothers and sisters. The Thessalonians did and so do we here today. The loving actions that people in this body display toward one another every week, every day even, are too numerous to even begin to mention. My family and I have been perpetual recipients of that love and so have any of you who have been here for even a short while. But Paul says:

2. we must choose to cultivate it and to exercise it more and more A lot of times loving one another comes easy, especially when we feel love back in return as we're doing it. But there are lots of times when love is a choice, when it's hard, when it's difficult, when it involves sacrifice and doing the right thing for someone else, even though they don't appreciate it or maybe get angry about it! Love is more than a feeling; it is a commitment. The philadelphia brotherly love in the beginning of verse 9 is agape sacrificial love at the end of the verse. We must choose to love each other with the selfless love of Christ and to do it more and more. That pleases God because we are reflecting His own nature! Now in the next phrase Paul seems to be moving on to some different things that please God, but in reality, they are also ways that we love one another.

3. we choose to exercise love in practical ways of living like those in verse (11). Why did Paul choose those three things to mention? Flip over with me to 2 Thes. 3:11. The Thessalonian believers were not perfect and the report that Paul got must have mentioned that these three things were issues among them. Some of the believers were not working, but living on the generosity of others, maybe because they expected Jesus would arrive any moment. Because they were idle, they became busybodies, gossipers involved in the personal affairs of others and stirring up trouble by it. So, going back to our text, Paul admonishes them that if we really want to please God:

a. we aspire to live a peace-filled life, not one that is frantic every time something happens, or always running here and there having to do this and that or always stirring up others about things, but a life that is characterized by an inner tranquility, a peace that comes from God. As Paul put it to the Colossians ...let the peace of Christ rule in your hearts, to which indeed you were called in one body. - Col. 3:15. It pleases God when we let His Spirit control us as we endure the challenges of our daily life, as well as the suffering that comes, in an attitude of peace, trusting that He is in control. That is a way of loving our brothers! Then if we want to please God:

b. we aspire to mind our own affairs instead of always putting our nose into everyone else's business and spreading it everywhere. 1 Tim. 5:13 says that people who aren't occupied in meaningful labor ...learn to be idlers, going about from house to house, and not only idlers, but also gossips and busybodies, saying what they should not. And now we have electronic media that makes it 10 times easier to do and 1,000 times wider to spread. One off-color Facebook post that takes a second from the phone in your hand can be seen by dozens, even hundreds, of people and replicated to others through their accounts. It can be like gossip on steroids! If we love our brothers, we are careful to protect them and to exercise good stewardship of the information we become privy to. And finally, if we want to please God:

c. we work diligently with our own hands instead of being lazy and expecting others to do for us what we could easily do. Paul made tents to support himself while he was in Thessalonica instead of depending on the generosity of the new believers. He did it to set them and us an example. Willingness to work hard and use our abilities pleases God. Of course, there are those in genuine need of help, those who work as hard as they can but still can't make it because of the circumstances life has thrown at them, and those who are actually unable to work. Love means sacrificially helping people in those kinds of circumstances, but love also means working hard to sustain ourselves so that we don't take advantage of the hard work and generosity of others unnecessarily. Now:

4. this loving behavior has a two-fold effect (12) Living a peace-filled life, minding our own business and working hard:

a. it wins the respect of outsiders It actually attracts people to Jesus and lends credibility to what we share about Him. It makes them willing to listen to us because they respect the way we live. And translations vary on the last phrase of the verse, but I think it means that living this way:

b. it is taking personal responsibility for ourselves Dependence is not a bad thing in itself; we're supposed to live in dependence on God and on one another in many ways. But letting God supply our needs by our own hard work is taking our God-given personal responsibility seriously. It pleases Him and it blesses our brothers.

I've told you this story before, but its point makes it worth hearing again: A ragged boy with a violin under his arm roamed the streets of a great European city. Because he had no home or family, he wandered around for food and shelter. He had a strange gift for music and had somehow gotten hold of a violin, and would stand on the corners and play for the crowd. When he finished, they would toss some coins and this is how he lived. In the same city there lived a famous musician. One day he happened to hear the boy playing and was impressed by the quality of music. "Son, to whom do you belong?" he said. "I don't belong to anybody," the boy answered. "Well, where do you live?" was the next question. "I don't have any place to live. I just sleep on the streets or wherever I can." The man thought for a moment and then asked, "How would you like to be my boy and come to live with me? I'll teach you all I know about how to play the violin." The boy's eyes sparkled, and he said, "Mister, "I'd love it." So the great musician took the poor boy to his own home, had him cleaned and dressed up, and the man became like a father to him. For several years he poured into the eager young mind and heart all he knew about the violin. Finally, the boy was ready to appear on the concert stage for his first public recital. The house was filled to capacity. At last the boy came out, put the violin beneath his chin and began his concert. He played beautifully and there was much applause but the boy paid no attention to it. He kept his eyes constantly turned upward and continued to play. The audience was mystified by his behavior until someone said, "I don't understand why he is so insensible to all this thunderous applause. He keeps looking up all the time. I'm going to find out what is attracting his attention!" Moving about in the concert hall, the observer found the answer. There in the topmost balcony was the old music master, peering over the banister toward his young pupil. He was nodding his head and smiling, as if to say, "You are doing well, my boy; play on! And the boy did play on, not seeming to care whether the audience laughed or applauded. He kept his gaze upward. For you see, he was playing to please the master only. That boy is us! After all that our Father has done for us, rescuing us from the pit, adopting us as His sons and daughters, lovingly pouring Himself into us to make us all that He has planned, how can we do anything less than devote our lives completely to pleasing Him and Him alone?

Grieving With Hope - 1 Thess. 4:13-18

At the middle of Chapter 4 we come to THE classic passage concerning the coming of Christ for His church, for us. We all know it and have probably read it many times in this context, without realizing why Paul actually wrote it. You see, Paul had taught the Thessalonian believers to very literally look for and expect Jesus to come again. As they faced suffering and persecution, they were living daily with a very real expectation that Jesus was going to come and rescue them. But as time passed, some of the older believers began to die and it raised the question in their minds, "But what about them? How can they be part of this great hope? Will they miss out on that grand event of Jesus' coming because they died?" And since Paul had only been with them a couple of months, he hadn't had time to teach them everything they needed to know or to answer every important question, so now he explains this concern for them in the first letter he wrote back to them. This passage is actually about:

I. The Certainty With Which We Face Death (13-15) Do you hear it? They are concerned about brothers and sisters who have died and what's going to happen to them. They are uninformed; they simply don't have the knowledge they need concerning this issue and Paul is writing this to fill them in with this very important information about what happens to believers who die. First of all, notice that:

1. we do grieve when a fellow believer dies Paul does not say, "Do not grieve". He is not telling us that we are not to be sad when someone we love passes away. Being sad and missing the person is a normal thing. When Paul wrote the Philippians, he mentioned that his dear friend and theirs, Ephaphroditus, had nearly died and said, indeed he was ill, near to death. But God had mercy on him, and not only on him but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow. - Phil. 2:27. Paul admits that the death of a dear friend would be a tremendous sorrow to him and it is. The removal of a person from our lives in such a final way is a huge loss and that loss hurts deeply. Death may be the doorway to heaven, but the Bible says it is still an enemy that must be destroyed one day. It causes us tremendous pain and it is not good to stuff that pain and deny it. Rather, we do need to grieve, to cry, to mourn and be sad when we lose someone. What Paul says is that:

2. we do NOT grieve as the rest of the world does because of what we know People who are not believers don't have any certainty about what has happened to that person who is gone. They theorize; they decide they want to believe this or that, but they don't KNOW. They can only wish and "hope against hope" that what they think is real or maybe they just think there is nothing at all after death, that we simply cease to exist like any other animal. What sorrow death brings to nonbelievers! It's the sorrow of hopelessness, of knowing or fearing you'll never see that person again and the same thing will happen to you. It's a sorrow born of genuine despair. But our sorrow is nothing like that because:

a. we have an absolute certainty that deceased believers are with Jesus Paul doesn't even use the word dead to describe them; he says they have fallen asleep and most Bible versions translate the Greek of verse 14 to say they have, fallen asleep in Him, or in Jesus. You see, Jesus changed the very nature of death by His own death. It is no longer a final separation for believers. It is simply a "falling asleep" in Jesus. If you want a good picture of that to remember, think about Stephen on his knees being stoned by his enemies. He lifted up his eyes and saw Jesus in heaven standing with the Father, waiting to receive him. So he called out in prayer, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit!

...And when he had said this, he fell asleep. - Acts 7:59-60. Do you see the contrast? Jesus received His spirit; his spirit left his body and went to be with Jesus and his body instantly quit living, like a robot whose power source has been turned off and it crumbles to the ground. He fell asleep in Jesus and that's what happens to all believers who die. Now be careful to understand that:

b. only their bodies "sleep", not their souls There are groups, most notably the Seventh Day Adventists as well as some others, who teach that when our body dies, our soul goes into a state of unconsciousness or sleep until Jesus comes. That is simply not true. Paul said very clearly in 2 Cor. 5:6-8, ...We know that while we are at home in the body we are away from the Lord, for we walk by faith, not by sight. Yes, we are of good courage, and we would rather be away from the body and at home with the Lord. It is plain and simple; the we he is talking about is our spirit, our soul. It lives or dwells in our body. When it is at home in the body, it is away from the Lord; it is not present with Him where He is in heaven. But when we, that is our soul, leaves our body, we are at home with Jesus where He is in heaven. Paul spoke of the possibility of his own death with these words in Phil. 1:23, I am hard pressed between the two. My desire is to depart and be with Christ, for that is far better. Paul expected to be with Jesus the moment he died, just like Stephen. So the term sleep is a gentle way of referring to the fact that our bodies die, but they only continue in that state of death temporarily. One day they will "wake up" again. They will be raised or resurrected when Jesus comes. So, the point Paul is really making in our text is that:

c. all believers, whether alive or "asleep", will participate equally in Jesus' coming It doesn't matter whether we die before Jesus comes again or whether we are still alive when He arrives. In either case, our looking forward to His coming is not in vain because we all participate together in it equally and we'll see the specifics of that in the next verses. But as far as those who have died, verse 14 says that:

(1) God will bring the spirits of deceased believers with Christ when He comes. They fell asleep in Him, so they have been with Him in heaven ever since and they will come with Him when He appears. But the text is also implying what Paul is about to say next, that:

(2) God will bring away the sleeping bodies of believers with Christ Just as He will take living believers away with Him at His coming, He will also take with him the sleeping bodies of those who have died to join Him. So, He will come for ALL of us and for ALL of each one of us, soul and body, when He returns. Yet this whole idea that our bodies will be resurrected, even though they have lain in a grave and deteriorated, perhaps to nothing, or even have been cremated, seems so unreal, so impossible. How can we be so sure of it? Paul says:

d. our certain hope is based on Christ's own death and resurrection When Jesus died, He rose again on the third day. He proved to us that God is not content to have only our souls, but that He plans to raise our bodies also. The central confession of our faith is that Christ rose from the dead; therefore, it is no stretch to believe that we will also. He is the living proof on which we base our faith and that is why we grieve in hope, with the certainty of what has happened to the person we miss. But:

e. it is also based on a direct revelation of Jesus to Paul In verse 15 Paul says, "Jesus Himself told me this!" Evidently this is part of the revelation that Jesus explained directly to Paul, perhaps during his alone time with the Lord in Arabia that he mentions in Galatians 1. Leave a hand in Thessalonians, but please turn with me to the other key passage on this subject in 1 Corinthians 15. Look at the first phrase of 1 Cor. 15:51. When Paul says, Behold, I show you a mystery... he means, "I am revealing to you something that has been hidden until this time; I reveal to you something that God has shown me, a sacred secret, if you will, something that He has not chosen to reveal until now." The information contained in these two verses, which is the same as that in the next two verses in Thessalonians, is not something that God chose to reveal anywhere else in the Scriptures until this point. It is new information, intended to bring us great comfort. Go back to our text. Paul says:

II. We Will Be Caught Up At His Coming (16-17) Those words caught up in verse 17 in Latin are raptura, from which we get the name by which we popularly call this event, The Rapture Of The Church. All through the Bible we see it written that God will come or Christ will come to earth and set up His Kingdom and rule it. But here it is given to us to know that we are actually looking forward to something different that occurs before He descends to reign. We are waiting for Him to come and catch us all away to be with Him; what we are expecting and longing and looking for is the Rapture, being taken up to heaven with Christ, and here Paul explains exactly what Jesus told Him is going to happen. First:

1. Christ will descend into earth's atmosphere, not to the earth itself as He will eventually, but down from heaven into the air. He will leave His throne in heaven, in the spiritual dimension of reality, and appear in His physical body in the physical dimension of the sky above us. And as He descends:

2. there will be a grand announcement of His arrival. He will not just show up visibly; there will be a three-fold sound that is heard at the same moment round the earth. First, we are told that He will descend with:

a. a shout of command, a loud cry issuing from His own lips. He will give a command, and what will that command be? Well, let's look at what Jesus Himself said - Jn. 5:25, 28-29. Jesus said that one day He Himself will issue a command with His own voice to the dead and that when He does, the dead shall live, that is, their bodies will be raised. The best picture we have of that is when Jesus stood at the tomb of his friend Lazarus and shouted the command, Lazarus, come out!, and instantly Lazarus' body stood up again and was raised to life. Some have commented that it's a good thing that He specified Lazarus' name individually when He gave the command; if He had just said, "Come out!" all those who were in their graves would have been raised! I don't know about that, but that IS exactly what will happen when He comes again. He'll shout something like, "Come out!" to those whose bodies are in their graves. And at the same moment, there will be another loud voice:

b. the voice of the archangel, the chief of the angels, and the only one ever named is Michael. He will shout also. But what? Well, we have a hint of it in Scripture. In his vision in Rev. 1:10 the Apostle John says, I was in the Spirit on the Lord's Day, and I heard behind me a loud voice like a trumpet. And that voice commanded him to write down a message to the seven churches. But then in 4:1 he says, After this I looked, and behold, a door standing open in heaven! And the first voice, which I had heard speaking to me like a trumpet, said, "Come up here, and I will show you what must take place after this." And suddenly he found himself in heaven and living ahead of time all the events that would take place during the awful time of tribulation that is to occur on earth. I think that loud trumpet-like command Come up here! could be what the archangel shouts to all believers who are on the earth. "Come up! Come up to Jesus! Come to heaven with Him!" And notice that Paul mentions that same trumpet sound in our text; He says Jesus will descend with:

c. the trumpet call of God At Mount Sinai Israel heard the sound of a trumpet blast that grew louder and louder and called them to assemble in the presence of God before the mountain as they trembled with fear. Throughout their history God had them use the blowing of trumpets to assemble the people for important occasions or to assemble the army for battle. And on that day when Jesus shouts and the archangel cries, the very trumpet call of God will ring out once again for the last time to call all of us, His people, to assemble in His presence! Look back to 1 Cor. 15:52. Oh Hallelujah, Jesus shouts "Come out!", the archangel cries "Come up!", the trumpet sounds and up we all go in the blink of an eye! Glory to God!

But wait, we're not done with that blink yet! That's what happens in the air; here's what happens on the ground. Verse 16 in our text said, the dead in Christ shall rise first. The word rise there doesn't mean to rise up into the air. The word means to stand up again, that is, to be raised from the dead, resurrected. So:

3. the dead in Christ will be given their resurrection bodies first Look again at Cor. 15:52; it says that when the trumpet sounds the dead are raised; that Greek word means to be roused from sleep, awakened. Those bodies lying in the grave are woken up to life! Now, how on earth is that going to be? Some of us believers will have been dead now for 2,000 years. Some of the atoms that made up our bodies have long since been integrated into the soil or the water and absorbed by plants and even later eaten by animals or even other people. Maybe our ashes were scattered in the river or the ocean. How can God possibly reassemble the molecules of our bodies once again? The answer is that He doesn't have to and isn't going to; 1 Cor. 15 says that God will GIVE us a body as He has chosen! He will create for us in that moment a brand new spiritual body, a resurrection body made of new heavenly materials. Verse 52 says the dead are raised imperishable, that is, with a new body that cannot be corrupted or die ever again, a resurrection body like that of Jesus Himself! So, the spirits of believers who have died return with Jesus, descend and are given their new bodies first. But then we read that:

4. living believers will be transformed at the same time, in that same blink of an eye. Now read the whole of 1 Cor. 15:51-52. Paul says twice that those who happen to be alive at that moment will be changed. That word literally means made into something other, something different. Our bodies will be transformed immediately into new resurrection bodies at the same time as our departed brothers and sisters receive their new bodies. We are all "resurrected" together at the same moment and given our new, glorious, non-dying, non-aging, non-tiring, pain-free, spiritual bodies, even though some will not have to die first! Won't that be a wonderful privilege! And then, according to verse 17 of our Thessalonian text, in that same moment when the Lord shouts, the archangel cries, the trumpet sounds, the dead believers are raised first and the living believers are transformed:

5. we shall all be caught up together to meet Jesus in the air Raptured! We'll be seized by His power and snatched up into the sky thousands of feet above the earth at cloud height. Why? Well one reason that occurred to me is that there is no assembling place on the ground anywhere on earth that is big enough for all the millions and millions of us believers from all the ages to be brought together at one time! He has to gather us in the air where space is unlimited! But the main reason is that that's where He will be at that moment! We're being gathered together to Him, 2 Thes. 2:1 says, and that's where He'll meet us to take us back to heaven to live with Him in His home and our home. I think the ascension of Jesus that last day on the Mount of Olives is a wonderful picture of what will happen to us, but done in slow motion so we could see it. When Jesus finished giving His last command, He suddenly began to rise up into the air higher and higher until He was as high as the clouds and then a cloud, the cloud of the Father's glory, hid Him from their sight. The two angels standing by said, and said, Men of Galilee, why do you stand here looking up into the sky? This same Jesus who has been taken up from you INTO HEAVEN will come back in the same way you saw him go into heaven. From the sky, Jesus crossed over out of this physical realm into heaven, and so will we. As we arrive in the clouds with Jesus, we will immediately cross over and be in heaven. And then come those last wonderful words of verse 17 which are really the point of everything we've said:

6. we will all be together with the Lord forever Those who've died, those who are alive, it doesn't matter; we will all be together with Jesus when He comes and we will STAY together with Him in heaven for all eternity. We'll see all of those who have gone before us again and we'll never be parted from them. We'll never grieve over losing each other again. God will wipe away all the tears from our eyes, as John put it in Revelation. It is permanent, eternal, without end.

And then in verse 18 we have the reason that Paul shared all of this information about the Lord's coming with us:

III. We Are To Comfort One Another With This Knowledge (18) We are to encourage one another to remember these things when we are sad, when we are grieving the loss of someone we love, when we are mourning because someone dear to us has been taken out of our lives. We're to help each other not to grieve as the rest of the world does. In our sadness and in our mourning, we encourage each other to hold on to this blessed hope that we know we will all be together again with Jesus forever when He comes.

And just as these words have brought comfort to grieving believers generation after generation for 2,000 years, they will bring comfort and encouragement to us also when we need it. In 1934 a young man named Carl Burnham preached his first sermon to a little crowd of about 40 people in Akron Ohio and a little church was born. By the time of his death in 1962 the church had been through two moves and the Chapel On Fir Hill had more than 1,000 worshippers. Today, out of his godly heritage, The Chapel has 3 campuses and probably some 10,000 who attend. But just prior to his death, Carl Burnham penned these poetic words, "When I die, if my family wishes to inscribe anything on my gravestone, I would like it to be the promise of Jesus Christ in Hebrews 13:5, 'I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.' For in due season the springtime will arrive... Then, when the resurrection sings itself in the robin's glad song, and bursting buds defy the death grip of winter, and you walk upon the yielding earth near my grave--remember that my soul is not there, but rather it is absent from the body, present with the Lord. And somewhere, the atoms that made up my brain, my heart--my body--will be sending out resurrection radiations of a frequency too high for any earthly Geiger counter to record. But if you place the meter of God's Word alongside that cemetery plot and adjust the settings to Hebrews 13:5, you will receive this reading: 'He hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.'" Today if you go to Rose Hill Burial Park in Fairlawn, Summit County, Ohio, or find the picture of it on the internet, there you'll see a large tombstone with the name Burnham at the top and square in the middle the words, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." He never will. When we die, our soul is with Him. When He comes, our bodies will be with Him. So, whether we live or whether we die, we belong to Him; He is with us and we are with Him. That certainty is what takes the pain out of all our sorrow.

The Day Of The Lord - 1 Thess. 5:1-11

As you remember, in our last study of the end of chapter 4, we rejoiced together in the new information about God's plan for the future that Paul revealed, namely that Jesus is coming to catch up His church to be with Him in heaven. The Rapture is what we now have our eyes set on, what we look forward to and are waiting for. But there is another aspect of God's future plan, one that I've never really taught you about under this name, but one that Paul had evidently already taught the Thessalonians about very clearly in the few short weeks he lived among them. It is called the Day of the Lord. Look at verses (1-2). He says in verse 2:

I. The Day Of The Lord Will Come Now what exactly is that? The Day of the Lord is a term that God gave the Old Testament prophets to describe the events He has planned for the future, for the final era of this world. Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel spoke of it and so did Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Zephaniah and Malachi. The New Testament writers, Luke and Paul and Peter picked it up from the Old Testament Scriptures. First, we must understand that:

1. it is NOT the same as the coming of the Lord for His people revealed in 4:15-18. That was something hidden and secret, information not revealed until God gave it to Paul. The Day of the Lord is not the Rapture of the Church. Secondly:

2. it is not a literal 24 hr. day but a period of time when God intervenes in the world In 2 Cor. 6:2 Paul writes, ...Behold, now is the favorable time; behold, now is the day of salvation. He obviously doesn't mean a 24 hour day; he means a period of time, an era. That day of salvation is already 2,000 years long! We live in a day when the Good News of salvation is being proclaimed to the ends of the earth, when people anywhere and everywhere can choose to be saved from their sins and be rescued from the wrath of God which would rightfully be coming upon them. In this day God has basically left His work in the hands of the church to carry out. But there is coming another day, the day when the Lord Himself will step into history and reveal Himself, a day when He will openly intervene supernaturally in the affairs of men and give them what they deserve. So, in actuality, the Day of the Lord:

3. it is a collective term for an entire series of future events, the events which John saw in his vision and described for us in Rev. 6-20. There we see how:

a. God pours out His wrath on man in the Tribulation period. For seven years God will pour out a series of plagues upon the human race, plagues much worse than those He sent upon Egypt in Moses' day, judgments that will decimate the earth and destroy more than half of its population. Jesus Himself said that if God had not limited this awful time of tribulation that no flesh would survive. Those who survive will endure incredible suffering and yet the majority of survivors will not repent of their sins and cry out to Him for mercy. Turn with me to God's description in the prophet Zephaniah (fourth last book of the Old Testament, between Habakkuk and Haggai), Zeph. 1:14-18. That wasn't a very popular message back then and you don't hear it preached much today, do you? There is coming a time on this planet when the Lord will no longer hold back because of His mercy, but will pour out His judgment upon the human race for what they have become, just as He did with the generation that had become thoroughly and completely evil in Noah's day. It will be a day of awful suffering that most won't survive and at its conclusion:

b. Christ returns to earth and destroys His enemies We see Him coming on a white horse in Rev. 19, followed by the armies of heaven and, with a word from His mouth, all the gathered armies of earth that have turned to oppose Him will be destroyed en masse. The angels will gather His remaining enemies from all over the earth and they will stand before Him like a flock of goats to be destroyed and sent into everlasting fire. The blood will run as deep as the horses' bridles. Only the small flock of sheep who have repented and believed and survived that awful time will live to repopulate the earth. When the Lord steps in at last, it is not some fairy tale; it is a day that should cause fear and trembling to everyone who knows it is coming. And yet the Day of the Lord does have a positive side; when Christ returns:

c. Israel is delivered and rules the earth for a Millennium - Zeph. 3:14-20 The remnant of Israel who have believed in Christ as their Messiah and have been preserved alive will become the center of the earth. The remnant from all the nations that have believed will repopulate the earth and Israel will be the capital of the world and the Lord will rule it from there for a thousand years, as Rev. 20 tells us. In that day, the Lord will run the earth HIS way, instead of letting humans have it their way. But the Day of the Lord is still not done. At its very end:

d. God destroys the present earth and recreates it Look with me at 2 Pet. 3:10. That's what is ultimately awaiting this entire creation that has been ruined by our sin. It will be vaporized, burned up and dissolved, yet God will remake it. Look down to 3:13. That's our ultimate future home, new heavens and a new earth, filled with righteousness, the new heavens and new earth which John actually saw in Rev. 21:1.

So, the term Day of the Lord encompasses the whole time from the beginning of the tribulation to the end of the Millennium. But, going back to our text, here's an important thing:

4. the coming of Christ for His church will begin the Day of the Lord That's why Paul spoke about the two things back to back. The last half of chapter 4 describes what will happen when Jesus comes for us; He'll catch us out of this world to be with Him in heaven. The first half of chapter 5 describes what happens immediately afterward; the Day of the Lord begins and God pours out His wrath on those who are left. The Rapture precedes the Tribulation. We will not BE HERE to experience it! But oh, the rest of the world will! Now let's read (1-3). You see:

II. The Day of The Lord Will Surprise The Human Race Their view about God stepping into history and intervening in the world is expressed by Peter who says, ...that scoffers will come in the last days with scoffing, following their own sinful desires. They will say, "Where is the promise of his coming? For ever since the fathers fell asleep, all things are continuing as they were from the beginning of creation." That's pretty much the attitude all around us. The world has been the way it is for thousands, they say billions, of years. The idea that there is a God out there who will step in and punish human beings and destroy the world is an ancient fable, a myth held by misguided religions. Christians are like Chicken Little running around yelling, "The sky is falling!" It can't be real. That's why when it happens:

1. it will come unexpectedly. Nobody will be looking for it. Everyone will be saying, there is peace and security...

Even though groups like ISIS and Boko Haram and Al Shabab try to terrorize us into thinking differently by their bombs and guns, most people still labor under the false illusion that their world is always going to be the same, that tomorrow will be like today, that there is peace and security in some measure. Nobody lives expecting that to be changed. That's why the Day of the Lord comes like a thief at night, when everyone is sleeping, when they are completely oblivious, never expecting the thief to come and steal away their precious goods. If they were, they would have stayed awake and watched for the thief. Then Paul says:

2. it will come suddenly like labor pains come upon a pregnant woman who is ready to deliver. Many of you know how it is. Months go by and there is some growing discomfort but then one day, seemingly always at the most inconvenient time when you're not expecting it, boom! Labor begins and in a short while the agony is indescribable. Sorry to remind you all of that, but that's Paul's point. All of a sudden, without warning, on a day when nobody expects it and life is going on as normal, when people are buying and selling and marrying and giving in marriage and mowing their lawns and driving their cars and thinking everything is perfectly normal, the Lord will break in and begin the great day of His wrath! And, Paul adds:

3. when it comes it will be inescapable There will be no avoiding it or getting out of it. There will be no safe place to run and hide and be protected. It won't matter who a person knows or how much money they have or what kind of a survival bunker they've built or how far away they live from everyone else. When labor starts, the baby is coming, one way or another. There's no getting around it, no canceling the order and sending it back. When the Day of the Lord comes at last, there is no way to escape it, to get away from it and avoid its plagues. They are world-wide. And even if some repent and believe because they remember what their believing friends taught them or they find a Bible or whatever, they still have to experience this awful day and most will die during it. Now, the coming of:

III. The Day Of The Lord Should Not Surprise Us Believers (4-7) You see:

1. the rest of mankind live unaware that the Day of the Lord is coming. They are unaware of the reality of the events around them like those who are asleep or those who get drunk and lie in a drunken stupor, oblivious to what anyone is doing to or around them. As far as God breaking into this world and changing things, people are totally oblivious. They don't know about it, don't believe it if they have heard about it and, quite frankly, don't care! Years ago, Ford ran an advertisement in the form of a cartoon. Two men on a street corner were holding large signs in front of them. The one, with a somber face, carried this message: "The world will end tomorrow." The other, who stood just around the corner of a building, held a sign that read: "That still gives you all day today to shop your Ford dealer's year-end clearance." That says it all! People only care about the things they're obsessed with today, even though the world is going to end tomorrow! It's their nature, but Paul's point is that:

2. we should not live in the same manner as the unbelieving world We should not live as though we we're too soundly asleep or too drunk to realize what God is going to do. Why not? Because:

a. we know that this Day is coming God has told us so in His Word and, believe me, whatever God says, He will do. He will never, ever violate His word. The Lord told Jeremiah, ...I am watching over my word to perform it. -1:12. We KNOW this Day is coming; it's a sure thing. But Paul is saying more than that:

b. we do not belong to the kingdom of darkness like they do, so we should not act like them! They live as though they don't care about what God says and do whatever they want, oblivious to the fact that they will be judged for it. But we're not of their order; we don't live in that murky darkness. We are children of the Day, not children of the night; our eyes have been opened to see spiritual realities. We don't live in the realm of darkness any longer. We KNOW Christ. We know the penalty of sin that was laid upon Him and how serious it is. We KNOW He has redeemed and changed us. In fact, He has delivered us from the domain of darkness and transferred us to the kingdom of his beloved Son. - Col. 1:13. Darkness doesn't rule our lives; Jesus does! We are a different order of human beings from the rest of the world and we should live differently, not doing whatever we please like we're asleep or drunk and don't know any better, but fervently doing His will because our eyes are wide open and we see the reality of spiritual things and we know what lies ahead! Now, as he closes this section Paul gets more specific in verses (8-11). He tells us:

IV. How We Should Live Knowing The Day Of The Lord Is Coming First, he says this (8a):

1. we should live with a sober awareness of the coming destruction A person in a stupor may be driving, but he doesn't see the accident coming; he's not aware that he's headed for an intersection and needs to stop. But a sober person is looking ahead, alert, watching for danger, ready to respond. That's a picture of how we are to live. If you still have a hand in 2 Pet. 3, look at verses 11-12 which we skipped. Since we know this Day is coming, what sort of people should we be?! Shouldn't it impact our lives? Shouldn't it make us live lives of fervent holiness and godliness? Shouldn't it make us want to see the people around us get saved and all the peoples on earth be reached with the Gospel? Shouldn't it be a force that drives us to be obedient and passionate about things of God? And yet somehow, we gradually get lulled to sleep where this is concerned. It's like death. We all know we're going to die one day (unless the Rapture happens), but for much of our lives we get lulled into this false sense of security like it is just some far off event that will never really happen and we live as though we'll be around forever. But if you knew you were going to die tomorrow or next month or next year, would that not wake you up and cause you to live differently? That awareness would sober you quickly and that's how the knowledge that the Day of the Lord is coming should impact us; it should have a sobering effect on our lives. So how do we keep ourselves sober; how do we keep ourselves from being lulled into spiritual unconsciousness like everybody else? Paul says:

2. we should shield our lives by practicing faith and love (8b) A Roman soldier wore a breastplate, a piece of body armor made of leather or bronze, that protected his torso from his neck to his waist, front and back. It was designed to guard his vital organs in battle, particularly the heart. Paul says our breastplate, the thing that protects our heart from spiritual danger is continuing to wear, that is to continually practice, both faith toward God and love toward people. If we continually trust God by always doing what He tells us to do and sacrificially love other people by putting their well-being ahead of our own, we will never go to sleep spiritually. If we make those two things the central focus of our lives, they will guard our hearts from every attempt of the enemy to lead us wandering astray back into darkness. And then Paul adds that:

3. we should shield our minds with the sure hope of our salvation (8c) A Roman soldier also wore a helmet, literally a “head-encirclement” made of metal, to protect his head from harm. Paul says that likewise, we are to protect our minds from spiritual harm by encircling them with this particular “helmet”, the hope of our salvation. Again, in the Bible hope is not a wish, but a certainty; it is looking forward to something we are absolutely certain is going to happen in the future. And here, the term salvation is not referring to believing in Jesus and having our sins forgiven; Paul means that we will be literally rescued or delivered from the coming awful events of the Day of the Lord. How do I know that? Look at verse (9).

a. we are not destined to endure the coming wrath that God will pour out upon the earth in the Day of the Lord, but to be rescued from it by Jesus coming for us! We have a God-decreed destiny and our destiny is that we will never have to endure the wrath of God, not in hell and not when He pours it out on earth in the Tribulation period! We will be rescued out of it! How? By what we just saw in chapter 4; Jesus will appear in the heavens and catch us all up to Himself in heaven before the wrath ever begins! We simply will not be here! As Jesus promised the Church at Philadelphia, ...I will keep you from the hour of trial that is coming on the whole world, to try those who dwell on the earth. - Rev. 3:10. Literally, I will keep you OUT OF it! That's what He's saying here to us all, “You won't be here to endure it; you'll be with Me!” And then Paul adds that:

b. our rescue is not dependent upon our awareness or performance (10) He's not talking about whether we're dead or alive. He's saying it doesn't matter whether we're sober and watchful or whether we actually do doze and slumber and become lethargic; we will still live with Him in heaven forever simply because He died for us. We don't have to worry, “But what if I'm not good enough? What if I don't deserve to be raptured out? What if I am left to endure this awful time?” Listen, it doesn't depend on you! You ought to be awake and practicing faith and love, but even if you're not, when Jesus calls, you're going UP! Hallelujah!

Now wrap your mind in that and you won't live in fear of the awful Day of the Lord. It will protect your mind. Rather, if we're sober, we will live in fear of that Day for others, not ourselves! And finally, Paul says this (11):

4. we should constantly encourage and build up one another Why? Because we need each other. God's greatest protection against spiritual lethargy is that he has given us to each other. As the writer of Hebrews says, ...let us consider how to stir up one another to love and good works, not neglecting to meet together, as is the habit of some, but encouraging one another, and all the more as you see the Day drawing near. - Heb. 10:24-25. We stir each other up more and more and encourage each other on more and more as we see that great Day drawing closer and closer. And to do that we need to be together, a lot, often!

On September 21, 1938, a hurricane of monstrous proportions struck the East Coast of the United States. William Manchester, writing about it his book The Glory and the Dream, says that "the great wall of brine struck the beach between Babylon and Patchogue (Long Island, New York) at 2:30 p.m. So mighty was the power of that first storm wave that its impact registered on a seismograph in Sitka, Alaska, while the spray, carried northward at well over a hundred miles an hour, whitened windows in Montpelier, Vermont." Winds reached 150 miles per hour and the wave height of the storm surge reached a high of 35 feet. The storm killed 682 people, destroyed 57,000 homes and remains the most powerful and deadliest hurricane in recent New England history. Sadly, the meteorologists--who should have known what was coming and should have warned the public--seemed strangely blind to the impending disaster. Either they ignored their instruments or simply couldn't believe them, so the public was not properly warned. Manchester continues, "Among the striking stories which later came to light, was the experience of a Long Islander who had bought a barometer a few days earlier in a New York store. It arrived in the morning post September 21, and to his annoyance the needle pointed below 29, where the dial read, 'Hurricanes and Tornadoes.' He shook it and banged it against the wall; the needle wouldn't budge. Indignant, he repacked it, drove to the post office, and mailed it back. While he was gone, his house blew away." Dear friends, the greatest impending disaster of all the ages is going to come upon the whole world. We know it because we've been assured by the One who's going to send the storm! So, we are the meteorologists, or in spiritual terms, the prophets, who know what's going to happen and we have a responsibility to warn the world. There is only one way of escaping this impending doom and His Name is Jesus. Sharing Him is people's only hope. To the world, we are the barometer that says, “A great hurricane is coming!” but people don't want to hear our forecast. So they blame the barometer as being wrong. Or they ignore its warning. Or they get rid of it altogether! But regardless of how people respond, the Day of the Lord is still coming. Our responsibility is to keep on declaring the truth and to not to let ourselves fall into their state of lethargy and uncaring.

Thessalonians: Jesus Is Coming!

Living To Please God (Part 2) - 1 Thess. 5:12-28

We're going to conclude our study of 1 Thessalonians today. In the first half of chapter 4, Paul began to give the Thessalonians, and us, a series of practical instructions for daily living, but then he interrupted those and spent the second half of chapter 4 and the first half of chapter 5 explaining future events, both the coming of Christ for His people at the Rapture and the awful events of the coming Day of the Lord. Now at verse 12, he turns again to continue that series of practical instructions that show us how to live in a manner that pleases God. And the first instruction he gives us is that:

I. We Should Have A Godly Attitude Toward Our Leaders (12-13) To preach this always seems a bit self-serving because basically, it sounds like I'm telling you how to treat ME. Maybe that's why Paul said, I ask you... instead of the I urge you [literally, I call on you...] that he used in verse 14. So please understand that I'm not trying to elevate myself in saying this, but simply to teach you what God says. There are those whom God has placed over us in the church, elders and pastors and teachers and Bible study leaders and it is important that we have a godly attitude toward them. What does that look like? Well, Paul says:

1. we should respect them because God has made them responsible for us That word respect is literally, see. We should see them rightly and pay attention to them. God has placed us under their care and made them responsible to care for us. In fact, the first half of Heb. 13:17 says, Obey your leaders and submit to them, for they are keeping watch over your souls, as those who will have to give an account. That's a heavy statement. Our leaders aren't put there because they get to be in charge and they get the privilege of telling us what to do. Our leaders are shepherds whose responsibility is for the very lives of the sheep. That's why they teach us; that's why they encourage and exhort us to do certain things. That's why they sometimes admonish and correct us, not to make themselves feel good or superior, but because they are trying to care for our souls! And therefore:

2. we should love and value them highly because of what they do We should treasure them and thank God for them. I certainly thank you for the way that you do that for me; I have a very thick folder full of loving notes and cards that I've saved through the years in which so many of you have expressed your love and appreciation. Many of you actually say those kinds of things personally or do wonderful things that express your care and I'm very thankful. But I'm not just talking about me, but about all our leaders. God wants us to love them; He wants us to hold them in high esteem as they mirror Him to us. And then Paul adds this:

3. we should be at peace among ourselves Why? Because nothing hurts the heart of the shepherd more and makes his job more difficult than the sheep being in an uproar. Listen to the last part of Heb. 13:17, Obey your leaders and submit to them, for they are keeping watch over your souls, as those who will have to give an account. Let them do this with joy and not with groaning, for that would be of no advantage to you. It's tough trying to shepherd stubborn sheep who run this way and that and won't listen to the shepherd and run off and get themselves in all kinds of trouble or head butt and push each other around. It makes the shepherd groan. But what joy he has when his sheep safely graze in peace and harmony with one another and with him. It not only makes the leaders' responsibility easier but it helps them do what they do for us better, so it's to our advantage! Well, now Paul moves on to some:

II. Admonitions That Concern Our Personal Lives in (14-19) First of all, to please God:

1. we must be patient with everyone, especially the idle, timid and weak (14) The idle, those who don't seem to do anything, need a kick in the pants; they need to be admonished, but how? With patience, gently, over and over again. The fainthearted and fearful need to be encouraged, but how? Not with impatience and yelling when they're afraid to try what we know they can do, but with patient, gentle coaxing over and over. The weak who just can't seem to do it for themselves need help. How? Not impatiently because they're interrupting our important plans, but patiently, over and over again. I'll confess this is one of my greatest weaknesses; it's hard for me to be patient with idle and timid and weak people. I think they ought to want to do it and be eager to do it and be able to do it, like I am, but when they don't and they aren't and they can't, I tend to get frustrated and angry. But that doesn't please God! Second:

2. we must always do good to others, even when evil is done to us (15) Oh, that goes against our flesh, doesn't it? When someone hurts us, we want to hurt them back. When someone speaks nastily to us or yells at us, we want to yell nasty things back. But that goes against everything Jesus taught us, doesn't it? Anyone can act like that, but Rom. 12:17 says, Repay no one evil for evil, but give thought to do what is honorable in the sight of all. In other words, their doing evil to you is no excuse for you to do evil to them; no matter WHAT they do, we must always do what is good and right and honorable! That's what pleases God because it is like Him; He makes His sun rise on the evil and the good and sends His rain on just and the unjust. He does good all the time, to everyone, whether they do or not! Third:

3. we must react to our circumstances according to God's will (16-18) Most interpreters think that last phrase doesn't just relate grammatically to verse 18 but that all three of the short phrases that go before it are linked together. The will of God for us in Christ is to have the same threefold reaction all the time, in every situation, in every circumstance in life that we encounter. It's not so hard to rejoice, to pray and to give thanks when God sends something good our way, but when God allows adversity and difficulty, our flesh would rather mourn, blame Him for sending it and complain about it! Pleasing God requires asking the Holy Spirit help us react in the exact opposite fashion. God's will is that:

a. we must rejoice continually and not just when it's natural. Paul and Silas were arrested and beaten with rods and put in prison with their feet in the stocks, yet at midnight they were praying and singing hymns to God. They were rejoicing! In all that pain and suffering, they were rejoicing. How is that even possible? Well, it happens to be to the Philippian church that Paul explained the secret, Rejoice in the Lord always; again I will say, rejoice. - Phil. 4:4. He is what we rejoice in! He is with us; He is in us; He is giving us strength; He is for us and no circumstance can ever separate us from His love, so we can always rejoice in Him! And, of course, God's will is that:

b. we must pray constantly and talk to Him about everything in our lives and minds! I am always baffled by the fact that when something bad happens, so often people stop praying, stop reading the Word and stop coming to church. I just don't get that; when bad stuff happens to me, that's when I want to RUN to my Heavenly Father and talk to Him. It's when I go to the Word and beg Him to speak to me! My problem with praying constantly is when everything is going well! Either way, God's will is that we pray constantly, ALL the time, in every circumstance of life. The great confederate General "Stonewall" Jackson said, "I have so fixed the habit of prayer in my mind that I never raise a glass of water to my lips without asking God's blessing, never send a letter without putting a word of prayer under the seal, never take a letter from the mailbox without a brief lifting of my thoughts heavenward, never change my classes in the lecture room without a minute's petition for the cadets who go out and for those who come in." [from Purpose in Prayer, E. M. Bounds]. That is God's will for us and here's what might be toughest:

c. we must give thanks in everything, and lest we are tempted to think that simply means "focus on things you are thankful for instead of the bad things that are happening", Paul made it explicitly clear in Eph. 5:20, giving thanks always and for everything to God the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Getting cancer, losing your job, being sick, having a flat tire? All things? Really? Yes, because ...we know that for those who love God all things work together for good, for those who are called according to his purpose. - Rom. 8:28. We have no idea how God is going to do it, but whatever "this thing" is that has come into my life, God intends to use it to serve His good purpose and for that I can thank Him, even though I can't understand how He will ever do it! Well, quickly we must move on because Paul has some:

III. Admonitions That Concern Our Assembling Together in verse (19-22) Those things are really all tied together as part of one thought and it has to do with what happens when we gather together to meet for worship and teaching, whether in homes or in bigger meetings like this one. In verse 19 he literally says, "Do not put out the Spirit's fire." He means:

1. we must be careful not to oppose what the Holy Spirit is doing It is always our tendency to institutionalize our routines, to do everything the same, the way we've always done it, to make what we're comfortable with the norm. And then someone comes along and says, "I think God wants us to start a ministry to drug addicts and alcoholics" and the red flags go up and we automatically oppose it. At a meeting of Baptist leaders in the late 1700s, a young minister named William Carey stood up to argue for the need to send missionaries overseas. He was abruptly interrupted by an older minister who said, "Young man, sit down! You are an enthusiast. When God pleases to convert the heathen, he'll do it without consulting you or me." But he didn't sit down and the era of modern missions was born and millions have been swept into the Kingdom. We must always be careful that our flesh is not trying to put out a fire that the Holy Spirit is lighting, lest in the words of Gamaliel, we ...might even be found to be opposing God, as the Jewish leaders were in trying to crush the early church! - Acts 5:39. We must be open and listening to the Holy Spirit's leading for us, and along that line, Paul says in verse 20 that:

2. we must not treat prophecies with contempt Now that's a word we never use any more, but it's in Scripture. What is it? Put simply:

a. prophecy is speaking to others on behalf of God for their benefit It is when God gives a person a message to deliver to others on His behalf and they share it. Now:

b. it can be predictive. God often revealed things to come through prophets; for instance, in Acts 11:27-28 a prophet named Agabus predicted a great famine that happened in the days of Emperor Claudius. Or it can be personal, just as in Acts 21:10-12, the same Agabus declared that Paul would be arrested by the Romans when he went to Jerusalem, and he was. But I don't think that kind of direct, I-have-a-message-from-God-for-you declaration is what Paul has in mind here. In the New Testament context, prophecy usually refers to preaching or sharing a message with the body. Turn with me to 1 Cor. 14:1-4. In these early church gatherings, just as in ours, somebody (or more than one) would stand up and preach or share a message with the others, a message that they felt God had given them to encourage and build up the group. Prophecy was a spiritual gift, not a gift of declaring the future, but a gift of sensing what was on God's heart, putting it into words and sharing it with God's people to build them up in the faith. It was a normal experience every time they gathered for worship, just as it is for us. And Paul says:

We are not to despise the prophecies that people share. We're not to treat the messages that are being given to us by godly people as of little value and refuse to listen to them. When God speaks a message to us for our good through someone, we're to listen and take it to heart and do whatever God might be urging us to do. We're not to walk away and go, "Who cares? That person doesn't know what they're talking about!" Again, this may sound self-serving, but I spend at least a day and a half of every week putting together what I sense God wants me to share with you during these 30 minutes on Sunday. Your Sunday School teachers and Bible Study leaders invest hours into discerning

God's truths to share with you to build you up. We're not to despise that and treat it as boring and unimportant; we're to soak it up and grow through it! However, this ongoing every day exercise of the prophetic gift is not infallible; it is not without the possibility of having human error introduced into it. In other words, some of the things that some of us sense that God wants us to say aren't really 100% from Him. For instance, there are a few things that I used to declare pretty strongly in my younger days that I have since come to believe aren't really true. I was wrong at the time and didn't know it. And you don't have to turn your dial very far today to hear people sharing messages that they believe are from God that have some glaring untruths in them, yet they don't see it. That's why Paul said in verse 21 that:

3. we must test everything we hear and retain the good If you're still in 1 Cor. 14, look at verse 29. The listeners are to weigh, to evaluate, to judge with discrimination what is shared, to test it to see whether it really is from God or just human sentiment. Paul assumes that the sharing of prophecy is a partial thing, that it comes as a mixture of the Spirit's truth with flawed human understanding. Not everything I say, no matter how hard I try, will be right! Test everything, I say, everything you hear, everything you are taught, everything that claims to be from God. Test it against God's written Word. Does God really say that in the Bible or is part of what I heard man's opinion? Retain, cling to, hang on to that which is good and from God and discard the rest. "Eat the meat and spit out the bones!", as the saying goes. We should test everything we hear that claims to be from God and hang onto it dearly if it is, but Paul goes on in verse 22 to say:

4. we must refrain from evil of any sort, even if it seems "spiritual" If we want to please God, we must be sure to listen to what He's saying, yet we must also be sure not to swallow the bones but rather to spit them out and reject them because they're wrong. They're a form of evil, no matter how "godly" they may sound.

Just last week I listened to a video of a well-respected Christian leader teaching on prevailing prayer and his three major points were very good in laying out the way we ought to pray: 1) specifically, 2) with urgency and 3) expecting God to answer. But some of the comments he made didn't sit well with my spirit and it dawned on me that he was really saying, "The test of whether we're praying rightly is whether we see God do what we ask." Wow, what about all the godly people like Paul who have prayed specifically, with urgency, expecting God to do something and He hasn't done it but rather has said, "No, I'm going to do something different! I want you to keep your thorn in the flesh!" I sensed there was some false mixed in with the true in that message so I kept what was good and refused the rest, even though it all sounded really good. That's what Paul is admonishing us to do every time someone speaks in God's name - even if it's me! Now, how are we going to be able to do this, to live in these ways that please God, respecting our leaders, always being patient with everybody, returning good for evil, rejoicing and thanking God in difficult circumstances, listening to truth but discerning error? We say, "That's a tall order; only God Almighty could truly live like that!" That's absolutely true and that's why Paul concludes by saying:

IV. Only God Himself Can Enable Us To Live His Way (23-24) Who is going to make you live a holy, sanctified life? Who is going to keep you from sin in the way that you think and feel and act all the time so that you're blameless when Jesus comes? And Jesus IS coming, did you notice that? Listen, He who has called us to live in the way that pleases Him is faithful and HE will surely do it. The key is that:

1. we must depend upon His power and not our own strength It's not about trying harder and failing less. It's about learning to turn to Him in every situation, stopping and praying and calling upon Him to shape our thoughts and our words and our actions, to live out the life that only He can live through us. And Paul assures us that:

2. He is faithful and WILL empower us to live holy lives He'll do it. He'll never fail to be there in the moment we need Him and to infuse us with Divine energy to please Him. All we have to do is learn to stop and ask, and ask, and ask, and ask, and ask.

Paul closes his letter with a:

V. Paul's Personal Farewell To The Thessalonians (25-28) These Thessalonian believers were dear to Paul, just as you are to me.

1. he deeply loved them and counted on them praying for him, just as I love you and count on you praying for me, because we who teach and share what God wants you to do are frail, fallible people who struggle in the process just as much as you do. But also notice that Paul:

2. he strongly desired the instructions in this letter to be known by all He didn't want them read just by the few who received them from the delivery messenger, but read to the whole church, in all the little house churches that met in the city, so that all the believers would hear. He intended it for that church and even for other churches and, I think, even for us now. What a great encouragement His letter has been to us. Let's do our best to take it to heart.

James Hudson Taylor felt God's call to become a missionary to China and founded the China Inland Mission (now OMF International). He spent 51 years in China. The society that he began was responsible for bringing over 800 missionaries to the country who began 125 schools and directly resulted in 18,000 Christian conversions, as well as the establishment of more than 300 stations of work with more than 500 local helpers in all eighteen provinces. Primarily because of the CIM's campaign against the Opium trade, Taylor has been referred to as one of the most significant Europeans to visit China in the 19th Century. Historian Ruth Tucker says: No other missionary in the nineteen centuries since the Apostle Paul has had a wider vision and has carried out a more systematized plan of evangelizing a broad geographical area than Hudson Taylor. [Wikipedia] How did he do all of that? What was his secret? He himself described it by saying, "I used to ask God to help me. Then I asked that I might help Him. I ended up by asking Him to do His work through me." That is how God intended us to live the Christian life, a life that pleases Him, whatever He calls us to do.

2 Thessalonians: Jesus Is Coming!

Worthy Of His Calling - 2 Thess. 1

(GBC 29th Anniversary - June 7, 2015)

Twenty nine years ago on June 1, 1986, Glenside Bible Church was formed by the consolidation of Ardsley Community Chapel and Wharton Baptist Church and we held our first worship service as a new body. I was there and so were a number of you. We stood right here and pledged ourselves to a new covenant of membership to be one body, one family in Christ. Through the years we have added a number of new folks into our family but we've also lost quite a few who have graduated on to glory. On days like this it is fitting to think back and fondly remember dear ones with names like Mason and Wiley and Ostheimer and Sleep and Hunsicker and Schubert and Rufino and Morris and literally dozens more who have all helped make us the body of believers that we are today. And, of course, there are lots of dear faithful ones still living that have been called away to other places for various reasons over the years with whom we still connect fondly and wish they were here, but they can't be. We are not the same church that we were 29 years ago and we don't live in the same world anymore either. Back then we thought our society was rapidly deteriorating but we'd never even heard of AIDS and would never have dreamed that our government would be considering the legalization of same sex marriage. We couldn't have imagined how far our moral climate would sink. On the other hand, we also would never have dreamed that in the next 25 years from that time more people would come to Christ than in all of history up until then! Much less could we conceive that we would talk and text regularly to extensions of our church family at the ends of the earth with devices we carry in our pockets. No, we are not the same body, nor are we living in the same world. But we are still bound together as one family and we are still pursuing the same age-old calling, as Paul put it earlier in 1 Thes. 2:12, we exhorted each one of you and encouraged you and charged you to walk in a manner worthy of God, who calls you into his own kingdom and glory. God has called all of us who have believed in Jesus to belong to His Kingdom and to share in His glory! Paul told Timothy that we have a holy calling (2 Tim. 1:9), so the lives we live on earth should be worthy of those who belong to a holy kingdom. And the writer of Hebrews says that we share in a heavenly calling (3:1), an amazing future in heaven joined to the very presence of God, so the lives we live on earth should be worthy of those who experience the glory of God. Together we are pursuing that calling, encouraging and exhorting one another, growing together into the likeness of Christ Himself. One comes, another goes, the world around us changes, yet through it all we press on together to be like Jesus.

Paul wrote his second letter to the Thessalonians not very long after he wrote the first one. He was still miles away from them down in Corinth in southern Greece and still hadn't seen them in more than a year now, but he writes them once again very tenderly to encourage them and I would like to use His words in this first chapter to encourage you on our anniversary. Let's read verses (1-4). First of all, as Paul says about this beloved church in verses 3-4:

I. I Must Thank God For You My Dear Brothers And Sisters of Glenside Bible Church. As he put it, I ought to do it; it's right to do it; I have an obligation to continually thank God for you. You have been our spiritual family for all of these 29 years and for some of you even longer because it will soon be 36 years since LuAnn and I actually arrived here. We have basically spent the whole of our lives as part of this body; we have had and raised our family here and we have never regretted it. Over and over again your lives have blessed ours in so many ways that we can't help but give thanks for you. But Paul specifically mentioned three things that he thanked God for and I'll echo them. First:

1. I thank Him because your faith is growing abundantly Now right off let me make a disclaimer: neither this nor any of the other statements is 100% true of every individual who is part of this body, nor was it in Paul's day, I'm sure. Not every single person who claims GBC as their spiritual family is growing abundantly in faith; there are always some who are stagnant and stuck in the mud spiritually. There are always others who are in a stage where they are even rebelling against God in certain areas of their lives. But taken as a whole, as a body together, our faith is growing. For instance, in 1986 we were trusting the Lord to supply $114,000 for our ministries; this year we're trusting Him for $315,000 with fewer people. Back then we were trusting God for $34,000 to support missions; now we're trusting Him for $62,000 plus another $23,000 or so for our short-term teams. In several of our recent years we've seen Him provide over $100,000 for missions as we needed it. In 1986 we "supported missions"; we would never have dreamed that it would become normal for ordinary GBC members to get on airplanes every year and go to places like Kyrgyzstan and India and Guatemala and China and to be deeply involved in encouraging Muslims and Hindus and secular atheists come to Christ! We would never have dreamed that our little church would be deeply involved in encouraging partnerships in significant ways, personally communicating constantly, from the steaming jungles of Indonesia to the frigid mountains of Northwest China to the poverty-stricken villages and a burgeoning major city of India to an inaccessible village in the Amazon rainforest. We've trusted God and He's let us touch the world! But your faith has abounded right here in Glenside too. It has touched the lives of literally many hundreds of community children from many dozens of families through our Pioneer Club Program that we've grown and our Nursery School and Playgroup programs. We have people who were preschoolers 29 years ago now sending us their preschoolers! Through the years literally hundreds of people from our Community have been blessed in one way or another by the myriad activities of our Community Outreach Team and all of you who assist them and we've boldly gone into Philadelphia year after year serving various agencies who help the poor and homeless and even helped single moms right here in Glenside. Your faith has grown abundantly as you've followed the Lord Jesus into opportunity after opportunity, being stretched further and further, and I thank Him for that. Second:

2. I thank Him because your love for each other is ever increasing The acts of sacrificial love that I've seen emanate from members of this body through the years are too many to mention. You've obviously given many thousands of dollars to help others in need. On many occasions I've found envelopes with $1,000 in them left under my office door to help one or the other of our folks who is out of work and sometimes gifts given have been multiple thousands. Through the years you have taken people into your homes to live when they needed it both long term and temporarily. You've taken in young children who needed a refuge or college students who needed a place to stay. Meals too many to mention have graced the tables of those who are sick or weak and when someone is ill or has a need you are there to visit and comfort before I am. And it never seems to get old; you never get tired of loving. It just goes on and on and grows as it extends itself to newer parts of the family and I thank God for that! Third:

3. I thank Him for your steadfastness and faithfulness amid difficulties The Thessalonians had definitely been victims of persecution in a way that we don't experience, but they also faced many afflictions that are common to us. These have not been 29 easy years. So many of us have lost loved ones; in fact, our records have the names of 106 people who have died since mid-1985, and so many times we have stood at gravesides with you. And not all of those deaths were simple and natural; many of you have faced the ravages of disease in yourself or cared fiercely for a suffering loved one. You have found yourselves out of work or laid up with an injury, sometimes for a year or two or longer. Yet I have never seen one of you deny the faith and walk away. You have trusted God through pain and suffering of all types and come out stronger. As a body we have endured the burning of our building and survived the effects of serious sins upon our fellowship repeatedly, yet here we stand united together, still steadfastly and faithfully following after Jesus and that high calling He has given us, even if some of us are limping along at times! And I thank God for that! Like Paul in verse 4, when I am elsewhere, I boast about you to others; I tell them about your faith and your love and your faithfulness through the years! In speaking opportunities, I often use you as an example to encourage others, even when I am literally on the other side of the earth.

But is it worth it? Is it worth continuing to reach out and trust and love in the midst of all the suffering that comes our way? Paul wanted to encourage the Thessalonians that it is! And just as he encouraged them:

II. I Want To Encourage You To Look To The Future (5-10) Listen, here's what you need to remember: Jesus is coming! Don't forget that, ever, even though it's easy to because:

1. we are living in an increasingly hostile world Here in America where we live, we have been blessed with a wonderful lull of 250 years where believers have enjoyed full freedom and for most of it a positive public opinion. But that is now rapidly changing; don't count on it forever. The generations from WWII on have known a time of peace and prosperity unparalleled in the history of the world. We've been blessed to live at a standard no other generation has ever known and it has lulled us into unconsciousness of the fact that around the world believers regularly suffer hostility that ranges from mild discrimination to outright extermination. Jesus warned us that the world will hate us and we are seeing that more and more in this new century. The world is not getting better and becoming more utopian. It is getting more violent and that is coming closer and closer to home. Just as Paul told Timothy, ...understand this, that in the last days there will come times of difficulty. For people will be lovers of self, lovers of money, proud, arrogant, abusive, disobedient to their parents, ungrateful, unholy, heartless, unappeasable, slanderous, without self-control, brutal, not loving good, treacherous, reckless, swollen with conceit, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God [and so on]... Indeed, all who desire to live a godly life in Christ Jesus will be persecuted, while evil people and impostors will go on from bad to worse, deceiving and being deceived. (2 Tim. 3:1-5,12-13). We are living in an increasingly hostile world; what can keep us faithful? Paul says this:

2. when Jesus comes our enemies will be justly repaid for all that they have done. I don't want to dwell on it long, but he says some very strong things in what we read. He says that God has an awful future that lies ahead for those who do not know Him, who refuse to obey the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Even before His arrival:

a. they will be afflicted with a time of suffering on earth beforehand, a time Jesus Himself called the Great Tribulation, a time when God pours out His wrath on unbelieving mankind to such a degree that if it wasn't limited the entire human race would be wiped out. But just when it seems that things can't get worse, Jesus will appear with the armies of heaven and that will be the end of all His enemies. According to verse (9):

b. they will be eternally destroyed at His arrival, separated from God forever, and cast into a lake of fire that burns forever and ever. Dear friends, the world will not always be like this; it will not always be full of wars and slavery and human trafficking and cruelty and poverty. Jesus is coming and He will put an end to it all one day. But the really encouraging part is this; Paul says that:

3. when Jesus comes, we have an amazing future to look forward to. He is coming to take us out BEFORE the world descends into its final awful state. As Paul wrote in the first letter, God has not destined us to endure that awful time of God's wrath, but to be delivered out of it by the coming of Jesus for His saints. And when He is revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, according to verse (7):

a. we will be granted rest and relief Hallelujah! Our struggles, our afflictions will all be over! We will rest from all our labors; we will be relieved from all pain and suffering and sorrow. We will be with Him in His heavenly Kingdom forever and:

b. He will be glorified in us and marveled at by us according to verse (10) We will be made to shine with His glory, perfected, holy, pure, in glowing white garments, trophies of His grace for all of heaven to see and rejoice in, and while the creation is marveling at us, we will be marveling at Him when we see Him in all the fullness of His glory at last! And our rest and our relief and our glorifying and our marveling will go on forever; there will be no end!

Dear brothers and sisters, it is this hope, this heavenly calling that keeps us true and steadfast. In every generation it has been the great hope of the church that Jesus is coming and if we can get our heads pried loose from our technology-filled, earth-centered, rationalistic ways of thinking, it will be our sustaining hope too. Jesus is coming! Greg Fisher was teaching Thessalonians to a classroom full of West African Bible College Students when one of them asked, "What will he say when he shouts?" He says, "The question took me by surprise... 'Reverend, 1 Thessalonians 4:16 says that Christ will descend from heaven with a loud command. I would like to know what that command will be.' I wanted to leave the question unanswered, to tell him that we must not go past what Scripture has revealed, but my mind wandered to an encounter I had earlier in the day with a refugee from the Liberian civil war. The man, a high school principal, told me how he was apprehended by a two-man death squad. After several hours of terror, as the men described how they would torture and kill him, he narrowly escaped. After hiding in the bush for two days, he was able to find his family and escape to a neighboring country. The escape cost him dearly: two of his children lost their lives. The stark cruelty unleashed on an unsuspecting, undeserving population had touched me deeply. I also saw flashbacks of the beggars that I pass each morning on my way to the office. Every day I see how poverty destroys dignity, robs men of the best of what it means to be human, and sometimes substitutes the worst of what it means to be an animal. I am haunted by the vacant eyes of people who have lost all hope. "Reverend, you have not given me an answer. What will he say?" The question hadn't gone away. "Enough," "I said "He will shout, 'Enough!' when he returns." A look of surprise came on the face of the student. "What do you mean, enough?" "Enough suffering. Enough starvation. Enough terror. Enough death. Enough indignity. Enough lives trapped in hopelessness. Enough sickness and disease. Enough time. Enough!" [Gregory L. Fisher in Leadership-Vol. 12, #4]. One day soon Jesus will say, "Enough!" and come to deliver us from this hostile world! And since Jesus is coming, we can keep on trusting, keep on loving, keep on faithfully and steadfastly enduring persecution and affliction because one day soon He will be here and we will know rest and relief forever! It is only this hope that will sustain us through the days to come! But in the meantime, we can pray for one another. That's why Paul told the Thessalonians:

III. I Always Pray For You (11-12) I always pray for you too, but I don't always pray like Paul prayed; I get too wrapped up in asking for the things people need to fix their earthly problems. He prayed three things that I must learn to pray for you too, things that we should learn to pray for one another. So, like Paul, I pray:

1. that God may make you worthy of His calling Paul wrote to the Ephesians, I urge you to walk in a manner worthy of the calling to which you have been called. - Eph. 4:1. We have this holy, heavenly calling to belong to His Kingdom and enter His glory forever, so Paul prayed we would live it out every day in our home, where we work, where we go to school, among our neighbors, in a manner that is worthy of what we've been called to! But how can we? In our own strength we try and fail over and over again. Well, here Paul says God Himself can MAKE us worthy; He can impart that worthiness to us by His own Divine energy that dwells inside us. We need to pray that God Himself would so fill and control our lives that they would be filled with abounding faith and increasing love and steadfast faithfulness and be worthy of the Kingdom to which we are looking forward. Then Paul goes on, in my opinion, in his second request to spell out what he really means by the first one. We pray:

2. that God may fulfill your every good desire and work of faith by His power. That is, that every good thing you desire to do for Him, He will enable you to do by His Divine power, that every act you want to see Him do, He will do it through you by His power. I pray that for you; I pray that for me too, that all of us will learn to simply stop and call on Him and invite Him to live through us every day in every situation, so that He will live out this Kingdom-worthy way of living through us! And the third thing Paul prays spells out the point of it all. We pray:

3. that Jesus' name may be glorified in you and you in Him through His grace, that by His power placed in you as an act of grace, He will act through you in such a way that you will act like Him and He will get all the glory. Or as we read in 2 Corinthians, ...men will praise God for the obedience that accompanies your confession of the gospel of Christ... - 9:13. As He empowers us to live a worthy life, He'll get the praise; He will be glorified in your life as He gives you power to live it in a worthy manner.

You may be a doctor or a janitor, a sales clerk or a mechanic, a student or a housewife taking care of kids. Your daily life is where this this worthiness is lived out. Johann Sebastian Bach was obviously one of the world's most brilliant composers. He spent his life writing music and here's what he said, "All music should have no other end and aim than the glory of God and the soul's refreshment; where this is not remembered there is no real music but only a devilish hub-bub." [Kingdom Conflict, J. Stowell, Victor, 1985, p. 77ff.] That is true, not only of music, but of whatever we do. Whenever Bach began to write a new piece of music, he bowed his head and prayed. "Jesus, help me show your glory through the music I write. May it bring you joy even as it brings joy to your people." Without Jesus' help, Johann knew he'd never be able to complete the task. Before writing a note, he carefully formed the letters J.J. at the top of the page, the abbreviation for the Latin phrase "Jesu Juva", which means "Jesus help me!" With that, the music began to pour from his soul and onto the page. When he was finally satisfied and it was completed, he wrote the letters S.D.G. at the bottom of the page - Soli Deo Gloria - For the Glory of God Alone. His deepest desire was that when his music was played, God would receive all the credit and the praise and the glory for it, that it would point people to God. [<http://www.christianity.com/church/church-history/church-history-for-kids/j-s-bach-soli-deo-gloria-to-the-glory-of-god-alone-11635057.html>] That's how you live a life worthy of your calling. You begin every day with that prayer, "Jesus help me", and you ask Him the same way over and over again in every situation you encounter throughout the day. Then when the day is done, you close it with a prayer of thanksgiving, "Lord, to you alone be the glory!" So, let's keep on as we have for 29 years, let's keep on pursuing our high calling together, encouraging one another to live worthy lives, and all the more as we see that Day approaching. Jesus is coming!

Thessalonians: Jesus Is Coming!

Understanding Christ's Return - 2 Thess. 2:1-12

The second chapter of 2 Thessalonians is both unique and important, because in it, Paul reveals details about the second coming of Christ to these dear brothers and sisters, and also to us, that are found nowhere else in Scripture. And he does that because of:

I. A False Teaching that he had heard a report about that made him deeply concerned. Someone was teaching them that: We Are Experiencing The Day Of The Lord Right Now (1-2). Now let me briefly review the information that we studied back in 1 Thes. 5.

1. the term Day of the Lord means all the events revealed to us in Rev. 6-20. It is the day, the era, when God will intervene directly in human history. It begins in Rev. 6 with a 7 year long period we call the Tribulation where God pours out His great wrath on humanity in plague after plague. And at the end of that time, Christ returns with the armies of heaven, as described in Rev. 19 and destroys all His enemies. Then He establishes His Millennial Kingdom on earth with those who survive and reigns for 1,000 years and it all ends with the Great White Throne judgment in Rev. 20, where all the unbelieving dead are resurrected, sentenced and sent into everlasting fire. That whole thing from beginning to end is what the Scripture describes as the Day of the Lord, but most often when that phrase is used it is pointing to the first part of that time, to the events of those awful Tribulation years. Now:

2. someone was circulating this false teaching in Thessalonica, that we are already living IN the Day of the Lord, that the Day of the Lord has already started and the events that we are experiencing now are the beginning of the awful judgments that will soon come! Paul didn't know exactly where the teaching had originated. He says it might have been started by a spirit, that is, an evil spirit, and it certainly was; Satan himself invented this lie. But it might have been a human word from somebody that they themselves had thought up. Certainly, people do that today. Just google "tribulation now" and you'll find a host of people who look at the world events around us, the rise of Isis, the famines and tsunamis and earthquakes, the clash of nations and armies and conclude, "This is it. We're living IN the tribulation right now!" They're looking to identify an Antichrist, warning about how bad things will soon get and setting dates by which Jesus should arrive on the scene. That is EXACTLY what was happening in Thessalonica! Paul even seems to infer that maybe someone had forged a letter that was supposed to be from him, claiming to teach this doctrine in order to give it greater authority! But however it got started, it was being widely spread among the believers and having a devastating effect:

3. it created fear that they would soon experience horrible suffering, instead of Jesus coming and gathering believers up to Himself before that time began. To use our terms, they were afraid the Rapture of the church was not going to happen and that in reality they were going to have to live through the awful events of the Tribulation period. Paul says, "That is what I want to set you straight on! Don't believe the lie. Don't be shaken from what I've taught you! Don't let yourselves become filled with alarm and fear! Jesus IS coming to gather us to Himself before the Day of the Lord happens!" Now I want you to realize that what I'm about to say is meant in genuine love. There are large sections of the evangelical church today, respected brothers and sisters whom we love and maybe even some sitting here today, who may not go so far as to teach or believe that we are actually living in the Tribulation right now, yet who strongly believe and teach that we, the Church, WILL go through the Tribulation, that we WILL experience the awful suffering Jesus spoke about and those who survive to the end of it will be caught up to Jesus at the very same moment that He returns to earth. For you theologians, that's called belief in a post-tribulation rapture. Down through history many respected Christians have held and taught this doctrine, some beginning as early as 200 AD. However, with all due respect for their genuine love of Jesus, that teaching can have the same effect that Paul wrote about here; if we take the events of the Tribulation predicted by Jesus, Paul and John as being literal and real and then seriously ponder the idea that if it should begin during our lifetime, we are going to experience unimaginable pain and suffering and probably die under the awful persecution that is part of it, that's enough to make one live in tremendous fear of the future! It is easy to see how the Thessalonians who were already being persecuted severely were living in growing fear because of this, or even how believers living in the path of Isis or in North Korea, could live in that same awful alarm, "What if this is now the Tribulation? What if it's beginning?" That's why it's important that we understand:

II. The Identifying Marks That The Day Of The Lord Has Begun which Paul reveals to us in verses (3-5). There are two things that Paul reminds them of here, things that he had already taught them in the few weeks that he was with them a year earlier. These two things are unmistakable, recognizable signs and it is very important to recognize that they are tied together as one. He says that when the Day of the Lord arrives:

1. there will come a rebellion The Greek word is apostasy which means a defection from the truth. It does not refer to unbelievers who deny the truth but to those who have held the truth and deliberately abandon it and renounce it. Once official persecution by the Roman Empire began a decade or two after this, arrested Christians were offered a choice: renounce Christ and offer sacrifice to the Emperor; otherwise face prison and death. Some complied with the demand and became known as apostates and later on during intermittent times of peace, there was real debate in the church as to whether apostates who had renounced the faith, could repent and be readmitted. Today there is a different form of widespread apostasy that exists within the professing church itself; there are millions who still retain the name "Christian" but deny that Christ is God, that He rose bodily from the dead, that salvation is ONLY through Him and that He is coming again. They have departed from God's saving truth. But when the Day of the Lord arrives a widespread apostasy will occur in the classic sense. It will be something that can be recognized without any mistake because it is THE apostasy, THE great falling away, THE rebellion. Millions will renounce and reject whatever belief they had in the true God or in Jesus Christ. And they will do it, Paul says, in conjunction with the second part of this sign:

2. an evil world leader will be revealed in an unmistakable way. Here he is called the man of lawlessness (in some translations the man of sin). In other places in Scripture he is called the Beast or the Antichrist. He will be a world leader far greater than any Napoleon or Hitler who has tried to conquer the world in the past. He will actually succeed in garnering the allegiance of the nations of the earth through force and deception. But when this man is finally revealed, Paul implies that the whole world will be able to recognize him for who he is because of this:

a. he will actually proclaim himself to BE God Sure, Egyptian Pharaohs and Roman Emperors and even several modern-day dictators and cult leaders have called themselves god and demanded worship, but this man will be different from all the rest. He will proclaim to the whole world that he is God and here's the unmistakable part:

b. he will do it in the Temple of God in Jerusalem, the place chosen by Jehovah, the True God, for His Name to dwell forever! It will be a direct act of defiance, an impersonation of God Almighty Himself, complete with a demand that the whole world worship him or die. Of course, the Temple was destroyed in AD 70 and is not standing today, so obviously it will be rebuilt at some point yet future because the Word of God must be fulfilled. Look with me at what Jesus said in Mt. 24:15-21. Jesus said that when you see this Abomination of Desolation standing in the Holy Place, placing his statue there permanently, declaring himself to be the true god and demanding that the whole world worship him under pain of death, THAT is the unmistakable sign that the worst of the Great Tribulation will immediately begin! In fact, that is the ONLY sign that Jesus gave that could be looked for, recognized, and people could regard with assurance that the Great Tribulation had arrived. And the great Apostasy is simply multitudes of people renouncing any faith in God or Christ and declaring their new worship of this false god when he demands it!

Paul said, "When you see THAT happening, you know you are smack in the middle of the Day of the Lord and destruction is upon you! Until you see THAT, no matter how bad the earthquakes or the famines or the persecution you are experiencing, IT is not here; you're NOT in the Day of the Lord; it is NOT the end time. The end is not yet! These unmistakable signs must happen first!" How I wish people could somehow understand and grasp that simple statement! Through the centuries, people have railed against this Roman Emperor or that Pope or some other tyrant, claiming they are the Antichrist. Robert Fuller writes: Back in 1925, the threat of Russia loomed sufficiently to set prophecy writers working overtime in their efforts to identify just who would soon emerge to fill the role of the Antichrist and oppose Russia (Gog) in the final days. The chief contender for the role [was] the fascist Italian leader [Benito] Mussolini... Mussolini was suggested principally because of his association with Rome, the center of the Antichrist confederation that will rise to dominate the world in the end times. As early as 1925... publications such as Prophetic News and Evangel alerted their readers that they should be on the lookout for the revival of the old Roman Empire. "Mussolini", Evangel warned, "was the strongest character in world politics today" and his rise to power could mean nothing else than that "the climax is near." Gerald Winrod's Mussolini's Place in Prophecy (1933) reviewed all the biblical clues concerning the identity of the Antichrist and concluded that they "all point to Mussolini." [Naming The Antichrist, Robert C. Fuller, p. 161.] Twelve years later Mussolini was caught fleeing Italy, summarily shot and his body hanged upside down in a public square! He was NOT the Antichrist! Jesus said there is only one sign, THIS sign, the world leader proclaiming himself to be god IN the Temple, and those who are alive at that time and see it will be able to know the end time is actually upon them and they are living in it. But now Paul backs up to explain something else. He tells us:

III. What Is Preventing The Day Of The Lord From Beginning (6-8) The reason that the Day of the Lord, the end time, has not begun is this:

1. there is a powerful restraining force that must be taken out of the way first, according to verse 6. The powerful force of evil and lawlessness has been at work in the world all along, but through the centuries there has been some force, some unseen mighty power, restraining it, holding it back, keeping it from becoming as bad as it could possibly be. And in verse 7 this force is grammatically personal and masculine, a HE, a Person, One who has been at work to keep the whole world from descending into the pit of evil and falling under God's judgment. Now, what Person, what force could do such a huge thing? Only God Himself has such power! Therefore, most interpreters believe that:

a. this force is the Holy Spirit Himself! Remember, He was sent into the world at Pentecost and He was sent to give power to build the Church. He came to dwell in believers and filled them with God's mighty power so they would become witnesses unto Christ all the way to the uttermost parts of the earth. From that day to this He has been at work in and through believers all over the world and bringing conviction upon nonbelievers continually growing that mighty body, the Church. But in order for the world to descend into complete evil and follow after the Antichrist, the Spirit must be taken out of the way. And:

b. since the Spirit indwells believers, it follows that the Church must be taken away or He would still be here! For Him to be gone, WE must be gone. So what Paul is really saying is that:

2. after the Church is raptured out, the man of lawlessness will be revealed Only after Christ has appeared in the air and taken us all up to be with Him, only THEN will the Day of Grace be over and the Day of the Lord begin and the Lawless One will come on the scene! The Spirit came to indwell and empower the church and when the Gospel has been preached to all the peoples, He will be taken out and the end will come. So we will not BE here when all the wrath of God falls upon the earth! We will be in heaven with Jesus! Hallelujah! Now, after the church is taken up there will still be many who will come to believe through our lasting influence, a great innumerable multitude of them, Revelation says. But when the Antichrist demands the worship of the world, a great many of those will fall away after him and a great many will also be killed. Yet in the end, Paul says:

3. Jesus will utterly destroy him with a word and the glory of His coming That's all it will take! The most powerful man on the earth with all his armies, at a simple command from Jesus' lips, will be thrown alive into the fire of hell and all those with him die instantly according to Rev. 19. One scholar says, "The very breathing of the glorified Jesus will slay the lawless one like the blast of a fiery furnace!" [D.E. Hiebert, Thessalonian Epistles, p. 315] Thank God that we know how this all ends and that it ends for good!

But after assuring us of his end, Paul goes back to give us more details about:

IV. The Reign Of The Man Of Lawlessness (9-12) First of all, notice that this man:

1. he will be empowered by Satan. Rev. 13:4 says that the great red dragon, Satan himself, gave his authority to this beast. Remember how he boasted to Jesus as he tempted Him, showing him all the kingdoms of the world and saying, To you I will give all this authority and their glory, for it has been delivered to me, and I give it to whom I will. - Lk. 4:6. He wasn't lying. He will give all that authority, all that power to rule the nations of the earth to this one man. He will be Satan's man, Satan's messiah, if you will, empowered and driven by him, truly THE Anti-Christ! And because of that great power:

2. he will produce many false signs and wonders - Rev. 13:13-14 says that his religious sidekick, the False Prophet, ...performed great and miraculous signs, even causing fire to come down from heaven to earth in full view of men. Because of the signs he was given power to do on behalf of the first beast, he deceived the inhabitants of the earth.... These will not be some kind of trickery but genuinely impossible things that can only be done by supernatural power in the spiritual realm. They are false signs only in that he uses them to "prove" to the world that he really IS God, yet they are real and will have a tremendously powerful effect. The world will believe him! But Paul says it like this:

3. he will deceive those who refused to love the truth and be saved, not those who never heard it! What does he mean? Well, think about it. We know that:

a. the church will take the Gospel to the entire world before the end comes Mat. 24:14 guarantees us by Jesus' own statement that the Gospel WILL be preached to all the nations, all the peoples of the earth and then the end will come. Some from every people in every place on the planet will be saved. The Gospel will be known in every culture and then suddenly the church will be raptured out. The ones who are left here on earth will be those who refused to believe the truth and be saved! It isn't that they didn't have opportunity, but that they rejected the message. And then this man of lawlessness will come upon the scene and become more and more prominent until only 3 ½ years later he proclaims himself God and most of them will flock after him and worship him. In other words:

b. those who reject the Gospel will miss the Rapture and fall prey to the deception What if the job of reaching the nations gets finished and Jesus comes and catches us out? What about those we leave behind? Will they still have opportunity to be saved, even if we are gone? Yes, they surely will, however, it is much, much more likely that they will fall prey to the deception of the Antichrist and worship him, as most of the world will. In fact, Paul says that:

4. God will aid this process by sending a powerful deluding influence Just as there is a blinding influence, a veil, a hardening in part, that God has brought upon the Jews all these centuries because of their rejection of His Son and of His church sent to them 2000 years ago, in like manner He will send a blinding, deluding influence upon those who have rejected His message and His Son. He will actually help the man of lawlessness accomplish his goal. Why? Because:

5. through this God will justly condemn those who rejected His truth and chose to love unrighteous, sinful behavior instead. Now, this doesn't sit well with us because our culture has given us a man-centered view of the universe. Deep down we tend to believe that God exists to save us, that everybody has a right to unlimited chances to be re-deemed, but the truth is that this is God's world and nobody has a right to anything except Him. Out of His undeserved grace and mercy He will send the gospel to all nations and give the whole world the opportunity to be saved, but if they reject it and refuse to worship the true and living God, He is absolutely just to condemn them to suffer His wrath on earth and beyond. Rejecting the truth is treason against the God of the universe; it is choosing to serve the Enemy instead of the rightful Ruler and it is punishable by death.

Those who refuse the warning, rightfully suffer the consequences. Around 1900, the French island of Martinique was a prosperous colony in the Caribbean and was known as the Paris of the West Indies. The capital, St. Pierre, lay at the foot of Mount Pelée, an old dormant volcano. During 1902, boiling water and steam were seen erupting from the crater and on April 25th, a scientific expedition was sent up to investigate. The island's newspaper, Les Colonies published the findings and told the inhabitants that there was no reason to be afraid. Day by day, life became unbearable on the island. A hideous odor of sulfur filled the air and birds dropped out of the air asphyxiated by the ash and sulfur. By May 3rd businessmen and prudent individuals moved to the Southern part of the Island. However, the newspaper continued to mock, and on May 7th it published an interview with Professor M. Landes which read, "Mont Pelee presents no more danger to the inhabitants of St. Pierre than does Vesuvius to those of Naples." The Newspaper added, "We confess we cannot understand this panic. Where could one be better off than in St. Pierre?" On the morning of May 8th, at 7:52 AM exactly, the Volcano erupted and exploded. There was no warning as the side of the mountain ripped out. Super-heated steam at a temperature of 1000 degrees Centigrade blasted out at hurricane speed obliterating the whole town and incinerating 30,000 people. Only two men survived the destruction, a prisoner, who was in the town dungeon and a cobbler who hid in his cellar. [<http://tim-shey.blogspot.com/2011/12/eruption-of-mount-pelee-st-pierre.html>] Through the church, God will give the entire human race fair warning that the volcano of His wrath is one day going to erupt. The awful, terrible Day of the Lord WILL come. Those who are wise heed the warning and run to Jesus and are rescued from it. Those who scoff and mock and refuse it are rightfully left to endure the horrible consequences of their choice. For us who believe, it simply emphasizes over again the absolute urgency of seeing that as many possible hear the news that can deliver them and of making that our life's purpose.

Standing Firm In The Faith - 2 Thess. 2:13-3:5

From the very beginning of this series, we have mentioned time and again the fact that the believers in Thessalonica, to whom Paul is writing, were suffering a great deal of persecution for their faith. That is the reason that they were tempted to believe the false teaching that the sufferings of the end time Day of the Lord were already upon them, as we saw last time. It is the very purpose of both these letters, and particularly of this section which we will study today, to encourage them to stand firm in their faith, to continue to trust in Christ and hold firmly to the Gospel message that Paul had taught them. And that wonderful encouragement to stand firm is just as necessary for us today as it was for them, even though the attacks against us may be of an entirely different type. In her book Battlefield of the Mind, Joyce Meyer says, "When a person is going through a hard time, his mind wants to give up. Satan knows that if he can defeat us in our mind, he can defeat us in our experience. That's why it is so important that we not lose heart, grow weary and faint." That "hard time" can be the pressure we face from the culture around us that tries to belittle what we believe and force us into its mold. Or the "hard time" can be the pain of the sufferings that we experience in life like battling cancer or losing a loved one or enduring divorce and desertion by a spouse. As we learn from Job's experience, Satan's plan has ever been to use the pain of our sufferings of whatever type to turn our minds against God so that he might control our lives. Standing firm in our faith is indeed of utmost importance and Paul reminds us that the very foundation of it is:

I. The Wonderful Assurance That We Possess (2:13-14) Here is the fact we know; like the Thessalonians:

1. God chose us from the beginning to salvation There is a slight issue in the text here. Many Greek manuscripts have two words in the text to describe how God has chosen us; in English they mean from the beginning, while other manuscripts have the two combined into one word with a different final letter which translates, as a firstfruit, which you heard in the ESV. Most translations prefer the first reading and it is consistent with what Paul wrote in Eph. 1:4, For [God] chose us in Christ before the foundation of the world that we may be holy and unblemished in his sight in love. Our security is rooted in the fact that God chose us to belong to Him, to receive salvation, to become completely holy and unblemished in glory waaaaaaay back before the creation of the world! Before He made the seas and the sky and the mountains and the animals and people, any of it, He had already chosen that we would be created and that we would belong to Him and that Christ would die to make it so! Now that is a profound mystery that believers have always struggled to understand. We have developed whole systems of theological logic to explain something that God never meant to be understood; it was meant to be marveled at and believed and appropriated, especially in suffering when we're wondering what God is doing and how this can be happening to us and whether we will be able to make it through. Yes, we will! We were chosen before the world began! Our salvation has already been standing and secure longer than the earth itself! And then we were finally born and came upon the scene of time and, Paul says, there were three elements that actually caused our salvation to occur. First:

a. He brought it to pass through the sanctifying work of the Spirit The Spirit of God set us apart from the human race to belong to God. He worked in us in a special way. He convicted us of our sin and our need for salvation. He drew our hearts to actually believe that Christ had died for our sins and to cast ourselves upon Him. He caused us to believe in our hearts and to cry out with our minds and our lips, "Oh Jesus, save ME!" And then that same Spirit entered our very bodies and regenerated us. He birthed in us a brand-new spirit, one that is holy, like that of Christ and joined Himself permanently to us. He literally MADE us holy! Then secondly Paul says:

b. our part in it was simply to believe the truth We did nothing to save ourselves; God did it all. All we did was to believe, to accept the work of God on our behalf! Not one shred of it was from ourselves; it was the gift of God, not of works, not of us doing anything, so that none of us could ever have anything to boast in. We simply believed it, but for that to occur, there had to be a third element:

c. we were called to believe through the sharing of the Gospel Romans says that nobody can believe without hearing and nobody can hear without someone preaching the news to them. Paul says, "I came along and brought the Gospel to you and you believed..." In our lives it was someone else, but the proclaiming of the Good News was the thing that the Spirit used to draw us to Christ so that we would believe. That is the process that God used to actually bring about the salvation He had decided on in eternity past, but Paul's real point was the end of verse 14. All of this had a purpose; God did all of it so that...

2. we will certainly possess the full glory of Christ in the end In other words, what God started in the beginning and brought to pass in our lives, He will certainly complete in the future. We WILL share the glory of Christ forever, no matter what we have to endure in this life! Look with me at the tremendous promise we have in Rom. 8:29-30. Simply put, our glorification with Him is already accomplished; it's a "done deal". The price has been paid and the goods are already delivered! It is more certain and more permanent than the dirt we stand upon! Nothing in all of creation can take it away from us. No matter how deep and how long the suffering we have to endure in this life, in just a short while we SHALL be glorified with Jesus forever! Hallelujah! So, as Paul says:

3. we must always be thankful for this great assurance! What if God had simply told us to fight the battle and face the struggle without any assurance of the outcome? Our minds would be continually filled with fear and doubt, and the greater the struggle, the greater the uncertainty. Bill Hybels suggests, Sometime when you're in an airport, observe the difference between passengers who hold confirmed tickets and those who are on standby. The ones with confirmed tickets read newspapers, chat with their friends or sleep. The ones on standby hang around the ticket counter, pace and smoke, smoke and pace. The difference is caused by the confidence factor. [Bill Hybels, Too Busy Not To Pray, IVP, p. 113.] In other words, the ones who know what their future holds have confidence about it and wait expectantly for their plane to depart. The ones who don't know whether they'll even be on the plane, have anxiety and worry constantly whether they'll make it. Knowing what the future holds for us brings peace and calm to our lives right now, no matter WHAT we are having to endure. The Scripture teaches that, so thank God that He has given us an unquestionable, rock-solid knowledge that we will be glorified with Christ just as certainly as if it is already done, which it is to God!

You know, all of us have a tendency to leave things undone. At home we've all got projects we started but never really finished. At the beach you can see the remains of partially built sand castles. The sculptors made significant progress, but apparently, they got distracted or bored and stopped building before their castles were completed. There are unfinished paintings, half-built houses, and incomplete manuscripts. We are all inclined to stop working on projects before we have completed them. But God is not like us! Our Creator will always finish what He has started. Every single one of His masterpieces, planned in eternity past and begun in time, will be brought to fulfillment in eternity future! Our future is as secure as God Himself! Hallelujah! So, having reminded us of that confidence as our foundation, Paul's exhortation is this:

II. We Must Stand Firm In What We Believe (2:15) The Greek word means to be stationary, to stand still, like a post set in cement that doesn't move when you lean on it. We are encouraged to be like an unmovable rock that weathers every storm that life hurls against it. But what does that mean for us? Two things, Paul says. It means that:

1. we must firmly hold on to the truths that we've been taught We are to seize them with a firm grip and refuse to let go of them with the tenacity of a mountain climber clinging to a rope that is suspending him on the face of a vertical cliff. So firmly are we to continue to stand in the truths of our faith. Now:

a. we received them orally from trustworthy teachers as the Thessalonians did from Paul. And I'm sure he is referring to the truth that he had just reiterated to them in the preceding section of the letter, the truth that Jesus IS coming and He WILL catch us all up to be with Him BEFORE the awful suffering of the Day of the Lord begins. That truth was slipping away from them and he reminded them in verse 5 that he had taught them this when he was with them. We need to cling to the things that godly men and women have taught us and passed down to us, the important truths of the faith. Of course, in that day the New Testament was just being written and believers HAD to trust what they'd been taught orally by men like Paul, yet even so, he mentions the importance of clinging to what he had taught them in his first letter. Likewise, we have received many important truths:

b. we received them directly from the written Scriptures themselves Ultimately, we have the completed repository of God's truth because we have the whole Bible. So, we are to grasp what the Scriptures clearly teach with an iron fist and never let go. As Paul wrote to Timothy, ...continue in what you have learned and have become convinced of, because you know those from whom you learned it, and how from infancy you have known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make you wise for salvation through faith in Christ Jesus. - 2 Tim. 3:14-15. The Scriptures are the once-for-all repository of saving truth; we must cling to them or we have no anchor at all. And the godly people who taught them to us, we know them and trust them and must cling to the Scriptural truths they impressed upon us. But at the bottom line, our trust cannot be simply in facts we've learned; it must be in a Person (2:16-17).

2. we must trust in Jesus and God our Father who gave us this glorious hope of a guaranteed future with Him forever. And what Paul trusted God to do for the Thessalonians, WE must trust Him to do for us.

a. we must trust Him to comfort us as we endure the sufferings of life We KNOW that suffering is going to come into our lives. Jesus went to great lengths to warn us that we will be hated and endure persecution, that in this world we WILL have tribulation. But He also assured us that He would send us the Comforter and He put it in writing that He is the God of all comfort and that He WILL comfort us in all our afflictions and troubles. That word comfort is paraclete. It means that He will always be right there in our suffering and come alongside us to help us and console us and encourage us and strengthen us in whatever way we need. He has promised it and we must trust Him to do it, no matter how dismal our circumstances may seem. And secondly:

b. we must trust Him to empower us to continue good works and words You know as well as I do that the pain of suffering often tempts us strongly to do things that are sinful and wrong or to lash out and say things that are sinful and wrong. It saps our energy and even our resolve to do and say what is holy and right. Therefore, Paul urges us that we must trust God to establish us in that pattern, to provide the energy and the power and the determination to continue steadfastly in that godly direction without wavering. A young man named William Wilberforce was discouraged one night in the early 1790s after another defeat in his 10 year long battle against the slave trade in England. Tired and frustrated, he opened his Bible and began to leaf through it. A small piece of paper fell out and fluttered to the floor. It was a letter written to him by John Wesley shortly before his death. Wilberforce read it again: "Unless the divine power has raised you up... I see not how you can go through your glorious enterprise in opposing that (abominable practice of slavery), which is the scandal of religion, of England, and of human nature. Unless God has raised you up for this very thing, you will be worn out by the opposition of men and devils. But if God be for you, who can be against you? Are all of them together stronger than God? Oh, be not weary of well-doing. Go on in the name of God, and in the power of His might." [Daily Bread, June 16, 1989]. Wilberforce did exactly that and in 1807 slavery was abolished in the British Empire.

Beloved, we are to stand firm! We are to tenaciously hold on to the truths we've been taught and to firmly trust God to comfort us and to work through us to accomplish everything He has called us to do! Standing firm does not mean standing still; it means continuing to move forward in faith. And it also means this:

III. We Must Be Diligent In Prayer Because We Are In A Spiritual Battle (3:1-5) Paul told the Ephesians that ...we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the cosmic powers over this present darkness, against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly places. - Eph. 6:12. Satan and his demons are always opposing us, always fighting against us and therefore, he concludes in verse 20 that we need to pray ...at all times in the Spirit with all prayer and supplication... The battle is fought and won in prayer, therefore standing firm means a life of fervent praying. Paul says that:

1. we need to pray the Word of God will spread quickly and be honored, as it had done there in Thessalonica and as it is doing among the Yenadi people in India right now. As they prayed for the impact of Paul's missionary travels, we need to pray for our partners who spread the Word of God all over the world, to ask God that it will take root and grow, that people will respond and the church will be planted. Your praying must never just be about you and your own struggles and difficulties; it must first of all be focused on the expansion of God's Kingdom. Second, he says that:

2. we need to pray for deliverance from evil people who reject the faith Our new brothers and sisters in India and in Kyrgyzstan and many other places face great opposition from their own families and their villages. They suffer a great many things because they believe and we need to pray for them to be rescued from the designs of evil people who would destroy their faith. And there are a few of those here too, people who would drag every one of us away from our faith in Jesus if they could and demolish everything we believe through their rational arguments. We, especially our young people, need to be rescued from them too. So, we must fight the battle on our knees all the time. But no matter what, Paul assures us that:

3. God will always remain faithful If we are faithless, he remains faithful—for he cannot deny himself. - 2 Tim. 2:13. It is an unchangeable part of His character. We can count on Him.

a. He will always strengthen us to endure our circumstances, no matter how bad they become. He will keep us standing firm by His power, if we simply trust Him to do it. And:

b. He will always protect us from the evil one John promised it, We know that everyone who has been born of God does not keep on sinning, but he who was born of God [that is, Jesus] protects him, and the evil one does not touch him. - 1 Jn. 5:18. He cannot touch us; He cannot do the slightest thing to us without express permission from God, and then only exactly as much as God chooses to allow. But even so, He cannot touch our souls! He cannot take us away from the One to whom we belong, no matter how much suffering God may allow him to send into our lives. And therefore, because of this confidence, we must pray as Paul did for the Thessalonians:

4. we must ask God to focus the direction of our hearts toward Himself and away from our circumstances. We should pray:

a. that we would love Him with all our heart After all, that is the first and greatest commandment. That is the "main thing" and to "keep the main thing the main thing" in our lives, we must ask Him for it! "Lord, help me to love you more, to love you with all my being. Draw me deeper into Your love so that I see only You and with You at the center of my vision let all else fade away!" That should be what our hearts are focused on and the last thing Paul mentions is:

b. that we would persevere as Christ did The writer of Hebrews put it like this, Therefore, since we are surrounded by so great a cloud of witnesses, let us also lay aside every weight, and sin which clings so closely, and let us run with endurance the race that is set before us, looking to Jesus, the founder and perfecter of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is seated at the right hand of the throne of God. - Heb. 12:1-2. How do we run our race with endurance? By constantly looking away to Jesus, focusing our hearts and our thoughts on Him and how He endured the awful suffering of the cross, totally ignoring the terrible shame it brought to Him in the eyes of the world, and seeing Him now seated at the right hand of God and US there with Him because of what He did!

If our hearts are focused on the immense love of God for us and the incredible sacrifice of Christ on the cross for us, then our hearts will love Him deeply and persevere as He did for us. A certain medieval monk once announced to his people that he would be preaching the next Sunday evening on "The Love of God." As the shadows fell and the light ceased to come in through the cathedral windows, the congregation gathered. But instead of using words, in the darkness of the altar area, the monk simply lighted a candle and carried it to the crucifix, the statue of Christ hanging upon the cross. First, he illumined the crown of thorns, next, the two wounded hands, and finally the marks of the spear wound. In the hush that fell, he blew out the candle and left the chancel. There was nothing else to say. In the cross God is saying, "I love you so much that I would rather die than live without you!" Ask God to indelibly impress that vision upon the eyes of your heart and you WILL stand firm, all the way to the end.

Earning Our Daily Bread - 2 Thess. 3:6-18

With this message we conclude our study through Paul's two epistles to the Thessalonian church. It's been a heart-felt journey filled with Paul's love and encouragement for them and for us. But before he closes his second letter, there is one more thing that Paul feels strongly that he needs to write about. He wants to address:

I. A Troubling Issue In The Church (6-15) Let's read verse (6). Those are pretty strong words, especially just coming off Paul's focus on loving God and fixing our hearts on the cross of Christ in verse 5. He commands us in the name of our Lord Jesus to obey this two-part:

1. the principle The first part is pretty obvious: believers should not walk, should not live a lifestyle that is disorderly and disruptive, that is contrary to the godly example that Paul had lived before and taught them. This would apply to any type of lifestyle that is disobedient to Christ. We are not to live in immorality; we are not to live in drunkenness or gluttony or greed or a host of other things that displease God, but as we'll see in just a moment, in this case what he really means is that believers should not live a lifestyle of idleness where they do not work. And the second part of the principle is that we should dissociate ourselves from those who do live that way; we should set ourselves apart from them! Now, after giving us that strong command, Paul goes on to spell out:

2. the problem in verses (11-12) Paul had heard the news that in Thessalonica some believers had given up working altogether. They had quit their jobs or their professions and were essentially doing nothing productive, relying instead on others to take care of them. Now that may be a bit hard for us to understand, so let's take a moment to think about:

a. the reason for this idleness What would make people want to lay around and do nothing all day? Well, first of all, it is possible that:

(1) it may have been a cultural tendency I wonder if in your Bible reading you have ever noticed Titus 1:12 and pondered it. Paul wrote Titus, One of the Cretans, a prophet of their own, said, "Cretans are always liars, evil beasts, lazy gluttons." What an un-politically correct thing to say! At first glance it sounds like a prejudiced ethnic slur: "The people of Crete are a bunch of lying, lazy bums!" Indeed, it was basically a racial slur that Paul was quoting, one that was made by a poet named Epimenades, who himself was from Crete. Paul is saying, "He was right! The people of Crete ARE lazy!" Now, he didn't mean that every last Cretan was a lazy bum, but simply that the culture on Crete was one that promoted a lifestyle of laziness and gluttony and many of the men there followed it. We're still using the term Cretan in English slang today as a derogatory term! For centuries gypsies were known as thieves and still are, simply because many of them have been thieves! It was a primary occupation in their culture and a rite of passage into adulthood! In many of the tribal peoples of the world culture dictates that the women do all of the work, the gardening and tending animals and cooking and washing while the men lay around and do nothing! That was how the Sougb people of Papua Indonesia lived before the Lunows brought the Gospel to them. The men were lazy! It may be that in Thessalonica, the cultural norm was to be lazy and some of the believers there were simply reverting back to living like their neighbors. There are certainly areas right here in the US where that is a cultural problem, where people simply tend to be lazy and believers really need to live a different lifestyle from those around them. However, in light of the theme of these letters, it's highly possible that their laziness:

(2) it may have been in expectation of Christ's coming They may have figured, "Jesus is coming soon; why should I waste time in working! We should just use up what we have and spend our time praying and waiting for Him to come!" Various groups have done this very thing down through the years. On September 29, 1975, in the town of Grannis, Arkansas, a group of approximately twenty-five residents, most of them relatives, closed themselves off from the rest of the world to ready themselves for what they believed to be the soon-approaching return of Jesus Christ. They met together for religious services and prayer, and during one meeting, one of the family members reported hearing a direction from God that they were to gather together and wait for the return of Christ. Over a period of almost ten months, the vigil members left jobs, removed children from school, and gathered food and supplies in a single residence to await the end of the world. The members gathered in the home of Gene Nance, many of them leaving cars and houses of their own behind. One of the families owned a store, which was used for supplies. Since Nance made no mortgage payments on his house during the vigil, it was repossessed and the residents evicted by federal marshals on July 16, 1976. The families also lost three other houses and six cars to repossession during the course of the almost ten-month vigil. [<http://www.encyclopediaofarkansas.net/encyclopedia/entry-detail.aspx?entryID=2637>]. Perhaps something of this very sort had begun to happen in Thessalonica, the believers using the "soonness" of the return of Jesus as a reason to "check out" of the normal realities of life on earth, like working. But, on the other hand:

(3) it may have simply been personal laziness, as it is for many people today who choose to live a life of idleness. It's nothing new; Solomon warned us against it over and over again 3,000 years ago in Proverbs like these: The sluggard buries his hand in the dish and will not even bring it back to his mouth. - 19:24. The caricature of this kind of person is that somebody puts the food in his dish and he's too lazy to even lift his hand to his mouth to eat it. Or how about 20:4, The sluggard does not plow in the autumn; he will seek at harvest and have nothing. He won't do the work to plow and plant his field and yet he expects it somehow to magically yield fruit at harvest time without work. We all know people with a similar disposition who simply don't like to work; they'd rather lay around and relax and will use any excuse to get out of labor.

Well, whichever cause it may have been, or some combination of all three:

b. the result of this idleness in people's lifestyles was exactly the same as it is today:

(1) it made them a burden upon others and the church Eventually their own store of goods ran out and others were forced out of love and caring to provide for them. Believers are especially susceptible to this. We love people and we have soft hearts and we are often willing out of pure sympathy to help people who make no effort to help themselves. Paul gave young pastor Timothy instructions about how to take care of widows among the believers in Asia where he served. Look with me at 1 Tim. 5:16. Family members ought to take the first responsibility in caring for their widows or any members who are destitute without income and not leave the burden to fall on the church body; that frees the church to take care of those really have nobody to care for them. If families don't do this, it becomes a heavy burden that the church has difficulty carrying. But what's even worse, Paul says, is that this idle lifestyle:

(2) it led them to become busybodies With all this time on their hands and nothing productive to do, they would just hang around and get involved in each other's affairs and it led to fighting and arguing and rumor spreading and gossip, which is exactly what Paul saw happening to the younger widows when they were cared for by the church and didn't have to work as they normally would. Look at 1 Tim. 5:13. The old saying, Idle hands are the devil's workshop, is true and it probably comes from St. Jerome's words about 400 AD, Do something, so that the devil may always find you busy! Satan uses idleness; when we refuse to be engaged in the work that God intends for us to do, we always tend to wind up engaged in doing things that God never intends for us to do! You don't have to look around very far to see examples of that. That's why Paul gives us such a strong:

c. the command against this idleness in verse 6 and later repeats and expounds upon it in verse 12. God's design for us is that:

(1) we are to work in a quiet fashion, that is, to stop all the useless, destructive hustle and bustle that idleness brings and work diligently with our own hands at what we do, whether we are a sanitation worker or a CEO. Each of us has a profession, a job, a place that we fit into society and we are to focus on working hard at that without complaining or disturbing others. In Eph. 4:28 Paul said, Let the thief no longer steal, but rather let him labor, doing honest work with his own hands, so that he may have something to share with anyone in need. Even if we have not been thieves before conversion, that admonition can be applied to all of us. Let us labor daily, let us do honest work with our own hands and minds, and let us do it, not with a view to get all we can for ourselves, but with a view to having the means to help others who are in need! And in the second half of verse 12 Paul says clearly that each of us is to literally eat our own bread. That is:

(2) we are responsible to provide our own needs as much as possible, not to sponge off the labor of others through idleness and laziness. Now right in the middle of our passage we have:

3. the example: Paul had shown them this principle by his own life when he lived among them a year or so earlier (7-10) Paul:

a. he had the "right" as an apostle to expect them to provide his needs while he lived there and taught them. That's a normal principle; we ought to support those who minister to us in spiritual things, so they are freed up to focus and concentrate on doing that for us. But:

b. he chose instead to work hard to meet his own needs He was a tent maker; his home province of Cilicia was known for its goat's hair cloth called cilicium, a strong felt which was used in the making of tents, probably much like the ones the Bedouin dwell in in the desert today. It was not an easy occupation; it required a lot of hard work and time, time and effort that could have been invested in teaching and discipling his new converts. But:

c. he did this to give them (and us) an example of how they ought to live He showed them that he worked just as hard as any of them, that he didn't come to them to mooch off of them and that each one of us needs to work hard at what we do and give to others. So, from the basis of one who was working hard:

d. he gave them a clear command in verse 10 that those choosing not to work should not eat. Evidently, he knew this problem of idleness already existed there in Thessalonica and he wanted to ensure that these new believers were taught their responsibility to work hard. So his command to them was simply, "If you don't work, you don't eat. We're not going to feed you if you are lazy and do nothing to provide for yourself!" Now, of course:

(1) this does not apply to those unable to work or unable to find work None of this is meant to make those who are disabled or sick or who can't find a job feel bad or guilty. It is no shame and we are ALWAYS to take care of those who are unable to take care of themselves by their own efforts. By this maxim Paul is simply saying that:

(2) people learn best by suffering the consequence of their wrong choices If we rescue them all the time, they never learn. If they commit an offense and we pay the fine for them, they repeat it. If they are idle and we feed them, they never learn to work; instead, they learn to take advantage of the "system" better!

So, what about those who won't listen, who won't follow the example, who persist in idleness and refuse to work? Paul gives us:

4. the answer in (13-15). Here is how we are to treat those who live in idleness or any other form of serious disobedience to God's word. Most importantly:

a. we are not to grow weary of doing what is right ourselves We are not to learn from their negative example and imitate them. We're not to say, "How come they get away with that? Maybe I should do that too." We are never to tire of doing what God says is good. Then:

b. we are to warn the disobedient sincerely as brothers We're not to count them as enemies, to say, "You aren't a Christian because you do this or that!" They are still our brothers and sisters; disobedience can't change that. We must love them and that means warning them in the most heart-felt fashion that we can that the choices they are making are going to bring disaster into their lives. Yet at the same time:

c. we are not to enable them by provision or by full companionship We are not to pay their bills or fix their leaking roofs; we are to let God teach them the lesson that He needs to, that if they want Him to meet their needs, they need to obey Him. And at the same time, we are not to act like nothing is wrong, to continue the close companionship that we had before. The ESV phrase have nothing to do with him sounds a bit strong; do not keep company with him or do not associate with him, as other translations put it, is closer to the point. It is not shunning as the Amish practice it; it doesn't mean that you can't speak to that person or must turn on your heel and walk away when you run into them. It means that you must break close relationship with them; you don't hang out with them; you don't laugh and joke with them and do things together the way you used to, as though nothing has changed. You allow them to feel the shame that their behavior is causing them by seeing that it has pushed you out of their lives and experiencing that great loss. As I said, this applies to any form of serious disobedience, but here Paul is aiming directly at those who are idle and lazy.

God places great value on work. Jesus testified, ...My Father is working until now, and I am working. - Jn. 5:17. God is always at work; He is never idle, never lazy. Charles Kingsley said, "Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done whether you like it or not. Being required to work and doing so to the best of your ability will breed in you self-control, diligence, contentment, and a hundred other virtues which the idle never know." Martin Luther wrote, "The maid who sweeps her kitchen is doing the will of God just as much as the monk who prays -- not because she may sing a Christian hymn as she sweeps but because God loves clean floors. The Christian shoemaker does his Christian duty not by putting little crosses on the shoes, but by making good shoes, because God is interested in good craftsmanship." [Our Daily Bread, September 5, 1994.] The Apostle Paul wrote, Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord, not for men, since you know that you will receive an inheritance from the Lord as a reward. It is the Lord Christ you are serving. - Col. 3:23-24, and he wrote it to believers who were slaves and didn't have a choice. Our daily work, no matter what it may be, is a gift of God, one He expects us to fulfill to His glory. Now Paul concludes His letter with:

II. A Heartfelt Benediction (16-18) Most of Paul's letters were physically written down by someone else as he dictated, in this case probably by Silas or Timothy. Yet at the end, he always took the quill in his own hand and wrote out a benediction in his own writing as a verification of authenticity. And in his blessing to the Thessalonians, there are three things that he wished for them, the same three things that I'm sure Jesus wants for all of us who live in the midst of the suffering and trouble of this world. First:

1. Jesus wants us to constantly live in His peace, to face all the circumstances of life, no matter how difficult, with the confidence that He is in control and that He will work out all things according to His will and for His greater good. If we take everything to Him in prayer, He will give us that peace. He has promised it. Second:

2. Jesus wants us to continually experience His presence He is never NOT with us; that's impossible. He lives in us! The point is that He wants us to experience His presence, to draw near to Him and rest in Him and when we do, He will draw near to us. He has promised it. And finally:

3. Jesus wants us to perpetually draw upon His power We often read quickly over that last phrase, but it has deep meaning. By grace, Paul means Jesus' power which He gives to us, though we are undeserving. He wishes that Jesus' great strength may be given to us to endure and it will be, if we simply ask Him. He has promised it.

Therein is the secret to living: His peace, His presence and His power. Jesus is what we really need, Jesus alone. John Newton was a rough, dirty sailor with a foul mouth and an appetite for rotten living. He hated life and life hated him. He was captain of a slave ship. But he also had the gift of a good mother who told him about the Savior when he was young. On a return voyage to England in 1748 the ship encountered a severe storm off the coast of Donegal, Ireland and almost sank. Newton awoke in the middle of the night and, as the ship filled with water, he called out to God. The cargo shifted and stopped up the hole, and the ship drifted to safety. He immediately began to read the Bible and eventually gave his life fully to Jesus Christ. From his heart and his rescued life came our beloved song, Amazing Grace. He became an ordained minister and served for many years. In old age, he had to have an assistant stand in the pulpit with him on Sundays. He was nearly blind and spoke in whispers, but nothing could keep him from preaching while he still had breath.

One Sunday, while delivering his message he repeated over again the sentence: "Jesus Christ is precious." His helper whispered to him: "But you have already said that twice." Newton turned to his helper and said loudly, "Yes, I've said it twice, and I'm going to say it again." The stones in the ancient sanctuary fairly shook as the grand old preacher said with all his force: "Jesus Christ is precious!" That is Paul's benediction to you! Jesus is precious! He is what you need. He is ALL you need. Cling to Him!

God's Design For The Local Church - 1 Timothy The Importance Of The Local Church - 1:1-2, 3:14-15

Today we begin a new series of studies in which we'll make our way verse by verse through the New Testament book of First Timothy. This morning my purpose is to introduce you to that Book and give you a glimpse of how important it is that we study it. So let's begin with the most obvious fact:

I. First Timothy Is A Letter, or what is sometimes called an epistle. Look at 1:1-2. That's the salutation of a letter, the From: and the To, like you put on the letters you write, only a little more fancy. So this letter:

1. it was written by Paul the apostle about 64 AD If you recall, Paul went on three missionary journeys throughout the Mediterranean world. After the third he was arrested in Jerusalem and sent to Rome. In all, he was a prisoner for more than 4 years. But evidently at that point, after his first trial, Paul was released and he traveled once again to visit his beloved churches over a period of perhaps three years and Timothy was at his side. Evidently, during that time they passed through Ephesus and Timothy was left there to shepherd that flock while Paul when on. This letter, then is written and sent back to Timothy. So:

2. it was written to Timothy, the pastor of the church at Ephesus Timothy became Paul's sidekick as a young man and was one of his most trusted coworkers. Paul invested years of his life in him and now entrusted him with the oversight of a large and growing church. Paul wrote back to him to encourage, support and clarify what his ministry there was supposed to be about. So the subject matter of this letter is:

3. its subject matter is the local church By the way, you do realize that the Scriptures use the word church in two different senses, don't you? Sometimes it refers to:

a. the universal church which refers to all believers from Pentecost to Christ's Return. Everyone who has ever believed in Jesus Christ is part of the church in that sense. That is the church Jesus declared in the Gospels that He would build and nothing could stop it. That is the church that Paul said Jesus loved and gave Himself for that He might present her to Himself a glorious church one day. That is the church that we find gathered around His Throne in Revelation, a huge multitude from every people, tribe, tongue and nation worshipping Him. But that universal church is not the focus of this letter. Here Paul focuses on:

b. the local church What's that? It's a group of believers joined together in one place to worship and serve Him together as they edify one another. Glenside Bible Church is a local church, a group of 100+ believers who have bound themselves together in this time and place right here as a spiritual family following Christ together.

Now, in our day many people have become somewhat disillusioned with the local church. It's made up of too many people who have problems. The trend is to say, "I accepted Christ; I'm part of God's church (the universal church). I believe the Bible and I watch church programs on TV or I listen to Brother so and so on the radio. I even send in money. I don't NEED the local church!" Well, I want to set the record straight that that's not how God feels about it. He says, Let us not give up meeting together, as some are in the habit of doing, but let us encourage one another--and all the more as you see the Day approaching. - Heb. 10:25. The closer we get to Christ's coming, the MORE we need to be part of the local church. Let's look ahead to 3:15 where Paul spells out for us:

II. The Importance Of The Local Church - 3:15 Those are some heavy statements. How we conduct ourselves has to do with the people we see and interact with all the time, the body of Christ right here, not a global concept. So, look what Paul says about us!

1. we are the family members of God's household God has a family, a household of sons and daughters. And while that family does extend all over the world, we in this local church are the branch of His family that is right here. In fact, being part of a local church is the only way we can experience what the family of God truly means here on earth. We may have far-off spiritual relatives or long-dead spiritual relatives whom we'll only meet in heaven, but the people in the pews all around us are literally our brothers and sisters, born of the same Father and indwelt by One Spirit. God intended us, His children, to live together in spiritual families like this one, so that we can love one another and help one another and edify one another the way family members do! Unless you are part of a local church, you can't keep or receive any of the numerous "one another" commands of the New Testament in a real way. Ps. 68:6 says, God causes the lonely to dwell in families. From Genesis 2 it never has been good for a person to be alone. That's why God's design is for all His children to dwell in spiritual families of like-minded, like-hearted brothers and sisters who encourage one another and meet each other's needs. Remember how from the cross Jesus said to John, Behold your mother and those words bound John to care for Mary as his own mother in his own home. So Jesus says to us, "Look around you...behold your true brothers and sisters, your true fathers and mothers and children, your true family, the very household of God! Then, second he says:

2. we are the called-out assembly of the Living God The very word church in the Greek is ecclesia, which literally means a gathering of citizens called out from their homes into a public place together, an assembly. It was a common word; an assembly could be called in any town or village for a variety of purposes, governmental or religious. Any idol could have an assembly of its followers for a festival or whatever. But Jesus said, "I will build MY OWN ASSEMBLY, MY CHURCH!" He rose from the dead; He is the True God, the Living God, the God who is Alive and Powerful. And we are the assembly of the people that the True and Living God has called out from among all our neighbors and friends and the people of Glenside to come together to worship Him. In other words, we are the people that Jesus Christ has called to come together in His Name in this place to worship Him. We are the people who stand for the Name of Jesus Christ in this community; we are the local, visible representation of the general assembly and church of the Firstborn whose names are written in heaven! If the world wants to find Jesus Christ and know Him, they have to look to US! We represent Him on earth. And thirdly, look at this:

3. we are God's means for the continuance of His Truth What's a pillar? A pillar is a column that holds up the roof. A foundation is an immovable base that holds up a building. God has given His eternal Truth in His Word, but that truth is held up firmly and unchangingly and passed on from generation to generation by the local church! Suppose Darth Vader suddenly shows up and runs through our Foyer and with a mighty swing of his light saber cuts through the two pillars in the middle of it that hold up the steeple? What will happen? You'll be holding the steeple in your laps; it won't stand! Suppose we, the local church abandon the Word of God, stop teaching it as being true and passing it on to our children. What will happen? The truth will not continue to be held up and believed. God has always relied on local bodies of His people to be the means of holding up His truth and passing it on through the ages. Picture it like crowd surfing at a music concert. One time on TV I saw Garth Brooks come up to the edge of the platform and just lay down on his back on the crowd and they all held up their hands and passed him from person to person all through the crowd and back to the platform while he was singing. That's how we hold up the word of God and pass it on, but if we fail, if one or two in the crowd don't hold the singer up, he falls and so does the Word. We are the repository of God's truth for this place for this time; we hold it up so it will continue! Wow! You didn't know we were that important, did you? Well, we are! So no wonder that verse 15 says that:

4. God is concerned about how we conduct ourselves in the body It matters! How we live with one another as His children, how we assemble together in His Name, how we teach and pass on the truth, it all matters! It matters greatly to Him! We all know of churches that are unhealthy. Some have left the truth. Some are full of divisions and power struggles or controlled by a particular family. Some are cold and unfeeling don't care for one another. Others are ingrown and self-centered and don't care about the world. The way that we conduct ourselves in this body matters to God! Now back up to verse 14 and let's add one more concept:

III. The Responsibility Of The Pastor - 3:14-15 Paul wrote these things to Timothy as the pastor of that church at Ephesus so that he would know and therefore teach his people how they ought to conduct themselves in the body. The pastor, the shepherd, is supposed to know how people ought to live and act as part of the local church and he's to teach them and instruct them and encourage them and correct them to see that it happens! Of course, the responsibility of carrying that out is shared by all the elders of the church, but it all starts with the pastor knowing and teaching and leading even them. That's a serious responsibility. That's why James said, Not many of you should presume to be teachers, my brothers, because you know that we who teach will be judged more strictly. - James 3:1. The responsibility of leading and shepherding God's household, His assembly, His truth-bearers is really serious. And that's my job; that's why we're doing this series of messages. Yours would be to listen to the Word of God and learn and conduct yourselves well in God's household. Now as we close, I'd like to lay out for you:

IV. God's Concerns About The Local Church, the things He is concerned about in our body. These form the outline of the letter and they are the subjects we'll be dealing with over the next six weeks. First, we'll learn in:

Ch. 1 - He is concerned about our teaching, our doctrine, what we teach here. He doesn't want any of us teaching things that are false, that we've dragged into the church from the world around us. He doesn't want us teaching a message of legalism where we try to please Him by the strength of our own hands, but rather a message of grace where we live only by His power. Then we'll learn in:

Ch. 2 - He is concerned about our worship And the first aspect He addresses is our prayer life; He is concerned that we pray, that we make prayer a high priority together. We'll see that He's also concerned about the role of women in the church and that will be an interesting subject! But He's concerned about all we do when we worship, how we praise and testify and even give! Then we'll learn in:

Ch. 3 - He is concerned about our leaders God wants the right kind of people leading His family. He gives whole lists of spiritual characteristics they must have. Not just any warm body will do! Wrong leaders lead a whole church astray. Then we'll learn in:

Ch. 4 - He is concerned about our pastors We'll find here admonitions for those in ministry. God cares that a pastor knows and preaches sound doctrine, that he sets the goal of his life on spiritual things. Next, we'll learn in:

Ch. 5 - He is concerned about our people He tells us how to care for the needy, for those who need exhortation, for those who are widows, and those who are sick. The way we care for one another is important to Him. Then lastly, we'll learn in:

Ch. 6 - He is concerned about our purity He's concerned that His family doesn't become enamored of social position or fixed on materialism and the drive to get money. He wants our eyes to stay fixed on the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ so that we remain a true lighthouse shining forth His glory.

God cares about His church, about this particular church. It is not a game we play, not a nice organization we belong to, not some activity we go to each week. It is the very representation of the Kingdom of God on earth. And it is the base unit of His plan to reach the entire world. All of us are familiar with the famous author Mark Twain. But you may not know that church leaders were largely to blame for Mark Twain becoming hostile to the Bible and the Christian faith. As he grew up, he knew elders and deacons who owned slaves and abused them. He heard men using foul language and saw them practice dishonesty during the week after speaking piously in church on Sunday. He listened to ministers use the Bible to justify slavery. Although he saw genuine love for the Lord Jesus in some people, including his mother and his wife, he was so disturbed by the bad teaching and poor example of church leaders that he became bitter toward the things of God. How we conduct ourselves in the household of God touches many; in fact, it touches the entire world. Maybe it's a good time to ask yourself, "What does this local church really mean to me? What is it all about anyway? Why am I really a part of it?" Do you "play at" church? Or is the church an integral part of your very life?

God's Design For The Local Church - 1 Timothy

What We Teach In The Local Church - Ch. 1

As I shared with you last week when I introduced Paul's first letter to Timothy, it is a letter focused on God's design for the local church, explaining what He cares about and is concerned about in local assemblies of His people, like Glenside Bible Church. And as we enter chapter 1 today, we find that the very first thing God is concerned about is what we teach in the local church. You see, from the very beginning of the church it has been plagued by:

I. The Universal Problem Of False Teaching Satan has two basic strategies by which He tries to destroy the church. Sometimes he tries to destroy it outright by persecution, but that never seems to work. It usually grows and spreads! However, if Satan can infiltrate the local church with false teaching, He can destroy it just as surely. And everywhere the church has been planted, this has probably been its greatest danger. Look at (3-6) with me. It had already started in the church at Ephesus where Timothy was pastor. There were "certain men" who were already teaching things that were false. Now notice in verse 6:

1. how false teaching originates (6) Sometimes outsiders will come to a local church and begin to introduce a false belief that they bring with them. There were people in Paul's day who did just that. They went to churches he had started and introduced the people to a different teaching on purpose and gained followers and even turned churches against him! Of course, we have to be on our guard against people like that, but at Ephesus, as is many times true in local churches today, it seems that the false teaching had arisen from within the body itself. There were some folks who had wandered away; literally it says they swerved and turned aside. On Highland Ave. over the hill from where I live there is a pothole. I know it's there but sometimes when I'm coming home, I'm not thinking and suddenly it will come into view and if nothing's coming I'll spin the wheel and swerve left to miss it and find myself in the other lane. That has happened to you, hasn't it? That's what happened to these folks. They hit some pothole in the road of life that caused them to swerve away from the truth and turn aside and end up promoting false teaching. A youth pastor in one of the churches in our area removed himself from the group we participate in, saying, "Your view of salvation is too narrow". He mentioned having had "bad experiences" growing up in the church where he now serves, which, I'm guessing, was at that time more orthodox like we are. He hit some unpleasant bumps in the road of life that challenged what he believed, so he swerved and turned aside to where he's now promoting the idea that God loves everyone and salvation is not only through personally trusting in Christ. And he's not the only one that has happened to! False teaching often arises within a local church when somebody goes through a tragedy and changes their view of God or goes off to school and is impacted by some impressive professor who challenges their thinking. Now, what are:

2. the general marks of false teaching Well, first of all:

a. it often proclaims "something new and different" (3) Those words teach false doctrines are literally teach something "other", or "different". People teaching false things often believe they've discovered something different, something new and unique. Beware of that claim. To me it is the epitome of pride to think that God has shown me something that none of His people have realized or understood for 2000 years, that I am the first to figure it out! If Joseph Smith had realized that, there wouldn't be a "Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints". There wouldn't be Jehovah's Witnesses. Liberalism, which doubts the accuracy of the Bible and challenges all the doctrines which the church held through the centuries, would never have arisen. When you hear teaching that is “new and different”, beware! Secondly, false teaching:

b. it often focuses on useless intellectual debate (4, 6) It raises questions and controversies about myths (non-biblical stories or ideas), or about endless genealogies (assigning meaning to minute details like The DaVinci Code). They say a lot of things, but they are often meaningless talk. When I read papers even today that come out of the very liberal seminary I once attended, I am often left scratching my head and saying, “What did all that mean?” False teaching often uses a lot of religious language and high-sounding words, but somehow the words don’t mean what they mean to us or what they’ve always meant. And thirdly:

c. it often separates morality from faith (5, 19) It separates good conscience or a sense of moral right and wrong from faith. In other words, it says you can believe in Jesus Christ, but it doesn’t impact what you do. You can believe in Him and commit sexual immorality, have sex with your girlfriend or boyfriend or have an affair while you’re married. You can believe in Him and practice homosexuality. Beware anyone who tells you that morality is relative; YOU decide what’s good for you! Now, Paul’s point to Timothy is that:

3. leaders must carefully guard the church against this kind of false teaching. Pastors and elders have a responsibility to put a stop to it if it is happening in the church. Our culture says that’s “being narrow-minded”; but God says that kind of guarding:

a. it is an act of love (5) It comes from a pure heart. It is loving to protect the people we care for, to protect our children from being taught things that could keep them from heaven or ruin their lives. It is loving to challenge people who have been caught up in error and try to bring them back to genuine faith. But guarding the church also:

b. it means expelling those who refuse to stop (18-20) Hymenaeus and Alexander were false teachers and Paul must have confronted them, but they wouldn’t listen; they wouldn’t stop. So Paul had the church put them out; he literally turned them over to Satan so that God could let the consequences of their actions fall on them and break them and ultimately show them they were wrong. Some three years later we find them mentioned again in 2 Tim. 2:17-18, 4:14, where they’re still out there finding people who will listen to their false teaching and trying to hurt Paul. He says their particular false teaching was that the resurrection has already taken place, that there is no resurrection of our bodies, and they were still destroying people’s faith. People that won’t repent and stop teaching false things have to be put out of the body! Yet that doctrine was not what Paul was really worried about.

In verses 7-11 Paul addresses what could well be the most common form of false teaching then or now:

II. The Common False Teaching Of Legalism (7-11) Legalism, simply put, is:

1. what it is: teaching believers to keep the law From the very earliest days the church has always had a problem figuring out what to do with the Old Testament. It is the Word of God and we believe it is true, yet it contains rules and instructions and laws that we know we don’t have to practice, or do we? The majority of the earliest believers were all Jews, so it was natural for them to continue doing what they were already doing in keeping the law while believing in Jesus as the fulfillment of it all. The problem came when people who were not Jews began to believe in great numbers. What about them? What about the Old Testament? Don’t they have to do those things too? That’s how legalism arose but it has existed in several forms. In:

a. its most extreme form: it becomes salvation by works In Acts 15:1, Some men came down from Judea to Antioch and were teaching the brothers: “Unless you are circumcised, according to the custom taught by Moses, you cannot be saved.” Those are the people that Paul fought throughout his ministry, people that taught that “salvation is by believing in Jesus AND doing this AND doing that...” Faith PLUS works. You MUST be circumcised, you MUST keep the feasts, and so on, in order to go to heaven. That was a lie then and many cults still promote it in some form today, however churches today are more often plagued with legalism in:

b. its subtler form: in the church people are taught to live a performance-based Christian life, to keep a new “Christian” sort of law Look with me at Col. 2:20-21. Many of us grew up in churches that taught long lists of Christian behavior. Don’t smoke. Don’t drink alcohol ever. Don’t go to movies. Hey, did you know that back in the ‘30’s or ‘40’s a member of this church was disciplined for working as an usher at the Keswick Theater! Men, don’t have long hair. Women, don’t wear pants or maybe jewelry. Don’t work on Sunday. Only read the King James version. Of course, those things don’t keep you from being saved, they just make us doubt that you really are! A real Christian is a person who believes AND does this AND doesn’t do that... That’s a subtle form of Faith PLUS Works. And even though some of the cultural rules have now changed, the underlying principle hasn’t. Somehow, we are taught to believe that the Christian life is about doing. I must DO certain things to earn God’s favor, to be acceptable before Him. I have been saved from my sins and now I must “perform my duty”. Sounds good, but it’s a subtle falsehood. Paul tells us in verses 9-10:

2. the true purpose of the law It was made for people that break it! It was made for murderers to know that murder is wrong, for adulterers to know adultery is wrong, for homosexuals to know that the practice of homosexuality is not “how God made you,” but a wrong practice.

a. it was given to convict of sin and point to Christ Look with me at Gal. 3:19, 21, 24. The Old Testament law was never made to give life. It was made to convict people that they couldn’t keep it, that they need a Savior so that when Christ came, they would turn to Him! It serves the same purpose today. The New Testament makes it clear that all the sacrifices and offerings ended with Christ; that ceremonial part of the law was not meant for us. But the moral law, the “right and wrong, good and evil” part of the law still stands and is even repeated in the commands we’re given in the New Testament. Yet its purpose is not to teach us to perform for God, but rather to show us how short of the mark we all fall, so that we turn to Christ. The law:

b. it was not given for believers (for the righteous) to earn acceptance with God He is not interested in our performance; He is interested in our surrender so He can perform! We need to guard the church against legalism in all its forms and make sure we are clearly emphasizing:

III. The Foundational Teaching Of Grace which Paul goes on to explain in (12-17). He discovered in his own life that:

1. grace is the principle by which the Christian is to live (12) Grace means that Christ does for me what I cannot do for myself. Look carefully at what that verse says:

a. Christ provides us with the strength to live He doesn’t save us and then say, “There now, go out and do what I have told you to do”. He literally puts the power inside of us to do it. Jesus promised that when the Holy Spirit came, we would receive power and that power would make us be His witnesses. When you trusted Christ, the Holy Spirit came to dwell inside your body to give you the very power of God to live the life you could never live in your own strength. All you do is yield to His control and ask Him to do it! Then it says that:

b. Christ leads us to be and judges us as faithful It’s not that, “He sees how faithful I am and because of that entrusts me with serving Him”. Rather the Greek says, He rules me and leads me to be faithful. HE makes us faithful, not us! When we yield to Him, He produces faithfulness and perseverance in us; He makes us steadfast. And then it says that:

c. Christ puts us into His service It’s not that we volunteer to serve Him; He puts us there! He puts us into the place of His service. He thrusts us forth as His laborers in the harvest in exactly the way that He’s planned for us. So in the end, who gets all the credit? He does! That’s why Paul says, “I thank Christ Jesus our Lord who gives me all the strength, who makes me faithful and who put me into His service!” That is the principle by which we’re to live; He does it ALL for us! Then Paul reminds us of how:

2. grace was poured out on us superabundantly in salvation (13-14) Here is Paul’s personal testimony. He’s now an apostle, a son of God, a saint, but he remembers what he used to be before Jesus changed him. At one time he was Saul the Pharisee. He cursed the name of Jesus. He dragged Christians off to prison and to death. He was a violent man filled with anger and rage at them. And that reminds you and I of:

a. the awfulness of what we were I was only 15 when I met Jesus on my Damascus Road, but when I think back on my short life the picture wasn’t too pretty. I never killed anybody but I remember how several times I stole things. I lied to my parents. I cursed and took God’s name in vain. I imagined lustful things about girls and I would have acted them out if one of the girls I knew had given me the chance. I was only a kid, but I was what Saul was and what we all were, wicked. I was living life my way apart from God in ignorance, knowing right from wrong, but not knowing Him. But Paul’s point is to remind us of:

b. the awesomeness of what we received When we didn’t deserve it, He showed us mercy. He didn’t give me what I deserved, but what I didn’t deserve. He came into my life and forgave me ALL my sins! He worked in my heart to give me faith, to bring me to trust in Jesus alone. And He not only lavished His love on me by making me His own child, but He filled me with His love to love others. He filled my heart with it so much that it overflowed and I learned to care about other people instead of myself.

That is grace! He gave me what I didn’t deserve. He POURED it out on me, not just abundantly but, the Greek says, overabundantly, HYPERabundantly. (You know, like the hyper-drive in the Millennium Falcon on Star Wars, the one that makes you go WAY beyond any normal speed.) When He saved me, He dumped grace on me by the bucketful, by the truckload. He dumped an OCEAN of grace on me. And that is what I always go back to. That is my point of reference for all things. That is my landmark, the foundation-stone of my life that keeps me lined up. HE DID FOR ME WHAT I COULD NEVER DO FOR MYSELF and that is how I am to live now every day! And then Paul makes the claim that:

3. grace is our foundational teaching (15-16) Three times in this letter Paul stops and says, This is a faithful saying and everyone should accept it! In other words, “Stop, look and listen! This is something that’s really true, something I want you to remember and hold fast to!” What is it?

a. Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, to save the undeserving and that means ME! “I’m the worst, I’m the chief, literally the first; I’m no. 1 in line. Christ came into the world to save me, a lost, rotten, wicked sinner who deserved hell.” And why did He do it?

b. He saved me so others might see His grace, believe and live forever So that in saving me and transforming my life by His power He might shine the light of His grace on others who will see it in me and believe and will receive eternal life!

No wonder in verse 17 Paul breaks out into a doxology. Every time he thinks about his own story, he is so full of awe at the grace that God displayed in saving him that he just breaks out into spontaneous worship and praise! That’s what kept him on track. That’s what kept him from going back to the law, to performance living. One day the famous evangelist D. L. Moody took his concordance and studied every passage in the New Testament on the grace of God. The subject of grace so captivated him that he immediately wanted to tell others of the Lord’s free and marvelous mercy. So he ran outside and stopped the first man he met with the enthusiastic question, “Sir, do you know GRACE?” Startled, the man replied, “Grace? Grace who?” We don’t know whether Moody led that man to the Lord, but the point is that once he saw it for what it really was, Moody was captivated by grace. Paul was captivated by the grace of God. It was the foundation of his salvation, his life and his ministry. And once we understand it, it will be of ours also. It is the very bedrock of the teaching of the local church and we must always be vigilant to keep it that way.

God’s Design For The Local Church - 1 Timothy

How We Worship In The Local Church - Ch. 2

In Chapter 2 Paul moves from talking about the importance of what we teach in the local church to the subject of how we worship. And it’s worth noticing what you don’t find Paul talking about. For instance, music is not on his list, no matter how important it may be to us. There’s no mention of an offering here, nor even of the sermon or teaching time! Of course, all the elements of our corporate worship do have value, but here he mentions only two things, so perhaps these are areas where the Ephesian church had a particular problem or, just maybe, they are issues that the Holy Spirit knew would be particularly important for the church down through the centuries. And the first one is:

I. The Place Of Prayer In The Worship Of The Church (1-7) Please notice:

1. the importance of our praying together (1) Those words first of all don’t simply mean “the first thing I want to say is...” He means, “The first and most important thing, the chief thing is that we need to be praying!” And he’s not talking simply about personal prayer. Of course, you and I need to spend time every day talking with God individually. That is vital. But here he is talking about us praying together with one another. Praying together is to be a first priority in our common life. That’s why we’ve had a prayer group every Wednesday evening where for an hour we reach out and touch the world together in prayer. Because praying together is IMPORTANT! Frankly, this is the one thing that the church in our day has neglected, I believe, more than any other. People will come in numbers to seminars and Bible studies and discussion groups and services, but call a meeting for prayer and see how many come. We delight in singing; we delight in studying; we delight in sharing. Why don’t we delight in praying together? Be honest. Where is it in your life that you are praying together in a meaningful way at length with people from this body? Now notice also in verse 1:

2. the universal scope of our praying together Paul says when we pray together:

a. it should include all kinds of prayer There should be requests, petitions where we ask God together for the things we need. There should be intercession where we pray for the needs of others, where we step into their lives and join them by praying. There should be thanksgiving where we express our gratitude to our Father together for what He has done for us. When we pray together there should be every type of prayer, not just one. And:

b. it should include all kinds of people Not just those we know closely, our friends and family, but everyone. We should pray for all those within this church body, whether we know them well or not, and for those beyond this body. How about those who are our enemies? How about those who have never heard the Gospel? So many times, our praying is focused on this little sphere that is our own lives, when God wants us to expand our hearts, to expand our love and touch the whole world as we pray. And I know that’s what Paul means, because he goes on to mention in verse 2 that:

3. one important focus of our praying together is that:

a. we should be praying for all those in secular authority (2) such as kings or rulers. Think about that; Paul prayed for Nero, the mad Roman emperor who at that very moment had already begun to persecute Christians! When we are together praying, we should be praying for our President, for our congressmen and judges and Justices. Our leaders are worth praying about, Paul says, because:

b. this kind of praying will impact our own lives Our praying can impact the government of our land and enable us to live peaceful and quiet lives where we can bear witness to Christ. It could keep us from ending up being discriminated against and ultimately persecuted or having to hide our faith as believers must in so many places. Of course, this is not a guarantee that if we pray, we'll have peace; rather, our praying for the secular authorities who rule us WILL have a definite impact on our lives! And then Paul goes on to tell us:

4. why we must be praying together (3-7) Most obviously:

a. our praying together is pleasing to God (3) God is delighted when His children come together to be with Him and talk to Him. Jesus encouraged us that wherever two or three are gathered together in His Name that He is right there in the midst of them in a special way. His presence inhabits our being together, our praying together. He delights in it and that in itself is enough reason for us to do it, but then realize this:

b. our praying participates with God in the salvation of the world (4-7) Let me try and string the logic of these verses together for you. Verse 5 reminds us that:

(1) there is only one God and one Savior, Jesus (5) There is no other God anywhere on earth. The gods of the nations are idols. The Allah of Islam is a false god. Buddha is a deception. The gods of Hinduism are lies and myths. There is only one true God and there is only ONE NAME by which people can be saved, the Name of Jesus. Verse 6 tells us that:

(2) His death paid a price for the sins of the whole world (6) John put it like this, He is the atoning sacrifice for our sins, and not only for ours but also for the sins of the whole world. -1 John 2:2. He didn't just die for us personally. All over this world there are people who will be saved by His blood and brought into His Kingdom. In fact, verse 4 says:

(3) God wants all people to have knowledge of Him and be saved (4) His desire is that every last person from every last people, in every last language would have the knowledge of the One True Savior, so that they can be saved. Missionary friends wrote from Guinea this past week about a little village they had visited where the people just stared at them like they had never seen a white person before. Their comment was, "These people have never heard the Name of Jesus. They have no one to tell them, no TV or radio station to hear the news on, no way to know of Jesus unless someone goes there." Well, Jesus died for them too and that's why the scope of our praying must include the world, because, according to verse 6:

(4) this news must be taken to all people in its appointed time (6b-7) As the Good News spreads out over the earth, God has appointed a time for each people to hear, for heralds like Paul and other missionaries to arrive and tell the story.

And that's why we pray! Our praying participates with God in that process; as we lift up to the throne the needs of everyone, not just of the people we know, but of people in far-off places and cultures, we participate with God in saving the world, in redeeming His blood-bought children from among every people. That's the chief reason we pray together; want to get in on it?

Now in the second half of this chapter, Paul transitions to a second issue:

II. The Place Of Women In The Worship Of The Church (8-15) This is just as hot or delicate an issue today as it was then, so I want to be careful to speak clearly and respectfully about it. To begin with, Paul points out:

1. the differing tendencies of men and women Look at verse (8). Now what does that tell you? There is a common tendency among men:

a. immature men will focus on competition rather than prayer Put a group of guys together and it will eventually turn somehow into a debate. They'll argue over which football team is better or the best lure to catch fish or debate whether Ford trucks are better than Chevys or brag about how much weight they can bench press. Anything rather than pray! Paul says, "MEN, grow up! You need to focus on praying together! Don't leave it for the women! It's natural for them to open up and share and pray together. Make it so for you!" By the way, this verse does NOT mean that only men should pray in public; in 1 Cor. 11 Paul says directly that a woman can lead in public prayer, if she's dressed modestly, which brings us to his next point here:

b. immature women will focus on appearance rather than character (9-10) Put a group of women together and the topic will inevitably turn to things that have to do with beauty and external appearance. Hair styles and makeovers and the style channel and so on. So, is Paul saying that women shouldn't use makeup or buy a new Easter dress or get a new hairdo? No, he's saying, "Women, that should not be what you focus on! Focus on your heart! Develop your character! Grow close to Christ; be like Him and fill your time with serving Him." His only real command to women here is to dress modestly! That is, don't dress in a sexually revealing way. Do I have to explain what that means? Actually, somebody probably should! And it should probably be you mothers out there explaining to your daughters that so much of what the clothing designers put out there for them to buy is intended to be alluring and to attract the eyes of men in a sexual way. You can be beautiful and yet modest as so many of you dear women of this church are. And godly character is what the church should emphasize for its women, not physical beauty!

Men and women are very different. They have different tendencies that they have to resist. But then Paul goes on to point out:

2. the differing roles of men and women in the church (11-12) Just let me say that no pastor likes having to read, let alone explain, these verses in public anymore! What do they mean? Is the church to be like the Taliban in Afghanistan who made their women wear a “burka” to cover their entire body and made them stay home and be quiet and not go to school while men run the world? Not at all. Taken in the context of the whole of Scripture, I think these verses are saying two things. First:

a. mature men should normally have the primary teaching and ruling roles Paul is talking about women teaching and leading men. Now, throughout Scripture there have been times when God has used women in this way. Deborah judged Israel and Barak led the army at her direction. Several times God used prophetesses to give His direction to men. The New Testament mentions women who were leaders of house churches or vitally important in the work. In China through the years there have been hundreds of “Bible women” whom God sent out to plant little churches in villages and they have pastored and led those groups. Women teach men all the time on the mission field as the church is planted, but Paul is saying that His normal plan is that within the church, mature godly men should normally be the primary leaders, just as in the home the husband should lead his wife and family in the things of God. And he’s also saying that:

b. mature women should be marked by “stillness” and supportiveness The word quiet or silent in 11 and 12 literally means “stillness”. It doesn’t mean she can’t say a word in church; in fact, 1 Cor. 11 says directly that in a public gathering a woman can pray or prophesy (share words from God, and dare I say that would include preaching?). It means she is to be a quiet and reverent learner and not be gossiping or talking or trying to undermine what’s going on. For instance, a dear friend of ours who is pastoring a small church has told me that one of the chief problems in his church is that two of the deacons’ wives gossip continually and spread negative things about other people in the church and that they manipulate their husbands to get their own way in the body! They even visit others to stir things up. In fact, they are hindering the spread of the Gospel and the growth of the church in that community. That’s what I believe Paul is addressing here and in 1 Cor. 14. So many of you women here at Glenside Bible Church are tremendously spiritual people and you have a heart and passion for God and are leading in various ministries and I respect and value you so much; I don’t know what we’d do without you! Us men would sure never fill your shoes! Thank God for you! I think, I hope and I pray that we have a good balance here between mature men in primary leadership roles and mature women vitally involved in every part of the ministry. But it has not always been that way. There have been times in the distant past when we’ve had a portion of some of those same problems that Paul was addressing right here. Thank God for changing people and hearts and circumstances and healing the body in this way, but it does stand as a warning to us to be careful to honor Paul’s instruction. Mature men should take on primary roles of loving compassionate leadership and mature women should be found with hearts that are still and quiet and supportive. Now, why is it that way? Is this not simply being old-fashioned and archaic? Are not women and men equal as human beings? Of course, they are! In Christ Jesus there is neither male nor female; all are loved and valued equally! But Paul points out that:

3. this difference is a part of God’s very plan in creation (13-14) God made Adam first and created Eve to be his “partner”, to be a “helper fitted to him”! He is not complete without her. Together they make up one whole. But she is not to hijack his leadership in the family. I don’t think verse 14 is saying that women are “stupider” than men and easier for the devil to deceive; I think it is saying, “Look what happened when Eve tried to reverse that order and take leadership over Adam to pursue her own ends.” You can’t argue with the way God has designed the universe in His wisdom. He has made men and women different and has assigned them different roles and has actually built them in such a way that they find the greatest fulfillment and joy possible in being who he has created them to be, male or female. But their roles are different according to His plan. And then note that in closing Paul points out:

4. the tremendous role that women have in shaping the next generation (15) Women will be saved, preserved, kept safe, through childbearing. From what? Not from sin, but from falling into some secondary, insignificant role and having no influence on the world and the church! Mothers are the greatest single shaping factor in the life of a child. If you hold fast to the faith and display the unconditional love of God and live a life of holiness and purity, the impact you will make on your children will shape the very world!

Susannah Wesley had 19 children. Ten of them survived to adulthood. Despite the tremendous amount of work entailed in cooking and caring for such a large family and home-schooling them, Susannah spent one hour each day praying for her children. In addition, she took each child aside by themselves for a full hour every week to discuss spiritual matters. When Susanna Wesley was on her deathbed, she gathered her children around her. As she neared the end and was about to be called home to Glory, she admonished them not to weep but rather to “sing a hymn of praise.” Then with her last breath she reminded them that the greatest comfort we have in any circumstance is the fact that “God is with us”! No wonder that two of her sons, Charles and John, were used of God to begin a revival movement which swept thousands into the Kingdom of God and planted local churches all over England and in much of America in the late 1700's. William Ross Wallace (1819-1881) so wisely put it like this, The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world! Single women, God has a special place and ministry for you too, but those of you who have children, listen to me; in your ministry to those children lies the future of the world and of the Kingdom. There is no more important task; it may feel at times like hard labor, but it's a tremendous privilege. Through your praying and through your loving those children, you impact the very world.

Leaders In The Local Church - Ch. 3

Having spent a chapter on what we teach in the local church and one on how we worship, in chapter 3 Paul moves on to talk very specifically about the leaders of the local church. But before we begin, you must realize something. The New Testament never spells out a specific organizational structure for the church. The church was not at that point yet. That's why all the various branches of the church have developed so many different ways of organizing, everything from the Catholic church with its chain of Pope and cardinals and bishops and priests, to the Lutherans with their synods and Presbyterians with their presbyteries, to the Baptists with their conventions and associations, to the loose organization of the cell church movement where every house group is a "church". The truth is that the church has developed a variety of different forms and structures for itself through the years in response to its needs and none of them is really absolutely "biblical" or "right"; all that kind of deliberate organization came later. In Acts 1, 120 brethren more-or-less "voted" on a replacement leader for Judas, similar to the way we do it. On the other hand, Paul left Titus in Crete to "appoint" elders in every city for the churches there, the way many denominations do it today. All we really have described directly for us in Scripture is:

I. The Leaders Of The Local Church There are four terms that are applied to church leaders in the New Testament and I think it would be helpful to define all of them. The first term is the word:

1. elder Look at 5:17. The term elder simply means an older spiritually mature person. In biblical times every town had its elders; the Jews had their council of elders, the Sanhedrin, older, respected members of the community viewed as leaders. It is, in my opinion, a general term for the leaders of the local church. The term elder is not used in chapter 3, however, in Titus 1 Paul calls the same people that he calls overseers here elders. So elder in its most basic sense is not so much a specific office as it is a term of respect applied to the leaders of the church body. Now let's move on to the term:

2. overseer, the group of leaders he's describing in verses 2-7. This word is often translated bishop, but it is not referring to our modern concept of a high ecclesiastical leader who is in charge of many churches in a given region or diocese. The word literally means "overseer" and it refers to an elder whose function is oversight and teaching in the local church. 5:17 mentioned "elders who rule", that is they give direction and oversight to the ministry of the local church. And in the two lists of characteristics given in chapter 3 for overseers and for deacons, the only difference between the two lists is that an overseer must be "able to teach". He must have teaching gifts to instruct the church. Now that brings us to the term:

3. deacon, the group of leaders he's describing in verses 8-13. The root of the word means to serve or minister so a deacon is simply an elder whose distinctive function is serving. In Acts 6 we read how the church chose 7 men to carry out the distribution of food to the widows supported by the church. And even though the word deacon is not used there, these are the first deacons. They were Spirit-filled leaders, every bit as much as the apostles, but having a distinctive responsibility of serving the body in practical ways, freeing the overseers to give themselves to teaching the Word of God and prayer in accord with their gifts. Then, just to confuse you further there is the term:

4. pastor, which in spite of how commonly we use it today, is only used once in the New Testament, in Eph. 4:11, where it says that Jesus gave some to the church as pastors and teachers. The term pastor, literally means shepherd and it simply refers to an elder who cares for the flock. It is more of a gift than an office or title as we use it today. So to sum it up, the local church has one body of leaders, generically called elders together. Within that body are 1) overseers whose function is the supervision and instruction of the body, 2) deacons whose function is carrying out ministries of service to the body, and 3) pastors whose gift is caring for the spiritual needs of the people and teaching them. At Glen-side Bible Church we have people within the Board that we officially call "Elders" that function as all three. Some act more as overseers, some more as deacons, and some more as pastors. And then we have some here who are truly "elders", godly mature leaders whom we heed and respect, but are not actually on our elected "board" at this particular time. So, is our structure biblical? As much as anybody else's and perhaps more than some others, however, Paul's point is not to explain the structure of leadership but rather to explain what leaders should be like. First off, he refers to:

II. The Choosing Of A Leader (1) No matter what the type of leader or whether they are elected or appointed, there are two things that any person coming into leadership should have. First of all:

1. there should be an inner desire placed there by God A leader should not be chosen because “there is nobody else to do it”, or because “it sounds like a neat idea or something they’d like to try.” It should be something he genuinely longs to do in his heart. Years ago, I knew a person who was always asking, “What would I have to do to be an elder?” But, in my opinion, his root motive was that he wanted to be in charge, to have some control, to have a place of authority and to be looked up to. That’s the exact opposite of what Paul is saying. A leader doesn’t need some special call, some “sign in the sky”; rather he needs a deep intense desire in the heart to care for Christ’s body and tend His flock. Like Jesus said to Peter three times, “Do you love Me? Feed my sheep!” Hey leaders, do you love caring for His flock? Is that the deep desire of your heart? Or, maybe you’re not a leader now, but is that desire in your heart to care for His flock? You could be a budding leader soon to emerge! However, desire by itself is not enough:

2. there must be outward evidences recognized by the body, which is the point of the rest of the chapter. When God calls someone to a ministry by putting a desire inside them, He also gifts them for the task. And the body is supposed to recognize those gifts at work in the person, those marks of God’s choosing in order to place them in leadership. Not everyone who desires leadership is “qualified” for it; in fact, a person may be completely blind to whole aspects of their life that everyone else can see. That’s why the body must put into leadership those who bear the marks He has prescribed. Now what are:

III. The Marks Of A Leader Paul lists 15 qualifications for overseers in 2-7 plus a number more for deacons in 8-13. However, if we put the 2 lists together, I believe we can boil them down to seven key marks of a leader. And, lest you think that the rest of this message is only for leaders, understand that these are the marks of spiritual maturity for ANY-ONE, period. The things that God demands in leaders are the very things He wants to develop in you too! The first one is:

1. a good reputation (2a, 10b) In the church a leader must be above reproach; that is, when he is tested no one can truthfully accuse him of anything that is clearly wrong; nothing can be found against him. Verse (7). He must have a good reputation both within the body and even with those outside the church, because if he doesn’t, they will see right through his hypocrisy and it will dishonor the Name of Christ. And this mark is kind of the overarching category for all the rest. He must have a good reputation in all the following areas which Paul mentions. By the way, how is your reputation? Mark number two is:

2. godly family relationships That’s the first place to look. In the church a leader must have good and godly relationships within his own family. Of course, that means he must have:

a. a solid marriage (2b, 12a) The husband of one wife, now what does that mean? Well, for sure it means he doesn’t have two wives at the same time! You laugh, but in one of the African tribes I read about, none of the older men could be elders because they all had two or more wives! I think it would also exclude the man who switches from wife to wife lightly and not for biblical reasons. I think it would exclude the man who cheats on his wife or flirts with women. The real point is that this man is a solid and faithful husband who loves his wife and only her, whose marriage is solid and an example. And look at verse (11); He’s got to be married to the right person also! She can’t be a gossip or a drinker or dishonest; she has to be the same mature kind of person he is, because they are a team and without that he will not be able to be much of a leader. At the same time, he must be:

b. a sound parent (4-5, 12b) The point is that if your household is a wreck, if you don’t pay proper attention to your kids and meet their needs, if you never restrain your kids and let them do whatever they want, you won’t do a very good job of caring for God’s larger family! Now, does that mean that no one who has a wayward child out there should ever be a leader? No, many godly leaders do. When they grow up, our children have to choose for themselves who they will follow. And this is not about mechanical obedience. There is more than one person here this morning who would testify to growing up in a very legalistic Christian home being afraid to cross any lines, but rebelling against all the rules later. The point is that a leader is one who has a real heart for his family, a heart to take care of them, a heart to mature them and grow them. If he can understand what they need, he can understand what the church needs! By the way, how solid are YOUR family relationships? God may want to work in that arena in your life! The third mark is that a leader in the church must have:

3. a Christ-like character A whole string of things fall under this category such as being self-controlled (2d), literally sober-minded, a level-headed balanced person with good sense. Such as being respectable (2e), a modest person who is orderly in their demeanor. Such as being hospitable (2f), a person who loves others, especially strangers and is always ready to help care for them. Such as being not violent (3b), literally no striker, not the kind of person who loses their temper and lashes out in anger, but is instead gentle (3c), patient, willing to hold back and listen carefully, and (3d) not quarrelsome, not always in an argument, not always trying to get their own way and prove themselves over the other but a peacemaker. Go down to verse (8a); it means being worthy of respect, one who is serious about what matters, one whom you would go to for advice and help and being sincere (8b), literally not double-tongued, the kind who says one thing and does another, a man you can trust to keep his word. Just look at Jesus; just look at the fruits of the Holy Spirit in Galatians. That’s the kind of character a leader ought to have. All kinds of havoc is going on in church bodies today because they have people in leadership who love to argue, who get angry and nobody stops them, who don’t take their faith seriously or who never do what they say they’ll do. John wrote, Whoever claims to live in him must walk as Jesus did. - 1Joh 2:6. A leader must be the real deal; he must display the character of Christ Himself; without that how can he lead others on to maturity? And isn't that what He wants to do in all of us, conform us to the likeness of His Son? Mark number four is that a good leader has:

4. a Spirit-controlled life in contrast to two other things that Paul lists. First of all, he is:

a. not controlled by an addiction He is temperate (2c), literally sober, free from intoxicants, not given to drunkenness (3a) and again in (8c), not indulging in much wine. A good leader is not living under the bondage of any addiction, whether it is to alcohol or to drugs to food or anything else. Remember the command, Do not get drunk on wine, which leads to debauchery. Instead, be filled with the Spirit. - Eph. 5:18. Neither wine nor anything else is to be a controlling factor in your life; the Spirit of God is to be in control! And the same goes for addictions that are not about substances. He says that a leader is:

b. not controlled by materialism (3e) He is not a lover of money and is not pursuing dishonest gain (8d). Money and the desire to get it doesn't rule his life. He's honest and is not willing to give up his ethics for money! Look at 6:9. A leader can't be one of those people. He can't be controlled by the desire for money or for any other thing; He must be controlled by the Spirit of God. Is YOUR life being controlled by anything other than the Spirit of the Lord? Then fifth, a leader, particularly an overseer in the church, must have:

5. an obvious gifting (2g) If he's someone charged with oversight and instruction, he must be able to teach, gifted in that area. You wouldn't ask someone to run the music program who has no musical gifts. You wouldn't ask someone to care for the church's money who has problems balancing their checkbook. A leader should display gifts in the particular area in which he is needed to serve. And how will you know that? Because he should also have the sixth mark:

6. some positive experience (6) A person should not be thrust into leadership too soon after they come to Christ; they require time to grow and mature and be a learner. Let God work out some of the "kinks" in their lives. Otherwise, pride is liable to spring up and pride is the deathtrap of leadership; it is Satan's biggest snare for leaders. A person needs time to really discover that they are nothing and God is everything! And then look at (10a). There needs to be some trial by fire, some testing by experience. A person needs some opportunities to try their wings, to learn whether they have gifts in a particular area, to do some teaching, to work with kids, to be involved in mercy ministry or visitation or to do whatever it is, so that they can see and the body can see whether God has gifted them for that or not! We have to be quick to give people opportunity, but honest enough to help them realize what their gifts really are and are not. Then finally (and you'd think this would go without saying), a leader must have:

7. a firm faith (9) They must be holding firmly on to the deep truths of the faith. A person who's always questioning or doubting, who is not firmly convinced to the core of his being that what he believes is true, is NOT the person to put in to leadership, no matter what area of service we're talking about.

These are the qualities God is looking for in every one of us. These are the marks of the people Jesus wants to raise up as leaders in His church. Are you one of them? Well, don't forget something Paul mentions in verse 13:

IV. The Rewards Of A Leader (13) Leaders who serve well have a reward. They gain an excellent standing; they have a place of honor, both in the eyes of the church and of the Lord. It is, according to 5:17, a double honor, not an honor you seek to achieve as a goal for its own sake, but one that fills you with humility and gratitude. I've told you before that I have a file in which I keep letters and cards that people have sent through the years when they were appreciative. And when I look back over those, what an honor it is to for the Lord to use you in people's lives. It's humbling. But it also gives you great confidence and boldness to continue serving, which is what the rest of verse 13 says. You rest in the assurance of how God has used you and become determined that there is nothing like this and you want to continue to be used in the future. Then finally, Paul closes the chapter with two thoughts about:

V. The Importance Of Good Leaders It is hard to overemphasize how important it is that a local church have good leaders. Why? First of all:

1. it stems from the great importance of the local church (14-15) We studied these verses in the first message in this series. Since the local church is God's very family, His own assembly of His people and His means of passing the Truth down from generation to generation, the church MUST have good leaders or it will not be what it is. It will degenerate into something else, lose its focus and its purpose. Leaders are important because the CHURCH is important. Moreover:

2. it stems from the great privilege of being entrusted with the Gospel (16) This is a creedal statement, a statement of what we believe. We are the stewards of a sacred mystery, a truth that the world does not know. Jesus came to earth in a body, was shown to be the Son of God by His miracles and His resurrection, was seen by angels and taken up to glory where He reigns. He was and is being preached among all nations and believed on in all the world. That is the GOOD NEWS and that news has been entrusted to the Church, to this local church. Without good and godly leaders, it will be lost or kept to ourselves and the world will not hear. Leaders are important because the GOSPEL is important.

Someone makes this application for us: A number of years ago when the draft ended, certain branches of the military fell behind in meeting their personnel quotas. Because of this, some recruiters used trickery and unethical practices to get volunteers through their intelligence and physical exams. At first this seemed to get the job done. But then something unthinkable happened. A marine lost his life during combat drills. It became apparent that someone had sidestepped the requirements and allowed an unqualified man to enter this proud branch of the service. When it comes to keeping the church strong, God's Word clearly indicates that only spiritually qualified people should fill positions of service. The reason for this is to preserve the dignity and effectiveness of that body which the apostle Paul called "the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim. 3:15). It's our responsibility as members of local congregations to choose prayerfully the kind of leaders who have God's approval. So, let's staff our church boards and committees with people who meet the biblical requirements. And I would add, let's determine to BE the kind of people who can be available to lead in the body as God directs!

Pastors In The Local Church - Ch. 4

In chapter 3 Paul told us about the leaders of the local church in terms of their qualifications, that is, he explained what kind of people ought to be placed into leadership. In chapter 4 Paul begins to give his personal advice to Timothy who is the chief overseer and pastor of the church at Ephesus and tells him specific things that are important for him to carry out in his ministry. So, what we have here are Paul's instructions to pastors in particular, but they are really instructions for anyone who shepherds a flock of God's people; they're for all our elders and leaders and Sunday School teachers and small group leaders; you can even apply them to shepherding your own children. He explains first of all that:

I. Pastors Are Watchmen To Guard The Church (1-6) Paul points out for us:

1. the danger of demonically inspired false teachers (1-2) There were then, and there certainly are now, people who have departed from the faith, who have set aside the core truths that are vital to salvation and are teaching falsehoods, things that are not true. Notice that the source of these false teachings is not simply human thinking. They come from demons. We always think of demons being at work in jungle tribes where they worship spirits and throwing people into trances and so on. But a whole host of them have been to Satan's "charm school" to learn to masquerade themselves as "angels of light" so that they can deceive people more easily. Not only is Satan the inventor of every false religion, he is the inventor of every "Christian" heresy in history. Who do you suppose gave Joseph Smith his visions that started the Mormon church? Who do you think first circulated the idea that the Bible is merely a human book and that Jesus was only a man, a great teacher and example, but not fully God? These things are not merely sadly mistaken human ideas; they are part of Satan's diabolical master plan to sabotage the church. They are doctrines that people come to accept and believe and then to teach by demonic influence. And Paul gives:

2. two examples of false teaching in verses 3-5. The first is the idea that:

a. spirituality means abstaining from marriage (3a), the concept that the state of singleness and virginity is the supreme virtue. The Essenes were a sect of the Jews in Jesus' day who lived out in the desert and believed this. Of course, they ended up adopting children to keep their numbers from falling! The Gnostics picked up this idea and it must have been floating around in Corinth, because Paul had to tell the Corinthians that it was wrong in 1 Cor. 7. Yet it was only a few centuries later that this very teaching did find its way into the church and, of course, the Roman church clings firmly to it to this day in spite of all the biblical statements about God's blessing of marriage. Paul's second example of false teaching is very similar:

b. spirituality means abstaining from certain foods (3b-5) The Essenes taught this too; they ate no meat, only bread and vegetables. And the Judaizers who opposed Paul taught strict dietary laws, even though the Scripture is very clear that God has declared that all foods are clean and all are to be received with thanksgiving because they come from Him. You can be a vegetarian if you like, but there is nothing at all spiritual about it. And yet for years the largest "Christian" group in the world ate no red meat on Fridays and declared it a sin.

False teachings abound everywhere. Today our society is loaded with them: homosexuality is an acceptable alternative lifestyle; abortion is the free choice of a woman; an unborn child is not a person; there is nothing immoral about sex without marriage. And these kinds of teachings are always creeping into the church so:

3. pastors are to point out these falsehoods to the body (6) You're a good shepherd, a good leader, if you keep an eye out for these falsehoods and warn your sheep. You are their watchman; you are keeping watch over their souls, the Bible says. Guard them carefully. Warn them of the demonic teachings all around them that threaten them. Secondly, Paul says this:

II. Pastors Are Coaches To Train The Church (6-10) This ought to make you guys happy; now we're in an athletic analogy. Pastors and leaders are like coaches of a team of people and it is the responsibility of the coach to train both themselves and their team to do three things. Now what's the first thing you need to be physically fit? Good nutrition, right? So we train ourselves and our team:

1. to eat the proper nourishment of the Word of God (6b-7a) Literally it says that you were nourished by the words of the faith and the good teaching you have followed. We train our people to eat the good food of the Word of God. We train people to read the Scriptures regularly, daily, to think about them, to meditate on them, to search them. And we train them to sit regularly under good biblical teaching, hearing the Word of God preached and taught. This is our real food, our proper nourishment, and without it there will be no spiritual growth, only starvation. This is what will keep them from believing the godless myths like evolution and the other fairy tales that abound in the world. How about you? Are you eating right? What's your diet like? Then, of course, to be a good athlete you must exercise. Coaches are always training their teams through hours of vigorous exercises. And we are to train ourselves and our people:

2. to practice the continual exercise of godly behavior (7b-8) Exercising your body is a good thing and so many people today are focused on that. Paul says it is of some value. It will benefit you for a little while; it will increase your health for the short time you have on earth. But the exercise of practicing godly living has a good effect here AND it has effects that last forever! Any good coach is continually teaching his team to play the game better. So, we are continually teaching our team, our flock, to live better, training them to live life God's way. Play by play, incident by incident, circumstance by circumstance, we train them to live God's way instead of the way everybody else is doing it. The new thing today is for a person to have a "life coach", someone who helps them plan their lives and make their choices in a healthy way. That's really what we are, only helping them live Jesus' way! And the third thing every coach wants to train his team to do is to give all they have, to strive with everything inside them when they play, to win the game, to win the race, to score the goal. So, we are to train our people:

3. to strive mightily toward the goal of bringing men to the Savior (9-10) This is another of Paul's "You can take this to the bank..." statements that everybody should accept: Jesus Christ is the Savior of ALL men and especially of those who believe! It's like 1:15, Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners and I'm number One! Or 2:4, He wants all men to be saved and to come to a knowledge of the truth. Paul says, "That's what I labor and strive for! That's the finish line I reach out for with everything I've got! I want to give God what He wants; I want to bring people to Christ!" We train our people to invest everything they have, their hearts, their time, their prayers, their abilities and their money to be involved in reaching the world for Christ. Hey, are you in it with everything you've got? So we are watchmen to guard our flock and we are coaches to train our team, but finally Paul says that:

III. Pastors Are Instructors To Teach The Church (11) A pastor or any leader has to teach his flock the things they need to know. And, as anyone will tell you, that instruction has to start:

1. by being a living example of what we teach (12) No matter how old you are, set an example in your own life of the very things you teach. And, of course:

a. we must be an example in every area of our lives, in the way that we talk to people, the language and the tone we use, in the lifestyle we live, in the love that we display toward others, the way we care for them, in trusting God instead of leaning on our own resources and in moral purity. If we are to be effective teachers, every area of our life must be a living illustration that can be imitated. That's why Paul exhorts down in verse 16 that:

b. we must watch our own lives closely (16a) We have to keep an eye on ourselves first, honestly looking at what we're teaching to make sure it's right and at how we're living to make sure it lines up! How about it? Do you look in the spiritual mirror? Are you honest with yourself? Can you say without hesitation as Paul did, "Imitate me as I imitate Christ!" Well, if you're life's in line, then you can instruct your flock:

2. by teaching carefully from the Word of God (13-16) Now remember, these believers didn't have a personal copy of God's word. Bound books and the printing press were still a thing of the distant future. So, at every meeting the leader would have to be sure to spend a good deal of time reading the Scriptures out loud to the people. How else would they know them? But then he would explain to them what they mean and exhort people to live out the lessons in what they had read. That's the job of a pastor, of anyone in a place of instruction. And Paul's point is that:

a. we must give ourselves fully to it Look at the verbs in (13-15). Devote yourself to it...do not neglect it...be diligent in it...give yourself wholly to it... Literally, in these things BE! Be absorbed in them; they are your life's work, so don't get sidetracked into anything else! When the apostles started to get bogged down in taking care of food distribution in Acts 6, as important as it was that these poor widows had something to eat each day, the apostles realized, "We have to have other trustworthy folks take care of this; we have to devote ourselves to the teaching of the Word of God and prayer! That's our calling!" So many times, pastors and church leaders get sidetracked into other things; it's so easy to do. I could spend all day doing email and answering phone calls a lot of days! I need continual reminders that my primary calling is to teach the Word of God and I need to be wholly absorbed in it. And then Paul adds that:

b. we must persevere in it (16b) Sometimes it doesn't seem like it's making much difference! Sometimes it feels like you do all this warning and training and teaching and some of your flock still wanders off and does what they want to do anyway! But Paul says, "Persevere!" Keep at it! Keep on absorbing the Word and giving it out. It will not fail; it will accomplish the purpose for which God sent it. Keep on living it in front of them. Keep on watching your life and your teaching closely. Why? Because:

c. it will have eternal impact (16c) It will save you and it will save those who are hearing you. Yes, it will actually make the difference between heaven and hell for some who will come to true faith under you and that's always a joy, but it will also rescue others from a wasted life and untold amounts of suffering and difficulty. Your investing yourself in your flock will make a genuine difference for all eternity.

A young soldier lay in an Army hospital dying of combat wounds. A chaplain was attempting to comfort him in his last moments. "Will you write a letter to my mother?", asked the boy. "Tell her that I died happy. Also, write one to my Sunday School teacher," he continued. "Tell her I died as a Christian." The chaplain went back to his office and wrote the two letters. In a few weeks, the chaplain received a reply back from the teacher. "I can't tell you how much your letter impressed me," she wrote. "Just the week before it arrived, I had resigned from teaching my junior boys' class. I had taught it for 10 years and had become discouraged and felt I just wasn't getting through to the boys; that I had failed completely. After reading your letter, I asked to have my class back. This time, I'll endure, by God's grace." Will you? Will you be a faithful watchman to guard that little flock under your care? Will you be a good coach to train them and a diligent instructor to teach them the Word? Whether it's your Sunday School class, your small group, your Pioneer Club, or a whole church body like this one, will you persevere? It will make an eternal difference!

People In The Local Church - 5:1-6:2

In chapter 5 Paul turns from addressing the leaders of the local church concerning their qualifications and duties in the last two chapters and begins to give a series of special instructions that apply to four specific groups of people in the local church. These instructions are, of course, given to Timothy personally as the pastor of the church, but as you read them it is evident that they are meant for the whole church and they are just as meaningful and useful to us here at Glenside Bible Church as they were to the church at Ephesus where Timothy served. The first set of instructions have to do with:

I. Fellow Believers In Need Of Correction (5:1-2) What do you do when there is a fellow believer in the church who is out of line, who has a glaring fault and is blind to it or who has fallen into a sin of some sort and doesn't seem to realize how wrong it is? Do we just let our brothers and sisters go and say, "Well, that's between them and God."? No, part of our function as a body is that we keep one another on track spiritually. Paul said in Gal. 6:1, Brothers, if someone is caught in a sin, you who are spiritual should restore him gently. But watch yourself, or you also may be tempted. We are supposed to approach them about it, but the issue is how we do it! And here Paul gives three specific pieces of advice:

1. approach them as a loving family member Don't give them a harsh verbal rebuke; it is not your mission to "set them straight" or "put them in their place" by whatever authority you may have. Rather you are to exhort them. That word is the word paraclete which means a person who comes alongside someone to help them. Approach them with a heart that longs to see them grow closer to Christ and approach them the way you would your own father or mother, your own brother or sister whom you care about deeply. And as you approach them:

2. be mindful of your age relationship If it is an older man or woman, approach them in a humble manner with the respect you would show to your own father or mother. If it is someone nearer your age, approach them in a loving manner with the care you would show to your own brother or sister, that seeks for their good. If it is someone much younger, approach them with the love you would show if you were their own father or mother, desiring only what's best for them. After all, we are literally family members with one another in God's family in this body. We have many fathers and mothers and brothers and sisters and children all around us and that's the way we should always approach one another and also receive one another when we are approached; it should never in some mechanical fashion. But, as Paul cautioned Timothy, we must always:

3. be careful to maintain complete purity when a brother is dealing with a sister or a sister with a brother close to their own age. It is so easy for our flesh to fall into the trap of romantic attraction or sexual thoughts as we're trying to help one another, even if we keep it to ourselves and don't express it. In dealing with a woman I often pray, "Lord, please guard my every thought and keep them pure; she is my sister in Christ". So many immoral affairs have begun simply by brothers or sisters failing to guard their hearts in this way. The pastor who followed me at our previous church was not careful to guard his heart and ended up leaving his wife and children to marry a divorced single mom with four children that he had been trying to help. Solomon's warning still rings true, Above all else, guard your heart, for out of it are the issues of life. – Prov. 4:23.

Now, Paul's second set of instructions has to do with:

II. Widows In Need Of Support (3-16) There are always needy people in the church and it was particularly true in that day when there were no government care systems or insurance in place to help, not even Meals on Wheels. Your own children were your only source of security in old age. Your family was your safety net in all situations of crisis. It is still like that in the majority of the world even today. But what about those who are alone, who have no family and no means of support? One particularly needy group in Paul's day was widows. In that time, it was nearly impossible for a woman to find a way to survive financially on her own, especially if she was older; it is still like that in many places. And of course, in the local church we have a responsibility to care for our brothers and sisters who are in need. So the church seems to have developed a regular system of providing food for needy widows. It seems they literally kept a list and leaders distributed from the offerings of the group daily to those who were poor and could not earn their own bread. But even with all the changes and helps available today, we still have people in the church with financial needs. Very often they are no longer widows but instead single moms with children who have been left by the men in their lives in various states of distress. Sometimes they are families where both husband and wife are out of work or an accident has happened. So here are Paul's principles about caring for these folks. First:

1. their own relatives carry primary responsibility for them (3-4, 8) You know firsthand that we human beings are only all too glad to let others take on our responsibilities if they will, especially financial ones. If the government will take care of our parents, we are glad to let them and in fact, we come to expect it. Well, in that day the church was the one with the program in place to help, so sometimes when a woman's husband died, the children and grandchildren or other relatives were only too glad to let the church take care of her needs. Paul is saying that's not right! A person's own relatives and family carry the primary responsibility for their care. When someone within your family structure (particularly a parent) is in financial need, YOU are to be first in line to help and provide. Family comes first! Plus, they cared for you; now it's time for you to care for them. And here's why in verse (16). The church is not a social welfare program. It cannot care for the financial needs of every one of its members. When families do all they can to care for their own members who have need, it frees the church to care for those who are TRULY in need, who have NO ONE to take care of them and no place to turn. Then Paul turns his attention from those who give care, to the person being cared for and he says that:

2. genuine widows devote themselves completely to Christ (5-7) Here's a believer whose husband dies leaving her with no means of income and no family to care for her. In America we haughtily say that's poor planning; for our brothers and sisters in many countries, that's just harsh reality; savings are a luxury that simply doesn't exist. At any rate, this lady can't earn a living so she cries out to God, she devotes herself to loving and serving Jesus, to ministry. The church body comes to her aid and cares for her physical need. It's a great partnership; we actually help someone in ministry by helping her. Yet here's another believer in the same situation but with a different heart. Her needs are met by the church so she sees that as license to do what she wants and to live for her own pleasure. She ends up wasting time on frivolous things and being a gossip and a busybody meddling in people's lives but supported by the church! The first lady deserves support; the second one doesn't and that's what Paul is really trying to say:

3. the church must care for widows who have no one else While an emergency can happen to anyone at any time and the church should, of course, rise to the occasion and help, that kind of:

a. permanent care is normally for older widows of godly character (9-10) He puts an age of 60 on it and while I don't think that's some hard and fast rule for all time, even today it's not a bad rule of thumb. A lady of that age will generally not remarry and will have a hard time finding substantial employment. If through the years she has displayed a godly character in caring for her family and helping others in the body and showing hospitality to people in need, then she will probably continue to devote her life to the Lord's service and the church should be there to care for her until she dies, if she has no one else to do it. It's our responsibility. The same could also be applied to a man in a similar situation. On the other hand, that kind of:

b. permanent care is not normally for younger widows (11-15) Now that doesn't sound very good at first glance, so let me try to reiterate what Paul is saying about younger women who lose their husbands. First:

(1) it will be very difficult for them to remain single all their lives That is just a fact that I have seen over and over again. God built most of us with a strong desire to be joined to a life-companion and we don't do well alone. So even if this 30 year old widow starts out saying, "No, I'm never going to marry again; I'm going to be single and give everything I have to serving Christ. Forget men.", eventually there is a good chance that even the most devoted of wives will eventually desperately want the companionship of a husband back in their lives. Of course, that's true of widowers also. Barbara Youderian lost her husband Roger on that beach in Ecuador in 1957 and she never remarried; she has served the Lord as a single to this day. But she's the rare exception, not the rule. And, Paul says, that:

(2) desire for a mate may entice them from their devotion to Christ How many ladies have I known through the years that were solid loving wives, but then lost their husbands and eventually made terrible choices in men or even wound up in immorality, just because that desire for a mate was so strong that it overruled what they knew the Lord wanted in their lives! I've seen it happen with men the same way. It seems to be the one area of our lives where we are the most vulnerable; our flesh has such a strong desire to have a mate that it can get us into all kinds of trouble. That's why Paul advises younger widows in verse 14 that:

(3) they should normally remarry and pursue a godly life, have kids, manage their households, and so on. It's not unspiritual. We have this romantic notion that somehow our love for our first spouse wasn't true if we remarry, that if he or she dies young, a long life of singleness is the ultimate virtue. And if a young lady or man who is widowed or divorced by their spouse starts to date, we whisper things like, "It's only been a year! It's too soon! How could they!" Well, Paul actually urges the exact opposite. He says, if you're young, re-marry! Go for it. Singleness in itself is not spiritual. But do it in the Lord. Ask Him to send you a solid believer and go have a normal life! Elizabeth Eliot lost her husband Jim on that same beach in 1957 but she remarried, twice in fact, and is still serving the Lord, just as devotedly!

The point is that the church can help and get you through the emergency of the moment, but in time you should pursue a normal life once again, instead of leaning on the church and trying to hold yourself to the difficulty of a life you're not gifted to live. Does that make sense?

Well, now at verse 17 Paul moves on to the third set of instructions which have to do with:

III. Elders Directing The Affairs Of The Church (17-25) He has five things to say concerning them. First of all:

1. those that lead well should be honored and provided for (17-18) Those who give their lives to ministry, to teaching and preaching and guiding and overseeing the local church, should be honored and respected. Their devotion should be appreciated by the people they care for. And then he adds that bit about muzzling the ox. The ox walks around in a circle all day long threshing the grain; it's cruel to muzzle him all day when he needs grain to eat and send him out to find his own when he's all done. Jesus said that any laborer who has worked hard deserves the pay he's earned. The church has always to one degree or another provided for the physical needs of its pastors and overseers, not so they could get paid for what they do, but so they would have what they need to live and be free to serve the church. Of course, in many places in the world believers are desperately poor and often their pastors have to hold a job at least part of the time, because the body just can't support them, however, in many other places, if the body has at least 10 solid families that are each tithing their income, that should be enough to free up at least one leader and his family to serve them and minister to them with all of his time. And if that's the case it should not be held back. The leader who serves the church faithfully should not be starved to death, while his people live in relative ease; he should be provided for as well as they are and joyfully so. On the other hand:

2. those that sin should be rebuked publicly (19-20) If you're going to accuse a leader of something serious, it shouldn't be just your word against his; there ought to be two or three witnesses to validate it. That accusation should be thoroughly investigated and confirmed by others. However, if the leader is really guilty, he ought to be brought publicly before the whole body with the truth of what he has done so that they learn and see how serious sin really is. Boy is that hard. We went through that a number of years ago and some of you remember how excruciating it was for the whole body, yet it has to be done. The church must know that sin cannot be tolerated in the body, especially among its leaders. Then Paul says to those who are leaders that:

3. they should be impartial in caring for their flock (21) They shouldn't favor one sheep over another or care for this sheep and neglect that one. They shouldn't discipline this one and let that one get by with sin. Further he says:

4. they should be cautious in appointing (ordaining) new leaders (22) They should not thrust people into leadership before they know them really well. Why? (24-25) Some people's sins are obvious; others are pretty well hidden and don't show up until you know them a good while. Likewise, some people's best qualities take a long while to show up. So it's best to wait until someone has been really proven before ordaining them to a ministry position. And then, back in verse 23, there's a little personal note which tells me:

5. they should care for their own health (23) Timothy must have been a sickly type; it seems he was prone to gastro-intestinal problems. And maybe he was a bit of a health nut who would drink nothing but water. Paul says, "Care for that problem...drink a glass of wine every day. It will help." That, of course, was as much medicine as they had, but it's still advice doctors are giving today as a healthy practice. The point is that leaders should take care of their own bodies so they can prolong and continue their service and serve well.

Then finally, Paul has a few words to say specifically to:

IV. Believers Living In The Situation Of Slavery (6:1-2) We almost think of this subject as irrelevant. But some make the claim that probably half of the population of the Roman Empire in the first century was composed of slaves. A great many of the early Christians were slaves and when entire households were converted, slaves and masters together came to Christ. So what should they do now? In our 20th century mindset and thinking of slavery the way it was practiced in our country, we are quick to cry that it should be renounced and abandoned, but the Bible never does that. It simply says There is neither Jew nor Greek, slave nor free, male nor female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus. – Gal. 3:28. In Christ it doesn't matter; we all have the same spirit; we are one body before the throne, even though on earth one is the other's master or servant. What changes in Christ is the way we TREAT others. Paul writes Philemon, a master, about his servant Onesimus; Perhaps the reason he was separated from you for a little while was that you might have him back for good-- no longer as a slave, but better than a slave, as a dear brother. He is very dear to me but even dearer to you, both as a man and as a brother in the Lord. - Philemon 15-16. Masters should treat their servants lovingly and considerately as dear brothers. And here in verse 1, Paul says that servants:

1. they should treat masters with respect to bring honor to Christ (1) It would be easy to say, "I am your equal in Christ; I don't have to listen to you; you have no right over me!" but that would spread abroad the idea that Christians are rebellious and disrespectful and make Christianity in the eyes of the world about eliminating the system of slavery instead of trusting in Christ. Slaves who believe should honor their masters and submit to them wholeheartedly all the more. In fact, verse 2 says:

2. believing masters should be respected even more as dear brothers (2) If they are believers, serve them even better! Love them as dear brothers in Christ while you serve them!

How could we apply this here? Well, the same principles could apply to employment relationships now, boss-employee, foreman-laborer. Honor that boss with the respect he or she deserves for their position of authority and carry out their instructions wholeheartedly and sincerely. And if the person happens to be a believer, serve them all the better with even greater joy as a dear brother or sister! Not exactly the way the world teaches you to act, is it?!

You know, the two things that stick out in all of these instructions over and over are love and purity. Love brothers and sisters who need correction with a pure heart; love poor sisters who need help just to survive and help them stay pure; love the leaders of your flock and leaders, love your flock...and stay pure; servants love your masters with a pure heart. Peter put it like this, Since you have in obedience to the truth purified your souls for a sincere love of the brethren, fervently love one another from the heart - 1Pet 1:22 (NASB).

Money And The Local Church - 6:3-21

Today we wind up our series in 1 Timothy and complete our look at what Paul had to say about the local church. To review the chapters, he's talked about what we teach in the local church and about how we worship in the local church. Then he spent two chapters focusing on the leaders of the local church, first on their qualifications and then on their duties. In chapter 5 he talked about the people in the local church, specifically about people with special types of needs and how to care for them. Now last of all, in chapter 6 he comes around to talking about that thing we either don't like to talk about or that we talk about too much in the church, the subject of money. The first argument I ever saw inside a local church was over money. It shocked me. I was amazed how angry people could get over spending money to buy some new carpet, over how their nice loving veneer evaporated so quickly when it touched their pocketbooks! You know, Jesus had an awful lot to say about money and about being attached to it and that's really what Paul focuses on in this chapter. But he gets there by first talking about:

I. The Trap Of Living To Satisfy Our Own Desires (3-5) He's talking here about people who started out within the church but have gone off the deep end in two ways:

1. some think their "knowledge" supersedes God's revealed truth They get caught up in trying to know and figure out everything for themselves, rather than simply accepting what God has to say. Paul says they end up with a disease, literally, a sick, unhealthy drive for controversies and quarrels about what they think they know. These are the same false teachers that Paul talked about back in chapter 1 who lead people astray from simple faith. Now, when you look at something the Scripture clearly says and you declare, "That can't be true", what is that? For instance, the Bible says that homosexuality is literally "against nature" and that the practice of it is a perversion and a sin. So, when someone says, "That is not true; that is simply the way those people are made; it is just an alternative lifestyle.", what is that? It is putting their so-called "knowledge" above the truth and that is pride. When I think I know more than God does, that I can tell Him how things really are and that He's wrong, I'm proud. The root of all of that is a desire to elevate myself, to be more right than God, to have things be the way I want them to be, rather than the way He says they are. It was that desire to be "like God", to make her own rules, that got Eve in trouble in the garden and it's been destroying people ever since. That's why, in the last verses of this chapter, there is a strong warning about this. Paul admonishes Timothy that:

a. we must carefully guard that truth (20a) That truth that God has given, the truth that today we hold in our hands in the written scriptures, we must guard that truth! And:

b. we must turn away from all false "knowledge" (20b-21) I can't for the life of me figure out why we end up letting people like this teach in seminaries and hold office in our large denominations! However, we spent enough time on this subject in chapter 1. Suffice it to say that the pride of false knowledge is one place where people who live to satisfy their own desires often end up. The other place is in the end of verse 5:

2. some think that godliness is a means to financial gain Of course, there have always been charlatans like Simon the magician who want to use Christianity to make money. And there are still many frauds out there today on the radio and TV who say, "Send me your money" and promise some blessing from God in return. Some of them are really blatant. I literally did hear a guy one time promise that if you send him your tithe that he would send you a bottle of oil and you could go down to the car lot and pick out the car you like and anoint it and God would give it to you! The amazing thing is that folks fall for it! But the more subtle way that this appears today is in what we've come to call "the prosperity gospel". You hear it quite a lot on TV, "God wants His children to prosper; He wants them to always have the best, to be the head and not the tail. He wants you to do well in business, to succeed, to have a nice house and nice things; after all you're a child of the King!" The premise is that the more godly you are, the more God will bless you financially, but at the root of it is the misuse of a bunch of Old Testament promises that were given to Israel, but were never promised by Jesus to the church. That whole notion of godliness resulting in financial gain is completely contrary to what Jesus taught and what Paul taught. Yet it still sells well for one reason; it appeals to a basic human desire that we all have in our flesh, greed! We want to accumulate things for ourselves. That's why Paul here gives the church such a strong:

II. A Warning About The Danger Of Desiring Wealth in verses (6-10). But before the actual warning he spells out:

1. three principles about the true nature of wealth (6-8) Look at those three verses closely. First of all, they tell us that:

a. the true gain in life is eternal gain Verse 7 is one of the most haunting verses in the entire Bible. You brought nothing into this world and you can't take anything out of it. So many ancient pagan cultures insisted on burying their dead with all kinds of household items, money, pets, you name it, as though they could take these things with them. But it's a pipe dream. Accumulate all you want in this world and arrange to have it hauled to the cemetery and buried with you and that's where it will stay, but you won't! When you die you are either with the Lord in heaven or without Him in hell and nothing material goes with you! So why would you want to spend the one and only lifetime you have focusing on getting stuff you can't keep anyway! The only things in life that are truly profitable, that really last forever are things that are spiritual in nature, things that impact your relationship with Christ and things that impact other people and their relationship to Christ. Secondly:

b. the true means of eternal gain is godliness according to verse 6. Genuine godliness (not the sham variety) brings tremendous eternal profit. When you share your faith with a friend and they invite Christ into their life, it changes their destiny forever! God gets another worshipper for His glory and another servant to use to impact the world. When you live righteous and holy and act in honesty and tell the truth, people see God at work in you and His truth is spread, His glory is enhanced and people are drawn to Him. There is great profit in it, profit that lasts forever, eternal gain that you will be present to see and enjoy forever. And so, thirdly:

c. our true goal concerning material things is contentment, to learn to be satisfied with what we have, to be content if we have food to eat and clothes to wear and a place to live. And even when we don't! Paul put it this way to the Philippians, I have learned to be content whatever the circumstances. I know what it is to be in need, and I know what it is to have plenty. I have learned the secret of being content in any and every situation, whether well fed or hungry, whether living in plenty or in want. I can do everything through him who gives me strength. - Phil. 4:11-13. Jesus' goal for you in this life is not to change your circumstances; it is to change YOU! It is to bring you into such a close relationship and dependence upon Him that you are able to victoriously endure any circumstance that comes your way by His power so that He gets the glory. But it is so easy to miss that, and that's why Paul warns us of:

2. the grave danger of letting the desire for wealth control us (9-10) Money is neither good or bad; it's a-moral. It's like a gun; a criminal can use it to take life or a policeman can use it to save life. But THE LOVE OF MONEY is a root of all kinds of evil things. When you let the desire to get money control you, it will put you in a spot where you are tempted to sin to get it. Sooner or later, you'll cheat, lie, steal or hurt someone, because the money will be more important. It will absolutely kill your meaningful relationships and bring you a boatload of sorrow. Remember Ebenezer Scrooge? Some of his kind are real! And it can ruin and destroy your life. In the 1970's a couple of genuine Christians by the name of Jim and Tammy Bakker started a TV show called The PTL Club. It grew rapidly to 100 stations and some 12 million viewers and then they established The PTL Network which eventually delivered programming 24 hours a day by satellite over the entire nation. In the 80's they built Heritage USA in Ft. Mill, SC, the third most popular theme park in the nation and sold time shares for vacations there. Contributions from viewers grew to a million dollars a week. The message they preached did include the message of salvation through Christ but it went on to add that God wants His children to prosper financially, to have health, and so on. They lived a lavish lifestyle. But as many of you remember, eventually greed caught up with them. Jim was convicted of embezzling several millions of dollars for personal use and sentenced to 45 years in prison. It came out that he had been involved in an affair. Their huge empire of properties went bankrupt and was sold for a portion of its worth. Tammy divorced him. He ended up a broken man with a ruined life. He was paroled in 1993 for good behavior and in 1996 published a book with the title, "I Was Wrong" and today he clearly denounces his past teachings on prosperity saying they were wrong. That's what Paul's warning us against. You may never be around that much money, but if you let the desire for money take over your life, you will not believe how quickly you can end up a broken, ruined person. So, live for that which is eternal and beware of greed!

Now in the middle section of the chapter (11-16), Paul talks to us about how to do that. He gives us:

III. An Exhortation To Be A Man Or Woman Of God Right there's the key. That is not just a term for someone wearing a white collar, a clergyman; that's all of us! We've got to learn to be what we are, a man of God or a woman of God, a person who belongs to God, who is controlled by God and whose life is consumed with His purposes. That's what we are and must be, but how? First:

1. we must frantically flee from the desires of the flesh (11a) All this means the foolish and harmful desires of verse 9, the desire to get rich, the love of money and eagerness to get money in verse 10 and all the kinds of evil these desires will produce. Gal. 5:19-21 calls this stuff the works of the flesh. And what must we do about all this? Flee from it! Run away from it as fast as you can. I think it was Elizabeth Elliot who said that when she and Rachel Saint moved in with the Waodani tribe, that their friend Dayuma gave them a full course in Waodani "fleeing techniques". They literally learned to run for their lives. That's what flee means. When you sense those fleshly desires rising up in you, run! Get away! Flee for your life! In Kyrgyzstan, foreigners can't actually own property so they often buy it in the name of a trusted local believer. Some time ago, the brother in whose name the Rainbows of Hope building was bought came to them and said that since it was in his name he was feeling tempted to take possession of it for himself. But he knew that wasn't right, so he asked them to quickly get it out of his name and into someone else's so he wouldn't be tempted anymore! That's fleeing! Then:

2. we must zealously pursue the fruit of the Spirit (11b) Pursuing is the direct opposite of fleeing; it's what the murdering enemy with the spear does to the one who's fleeing, what Saul used to do when he hunted down Christians. He chased him relentlessly with all his might. That's how we're to go after the things that Paul calls the "fruit of the Spirit" in Gal. 5:22-23, righteousness, godliness, love, faith and so on. With everything in us, we must choose and cultivate these things that the Spirit wants to produce, while fleeing from the things our flesh wants. Then Paul says:

3. we must carefully guard our pure testimony (12-16) I explained verses 13-16 at length on a previous occasion, so we won't repeat that. Rather Paul's overall charge is that we guard our reputation as a believer, our testimony, and be extremely careful to keep it pure in the sight of God and of other people. Jim Bakker's lapse into greed impacted millions; who knows how many turned away from Jesus Christ forever because of their disgust with his behavior as a Christian. Be what you profess to be. Live out what you said when you were baptized or when you publicly said, "I have given my life to Jesus Christ!" Guard that testimony carefully. And then Paul concludes with another warning, this time:

IV. A Warning For Those Who Already Have Wealth (17-19) By the way, do you know who he's talking to? Lest you think he only means the Donald Trumps of the world, if you look at this world as a whole, he means YOU! You and I are the richest generation in the richest society that has ever lived. We have a car for every family member and a computer too; our kids carry cell phones around and watch cable TV while Facebooking on broadband internet; we go on vacations that cost more than most people in the world earn total in a year! I need to listen up, because Paul is talking to me when he warns of:

1. the dangers inherent in having wealth (17) The first one is:

a. becoming arrogant because of what we have When we see pictures of teeming thousands of refugees or of poor tribal Indians in the jungle, in your heart do you think you're somehow in some way better than they are. Look at all you have; do you in any way that you feel like you deserve it somehow? Or just watch the news and look at the folks in the inner city. Are you somehow better? Put simply, having a lot of stuff makes you think you are somebody! It can do to you in miniature what it did to Nebuchadnezzar who looked at everything he had and said, "Is not this the great Babylon I have built as the royal residence, by my mighty power and for the glory of my majesty?" – Dan. 4:30. Stuff puffs up and being puffed up is NOT a good place to be. And the second danger is:

b. putting our hope in what we have rather than God When we have money, when we have credit cards, we don't need to pray for our daily bread, we don't need to ask God to provide for our bills and it seems like we don't need Him! Afterwhile, we make all our economic decisions without even consulting Him, because we really come to trust in what we have. And if think you're immune to that, just try to imagine what it would be like for you if you suddenly lost every penny you have and had no credit, like people did back in 1929. Or what about the families who lost everything on 9/11/2001? Wealth is so uncertain. It can all disappear tomorrow; it can seem to sprout wings and fly off, as Proverbs says. That's why Paul closes by giving us four:

2. principles for dealing with the wealth you have The first is just that:

a. make sure you are trusting God (17b) Put your hope in Him; put your trust in Him and make sure of it, not in your own strength or intelligence or abilities. Not in the fact that you've always made a living. Moses wrote, Remember the LORD your God, for it is he who gives you the ability to produce wealth... - Deut. 8:18. Moses was right. Never forget that. Thank Him for every paycheck. Pray about every economic decision. Without Him you don't even breathe; whether you live or die, eat or starve, all depends on Him, so be sure you remember that and talk to Him about it. And that goes with principle number two:

b. regard all things as His gifts to you Paul asked the Corinthians a good question, What do you have that you did not receive? - 1Cor 4:7. Nothing! Absolutely every single thing you have in life is a gift from God which He has given you richly to enjoy. And that word does mean enjoy! There is nothing wrong with enjoying your house or your car or taking a vacation. They are gifts that your Father has lavished upon you because He loves you! Like any good father, He intends for you to enjoy them, but the key thought on our part ought to be appreciation! Be thankful! Thank Him when you eat a meal. Thank Him when you get new clothes. Thank Him when you get in your nice car. Thank Him when you lie in your warm bed tonight and the wind is howling outside. Thanking Him will keep your heart in perspective; it will keep you trusting Him. Thirdly, verse (18):

c. be a generous and willing giver Give freely, generously, all the time. Give to God's work and not just your left-overs at the end of the week. He gave it to you, so determine that you're going to give the very first part to Him. Give a generous portion to Him. Give to missions as you have opportunity. Give to the needs of others around you. Don't do it grudgingly or out of necessity, for the Lord loves a cheerful giver, the Scripture says. Become a person who loves to give and you'll never put your trust in material things. And finally, Paul says:

d. always remember your treasure is in heaven (19) You want to live a life that is truly living? Then determine to lay up for yourself treasure in heaven. Where your treasure is, your heart will be also, so treasure the things that last for eternity. Treasure people. Treasure growing in Christ. Treasure investing your life in reaching the world for Him. One day you'll leave all your stuff behind, but if your treasure is in what you sent ahead, it'll be waiting for you.

*The story is told about some Christians who were traveling in the Middle East. They heard about a wise, devout, beloved, old believer, so they went out of their way to visit him. When they finally found him, they discovered that he was living in a simple hut. All he had inside was a rough cot, a chair, a table, and a battered stove for heating and cooking. The visitors were shocked to see how few possessions the man had, and one of them blurted out, "Well, where is your furniture?" The aged saint replied by gently asking, "Where is yours?" The visitor, sputtering a little, responded, "Why, at home, of course. I don't carry it with me, I'm traveling." "So am I," the godly Christian replied. "So am I." Now I'm not saying you can't have furniture or any other particular thing. But that needs to be our attitude. The song says, I'm a pilgrim and a stranger passing through this world on my way to that fair city. So don't settle down too much. Travel light.*

Keeping God's Perspective In A Perverted World A Study Of 2 Timothy

AN INTRODUCTION:

1. to this series of messages We live in a perverted world. All you have to do is look at this week's news. We live in a world where terrorists will blow up a public building and kill dozens of innocent people including children without any regard for their lives, simply to prove a point or get recognition, but where people would turn around and call the immediate execution of such a terrorist inhumane and seek to ban it. We live in a world where 1 out of every 4 women you say hello to today has experienced the terror of being sexually abused or molested, yet where in many states a woman who has been raped has to pass a cruel and grueling lie detector test within hours of the event to prove it. We live in a world where they hand out free condoms in public schools, but forbid students to pray. We live in a world where statistically right now 1 of every 3 or even every 2 young couples will be divorced before a few years have passed, which means that if things don't change in another generation half of the people you meet will have grown up in a broken home. It is a world where wrong is right and right is wrong, where values shift and change and everyone pretty much stands with Pilate and asks with a cynical sneer, "What is truth?" Now, if you think that all these things around us don't affect us Christians and the way we think, act, and live, you'd better think again! The divorce rate inside the church is approximately the same as the rest of society. We hear time and again of pastors having moral failures and if it happens to them, you can bet it happens to people in their congregations! Christian couple after couple marry having no idea how to be husband and wife, let alone parents, because they had no role models. Our children often grow up to reject the faith of their parents as archaic and old-fashioned. These are signs that we're being affected. The world around us is gradually making its way into our lives and it's getting tougher and tougher to keep and live out of God's perspective. We live in a society where the foundations are being destroyed. What shall the righteous do?

2. to the Letter of 2 Timothy Well, our world is not unlike the Roman world in which Paul lived. In the year 67 AD Nero, a madman who tried to blame the Christians for the ills of his own reign and use them as a scapegoat, was on the throne of the world. It was an empire ruled by greed and power where justice was hard to come by. Morals were non-existent and human life was cheap. And it was getting worse. Paul himself was in prison right there in Rome by the order of Nero himself and awaiting eventual execution. Timothy was a young man who, though he had traveled in missionary ministry with Paul earlier, had for several years now served as a pastor of the growing church at Ephesus. He was by no means a perfect man. 1 Tim. 5:23 says he was frequently ill. The whole tone of this letter suggests that he was somewhat timid and needed reassurance and encouragement to be faithful. He needed instruction on how to make it in a perverted world and Paul couldn't be there, so he wrote him this letter to help him keep his head straight, to help him keep his perspective on what was important in the world from God's perspective, what he should be doing and what he should be avoiding as a servant of Christ in a perverted mixed-up world. And there's a very good possibility it can help us do the same.

3. to the content of 2 Timothy There are four principles Paul teaches in this letter that will help us keep our perspective:

Remembering Our Roots Continually Setting Our Priorities Carefully
Seeing Our World Clearly
Facing Our Dilemmas Confidently

It all starts with understanding our roots, with knowing who you are. Once you know who you are, you can set your priorities accordingly and you can also see the world around you as it truly is and not as the thing it masquerades as. And then you can face your personal dilemmas with the absolute and utmost confidence. So, let's begin at the beginning:

In "The Lion King" young Simba, who is destined to be King of the pride lands, is driven into exile as a cub after the death of his father. His wicked uncle takes over the Kingdom. In the jungle he meets two new friends who teach him a new philosophy, Hakuna Matata, life without worry. Live for today. Forget the past. Don't worry about anything. Live for the moment. Sound familiar? We live in a generation that believes that. What matters is right here and right now and your own personal pleasure and well-being. But one day a wise old monkey pokes a finger in Simba's nose and says, "You don't know who you are!" Moments later he has a vision of his father who says, "You have forgotten who you are!" And the point of the story is that once he remembers who he is, he knows what he must do, so he goes back and takes up his responsibility and defeats his wicked uncle and restores peace to the pride lands. It is by no means a Christian film, but we would do well to take heed to that point. In order to keep your perspective on the world and know how to live, you must continually remember who you are. The world will do everything it can to help you forget and the more you do, the more your life is shaped and molded according to its ways. Isaiah called Israel to that, Listen to me, you who pursue righteousness and who seek the LORD: Look to the rock from which you were cut and to the quarry from which you were hewn; look to Abraham, your father, and to Sarah, who gave you birth... – Is. 51:1-2. Every stone ought to look back to the rock from which it was sawed and to the quarry from which it was dug in order to see what it is made of! Israel was to look back to Father Abraham and they did. They said to Jesus, "Abraham is our father" and Jesus said "If Abraham was your father, you would do what Abraham did!" But they didn't! They knew in words who they were, but in reality, they had forgotten. They had lost their perspective and were actually far away from God. Now, we also have both a rock we are cut from and a quarry from which we were dug. The Rock is Christ Himself and the quarry is His Church. We are living stones cut from the One rock; we are of His material and that gives us our identity. And we are living stones who come out of a quarry full of others just like us and that gives us our Christian heritage. So first:

I. We must know our identity in Christ (1-2) Paul knew who He was and what He was about! He started every one of his letters with it, so it must have been on his mind a lot. He knew two things that we also must know:

1. we must know the Source of our life Our life is where? In Christ Jesus. To us a promise is something that will happen in the future and when we see statements like this one, we tend to think of heaven. But the Greek word has a much broader flavor meaning to announce, proclaim or declare. God has declared and proclaimed that life is in Jesus and He who has the Son has [His] life, the very life of God, eternal life! That means so much more than living forever. It means that the very basis of God's own existence has now become the basis of yours! His character has become yours; His resources have become yours; His power has become yours! You are not simply a child of God struggling to imitate Dad. You are your Father's child; everything He is is in you. Every good thing about Him, you are. Now the problem is that most of us are still busy devoting our lives to trying to get His life, that is, to get a life like His, to produce it somehow by our own effort. We're trying to be what we think we are not. But when we discover that the key is to allow Him to make us what He says we already are, that changes our life. The center of our living is not me and what I have to do; it is Jesus Christ and what He does in me! Then Jesus, the Rock from whence I am hewn, becomes central to every moment of every day of my life and He becomes more important to me than anything else in the world. I hate to quote another movie but, I remember a line from "The Sandlot" where the narrator was describing a good friend this way, "To us baseball was just a game, but to him baseball was life!" You see, to most of us, Jesus is a part of life. Life is family and work and friends and church and Jesus. But Jesus is life and living is Jesus working in my family, Jesus working in my friends, Jesus working at my job, Jesus working in our church. Christ is my life. That's who

I am, a person to whom Christ is everything and everything else is nothing apart from Him! I must know that and keep remembering it continually! Secondly:

2. we must know the reason we are here Paul did. He said, "I am an apostle" I am one who has been sent out by the commission of another. Paul says, "Jesus Christ gave me life and sent me out by the will of God." Now, we are not apostles in the same official sense that the 12 and Paul held the office of apostle. But, like them, we are sent ones. We are a people sent with a commission. Let's Compare Heb. 3:1. Jesus is called The Apostle, THE Sent One and we are to consider or fix our thoughts on Him. So let's think about what it meant for Him to be a sent one. Roy Brill says that between John 3:17 and John 8:42 Jesus made 23 references to the fact that He was sent by God! It must have been continually on His mind! Let's look at a just four of the things He said that reflect on what it means for us to be sent:

a. we are not here of our own accord - Jn. 8:42 Jesus didn't come into the world on His own, of His own accord. He was sent! God has put us in this world and placed us exactly where He wanted us. Our lives are not accidents. God put me here in this world. My home is heaven!

b. we are not here to teach what we please - Jn. 7:16 Jesus didn't come to say what He felt like saying, to teach what He felt like teaching. God sent Him and told Him what to teach. He was on the earth to say what God wanted Him to say. So are we!

c. we are not here to do what we please - Jn. 5:36 Jesus did the works the Father told Him to do! He didn't come to do what He felt like doing, to become what He felt like becoming. He was on the earth to do what God had laid out for Him to do. So are we!

d. we are not here to want what we please - Jn. 6:38 Jesus didn't come to earth to have His own way, to make His own choices, to ask for what He wanted. He came to comply with the Father's way, to do and say and be and want what He wanted! He was here to accomplish the Father's will and purpose. So are we!

Do you get it? Christ is my life and I am here as a sent one of His. This life is not about me. It's not about what I want and need and have and like. It's about accomplishing His purpose, running the course He has laid out for me! And that affects every day, every deed, and every decision of my life.

II. We must realize our heritage in Christ (3-5) Paul said, "Timothy, when I pray for you (which I do constantly), I remember two things. I remember how you cried the last time we parted, how much you love me and I miss you. And I keep thinking about how sincere or genuine your faith is and how I saw it live first in your grandmother and in your mother and now in you too." You see:

1. Timothy had a personal heritage - Acts 16:1-3 tells us Timothy was from Lystra in Asia minor where Paul met him on his second missionary journey. But he was not Paul's convert.

a. he came from a line of believers His grandmother Eunice and mother Lois had been converted, probably during Paul's visit there on his first journey a year or two before. By the time Paul got back, not only had they passed the faith on to him, but Timothy had become well-known and spoken of by believers in both Lystra and Iconium. At that point, Paul took him along on the journey and:

b. he served many years under Paul He was with Paul for much of his second and third missionary journeys and was often sent by him to one location or another. He was with Paul during the time of his first imprisonment at Rome and was even sent from there to Philippi. He became like a son to Paul and Paul was closer to him than any other associate. If there were anyone to whom Paul would pass his mantle it would have been Timothy.

So, Timothy had both a heritage of faith in his family and in the ministry to which he could constantly look when he was tempted to forget who he was. We also read in these words that:

2. Paul had an appreciation of heritage "I am serving God as my forefathers did..." or literally "from my forefathers." That is, "I'm not just serving like they did; I'm serving as a result of what they did!" What forefathers? He's certainly not thinking of his own parents or of his spiritual mentors, the Pharisees! He's looking back to a long line of the faithful, to the prophets and godly men of old, to Daniel and Jeremiah and Isaiah, to Moses and before him back to Jacob and Isaac and Abraham of old. And not just those who were well-known and stand out, but Paul sees himself as part of a whole line of godly men and women, all sent by God and serving His purpose down through the centuries. He saw himself in that line of those who had passed the mantle to him and he saw Timothy and how it had been passed on now to him. He had a real sense of heritage. And:

3. we have a precious heritage We stand in that same continuum that Paul did:

a. we fill a place in a line stretching from the cross to the Rapture Paul passed the faith to Timothy, who passed it to others and it came on down through the centuries through thousands of men and women and somewhere to either our parents or to the one who led us to Christ and that faith now lives in us and we've passed it on to another generation and that will go on until Jesus comes. So often we forget that we stand in that line. We have very little sense of history anymore. We know so little about even our own physical ancestors, much less about those who have preceded us in the faith. Our lives are too busy for that. And with that loss of information goes the sense of continuity, of what it means to step up and take our handoff from the runner who precedes and to pass it off to the next runner and to see not just our few yards but the whole race and our few yards as extremely important to that race. Having a heritage means:

b. we have the example and encouragement of those who go before Others have stood where we stand in this perverted world. They have paved the way. They stood faithfully and held on to the faith and passed it accurately on to us. They endured all kinds of things and have testified that it's worth it all. That's what Heb. 11 is all about, where the writer looks back and traces faith from Abel through Noah and Abraham and Moses and on through Gideon and Barak and Samson and David and Samuel and the prophets and how they all stood for God whether they saw any reward in this world or not, or even died for it. And the conclusion he comes to is Heb. 12:1, Therefore, since we are surrounded by such a great cloud of witnesses, let us throw off everything that hinders and the sin that so easily entangles, and let us run with perseverance the race marked out for us. They ran their race well, so let's run ours and run it well! We owe it to them. They sacrificed that we might have their legacy and:

c. we have a tremendous responsibility to those who come after If we don't run our leg, the team is done for. Nobody can run it after us! Our segment may not be much, but without it, the race stops. If just one generation of Christians doesn't pass it on, the faith would be lost forever! Paul explains that principle in 2:2!

You see, that's part of who we are! Our identity is in Christ. We are here to serve His purpose in the world, not our own. And He has put us here as one in a long line of servants. We have a heritage to take upon ourselves and be proud of and live up to and pass on! Those facts determine the goals we'll set in life. Who we are (or who we think we are) will determine how we live. Paul says in verse 6, "For this reason I remind you to fan into flame the gift of God which is in you..." That's what I'm doing, reminding you who you are so you can fan the flame in your own life!

Keeping God's Perspective In A Perverted World

A Study Of 2 Timothy

Remembering Our Roots Continually - Ch. 1 (Part 2)

Roots are important. If you forget your roots, you lose your perspective. Let's review briefly the points from last time. There are several aspects to our roots. First is our heavenly identity, who we are in Christ. He is the Rock from which we were hewn. The second part is our earthly heritage, the Church of Jesus Christ, the quarry from which we were dug. If we keep looking at those things, it will keep our head straight. The third aspect of our roots relates to our own personal experience. General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, once sent this message to those under him. "The tendency of fire is to go out; watch the fire on the altar of your heart." Prov. 26:20 says, Without wood a fire goes out... If you don't feed it, if you don't stir it occasionally, if you don't pay it constant attention, any fire eventually goes out. And Paul uses that truth to remind us that:

I. We must rekindle our gift from Christ (6-7) Now first of all, let's consider:

1. Timothy's problem: fear Remember, Timothy lived in a perverted world, a broken-down society where there was no justice and no safety where it was almost impossible to protect yourself and your family either physically or morally or spiritually. And to top it off, he was a Christian living in a society which was at that time officially against Christians. You can easily see how Timothy or any other disciple might be timid or afraid. There was, of course:

a. fear of personal persecution As Paul is writing this letter, he is sitting in a prison in Rome awaiting trial and execution for his faith. And Paul wants Timothy to do a brave thing (compare 3:9), to come to Rome to visit and help him there in jail! Would you go? On top of that, Timothy was a pastor in public ministry. He was known and had good reason to have fear that he might be next to suffer! We're so fortunate that we've never had to face that in a real way here! Our freedom is a precious commodity the world has known little of. But at the same time, don't you sense it as true that the more of a minority we become, the more fearful we are to speak out, to make ourselves known? Whether at work or school or even in the neighborhood, we too can know fear in this crazy world. But along with it, evidently Timothy and the other Christians were sensing some:

b. shame over apparent inability (8) It's hard to sell a faith whose chief leader is in jail and whose founder died on a cross to a world where it is the strong who survive! In the ancient world, it was always the religion of the winner that sold! Israel was always going after the gods of the other nations, because it looked like they were doing the job! Their nations were conquering, while poor Israel quivered in fright. In Paul's day Rome was the winner. Everybody was afraid of Rome and Roman gods and particularly the Emperor were easy to believe in. Everybody wants something that works! If somebody says "What do you believe in? Who do you follow?", and your reply is "I believe in a man who died but was raised from the dead and the chief leader I follow is a guy in prison on his way to a chopping block", it was easy to feel a bit ashamed. People today are not much different. They want something that works, that will take all their problems away. And when you tell them it doesn't, that most of the things they need to overcome in their lives will not go away automatically, that it will still require months and years of fighting old habits and learning new ones and being changed in a gradual fashion and often through much pain, they don't much want to hear it and run off to look at some New Age philosophy! And you don't feel much like sharing it, either. There was a lot of pressure on Timothy and the other believers to become timid and fearful, to keep to themselves and to back off on reaching out in any conspicuous ways. We don't know whether they were yielding to that pressure, but Paul knew it was there. Yet he also knew:

2. Timothy's gift: public ministry Paul looked back to a time, a special occasion in Timothy's life which he was a part of, a time when he had laid hands on Timothy in a public ceremony. Compare 1 Tim. 4:11-14. We're not sure where it was, but it was probably in his home church group at Lystra, before he set out to accompany Paul on his mission. We would call it an ordination or a commissioning. The whole body of elders had gathered and, with Paul, laid hands on Timothy and prayed for him. There was a prophetic message, a Spirit given sermon. All because Timothy had a gift. What was it? I think verse 13 explains verse 14. It was the gift for public ministry, the public reading of Scripture, teaching and preaching. Timothy had the pastoral gift of a leader. Now where did he get it?

a. it was given by God the Holy Spirit It was the gift of God, not of Paul. Please don't think that's what he's saying. The Holy Spirit had obviously gifted Timothy for public ministry and on this occasion:

b. it was publicly affirmed It is not that they laid their hands on him and gave him the gift. But the gift was on this occasion accompanied by a message and with the laying on of hands in affirmation of it.

What's Paul saying? "Timothy, remember your roots. Remember the gift God gave you and called you to exercise? Remember how we all recognized it, how we set you apart, and acknowledged that gift before God? That's part of who you are! You are not simply a saint of God. You are not simply a Christian from a heritage of faith. You are a person whom God gifted and called and set aside for a purpose in the world, for ministry!" I want to tell you why I am in the ministry today. It is not for the money. If a person knew what this job entailed, you couldn't pay them enough to take it. It is not for the glory or recognition; I spend a whole lot more time in the painful process of trying to hold broken people together than I do shaking hands at the door Sunday morning. It's because when I was 19 years old, God gave me a call and with it a gift. He called me into public pastoral ministry. I am as sure of that call as of anything else that has ever happened in my life. And with it He gave the gift of preaching and teaching which I gradually began to develop and exercise. I will never forget the text of the sermon at my actual ordination five years later, Rom. 11:29, for God's gifts and his call are irrevocable. God doesn't change His mind! I don't know whether the interpretation is dispensationally correct, but the idea is. You see my gift is part of my identity; it is part of who I am. It is part of my spiritual roots. I can no more quit ministry and go devote my life to selling insurance than I can leave my family or go join the Buddhist Temple in Glenside! I am part of Christ. I am part of my family. And I am a pastor-teacher! That's what Paul was saying to Timothy, "Remember what you are!" You're probably saying, "That's great for you! What about me; nobody ever laid hands on me and told me what my gifts were!" Well, what gifts has God given you? Music is not just something our worship team likes; it's part of who they are. Prayer is part of who others of us are; it is their ministry. Our nursery workers don't just take care of babies; they minister to babies. And keep in mind that most of us have a number of gifts, and maybe there is not one in particular that dominates our life. There may be a number of gifts and ministries that God has given us. They may be private or low profile, instead of public and visible. And like Timothy, the pressure is on us to forget those things and think of ourselves, to become afraid in this perverted world and wallow in our self-concern. Well, Paul reminded him of:

3. Timothy's responsibility: to keep the fire blazing! To remember his gift and to keep that fire blazing, to never neglect it through timidity and let it smolder down into buried embers, but to fan it so that it burned brightly. God did not give us a Spirit who causes us to be afraid. That comes from the other spirit!

a. we have the Holy Spirit's power When we surrender to Him and let Him take control, His power works through us and touches and changes lives!

b. we have the Holy Spirit's love When we surrender to Him and let Him take control of us, His love flows through us and we love the unlovely in this perverted world! And:

c. we have the Holy Spirit's controlled thinking When we surrender to Him and let Him take control of us, His mind, His thinking, controls ours and we don't cower in fear of the world around us; we realize who we are and what we are supposed to be about and we go do it!

But we have to daily, sometimes hourly, fan that flame by remembering who we are and surrendering to the Spirit's control and use. Jeremiah the prophet was put in the stocks for his preaching. Nobody affirmed what he said and he wanted to quit and give up in his perverted society. But when he tried, it didn't work. He said, But if I say, "I will not mention him or speak any more in his name," his word is in my heart like a fire, a fire shut up in my bones. I am weary of holding it in; indeed, I cannot. - Jer. 20:9. It is like that for us too and we've got to fan that fire, not try to douse it! Now, wrapped up with this whole issue is a fourth principle and it is this:

II. We must relinquish our care to Christ (8-12) There is a watershed we must come to, a continental divide we must choose to cross. Unfortunately, we spend too much time trying to straddle the ridge top. We must decide whether we're going to be who we are or not be who we are, whether we will live out of our roots or be shaped and molded by the world around us at the moment. And if you boil it all down:

1. the decision we must make has two parts. First, we must decide, like Paul:

a. to entrust ourselves completely to His keeping (11-12) Paul says, "I know what I am; I know what God called me to be. I did what He said and it put me in this prison here in Rome. I'm going to die shortly. But I'm not ashamed and I'm not afraid because I've gone to Somebody I trust and I've made a deposit. I deposited myself, my eternal well-being into His care. And I am absolutely convinced that He has the power to keep the real me, my soul, my spirit safe forever, come what may!" Somewhere along the line, if you want to keep God's perspective in this world, you've got to make that deposit. You've got to make up your mind to trust God more than yourself or anybody or anything else on this planet, come what may, and then:

b. to willingly accept whatever suffering He may allow (8) He can carry you through it by His power. Paul says, "Yes, it's going to cost you. Yes, you're going to get hurt. Yes, it often won't be pleasant, not in the world we live in, but you have to decide to join with me in suffering for the Gospel out of the resource of His divine power!" Whether it pays, whether it feels good, whether it means a hard life on some foreign field or even persecution, it is worth it! Now in verses 9-10 we have:

2. the basis on which we make that decision (9-10) Here, Timothy are the hard facts:

a. Christ saved us from our sins. Every last one of them was laid on Him at the cross and:

b. He called us to a holy life out of a life dominated by sin and the course of this world. He changed our lives. And:

c. He did it completely out of grace It was not because of anything in us or because of anything we did, but simply because He chose to. In fact:

d. He did it before the beginning of time, before we ever existed, before the world existed. Our names were written in the Lamb's book of life from the foundation of the world. And whether you're a five point Calvinist or not, the fact is that your redemption was accomplished in God's economy and His mind and His plan before creation and:

e. He proved His faithfulness in appearing to accomplish it In the fullness of time God sent forth His Son to redeem them that were under the law that they might receive their adoption as sons! And for Him that meant going to the cross. It meant dying. But through His death:

f. He put death out of business He took the sting out. He broke its back. Death still exists, but it doesn't matter anymore, because death has no hold on us. It is merely a doorway, not the ultimate end of our existence. Because:

g. He gave us incorruptible eternal life, His life. Death was who we were. it was part of our being. But now we have life, His life, life that is immortal, incorruptible, unchangeable, that can never be altered by anything, not even physical death. If we live, we live to the Lord; if we die, we die unto the Lord. Whether we live or die, therefore, we are the Lord's!

Oh hallelujah, we don't need to be afraid to make that deposit! We can't lose. We can place ourselves and our well-being in a perverted world in His hands, because He's already given us life that never ends or changes. What can man do to me? So while I'm here, I'd better get busy and be who I am and exercise those gifts!

Keeping God's Perspective In A Perverted World

A Study Of 2 Timothy

Remembering Our Roots Continually - Ch. 1 (Part 3)

With roots comes responsibility. I shared the Lion King illustration with you at the beginning of this series. Simba's problem was that he had forgotten who he was and so his perspective on life was all out of whack. He was living life with "no worries". But when he remembered who he was, he knew what he had to do. He had to go back and take his place as king. Our roots determine who we are and when we know who we are:

I. We must recognize our responsibility to Christ (13-18) It changes our perspective on what it means to pass through this world. We are not here for ourselves, to get our needs met in life. We are here for His purpose. So, Paul reminds Timothy and us first of all, that:

1. we must be faithful with the message He entrusted to us (13-14) The other day I went down to the bank and made a deposit. I took some money that had been given to me and I deposited it in the bank. I left it there in their keeping as the sole custodians of it. I made them responsible for taking care of it and using it in the proper fashion without losing it or misusing it. Because of who we are as Christians, each of us has received a great and valuable deposit. What is it? The message of God's truth, the pattern of sound and true teaching about God and salvation and Jesus Christ. How did we get it?

a. we received it from others Timothy got it first from his mother and grandmother and then from Paul who taught him over and over again the pattern or the outline of sound teaching, of God's truth. Paul was going to die soon and the truth had been left with Timothy as a deposit. Where'd you get it? I got it from my pastor who got it from his parents and his pastor who got it from... Because of our heritage and roots, it was deposited and left with us by those who went before. And because it is precious and life-giving, we have a responsibility to Christ in regard to it. First:

b. we must cling to the truth without altering it ourselves We must keep it, cling to it. Did you ever play "Whisper Down The Lane"? What happens when you try to pass even a single sentence through a number of people. The tendency of people is to alter what we receive as it passes through the filter of our lives, either for personal reasons or just to make more sense out of it. For example, there's a church in the city called Faith Tabernacle. Their pastor received the truth from somebody. He saw in that body of truth the strong emphasis on trusting in God, not in the hand of man. He was so inspired by it that he tried to apply it in an extreme way and taught that trust means you should never seek medical help, but simply trust God. He taught his people never to get help but to call the elders and pray instead. In 1991 five children died of measles in that congregation. A 17 year old boy died of a ruptured appendix. In 1993 a 16 year old died from an infection from an untreated compound fracture in his leg which was not allowed to be set. A baby girl playing with a pen cap sniffed it up her nostril into the sinus cavity and was in terrible pain. The family prayed for 92 days before it worked its way out and the baby recovered! Do you see what a slight altering of the truth can do! Imagine if you or I tried to simplify the doctrine of the Trinity to make it more understandable. We'd end up without salvation! That is the primary reason that God caused His truth to be written down in the Bible, so there would be a written record with multiple copies that could be objectively guarded and passed down without alteration. But even with that, the tendency to alter is so easy. We must be careful to keep the truth that was delivered to us whole and pure. And:

c. we must guard the truth from outside influences It is always under attack from the outside, from people trying to say that Jesus isn't God, that the resurrection didn't happen, that all religions are equal ways to God. In Paul's day it was people like the Gnostics who wanted to change the truth and make Jesus a created being and integrate it with their pagan belief in many deities. There's always somebody who wants to change the truth and make it fit something else. And we are charged with guarding it carefully in its pure unaltered state! Now, fortunately:

d. God has given us One to help us keep the truth: the Holy Spirit God did not just give us His spoken Word, but His written word. And not just His written Word, but His Spirit to live in our hearts to guide us into all the truth. More accurately we might say in our day, to keep us centered in the truth which has been once and for all delivered to us. If this process of passing the faith down was simply a manmade thing, even with written Scriptures, we'd be far from the truth by now, but the same Spirit has been living in us one generation after another to ensure that we guard the truth correctly.

This is a big responsibility. But it's who we are, guardians of the truth. Without fulfilling that responsibility those who come after us will die. Now here's a second responsibility:

2. we must be faithful to the people He has placed with us (15-18) Having roots means being stones from the same quarry with others and we have a responsibility of faithfulness to the other stones. First, Paul mentions:

a. a bad example: Phygelus and Hermogenes (15) - deserters We don't know who these guys were, but they deserted Paul. He was imprisoned and sentenced to die and they were probably afraid and didn't want to hang around, so they went home along with a bunch of others. And in a situation where a prisoner's well-being depended on help from friends and relatives, that was really a serious thing! But we do it too. We desert one another. If a fellow believer gets too needy or we don't think they're responding like they should or if they get in some serious trouble, we can easily just back out of their lives and leave them to hold the bag or face the problem alone. But fortunately, Paul also gave:

b. a good example: Onesiphorus (16-18) - a refresher He did the exact opposite. He came from home to Rome and sought Paul and found him and helped him. Phygelus looked and saw his own need. Onesiphorus saw Paul's need and became a refresher of the saints. That's what we need to be, one who ministers life-giving water to those in the desert.

(1) it involves selflessness toward them, putting their well-being ahead of our own. He wasn't ashamed or afraid of Paul's chains. He didn't consider what it meant to him, but thought of Paul.

(2) it involves seeking them Often times they can't or won't come to us. We have to go to them and seek them out. If there's one thing I've learned in many years of ministry, it is that the people who need you the most are most likely not to tell you, because they're thinking about you. You have to be aware of the needs of your brothers and sisters and seek them out. And:

(3) it involves serving them Helping, serving, stooping down, being willing to do unpleasant and maybe menial things, that's our calling. Being from the quarry means faithfulness to the other stones. If we desert one another, our heritage is in trouble!

Now we move into the second chapter and a second major emphasis of Paul's letter. If we're going to maintain God's perspective in the world, once we know who we are, we must then choose to set our priorities carefully.

Setting Our Priorities Carefully - Ch. 2

1. the importance of discipling	1-2
2. the importance of purpose	3-7
3. the importance of evangelism	8-14a
4. the importance of the Word	14b-18
5. the importance of purity	19-22
6. the deathtrap of conflict	23-26

Life is full of choices. There are so many things to occupy our hours and our days as we pass through it. And it is so easy to become occupied with whatever is in front of you. One of the most important concepts for the believer is that of purposefully choosing what you will and won't become involved in, that is, setting priorities, knowing what's important and deserving of your effort and attention and what's not. As I'm sure you know, it is not easy to make God's things priorities in your life and that's why right in verse 1, before he enumerates them, he gives:

AN UNDERLYING PREMISE: You must choose to live out of His strength (1) To choose these priorities and live this way will take strength. And the strength to do it does not lie inherently in you. It's really easy to tell people, "You need to make this thing a priority in your life!" I've been doing it for years with Bible reading, for example. But I still find it a struggle to choose that priority myself many times, don't you? We need power and that power is found in Christ. Choosing priorities is not simply a matter of making another do and don't list. It's not anywhere near that simple. It means asking the Lord to show you what your priorities actually are and then to empower you to change them, so that the things that are important to Him become important to you! This chapter, of course, is not an exhaustive list of all our priorities. It doesn't mention worship or family, for example. Rather these are key priorities that will help us keep God's perspective in the midst of a perverted world and the first one Paul mentions is:

I. The importance of discipling (2) This relates exactly to what we just talked about as a responsibility. We have to carefully guard and protect the body of truth that's been deposited with us. Now Paul goes on share the importance of depositing that truth in turn with others. And Paul uses himself as:

1. the example of discipling: Paul Paul spent a great deal of time discipling Timothy. Timothy was already a known believer when he met Paul, but over the years of their travel and association together, Paul taught Timothy over and again the key truths of sound doctrine. He did it often in the context of other people. It was not just that they sat down one on one, but Paul took Timothy with him everywhere and he heard Paul, plus they had many, many times where they walked roads together and talked and prayed together and served together and took turns teaching. In short what Paul did was to pour himself, both his knowledge and his character, into Timothy. And that's what we must be doing. We must be pouring ourselves into others, whether they are our own age or are our children. This has to be a priority and here's why:

2. the nature of discipling: a trust We've been entrusted with the faith by the generation who preceded us. They deposited the care of it with us and gradually left the scene through death. We are carefully guarding and preserving and using it today. But if we fail to deposit it with others, what will happen to it 20 or 40 or 60 years from now. Will our children be here studying together or will there be no one? That all depends on how seriously we take this concept. Now notice in verse 2:

3. the subjects of discipling Everyone needs the Gospel. Everyone needs to be taught. But not everyone is going to be a person who will participate in the process which God is about. It is easy to find lots of people to invest your life and time in. They abound. You can give every waking hour to ministering to needy people. But Paul notes the importance of choosing out from among them:

a. persons who are faithful, trustworthy, dependable. Persons who realize the importance of the Gospel in their lives and the importance of sharing with others. Persons who are sold out in their hearts to whatever God wants in their lives, who want His will at any cost. The Timothy types, that's who we need to be investing ourselves in in a particular way. And they need to be:

b. persons who are capable of discipling others Everyone is qualified; the thought here is more of ability. There are many who will get disciplined, but won't be capable by their gifts or their personality to pass it along to others. And if the process is to continue, that's necessary.

Over the years I've had the privilege of discipling or mentoring two younger men in the process of ministry. Through the years we've talked through a plethora of subjects. I've set an example and given advice. I've included them in many things and given them opportunities and spent time praying with them. And today I can step back and the church is safely in their hands for years to come. Listen, this process of discipling, of investing ourselves in others, is so important. We must make it a priority!

We're talking in the second chapter about setting our priorities. To keep God's perspective, we must always remember who we are and then set our priorities in living accordingly. We talked last time about the importance of discipling others so that the faith is passed along and continues from generation to generation. Now let's talk about:

I. The importance of purpose (3-7), that is, of knowing what it is and choosing to focus on it. That's a little bit of a hard concept to explain, so Paul gives us:

1. some examples for our consideration Paul is great at analogies, at comparing the Christian or the Christian life to common ordinary things that were familiar to his readers. Here he uses three of them. First, he encourages us to have:

a. the single-minded stamina of the soldier (3-4) We are soldiers of Jesus Christ. Now, think about what a soldier is like:

(1) he is not stopped by hardship He often has to march long miles. He may be hot or cold or not have enough food, but that doesn't stop him from carrying out his mission or assignment. His main goal is not to take care of himself; it is to get the job done. And further:

(2) he is not sidetracked by "civilian" affairs The word entangled means "to braid the hair". And what he doesn't get tangled in is in the Greek the pragmateia of this life, the practical day to day business of living life in this world. That's what happens to most people. Their entire life is tied up completely with making money and possessions and home and family all that it takes to make those things happen. A Roman soldier had to put aside all those things and follow his commander on their mission. You see:

(3) he has one goal: to carry out the will of the commander, of the one who recruited him to be a soldier. He knows that he has a purpose to carry out orders and by carrying out his orders, he advances the cause to victory. He can't allow himself to get stopped or sidetracked.

Now this is not to say that a Christian should not deal with any pragmatic affairs, that he should hole up on a mountain someplace or forsake his family and become an itinerant missionary like Paul. Soldiers have to deal with practical affairs too. But it is that single-mindedness of purpose that Paul is pointing out to us. Or consider:

b. the disciplined zeal of an athlete (5) The games, of course, were the Olympic games, the great contests. And what was true then is also true now. The athlete:

(1) he strives toward one goal: the prize He devotes all his efforts toward that goal. He trains, he exercises, he practices. And when the contest is on, he devotes every ounce of his strength to one thing, that gold medal, that victor's wreath. But in order to get it:

(2) he disciplines himself to obey the rules of the contest He can't cheat. He controls that desire and competes according to the rules laid down for him.

What's Paul saying? Like the athlete, we should have that same single-minded purpose and zeal that puts everything into one direction but we should have it with discipline and control, so that we do it according to God's directions. Again, the athlete sees there is a primary purpose and focuses and concentrates on that and devotes himself to that. And then Paul mentions:

c. the satisfaction of a hard-working farmer (6) I had a friend who grew up on a farm and became a farmer. I've spent a lot of time on and close to a farm. And let me tell you there is no one who works longer and harder than a farmer!

(1) he labors long and hard toward one goal: a crop He gets up early and spends all day in the hot sun planting and weeding and watering and tending the plants. For him it is not the intensity of facing a battle or an athletic competition. It is the long hard work of the growing season, all leading to the goal of harvest, of bringing in a crop. He focuses his life on producing a crop but:

(2) he is the first to enjoy the results The first to taste the grapes, to eat the grain, to enjoy the corn. His diligence is rewarded with a crop and he is satisfied.

This is not the first time Paul has used the analogy that we are God's farmers, His husbandmen, His sowers and reapers. Even Jesus said that God had planted a crop in the world and there would be a time of harvest and encouraged His disciples to become workers in God's great harvest. Again, it's the focus, the singlemindedness, the knowing what you're about and being willing to make all other things fall in line with that, that Paul is pointing out here and then he pauses to give:

2. a challenge to make personal application (7) Ponder it. Look at your own life. Ask yourself, "Am I a focused person and do I see the other parts of my life fitting into that overall purpose?" Take, for example, work. I have to work to support my family and myself. But is my work primary in itself. Or do I see myself as an agent of the kingdom of God stationed in that company to shine His light on others and minister to them. Do I see my possessions as God's things entrusted to me to serve His purpose? Do I see my spouse as given for me to nurture and encourage spiritually and my children as a special trust to bring the light of God into their lives through my own and to pass the faith along? When you know what you're here for, all of life takes on that focus and becomes directed toward a goal. So, that's the importance of focus and single-mindedness itself. Now that moves naturally to talk about:

II. The importance of evangelism (8-14a) The only commission Jesus gave five times is the great commission. He emphasized time and again:

1. the priority of sharing the Gospel we've been entrusted with and Paul did the same (8-10). The Gospel, the Good news about Jesus Christ, has to be taken to the people in our generation, so that (and here Paul's talking like a reformed theologian) the elect can be saved. That is the focus; that is the goal, the salvation of the world. God sent His Son into the world that the world through Him might be saved. And Jesus sent His church into the world that the world through them might be saved! That is ultimately why we're here on this earth, to share the Gospel with every creature. Now that Gospel has as:

a. its author: a Savior who suffered but is risen (8), who was both human and divine, who, as a descendant of David, knew what it was like to suffer, to be a warring soldier, to be a struggling athlete, to be a hard-working planter of seed, but as the Son of God knew what it was to take up His life again victoriously.

b. its priority: well worth all the suffering it may bring (9) Paul said, "For preaching this Good News, I'm here in prison counted as a common criminal and chained up! But it's worth it. It's part of the hardship I endure, part of my training regimen, part of my long hard crop-tending." It's important enough to be well worth it, because of:

c. its effect: eternal salvation for all who believe (10) It brings those elect ones who believe eternal life and glory! It saves them eternally. It changes their forever. I focus on this goal and endure all this for their sake, so they may know Christ!

However, everything in life tries to sidetrack us from the importance of that, to take away our focus and time and attention from that one fact that without evangelism, the sharing of the good news of Jesus, where I live and where I work and where I play, the world is lost! If you want God's perspective in your life, this is it. "The world is lost. My Son died that they might have life. Your assignment, should you decide to accept it, is to tell them. That is my focus and your goal!" It will cost you hard work and opposition and suffering sometimes, but here is:

2. the guarantee of God's Word (11-14a) The Greek simply says, the Word is Faithful. The Word of God contains our guarantee, something you can count on. Four things, actually:

a. those who have died with Him can count on living with Him Those who have been identified and united with him in His death will be united with Him in life forever. It's guaranteed.

b. those who endure hardship now can count on reigning with Him This is not saying, "if you endure, you get to reign". This is encouragement for those who ARE enduring hardship now, those who belong to Him. Count on reigning with Him forever!

c. those who deny Him now can count on Him denying them This is talking about apostates, not about failing Christians. Those who reject Him here, who fall away and deny him or who reject His message, He will deny once and for all when they stand before Him. This is like the "Depart from Me; I never knew you!" passage that Jesus spoke. Count on it. They have no other way in but by Him!

d. those who fail to trust Him can count on His continued faithfulness This is for us, for Christians. Even if we fail to trust Him; even if we fail to listen and obey and get all fouled up and out of focus, He will not fail us because He does not have the power to deny His own nature! He will always remain faithful to us. We don't have to perform for Him to be faithful to us; He will be faithful anyway. But if we lose our focus and miss our purpose in the world, we'll miss what we're here for.

Keeping God's Perspective In A Perverted World

A Study Of 2 Timothy

Setting Our Priorities Carefully - Ch. 2 (Part 3)

Today we'll finish the second chapter on the necessity of setting our priorities. We've already seen three of the most important priorities; now let's look at three more:

I. The importance of the Word (14b-18) If there is any one thing that will help us set our priorities and keep God's perspective, it is His Word. In fact, the more His Word is central in our lives, the more we'll think like Him. Unfortunately, instead of immersing ourselves in it and applying it personally and letting it mold and shape our lives, we all too often get onto:

1. the perilous sidetrack of insignificant quarreling (14b) This is stern. It's a warning before God to not to get in useless, worthless word battles. And isn't that what we do? Christians argue their points and interpretations with each other and, far from convincing each other, end up putting each other down while the world watches and is turned off. Or we try to argue with unsaved people about what's really true. It not only has no value, but it is literally in Greek a ca-tastrophe for those who listen to it and are turned away! We must never stoop to this, but instead recognize:

2. the tremendous importance of correct teaching (15) We must make every effort, strive with all our might, to be someone who can stand before God with nothing to be ashamed of in this matter, someone who correctly handles the Word of Truth. The Greek says who "cuts straight" like Paul would cut a straight seam in his tent cloth or a farmer would plow a straight furrow. He's talking about straight teaching, holding and teaching sound doctrine, presenting genuine truth and making every effort to do that! It is so easy to become lax and uncaring in how we handle and treat the Word of God. And when we lose our zeal to see truth as it really is in Scripture and let it mold our lives, and start seeing it as something we use in the process of doing what we're doing, we're in grave danger and the door is open to many things. And so, Paul points to:

3. the insidious growth of heresy (16-17) We are to avoid the empty use of words without meaning because it leads to ever-increasing ungodliness. It is a path away from God. It spreads and increases and changes form like a chameleon. Paul's example is a pair, Hymenaeus and Philetus. Hymenaeus was already mentioned in 1 Tim 1:19-20, holding on to faith and a good conscience. Some have rejected these and so have shipwrecked their faith. Among them are Hymenaeus and Alexander, whom I have handed over to Satan to be taught not to blaspheme. He was evidently a known heretic who had started out as part of the church, but didn't shoot straight for the mark, didn't strive to discover the truth of the word and subject himself to it and so had ended up teaching the blasphemous heresy that the resurrection had already taken place (probably at the time of conversion) and that there is no bodily resurrection for us in the future. This teaching did spread and was evidently common in Corinth where Paul wrote against it extensively in 1 Cor. 15. Their teaching ended up being Satanic and blasphemous toward the resurrection of Christ and Paul had evidently exercised church discipline and removed them from the body.

It happens so commonly today. A couple of messages ago I mentioned Faith Tabernacle in Philadelphia which teaches that all medical help is sin and the death and destruction and ruin their teaching is bringing to people's lives. How many people's faith has been destroyed totally because they watched a loved one die and God didn't heal them? The charismatic movement has led into all sorts of excesses and false teachings in this same way. As long as you hold the Word of God above yourself and your experiences and subject yourself to it, you'll stay on the straight path. But the minute you put it beneath you as a tool to be used in the process of your experience, your path will start to veer off and it can go awfully far afield. That's why making every effort to subject your life to the light of the Word of Truth is such a vitally important priority!

II. The importance of purity (19-22) With all this stuff going on and trying to figure out who really is and who really isn't a genuine believer, one might very well begin to wonder about the Church as a whole and where its clear boundaries lie. Are guys like Hymenaeus in or out? How about Faith Tabernacle people? In spite of all that, Paul reassures us in verse 19, God's foundation stands sure and unmoved. What is that foundation? 1 Tim. 3:15. It is the church, the pillar and foundation of the truth! The true church is like a solid rock foundation that never moves off its base of truth and on it God has placed a two-fold seal or inscription: 1) The Lord knows those who are His! That's His business. He knows the hearts and who trusts in Him and who doesn't. We can't know that except in our own heart for ourself. This is a reference to what Moses said to rebellious Korah and his followers who insisted that they were the Lord's people in Num. 16:5, Then he said to Korah and all his followers: "In the morning the LORD will show who belongs to him and who is holy, and he will have that person come near him. The man he chooses he will cause to come near him. It's not what we choose to say about ourselves; He knows who belongs to Him and will show it and, of course, Korah got swallowed up! Jesus talked the same way, saying that many who would say to Him "Lord, Lord" will not enter His kingdom because He never knew them! God's Church is unshaken. He knows where the boundaries are, even when we can't see them clearly. However, there's a second part to God's inscription: 2) Everyone who names the name of Christ must depart from wickedness Just as God said to Moses about Korah in Num. 16:21, "Separate yourselves from this assembly so I can put an end to them at once.", we must depart or separate ourselves from wickedness and those who practice it.

1. it is a foundational command of God (19) That's the sign we ought to be looking for and concerned about. God knows who belongs to Him, but those who really belong to Him will flee wickedness and the people that practice it, even if they name the name of Jesus! Moral purity is foundational to who we are and to what God has commanded us and so:

2. it is vital to our usefulness to God (20-21) Now Paul uses another metaphor. In a big house (the visible Church) there are two kinds of vessels. Some are made of gold and silver for noble purposes, to display, to decorate, to drink out of. These are the people who are genuine, who belong to Christ and are being used for His purposes. Others are made of wood and clay for ignoble purposes, like your dustpan and wash bucket! These are the people who do not really know Him and are contaminated vessels. And Paul says if you steer clear of the contaminated vessels and their contamination, you'll stay holy and pure and be useful to God; you'll be prepared so He can use you for any good purpose that He wants. Purity is vital to usefulness. If we're in this world to serve God's purpose and to be used of Him, we must be pure, holy in our hearts and our thoughts and our behavior. And so, Paul encourages us that:

3. it must be practiced with intensity (22) He uses 2 very strong words to stress our responsibility:

Keeping God's Perspective In A Perverted World

A Study Of 2 Timothy

Seeing Our World Clearly 3:1-4:5

It is of utmost importance that we see the world around us from God's perspective because it is so confusing. How we look at the world is called our worldview. And there are so many confusing worldviews out there which are being fed to us all the time. In our culture, we particularly get bombarded with humanistic worldviews which emphasize man's innate goodness and ability to improve the world and to fix its wrongs. We get awed with technological and ideological progress which has occurred in the last few centuries. And because very few of us have much (if any) real knowledge of history or any sense of what things are like anywhere else except for right here, it is easy for us to fall prey to false thinking. That's why Paul declares to us:

I. The nature of the age in which we live - 3:1-9 And notice that the first thing he emphasizes is:

1. the importance of understanding it (1a) "Mark this! Write it down! Don't forget it! Stick to the truth of it no matter what appearances may seem!" Literally, "Get to know this!" Why? If you don't, you can easily get caught up in all those movements trying to "make the world a better place". And the price of it will ultimately be giving up strict loyalty to Christ. Or, if you happen to live in an environment of suffering, you may buy into despair and hopelessness and be convinced to throw away your faith. God has already described for us in His Word the very nature of the age in which we live and we must understand thoroughly:

2. the principles which govern it (1b) First note:

a. the time he's describing: the church age This phrase the last days is not specifically a reference to the time immediately preceding the coming of Christ. Paul and Peter and John did not have 2000 years to look back over like you and I do. They did not see that "there will be 2000 years and then things will get really unbearable and then Christ will come." They were doing what we are to do, expecting and looking for Christ's return. Any time between the cross and Christ's return is the last days! John wrote, Dear children, this is the last hour; and as you have heard that the antichrist is coming, even now many antichrists have come. This is how we know it is the last hour. - 1 John 2:18. Was he wrong? No, the term hour can be rendered time or season. He was simply saying, "the days in which we're living are the last days. Jesus is coming to terminate this age, but until He does, we are in the last days." So what Paul is describing is the character of the world during the entire church age, not simply what it will be like for a short period at some time in the future before Christ comes. Now he plainly describes:

b. the character of the age: difficult to bear The word terrible would be better translated as grievous or hard to endure, difficult to bear. Jesus never promised his disciples that the world would be a wonderful place for them, that they would have happiness and prosperity and peace. Instead, the New Testament shouts that this age will be hard for us to live in! We'll experience suffering and difficulty and hatred and persecution. In this world you shall have tribulation! But we are not to live in fear; rather we are to realize that He has overcome the world and live in the midst of it with confidence in His strength and power to help us endure! And the Scripture also makes clear:

c. the progression of the age: bad to worse (13) That's mankind's natural progression. He doesn't get better. He gets worse. All of the things we see in the world around us were around in Paul's world. None have been eradicated. Man has had some ups and downs in between, some higher points, but these things will not go away or be conquered. They will, in fact, get worse with time and with the increase in the population of the world, with the number of people who practice them. And the age will culminate in a period so bad, Jesus said, that there will never have been anything like it in all of human history, an hour of tribulation which will come upon the whole world.

3. the behaviors which will characterize its people (2-4) This is a list of 18 things which will be found in and characterize the human race during this age. They were all there in Paul's Roman empire. They're all here today. Their presence should not shock or surprise us. Rather we must be careful not to buy in to any of them. This is not to suggest that all persons will display all of these behaviors. Rather, together they are the character of the age. Let's examine them one at a time:

- self-centeredness – literally, lovers of themselves, people who love themselves more than they love others or family. Aren't we seeing and hearing that today? To thine own self be true has come to mean choosing yourself over and above every other factor in your life. People will run out on their marriages or families or any other relationship in life just to get what they want.
- materialism – literally lovers of money. Oh, the things people won't do to get money and what it can buy. They will kill for it, steal, lie, hurt people, compromise their morals, ruin the environment, abuse employees' health, anything to get money. Material things come to have greater value than human life!
- pretention – The Greek for boastful refers to an imposter, someone who claims to be something he's not, a pretender who blows himself up in the eyes of others.
- self-aggrandizement – I'm not sure if that's the right word or not. The Greek word for the NIV proud means "to show oneself above others", to compare yourself to others and put them down. You can see that in our political advertisements or our advertising quite clearly, can't you?
- evil-speaking – The Greek word is literally, blasphemy, speaking all kinds of evil, having no regard for what they say either against God or other people.
- disrespect of parents – We don't have to look far for this one. People will deny the natural respect and love for parents that ought to be there. And the ultimate, of course, are cases like the several on the news in recent months about children who murdered their own parents!
- without gratefulness – Without a sense of thankfulness for anything, feeling that anything I get, I deserve or that if I got it, I earned it, having no sense of appreciation for anything anybody has done for us, especially God.
- secularization – literally, without holiness. It describes the person who has no sense of God or the Divine in life and lives a purely secular life. Nothing is holy or sacred and we are left to make our way alone in a universe abandoned by God!
- without caring – literally without family affection, without the love that makes the family unit work. Parents who don't love their children or vice versa and husbands who don't love their wives and so on. The natural emotion we have toward those close to us is gone.
- without forgiveness – The KJV says truce-breakers and the Greek word means somebody without a treaty or a covenant, somebody that will never give in or give up or negotiate, somebody who has no place for forgiveness or reconciliation, but will fight to the death and will only negotiate when it is to their advantage and then break all terms when they choose.
- false accusation – This is the word diabolos (the devil), one who accuses others falsely for his own advantage, blames them with things they didn't do for his own advantage.

- without self-control – They are literally powerless to control themselves and this term has a moral connotation. It means they are unable to control the lusts of their own bodies and follow them to the utmost degree. It references all the perverted kinds of orgies and sexual behavior we have today and that Paul saw then!
- brutality – Violence. You wonder how it can be that some of these guys they interview from prison can tell you how they kidnapped somebody and raped them and killed them and dismembered them.
- not loving what is good – That natural sense that we should have, being in the image of God, of loving what is good and right and just and pure is gone. The removal of all moral sense and absolutes.
- betrayal – Treacherous refers literally to a traitor or betrayer, a Judas who would sell his master or even his mother to suit his own purpose. Someone nobody can trust.
- recklessness – or rashness, falling into things headlong without thinking, without regard for consequences, without concern for the welfare of anyone concerned. Living by uncontrolled passion to do things.
- arrogance – conceited is literally, to be puffed up with haughtiness and pride like old Nebuchadnezzar who walked around his palace praising himself.
- hedonism – Lovers of pleasure. If it feels good, that's what matters. The quest to get high and stay that way, to be stimulated. Pleasure seekers abound.

And those, my friends, are the characteristics of the age in which we live. That is the way the human race is going to behave and the closer we get to the return of Christ, the worse they will get. Not a pretty picture, is it? It's going on all around us right now. We may expect to collide with and be hurt by these forces. But on the other hand, these are the forces that are constantly making an impact on us and bombarding us. And it's so easy to be influenced by them, to incorporate them in some degree into our own thinking and actions. And that's what we see. These very things creep into the Church and into the lives of Christians who end up living according to "the ways of this world". We have Christians who are self-centered, who are materialistic, who are proud, who are immoral, who are not trustworthy, and so on. Paul is warning us to watch out! But there is another thing that will characterize this age:

3. the prevalence of false teachers (5-9) Now Paul refers directly to the false teachers that were in Ephesus and were troubling the church there. That same thing will be true of the entire age. False prophets will arise, Jesus warned. The whole New Testament screams this warning:

a. they will espouse a form of religion without God (5) This age has been full of prophets who taught a creed, but no Christ, who taught religious practices and beliefs, who tried to create a system of devotion and religiosity, but all without a genuine relationship to God through Christ. It is a substitute, a form of idolatry. And millions upon millions in this age have fallen into it and are bound up in religions which have no life. Secondly:

b. they will deceive in order to exercise control (6) They will be sweet and pleasing at first, but will try to worm their way into positions of control in families. This verse is not putting women down, by the way, implying that all women are weak-willed. The term is one Greek word, gynaikaria, a diminutive term that means "little women", women that are already less than true women because they've been involved in a sinful lifestyle and are following their sinful passions. False teachers have control as an objective, not freedom and truth. And they will do whatever they need to ingratiate themselves and gain control, split up families, come between husbands and wives, parents and children, all to gain followers and advance their position of control. Then:

c. they will crave knowledge but oppose truth (7-8) Jannes and Jambres were, according to Jewish tradition, two of the Egyptian magicians who opposed Moses and tried to pretend that they could do by the power of their gods what he was doing by the power of Israel's God. They're the ones who said, "Don't listen to him; it's all a magician's trick. Jehovah is not the true God!" They had spent their lives acquiring knowledge, unlocking mysteries, but they could not see the hand of God! They could not see the truth! These false teachers will be like them, searching for knowledge everywhere, but always opposed to the real truth when they find it. But here's the good news:

d. their success will be limited (9) They will not get very far. Just as the day came when the magicians couldn't produce gnats out of the dust and everybody knew and saw it and even they had to say, "This is the finger of God!" so the day will come at the return of Christ when their foolishness will be evident to all!

Where are they? On every hand. Jehovah's Witnesses, Mormons, New Agers, a thousand and one false teachers with a false message everywhere. That's our age! What's Paul's advice? Verse 5, From such turn away. Have nothing to do with them. Avoid them; they want to deceive and control you and they will if you let them. They are opposed to the truth and they are rejected, disapproved, as one day we'll all see when they cry out, "Lord, Lord" and He says, Depart from Me you workers of iniquity!

What an age! What a world we live in! It's an age of darkness, an age where the powers of darkness seem to reign everywhere. If that was all I knew, I'd be tempted to give up. But you can be a light in it like Paul was. God can give you the grace to stand firm against the forces which assail you. However, you have to start by seeing the world the way it really is. It's a rotten place. There's nothing here to set your heart on. Up there, you have a citizenship and an eternal home. You must be careful to fix your eyes up there while you're walking down here!

Keeping God's Perspective In A Perverted World

Seeing Our World Clearly 3:1-4:5 (Part 2)

Last time we looked at the description Paul gives of the character of the age in which we live. It wasn't a pretty picture. To summarize, we live in an age of self-centeredness, an age without accepted standards of good and without respect for people and God, an age of deception where there is plenty of religion without actual knowledge of God. And as it progresses, it will worsen until the world arrives at the conditions of the actual tribulation period, the worst time in the history of the race. Doesn't make you want to shout for joy, does it? Well, if that's the nature of the age we live in, then Paul goes on to share with us:

I. The nature of the treatment we can expect - 3:10-13 When you swim against the current, the water is going to beat on you and try to push you down! Everything that Christ is in the process of producing in us is the exact antithesis of the nature of the age and therefore, of the principles and emotions which drive the people around us. What kind of reaction would you expect? Would you expect people to put you up on a pedestal because you're different and say, "Man, we need more people like you!"? Some will, but most will have the exact opposite reaction. Jesus put it this way, If the world hates you, keep in mind that it hated me first. If you belonged to the world, it would love you as its own. As it is, you do not belong to the world, but I have chosen you out of the world. That is why the world hates you. Remember the words I spoke to you: 'No servant is greater than his master.' If they persecuted me, they will persecute you also. If they obeyed my teaching, they will obey yours also. They will treat you this way because of my name, for they do not know the One who sent me. - John 15:18-21. We need to understand and anticipate that the world system doesn't like people who buck it and the people in it don't like them either. Why? This is the verdict: Light has come into the world, but men loved darkness instead of light because their deeds were evil. Everyone who does evil hates the light, and will not come into the light for fear that his deeds will be exposed. - John 3:19-20. The truth in our lives lights the darkness in theirs and paints them for what they really are and they refuse to accept that. To see yourself for what you are and denounce it and seek forgiveness and change takes an act of God in a human heart. The reaction of the unregenerated heart is to love itself and lash out at anything that challenges that. Of course, we see that pattern in Jesus Himself being crucified. But in our text here there is:

1. the pattern we can see in Paul's life (10-11) He says, "Timothy, you were a first-hand participant, you were with me, you traveled with me, you know me and my character and my life about as well as anybody, you have full-knowledge." He wanted Timothy to think about and analyze what he had seen in his own life. Since we're privileged to have the record of it in Acts, we too can get a glimpse of it. First note:

a. the tremendous character of the life Paul lived (10) There are two areas that Paul refers to:

(1) his teaching declared the character of God Paul taught all the right things. He taught the truth. He was not some false teacher out to lead people astray. His teaching taught the true character of God in an age full of deceit. And at the same time:

(2) his conduct displayed the character of God His way of life matched what he taught. He didn't preach one thing and do another. There was no hidden scandal concerning him. And he lists several components of that:

- he displayed true purpose He was not preaching to get something for himself, to bilk people for gain or to gain some high position. He was a man who sacrificed everything to serve God. His motives were pure and his purpose true.
- he trusted God Time and again he chose to trust God to take care of him and did what God said, no matter how hard it was.
- he forgave others and put up with mistreatment He had patience, literally, long-suffering. He prayed for those who mistreated him and preached to them. He witnessed to the very guards who kept him bound and sought to lead them to Christ.
- he cared about people sacrificially without expecting something from them in return. He was willing to exhaust himself for them. And:

- he did not give up because of trouble He wasn't a quitter who gave up when things got tough. He persevered. He endured. He was the genuine article.

In short, he was a tremendous example of the character of Christ! There was no reason that people should have hated him or turned against him. Yet look at:

b. the terrible way in which Paul was treated (11a) There are two key words here, persecution and suffering. First of all:

(1) he experienced persecution from unbelievers And in particular he mentions the way he was treated on his first missionary journey in the cities of Asia Minor. But the same treatment followed him through all of his life. Let's go to Acts and look at what he's referring to.

- at Antioch they tried to drive him away - Acts 13:50 They ran him out of town; they told him to go away, to take his wares and peddle them elsewhere.

- at Iconium they tried to attack him - Acts 14:5 They had a violent plan which they never carried through because Paul found it out. But they planned to attack him and hurt him and maybe kill him and:

- at Lystra they tried to take his life - Acts 14:19 They were so cold that they stoned him and didn't even bother to take his pulse or bury him. They just drug his body out and threw it on the city's dump in contempt! These are the kinds of reactions we can expect to get from our age too. The church has experienced them. Missionaries are banned in some places, forbidden to enter. In some cultures, Christians are attacked and hurt violently, even killed. On July 6, 1994 the body of a prominent Iranian evangelist Mehdi Dibaj was found in a forest near Tehran. He was tortured before he died. He was the third prominent leader to be martyred in six months. So far in America we have enjoyed protection from many of these kinds of actions, but our brethren around the world know what persecution is. It is a daily part of the life of believers in many, many parts of the world. And we should not be surprised if it is part of ours in whatever measure. Then Paul says:

(2) he experienced suffering of all sorts While persecution points to actions of mistreatment by others, the word suffering, from the Greek root pathos, points to the emotional and physical pain which we experience.

- they rejected his message - Acts 13:45 They argued with it and made fun of it and blasphemed the very truth of God.

- they insulted his person - Acts 14:5 That word mistreat means to verbally abuse. They weren't just against his message; they were against him and rejected it by rejecting him.

- they injured his body - Acts 14:5, 19 Stoning hurts! Time and again his enemies inflicted physical pain on him.

Paul suffered injury in so many ways. He was hurt emotionally and physically. These are the sufferings of Christ and we participate in them! We experience them too! We can expect an adverse reaction from the world toward us and to have to bear the pain of suffering as Paul did. But don't forget to notice:

c. the deliverance Paul experienced (11b) There are two things he found and that we can count on too:

(1) he received immediate grace to endure all his sufferings He was to remain under them, to last through them, to endure by the grace of God. His faith and love for God remained firm and strong. This is what God has promised us in Phil. 4:13, that we will have strength to endure any and every circumstance through Christ who will put the power in us to do it! But look what else he says:

(2) he received eventual deliverance from all his circumstances Every one of them ended. He was rescued time after time after time after time. God will often do that for us too. As Paul wrote this, he had been set free from prison, but he was soon arrested again and this time it didn't work out that way. He wrote Timothy again from prison and eventually died as a martyr. Yet even if he could have written this line later from heaven, it wouldn't have changed. God eventually delivered him out of all circumstances, all persecution, and all suffering into His own presence. Three young men about to be thrown into a furnace once said to an insolent king, "We don't know whether God will deliver us from the fiery furnace, but He is able to do it and no matter what happens, He WILL deliver us out of your hand, O King!" God never promised to make earth a heavenly place for us. He promised to rescue us from earth to be with Him in heaven forever! We will often be delivered and find release here, but we will eventually be completely rescued. Paul's life shows it. And so, we next have:

2. the principle we can discern for our own lives (12-13) Paul spells out three lessons we can learn:

a. all godly-living people will experience persecution Expect it. Count on it. Don't let it take you by surprise. Now, if you don't live like you are, you can avoid it. You have a choice to make. You can give intellectual assent to the truth, but live the way the rest of the culture around you does and miss the persecution, but you won't please God. Or you can submit yourself fully to the Spirit and let Him make you live out the life of Christ. If you do, you will experience persecution and suffering because of it. And the implication seems to be this:

b. it will increase in proportion to our godliness The godlier we are, the more Christ-like, the more spiritually mature, the more full of light we are, the more waves we will make in the culture around us and in general, the more we will suffer for it. This is not a case by case analysis and God has particular plans for each of his children, but it would seem to be a general principle. The brighter the light, the more the darkness hates it. And finally:

c. it will increase in proportion to the level of degeneration around us As the evil men and false teachers in the culture around us degenerate and go from bad to worse, so will their offense at us. The further down the scale our culture gets the more of this we can expect. If the USA continues on its moral downhill slide, we and our children will know a whole lot more of this.

I know it's a gloomy message. This is a gloomy chapter. But I leave you with the words of Jesus, I have told you these things, so that in me you may have peace. In this world you will have trouble. But take heart! I have overcome the world.

Keeping God's Perspective In A Perverted World

Seeing Our World Clearly 3:1-4:5 (Part 3)

Paul has spent the first 13 verses of this chapter helping us to see our world the way God sees. It is not a nice, safe, healthy, wonderful place. It is a nasty, rotten, abusive place where we are not safe. In fact, we must expect persecution if we live godly lives. We must look for the world to hate us and reject us. That's the world we live in. So, the next natural thing to talk about is:

I. The nature of the reaction we must have - 3:14-4:5 Look at verse 14, But as for you..., at 4:1b, I give you this charge, at 4:5, But you... Get the idea? Here's what you and I who live in a horribly evil age that is getting worse are supposed to do in the midst of it. Two things. We must continue to cling to the Scripture (3:14-17) and we must continue to proclaim the Truth (4:1-5). You see, we are His witnesses. To steal a metaphor from Peter, we are like "a light shining in a dark place". Jesus used the same image when He said, You are the light of the world. - Mat. 5:14. The picture is not of a candle at the dinner table, but of a flashlight in the blackest night. Spiritually speaking, the world is absolutely black darkness. The only light it has is us! The only true knowledge of God it has, the only hope it has, the only glimmer of salvation it has, is found in us! And men love the darkness and try to put out the light because their deeds are evil. However, our job is to continue to let the light shine, to proclaim the truth. That's why we're here. God wants to light this dark age with truth through us. And that's what we'll talk about next time. But if we're going to do that, we must make sure that our own light stays lit and doesn't get blown out, that we don't get absorbed by the darkness around us which presses in on us from every side. How are we going to do that? In the midst of all this, how can we stay on track? The answer is a very simple one. God has given us a Book! And:

1. we must continue to cling to the Scripture 3:14-17 Verse 14, Continue in what you have learned and have become convinced of... The word continue means to remain or abide. In John 15 Jesus told us, Abide in Me. "Stay in Me. Continue to draw your life from Me, the Vine. If you abide in Me and continue to draw your life from Me, you will bear much fruit, that is, I will produce much fruit through you." Now Paul says, "Abide in the Book! Continue to cling to the Book. You've learned it. You've placed your trust in it and become convinced of it. Now abide in it. Continue to draw the source of your thinking and your acting from the Book." Joshua knew that secret. He said, Do not let this Book of the Law depart from your mouth; meditate on it day and night, so that you may be careful to do everything written in it. Then you will be prosperous and successful. - Josh. 1:8. David knew it. He said, Your word is a lamp to my feet and a light for my path. - Ps. 119:105. We are not the first people to live in dark times or difficult places. The saints of God have always known that the secret of surviving in dark places is Cling to the Book! When our missionary Dan Lunow was here, he told us that it is vital that a national church gets the Bible in its own language. In the tribes where churches were planted but did not get the Bible so that the people could read it for themselves, the church faltered and dwindled away when left on its own. The Scripture is what keeps the light from going out in dark places. In our case, we have the Scripture, so for us it is a matter of us clinging to it and abiding in it. And what's happening all around us? The church, at least in the West, is slowly letting go, slowly losing its grip, slowly walking away from using the Scripture as the guideline of truth. The light is going out as Christendom is being absorbed by the darkness of the world around it. And it will happen to us personally if we do not guard ourselves. Now let's look at:

a. what keeps us clinging (14-15) The first thing is:

(1) our knowledge of those from whom we learned it Where did Timothy learn it. Look back to 1:5. His mother and grandmother believed before he did. They lived in Lystra where Paul was stoned on his first missionary journey. That's how Paul could say in verse 10, "Timothy you know firsthand the persecutions I endured at Antioch, Iconium and Lystra!" They were saved and Timothy, though he was young, saw the whole thing. When

Paul came back a year or two later, Timothy was already a believer and well-spoken of by the church there. And Paul took him with on his journey. He traveled with Paul and saw firsthand Paul's life and ministry and his endurance of all kinds of hardship and eventually became pastor of the church at Ephesus. He's 20 years into the faith at this point and Paul says, "Remember your mother, your grandmother and me and how we've taught you from the Scriptures". There was a man in my life who led me to Christ. He taught me to love the Book. I saw the faith that dwelt in him. I saw what the book did in his life. I wanted the Book to do that in my life and it has. But when I think back to him or when I look at others around me, men whom I've known for years and have seen what the Book has done in their lives, it keeps me clinging to the Book. The other thing is:

(2) our own past history with it From his childhood, Timothy, growing up with a Jewish mother, had been taught the Scriptures (the Old Testament). It was these Old Testament Scriptures that had prepared him to receive the message that was brought by Paul to his mother and then through her to him. It was the Scripture that made him wise to receive salvation by placing his trust in Christ Jesus, the One to whom the Scripture pointed. God had not only used people to save him, but He had used the Book and through all of his life he had studied the Book and it had always stood him in good stead. It pointed him to Christ. How many times has God used this book in your life? It made me wise to salvation; it pointed me to Christ Jesus! In all these years of serious study, my love and respect for it has only grown and never has it led me astray on any point. I've seen it change countless lives. Why shouldn't I cling to it? It's the only anchor I've got, the only thing that doesn't change, the only place to go that has true and right answers that work!

Now Paul moves from a personal basis to make more of a theological statement and detail for us:

b. why we must cling to it (16-17) First of all:

(1) it is God-breathed The NIV translates literally from the Greek theopneustos, God-breathed. It finds its source and origin in the very mouth of Almighty God, even though it got to us by human pens. Compare 2 Pet. 1:20-21, Above all, you must understand that no prophecy of Scripture came about by the prophet's own interpretation. For prophecy never had its origin in the will of man, but men spoke from God as they were carried along by the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit communicated directly with and through those men and they wrote it down. Thus, the written Scriptures are God-breathed. God spoke them through men and had them reduced to writing so they could not be distorted or changed over time, so they would always stand unshakeable in a rapidly deteriorating world. And if it comes from God, then it is Truth! Pilate asked the $64,000 question, "What is truth?" The whole dark world has taken the same attitude, "Nobody really knows!" But we do! We have a book of Truth to cling to in a world of lies. So, it becomes our tool for casting light on the darkness that floods our lives and seeing it for what it really is. The Book shines the light on the things all around us and shows them for what they are! And:

(2) it produces the maturity God wants in us It is useful, profitable. It produces something. It produces something in us. Verse 17 says it equips us, as we'll see in a moment. There are two phrases that refer to us personally in verse 16:

- it trains us in what is right It shows me what I should do. The Spirit takes the command, Love your neighbor and points out in my mind who my neighbor is and how I should love him! The Word puts before me both examples and commands of right living, things like forgiveness, sacrifice, trustworthiness, faith, honesty, compassion, and so on and the Spirit whispers, "Do this..." So, He trains me step by step, little by little, in the right things to do, the things that are His will through the Word. But also:

- it corrects us in what is wrong As I read the warnings and the negatives of Scripture, the Spirit of God inside me will whisper in my thoughts, "You do that; that's in your life; that ought to stop." And He does that with you and I on a daily basis, even in the much smaller and more subtle areas of our lives, the things we say and our attitudes and our feelings. He uses the Word of God to correct in me what is wrong. For example, when I have an argument and am angry and am tempted to stomp off and just avoid the other person, the Spirit may bring to mind, Be angry but do not sin. Do not let the sun go down on your anger. And I realize that God is saying, "Go talk it out, even if it is painful; don't wait!" And so, He corrects me and trains me and I mature. But it is not only for our personal maturing:

(3) it becomes the basis of our ministry to others The Book is our Tool for ministry. It is not simply to preserve us, but to save and preserve others. Two of the phrases in verse 16 relate to that:

- it is a basis for teaching others God wants to use His Word, not just as I read it for me, but He wants to channel it through me to others. Others may mean my own children, a friend, a spouse, or an unsaved person, anybody. There may be something God wants to communicate to them through me. And if I just give them a human opinion or a gut feeling, I could lead them astray. But that's why God has given me His Word. I have a basis from which to share with them. I can use the Word of God to point them in a godly direction and God can use His Word through me to speak to their heart as I myself mature. He may use it to make them wise unto salvation! And then negatively:

- it is a basis for admonishing others That simply means lovingly helping others who are engaged in wrong behavior or acting in immaturity by revealing it to them. It is not simply pushing our own standard; we have a Book. And the book differentiates between darkness and light. When we shine the light of the Book on others, it helps them to see the darkness in which they've been living and it may help them to come to the light.

(4) it is God's means of equipping us for service in this perverted age (17) The root word of prepare is a Greek word that means to fit a joint. It is actually repeated twice in Greek for emphasis (thoroughly). Did you ever work with wood? One of the most frustrating things for me is fitting joints. When you make a picture frame or cut the trim around a window or door, the two pieces have to be carefully fitted to each other. In those days, before nails and screws, many things such as furniture were fitted together with pegs and pins. Imagine how careful the fit would have to be to make a sturdy piece! The fitting had to be thorough! And in the spiritual application, he's talking about maturity. To be thoroughly prepared or equipped for God's use and service, God has to mold and shape and fit me just the way He wants and He uses the Scriptures to do that.

You see, God has intentionally left us in a hostile world, in a hostile age, to be a light shining in the darkness. We have a service to perform and it is to proclaim the truth in the midst of the darkness. Next time we'll look at that more specifically, but we can't serve God in this world unless we cling to the Book. Previously I used the image of swimming against the current. You can stand against the current in the midst of a raging river that is trying to sweep you away, if you stand on a solid rock. The Book is that Rock!

Keeping God's Perspective In A Perverted World

Seeing Our World Clearly 3:1-4:5 (Part 4)

When we clearly see the nature of the world around us, the age in which we live, Paul tells us that there are two things that are absolutely vital that we must do in reacting to it. First, we must continue to cling to the Book, the written Scriptures, as we talked about last time. There is no other standard, no other thing that will keep us seeing from God's perspective and allow us to continue in truth without being corrupted by the age around us. But there must be more to living in this world than protecting ourselves. God has to use us for a purpose here and so, the second is this:

I. We must continue to proclaim the Truth 4:1-5 The NIV translators left out an important word in verse 1 and they did some rearranging of word order from the Greek, which literally reads Therefore, I charge you...preach the Word. You know the little axiom, don't you? When you see a therefore in Scripture, always look to see what it's there for! It looks back to the previous verses. "Because you have the Scriptures, because you've known them from childhood and are convinced of them, because they are useful and have a purpose and because you are thoroughly equipped through them for every good work, you have a responsibility and I'm officially charging you with it: proclaim the Truth in this world of darkness!" That's what God has you and I here for. We are lights in a dark place and our purpose in the dark is to shine, to declare the truth of God found in the Scriptures in the midst of the darkness around us. Now if you're like me, it's really easy to forget that and just sit back and get wrapped up in the busyness and the good things of the life I happen to lead and let my light slide back under the bushel basket. I need a little kick in the pants to keep me on track, a little motivation, don't you? Well, look at:

1. the continual motivation we have (1) We have two things:

a. the current presence of God Did you ever think, "How would my life change, what would I do, if God was sitting right here watching?" Well, the truth is that He is! Listen to the truth of Heb. 4:13, Nothing in all creation is hidden from God's sight Everything is uncovered and laid bare before the eyes of him to whom we must give account. Isn't that a sobering thought? All that we do, say and think, we do in the very presence of God. Nothing is hidden or covered from Him, not even my most private thought. You can't even die and get away from Him! And what makes it even more serious is that account we must give, So we make it our goal to please him, whether we are at home in the body or away from it. For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that each one may receive what is due him for the things done while in the body, whether good or bad. - 2 Cor. 5:9-10. It is not that I am scared of Him or what He'll do to me some day, but I don't want my life to be wasted; I don't want to get there and find out my life was worthless and meaningless as far as His purposes were concerned. I want to hear, "Well Done!" I want to please my Heavenly Father because He loves me, not disappoint Him, so I keep it in mind that He is with me every moment and knows all I do and it moves me to be about my Father's business. And along with that is the second motivating factor we have:

b. the certain return of Christ Christ is going to appear and He is going to set up His Kingdom and reign. He is coming again. It is sure. It is certain. And 1 Jn. 2:28 says, And now, dear children, continue [abide] in him, so that when he appears we may be confident and unashamed before him at his coming. Christ left us with a job to do, a responsibility to fulfill. The thought of His coming again moves us. He died for us; we don't want to be ashamed of ourselves before Him. We want to have fulfilled His purpose for us when He comes. And so, let's examine:

2. the serious charge we have: to declare what God says (2) Preach means to proclaim, announce or declare. We are to proclaim what? Our own thoughts, our own ideas? No, His word, what He says and that, of course, is the treasure given to us in the Scriptures. Put simply, our purpose in this dark age is simply to announce what God says in His Word to the dark world around us. Now:

a. When should we declare it? With or without opportunity. The two words in season and out of season have the same root kairos which means opportunity, the proper time. They mean literally good opportunity or no opportunity. Sometimes there will be just the right opportunity to share God's Word and bring light and, of course, that's what we pray for all the time. But sometimes there will be no "right time", no opportunity afforded to us and we have to make our own and declare it anyway! And we are to be prepared and ready to do it either way. Now, this verse is not put here to condone obnoxiousness. You all know people who are obnoxious in witnessing and that often drives people away. It is simply to say that there will be times when God sends you a wonderful opportunity to speak for Him, tailor-made for you to testify His truth and then there will be times when God has you in a situation to speak His truth and wants you to declare it whether anybody asks or is inquisitive or wants to know it or not! Let's relate the principle to missions, for instance. Jesus said, Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. In some places people may be inquisitive and want to know and invite you to share God's Word. In many they will resist it and don't want it. But we're to go anyway! The Muslim world, by and large, doesn't want the Truth, but we're still to take it there and proclaim it anyway! And the same is true individually. We are to continually shine the light, whether it is well-received or not, just as Jesus did. Now:

b. In what context should we declare it? Well, note that Paul tells Timothy four things to do with it and they happen to be pretty nearly identical to the four things we read that the Word is useful for back in 3:16. Look at this little chart:

correct (elegcho) = to convict, expose rebuke (epitimao) = to honor by reprimand encourage (parakaleo) = to come alongside for help instruction (didache)

3:16
rebuking (elegchos) = to convict, expose correcting (epanorthosis) = to straighten up training (paideuo) = to child-train teaching (didaskalia)

The things that back there were nouns (ing form) are here verb forms, correct, rebuke... The idea is to proclaim God's Word in the situations you find yourself in, to use it for the purposes for which it was intended. And there are four. The two lists are identical in two points and synonymous in the other two. And to make matters worse, the NIV didn't translate the two sets of identical words with the same English word! Share it to correct, to convict or expose, to reveal things for what they are. Share it to rebuke, to reprimand or to call for the stopping of wrong-doing. It's interesting that the root literally means to put honor upon. Reprimanding is not a punishment; it is the bestowing of an honor. It is an act of caring, an act of straightening up that which is bent over or diverted from the right way. Share it to encourage. The Greek is the root of paraclete, the Holy Spirit, one called alongside you to help you. 3:16 uses the word for child-training in righteousness. Share it to encourage others to do the right thing, to help them in knowing what to do. And share it to instruct or teach, to provide information that is true and so vitally needed in a world where truth is hard to come by. These four processes are vitally important, not just in the lives of the unsaved people around us, but particularly as they are applied to the lives of God's children living in this dark age. Timothy was a pastor, don't forget, and I'm sure Paul's advice was particularly directed toward the Church. Yes, we need to declare what God says to the dark world in which we live, but we also need to continually declare it to one another as well, because the darkness is forever creeping into the church! Believers are being constantly affected and influenced by the world around them in the way they think and act. And it takes faithfully declaring the Word to keep us on track, even the best of us! And then:

c. How should we declare it? In patience (persistently). The Greek macrothumia means longsuffering, persistence in the face of trouble and opposition, putting up with all the consequences it will bring! Often, declaring the Word will not be well-received, either by unbelievers or believers in this age! Just read the lives of the Old Testament prophets or the New Testament apostles. Darkness doesn't like light. If we quit shining, at the first hint of trouble we'll be snuffed out all the time. It should be a continual persistent process in our lives. Now Paul tells us:

3. the reason this is important (3-4) As the age progresses three things will happen more and more and you can see them all around you:

a. people will not tolerate true teaching They won't put up with it. It has happened even inside whole branches of the Christian Church. If they can't silence it, they will drive it away. That's why I'm your pastor today, because of some denominational leaders who wouldn't tolerate a young man who believed in the inerrancy of Scripture and wouldn't shut up about it! Secondly:

b. people will amass teachers to validate their evil desires They will find people who will teach them what their itchy little ears want to hear, to tell them what their evil flesh wants to do is OK. Paul says they will literally gather heaps of them; false teachers will proliferate! Just look around you. They're everywhere. And thirdly:

c. people will reject the truth in favor of myths They will turn their ears away from truth and towards untruths that masquerade in its place. Myths like evolution and reincarnation and false religions and all kinds of things that are just pure lies. In our age people will believe lies much easier than the truth!

And if we're not shining the light of the Word of God in the world, the darkness will become overwhelming and if we're not shining it on one another, the darkness will crowd in upon us and overwhelm us as well. Now as Paul closes this section in verse 5, He tells us that there are four:

4. the characteristics that we must develop (5) The first is:

a. alertness (nepho) which means to abstain from wine, to be fully aware "Keep your head" is a similar slang expression. You know how wine dulls the senses. No guard would ever drink wine because it dulls his perception of the sounds and actions around him and makes him sluggish and lethargic. To be unencumbered by wine or literally sober means to be fully alert and attuned to what's going on. As believers, our antennas need to be always up, alert, knowing that the darkness is always pressing in and carefully watching for ways it is creeping into our lives. The second is:

b. endurance (kakopatheo) which means to persist through evil or hardship We can't be quitters. We can't give up when the going gets tough. We can't hide the light to make things easier and avoid being persecuted or we lose our purpose in the world. Instead, we must continually do:

c. evangelism which means to do the work of a herald (announce the message) A herald is the town crier, a person who has been entrusted with good news of vital importance to others and sent out to announce the news. Our lives need to be characterized by continually sharing the message we've been entrusted with. And finally, they need to exhibit:

d. dedication (plerophoreo) which means to completely carry out your service It's not just that here's a set of things you should do and you have to do them all. The word ministry means service to others. And the Greek word means to completely carry it out or to carry it out to the full or with thoroughness. We're talking about being dedicated to the service of others, devotion to ministry. That's what our lives should be about.

Erasmus was a devout scholar who remained loyal to the Catholic Church while sympathetic to the cause of the Reformers. He gave the church its first published Greek New Testament in 1521 which in turn became the basis for Luther's German translation, Tyndale's English translation and a century later, for the King James Bible. Erasmus is credited as being the source of a classic fictional story that has been retold many times over the years. In the story, Jesus returns to heaven after His time on earth. All the angels gather around Him to learn what happened during His days there and Jesus tells them of the ministry, of His miracles, His teachings, His death on the cross, and finally of His resurrection. And when He finishes his story, Gabriel the Archangel asks Jesus, "But what happens now?" Jesus answers, "I have left behind eleven faithful disciples and a handful of men and women who have faithfully followed me. They will declare My message and express My love. These faithful people will build My church." "But," responds Gabriel, "What if these people fail? What then is Your other plan?" And Jesus answers, "I have no other plan!" The only source of truth and light God has in the world is us. There is no backup system. We cannot and we will not fail to be light in this dark world until Jesus comes. But if we intentionally cooperate with the plan, it works so much better!

A Study Of 2 Timothy Facing Our Future Confidently 4:6-22

Today we come to the fourth and final section of the book of 2 Timothy. Even though we live in a world dominated by evil that is growing worse, if we have and maintain God's perspective, then we can face our future confidently. Paul did and that is the theme of the remaining verses of the fourth chapter. And the first piece of our future that we can face with confidence is death. Now, I want you to understand that Satan has a plan. Compare Heb. 2:14-15. He holds people in slavery to all kinds of things through the fear of death. Through the fear of death, he can get them to worship idols and practice almost any vile thing, even religious prostitution or human sacrifice. He can enslave them to carry out his purposes on earth as long as he can keep them afraid of death. But Jesus put that scheme out of business at the cross! Jesus took the sting out of death, which is sin, by paying its penalty and then rose again victorious to demonstrate for us that death is no longer something to fear. But unfortunately, the scheme still works if we don't look at things from God's perspective. If Satan can keep us afraid of dying, he can keep us enslaved to finding ways to avoid dying and perhaps even cause us to deny or desert the faith. If he can cause us to suffer mistreatment or persecution and fear for our lives, and if we're not seeing God's way, then perhaps we'll serve him by denying the Lord and ruining our testimony. How do you control a man who's not afraid to die? With what can you threaten him? At this writing Paul was in a Roman prison. He was awaiting trial before Nero. There was no justice and certainly no mercy available there. He knew what the verdict was going to be; soon he would be executed. Because he was a Roman citizen it would be quick and merciful, beheading with a sharp sword instead of the slow crucifixion Peter would get there. And in these three golden verses he shows us:

I. Our confidence in facing death - 4:6-8 He declares three very important facts about death which we must grasp if we are to see it from God's perspective. The first is:

1. the inevitability of our death (6) There is a very sobering fact that we all have to face. Unless Jesus comes in our brief lifespan, we are all going to die, no exceptions. It is inevitable. It is the nature of being human. Death has passed to all men and that means you. You and I will die, at one time or another, in one way or another. In fact, the way Paul puts it:

a. it is already in process Paul compared his life to a drink offering. Compare Num. 28:4, 7. With every lamb sacrificed, a container of wine was poured out before the Lord. With the daily lambs it was $\frac{1}{4}$ of a hin, about 4 oz. At Passover and other times, it was $\frac{1}{2}$ of a hin or 8 oz. This was poured out slowly and reverently to represent the life of the animal that had been slain. Paul said in essence, "That's what my whole Christian life has already been about. The day will come when I physically die like the lamb, but right now I'm alive and my life is being poured out unto the Lord like the drink offering." And if you read the record of his life, you'll get the drift of what he means. Look at 2 Cor. 11:23-28. You see, our death is already in process. We are dying while we live and the horrible treatment this world gives us is simply us already being poured out as an offering to the Lord. But as far as our physical death goes:

b. its time is coming Paul knew that his time had come; it was at the door. He had only a short time, perhaps weeks or months, to live. You and I may be less certain of its approach, but think about it. 50 years from now, most of us in this room will be dead. In 75 all but the small children will be. In 100 every last one of us will be. Compared to the eternity which you will experience, the span of your physical life on earth is brief. James said, What is your life? You are a mist that appears for a little while and then vanishes. - James 4:14. That's what earth is like. It is short and brief and the time of your death is sooner than you think. That's why you have to make it count and let God use you while there's time! If you could afford it, it would be a great idea to go out and buy a cemetery plot and a headstone and put your name on it and go out and visit your own grave once in a while. It would keep your mind clear and sober about the importance of the days you have. Death is coming. It is coming soon and it is coming to all of us. That sounds morbid, but it's not at all. You see, death:

c. it is the time of our departure The Greek analysis means to loose the ropes that hold the ship to the dock and set her free to go, to release her! And friend, my ship sails for glory! It means to loose the ropes that hold up the tent so it can be packed up and the traveler can be free to go. Death is my departure, my release. It sets me free! Free from what? Free from the suffering and mistreatment of this present evil age! Free from this body and the sin that indwells it. Free to be in the presence of my blessed Lord Jesus forever and ever. D.L. Moody, the great evangelist, sat up on his deathbed and said, "This is my triumph. This is my coronation day. I have been looking forward to it for a long time!" What's morbid about looking forward to the trip of a lifetime! We need to see death from God's perspective; it's how He sets you free. That's why He invented it, not so much as a punishment, but so that His children wouldn't have to live forever in sin-cursed bodies on this sin-cursed earth separated in their existence from His presence! It's important that we see our death from God's perspective, so let's talk about:

2. the nature of our death: the completion of a race (7) Paul uses three analogies to describe what death is really like for the believer. They are actually all athletic analogies; they come from the games. You see, life is like running in a race. It requires an agonizing effort; it follows an established course and eventually you cross the finish line and it's over. He told the Ephesian elders who were worried about his future in Acts 20:24, However, I consider my life worth nothing to me, if only I may finish the race and complete the task the Lord Jesus has given me-- the task of testifying to the gospel of God's grace. His life was not about himself, about enjoyment or achievement or acquisition. His race was testifying about Jesus Christ and at some point, it would end in death. Death is the crossing of God's finish line for our earth lives. What does that mean?

a. it is the end of our agonizing struggle Literally, Paul says, "I have agonized the good agony". Did you ever run a race or watch someone run one? Watch those long-distance runners in the Olympic races and the way they strain and agonize as they run. It's pain and exertion. But it's a good agony. It's for a good purpose. Our life on this earth is like that agonizing struggle. It's effort; it's agony; it's struggle. But it's good agony; it's effort expended in accomplishing God's purpose in the world. However, death means that the struggle is over! The agony is finished. There is freedom and rest from our labors! Secondly:

b. it is the completion of our established course The Greek word refers to a racecourse, a laid out path that the runners have to follow. Our lives are like that. God has laid out a path for each one of our lives, a course that they will follow. Sometimes that path is long and winding and filled with obstacles and the race becomes a test of endurance, but at any rate there is a finish line! And death is like crossing that line, it is reaching the completion, the capstone of all that my life has been about. I think of Jesus on the cross. He used the same word Paul did, Tetelestai, "It is finished", completed, accomplished. All that God has wanted to do through me on earth is done and over. What a thought! And then:

c. it is the safe passing of the precious baton (the faith) Think of this as a relay race and the job of the runner is not just to run himself, but to carry the precious baton. Without the baton he gets to the end, but loses! However, if he carries it safely and hands it off to the next man after crossing his own finish line, he has done well. Paul is not saying here, "I have kept on believing." He's not talking about his own faithfulness. He's saying, "I have been a good steward. The message of Jesus Christ, the faith was entrusted to me and I carried it safely all the way to the line and passed it on to others. That's our task. Someone hands off the faith, the Gospel, to us in life and we carry it safely and share it with others all the way to the finish line, the moment we die.

So you see, death is just the completion of a particular phase of our existence and so, unlike the rest of the world:

3. we can face our death with confidence (8) Paul didn't look at death and say, "I wonder what's going to happen. I hope it's good. I hope it all turns out all right!" He faced it with absolute and complete confidence and we can too! First of all, we can have:

a. confidence in being with the Lord Paul knew he would be with the Lord. He said that in 2 Cor. 5; to be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord. That's not even an issue. But the point is that there is nothing on the face of this earth that can prevent it. Look at Lk. 12:4-5. What a way to go through this world, absolutely unafraid of dying because we know that after they kill our body there is no more that they can do to us and if they do that, it just sets us free to be with Him! Compare Rom. 8:35-39. Note especially verse 36. Suppose in this world we face death all day long. Suppose like in North Korea they count us as sheep to be slaughtered. Can that separate us from His love? No, in even this we are more than conquerors, superconquerors, completely triumphant victors! We can't lose because He already took care of it at the cross. We will be with Him! But there's more. We can have:

b. confidence in receiving our reward: the crown (wreath) Now, you have to understand the symbolism that's going on here. Paul is sticking with his athletic imagery. The crown is not the crown a king wears (diadem). It is the stephanos, the victory wreath. Athletes in the games didn't compete for money or for a material reward. The winner would be called up onto a platform and given a simple wreath woven of laurel or ivy or some other natural shrub. The athlete did not compete for material gain and that says something we need to know about:

(1) the nature of a crown: a symbol of public recognition To wear the wreath was a symbol of public recognition of the achievement of winning, just as the gold medal of our Olympics today. It was the announcement to everyone that this person had put forth the effort, that he had run the appointed course, that he had not dropped the baton. He had run the race well, in fact, better than the rest. Now, Paul said that spiritually when he got to heaven and the day came, that is, the day of Christ's return when we all get called up to the bema seat, the winner's platform of the game of life, that he had confidence that Jesus would award him with a crown. And not just him, but us too. We're told in several places in Scriptures that we are given crowns. The symbol of the wreath tells us:

(2) the nature of our reward: the public display of what we truly are (righteousness) We don't labor all through this life to get some material reward from God. These crowns are not symbols of gaining either authority or possessions. That's not what heavenly rewards are about. To be given a crown means to announce to all who watch the true nature of the person as a victorious athlete. And Jesus is going to do the same with us. He's going to display us publicly before all, not as the world has seen us through the years, but as we truly are and here specifically Paul says that means He's going to display our true righteousness! Compare Phil. 3:8-9, What is more, I consider everything a loss compared to the surpassing greatness of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord, for whose sake I have lost all things. I consider them rubbish, that I may gain Christ and be found in him, not having a righteousness of my own that comes from the law, but that which is through faith in Christ-- the righteousness that comes from God and is by faith. The words be found point ahead to the bema seat. It means to be found by examination and proving. Christ is going to display to all what the world could never see, that I am righteous and have been all along, because His righteousness was given to me and I am clothed in it. And I will shine like the brightness of the sun forever as a trophy of His grace. And look at:

(3) the nature of the Judge: righteous I am not judged by this world. It doesn't matter what they think of me. I have a righteous Judge who knows my heart and my true identity. What if the world hates me and brands me a criminal for my faith and even kills me; Jesus is the One before whom I will stand and He will crown and display me as I truly am!

And one final note here which I'm so glad Paul included. We have:

c. confidence that it is personal Paul says, "It's not just for me alone. It's for you personally and for a million others like you who love His appearing, who long for that day when you'll stand before Him!" It's for me. It's for you. We can have the same confidence that Paul had.

And once you have it, you're free! No more slavery for you. Satan has lost; he can't manipulate and scare you into anything. All you have to do is believe the truth God has given you.

A Study Of 2 Timothy Facing Our Future Confidently 4:6-22

In this last chapter, Paul is closing on a positive note; we can face our future confidently even though we live in a world given over to evil and perversion. We have absolute confidence in facing death. We're set free from fearing it. We'll be with the Lord and He will display us for what we really are. In the Disney video The Return of Jafar, the evil genie Jafar is threatening his bumbling master to try and get him to do what he wants and his master says, "I thought genies can't kill anyone." To which he replies, "You'd be surprised what you can live through!" implying that there are a whole lot of horrible things that you live through that are worse than death! That's so for us too. Maybe we're confident about facing death; it's facing the distressing things of life, that we're worried about! Well, in this section Paul talks about:

I. Our confidence in facing distress (9-18) Now remember, Paul at this point is an old man in prison awaiting trial in Rome before Nero, expecting to be sentenced to die. But as he closes his letter, he gives us a glimpse of:

1. the numerous difficulties Paul experienced (9-16), the things he was experiencing during this prison ordeal of his. First there was:

a. separation from those he loved (9) Paul loved Timothy. Timothy to him was "my dear son" (1:2). But Timothy was way over in Ephesus. What's he saying? Go back to verse 6, the time of my departure is at hand...do your best to come to me quickly. "I want to see you before I die. I miss you." Xu Yonhai, a Christian doctor in Beijing was sentenced to three years labor after signing a petition commemorating the massacre of pro-democracy activities at Tiananmen Square in 1989. His family was not been allowed to visit or write to him! This old world may separate us from our loved ones and God may allow us to be in that place. We all know it to some degree even now, the ache of separation which Paul felt. Then he also experienced:

b. abandonment by all his friends (10, 16) Crescens and Titus were gone, probably because he'd sent them on errands of ministry far away. But Demas had abandoned him. He had been an associate for years and is mentioned in Col. 4:14 and Philemon 24, written while Paul was in prison before. But things had changed since. The great persecution had begun and all Christians were in danger. Demas couldn't take the risk. He loved this present world and wanted to stay in it. He just couldn't risk martyrdom along with Paul and had fled. But before you're too hard on him, look at verse 16. At Paul's first legal hearing, not one single person went with him or would stand with him. They abandoned him in his greatest hour of need. He didn't hold it against them; he understood why. But it must have hurt! In this perverted world, you will find yourselves that way at times, abandoned by those who you know cared about you, all alone, forsaken and left without support. Then Paul experienced:

c. inability to do what needed done (11-12) Paul was overseeing and caring for the needs of a lot of churches at this point. He was sending out his trusted few to various places where there was need. But the word is, "Bring Mark; I need him!" Why? Paul would have loved to go and minister and teach and exhort and correct personally. But he couldn't go. He was sending others, the few he had. He needed more to do the work for him because he was so limited. He felt the frustration of inability. In this perverted world the need is so great and we are so often limited by so many factors. We watch horrible things happening and we can't stop them. We see tremendous needs before us, but we can't fill them. Whether it's a prison or our health or simply being just one human being that limits our ability to serve and meet the need, it can break our hearts. Then we may experience the:

d. lack of specific needs (13) Winter was coming. Neither clothing nor books were provided for prisoners. Paul was cold. He had no scriptures to read and nothing to study from. It was the love of his heart. So, he asked Timothy to bring what he needed. Sometimes this world may take or keep from us specific things we need. And God may choose to allow it. God does allow some Christians to experience hunger, to experience lack of specific things which cause them tremendous hardship. He allowed Paul to do that sometimes in his life and Paul said he had to learn both how to be abased and how to abound. The world may send times of genuine hardship into your life! And lastly, Paul experienced:

e. opposition by a deliberate enemy (14-15) Alexander had deliberately opposed Paul's message and ministry. He may even have been the one who had him arrested. It must have hurt, but Paul wasn't bitter, just wary. He knew the Lord is just and vengeance belonged to him. He had every confidence that God would take care of justice in his own time. But how it must have hurt him to have a heart full of love, to be trying to save people, and to have people oppose and hurt him in the process. Our friends Ed and Nancy Keene in Kyrgyzstan wrote to say, "We get cheated every day in every way that can be devised. Practically everyone lies and steals what they can. This is one of the most difficult things about living here, how to love these people who will do or say anything to get some advantage from you. It can't be done without the Lord's help!" We live in a world where people hurt you! Even here! Can we face all these things in life that distress us, that tear us up? What if in this perverted world God allows these kinds of things to come upon us as He did Paul? Well, just look at:

2. the special comfort Paul received (17) First of all:

a. the Lord's presence was with him There he was in that moment of truth, his first hearing, separated from everyone and deserted by all, but he was not alone. Jesus was right there with him. That's what He promised all of us in Mt. 28:20, Lo I am with you always... His presence is always with us. He will never leave us or abandon us (Heb. 13:5). His Presence was there for Paul and it is there for us. It can't be otherwise. He has come and indwelt us; His Spirit has taken up residence within us. We are never alone! And he also found that:

b. the Lord's strength was in him Jesus expressed His strength through Paul's weakness in that moment. Oh, Paul had already learned that secret. Compare Phil. 4:13. He literally puts the power in me to face any and every situation. 2 Cor 12 says that when I am weak, the power of Christ rests upon me and is evident through me. That's what he experienced standing there all alone that day. Christ strengthened his inner man to face his accusers, his judges, and to say what he needed to say! And so, he found:

c. the Lord's purpose was accomplished through him He preached to them! That's what he did every time he was on trial. His aim was always to give his testimony and to share Christ. He did it with Felix and with Festus in Acts. Compare Phil. 1:12, 18. He did it all during his first imprisonment and won even the palace guards and some of Caesar's household to Christ. Now an old man and alone, Christ strengthened him to do it again, perhaps even before the Emperor himself. And what he found was that God's purpose was accomplished in his life even in the midst of the suffering! And finally:

d. the Lord's deliverance was granted to him He was delivered from the lion's mouth. Most obviously that means that he was sent back to prison after that first hearing, instead of being instantly sentenced and executed. But it looks back to the language of the prayer of Ps. 22, Rescue me from the mouth of the lions... and to what King Darius said about Daniel's God, He has rescued Daniel from the power of the lions... David's lions were evil people who were against him. So were Daniel's, really. It was not the physical lions that were the real enemy but the people who got him thrown to them. Lions stand for the evil forces which come against us. Even Satan is pictured as a roaring lion looking to devour us. God's power is so great that it rescues us from the lions we face in life. Now, that bears a little more explanation and we get it in the next verse. Look at:

3. the tremendous confidence Paul had (18) It is two-fold and it is not just for Paul. It is a confidence he had personally, but he shares it because it is a confidence that each and every one of us can have in the Lord when it comes to facing distress, persecution and suffering in our lives. It is bi-directional:

a. He will deliver us from every evil work, from everything evil that works against us, that attacks us. From all of it we will be delivered. Is. 54:17 says, No weapon forged against you will prevail and you will refute every tongue that accuses you. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and this is their vindication from Me, declares the Lord. Nothing of evil can ever ultimately touch us. But you say, "Whoa, hold it! What about all the believers who are victims of terrible persecution, the missionaries who are kidnapped and killed, all the pastors who are imprisoned. Paul was sitting in a jail cell at the moment he wrote this; wasn't that a successful work of evil against him?" No! It's like Shadrach and his two friends told King Nebuchadnezzar, Our God is able to deliver us out of the burning fiery furnace but He will deliver us out of your hand, O King! Our God is able and many, many times He does rescue us out of our earthly situation and foil what otherwise would have been our ruin or death. But He doesn't always do that. The next time around, Paul himself was sentenced and beheaded! He died as a martyr! God does not promise to keep us from being touched by every evil thing, but He will deliver us always from the Evil One and his plans and designs will never succeed. Even if we are hurt, even if we suffer, even if we die, the weapons He forges against us can never succeed, because they can't separate us from Christ. That's the second part of the promise:

b. He will deliver us to His heavenly kingdom Even if they kill the body, they usher us straight into His presence. Nothing can separate us from the love of Christ. No earthly distress, no evil power, nothing in all of creation. Listen to Jn. 10:27-30. Your Father is greater than all. Nobody can take you out of His hand. He will deliver you safely to His heavenly kingdom, no matter what is formed against you along the way. It can't really pierce you!

What a confidence! We can face any distress, any trouble, any persecution, any suffering, knowing that any evil intent that is in it toward us can't work because it can't touch our souls and even if it kills us, we will be delivered safely into His heavenly kingdom. Look back to 1:12, I know whom I have believed and I'm persuaded that He is able to guard what I've entrusted to Him until that day! My friend, when you've convinced, when you're persuaded, when you have the absolute confidence that He will keep you and deliver you, you can face anything the world can dish up! Now let's quickly look at:

II. Paul's concluding reminder for us (19-22) On the surface, this is Paul's goodbye and closing salutation. But no piece of Scripture is wasted. It has in us a good concluding reminder for facing trouble:

1. we have the fellowship of the brethren (19-21) He greets the brethren there at Ephesus and mentions the brethren there at Rome even though they had all left him alone at his trial. We are not alone. We have the fellowship of the saints, always to encourage one another. And:

2. we have the presence of Jesus (22a) The word be is supplied; it's not there in the original either time in this verse. You have to supply the verb to be, but you can supply it just as well in the present or the future. The Lord is with your Spirit and the Lord will be with your spirit! That's Jesus. He is with you and will be with you. You have His presence indwelling you always. And:

3. we have the grace of God (22b) Grace, when it's used in this sense, is almost a synonym for power. It's a tangible thing. God's grace is with you and will be with you. That freely given, undeserved power is yours and it is always with you, no matter what you face. You can face it all!

In 1992 a man named Pastor Selchun was convicted of the crime of carrying a Bible in Nigeria. His sentence was to have his hand cut off. In the presence of his family and others they made him kneel and lay his hand on a block. A Hausa warrior swung his sword in one swift motion and it was done. Immediately he lifted the other hand into the air and began to sing, "He is Lord, He is Lord...every knee shall bow..." That's not much different from what Paul faced. And both of them had the same confidence, "You can cut off my hand but you can't kill my soul and the grace of God will carry me through everything I have to face and will bear me safely home. I am persuaded. I am convinced. My God is greater than anything this world can throw at me. I rest confidently in Him."

Titus: Godly Living In A Decadent Society What A Godly Life Must NOT Include (1:5-7)

This is a letter that Paul wrote to Titus, who was a beloved, younger partner of Paul in his missionary ministry. In verse 4 he calls him, my true child in a common faith, which probably means Paul had personally led him to faith in Christ, and from the brief mentions of him that we have in other letters, it's apparent that he sometimes traveled with Paul in his work and was several times sent by him to complete ministry assignments in various places. The end of the book of Acts tells us that Paul was in prison for two years at Rome. Evidently, he was released and continued to travel in ministry for a couple more years before his final arrest and martyrdom. During that period, he and Titus must have gone through the island of Crete establishing little house churches in several of the towns. And that brings us to (5a). Paul himself traveled on, but left Titus behind in Crete to complete work there. Now for a moment, let's talk about:

I. Crete: The Place Where Titus Was Serving Crete is a large island about 160 miles long and 35 miles wide lying south of Greece in the Mediterranean Sea. Crete was the home of the Minoans, an early advanced civilization dating as early as 2500 BC from which we know legends like King Minos and his famous labyrinth and his half-bull, half-man minotaur that lived in the center of it. However, by Paul's time during the Roman Empire:

1. Crete was a decadent society much like our own Look with me at (12-13a) Here Paul is quoting Epimenades, a semi-legendary philosopher-poet from Crete who lived some 500 years earlier and agreeing with his description of what Cretans were like. Now I know your modern mind is thinking, "Isn't that prejudice or racial bias?" No, various cultures develop reputations as a whole. In other countries today, Americans, for example, are seen as individualistic (having a disregard for family and community), as materialistic (always seeking after technology and prosperity rather than spiritual things) and as immoral (because of the profusion of sexually graphic movies and media that we export to the world). That's a cultural reputation; it's what we're known for in the world. Another example: in Paul's day the Corinthians had become so identified with their flagrant sexual immorality in every aspect of their lives that it became a verb in the Greek language; to Corinthianize, was to be openly and flagrantly sexually immoral. Likewise, the Greek language developed two verbs based on the reputation of the people of Crete: kratizein which literally means to act like a Cretan and means to lie, and chrasthaikratismo which means to deceive. The reputation Crete had throughout the Roman world by Paul's time was three-fold. First:

a. its people were known for lying, for being deceptive and dishonest in their dealings. Two weeks ago, one of the Spanish families connected with GBC through their children received a call from the actual number that they call to pay their PECO electric bill. The caller demanded they pay almost $400 that was overdue or their electric would be shut off in 45 minutes. They did it and the caller called back to say, "Oops, the amount was slightly wrong, we'll refund what you paid; just go ahead and pay the correct amount." The call came two more times before they finally caught on that it was a scam and they found themselves out $1600! We are constantly warned about scammers who prey on elderly people; I get repeated calls saying the IRS is out to get me or my credit card has a problem. Many years ago, a shop told me I needed a new transmission in my car and charged me $400, which at that time was more money than I had, only to find out later they were doing it to many people. Politicians lie outright to get what they want. It used to be that honesty and integrity were core values to people, but in our society today lying and deception are commonplace, just like in Crete. Secondly, Paul says:

b. its people were known for cruelty and brutality, which is what evil beasts points to; they were like the legendary minotaur who ate people. One scholar points out interestingly that Crete had no wild beasts, no dangerous predatory animals; rather it's people took their place! They were cruel and brutal to one another. When I was growing up, children roamed freely all over town, went to the playground all day and came home for supper all summer long and the parents never gave a second thought to their well-being. Any adult they met could be trusted to help them if they fell off their bike or got lost. We never heard of a child being kidnapped. What do we teach our children today? "Don't talk to strangers!" We have amber alerts on our phones because innocent children are routinely kidnapped for evil purposes and we wouldn't dream of letting them out of our sight. Girls are being lured and trapped and literally sold by sex trafficking rings, not just elsewhere but right here where we live. Some public figure proposed recently that a mother should have the right to kill her baby even after it is born! We're devaluing human life, becoming heartless and uncaring just like in Crete. And thirdly Paul says:

c. its people were known for laziness and gluttony Unwillingness to work hard, having a sense of entitlement that everything should just be handed to us, always wanting more and more pleasure and seeking it any way we can find it. This is what's growing among us, just like it was in Crete.

Crete was a decadent society, a society that had gone morally downhill and nearly hit bottom. And we too live in a rapidly decaying society, one that, apart from a work of God, is going to end up in the same place. Now look at verse (5). After establishing a number of churches together:

2. Paul left Titus to serve on the island of Crete for two reasons. First of all, to put what remained into order, by which he means:

a. to instruct new believers how to live godly lives in that society These new believers had grown up with the values of their society. They had few examples of right living and Paul wasn't among them long enough to finish instructing them in all the things they needed to know. So, he left Titus there in Crete to go from group to group teaching these new believers, spelling out the way that God wants us to live now that we are in Christ, which is completely opposite of what they saw around them every day. Most of this letter contains instructions to help Titus do just that and it can help us do the same thing; it shows us how to live godly lives in the midst of a morally decaying society. Secondly, Paul left Titus there:

b. to appoint godly leaders to care for the new believers He couldn't stay there and he knew Titus himself couldn't stay very long. Each new little flock of believers needed a shepherd, a good shepherd to care for it spiritually, to protect and lead the believers on their faith journey together. So, Titus was to seek out a trustworthy person or two within each group to assume that special role. And think about it, none of these people had been believers very long. None had any education and training in Christian things. There were no Bible schools or seminaries! Yet among the new converts were those with the right heart and the right character and a deep love for Jesus whom Titus would have to put in charge. The same thing happens today. I know of two house church movements in Kyrgyzstan. One in the lake region has 46 house groups and they do the same thing; they give what little training they can to people who have the right heart to take care of each little group from its earliest days and it works and the groups multiply. I see it work in India. You don't need Rev. in front of your name or BA MA PHD behind it to care for a flock of believers; you don't need 5 or 10 years of experience; you need the kind of heart and character that God can use!

So, how is Titus to recognize this kind of person? Well, Paul gives him a list of characteristics in verses 6-9 to look for and as he begins, he spells out:

II. The Most Important Quality That A Leader Must Have, repeating it twice in (6a, 7a):

1. a leader must be above reproach. Many translations say blameless. It means a person who cannot justly be accused of sinning by others. Not that they are perfectly sinless, but nobody can look at their life, point their finger and say, "There, that thing you are doing is sinful before God!" Jesus Himself said to His enemies, Which of you can truthfully accuse me of sin? - Jn. 8:46 and none of them could point out even one thing! Daniel's enemies knew they couldn't find one thing he did wrong to accuse him of, except that he prayed! Samuel challenged the stubborn people of Israel who asked him to appoint a king over them, Now testify against me in the presence of the LORD and before his anointed one. Whose ox or donkey have I stolen? Have I ever cheated any of you? Have I ever oppressed you? Have I ever taken a bribe and perverted justice? Tell me and I will make right whatever I have done wrong. "No," they replied, "you have never cheated or oppressed us, and you have never taken even a single bribe." - 1 Sam. 12:3-5. That's what above reproach means and that's what a leader of God's flock must be. Why? Because, as verse 7 said:

2. a leader is God's steward, His oikonomos, His manager assigned to care for His household. Suppose I'm in the army and I'm going off to war and I come to you and say, "I want you to be my steward; I want you to care for my wife and children in my place. I want you to be sure they are always supplied with everything they need out of my resources. I want you to be sure that they are always protected from any harm and danger that others might work against them. I want you to always guide them to live the way you know I want them to live until I get back!" That's what a leader is in the church, a steward given responsibility to care for God's precious family, His own sons and daughters, until He returns! Now, note that Paul uses two terms to describe these leaders. First, he says that:

a. they are elders (5b) An elder is someone who is usually older, wiser, more experienced, and, spiritually speaking, it denotes someone who is more mature in the faith, who is farther along the journey, who has walked with the Lord longer. That's all a leader needs to be. It's the generic term for any community leader in that day and is used of any leader in the church. Then Paul says:

b. they are overseers (7a) The word is episkopoi, often translated bishops in English, but not like we use it today to denote some high church office. It simply means one who watches over, that is, one who supervises others spiritually, who is responsible for their spiritual care, protection, feeding, guidance and growth. A leader must see his or her responsibility as a steward and take it seriously.

Paul used these two terms interchangeably. Elders is the more general term for all kinds of leaders, while overseers or bishops specifically points to those who are placed in stewardship over the body of believers. Now let me point out that:

3. the qualities God expects in leaders He wants to grow in ALL of us As Paul writes these things, we can't say, "Well, that's how a leader has to be, but God doesn't expect ME to be like that!" These are marks of maturity, marks of a godly life, the kind of life God wants ALL His children to have, so we must be sure to take them personally and apply them to ourselves and not merely use them to choose leaders. Now in verses 6-7 we have:

III. The Marks Of A Godly Life Expressed Negatively, the things that are common in the society around us that we must NOT allow in our lives. First of all:

1. we must not allow our family to deteriorate (6) The deterioration of the family is one of the most obvious signs of decay in our society. Families are falling apart everywhere and dysfunction is rampant in them. And preventing it begins with this:

a. we must be completely devoted to our spouse That phrase husband of one wife has been interpreted in various ways. It could simply mean you can't have more than one wife and that would be relevant today in Muslim societies and in some African tribes that practice polygamy. It could mean you can't have been married more than once, but the Bible urges young widows to remarry and it says that if our spouse dies or abandons us, we're free to remarry. Still others say it means he should be a one-woman kind of man. Rather than debate the nuances, I think I'm safe in saying that, if we're married, we must be completely devoted to our spouse! That's what God wants. He makes it clear in Eph. 5:25, Husbands, love your wives, as Christ loved the church and gave himself up for her. Love your spouse with a sacrificial love. Be willing to die for her or him as Christ did for you. Give up selfish and demanding ways and be absolutely faithful, devoted to the person who gave themselves to you and whom God gave to you. Then Paul goes on to mention that:

b. we must not neglect training up our children You know Prov. 22:6 which says, Train up a child in the way he should go; even when he is old, he will not depart from it. From little on up we have to be investing ourselves deeply in our children and Paul mentions three specific ways. It means:

(1) leading them to embrace our faith in Christ, loving them so deeply and living a godly life before them in such a way that as they grow up, they themselves embrace our faith and become believers. It means:

(2) not allowing them to act in an ungodly fashion, but disciplining them in love so that they learn to act in a righteous fashion and not give in to the sinful opportunities that surround them. And it means:

(3) not allowing them to rebel against us or God We all know children who get their own way in everything and parents who let them do whatever they want. So they do the same when they grow up. From little on up we must be training them that we all have to submit to those who have authority over us and above all, to God.

And why is this important? Paul explains in 1 Tim. 3:4-5, He must manage his own household well, with all dignity keeping his children submissive, for if someone does not know how to manage his own household, how will he care for God's church? If a person has the ability to be a steward or manager of God's family, he will show it first in managing his own family. That being said, I know there are those of you here this morning that have prodigal sons and daughters who are not following the Lord and I am confident that you have been good, loving parents who devoted yourselves to your children and disciplined them in godly ways and set great examples of faith before them and in spite of it, they have gone their own ways. I have great compassion for you! That happens even to the most godly among us! We are not the only factors in our children's lives and sometimes Satan is able to use powerful influences from the decadent society around us to overrule our influence. But don't give up hope. Keep praying and trusting God will use what you have poured into them to eventually touch their hearts! Now, quickly, we have five more negatives in verse (7):

2. we must not be arrogant In Greek that word is self-willed or self-pleasing. God wants neither leaders nor us to self-centered, always thinking about ourselves and doing what's best for us. To the Philippians Paul wrote, Don't be selfish; don't try to impress others. Be humble, thinking of others as better than yourselves. Don't look out only for your own interests, but take an interest in others, too. - 2:3-4. Next:

3. we must not be quick tempered God wants neither leaders nor us to be prone to passionate anger, to flaring up and lashing out at people. We all know people like this, even believers, and it is not just "the way I am"; it is a sin, a habit that God wants to deal with and remove from our lives. Next:

4. we must not be substance abusers, not addicted to anything, neither alcohol nor narcotics nor prescription drugs nor anything else you can think of that takes control of your life. Jesus alone deserves that control. Next:

5. we must not be violent The Greek is no striker, that is, we must not be prone to do physical harm to others, by hitting them or shoving them or punching the wall or slamming and throwing things or threatening them. We had a lady many years ago whose husband actually shot at her, but missed, thankfully! This may happen in the society around us, but it has no place in the life of a child of God. And finally:

6. we must not be greedy It's referring to shamefully gaining money, being so materialistic that we're willing to be dishonest to get more of it. I think this probably refers to those Paul mentions in 1 Tim. 6:5 ...who imagine that godliness is a means of gain. That is, who want to use their Christian leadership to greedily make money for themselves. That's the most shameful of all.

Just look at the society in which we live and you can see all of these things! It's falling down around us and these things characterize it. They're common; they're normal; they're even expected. But it must not be so among us! If we read this list and the verses that follow and apply it to others, without looking deeply into ourselves to make sure that WE are not allowing them into our lives, it will be useless. And leaders, here's some good advice. W.H. Griffith Thomas said, "As water never rises above its level so what we do never rises above what we are...We shall never take people one hair's breadth beyond our own spiritual attainment. We may point to higher things, but we shall only take them as far as we ourselves have gone.

Titus: Godly Living In A Decadent Society

What A Godly Life MUST Include (1:8-9)

If you remember from last week, Paul had left Titus on the island of Crete, a very decadent society, to help further establish the newly planted churches and to appoint elders or overseers for each of them. And in verses 5-9 Paul is telling Titus what qualities to look for in a person who is to be a leader. But in doing so, Paul is really explaining the marks of maturity, the marks of what a godly life should look like and so we have to apply these verses, not only to those who we choose to be our leaders, but to our own selves. Now before we go on to today's text, let's briefly:

I. Review Of The Marks Of A Godly Life Expressed Negatively that we went over at the end of last week's study in verse (7), because they set the stage for what comes next. First of all:

1. we must not be arrogant, literally self-willed. We must not be a self-centered, self-pleasing person who only thinks about what's good for them. Second:

2. we must not be quick tempered, prone to easily flare up in anger and lash out at people. Third:

3. we must not be substance abusers, drunkards or drug users or addicted to anything else. We must not let anything control our lives but Jesus. Fourth:

4. we must not be violent, prone to hit or shove people, or smash or slam things or threaten people. And fifth:

5. we must not be greedy, willing to cheat or lie or take advantage of others to make money.

And I wanted to review those negative things because verse 8 begins with the word BUT, which in Greek means rather, instead, on the other hand. The things he's about to list are the polar opposites of those very things and are equally or even more important. A godly life is not just about what you DON'T do! Half a century ago fundamental churches used to teach their teens a slogan, I don't smoke, and I don't chew, and I don't go with girls who do. Do any of you remember that? It rhymes nicely and sticks in your mind, but a godly life is not primarily about what you DON'T do; it's about what you DO do! So now Paul goes on to list:

II. The Marks Of A Godly Life Expressed Positively (8) He lists six characteristics that should be, that WILL be, growing in our lives if we truly love Jesus and are letting Him live out His life through us. And the first thing he says is that:

1. we must be hospitable The Greek word is philoxenos which combines phileo, to love, and xenos, a foreigner or stranger, so hospitality is loving strangers. It's the exact opposite of being arrogant or self-centered and of being greedy. Many eastern cultures consider it an absolute duty to take care of and protect travelers and strangers who come to them. In Gen. 19 you see the story of how two angels come through the gate of Sodom in the form of men and Lot is sitting there and he says to them, "Please come to my house and spend the night." But they say, "No, we'll just spend the night in the square." However, Lot knows how dangerous it is for strangers there and he urges them strongly, "No, please come to my house, I insist!" And when the men of the city surrounded his house, he was willing to sacrifice his own daughters to protect them. That seems a bit misguided to us, but it shows just how deeply this duty of hospitality, of caring for strangers can be ingrained and still is in many places. And here God says it ought to be ingrained in us (not the sacrificing your daughters part, but the caring for strangers part!) We find the command to be hospitable in several places. Look with me at Heb. 13:2. It means:

a. caring in practical ways for people we don't know, opening your home to them, providing food, giving a ride, giving money if they need it and you have it. You never know, you might just be host to a couple of angels who are passing through like Lot was! In previous generations this was such a critical thing. Today we can get ourselves out of almost any jam with a cell phone and a credit card. We can get a place to stay, a ride with Uber, a tow and a repair. Money comes out of an ATM at will. In all previous generations that wasn't so. People were always dependent on other people being hospitable and willing to help strangers, and still are in much of the world and God still wants us to be that way, to have an open heart to take care of people when they need it. He commands us to be like that Samaritan man who came upon a Jew lying unconscious in a ditch, picked him up and took him to an inn, cared for his wounds and paid his bill until he could get better. Yet we're often hesitant to open our door, to inconvenience our schedule or to part with our money, plus we're scared of strangers! How is the world ever going to hear about or be drawn to Jesus if we always pass by on the other side and don't stop to care for their needs? But then look over to 1 Pet. 4:9. Hospitality also means:

b. caring in practical ways for one another, doing for each other the same things that we'd do for strangers who were passing by or were in need, opening our home, making time in our schedule, opening our wallet to a brother or sister when they need it, and doing it without grumbling or complaining, either out loud or in our inner attitude. Loving acts should just flow out of us to others from the Spirit who lives in us.

Are you truly a hospitable person? Now the second thing Paul says is that:

2. we must love good The Greek word is philagathos, which again combines phileo, to love, and agathos, that which is good, so it means loving good, whether that is good persons or good things or good practices. In Amos 5:14-15 God says the very same thing to His people Israel in a more spelled out form, Seek good, and not evil, that you may live; and so, the LORD, the God of hosts, will be with you... Hate evil, and love good, and establish justice in the gate [that is, where court is held]... On the one hand, loving good means that:

a. we must detest and seek to stop what is evil whenever we can, whether it is in our neighborhood, our school, our workplace or our culture. Whether it is unfair treatment, racial prejudice, bribery, abuse, false testimony, cheating people, taking the lives of the unborn, trafficking, or pornography or immorality in whatever form it takes, God hates all of these things and stands opposed to them and so should we. On the other hand:

b. we must love and zealously support what is good because it is our very nature, just as it is in God's. Peter said about Jesus in Acts 10:38, ...He went about doing good and healing all who were oppressed by the devil. He healed people who were sick, opened the eyes of those who were blind and made those who were lame to walk. He freed people who were demon possessed. He fed people who were hungry. He comforted people who were grieving and taught people who were ready to listen. Everywhere He went and in everything He did, He went about doing good and urged others to do likewise. His life was a stream of one good thing after the other because He was a lover of good and ours should be the same. And not only that, because we have the rare privilege of living in a society where we actually choose the leaders who make the laws we live by, we should be careful to elect those who will promote the doing of good by God's standards. The question is not what party they are or what color they are or whether you will benefit financially or whether you like their personality or not. Romans 13 says that the purpose of secular rulers is to promote good and to punish evil. So, the question is whether they will promote what is good and pass laws that require people to do good and prevent them from doing evil according to what the Scripture says. If they won't, don't elect them! If they will, elect them, instead of those who won't! Vote your convictions! Use your God-given privilege and promote good in your society because you love that which is good!

Are YOU a lover of good? Thirdly, Paul says that:

3. we must be self-controlled The Greek word is sophron which means sound in mind or sober-minded. It means that:

a. we must have a balanced state of mind, an ability to think clearly and see our situation as it really is, as God sees it. In other words, being self-controlled means that:

b. we must be able to control our passions We must be able to keep our emotions from taking control of our mind and running our lives. We must have strength to keep our thinking from being consumed by anger or by the desire to get even or by jealousy or by fear or by pride so that our actions become governed by these things. Jesus was self-controlled. When He stood on trial before Pilate, the chief priests and elders accused Him of many things, all of them false. But He answered nothing, not a single word and Pilate was "greatly amazed". Why, because the average person on trial for their life would have been yelling and screaming, "That's not true! They're lying! Don't believe them!" or pleading desperately for mercy or cursing profanely. But Jesus trusted in the Father and just remained silent; His self-control made Pilate marvel at Him!

Are YOU self-controlled? Fourthly, Paul says that:

4. we must be upright The Greek word is dikaios which means just, or righteous. Immediately I think of Joseph. You can only imagine what he thought and how he felt when Mary came home from visiting her cousin Elizabeth and he learned she was pregnant. I'm sure he felt deeply hurt, betrayed and, no doubt, angry. He couldn't quite bring himself to believe her story about an angel and a miraculous conception, yet she had voluntarily come to him, told him she was pregnant and the cause of it which could have been punishable by death, so he couldn't quite bring himself to believe she was lying either. So, Matthew says, ...Joseph, being a just man and unwilling to put her to shame, resolved to divorce her quietly. He pondered within himself, "What should I do? If I accuse her to a magistrate, she'll be exposed to public shame and could receive a severe punishment, which there is a chance she doesn't deserve. If I marry her, everyone will assume that I behaved immorally." Most men would have gone with their emotions and wanted to get revenge on Mary for her apparent unfaithfulness. But Joseph was just. He wanted to do what was right in God's eyes. If there was a chance she was being truthful, he did not want to see her punished, so he resolved on a just course of action. He would give her a writing of divorce privately, in the presence of only one or two witnesses instead of the magistrate, and let her return to the care of her family unpunished. He cared more about doing what was right in God's eyes than about his own vindication. That's what being upright or just means:

a. our behavior must conform to God's standards of right, rather than what we feel like doing. Joseph had been sold into slavery unjustly. He was actually owned by Potiphar. You might expect him to be filled with anger and resentment at the loss of his freedom and all the things he'd been denied including the pleasure of marriage. But Joseph was a just man! When Potiphar's wife begs him to sleep with her, he replies, [My master] is not greater in this house than I am, nor has he kept back anything from me except you, because you are his wife. How then can I do this great wickedness and sin against God? He cared more that it would be a great wrong to his master and still more that it would be a great offense toward God, than he did about his own feelings or what had been done to him. Our culture says, "Do what's right for you! Do what's in your own best interest! Morality is relative!" No, it's not! God has clear standards of right and wrong and they have not changed. He had them written down and given to us in a book that was carefully preserved through the ages to make sure they would not be changed. According to God, adultery has always been wrong. Sex outside of marriage has always been wrong. The practice of homosexuality has always been wrong. Murder has always been wrong. Lying, cheating, and stealing have always been wrong. Being faithful, saving life, telling the truth and being honest have always been right! Being upright means knowing God's standards and making them your own. And therefore, it means that:

b. we must always treat others in ways that are right It means that we choose to abide by God's standards at all times and at all costs as we interact with other people instead of the way we may feel like treating them. Are YOU an upright person? Fifth, Paul says that:

5. we must be holy The Greek word here is hosios, which doesn't mean without sin, but means devout toward God. If upright refers primarily to the way we treat other people, holy refers to the love and respect that we ought to show toward God. Jesus said the greatest commandment in all the law is that we are to love the Lord our God with all our heart, soul, mind and strength. Without that, upright behavior is just the keeping of a set of rules. We must do what we do out of the right motive, because we love Him with all our hearts. And if we love Him, the evidence of that will be plain. Jesus said of the Father in Jn. 8:29, ...I always do what pleases Him. Everything Jesus did, everywhere He went, every move He made, every act, every miracle, He did to please the Father. And likewise:

• we must always do the things that please Him Paul said, So whether we are at home [in the body] or away [from it], we make it our aim to please him. - 2 Cor. 5:9. That's our one goal, our primary purpose in life, both here and beyond, to please Him.

Are YOU a holy person? Lastly, in verse 8 Paul says:

6. we must be disciplined The Greek word is egkrates which means internal strength. It is often translated temperate because in Scripture it primarily means that:

- we must be in control of our bodily appetites It's the opposite of not addicted in verse 7. We must have strength to control our appetite so that we are not gluttons. We must have strength to control our desire to drink alcohol so that we are not drunkards. We must have strength to control our sexual drive so that we do not lust or yield to it and become immoral. Paul used a good example when he said, Every athlete exercises self-control in all things... - 1 Cor. 9:25 and he urges us to do the same. Are YOU a disciplined person? Then finally, as he completes his list, Paul tells us:

III. The Most Important Mark Of A Godly Life (9) Whether we are a leader in the church or just an ordinary believer:

1. we must hold firmly to the Word of God We must literally, hold it tightly against us or cling to it with all our might. Paul says it is trustworthy and:

a. we must regard it as worthy of our trust We have to make up our minds, is this Book the very Word of God or is it not? If it is not, then it is merely the word of man, a book written by people that I can choose to believe or not, but if it is the Word of God Himself, then it is true and trustworthy and I must obey it. I must trust it so much that I make it the only rule of belief and practice by which all other things in my life will be judged. We must cling to it like glue, like epoxy, like cement, like sticky gooey caramel that pulls the caps off your teeth, like creek mud that you get stuck in and it pulls your boots off! And in holding fast to it:

b. we must be careful not to alter it We must hold fast to it as it has been taught, as it has come down to us, without changing it or altering it even one little bit. And if we hold fast to the Word unchanged, Paul says:

2. this will enable us to do two things. First, we'll be able to:

a. exhort others to believe correctly and practice it just like we do. We'll be able to disciple them and help them grow and mature in their faith. And we'll be able to:

b. refute those who oppose it Oh, there are so many today who say the Bible is not true, that it's outdated, it's ancient myths, it's archaic, it can't be trusted, it's full of contradictions. But pretty much everybody who says those things hasn't studied it and most haven't read it at all! Listen, there is nothing yet that science or history have proved as facts (and evolution is only a theory, not a fact) that is inconsistent with what the Bible says. In fact, when there is any question, science and history always end up proving that the Bible is accurate! And if you immerse yourself in it and study it carefully with a believing mind, you can tear down every lofty argument that people hold up to you. Are YOU a person who holds firmly to the Word of God?

These are the marks of a good leader and the marks of a godly life. Now, can you just produce all these things on your own? By trying hard? Of course not! You can only grow these fruits through the power of the Holy Spirit who lives in you, only by asking Him every day and in every situation to take control of you and make you hospitable or make you love the good or make you self-controlled or upright or holy or disciplined. It's only possible by stopping and praying, "Jesus, help me. Help me do what pleases You in this situation. Take control of me and give me strength to act Your way!" Corrie Ten Boom used to take a glove with her when she would speak about the Holy Spirit and she would put it on and say, I have a glove here. It can't do anything, but if I put my hand in it, it can do a lot, writing, sewing and much more. Now I know, of course, that it isn't the glove; it's my hand in the glove. You and I are like gloves and the Holy Spirit is like the hand - He can do a great deal. If the hand doesn't fill the glove and move it, nothing happens! Likewise, we have to ask the Holy Spirit to fill us, to take control of us and live out a godly life through us by His power! And it happens by simply praying, asking Him to do it, one situation at a time.

Titus: Godly Living In A Decadent Society What A Religiously Decadent Society Looks Like (1:10-16)

Whenever the church exists in a decadent society, there is always a problem with the decadent values and practices of the society creeping into the church. And even when the church is newly planted there, or maybe especially when the church is newly planted, not only do the new believers have a lot of the society's ways and thinking still in them, but those who rise up among them as leaders do as well. Paul and Titus had planted a set of new house churches across the island of Crete and were trying to help them grow to a healthy maturity, but they were not the only missionaries out there. Christianity had already been around long enough that there were also aberrant groups present trying to recruit converts. So, Paul warns Titus that:

I. There Are Many False Religious Teachers (10) He's not talking about people in general, but about traveling religious teachers who are preaching a false Gospel to people and he wants to be sure that none of his new believers there are led astray to follow them and their teachings. And, of course, there are many such in the religious sphere of our own society. In this verse he mentions three qualities that seem to characterize these teachers and their followings. He says:

1. they are insubordinate, that is, unwilling to submit to religious authority. They didn't recognize the authority of the apostles who had walked with Jesus and were not willing to allow themselves or their teachings to be validated by those who had been in the Lord before them. These kinds of teachers and movements are always purposefully independent; they separate themselves from any denominational or associational relationships, claiming that what they have is directly from God and doesn't need man's approval. Then Paul says:

2. they are empty talkers, that is, they do a lot of talking, but they are spreading foolish nonsense. They are teaching empty things that won't help you or do any good. I remember hearing a man on one radio broadcast years ago say, "Send me your tithe and I'll send you a bottle of special anointing oil. You can go down to the car lot and pick out the car you want and anoint that car and God will give it to you!" Believe it or not, I'm told that guy was rolling in money because needy people are gullible or desperate enough to listen to foolish nonsense! Then Paul says:

3. they are deceivers, literally mind-seducers, teachers who lead believers astray. They lure believers into accepting their false teachings and focusing on them, so that before long the Gospel which they have accepted ends up being a different Gospel in their minds. And in the end of verse 10 you have:

4. Paul's example: the circumcision party (10b) These were Jewish background believers who taught that Christians must essentially become Jewish in order to follow Jesus. They must be circumcised and taught to keep the Law. This group created trouble in the church from its earliest days and was officially declared wrong by the apostles in Acts 15, yet they seem to have spread everywhere. Paul wrote Galatians to combat their influence. He tells more about them in (14-15). He says:

a. they focused on Jewish myths In 1 Tim. 1:4 Paul calls them ...myths and endless genealogies, which promote speculations... The Jewish rabbis had many unfounded stories, superstitious legends which they regarded as having great importance. Examples of these are found in a group of writings known as the Pseudepigrapha or "False Writings", which includes titles like The Books of Adam and Eve, Life of Adam and Eve, The Apocalypse of Moses, The Apocalypse of Adam, 1 & 2 Enoch, The Apocalypse of Abraham, Revelation of Moses, and others, which, as you can tell simply from the titles, contain lots of crazy legends about Old Testament people that are way outside the bounds of Scripture. The Judaizers focused on these and on ferretting out long genealogical records to prove what tribe they were from. And, Paul says:

b. they focused on man-made commandments, the traditions of the elders. Verse 15 is a reference to the dietary laws and laws of ceremonial uncleanness they were trying to get believers to follow. Jesus often ran up against these. For instance, Mark comments, (For the Pharisees and all the Jews do not eat unless they wash their hands properly, holding to the tradition of the elders, and when they come from the marketplace, they do not eat unless they wash. And there are many other traditions that they observe, such as the washing of cups and pots and copper vessels and dining couches.) - Mk. 7:3-4. And Jesus says in verse 8, You leave the commandment of God and hold to the tradition of men.

These are the kinds of things these false teachers tried to bring into the church and foist upon believers in Paul's day. When we studied Jude, I gave you examples of churches and professors and teachers who believe in a "different Jesus", one who is not God and is not the only way of salvation but merely a great religious leader or example. Now, let me give you just a couple of:

5. examples of popular false teachings of a different type, doctrines that are widely common in the church in today's world, but have no problem with who Jesus really is and what He did. Rather they want to ADD things to the Gospel. The first is known as the:

a. prosperity gospel, the teaching that all believers can have health and wealth by believing, by having enough faith. They teach that God wants his children to have, not just every spiritual blessing, but every material blessing as well and that includes health. They say that the phrase by His stripes we are healed means that on the cross Jesus purchased physical healing for all His followers. All we need to do is believe and God will give us these things. This has spread widely to mislead and disappoint people all over the world. When we were in India in 2019, one pastor got up to give a devotional and he preached this doctrine. "There will be plenty of rice for your meals, your daughters will be married, you will not want for anything. Just have FAITH! I started with nothing and now my church has a whole row of nice cars parked out front every Sunday. We have 6 air conditioning units!" We were all appalled! Imagine the appeal this teaching has to poor villagers who are barely surviving! And then imagine their disappointment with Jesus when it doesn't work for them! You can hear it right here; it's all over the TV. Oral Roberts was a big name in this originally; today you can hear Creflo Dollar (so appropriately named) any day of the week. Benny Hinn organizes huge healing crusades all over the world, yet one source says, Not a single one of Hinn's miracles has ever been verified, though many have been proven to be temporary or false. [<https://www.challies.com/articles/the-false-teachers-benny-hinn/>]. And along with prosperity teaching often goes another falsehood popular today known as:

b. Word of Faith teaching which says that believers can have health and wealth by "positive confession", that is, by speaking or proclaiming it. It's often called "name it and claim it" theology. It claims believers have the same power as God who spoke the worlds into existence, that their "word" has the same power to make things happen. "I declare that you are healed!" "I declare that your cancer is gone in Jesus' Name!" Kenneth Hagin is recognized as the father of this teaching, though oddly, he died of cardio-vascular disease in 2003. Kenneth Copeland is probably the most well-known and widely seen preacher of this today, though there are many others. Listen, Jesus NEVER taught his followers that they would have health or wealth! He taught that we would suffer and be persecuted for His Name. The Bible teaches that the sufferings of Christ flow over into our lives and that God refused to take away Paul's thorn in the flesh because He is most glorified in our weaknesses! These things are false concepts derived from our materialistic culture that have been married to the Gospel! A third false teaching is:

c. the practice of impartation, the concept that spiritual gifts can be "imparted" to other believers by the laying on of hands. You find this in the "revival" movement begun at the Toronto Airport Christian Fellowship in 1994 to the present and in the Brownsville FL "revival" from 1995-2000 where the laying of hands causes people to fall down and be "slain in the spirit" and people experience uncontrollable "holy laughter" and other ecstatic manifestations. Its influence has been continued in the Bethel Church Movement led by Bill Johnson based in Redding CA and their School of Supernatural Ministry, a clone of which operates in Harrisburg PA, where people are taught to "how to operate in the supernatural realm". Listen, we lay hands on people when we pray as a sign of our support and love; there is no "supernatural energy" flowing from us into them, the way healing power did from Jesus when He was here!

These teachings and teachers have impacted literally millions of believers. Now listen carefully. I am NOT saying that these people or their followers are not genuine Christians. I am not saying that they don't love Him or won't go to heaven. I have seen some of them give invitations to receive Christ and people do. A few of them might be outright charlatans, but certainly not all. I'm saying that they have added false teachings to the Gospel and have focused on those nonbiblical things and that is dangerous! Paul gives us:

II. The Facts About False Religious Teachers (11) First he says:

1. their teaching upsets and divides whole families When a family member gets into one of these groups, they try to get the rest to join them. If they do, a whole family is led astray and if they don't, that member often feels superior, like he or she has the Spirit and the rest don't. And that leads to alienation and separation. Second, Paul says:

2. they tend to be motivated by shameful gain Not all of them, but many are. Many teach that a "seed" of faith must be planted by giving something to their ministry in order to receive God's blessing for themselves. It might interest you to know that Kenneth Copeland has a net worth of $760 million. His ministry's 1,500 acre campus includes a church, a private airstrip, a hangar for the ministry's $17.5 million jet and other aircraft, and a $6 million church owned lakefront mansion. Benny Hinn is only worth $42 million. Creflo Dollar is worth $27 million and he owns two Rolls-Royces, a private jet, a million dollar home in Atlanta, and a 2.5 million dollar residence in Manhattan. [<https://www.etinside.com/?p=539>] Wouldn't you think if you had that much money, you'd give most of it away to send missionaries to the remaining unreached peoples or to feed the poverty-stricken millions of the world or to care for refugees or something? It would seem that prosperity teaching often has a lot to do with the prospering of the one who preaches it and comes from the sacrifices of much poorer followers! Shameful gain! Third, Paul says:

3. they have imbibed the deceitfulness of their culture (12-13a) We looked at these verses two weeks ago to understand what the culture on Crete was like. If you remember, I told you that the Greek language had developed a verb, to cretanize, which meant to be a liar! Lying, cruelty and pleasure-seeking were the chief hallmarks of Cretan culture and the whole world knew it. Paul is pointing out that through these false teachers, these very characteristics had been absorbed by them, incorporated into their teaching and were being foisted upon the church. If you look at the false teachings I've mentioned, it's awfully clear that most are simply disguised forms of the materialism and pleasure-seeking that characterize our American culture and they have been baptized into the church by saying that Jesus wants us to have those things! Fourth, Paul says:

4. they profess to know God but deny it by their works (16) Again, I'm not saying that none of these guys know Jesus. It's not my place to judge that. But their works, the things they do, seem to deny what they say with their mouth. It's hard to believe that a guy who claims thousands have been healed by Jesus' power can't produce credible testimonies of it. One who left one of the groups I've mentioned says, The real thing that got me, though, was the death of little J.C., the infant of two dear Korean friends of mine. He died from cancer at two years old. Prayers went out for him every second of the day. People jerked, shook, laughed, convulsed, spoke in... tongues over him...the works...and when he died, we were left with feeble excuses like "God needed him more" ...!!! [<https://kimolsen.net/2013/07/11/a-testimony-how-god-rescued-me-from-bill-johnsons-cult/>] It's hard to believe that a guy who claims to love the poor like Jesus does keeps millions for himself. Jesus said we will know false prophets and false teachers by their fruits. Sadly, in the third world millions flock to their events, but thousands are left disillusioned because Jesus didn't give them the healing or the prosperity they were promised. So Paul uses three terms to describe these folks. He says:

a. they have become detestable They're foul. Like rotten meat or sour milk, they're something you turn away from because of the stench. Next:

b. they are willfully disobedient They are obstinate and unpersuadable. You can't convince them they're off base. And because of that:

c. they are useless to God's work To one degree or another they're unfit, unworthy, useless. They're not accomplishing the true work of God in the world. God can't truly use them to advance His Kingdom because they're too busy advancing their own kingdom.

Lastly, Paul tells Titus:

III. What Should Be Done With False Teachers He says:

1. their teaching should be silenced (11a) The Greek word means gagged. Somebody needs to tie a gag across their mouths. Of course, you can't do that literally. It would be nice if we could get such people off the air, but then if we did deny them that freedom, someone else would be able to deny us the same freedom. We can't literally stop false teachers from teaching, but we certainly can do everything possible to silence this kind of teaching wherever we find it rearing its head. Wherever it pops up in the church, we can say, "That's not true and you can't teach that here!" We can make sure that kind of teaching doesn't go on in our church or any other group where we have influence. And then Paul says this (13b). It looks to me like Paul is telling us that:

2. they should be rebuked and reclaimed if possible We should do what we can to strongly challenge people who are caught up in these false doctrines and practices and leading others astray with the goal of restoring them to a sound, biblical faith. So there is hope! Many are genuine believers and the Spirit can work in their lives to show them where they have gotten off track. Pray for them And ask God to reclaim them from error!

In closing I'd like to let well known pastor, author and missions speaker John Piper share with you. As a favor, he was speaking to about 1,000 college students from the University Christian Fellowship campus ministry in Birmingham. The leader of that ministry said, "Out of the blue, we started getting this little bit of prosperity gospel coming in. One guy had just become a believer, and he was gifted in evangelism and started to bring people in with him. But his doctrine got off." Within several years, that "guy" would take several hundred students from UCF and start his own ministry called The Basement, which at one time drew crowds of as many as 7,000 before he was arrested twice in 18 months for impersonating police officers. But that night this campus leader knew trouble was coming and begged Piper to address the prosperity gospel in his message, which he did extemporaneously. The result was this 3 minute video clip that is so powerful that it has been viewed over 1.1 million times on YouTube. [https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PTc_FoELt8s] That is the Gospel. Amen. Titus: Godly Living In A Decadent Society

Godly Living For Older People (2:1-4a)

As we move into chapter 2 in our study through the letter to Titus, Paul has already given Titus a list of qualifications to use as he appoints elders to care for the churches they had established and he has encouraged Titus to warn people against supposedly Christian teachers who are teaching false doctrines, such as the Judaizers, the circumcision party. And we discussed some of the false teachings prevalent in our own society. But now Paul turns to give a word to Timothy himself in verse (1). If you look closely, he's saying more than "teach the correct things"; he's saying "teach the things that are the result of healthy sound teaching." Let me read it to you in the NET, But as for you, communicate the behavior that goes with sound teaching. He's telling Timothy that:

I. We, who know and promote biblical truth in a balanced way, Have A Responsibility To Promote Godly Living. It is not enough to know all the right things God wants us to know from Scripture. It is not enough to teach all the right things from Scripture. We must first of all LIVE the right way that goes along with it. And if we're going to do that, Paul is implying here to Titus what he already said outright to Timothy. Look back to 1 Tim. 4:16 with me. Paul is saying that:

1. we must continually examine ourselves It is not enough to point out the flaws in others. The first place we ought to be looking is in the mirror! I don't know about you, but every morning one of the first things I do is go in the bathroom and look in the mirror to see how messy I look. Then I shave off the stubble and use a trimmer to catch all the little hairs that have somehow grown overnight, because I don't want to look unkempt. And I do that continually, day after day. Paul tells Timothy that we must do the same thing in the spiritual realm. First of all:

a. we must keep a close watch on our lives Why? Because it is so easy to slip into doing the very things that we know God doesn't want in our lives. We'd never outright hate somebody, but it's awfully easy to harbor a little root of bitterness when someone hurts us somehow. We'd never seek after pornography, but it's easy to stare at that racy scene on the TV a moment too long and savor it. We'd never steal money but if there's a way, we can keep from reporting that we earned some or get out of doing some of the work we're getting paid for, we might be tempted to let that happen. Solomon said it's the little foxes that spoil the vineyard and you need to catch them! (Songs 2:15) It's the little things we need to watch carefully for and catch before they become full grown and lead into bigger things! It's easy to miss one day of reading Scripture or spending time with God in prayer, but before you realize it, you miss two or three, then a whole week and soon the entire habit is out of your life. We have to keep a close watch on our lives all the time, and not only that:

b. we must keep a close watch on what we teach, examine it carefully to make sure it's the truth. It's so easy to just parrot what we heard someone else say in a message somewhere or an idea or thought that comes to our mind without checking it out and seeing whether it's biblical. This was especially important in Paul's day before the printing press where nobody had their own personal copy of the Scriptures and they depended on memorizing and remembering. Today we have Bibles all over. We have them on our computers and our phones. With a click or a touch, we can see different translations, original word meanings, and commentaries from others. We have NO excuse for not communicating what's true, except that we don't bother to look! So we must still keep a close watch on what we teach or communicate to others. But what Paul is saying to Titus is that:

2. we must communicate behavior that reflects healthy teaching The point of sound teaching is to impact, not people's knowledge, but their behavior, their character, their lives. It is to motivate others to live a godly life in the midst of their decaying society. And that's what Paul goes on to describe for Titus in the rest of this chapter. He begins to explain what godly living specifically looks like for different age groups and genders and even for people who are bondservants. But he begins by sharing:

II. What Godly Living Looks Like For Older Men (2) Now, as soon as we hear "older", we're picturing an 80 year old guy who can barely walk, hobbling about with a cane, but that's not who Paul has in mind. People didn't live as long on average back then and "older" probably begins with what we'd still describe as middle aged, men in their late 40's, 50's and above, men whose children are largely grown, who have been established in their occupation or trade and who are probably looked to as the leaders of the community and the church. Paul paints a picture for us of what our lives should look like. First he says:

1. we should be sober-minded or temperate, meaning primarily that we should be free from the influence of wine or strong drink and use it in only in moderation. There's nothing worse than an old drunk guy who can't quite control himself, but there are plenty of them out there. I'm thinking of one of my neighbors with whom I'm good friends, but he drinks a lot and when we have a neighborhood gathering his wife is embarrassed and always worried about what he's going to say or how he might act. It's sad. As older men, we should be examples of moderation for the younger who might be prone to wild parties, examples of someone who is in control of their bodily desires and doesn't let anything get control of their lives except the Lord Jesus. So along with that, Paul says:

2. we should be worthy of respect, dignified, not in the sense of pompous or proud, but a man that other people honor or look up to for the way they live. That would mean we are serious about life, not that we don't have fun or a sense of humor, but you know older men as I do, whose mode of communication is always joking or always sarcastic or always critical. I'm thinking of an older man who's long dead but was a member here 40 years ago who was always sarcastic, always making a wise crack or a joke. You'd never look up to him. But then I think of a Keith Crews in his 70's who's been an example of humbleness and kindness and helpfulness and endurance through many difficulties over all these years, and above all who loves Jesus and sees his purpose in life as being a witness to others and helping children and younger believers to grow. That's an older man worthy of respect and an example of what Paul is saying that all of us should be. And part of that is:

3. we should be self-controlled, having a sound mind, a balanced way of thinking that does not let our passions, our emotions, run away with it. I remember another older man when we first came here who was obsessed with grief over the passing of his wife. It consumed his life and was all he thought about for years, so that he essentially stopped living. He had no purpose, nothing in life he wanted to do but to wait to die and see her again. I've seen others become obsessed with their health, their illnesses, and let those become the focus of their life. God wants us to have sound, balanced minds that focus on the reason we're here in the first place and that means:

4. we should have a healthy spiritual life And in this realm, Paul lists a trio of spiritual qualities that should characterize us as we grow older. The first is a sound or a healthy faith. That is:

a. a deep personal faith in Jesus, not simply a whole lot of accumulated knowledge about Him. Now, in my experience men in general tend to be less spiritually minded than women. Get a bunch of them together, even if they're believers, and what do they talk about? Sports. Work. Cars. They don't generally tend to share what the Lord spoke to their hearts the other day as they were reading Scripture, the way women might. Listen, older guys, this should be the time of our lives when we really walk with Jesus, when we have learned to be men of prayer, men of the word, men who are examples of trusting and loving Jesus that can be imitated and followed by our families and be a witness to others, men who aren't ashamed to talk about what's the most important thing in life to them! The second quality we should display is a healthy love:

b. a continual love toward others By this point in life we should be past that self-centered male thinking, that "me first" attitude that often characterizes men in their younger years, and have settled into a pattern of caring about others and putting them first. The best example who comes to mind is our own Assistant Pastor, Jim Garcia. I don't know anybody who puts himself out more for other people, who goes the extra mile to help, who is always looking for a way to make the situation easier for the other person, who cares so deeply about those who are sick or shut in, who thinks about how other people feel more than about his own feelings. Amen? And it never stops. It never ends. That's the love God wants to characterize our lives at all stages, but especially by this stage it should be at the core of our behavior. And finally, Paul adds, a healthy steadfastness, that is:

c. a constant endurance through suffering By this point we've lived 45, 50, 60, 70 years and you can't be in this world that long without living through a number of hardships, difficulties and sorrows. And through them all, your faith has not been shaken; indeed, it has been strengthened and is deeper now because of the way Jesus has carried you through. We have endured. We've lived out the title of Eugene Peterson's classic book "A Long Obedience In The Same Direction" and we're still going in that direction! We've persevered through thick and thin, up and down, better and worse, richer and poorer, in sickness and health and we're still clinging to Jesus who has carried us through it all! That's who we're to be, so that those coming along the trail behind us can find in us the encouragement and the example to carry on and know it will be worth it all! Joe Stowell writes, The Greeks had a race in their Olympic games that was unique. The winner was not the runner who finished first. It was the runner who finished with his torch still lit. I want to run all the way with the flame of my torch still lit for Him. [J. Stowell, Fan The Flame, Moody, 1986, p. 32]

Guys, is that you? Walking with Jesus, loving other people and enduring through all that life throws at you, being faithful to Jesus? That's what God's looking for in you! But now Paul moves on to tell Titus:

III. What Godly Living Looks Like For Older Women (3) Now here's where I get in trouble. Who exactly are "older women"? It's really hard to tell since they're all either 29 or 39! Again, we might picture some gray-haired old lady sitting in a rocking chair on a porch, but Paul is talking about women who are done having children, whose children are mostly or all fully grown, so that they are not the focus of every moment of the day any more, women who now have more free time to focus on work or on ministry, as well as those who are actually elderly. Paul begins by saying, Likewise, in the same way, in the same fashion. In other words, he's saying:

1. you should live godly the same as the men should The same things we've just mentioned for the men should also characterize your lives! A deep faith in Jesus, a continual love for others and a constant endurance and faithfulness to the Lord through all the difficulties of life, that should be YOU as well. But there are some things that Paul mentions because they specifically apply to you and the first thing he says is that:

2. you should be reverent in demeanor and this word in the Greek is a deeper concept than the word dignified or worthy of respect he used for men. It literally says having a demeanor that is consecrated to God, that of a sacred woman. In other words, the way that you act, the way that you talk, the way that you dress, everything about you should display that you are a woman who is absolutely devoted to Jesus, a holy woman. But when I say that, don't picture wearing a nun's habit or something. It's about character and Paul goes on to mention two things that are earmarks of that holy-appearing life. First, he says:

a. you should be careful not to slander others The Greek word is diabolos. Sound familiar? Don't be an accuser like the devil! Don't speak evil about them. Of course, I know there are a few men who never stop talking, but as a generalization, most women love to talk; they love to communicate. It's wired into them. Men would rather sit together and stare at a TV and grunt occasionally. But, as Solomon observed, When words are many, transgression is not lacking, but whoever restrains his lips is prudent. - Prov. 10:19. The more we talk, the more we have to guard our lips to make sure we don't say something evil, especially about others. In 1 Tim. 5:13 Paul gives this warning about young widows who are provided for by the church and so don't have to work. He says, Besides that, they learn to be idlers, going about from house to house, and not only idlers, but also gossips and busybodies, saying what they should not. A woman who is older, whose family is raised and doesn't have the burden of the many responsibilities she once had faces that same temptation, especially if her husband earns enough and she doesn't have to work. It is so easy to fall into gossiping with friends about the latest thing that one or the other has heard about someone else or sharing feelings about someone and reproducing your own attitude toward them in the person you're talking to. Be reverent; be a holy woman in the way that you talk! Now let me assure you that we have some of the godliest women I know who are 45 and up in this church and I deeply appreciate your love for the Lord, and I am sure none of you would ever be tempted to act like this, so please don't get mad at me for mentioning it; after all, Paul's the one that wrote it! And the second aspect of reverence he mentions seems even crazier! He says:

b. you should be careful not to become addicted to much wine, not to become enslaved by it. Now, for all the drunken older men I've met through the years, mostly because I was dragged into bars by my dad in childhood, I think I have yet to meet an older woman who was an alcoholic. Yet they must exist or Paul wouldn't have warned about it. Surprisingly, they do. In 2017 the Huffington Post printed an article titled, The Face Of Binge Drinking In The U.S. Is A 60+ White Woman. It says, More older

American women are drinking — and drinking more heavily. The number of women over 60 who binge drink has been rising at a pace that rivals the sea-levels — and exceeding the rate for older men. [https://www.huffpost.com/entry/when-older-women-drink-they-really-drink_n_59274729e4b01b9a59378951]. Why? The website of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism says, Older women tend to have longer life expectancies and to live alone longer than men, and they are less likely than men in the same age group to be financially independent. These physical, social, and psychological factors are sometimes associated with at-risk drinking in older adulthood, so they are especially relevant for older women. Older women have major physical risk factors that make them particularly susceptible to the negative effects of increased alcohol consumption. [<https://pubs.niaaa.nih.gov/publications/arh26-4/308-315.htm>] So maybe Paul was ahead of his time! Or maybe when a woman gets past the busy family-centric years when she was most needed, and especially if she survives her husband or has to become his caretaker, she is tempted to escape her depressive feelings of loneliness or unattractiveness or uselessness, or at least soothe them with alcohol or pills or even with eating. Paul says that older CHRISTIAN women need to be careful NOT to fall into that sort of addictive behavior! You are holy women! Rather God has a new role for you:

3. you are to be teachers of what is good It's one word in the Greek. You know how in The Wizard of Oz, the Wizard says, "Back where I come from, there are men who do nothing all day but good deeds. They are called phila-, er, er, philanth-er, good-deed do-ers!" Paul's word is like that; it means good-things-teachers! Women who do nothing but teach good things! To whom? Well, the children are now grown and gone or almost gone, so certainly to the grandchildren, but Paul goes on to spell out who he means in (4a). He says:

4. you are to be the primary trainers of younger women! You have lived through those difficult years. The Lord has carried you through the heart-stretching process of Him leading a husband to you, the stressful process of making a wedding happen, the tremendous adjustment to being married to another human being, the anxiety of having children and the exhaustion of caring for them and the frustration of training them up. He has carried you through the stress of financial woes and taking on debt and getting a house and the hard work of caring for what He's given you. You have lived the life they're going to live at every stage and have accumulated God's wisdom from it. And you single older women, you have lived the life that some of the younger women are going to live as singles. You know all the obstacles and discouragements they face and all that they feel inside, because you've faced it and felt it. So now, older women, invest yourself in discipling and mentoring and training younger women, whether they're your own daughters or other younger women in the church or other parts of your life. Be there for them. Call and check up on them. Encourage them when they're down. Pray with them. Make that an important calling of God in your life, right up there with sharing the Gospel with others and reaching the nations!

I remember years ago one of our then young moms lamenting the death of a godly older woman from this church by saying, "We're losing all our Titus women!" Oh, we need Titus women! Listen to Andi Ashworth share her experience: Though mentoring is not a biblical word, it is a way of life modeled in the Bible.... As I move into the decades of becoming an older woman, I'm paying increasing attention to the topic of mentoring. I know from experience that younger women have a hunger to hear from those who've walked the path a little ahead of them. For many years now, younger women have been coming to me in a slow trickle and asking me to mentor them. I'm always somewhat stumped by the question and have rarely felt qualified for the task. I don't have any sort of mentoring program to follow, no methods and no curriculum. What I find is that most women don't want something formal anyway. What they're looking for is more organic—someone to share life with them and have conversations about things that matter, things that develop in importance as life is lived. The older I get, the more I realize the treasure of these relationships and consider them one of the great privileges and responsibilities of becoming an older woman. [<https://byfaithonline.com/the-wisdom-of-older-women/>] Older women, and men too, I challenge you to purposely build relationships with the younger generation and invest your life in them. It's what they need most and God will use it powerfully in their lives!

Titus: Godly Living In A Decadent Society Godly Living For All People (2:7-10)

Titus was living and serving in a decadent society, one that was full of moral decay, just as our is, and this letter was intended to outline what godly living looks like in that context. In the second chapter of his letter, Paul is outlining for Titus what godly living looks like for various segments of believers in the churches. He started out with admonitions for older men and then older women in verses 1-3. In our last study in this series, We skipped Paul's admonitions to younger women and younger men in verses 4-6. But now in verses 7-10 he goes on to address Titus himself as a leader of the churches in Crete, before going on to address another widely represented group in the churches. But before we get to them, let's apply his leadership advice to ourselves. He says:

I. We Who Lead Should Be A Model For Others To Imitate (7-8) Paul was pretty bold about this teaching that leaders should be imitated and he applied it to himself. To the Corinthians he wrote twice, I urge you, then, be imitators of me in 1 Cor. 4:16 and again, Be imitators of me, as I am of Christ. in 11:1. How does a young boy learn to be a godly man? By watching and imitating the godly men in his life, starting with his father. How does a young girl learn to be a godly woman? By watching and imitating the godly women in her life, starting with her mother. And therefore, fathers and mothers have a primary responsibility to make sure that our lives are the kind of model that we want our children to imitate, because if we're not, they'll imitate our bad example anyway! And we who lead in the church, we who are elders and Sunday School teachers and preschool teachers and Pioneer Club leaders and childcare and youth workers and group leaders and Bible study leaders - and pastors! - need to make sure that our lives are the kind of model that we want those whom we lead to imitate, so that we can safely say, with all genuine humility, "Imitate me as I follow Christ! Learn from my example." That's how Jesus' disciples learned. They followed Him about for 3 ½ years. They went where He went, they ate what He ate, they heard and absorbed what He taught and they watched what He did and then participated in doing it themselves. They learned to be the people God wanted them to be by following their leader, by imitating Jesus Himself. God's method of making disciples is not primarily sending them off to school to learn information (though, of course, I'm not against Bible schools); it is largely done life on life, by following the example of those who lead, by imitating the lives of godly men and women who lead us. So, we who lead need to be sure that we model godliness that others can imitate in every area of our lives. First of all, Paul says we must be a model:

1. in the way we act, by our good works. The NIV reads, In everything set them an example by doing what is good... The things we do are an example to those we lead, so we must make sure it's a good example. The way we have compassion on people, the way we help them, the way we always tell the truth even when it hurts us and refuse to cheat even when it costs us, is an example to our followers. I'm sure you know Mt. 5:16, ...let your light shine before others, so that they may see your good works and give glory to your Father who is in heaven. That happens with nonbelieving people. When they see us do good things, generous things, sacrificial things, when they see us love people no one else cares about or they see us endure suffering in our lives without bitterness and we tell them that we do it because of Jesus, they give Him the credit. He gets praise. But the same thing happens with other believers. When they see us doing these things in Jesus' Name, they worship and thank God and it makes them want to be like us and do the same things! So, it's important that we set a good example in the way we act and react, all the time. Paul also says we need to set a good example:

a. we should be incorruptible in teaching the truths of the faith or, as he put it back in 1:9, [We] must hold firmly to the faithful message as it has been taught... We must never allow anything to creep into our teaching that will take away from or add to the truths of the Word of God that has been passed down to us. We must never bend to the dictates of our culture or the false teachings of those who want to twist the Scriptures to make them say what they want. In our teaching we should be like stainless steel. How many of you know that regular steel rusts? Add a little water or dampness and in a day or two a layer of rust quickly forms on the surface. Some of you may remember the little green truck I had a number of years ago. Before I got it, even though it was nearly new, it had been driven on winter roads in northern PA with lots of salt on them and never washed. So when I got it, the whole frame underneath was solid rust. The elements corroded it and eventually I traded it. But stainless steel has about 12% chromium added to it and under anything like normal conditions, it won't rust. It can rain or even be under water for long periods but it won't be corrupted. That's how we must be! No matter what pressures and forces, what "road salts", come against us to try to corrode our faithful adherence to the truths of the Word of God, the chromium of the Holy Spirit in us is there to keep us unspotted, uncorrupted, unchanged and unmoved. That's what integrity in teaching means. Then Paul adds that:

b. we should be worthy of respect in the way that we teach We should display dignity, not the proud, nose-in-the-air, better-than-you sort of dignity that the Pharisees had, but with gravity, with a seriousness that comes from realizing that we are delivering a message for God Himself as we teach. That doesn't mean we can't use humor in our teaching, but I think we've all seen preachers, at least on TV, who grandstand and make a show as they teach to impress their audience with their eloquence or with the greatness of their ministry. We're to teach in such a way as to be worthy of our followers listening to us and respecting what we say, and who we are as we say it. Then, Paul goes on to mention the hardest thing of all; we should set an example for those we lead:

3. in the way we talk, in sound [literally, healthy] speech that cannot be condemned. Now he's really meddling in our lives! James said, No human being can tame the tongue! ...if anyone does not stumble in what he says, he is a perfect man... And we know that we're not perfect, don't we? So, we have to be doubly careful to ask the Holy Spirit to take control of our mouths as we talk to people and react to them. To the Ephesians Paul wrote, Do not let any unwholesome talk come out of your mouths, but only what is helpful for building others up according to their needs, that it may benefit those who listen. - 4:29. What a tall order, to never say anything that hurts, that harms, that tears down, that dishonors the Lord we serve, to always say things that are loving, kind, that build others up, that benefit and help others! I don't know about you, but that convicts ME, and if that's how we're all to talk, we who lead must really trust God for the grace to set an example with our mouths! In summary, Paul says:

4. our goal should be that no one can accuse us of evil, that we are above reproach in the way we act or teach or even talk, that no one has anything bad to say about us, unless it is that we love Jesus and cling to the Bible. As leaders there should be no area of our lives that others can point to and say, "That's wrong." May God give all of us the grace we need!

Now, starting at verse (9a), Paul begins to address another group of people, Bondservants or literally, slaves. And as soon as I say that word, awful red flags go up in our minds. We think of the terrible abuses of chattel slavery as it was practiced in America before the Civil War and we wonder why the Bible doesn't simply condemn it outright. But in the Bible the words used to denote slaves did not necessarily carry the same connotations that we associate with slavery today. Let me share with you:

II. Some Facts About Slavery In New Testament Times By the way, in researching for this message I found the best article I've ever read on slavery in the Bible by a pastor named Doug Becker and I simplified the URL for it and put it on your outline. I hope you'll go online and read it and even save it. [<https://bit.ly/3ckuWoS>] I'll summarize a few of his facts for you. First:

1. slaves were common in Greek and Roman society. One source estimates that as much as 90% of the population of the city of Rome itself were slaves. In essence, they pretty much formed an entire class of people. People became slaves either by owing debt or by being captured in war or by being born into a family of slaves. They were everywhere and as the Gospel spread throughout the Roman world, many believed, so that slaves formed a significant portion of the church. A great many of the early believers were slaves, which is why they are addressed as a group in Ephesians, Colossians, Titus and 1 Peter and why the book of Philemon is in our Bible. And while some slaves were certainly required to do hard labor:

2. slaves occupied many (and some important) positions Doug says, Slaves could actually own property and even other slaves. They were not enslaved based on the color of their skin or ethnicity and slavery was often temporary. Many served as tutors, professors, estate managers, bookkeepers, even doctors, or as artisans. Roman Emperors used slaves to manage imperial estates and often placed them in charge of important tasks, such as lighting, tailoring, wine-keeping and tasting, and cooking. Furthermore, unlike in our day:

3. Christians were powerless to change government policies They were a tiny, hated, and soon afterward, persecuted, minority. They had no vote and no voice. Slavery was deeply embedded and exceedingly common in society. The abolition of it was not something even conceived of until many centuries later. Christians had to live as subjects under the powerful government of their day. Doug says, For us, ...freedom appears to be a basic value—indeed the fundamental right without which happiness and fulfillment cannot be attained. But we need to realize that this is a modern conviction that may have not been obvious or desirable at earlier points in human history. On the other hand:

4. the New Testament does condemn the slave trade, forcefully taking people as slaves and selling them. Under the law of Israel, one who kidnapped a person and sold them was to be put to death. 1 Tim. 1:10 lists slave traders as law breakers and rebels right along with murderers and adulterers. In Rev. 18:13 trading in “slaves, that is, human souls” is listed among the evils of Rome (referred to as “Babylon” there). The New Testament does not “condone” slavery; it goes deeper than that:

5. in the church social hierarchy was abolished so that masters and servants became brothers and sisters in Christ You remember passages like Gal. 3:28, There is neither Jew nor Greek, slave nor free, male nor female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus. Or Col. 3:11, Here there is no Greek or Jew, circumcised or uncircumcised, barbarian, Scythian, slave or free, but Christ is all, and is in all. When you became a believer, it didn't matter who you were or what you were, the ground became all level in the body of Christ. All worshipped alike and interacted alike and became equal parts of one family, regardless of their position in society. The slave could teach the master and the master could serve the slave in love because of the transformation of their hearts. So don't let people tell you that the Bible is wrong because it condones slavery; it transforms slavery!

Now the question is, how are we going to apply these next verses today in a society where we don't have a slave class? And the answer is that the great majority of us today function in servile roles in our daily lives. We work at jobs where we're under the authority of bosses and superiors who tell us what to do and how to do it and we have to do what they want done. And even though we may have the freedom to quit if we don't like it, the truth is that most of us just have to go find another master to serve who is going to pay us to do his will and his work. We can't escape being servants in that way, at least until we retire. So, we can take the lessons that Paul gives here to bondservants and apply them directly to ourselves and the overarching primary admonition is this:

III. We Who Serve Should Bring Jesus Honor In All We Do (9-10) First, he says:

1. we should be submissive to those in authority in everything Of course, that doesn't mean we should do something evil if they tell us to, but in all non-moral things we should do what they tell us to do, whether we like it or whether we don't. The first job I ever had at 16 was being the clean-up guy, the janitor, in a machine shop. And one of the first assignments I got was, “Go clean the bathroom!” Let me tell you, you have never seen a dirty bathroom until you've seen one that was used by a dozen or two greasy, dirty, men who are heavy smokers, who could care less about leaving the toilet seat up, much less about cleaning up after themselves, and after the bathroom had been left go for a couple of weeks! Let me tell you, I didn't want to do it, but I did it. I didn't want to stick my hands into the oily coolant reservoirs of lathes and machines and pull out handfuls of metal chips and shavings, but I did it. Why? Because it needed done and I was told to by the employer who was paying me and meeting my needs. Today we in the US protest whatever we don't like, whatever we don't want to do, but one of the great hallmarks of Christianity still is that we are willing to humbly do what we're told by those in authority over us without protest and complaint, whether it's a parent or a boss. But it goes even deeper than that. Paul says:

2. we should truly seek to please them by our service Look with me at Col. 3:22-24. We're not just to try to please them when they're looking to make a good impression and then goof off when they're not. We're to sincerely try to please them, to make them happy and carry out their instructions. Why? Because when we serve them, we're serving Jesus! So we ought to serve them the way we would serve Jesus, with all our hearts, sincerely. Our goal should be to please them well, if at all possible. Wow, won't that transform the way you do your job if you really think about it?! Paul goes on to say in verse 9 of Titus 2 that we should not be argumentative and what he means is that:

3. we should not talk back to them disrespectfully I don't know how many places of employment would actually let you get away with that today, but it sure fits in the home, doesn't it? Young people, you're under the authority of your parents. Your role is to do what they tell you to do, even if you don't want to. And if you're a believer, you should do it without talking back to them in a disrespectful fashion! If you're an employee who wants to honor Jesus with your life, you don't talk back to the boss. You treat him or her with the respect that goes with their position. Then Paul says that:

4. we should not steal from them in any way Where I worked, we had a stockroom full of supplies and it would have been an easy matter to pilfer something you wanted or needed and drop it in your pocket or your lunchbox. Some of our ladies clean houses for people and it would be so easy to see something nice or some money left lay around and drop it in their pocket, but they would never do it because they love Jesus and stealing dishonors Him! As believers, Paul says:

5. we should be entirely trustworthy, showing all good faith, demonstrating to those who hire us or those above us that we can be counted on to do what we're supposed to do and what is right. Everybody else rebels and argues and steals and does whatever they can to get out of work and make life easier for themselves. Everybody else has to be watched and supervised to make sure they're doing what they're supposed to do, but it should not be so among us! We must be trustworthy in all things because we're serving Jesus! We want others to know and love Him. We want them to realize how wonderful He is and that starts with them seeing Him in us first! We want to adorn the doctrine of God our Savior; we want to make the teaching about God our Savior attractive, as the NIV puts it. The way we work, the way we serve, IS evangelism! That was Paul's admonition to slaves in the first century and it's just as important for us today in the 21st.

The great Bible teacher Harry Ironside shares this testimony: When I was a boy... I worked for a Scottish shoemaker, or “cobbler,” as he preferred to be called... named Dan Mackay. He was a forthright Christian and his little shop was a real testimony for Christ in the neighborhood. The walls were literally covered with Bible texts and pictures... On the little counter in front of the bench on which the owner of the shop sat, was a Bible, generally open, and a pile of gospel tracts. No package went out of that shop without a printed message wrapped inside. And whenever opportunity offered, the customers were spoken to kindly and tactfully about the importance of being born again and the blessedness of knowing that the soul is saved through faith in Christ. It was my chief responsibility to pound leather for shoe soles. A piece of cowhide would be cut to suit, then soaked in water. I had a flat piece of iron over my knees and, with a flat-headed hammer, I pounded these soles until they were hard and dry. It seemed an endless operation to me, and I wearied of it many times. What made my task worse was the fact that, a block away, there was another shop that I passed going and coming to or from my home, and in it sat a jolly, godless cobbler who gathered the boys of the neighborhood about him and regaled them with lewd tales that made him dreaded by respectable parents as a menace to the community. Yet, somehow, he seemed to thrive... As I looked in his window, I often noticed that he never pounded the soles at all, but took them from the water, nailed them on, damp as they were, and with the water splashing from them as he drove each nail in. One day I ventured inside,...timidly, I said, "I notice you put the soles on while still wet. Are they just as good as if they were pounded?" He gave me a wicked leer as he answered, "They come back all the quicker this way, my boy!" Feeling I had learned something, I related the instance to my boss and suggested that I was perhaps wasting time in drying out the leather so carefully. Mr. Mackay stopped his work and opened his Bible to the passage that reads, "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of god." "Harry," he said, "I do not cobble shoes just for the four bits and six bits that I get from my customers. I am doing this for the glory of God. I expect to see every shoe I have ever repaired in a big pile at the judgment seat of Christ, and I do not want the Lord to say to me in that day, 'Dan, this was a poor job. You did not do your best here.' I want Him to be able to say, 'Well done, good and faithful servant.'" Then he went on to explain that just as some men are called to preach, so he was called to fix shoes, and that only as he did this well would his testimony count for God. It was a lesson I have never been able to forget. Often when I have been tempted to carelessness, and to slipshod effort, I have thought of dear, devoted Dan Mackay, and it has stirred me up to seek to do all as for Him who died to redeem me. [H. A. Ironside, Illustrations of Bible Truth, Moody Press, 1945, pp. 37-39.] Amen!

Titus: Godly Living In A Decadent Society

Grace Is Our Motive For Godly Living (2:11-15)

In chapter 2 Paul has been giving Titus specific, practical instructions about what godly living looks like for all varieties of people in the church. But now at the close of this chapter, he goes on to talk about the theological basis for godly living. He lays out the reason WHY we should live godly lives and he sums it up in one word, grace. We have been the recipients of God's grace! Look with me at verse (11). What a simple statement, yet amazingly rich with meaning:

I. The Grace Of God Has Provided Salvation For All People You see, every human being is sinful and every human being is lost and that includes you - and me, of course. The Bible says that we were enemies of God and were by nature objects of His wrath. In other words, our sins had to be justly punished and for them we deserved an eternity in hell. But we have such an amazing, gracious God that:

1. He has provided pardon for the penalty of sin and freedom from its power through sending His Son Jesus to die for us on the cross. He did not want to live without us, so He made a way for us to be restored to Him. Jesus bore the penalty of our sins in His own body on the tree, instead of us receiving that penalty. He saved us! But there's even more to it! He placed His Holy Spirit inside us when we believed and freed us from the power of sin by giving us a brand-new nature that is pure and holy. So now we have His power NOT to sin! That's what salvation is, and grace means that:

2. we did not deserve this salvation and could never obtain it ourselves. G. W. Knight said, When a person works an eight-hour day and receives a fair day's pay for his time, that is a wage. When a person competes with an opponent and receives a trophy for his performance, that is a prize. When a person receives appropriate recognition for his long service or high achievements, that is an award. But when a person is not capable of earning a wage, can win no prize, and deserves no award--yet receives such a gift anyway--that is a good picture of God's unmerited favor. This is what we mean when we talk about the grace of God. [G.W. Knight, Clip-Art Features for Church Newsletters, p. 53.] God provided for us what we did not deserve. In fact, we deserved just the opposite, yet God gave salvation to us anyway! He provided for us what we could never obtain for ourselves, no matter how hard we tried. That's grace! And what's more:

3. He has made this salvation available for all people as a free gift Anybody can have it! No matter who they are or where they live or how good or bad they are! No matter whether they have been a terrorist or a persecutor like Saul or a self-righteous religious person like the Pharisees. We don't have to do anything; we CAN'T do anything to get it. God says, "Here it is; it's a free gift! Believe on My Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, and you will be saved!" That's it! Pure and simple!

You may have heard that this week Ravi Zacharias, one of the most renowned Christian apologists and evangelists of our generation died of cancer at 74. He was born in Chennai and grew up in Delhi, India. His family was Anglican, but he was a "skeptic" until the age of 17 when he tried to commit suicide by swallowing poison. While he was in the hospital, a local Christian worker brought him a Bible and told his mother to read to him from John 14, which contains Jesus' words to Thomas. Ravi said it was John 14:19 that touched him as the defining paradigm, "Because I live, you also will live," and he thought, "This may be my only hope: A new way of living. Life as defined by the Author of Life." He committed his life to Christ, praying, "Jesus if You are the one who gives life as it is meant to be, I want it. Please get me out of this hospital bed well, and I promise I will leave no stone unturned in my pursuit of truth. [Wikipedia] He shares,"...the person of Jesus Christ transformed my life. He doesn't only change what we do, He changes what we want to do and the meaning that He imparted to me - I was 17 then, I'm 73 now, so 56 years have gone by, my love for Christ has grown deeper, my meaning has grown stronger and I know why He placed me in this world, to be a follower of His and to be an instrument of His choosing." [www.youtube.com/watch?v=XESiL7h3ZRO]. We'll miss Ravi, but God saved him! God saved me. And I hope God has saved you! If not, He will if you ask! The grace of God provided this salvation for us, but the result is that it transformed our lives! Paul goes on to say:

II. The Grace Of God Trains Us To Live Godly Lives In This Decadent Age (12) When we experience salvation, it changes us. It trains us to live in new ways. First of all:

1. it trains us to renounce the evil way of living the world around us follows People in the world around us do what they want. They do what they think is right or what they think is beneficial to them. They live as though there is no God. Even if they think He exists, it doesn't seem to make much difference to them. But God's grace has changed all that for us:

a. we no longer live as though God doesn't exist or matter We no longer think, "I'm the master of my own destiny! I can do anything I want! I'll do what I desire, what feels good to me!" Rather:

b. because of Him we reject sinful pleasures that others pursue Because of His grace that has rescued us from the awful penalty of our sins, we don't sleep with our boyfriend or girlfriend, we don't watch pornography on the internet or sleazy movies on cable, we don't party and get drunk or drown our sorrows in pills, we don't abort our baby because it's not a convenient time to have one. There are a thousand things we reject, that we refuse to do, even though people all around us are doing them, because of the amazing grace that God has showered on us! After He paid such a price to give us such a gift, how can we forget that and do whatever we want? So, it is His very grace that:

2. it trains us to live lives that are devoted to God As Ravi said, we now have a new meaning, a new purpose in life, to follow Him, to go where He sends, to do what He says and to act like He wants us to. We are His instruments. So, God's grace trains us, in the same way that we train up our children, to live:

a. lives that are self-controlled instead of yielding to every impulse we have. We don't do everything we feel like doing, we don't say everything we feel like saying or look at everything we feel like looking at. We don't blow up every time we feel like blowing up or criticize every time we feel like criticizing. We don't eat or drink everything we feel like eating or drinking and we don't go everywhere we feel like going. We temper our lives by placing them under the control of the Holy Spirit, so that we live:

b. lives that are filled with righteous behavior We do what is just and fair and right and good. We say what helps and builds up and encourages the other person. We go out of our way to be kind and meet needs and help others. We forgive and overlook faults because we've been forgiven. We share what we have, even the Good News that has saved us. Why? We can't help it because the grace of God has invaded our lives to such a degree that we could not possibly do otherwise!

Jesus told a story about a man whose master forgave him a tremendous amount of debt instead of throwing him in prison, just because he asked for it. It's a picture of grace, of the immense grace God has lavished upon all of us who believe by saving us. But in the story that man turns around and refuses to forgive someone who owes him much less and has him thrown into prison. How could he do that? After receiving so much grace, how could you possibly NOT show grace to someone else? Jesus' point was that you can't! If you really and truly have received the grace of God and realize what you've received, it transforms your life. It trains you to live a new and different way, a godly way! And it does even more than that. Paul says:

III. The Grace Of God Causes Us To Look Confidently For The Coming Of Jesus (13) I hope you'll pardon me for bringing up a theological side note. This verse is one that has been referred to down through the ages to prove that Jesus:

1. He is our God and our Savior! He is not merely the Son of God as a secondary being, but is Himself our God! We worship Jesus as God of very God, as the creed puts it. And when any other religion or sect says that He is merely the Son of God, that He is less than the Father, we say, "NO! He is our God and we worship Him just as we worship the Father and the Holy Spirit!" We worship one God but He exists in three persons and ALL are equally God! People say, "I'm OK with talking about God, but I don't want to hear about your Jesus!" Friend, Jesus IS our God! We HAVE to talk about Him! Now, this verse tells us something that we as believers have almost forgotten in our day:

2. His appearing is our blessed hope! *During the American Civil War, General William T. Sherman drove his troops on his decisive march to the sea. In a fort on Kennesaw Mountain, he left behind a small contingent of men to guard the rations. General John Bell Hood of the Confederate Army attacked the fort, and a fierce battle followed. One-third of Sherman's men were killed or wounded and J. M. Corse, the general in command, was severely injured. Just as he was about to hoist the white flag and surrender, a message came through the signal corps set up on a chain of mountains. General Sherman was within fifteen miles of the fort and sent the message: "Hold fast. We are coming." Those few words so encouraged the defenders that they held on and kept the fort from falling into the hands of their attackers. [Our Daily Bread, Copyright RBC Ministries, Grand Rapids, MI.] The knowledge that Sherman was definitely coming gave them hope; it became their hope! R. W. De Haan says, The fact that our Savior is coming again gives us hope. It makes us want to stand our ground. It encourages us to continue fighting the good fight of faith. It assures us of victory. Fierce as the battle may rage and difficult as the conflict may be as we serve Him, we dare not give up. Christ is coming again! That IS our hope and it is a blessed hope, the thing we look most forward to in life because:*

3. His appearing will reveal His glory in all its fullness! As Mt. 24 says, For as the lightning comes from the east and shines as far as the west, so will be the coming of the Son of Man.... Then will appear in heaven the sign of the Son of Man, and then all the tribes of the earth will mourn, and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. The whole world will see the awesome greatness of our Jesus and the reality of their own destruction and they shall wail, but when we see it, we shall rejoice! He will come to receive us to Himself, set the world straight, and set up HIS kingdom on earth! That's our hope! That's what we're waiting for! That's what we're living for! That's what makes every difficult moment of struggle in this world, every struggle against sin, every effort to reach others worth it all. Jesus is coming! The early church believed that strongly and lived out of it and it changed their world. We must not let the sophistication and the rationality of our age take that away from us! God saved us by grace through Jesus and by grace Jesus has given us the awesome privilege of knowing that He is coming again! Let's live, not as if it were true, but because it is true! But, back to godly living; in verse 14 Paul explains:

IV. The Purpose Of Jesus' Gracious Self-Sacrifice (14) Jesus sacrificed His life at unbelievably immense personal cost, not merely to pay for our sins, but to accomplish three very important things. First, He did it:

1. to release us from all lawless behavior The Bible in Basic English says, ...so that he might make us free from all wrongdoing. His purpose was that we might have the ability to stop sinning, to stop acting as if His Divine law didn't exist and doing whatever we want. Second, He did it:

2. to purify us to become His very own people He is holy; He is pure. He cannot be joined to anything evil. Yet He loved us and wanted us to belong to Him, to be His own people, His own family, His very children, the Bible says. So how could He do it? Only by the greatest act of grace the universe has ever seen, by sacrificing Himself for us. His grace purified us so that we could become His very own and that is what we ARE. And as 1 John 3:3 says, ...everyone who thus hopes in him purifies himself as he is pure. He died to make us pure so we could be His and His grace moves us to live pure lives all our days! Then third, He did it:

3. to create in us a zeal to do good works The Bible says about Jesus' life on earth, He went about doing good! - Acts 10:38. He had a zeal, a passion, a consuming drive to continually do good everywhere He went, for everyone He met, in whatever way He could. And Jesus sacrificed Himself to create that same zeal in us! The founder of the Methodist movement, John Wesley, is often credited with giving this as a rule of life, though it is found in the writings of others: Do all the good you can, By all the means you can, In all the ways you can, In all the places you can, At all the times you can, To all the people you can, As long as ever you can. Regardless of who crafted it, that's the best description I've ever heard of what it means to have a zeal for doing good, and that's what Jesus died to produce in us!

Contrary to what you might hear so often today, Paul's point is that Jesus didn't just die for us so our sins could be forgiven and we could go to heaven and be happy when we die! He died for us to transform our lives in this world into lives like His own, lives of holiness and purity overflowing with good works! And because of that, Paul concludes this chapter by exhorting Titus that:

V. God's Instructions To Us Are To Be Declared With Authority (15) You see, these instructions to live godly lives that God has given us through the pen of the Apostle Paul:

1. they are not merely the opinions of some human being which can be accepted or rejected at will. They are not optional and they should not be presented as such. They should be declared! Where believers need to be taught, they should be declared as strong exhortations, "Live this way!" Where believers are living wrong, they should be declared as a rebuke, "Stop living that way!" Don't let anyone discredit what you have to say with, "Well, that's your opinion..." or "Well, that's one way of looking at it but there are other ways..." These instructions:

2. they are commands of God which are to be obeyed! Let me just remind you of a few of them from this chapter: Love others! Be self-controlled! Be kind! Don't slander people! Be submissive to your husband! Submit to your masters (those in authority over you)! Don't argue! Don't steal! Have sound speech! Be pure! Those commands come to you and I with the very authority of God Himself; He expects us to obey them. He commands us to obey them! Are you doing them? Are you really living the godly life He has commanded you to live or do you pick and choose which precepts you will obey?

Gary Inrig says, Prior to her coronation, Queen Elizabeth sent out to her friends and various Commonwealth dignitaries engraved invitations which read like this: "We greet you well. Whereas we have appointed the second day of June 1953 for the solemnity of our coronation, these are therefore to will and to command, all excuses set apart, that you make your personal attendance upon us, at the time above mentioned, there to do and to perform such services as shall be required of you." A queen does not request attendance, she commands it. The striking phrase in that invitation occurs in the very middle: "All excuses set apart." When a monarch expresses her will and issues her command, her subjects respond without hesitation or excuses. But we serve One who is far greater, the Lord Jesus Christ, King of kings and Lord of lords... Our King, Jesus, has expressed His will and issued His commands; they are to be obeyed and all our excuses must be set aside. [Hearts of Iron, Feet of Clay, by Gary Inrig. Moody Press, 1979. Pages 68-69.] Yet we obey Him, not out of the fear of punishment like we might obey an earthly king. He has the right to command us and we obey Him without hesitation because of the great grace He has lavished upon us in saving us when we didn't deserve it. How could we do any less?

Titus: Godly Living In A Decadent Society

How We Must Act While Living In A Decadent Society (3:1-8)

Today we move into the third chapter of Paul's letter to Titus. In chapter 1 Paul explained the conduct that is expected of church leaders. In chapter 2 Paul explained the conduct expected of believers as members of the Christian community. Now, in chapter 3 he goes on to explain:

I. How We Should Act In Our Society As Christian Citizens Christians have a duty, not only to one another, but to the government and the society in which they live. As I shared earlier in this series, Titus was serving on the island of Crete in the Mediterranean Sea and Crete and its people had a very low moral reputation, so believers had to live in the midst of some pretty vile things that went on around them regularly. And sadly, in the last two weeks we've seen some pretty awful things across America, from murder and abuse of power to rioting and looting in our major cities. Yet Crete was also a province of the Roman Empire, governed by a proconsul, a military commander, so believers there had to live under Roman government, Roman laws and Roman taxes, and likewise, we live under American government and laws and taxes. And Paul wanted to clarify for them what the duty of a believer is to government and society, so he lays out seven things that we are to be careful to do in this regard. Look with me at verses (1-2). First of all, Paul says that:

1. we are to voluntarily submit to rulers and authorities who are over us The word submit in the Greek is actually a military term and it refers to the way that troops arrange themselves under the command of a leader. It indicates an attitude of voluntarily doing what those who are in authority over you tell you. Now why should we do that? Well, Paul explains his thinking more clearly elsewhere. Look with me at Rom. 13:1-2. God is the one who not only instituted human government but, Paul says, He actually controls the very people who are in those places of authority. HE puts them there! Now think about this for a moment. The Roman Emperor when Paul wrote this was none other than Nero! PBS says, The Roman emperor Nero is considered one of history's greatest criminals. His name has become synonymous with evil, as historic accounts have accused him of killing his stepbrother, his wife and his mother, as well persecuting Christians and instigating the devastating Great Fire of Rome. He's the one who, not long after, beheaded Paul and crucified Peter upside down and burned Christians as living torches to light his gardens! And God says, "I put him there; obey him whether he's a good ruler or not!" But how far does this go? Look at 1 Pet. 2:13-15a. It applies to emperors, governors, local magistrates, police, to every human authority. Whether we like them or not, whether they're good or not, our attitude is to be one of submission, not rebellion. I can only think of the recent scenes of protesters yelling in the faces of policemen and taunting them, trying to get them to react violently. It reminds me of the Zealots who plotted constantly to overthrow Roman rule and plotted terrorist attacks and we have the same thing going on today. We can't let that attitude grow in us; God says His will is to honor Him by submitting to authorities. And Paul goes on in Titus 3:1 to say:

2. we are to obey their laws and decrees If they decree we have to pay taxes, we pay them. If they declare a curfew, we abide by the curfew. If they tell us we must serve on a jury, we serve. The only exception is where a ruler commands us to do something that God forbids. For instance, soon after this all citizens were commanded to worship the Emperor. Christians refused and for 250 years many of them died because of it. But in all other things we're to obey, whether we like it or not. Now thank God that in America, we get the opportunity for some input into all this. We can run for office, we can vote good people into positions, we can lobby legislators to pass beneficial laws. We can write letters and gather petitions to declare what we don't like. We can even hold peaceful public assemblies to express our concern about things like racial prejudice or abortion and draw attention to these issues. We have freedoms the world never dreamed of throughout history and thank God for them, but the bottom line is that God wants us to obey the laws of our society, as long as they don't go against His commands. Third, Paul says at the end of verse 1 that:

3. we are to be ready to do good works that bless our society Throughout history Christians have been the ones to care for the sick and feed the poor. During the Antonine plague of the second century which might have been the first appearance of smallpox in the west, perhaps a quarter of the population of the Roman Empire died. But Christians were the ones found caring for the sick and Christianity grew. During the Cyprian plague of the third century, which might have been related to ebola, while pagans were casting their own loved ones into the streets to die at the first sign of the disease, Christians, "heedless of danger, took charge of the sick, attending to their every need," according to Dionysius. In the bubonic plague, Martin Luther urged believers to stay and minister to the sick instead of fleeing to safety. I think of the dear doctors and nurses of Samaritan's purse running into the front lines of danger to care for them even today. It is often Christians who go and help those whose lives are ruined by natural disasters like floods and hurricanes. And whether it's buying groceries for the elderly lady across the street who can't go to the store or delivering meals on wheels to the seniors or visiting the lonely in a nursing home, those types of good things are what Christians should always stand ready to do for their society in the Name of Jesus. Now, in verse 2 this fourth thing we're told to do really hits home:

4. we are to malign or slander no one Literally, NO ONE. And that sits hard with us Americans. If we don't like our neighbor, we tell how bad they are on social media. If our church does something we don't like, we post negative things on Facebook and get a hundred people to agree with us and comment back negatively. Of course, this speaks to the attitude of racial prejudice that is the focus of the events of the last couple weeks in our country; we should speak no evil of people just because they're black - or white or of some other race! But just wait until I mention that, given the context of this passage, this applies to our governmental leaders too! Bashing senators and congressmen and presidents and governors and other officials is the order of the day! If we don't like their personality, if we don't like their policies, we Christians are as outspoken in maligning and slandering and calling them names as the rest of the world whether in person or on the internet. Well, let me share with you a little-known verse. In Ex. 22:28 God gives Moses this law up on Mt. Sinai: "You shall not revile God, nor curse a ruler of your people." And before you say, "Well, that was for Israel under the law", let me show you how Paul regarded it. He was on trial before the Sanhedrin in Acts 23 when the High Priest commanded those who stood near him to smack him in the mouth and he responded with name calling, God is going to strike you, you white-washed wall!" But others said, "Would you revile God's High Priest?" And listen to how Paul responded in verse 5, ... "I did not know, brothers, that he was the high priest, for it is written, 'You shall not speak evil of a ruler of your people.'" He apologized immediately! He recognized that he had spoken evil of a ruler and displeased God and he humbly repented, even though this man was evil and breaking the law by having him struck at that moment! No matter how we feel about them, God doesn't want us slandering those in authority over us whether it's calling the police pigs or using curse words toward officials. We're to speak evil of NO ONE! You know, one of the nicest compliments I've ever heard at funerals is, "He never said an unkind word about anybody!" That's what we're striving for. Next, Paul says we are to avoid quarreling; that means:

5. we are to avoid both verbal strife and physical violence We're literally to be no fighters, whether with our fists or our mouths. I doubt that many of us are looking to get involved in a physical altercation, but you know how some people are always looking for an argument and they let that argument turn into an all-out verbal war that severs relationships. Sadly, that can happen with believers and we've seen it happen among us several times over the years. But that argumentative, angry, quarreling attitude is not to be found among us. It's not that we're just to avoid it; it's not to be part of our character, of who we are. But instead, Paul says:

6. we are to be gentle and considerate of others The Greek word has the thought of moderation, forbearance or patience toward other people. Oh, if we would only learn to treat one another with gentleness and consideration in our community, how that would please God! And the last phrase of verse 2 actually begins with a participle, showing or demonstrating perfect courtesy toward all people in the ESV. The NAS says, showing every consideration... So this phrase is a further exposition, a spelling out of what he means by being gentle. He's saying:

7. we are to demonstrate perfect meekness toward everyone The Greek word is a synonym for gentleness, mildness, and meekness and Paul makes a point to say we're to show "every kind of meekness to every person". So, it applies in every situation, in every realm of life, and with every person we interact with. We might put it like this: our entire life is to be characterized by genuine humility toward others in the world around us.

Most of you would recognize the name of Chuck Norris. He's a TV and movie actor and martial arts expert and an outspoken Christian. One day when he was filming his television series in Texas, after work he stopped to have something to drink. He was alone and as he was relaxing in a corner booth, a big man walked up and said in an irritated tone that Norris was sitting in HIS booth. Norris says, "I didn't like his tone or his implicit threat, but I said nothing and moved to another booth. A few minutes later, though, the big fellow headed back in my direction. 'Here it comes,' I thought, ...[but] when he arrived at my new booth, he looked directly at me. 'You're Chuck Norris,' he said. I nodded. 'You could have whipped my butt back there a few minutes ago,' he said. 'Why didn't you?' 'What would it have proved?' I asked. He thought that over for a moment and then offered me his hand. 'No hard feelings?' he said. 'None,' I said and shook his hand. I had avoided a confrontation and made a friend. I won by losing." [Reader's Digest, Mar 1996. Page 37.] Gentleness, meekness, if we would all practice it daily in every situation with everyone, what a change it would make in our society and how many would be drawn toward our Savior! Well, Paul goes on to explain:

II. Why We Should Act In A Godly Fashion In Society in verses (3-7) Look at verse (3). He says:

1. before salvation we used to act the way that people in our society act We used to be like that other guy, like that tough guy, like that self-centered woman, like that demanding boss who doesn't care, like that disrespectful kid, like that lewd man. We were them! We walked in their shoes and behaved the ways that they do and:

a. it was the exact opposite of the behavior God expects Of course, everyone's life story is different, and I wasn't the town bully, but even as a young teen before I was saved. I walked in those shoes. I stole, I lied to protect myself, I cursed and I lusted - not all the time, but all on purpose, because I wanted to. I lived a self-centered life that was exactly opposite of the values that God has. But Paul's point is that:

b. we must now act differently in order to impact people Listen to 1 Pet. 4:3-4 NLT, You have had enough in the past of the evil things that godless people enjoy—their immorality and lust, their feasting and drunkenness and wild parties, and their terrible worship of idols. Of course, your former friends are surprised when you no longer plunge into the flood of wild and destructive things they do. So they slander you. We spent enough time doing all that stuff, acting like they do. It was all wasted time. Now we need to surprise them, shock them, impact them, by acting and reacting differently than they do or than we used to. If we act in the same way toward others around us, they don't see a difference!

Now look at verses (4-7). Paul says:

2. Jesus saved us from that ungodly way of life! He rescued us from it! Why? Paul says:

a. He saved us out of His own goodness, mercy and love for mankind I wouldn't have saved me! I wasn't worth it! I didn't deserve it! I wouldn't have reached down into the life of a teenage boy who lived that way in a small country town who would never amount to anything and arrange his life so that he would meet Jesus and be changed! He did it simply because He loves human beings and has mercy on them because He is a good God and doesn't want people to perish.

b. He did not save us because of anything good we had done, not even the best of us who were raised in the best of homes and taught to do the best of things and who were pretty decent at it. The Scripture says, There is NONE righteous, NO, not one! None of us were worth saving, worth Jesus coming and dying for us, worth Him sacrificing Himself to take us to heaven with Him! Yet He did it:

c. He saved us through regenerating our hearts and giving us His Spirit When I became convicted of my sinfulness and my lostness and confessed my sins and placed my trust in Jesus, I was changed into another person. The Spirit of Jesus came into me and I was born all over again; I was transformed. Or to put it another way:

d. He washed away our sins and renewed our very nature The penalty for all my sins, past, present and future was imputed to Him at the cross and I was washed white as snow. The guilt of all my sins was completely and permanently pardoned and the Spirit of God killed my old sinful nature and, in its place, created a brand new one made just like that of Jesus Christ, pure and holy and righteous. Or as we like to sing, "The Resurrected King has resurrected ME!" Hallelujah! But there's more:

e. through Jesus He made us heirs of an eternal life with Him By giving me the life of Christ in my body, He gave me a guaranteed future, a life that is eternal, everlasting, that is not cancelled by death and one that propels me into a glorious new existence that I will spend together with Him in His Kingdom forever!

Oh, what amazing things God has done for this wicked young boy and for all of us! And in verse 8 Paul gets back to making His point:

III. The Importance Of Our Godly Behavior In Society (8) After all God has done for us, we can't live lives like we used to; we have to devote ourselves to good works, to living the kind of devoted, godly life that God commands. We have to insist on that in the church for two reasons. First:

1. this kind of behavior is excellent and beautiful It is the right way to live, the way God intended mankind to live and it is lovely to see lived out in society. And second:

2. this kind of behavior is beneficial to ourselves and others Though we don't do it for this reason, living right brings blessings on ourselves. The Bible says, the way of transgressors is hard! Examples of the fact that living wrongly brings all kinds of needless suffering upon ourselves are everywhere. On the other hand, living the right way, God's way, ends up bringing blessing upon us in a myriad of ways that would have been lost otherwise. But more importantly it is beneficial to others. No one yet was ever saved, was ever rescued from a path that leads to hell and into a transformed life, by a Christian living an ungodly life in front of them.

We have a responsibility to the society and culture in which God has placed us to live submissive, obedient, gentle, considerate lives filled with good works and that can't just be some religious jargon we spout. It has to be real in us and we each need to examine ourselves on every one of these points. Many of us were thrilled as we watched the successful launch of SpaceX's manned Falcon 9 rocket a few days ago. Everything went perfectly. However, one day in early 1967 NASA technicians and a crew of three astronauts at Cape Kennedy were conducting a ground test of the Apollo 1, the spacecraft that would hopefully put the first man on the moon. At 6:31 p.m. the technicians in the control room heard one of the astronauts shout over the radio, "We've got a fire in the cockpit!" On the television monitor they saw the white flash of an explosion inside the command module, and then smoke and darkness. They heard a scream and then silence. By the time the technicians were able to open the three hatches and get to the crewmen, Gus Grissom, Ed White, and Roger Chaffee had burned to death. It turns out that even though NASA had instituted a "zero- defects" policy that applied to all contractors and subcontractors on the Apollo 1 project, an investigation after the fire revealed that, not only had every company fallen short of that standard, but each company had also made design decisions that made a dangerous situation deadly. It was found that the spacecraft actually had over 100 "open items." An open item was a component that could not stand up to the heat, pressure, speed, or vibration that it would be subjected to during space flight or reentry. It had been decided not to reproduce an earth atmosphere inside the cabin but to use pure oxygen. The danger of fire was high since there were many types of combustible materials in the cabin. In the case of fire, the plan was to vent all of the oxygen out into space in order to smother the fire in a vacuum. Meanwhile the astronauts would breathe oxygen from their own spacesuits. What everyone overlooked was the fact that while the Apollo 1 was sitting on the launch pad there was no outer-space vacuum into which to vent the oxygen. So when there was an electrical short circuit, sparks ignited some nylon material. Flames spread quickly and three men died. [Vista, Apr 1993. Pages 4-5] I wonder if we looked honestly at the details of our lives, would we find a bunch of "open items", flaws large or little, like the ones Paul points out to Titus? If so, it could well prove fatal, not to us, but to the very ones we say that we want so much to help and to bring to Jesus who are all around us.

Philemon - A Beautiful Story Of Restoration OUTLINE

- 1-3 The Greeting Of Paul
- 4-7 The Character Of Philemon
- 8-21 The Change In Onesimus
- 22-25 The Conclusion

The New Testament book of Philemon is a letter that the Apostle Paul wrote during his first imprisonment at Rome to a friend named Philemon who lived in the city of Colossae. He wrote concerning Onesimus who had been a slave of Philemon's and had evidently run away to Rome where he somehow met Paul and came to faith in Christ. Paul disciplined him and was now sending him home to Philemon with this letter. Paul was interceding for Onesimus as a new man in Christ and urging Philemon to forgive and receive him back, now as a brother. It is only a brief letter, but there is much that we can learn for ourselves from it.

I. The Relationship Between Christians (1-3) Even in a simple greeting like this, we can learn much about the relationships that we have with one another as believers in Christ. First, we are:

- 1. brethren We are members of the same family with God as our Father. We share a common spiritual ancestry, a common spiritual life, a common heavenly home and a common future inheritance. We are also:
- 2. beloved The Greek word is agape. We have a love for one another that is greater than that of an earthly brother or sister. It is a sacrificial, God-given love, a pure unselfish love. We are also:
- 3. fellow workers We have different talents, but all have the same purpose and occupation which is to serve God and work together to advance His Kingdom. At the same time, we are:
- 4. fellow soldiers We're in the same army, the Lord's army, fighting the same spiritual battle together against our common enemy, the devil and his forces. And lastly, we are:
- 5. fellow worshippers We are the church, the ecclesia in Greek, a called-out assembly, a chosen separated group different from the rest of the world in that we belong to Christ and we worship Him alone. Now skip a verse and we can see:

II. The Character Of A Growing Christian (5) Paul here tells what he has heard from others regarding his friend Philemon, good things that should be true of all of us:

- 1. he displays love for the saints, and for ALL the saints, not just a select group of friends. This implies understanding and patience with those who may have some differences, as well as having a heart that is touched by the plight of other believers who are in need of help, believers he may not even know personally. But most importantly, this love is not just an emotion; he is moved to do ACTS of love, to do something do display his love in practical ways.
- 2. he displays faith in Christ It is not just that he believes correct doctrine, but that he exhibits his faith in his personal life. He trusts Christ for his needs, obeys His commands, gives as He leads, shares his faith with others, prays consistently and so on.
- 3. he refreshes the hearts of the saints (6-7) By his loving, obedient behavior he becomes a source of joy and encouragement to other believers. As he interacts with them and shares with them, they see all the good things of Christ displayed in him. He is becoming more and more Christlike and they are discovering more and more the things of Christ in him. And then, note here some things concerning Paul himself about:

III. The Prayer Life Of A Growing Christian (4) It is marked by two things:

- 1. thanksgiving When Paul thought of Philemon and remembered his love and faith, he ALWAYS gave thanks, every time. It was not some formality, but a continual process. Paul was always thankful, as we should be.
- 2. intercession What Paul prays for Philemon is in (6). He prayed for Philemon's spiritual growth, that he would be effective in sharing and that what was displayed in his life would be more and more Christ-like.

The prayer life of a growing Christian becomes more and more wrapped up in thanksgiving and intercession for others and less and less concerned with personal needs. Compare verse 22; he left it up to others to pray him out of prison! But now Paul gets down to the subject that he is actually writing about and as we consider how he does it, we see:

IV. The Approach Of A Wise Christian Paul's intent is to ask Philemon to receive his runaway slave, Onesimus, back and it is instructive to us to note how he approaches this brother who has been a close friend.

1. he did not command Philemon what to do (8) Paul indicates that he could have, that he had the right to. Why?

a. he had the authority of Christ as an apostle and not only that:

b. he had the authority of principle What he was telling Philemon to do was the proper course of action for a believer; it was the biblical way to act.

So, he could have said, "Philemon, as an apostle I command you to receive Onesimus" or "Philemon, the teachings of Christ tell you that you have to receive Onesimus." This is the way that many of us choose to approach others, in a direct and straight forward manner demanding obedience. We either use whatever authority we have in the relationship to force it or give the person a lecture on what the Bible says about what they should do. But Paul didn't. Instead:

2. he appealed to him as a beloved friend (9) It is interesting that the word appeal in the Greek is parakaleo, a term used of the Holy Spirit that means one called alongside to help. Paul says, "I'm not writing you as a boss, but as a loving brother who wants to come alongside you and help you know what to do when Onesimus comes home. I'm just an old man, and now a Roman prisoner, not some official with authority. But at the same time, elders are wise and one who is in prison for Christ is certainly worth listening to. I'm not much, but what little I can do, I really want to help you in this matter." Oh, if more of us believers would learn to use this kind of grace, to come to others saying, "Can I help you?" instead of, "Let me tell you how it is." Love wins over authority every time! And that applies to pastors dealing with their flocks, to parents dealing with their children, even bosses dealing with their workers. But now Paul goes on to tell Philemon what he has not yet heard, the news about the change in Onesimus' life. And in that we can learn about:

V. The Change In A Genuine Christian (10-14) Paul is not simply advocating some general principle like, "Be kind to runaway slaves." He is writing to commend Onesimus on the basis that he is now a transformed person. Paul has won him to Christ while in prison. What joy that must have been for Paul, to have won a convert while chained at the wrist to a Roman guard! But he describes the change in Onesimus, saying:

1. he used to be unprofitable Onesimus was not a trusted, beloved slave; He was evidently a useless, good-for-nothing one. There is a play on words here in the Greek. The name Onesimus means profitable, but he wasn't! Yet:

2. now he was profitable and he proved it by being useful to Paul in prison. How odd that a slave would have to be saved in order to learn to be a good servant! It is only as a result of our salvation that we can truly be servants like Christ! The point is that servanthood is not a matter of social position, but of the heart. God saves us to serve, to be useful to Him and to others. So:

3. Paul was sending back a different man and he was concerned that Philemon recognize that right off the bat. We all have a hard time with that. If a person comes out of a bad background with a sordid past, it is hard for us to believe that he is now saved and is actually different; we're reluctant to trust him. Paul is exhorting Philemon to step out in faith and trust that Onesimus is different and that he has proved himself so. And note how Paul is also concerned that he himself display:

VI. The Action Of An Honest Christian in this matter:

1. he kept the letter of the law He sent Onesimus back to Philemon and Onesimus went back voluntarily. Both recognized that Onesimus had a legal obligation; he belonged to Philemon. Becoming a Christian does not place a person above their obligations, even what we may see as the unjust obligation of being owned as a slave. What a testimony that Onesimus returned himself to Philemon; it's like a thief returning what he stole to the owner to show he is different. We need to see more of this type of honesty. And notice:

2. he did it against his own preference Paul would have liked to keep Onesimus with him. He needed companionship and also practical help because he was confined, but that would have infringed on Philemon's right as his owner and Paul refused to do it. Sometimes our obligations go against our preferences or strong desires, but, like Paul and Onesimus, we must keep them anyway! But now Paul describes the new relationship between Philemon and Onesimus and we see:

VII. The Relationship Of A Fellow Christian Paul sends Onesimus back as a slave, but more than that. He says:

1. God used his running away to the benefit of all Onesimus intended it for an evil purpose, to hurt his master and free himself illegitimately, but in the process, he got saved. Now he comes back to be a true servant at heart who has been profitable to Paul and will be to Philemon. And most importantly, he himself got eternal life! So often God works like this. An unsaved person may do many things contrary to God. He may try to commit suicide and be rescued; he may steal and be caught, or whatever. But God may use those very things to bring that person to Christ and to make them to be a benefit to others and a blessing to society! And in doing this:

2. God changed the relationship of the two men Onesimus ran away a slave, but came back a brother, and a beloved one in Christ. As a believer Philemon had loved Onesimus before, but how much more he would love him now! It changed their relationship. They may still have been master and slave, but they were now equal brethren before the Lord. They may have kept on functioning in the same day to day roles, but there is now definitely a new relationship. The love of a brother brings the ultimate end of slavery. People always ask why the Bible doesn't condemn slavery outright. Actually it does, but in the first place, slavery in Bible times was nothing like American black slavery and second, both parties coming to faith would kill it anyway. A loving master would treat his servant like a hired workman, as an equal before the Lord, and if he really wanted to leave, a loving master would send him on with his blessing! You see:

3. God made them partners As much as Philemon and Paul were partners in the Gospel, so now Philemon and Onesimus were no longer merely master and servant in earthly tasks, but partners in a heavenly task. Compare Gal. 3:28. In Christ all the distinctions drop away. Jew or Gentile becomes just your ethnic history, not a wall that separates you. Master or slave are jobs you do, but you are one in Christ. We are not men and women, but true partners; we are one in Christ. The Gospel is the great equalizer! Be careful to look at others that way! So now Paul really bares his heart and we can see:

VIII. The Commitment Of A Caring Christian (17-19) First, notice what Paul is offering to do here. It is implied in verse 18 that Onesimus stole from his master. Paul, without even knowing how much, is committing himself to be responsible to repay Onesimus' debt to Philemon. The purpose of verse 19 is to make it a legal, certified document, one that is personally signed in his own hand. But look at Paul's caring. He doesn't just say, "Go home, Onesimus, and God be with you!" or "Go home and I'll send a letter of recommendation." Paul undertook legal and financial responsibility. I wonder if I'd do that. Do we see our brother's troubles as being his own problem or are we willing to get involved, financially if need be?

1. this action pictures imputation for us The word impute means to attribute to another. That is, to charge to another's account, which is what Christ did for us. Compare 2 Cor. 5:21. He did it in two ways:

a. positively Paul says, "Receive him as you would me." That is, "Reckon to him my merit." So, Christ's righteousness is imputed to us; we are received by the Father as Christ Himself.

b. negatively Paul says, "If he owes you anything, put it on my account." So, our sin is imputed to Jesus and He was made sin for us. He took our penalty so that we were freed from it. But that's not all:

2. this action pictures grace for us Paul committed himself to pay what Onesimus could not pay. And Christ did for us what we could not do for ourselves; we had nothing to pay, just like Onesimus! That's grace!

3. this action reminds us of spiritual debt Paul gently reminds Philemon that he had led him to Christ and that was worth far more than any stolen money. Oh, what a debt we owe, not only to the Lord for saving us, but to the one(s) who shared their faith with us and led us to Christ! And now finally as he closes, Paul shows us:

IX. The Trust Of An Experienced Christian (20-21) Paul wrote expecting that Philemon would pay heed to his request and carry it out. This is not a wishful, uncertain letter, but a confident letter. Paul KNEW Philemon (verses 5 and 7); he was always doing the godly thing, abounding in love, refreshing the hearts of the saints by his deeds. Therefore, Paul was confident that he would do even more than what Paul asked, maybe even freeing Onesimus. That is how we have to trust one another. So often we worry over how a brother is going to handle something, whether he or she will or won't react rightly. A solid Christian will have proved themselves trustworthy in the past, so now in the present we have to trust them! The same Holy Spirit who indwells and empowers you, indwells and empowers them. Trust Him to be at work!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises In Christ The Privilege Of The Son - 1:1-4

The Book of Hebrews is usually regarded as full of “deep things that are difficult to understand”, and so we often tend to leave it for the scholars and theologians, except to quote some favorite verses. I guess it’s because we live in an age which values things on the basis that they are “simple, practical and easy to use” and we like information served up to us that way too. But God knows there is something intensely valuable that we gain by grappling and wrestling with truths that are profound and difficult and deep and beyond us. We have a Gospel that is simple enough for a child to receive it and yet deep enough that only the mind of God can comprehend its fullness. We enter our salvation with the mind of a child, but we will only appreciate the salvation we’ve received as we ponder the deeper things God has chosen to reveal in His Word. And the message of Hebrews is as simple as it is deep. A. B. Simpson wrote a hymn whose chorus summed it up like this: All in all forever, Jesus will I sing; Ev’rything in Jesus, And Jesus ev’ry thing. Or to put it another way, in Jesus you have everything, so why are you clinging to all that other stuff? He’s better than the prophets; He’s better than the angels; He’s better than Moses and the law and all the priests and all the sacrifices of the Old Testament and the Tabernacle. When you have Him, you have everything. All the privileges and the promises of God are wrapped in the package of the person of His Son and given to you in Him. To receive it is simple; to comprehend it takes struggling and grappling and pondering and meditating upon the Word and the illumination of the Spirit of God who alone guides us into all truth. It’s a life-long process, but if we don’t enter into it, we miss so much of what God has given us. The writer begins by talking about:

I. How God Revealed Himself In Past Eras (1) God has always been in the business of revealing Himself, of showing Himself to man, of speaking, to use the author’s term. And you’ve had the awesome opportunity through all your years of Sunday School and Bible Study and personal reading to know all the wonderful stories from the Old Testament. But when you think back over it all from Adam to Malachi, you notice a couple things:

1. He spoke with what appears to us as randomness One source used the word fragmented to describe it.

a. His Word came at various times to different people We tend to blur it all together and feel that there was always a prophet around, but in reality, prophets who heard from God were rather rare. 1 Sam. 3:1 says, The boy Samuel ministered before the LORD under Eli. In those days the word of the LORD was rare; there were not many visions. In point of fact, it had been years, maybe generations, since the Lord had spoken to anyone. It was often years apart and it was always to a few rare individuals here and there, now to Moses, then to Samuel, years later to David, later to Elijah and Elisha. It has the appearance of randomness, here and there, now and then, to this one and that, not complete and full. And:

b. His Word came by a variety of methods Sometimes a message was delivered by an angel or by the pre-incarnate Christ Himself appearing as a man. Sometimes it was a dream at night or the person would have a vision in broad daylight! He gave laws and demanded sacrifices and a Tabernacle. But all these things were incomplete. There were many pieces and symbols of God’s wonderful person and plan and of the redemption He would provide, but it was impossible to put it all together. And most often in the Old Testament:

2. He spoke in men we call prophets, meaning one who speaks for God. God would speak and reveal Himself to men and He would speak to the whole community through them. How did it work? Peter explained that:

a. they were moved to speak by the Spirit of God - 2 Pet. 1:20-21 They weren’t just inspired in the common sense of being given good ideas. The Spirit of God moved them and carried them along. He gave them the very words that became our Scriptures. They were holy men, men of God, men of whom the world was not worthy, Heb. 11 says, yet:

b. even they could not fully comprehend, though they tried diligently Compare 1 Pet. 1:10-12. They wanted so bad to know more, to understand the whole, to comprehend God’s person and what He was doing, to grasp the redemption He was going to bring. But they had to be content in not understanding the fragmented revelation they were given, simply trusting that it was given for those who would come later who could put the whole picture together.

Now understand, God knew what He was doing through all those years and it was deliberate. The Old Testament is neither flawed nor inferior. It was God’s word for that time and it was all God’s wise preparation to set the stage and prepare human understanding for what He was about to do; it was getting ready for:

II. How God Has Revealed Himself In This Final Era (2-3) You see, God:

1. He has now spoken once and for all, with absolute finality. He has now revealed Himself completely and there is nothing to add to it. And how did He do it?

2. He has now spoken (literally) in a Son Instead of visions and dreams and words at many times and places, He spoke not through a person, but IN a person. Look with me at how John described it in Jn. 1:1, 14, 18. Even the people who “saw God” never really, fully “saw God”. It’s impossible for us to comprehend the infinite God or even to look upon Him with human eyes, so the infinite, eternal God revealed Himself in a form we could behold. He became what we are. His One and Only Son took human flesh and lived among us so we could truly see the glory of God in Him! And isn’t that what Heb. 1:3 says?

a. the Son is (literally) the “shining forth” of God’s glory in visible flesh You can’t behold the glory of God in all its fullness, so God put His glory in a form you can behold, in the person of His Son. And:

b. He is the express image of God’s substance Everything that God is, the Son is. Jesus told Philip in no uncertain terms in Jn. 14:9, ...“Don’t you know me, Philip, even after I have been among you such a long time? Anyone who has seen me has seen the Father. How can you say, ‘Show us the Father’? When you see Jesus, you see the Father. When you know Jesus, you know the Father. When you receive Jesus, you receive all the fullness of the Godhead in Him, because in Him dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily! And His whole plan from eternity has been to send His Son, to save us through His Son, to exalt His Son, and at last to have all nations worship His Son. Everything God ever wanted to say or do is IN HIS SON! All of His plans and purposes are IN HIS SON! All His character and wisdom and power and majesty and everything He is, is IN HIS SON! And you know His Son!

3. What a privilege it is to know the Son! Look at what Jesus said in Lk. 10:21-24. How blessed we are and most of the time we don’t know it! We complain and we moan and say, “Oh, I wish God would do miracles today like He did for Elijah; I wish He would speak today like He did to Moses; I wish I could see His glory like Israel did...” But those folks longed for what you have! You know the Son! You’ve read His Words, you’ve understood His death and resurrection and you’ve received His person into your own! And in knowing Him, you have been given everything! Once for all forever! If you will only take the time to stop and ponder and comprehend it! Now let’s go back to Heb. 1:2 where the writer talks about:

III. The Son’s Relationship To All Other Things First of all:

1. God appointed Him as heir of all things. And heir doesn’t mean somebody who gets something after a person dies. He is appointed as sole heir. It means He is the Owner! And what He owns is ALL things! It’s all His. He owns and controls it all! The cattle on a thousand hills and the wealth in every mine. All things in heaven above and earth beneath. People, institutions, circumstances, objects, time itself. He is the owner of all things and in Him you have been appointed, guess what? Joint heir, co-heir, co-owner, co-ruler! Eternity will be spent administering it all with Him! Paul told the Corinthians, ...All things are yours, whether Paul or Apollos or Cephas or the world or life or death or the present or the future--all are yours, and you are of Christ, and Christ is of God. – 1 Cor. 3:21-23. Ponder that for a minute when you’re thinking that you’re a nothing and a nobody and you’ve got nothing and you never will have! In Jesus, you’ve got it all! And He’s the Owner because:

2. through Him He made (literally) the “ages” Jesus made it all. All things were made through Him and without Him was not anything made that was made! He is the Creator! And it’s not just talking about the original physical creation. He made the ages, eons, the eras of time, all the things that have been made from moment one until now. All the pages of history were written by Him. All the kings and rulers and countries and inventions and technologies and all the things that ever have been or will be. In fact, the writer says:

3. He carries all things along by His powerful Word, so He is the Sustainer! He literally carries them along, causes them to continue to be and to function. All the processes of the universe, from the flying atoms to the flowing rivers. They all move along to serve His purpose in His plan. All the things He’s created are moving along under His direction toward the goal, toward the consummation of human history when Jesus reigns in all His glory over all the earth and on beyond that forever in a new heaven and a new earth!

That’s who God is and that’s who the Son is, Ruler, Creator, and Sustainer of all things. Ponder that when you get discouraged and think that evil’s winning and there’s no justice anywhere and the world will never be anything but a miserable place full of war and sickness and suffering. He made it all and He’s always been at work in every molecule driving it all onward toward the grand finale when all creation will join to sing our great Redeemer’s praise! And you know Him! You’re in Him and He’s in you! And in Him those “all things” are yours and you will reign with Him forever and ever! Hey, jump up and down and shout hallelujah or do something! And now think about this:

IV. It Is This Son Who Has Provided Our Salvation Look at verse 3. Our salvation didn’t come by Moses or some prophet. It wasn’t done by sacrificing some animal. It wasn’t a cumulative effort of our trying hard for years. It was provided by the SON! Literally, it says:

1. He himself provided complete cleansing of sins It was a one time act, a once-for-all, complete, never-to-be-repeated or needed again, act. He went to a cross and took our sins upon Him and rose from the dead and gave His life to us. DONE! And sometimes we wonder if we can be forgiven, if we have been forgiven. We smear ourselves with guilt that's already been paid for. Why? He is our Redeemer! If the Son sets you free, you're free indeed. He himself bore our sins in His own body on the tree that we might be made the righteousness of GOD in HIM. We're made so clean that we've been given the very righteousness of God Himself. But that's not all. The writer says:

2. having finished He sat down at God's right hand He ascended to heaven and He's not standing there. He sat down on the throne next to the Father. It is finished once and for all, and having no more to do to finish our redemption, He has taken His rightful, exalted, majestic place. He is our King! And one day at the very Name of King Jesus every knee shall bow in heaven and on earth and even under the earth and every tongue will confess that Jesus Christ is Lord! Our God reigns and His Name is Jesus! The old hymn says:

*O worship the King all glorious above and gratefully sing His power and His love
Our Shield and Defender, the Ancient of Days, Pavilioned in splendor and girded with praise!*

It is the Almighty Eternal Son who has become our Redeemer and King. Nobody but Him could provide such a wonderful all-in-all salvation and hold it sure! What a privilege it is to have the One and Only, the Son, to reveal to us all the deep things of God. Let me share an illustration that may help you to visualize what I'm trying to say: Years ago, there was a very wealthy man who, with his devoted young son, shared a passion for art collecting. Together they traveled around the world, adding only the finest art treasures to their collection. Priceless works by Picasso, Van Gogh, Monet and many others adorned the walls of the family estate. The widowed, elderly man looked on with satisfaction, as his only child became an experienced art collector. The son's trained eye and sharp business mind caused his father to beam with pride as they dealt with art collectors around the world. As winter approached, war engulfed the nation, and the young man left to serve his country. After only a few short weeks, his father received a telegram. His beloved son was missing in action. The art collector anxiously awaited more news, fearing he would never see his son again. Within days, his fears were confirmed. The young man had died while rushing a fellow soldier to a medic. Distraught and lonely, the old man faced the upcoming Christmas holidays with anguish and sadness. The joy of the season, a season that he and his son had so looked forward to, would visit his house no longer. On Christmas morning, a knock on the door awakened the depressed old man. As he walked to the door, the masterpieces of art on the walls only reminded him that his son was not coming home. As he opened the door, he was greeted by a soldier with a large package in his hand. He introduced himself to the man by saying, "I was a friend of your son. I was the one he was rescuing when he died. May I come in for a few moments? I have something to show you." As the two began to talk, the soldier told of how the man's son had told everyone of his, not to mention his father's, love of fine art. "I'm an artist," said the soldier, "and I want to give you this." As the old man unwrapped the package, the paper gave way to reveal a portrait of the man's son. Though the world would never consider it the work of a genius, the painting featured the young man's face in striking detail. Overcome with emotion, the man thanked the soldier, promising to hang the picture above the fireplace. A few hours later, after the soldier had departed, the old man set about his task. True to his word, the painting went above the fireplace, pushing aside thousands of dollars of paintings. And then the man sat in his chair and spent Christmas gazing at the gift he had been given. During the days and weeks that followed, the man realized that even though his son was no longer with him, the boy's life would live on because of those he had touched. He would soon learn that his son had rescued dozens of wounded soldiers before a bullet stilled his caring heart. As the stories of his son's gallantry continued to reach him, fatherly pride and satisfaction began to ease the grief. The painting of his son soon became his most prized possession, far eclipsing any interest in the pieces for which museums around the world clamored. He told his neighbors it was the greatest gift he had ever received. The following spring, the old man became ill and passed away. The art world was in anticipation! Unmindful of the story of the man's only son, but in his honor, those paintings would be sold at an auction. According to the will of the old man, all of the art works would be auctioned on Christmas day, the day he had received his greatest gift. The day soon arrived and art collectors from around the world gathered to bid on some of the world's most spectacular paintings. Dreams would be fulfilled this day; greatness would be achieved as many would claim "I have the greatest collection." The auction began with a painting that was not on any museum's list. It was the painting of the man's son. The auctioneer asked for an opening bid. The room was silent. "Who will open the bidding with $100?" he asked. Minutes passed. No one spoke. From the back of the room came, "Who cares about that painting? It's just a picture of his son. Let's forget it and go on to the good stuff." More voices echoed in agreement. "No, we have to sell this one first," replied the auctioneer. "Now, who will take the son?" Finally, a friend of the old man spoke. "Will you take ten dollars for the painting? That's all I have. I knew the boy, so I'd like to have it." "I have ten dollars. Will anyone go higher?" called the auctioneer. After more silence, the auctioneer said, "Going once, going twice. Gone." The gavel fell. Cheers filled the room and someone exclaimed, "Now we can get on with it and we can bid on these treasures!" The auctioneer looked at the audience and announced the auction was over. Stunned disbelief quieted the room. Someone spoke up and asked, "What do you mean it's over? We didn't come here for a picture of some old guy's son. What about all of these paintings? There are millions of dollars of art here! I demand that you explain what's going on here!" The auctioneer replied, "It's very simple. According to the will of the father, whoever takes the son gets it all." Can you see it? Our Father's greatest love is for His Son. Together they created all the vast treasures of the universe. All the glory of the Father is in the Son and shines out from Him. That Son came to earth and rescued us from our sins. And the Father has appointed the Son the heir of all He has. Human beings clamor to get all the Father's treasures in any way they can. But God has willed that it only works one way: He who takes the Son gets it all. If you have Him, you have everything. Ponder it!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Privilege Of Angels - 1:4-2:4

Angels. Just the mention of the word evokes fascination for human beings and their imagination takes over. Artists have painted them throughout the ages as everything from huge fearsome beings to little children with wings. Popular folklore says that when you die you become an angel and get wings, a halo and a harp. Just watch the cartoons!

I. The Popular Elevation Of Angels The love of angels goes way back. The Bible tells us that there was:

1. angel worship in the ancient world - Col. 2:18 Do not let anyone who delights in false humility and the worship of angels disqualify you for the prize. Such a person goes into great detail about what he has seen, and his unspiritual mind puffs him up with idle notions. Evidently there were those in Colossae who had seen visions involving angels and became involved in the worship of angels. It is said that Michael, the archangel, was the protector of the city. The Gnostics (the New Agers of Paul's day) had evolved beliefs about whole hosts of spirit beings, emanations of God, eons, angel-like beings, not God and yet not man. There were orders and ranks of heavenly beings that they worshipped. And out of the pagan background, angel worship crept into the church. It was condemned without explanation at the Synod of Laodicea in 343. Yet along with the veneration of saints and of relics, the veneration of angels has actually become part of the heritage of the Roman Catholic church, particularly of the brand of superficial surface veneer that Catholicism has become in many of the Latin American countries. Yet it is not only poor and uneducated people who are awed by angels. Modern day intellectuals hold the same fascination.

2. the fascination with angels in today's world Have you ever noticed how popular TV shows about angels are. Recently there was "Teen Angel," a not-well-done comedy about a boy who dies and becomes his best friend's guardian angel. "Highway To Heaven" featured Michael Landon as an angel teamed up with a human who went about doing good. One of the most popular shows was "Touched By An Angel" which shows a great deal of reverence for God and says a lot of good things about His love and teaches some great life lessons. But do notice that the name of Jesus never shows up once and the angels are more like glorified human beings than heavenly messengers. The point is that we are fascinated to think that angels enter our lives. The New Age movement has embraced angels wholeheartedly. Angel symbols and paintings and figurines are everywhere. There are whole books out there to encourage you and explain to you how to contact your personal angel (who's probably a demon, biblically speaking) and invite him into your life to be with you throughout your life. You put yourself into a trance-like state of mind and have your own little seance of sorts with the spirit world. Somehow, we'd rather deal with angels that we would with Jesus Christ. And I rather suspect that what's going on today is not too much different from the kind of popular practices that moved the writer of Hebrews to give a whole chapter to talking about:

II. Jesus And The Angels The ancient thought of spiritual hierarchy still plagues us today. We tend to think God→Jesus→angels→humans. Sometimes, because angels seem more like God (spirit beings you can't see), and Jesus seems more like us because He had a human body, people get it reversed, God→angels→Jesus→humans. Now, which of those two is right? Neither! This chapter teaches us three things about Jesus which we must always keep in mind:

1. He is God's SON which means He is far superior in nature to the angels (4-5) In this chapter the writer strings together a number of quotations from different parts of the Psalms and elsewhere which he interprets for us as speaking about Jesus. I've put the references down in case you want to look them up. In Ps. 2 God the Father is speaking to His Son and:

a. Jesus is declared Son by the Father to inherit the earth - Ps. 2:7 says "You are My Son; I am your Father" and it goes on to say "Ask of me and I will make the nations your inheritance." It is no accident that twice, at his baptism and on the mount of transfiguration, the voice of the Father spoke loudly from Heaven, "This is My SON, whom I love; with Him I am well-pleased. Listen to Him!" No angel was ever called God's son! No angel was ever appointed His heir! But it's more than just a title:

b. Jesus has the actual relationship of Son with the Father - 1 Chr. 17:13 which is quoted in verse 5 is a promise God gave to David that his son would have a father-son relationship with God and, of course, the promise skips on past Solomon to Jesus, David's greater son, because it says he will rule forever. Now, when you are someone's son, it means that you are what they are. If my father is Chinese, then I'm Chinese. This wasn't lost on the Jews. When Jesus called God his Father, they picked up stones to stone him because they knew that made him "equal with God"! If your father is God, then you have the nature of God! Think about it. How can God call us His sons too? Because He puts His nature inside us when we're saved! Despite the fact that there are two verses in Job where angels seem to be referred to generically as "the sons of God", no angel was ever declared to have the nature and the name and the position of the Son of God. He is a unique son, a One-and-Only Son, an Only-Begotten Son, something no angel will ever be. Secondly, the writer tells us:

2. He is God's FIRSTBORN who is preeminent over all things (6) The word firstborn is a special word. It can simply mean the first child that a person has. But it evolved to mean much more. The firstborn son was said to be the first sign of his father's manhood. He would become the next leader of the family clan. He would inherit a double share of his father's inheritance. There came to be a birthright involved, which seemed to be separate from the actual order of birth because Esau was able to sell his to Jacob! The term firstborn came to mean the one who is pre-eminent, above all others. Listen to how God speaks about the Messiah in Ps. 89:27, I will also appoint him my firstborn, the most exalted of the kings of the earth. And that's how God uses the Word about His Son. He is preeminent, exalted above all others. In the New Testament we read that:

a. Jesus is preeminent before and over the entire creation - Col. 1:15 It doesn't mean He was the first thing created, but rather that He is exalted above every created thing, including the angels. Indeed, He created all things! We read that:

b. Jesus is preeminent in His resurrection from the dead - Col. 1:18 He was the first one to conquer death and rise to newness of life and He stands exalted as the Lord over all who will rise. In that same verse we read that:

c. Jesus is preeminent as Head of the Church - Col. 1:18, He is exalted as Head of the church and Rom. 8:29 adds that He is the firstborn over many brethren! And so, what's he saying here in verse 6?

d. God will cause the angels to worship Jesus when He again brings Him into the world to His rightful place If you read the context of Deut. 32:43 (NIV margin) which is quoted here, you'll discover it's about the time when He will come to take vengeance on all His enemies, when He'll set up His kingdom to rule the world. The word Again is out of place in our NIV. When He AGAIN will bring His Son into the world as the Firstborn, the Preeminent One, all the angels will fall down and worship Him and all the universe will see it! The angels are not going to establish Jesus' kingdom; Jesus will come and trample His enemies underfoot and they will humbly bow in worship. He's the Firstborn, the Preeminent One. Then the writer says a third thing about Jesus:

3. He is GOD and that makes Him far superior in nature to any angel You see:

a. angels have the nature of servants (7) - Ps. 104:4 which is quoted here reverses the order. He makes winds his angels... But here we have the real meaning interpreted for us. Angels:

(1) they are sent to deliver the messages of God The name angel means messenger, one who delivers a message. They don't speak on their own. They go as swift as the wind, but they deliver messages from God. Gabriel was sent to tell Mary she would have a child. That happened over and over again through the Scriptures. They deliver God's word. And:

(2) they are sent to do the work of God They are sent to protect God's people. Elisha faced the whole Syrian army but he looked around and saw what? Horses and chariots of fire, an army of God's angels who stood with him. They appeared to Jesus in the garden and strengthened him. Angels don't do their own work; they don't go about their own business. They are merely servants. They carry out the work of God. But:

b. Jesus is declared to be in very nature God and the writer lists five references from the Psalms that prove it. First:

(1) He is called God by God Himself (8) - Ps. 45:6 If you look there, you'll see that it's a Messianic Psalm about the King who will rule forever, about the Son. God wrote that. And God Himself calls the Son God! He is Deity. And:

(2) He is exalted above all companions as King (9) - Ps. 45:7 Above all His fellows, all those around him. Now who would be around him but angels and maybe redeemed people. He's been anointed as the one and only Ruler of the Universe. But He is also:

(3) He is the Creator of all things (10), quoting Ps. 102:25, follows verses 23-24, where the Spirit pictures Christ's suffering on the cross, In the course of my life, he broke my strength; he cut short my days. So I said: "Do not take me away, O my God, in the midst of my days; your years go on through all generations. And these next verses are God's reply to His Son, the assurance of the Father to His Only Son. "YOU are the creator of all things. You made them!" And:

(4) He is eternal and immutable (11-12) - Ps. 102:26-27 The Son will never end, never perish. He'll roll up the heavens like a scroll. The whole creation will come to an end, but the Son will never change, never end. He's God! And:

(5) He is enthroned at God's right hand until the day He returns and his enemies are under His feet (13) - Ps. 110:1 No angel sits on that throne. No angel is exalted to sit at the right hand of God. Stephen looked up and saw heaven opened, but he didn't see any angel standing at the right hand of God; He saw Jesus! John was caught up to heaven and he saw ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands of angels around the throne, but it was the Lamb who sat on that throne before whom they bowed down. It was Jesus! And it was Jesus who got up off that throne to return to earth in Rev. 19 and to destroy his enemies with the very word from his mouth. The angels only follow to watch.

Oh, Jesus is the Son; Jesus is the Firstborn, the Preeminent One; Jesus is God. The angels are just spirit-beings that Jesus created to serve His purposes, one of which is to give us:

III. Our Special Privilege Of Ministering Angels (14) I don't want to put the angels down. You're going to see a lot of them when you get to heaven. It's not their fault that people worship them; they don't seek it and would never want it. In fact, if you do try to worship a real angel, he'll instantly tell you not to do it, but to worship Jesus. I know, because John was so overawed that he almost did that very thing in Rev. 22:8-9. Check it out! But the privilege we have is this:

1. all the angels are sent by God to minister to us They are ministering spirits, serving spirits, helping spirits which Jesus created and sends to help and to serve us. They're about us, around us, with us. They protect us, strengthen us, aid us, direct us. All unseen. All unknown, yet their ministry goes on all the time. But every now and then it becomes obvious. Jerry Jenkins tells this story about an incident that happened when he was 10 years old: "I was the youngest and smallest of the Sunday night regular tag players. My size gave me one advantage: I had a knack for being best able to slip through the crowd and out the door. Once I heard that final amen, I would 'walk--don't run' down the back steps, through the foyer, the first to set foot on the sidewalk. And once I was outside, I ran. The game had begun. One particular fall night, our family filled a row near the back. So far so good. And I had maneuvered myself a seat at the end of the pew, closest to the door. At the crack of dismissal, I leapt out into the aisle, down the stairs, and out into a pitch-dark night. "Yes! I made it." No one was even close behind me. By habit I took a hard left along a sidewalk close to the building, and sprinted with all my might toward the parking lot. Just past the edge of the building, where the sidewalk ended--wham! An arm as firm as an oak caught me in the stomach. My hands and feet flew out in front of me, but the arm held me upright until I could stand again. Dazed, with my breath slowly coming back, I looked down at a sight I could hardly believe; I was standing--teetering actually--on the edge of a huge, deep crater. I staggered back. Then I remembered. The parking lot had been excavated that week. I myself had watched the bulldozer dig the foundation for a new sanctuary. I'd played sidewalk supervisor as Dad and other men had slid a truckload of cinder blocks down a wooden ramp and made piles of them in that hole. With rubbery legs I slunk toward the church. By now my friends were out and running, but I was too shaken to join in the play. For a long time, I just stood near the front door, thinking about what might have happened. I would have fallen in, hit those cinder blocks, and been knocked out cold. The night was so dark, no one would have found me until morning. By then it would have been too late. Now my wild imagination took over. I pictured the headlines: "Jenkins Boy Found Dead". But the arm that saved my life? Whose arm was it? Big Walt Burke, my Sunday school teacher? With his bulk, he could certainly have stopped me. And he did sometimes hang around outside and warn us kids to be careful. No, he was just coming out now. Old Mr. Kemple, the church patriarch who looked the part of a Southern gentleman? He was too small and frail to have held me back. I would have run him down. And he was still inside. The truth was I'd been saved by something I couldn't see. By someone I couldn't see." [All Night, All Day, Angels Watching Over Me, edited by Evelyn Bence. Zondervan, 1996.] Testimonies abound of, for instance, believers being tortured and forced to stand up straight for hours and hours under pain of death and being held up by an unseen set of arms, of individuals showing up to help them they'd never seen before and then vanishing without a trace, almost before their eyes. What a privilege that there are myriads of angels assigned to our care and you know why? Verse 14 says:

2. we are the heirs to Christ's salvation and position The true hierarchy is God and Jesus are one and the same, and we are in Him, so the angels, even though they are greater in power than we are, are really at the bottom of the totem pole! They were created to serve us because we are in Him! They long to look into the things God has revealed to us! So, as wonderful as it is that we are come to an innumerable company of angels, the writer concludes by issuing:

IV. A Warning For Us (2:1-4) Now, please note that this is written to believers, not to unbelievers. Sure, an unbeliever is in eternal danger if he rejects the Gospel and doesn't receive Christ. There won't be any second chance on the other side; there will be no excuses and no escape. It's Jesus or the lake of fire, to be blunt. After the agony of His Son dying for sin and rising again to provide salvation, God isn't letting anybody come to Him any other way. That's all true, but that's not what these verses are saying. They are written to us as believers to warn us:

1. we are in a continual danger of drifting away from the truth, of letting it slip away through our fingers because we're fascinated by stories about angels and mysterious things we can't explain. We drift so easily into venerating things other than Jesus, who is everything. A missionary friend of mine who was in Uganda wrote about questions some of the young church leaders had: One young man asked about "the ministry of anointing". The preacher of another church in Fort Portal has been going around and pouring "blessed water" on people's heads and telling them to receive "the anointing". Another told of a teaching concerning the Mark of the Beast described in the book of Revelation. Should they make sure they don't have the number written anywhere on anything they own? The American church is not much better. People are always seeking for healings and blessings and anointings to get their own way and are scared about things they don't understand. Whether it's seeking after angels or some other doctrinal teaching, it's easy for believers, for entire churches to slowly drift away from the simple truth that Jesus is everything. But the warning is that:

2. we will receive certain discipline if we let it slip away from us, if we literally stop caring enough to stick to it. Listen, we're told that the Law was somehow given to Moses through means of angels (Acts 7:53, Gal. 3:19). If the Word that angels delivered was binding and God didn't tolerate any violation of it and disciplined his Old Testament people, how much more is he going to discipline us who have a gospel that was announced by the Lord Jesus Himself and His apostles and confirmed by the Holy Spirit with signs and wonders and miracles that you read of in Acts. You ignore that to your own peril! Not that you'll lose your personal salvation, not that Jesus will ever leave your heart or declare you "not His child", but Jesus says to the church at Ephesus, Remember the height from which you have fallen! Repent and do the things you did at first. If you do not repent, I will come to you and remove your lampstand from its place. – Rev. 2:5. He will discipline us, chasten us, cause us to fail, allow suffering into our lives, whatever it takes to make us realize once again that HE is everything. So, the point is back in verse 1:

3. we must exercise careful diligence to adhere to the Word He has given My friend in Africa had a unique answer to the questions of those young leaders who were so confused about things other than Christ. He says: At one point I told them, "What if someone told you to put bananas in your ears to receive an anointing? Would you do it? Why not?" The proper answer was thankfully forthcoming: "It is not in the Bible!" We encouraged them to be good Bereans and confirm everything with the Scriptures. He calls that other stuff "Bananas-in-the-Ears-Theology". That's the writer's point: carefully, diligently adhere to the Word and the Word exalts Jesus. He's everything. All of this other stuff, angels and everything else, is all secondary, way-down the-line stuff, nothing in comparison to Him!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Privilege Of Relationship - 2:5-13

I want to talk to you this morning about your destiny. That's something we don't think about much. Most of the time we're just concerned with getting through the day and home to bed at night. Often we talk about things we're looking forward to in the near term, like birthdays or vacations. Occasionally we rise to the level of focusing on long term goals and hopes and plans. But very rarely do we fix our eyes on our destiny, the ultimate end or purpose to which we are inevitably appointed and designated ahead of time. Paul Billheimer wrote a book whose title spells it out, "Destined For The Throne." If you will look with me at Heb. 2 this morning, you will quickly see:

I. The Incredible Position For Which We Are Destined (5-9) Look what it says:

1. the world to come, the Millennial Kingdom, which God Himself is going to set up when this age is all done, the Kingdom which Jesus Christ is coming again to set up on earth, where He will rule all nations and they will beat their shields into plowshares and righteousness will cover the earth like the waters cover the sea and the lamb will lie down with the lion, that world to come, that Kingdom will be subject to us, to redeemed and glorified human beings, not to the angels (5) Now that's awfully hard to envision because of:

a. our seeming insignificance (6) In verses 6-7 the writer is quoting from Ps. 8. Let's turn there and read verses 1, 3-5. When you look at all God has made, when you look up and see the vastness of space, the moon and the stars and the planets, when you stand at the foot of a majestic mountain or a Grand Canyon and contemplate its sheer immensity or when you lie on the beach and watch a body of water so vast that it stretches for 1000 miles and waves so powerful they can't be stopped, and then you look at yourself, you seem so insignificant. What is a human being? What am I? A fly speck on a ball 25,000 miles in diameter hurtling through space. A single drop of water in an ocean that borders three continents? A grain of sand on a beach that stretches for hundreds of miles along the coast? I'm nothing. I'm less than nothing. Compared to all the vastness of the physical creation I'm so insignificant, that I really don't matter. Except to God. Just look at what He's planned:

b. our ultimate exaltation (5) Look at it; flocks, herds, birds, fish, all the works of His hands, are placed under us. But more than that. Heb.2:8 interprets verse 6 and says it twice. He put everything under our feet. In fact, God left nothing that is not subject to us! Not one created thing! Not one angel. Not one star or planet. Not one remote corner of the whole earth. We are over all that He has made. Our destiny is the Throne, to reign with Him. John saw it in his vision, ... The throne of God and of the Lamb will be in the city, and his servants will serve him. They will see his face, and his name will be on their foreheads. There will be no more night. They will not need the light of a lamp or the light of the sun, for the Lord God will give them light. And they will reign for ever and ever. - Rev. 22:3-5. Amen! For those of us that know Christ, that is our destiny. We've been inevitably appointed to it and we'll be there! But sadly, the writer reminds us of what we know all too well:

2. we do not experience the reality of our destiny right now That's the frustration we live with every day. We're kings that have to live like paupers and serfs. We're not reigning; in fact, most of the time we have no control over anything. We can't stop illness; we can't avert accidents; we can't get justice; we can't change people or circumstances and it's just plain frustrating. The writer comments that even though we're destined to rule over angels, right now:

a. we occupy a position in many ways lower than angels In what ways? Well, one is mentioned in 2 Pet. 2:11. Speaking about certain men it says, ...even angels, although they are stronger and more powerful, do not... do certain things. Angels are stronger and more powerful. They have abilities that we don't. They have to strengthen and protect us and shield us. They can see what we can't, the spirit world. They battle against forces that would overwhelm us. They can enter into heaven into the presence of God directly, while we're stuck here on earth. In many ways we seem inferior to angels; it seems that we should envy them. But God assures us in verse 7 that:

b. it is only temporary Instead of "a little lower", the NASB and other versions translate the Greek phrase in a time sense, "for a little while". Our abasement, our humiliation, our vale of suffering, is only temporary. We are only made this way for a "little while". And what's "a little while"? It means our life in this age. What is that? 10 years, 20 years, 30, 50, 70, 90 years? Compared to forever and ever, it's a blip, the blink of an eye. A thousand years to the Lord are like a day when it is past. There's a cartoon on our office board of a man interviewing God. He says, "What is a billion years to you?" And God answers, "A mere second!" And he says, "What is a billion dollars to You?" And God answers, "A mere penny". So he asks, "In that case could I please have a mere penny? And God answers, "Just wait a second!" Seriously, our experience now, feels like eternity. When we're suffering and hurting and dragged down by the events of life, it feels like forever, even though verse 9 says it is only at present. And these are the things which make us doubt our destiny. We're told it; we know it; we believe it. But we don't experience it, not yet anyway. That brings us to verse 9, which I love because it starts with one of God's famous "But" statements. "But":

3. what we do know through experience is Jesus, the true Son of Man (9) We've met and experienced Jesus and we are convinced of what happened to Him. Just like us:

a. He was made for a little while lower than the angels For 33 years He laid aside the exercise of His glory and privileges as eternal God to take a human body and become a human being and enter our experience of this present. He knew what we know, the frustration, the injustice, the suffering, the pain, the hunger and thirst. Though they worship Him, angels had to come and strengthen Him. And we know how far it went:

b. He actually endured the suffering of death, as Paul puts it, He humbled Himself and became obedient to death, even death on a cross! We know it. The King of Glory was brought low; He was laid in the dust; He was hung on a cross as a criminal though He had done no wrong! But:

c. that temporary humility was an act of grace for every one of us That "little while" on earth bought our salvation. That patience and humility and sacrifice saved you and me and millions of others like us forever. It was a gift given freely to us, praise His Name! But in God's plan, it only lasted a little while and:

d. we see Him now crowned with glory and honor "Now in heav'n exalted high, Hallelujah! What a Savior!" Therefore God exalted him to the highest place and gave him the name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, in heaven and on earth and under the earth, and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. - Phil. 2:9-11. He's sitting there in glory at the right hand of the Father waiting until all things are put under His feet according to 1:13. He's in the glory and one day we will see all things bow to Him. Now what does that have to do with us? Well, consider:

II. The Incredible Relationship Which We Are Given (10-13) You see:

1. God's ultimate goal is to bring many sons to glory (10) Not just to give glory to His Son, but to bring MANY sons and daughters to share in that glory with Him. That's us! He knows that because of sin in the world and in us that we're stuck in this "little while," but He wants to bring us to glory. He wants to put us in that position we were destined for. He wants to put all things under our feet and have us reign with Him forever and ever. But He had a most:

2. God's unlikely method was to make the author of our salvation perfect through suffering That word author is filled with meaning. He is the source, the originator, the chief leader, the general at the head of his troops, the triumphant one leading his train of soldiers home in the victory parade. Jesus is the author and the leader in saving all of us and God chose to "make Him perfect" through a "little while" of suffering. How is that? In what sense was the sinless, spotless Son of God made perfect. Look at 5:8-9. He "learned obedience". He knew what obedience was. The whole universe gave it to Him! But He learned it from our side, the human side, by experience. You women help me out here; it is one thing to know about having a baby, but it is another thing to actually HAVE a baby, right? It is one thing to know what a handicap is or what cancer is; it is another to have it and to feel it! Christ entered into our "little while" experience of suffering and being made low and was made perfect by adding the experience of humanity to His nature as Deity and so was made complete and it was fitting because it qualified Him to save us! And guess what, He uses the same process on us! He makes us perfect through this little while of suffering, but that's another sermon! Now look at:

3. the unbelievable results:

a. we are made holy by being made “of one” with Him (11) We are united to Him, made literally, of one with Him, one family, one nature, one in Spirit, one in every way. He is holy and so we become absolutely holy through being united with Him who was made perfect. His holiness, His nature, is ours, imparted to us when He comes to live in us and joins Himself to our spirit. And so:

b. the Son of God has made us His “brothers” (12) - Ps. 22, which begins with the “My God why have you forsaken Me?” of the crucifixion ends in verse 22 with “I will declare your Name to my brothers...” after the resurrection. Jesus calls us His brothers and is not ashamed to do it! We share His relationship as sons of the Father and that makes us brothers of the Son! It makes us heirs to the same privileges as He. It brings us to glory and causes us to share in His reign. And then the writer says:

c. we are given by God to be with Him as His “children” (13) Here he quotes Is. 8:17-18, but go there and look at the whole thing. Isaiah is speaking about himself. He was going through a “little while” of suffering. He was trusting God, who seemed to be hiding his face from Israel at the moment and waiting until the “little while” was over. But in that “little while” the Lord had given him three children. Don’t ask me to repeat their names! And he and those children were given as signs and symbols. Of what? Well, for one thing, Hebrews tells us, of Jesus. Jesus trusted the Father and patiently endured that time of suffering so that He could stand at the end and say, “Here am I and the CHILDREN God has given me!” Through it all, God gave us to Him as His children, of one blood, of one nature, one with Him in every way.

I know this is complicated, so let me try to sum up the point. Why does all this matter? The point of it all is:

III. The Incredible Assurance We Have Through Him as we go through this life. First of all:

1. our relationship with Him guarantees our future How many of your sons have you disowned? How many of your children have you abandoned to the streets? How many of your children have you forgotten about? Not one, I bet. Our unity with Jesus Christ guarantees our destiny. God told us we have a destiny to reign with Him and our relationship with Jesus guarantees that we’ll receive it because He’s already there. Circumstances tell you that you’re lower than the low, that you’re a pauper and a slave, that you’re a worthless nothing, a cog in the wheel of life. But Jesus says, Do not be afraid, little flock, for your Father has been pleased to give you the kingdom. - Lk. 12:32! “All things will be put under your feet. You WILL reign with Me. I will bring you to glory! You will be with Me where I am and share My glory as I prayed! Your destiny will be fulfilled and your relationship with Me guarantees it! I’m in the glory and you’ll be in the glory and in just a ‘little while’ all things will be put under our feet together!” You have complete assurance that your future is guaranteed. And if we can get hold of that:

2. our guaranteed future transforms our “little while” of suffering We don’t suffer in despair as poor helpless victims anymore; we don’t grieve as others who have no hope. We’re on a path that leads upward to glory and this is just a “little while”. Our weeping may endure for a night, but joy is coming in the morning. Turn with me to Jn. 16:20-22. We could apply these words of Jesus to our whole life experience today, as well as to the three day wait of the disciples back then, I tell you the truth, you will weep and mourn while the world rejoices. You will grieve, but your grief will turn to joy. A woman giving birth to a child has pain because her time has come; but when her baby is born she forgets the anguish because of her joy that a child is born into the world. So with you: Now is your time of grief, but I will see you again and you will rejoice, and no one will take away your joy. You are destined for the Throne and nothing will stop it, because you have the privilege of a relationship with Him!

Pastor Bob Christensen writes: “I once heard the story of a city boy who went out to his grandfather’s farm. He asked, ‘Grandpa, you told me that you raise corn. Can I see it?’ So his grandpa took the little fellow for a walk, and they looked out over the fields that had been planted earlier that spring. The grandson was amazed at the miles of open fields-- no concrete, no street lights, no traffic--just miles and miles of cropland. The boy wondered at all the green he saw. It wasn’t grass or weeds, yet he didn’t recognize what it was. It wasn’t yellow like corn. What he saw was row upon row of corn plants about 18 inches high. He wanted to see the corn, but the farmer told him that it wasn’t the right time, for it was only early summer, and it would be a little while, about 12 more weeks before the corn would be ready for harvesting. The boy was disappointed and became a little impatient. He couldn’t understand what his grandpa was saying. The grandfather saw the corn growing right on schedule, but the little boy wanted it to be harvest time. [Building the Kingdom in Families, Winter 1996. Pages 1-2.] Oh, that’s our problem, isn’t it? The Father sees things right on schedule. He sees the harvest. He sees us on the throne. It’s guaranteed. But all we see is the rows of little plants suffering in the heat of the sun. And we want it to be harvest time now! Trust the Father’s experience. He knows what He’s doing. And do it with joy!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Privilege Of Freedom - 2:14-18

In the earlier part of chapter 2, we looked at the incredible privilege we have of a relationship with God through Christ, which guarantees our destiny to reign with Him as His children. In verses 14-18 the writer of Hebrews moves on to talk about another tremendous privilege we have, the privilege of freedom. But we'll never understand the value of our freedom unless we reflect on the process by which that freedom was procured. It was procured by an act of God, something that God did which is absolutely outside the realm of comprehension. We're talking about:

I. The Act Of Incarnation: Christ Fully Shared In Our Humanity (14a) Christ has existed from all eternity as God. He shared the glory of the Father before time began. But at one particular moment 2000 years ago, He chose to become incarnate. He literally became a partaker of our blood and flesh. He didn't become LIKE us; He became one of us! Now what does that mean? Well, first let me point out that:

1. He chose to redeem human beings, not angels (16) We talked about angels back in chapter 1. As wonderful and powerful as the angels are, Christ didn't choose to literally "take hold of" the angels to make them like Himself and bring them to His full glory. He didn't become an angel. He took hold of human beings and became one of them, in particular, of the seed of Abraham. He didn't just pop onto the earth as a human being one day. It isn't just that He took the nature of a created human being, but separate from Adam's fallen race. He came by way of birth. He came as a Jew, a descendant of Abraham with a genealogy that can be traced through human parents all the way back. He was one of us in every sense of the word. He was born one of us, and because He was one of us:

2. He took to Himself a true human body like ours It was like ours, a true human body, the same kind I have and you have! It grew and aged and ached and pained and got tired and weary and hungry and thirsty and cut and bruised. He became flesh of our flesh, our own flesh and blood, not some kind of weird hybrid half man and half God, but a true human being. And so, the writer says:

3. He was made like us in every way, yet without sin (17) Every way, you name it. He went through all the stages of child development and learning. He played and worked and sweated. He had all the same limitations, the same frustrations. He lived under an oppressive unjust Roman government and a corrupt Jewish hierarchy. He knew poverty and had no place to call home. He was deserted by friends and mocked by enemies. He had all the same emotions and desires and temptations that you and I do, except that in Him was no sin and He committed no sin. He was one of us, but without sin. And finally, as one of us, He was subject to death.

What a choice! What a plan! To save us He had to become one of us. He couldn't save us from the outside. He had to be an insider, a brother, a full member of the group! It's beyond comprehension. The story is told in Eastern lands of the great Shah Abbas, who delighted in mingling in disguise with the common folk of his realm. Once, dressed in wretched rags, he descended to the lowest level of the palace, where one of his humblest servants sat tending the furnace. Each enjoyed the other's company, and by and by the furnace tender shared his lunch of black bread and water with his companion. This led to many another visit, and a deepening friendship, though the servant had no idea of his new friend's identity. At last, the shah revealed his identity and waited, ready to grant whatever petition the servant might make. But the other sat silent, gazing on him with love and wonder. "Haven't you understood?" asked the shah. "I can make you rich and famous. I can give you a city. I can appoint you as a great ruler. Have you nothing to ask?" "Yes, my lord, I understand," the furnace tender replied. "But what is this you have done, to leave your glorious surroundings, to sit with me in this dark place, to partake of my coarse fare, and to care whether my heart is glad or sorry? Even you can give nothing more precious. On others you may bestow rich presents, but to me you have given yourself. It only remains to ask that you never withdraw this gift of your friendship." [Pulpit Helps, Oct 1994. Page 12.] As lovely a picture as that is, it isn't nearly enough. Jesus didn't just mingle with us in the furnace room in disguise! He didn't just come and sit by us to know us. He BECAME us! He Himself became a furnace-tending slave alongside the other, living in the dark place, eating the coarse bread, with no going back to the throne room, except through the door of death, just like it is for us. That's what it took and that's what He did, but just look at the glorious:

II. The Result Of Incarnation: Christ Procured Our Freedom (14b-15) Now let's take this apart so we can understand it. First of all:

1. Satan had power which was derived from death He did not have the power of death, in that he was the ultimate lord of it and could kill whoever he wanted to whenever he wanted to. Death is not something Satan invented. God created it and God controls it. Satan would have liked to kill Job, but God told him he wasn't allowed to touch his life. Satan wanted to destroy Israel in Balaam's day, but God wouldn't allow them to be cursed. So Satan got Balaam to tell Balak to entice Israel to sin by joining in the worship of Baal so that GOD would kill them! Satan has only a secondary power to cause death. However, what he did have was a power that was derived from the fact that all human beings die.

a. he used the fear of death as a weapon against us Mankind has an innate, inborn, instinctive fear of death. We are by nature terrified to die. Our generation has worked very hard to insulate ourselves against the reality of it. For most of history and in many places of the world today, death is a much more real thing than it is to us. People see other people die. They see them get shot and killed in wars. They themselves are the brunt of attacks on their person. They nurse dying people at home when they suffer and die of illness. Executions were public and painful. Satan has used every means he can think of to increase and heighten this fear of death. Why? Because the more afraid that we were, the more:

b. he used it to control our lives and enslave us to himself Many of the jungle tribes live in a perpetual fear of death. They are afraid (and rightfully so) of evil spirits and of one another. Satan, over the years, has used this fear to get them to mutilate their bodies, to offer their children and women as sacrifices. All to keep from dying, all based on fear. He has built whole religious systems that have enslaved millions down through the centuries. And people do crazy things, all because they're afraid to die. In India Hindus still sometimes throw a man's widow on his funeral pyre and burn her alive with his corpse. Great and elaborate systems and codes of conduct have been developed out of this fear of what will happen to me when I die. Monasteries have been filled with those who hope by sacrificing everything in this life to attain a better place in the next. Holy wars have been fought to somehow please an angry God. And the root of it all is fear. Sarah Winchester's husband had acquired a fortune by manufacturing and selling rifles. After he died of influenza in 1918, she moved to San Jose, California. Because of her grief and a long-time interest in spiritism, Sarah sought out a medium to contact her dead husband. The medium told her, "As long as you keep building your home, you will never face death." Sarah believed the spiritist, so she bought an unfinished 17-room mansion and started to expand it. The project continued until she died at the age of 85. It cost $5 million at a time when workmen earned 50 cents a day. The mansion had 150 rooms, 13 bathrooms, 2,000 doors, 47 fireplaces, and 10,000 windows. And Mrs. Winchester left enough materials so that they could have continued building for another 80 years. Today that house stands as more than a tourist attraction. It is a silent witness to the dread of death that holds millions of people in bondage. A human being will do anything, say anything, if he's afraid to die. If you put a gun to his head, he'll kill the person next to him on order, he'll deny the truth and even God himself, if it will keep him alive, as long as he's afraid to die. Satan has been playing on that in the lives of people and manipulating them to do his will ever since the Garden! But Jesus changed all that!

2. Christ's death as a man destroyed Satan's process You see, when Jesus, as a true human being, became our substitute on the cross and took our sins in His own body:

a. it took the sting out of death which was sin - 1 Cor. 15:56-57 What is the painful wound? What's the poison in death? What makes it able to hurt us? SIN! Sin makes death the gateway to hell, to the lake of fire, to eternal judgment. When you die in sin, without forgiveness, without redemption, you suffer the penalty of sin which is an eternity of suffering under the wrath of a Holy God. But Jesus took that penalty onto Himself on the cross. He paid it all right there. The penalty of our sin, which should have been visited on us, was heaped upon Him once and for all. We'll never suffer it! So, what did that accomplish?

b. it released us from the fear of death It took the fear out! There's nothing to be afraid of anymore! There's no sin on our account; there's no penalty to bear. So, it changed the nature of death for us who believe.

c. death for us is sleep for the body and gain for the spirit The body "falls asleep" in Jesus. It dies, yes, but we don't need it anymore. The moment we are absent from the body, we are present with the Lord. Paul said it clearly, to live is Christ and to die is gain. To depart and be with Christ is better by far. Death is now, not the doorway to hell, but the doorway to heaven, the entrance to the kingdom, the gateway to glory! There's nothing to be afraid of in it anymore. The sting, the wound, is all gone. It may hurt on this side until we actually die, but death itself is an instant trip into Jesus' arms. So, do you see what that does?

d. it rendered Satan's power ineffective As long as we know and are confident of what Christ has done, we're free! Satan is not personally destroyed, but he's rendered powerless. He's put out of business. He's shooting with a toy gun that can't hurt me. How do you force a man to do what you want by putting a gun to his head if he's not afraid to die? How do you make Christians deny their faith and worship Allah if they're not afraid of death? You can't! Neil Anderson writes: "Freedom from spiritual conflicts and bondage is not a power encounter; it's a truth encounter. Satan is a deceiver, and he will work undercover at all costs, but the truth of God's Word exposes him and his lie. When I was a boy on the farm, my dad, my brother, and I would occasionally visit our neighbor's farm. The neighbor had a yappy little dog that scared the socks off me. When it came barking around the corner, my dad and brother stood their ground, but I ran. Guess who the dog chased? I escaped to the top of our pickup truck while the little dog yapped at me from the ground. Everyone except me could see that the little dog had no power over me except what I gave it. Furthermore, it had no inherent power to throw me up on the pickup; it was my belief that put me there. That dog controlled me by using my mind, my will, my emotions, and my muscles, all of which were motivated by fear. Finally, I gathered up my courage, jumped off the pickup, and kicked a small rock at the mutt. Lo and behold, it ran! Satan is like that yappy little dog, deceiving people into fearing him more than God. His power is in the lie. He is the father of lies who deceives the whole world, and consequently the whole world is under the influence of the evil one. He can do nothing about your position in Christ, but if he can deceive you into believing his lies about you and God, you will spend a lot of time on top of the pickup truck! You don't have to outshout him or out-muscle him to be free of his influence. You just have to "out-truth" him. Believe, declare, and act upon the truth of God's Word, and you will thwart Satan's strategy. [The Bondage Breaker by Neil T. Anderson. Harvest House, 1990. Pages 22-23.]

Did you hear that? Then say Hallelujah! I'm free. I'm not Satan's slave anymore because I don't have to be afraid. He can't use my fear to get me to sin unless I let him! I'm a child of God. I belong to God. Not one sin will ever be held against me because Jesus became what I am and died in my place. I am free in Jesus Christ! I'm not afraid of God and I'm not afraid of death because it will put me with Him in glory! I'm not letting Satan manipulate me anymore by making me afraid! And it's all because of the Incarnation, because of Jesus becoming man. Now the writer makes us look at:

III. The Reason For Incarnation: Christ Became Our High Priest (17-18) To procure that freedom, we needed a High Priest. In order for sinful man to come freely and without fear into the glory of a Holy God, we needed a mediator, someone to act on our behalf to make atonement for our sins, because we couldn't do it, someone from among us to bring us to God who would be acceptable to Him, who would be without sin Himself, to approach Him. And the only possible way for that to happen was the Incarnation. The sinless eternal Christ who was God became perfect and complete man! And that did three things:

1. it qualified Him as a faithful High Priest before God He was truly man, yet without sin. He always did the will of the Father and the Father repeatedly said, In Him I am well pleased. He was qualified to come into the presence of the Father on our behalf because He was faithful in every way to the One who appointed Him, as we'll see in chapter 3. And at the same time:

2. it enabled Him to make atonement for human beings He was not only the Priest; He was the Sacrifice. He offered Himself as one sacrifice for our sins forever, to remove them as far as the east is from the west. It took a man to do that! Man had sinned and man had to satisfy the penalty of God's holy wrath. The Incarnation made Him able to be our perfect sacrifice. And that's what removed our fear of death and set us free from Satan's manipulation and control. And finally:

3. it enabled Him to serve as a merciful High Priest to us (18) Because He became truly one of us and was made like we are in every way, He can be merciful to us. Without condoning our sin, He can understand and sympathize with our human frailty and suffering. The writer says:

a. He understands our temptation because He was tempted Compare 4:15. He was tempted in every way, just like we are. Satan tried to get at Him just like He gets at us. He knows what human weakness and frailty are and how easy it is for humans to succumb to it and to fall into sin. He can feel that struggle. He knows the pain of it. He can suffer it with us, alongside us. He doesn't condone sin, but He loves and understands the whole pile of things that they suffer through and how tough it is to remain faithful and true. But He doesn't merely understand it:

b. He is able to come to our aid when we are tempted Compare 4:16. He'll do something about it. He won't condemn us; He'll help us! He'll give us strength. He'll give us wisdom and reveal Satan's lies to us and show us how he's trying to manipulate us by fear. He'll make for us a way out of the temptation and show us where it is. He'll enable us to stand in the freedom that we have and continue to walk as children of God!

Our freedom was costly. It took the self-emptying of the Incarnation. It took the sacrifice of the Cross. Paul warned us in Gal. 5:1, It is for freedom that Christ has set us free. Stand firm, then, and do not let yourselves be burdened again by a yoke of slavery. I know the context there is freedom from the law, but the principle applies here too. Christ bought our freedom so that we'd live free, so we'd say, "I'm free and I'm not going back there! I'm not going back there and be moved and manipulated by fear anymore! Rather I'll go to Jesus who bought my freedom and get the grace I need to live as a free child of His! I am convinced of His perfect love for me and that casts out ALL fear!" What a precious privilege of freedom we have through Him! Let's cling to it and live out of truth and not out of fear!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Promise Of Faithfulness 3:1-19

The first verse of chapter 3 summarizes everything we learned in chapter 2. We found that we are made holy by our Great High Priest Jesus offering Himself for us and that sets us free from fear. Before that, we found that we were made Jesus' brothers, children of God who are brought into a forever relationship with Him. And before that, we found that we have a heavenly eternal destiny to reign with Jesus forever. So, as he starts out chapter 3, the writer says, Therefore, holy brothers, who share in the heavenly calling...fix your thoughts on Jesus... He wants us to look at Jesus and to see in His character the one thing that all of these privileges depend on, His faithfulness. If He's not faithful, then we're sunk. If He has promised, but there is any chance at all that He will for whatever reason not keep it, then our eternity hangs by a slender thread. However, if He is faithful, then we are absolutely secure. And the point that the Holy Spirit goes on to make in the first 6 verses is that:

I. Christ Is Continually Faithful To Us (1-6) Now Hebrews, as its title reminds us, is a letter written to believers with Jewish background. And to a Jew, there is nobody with a higher and better reputation than Moses. He was regarded as the greatest of men. He spoke with God face to face, He led Israel out of bondage, He gave the Law and He wrote the first five books of Scripture. The fact that Moses is the only Old Testament person mentioned 79 times in the New Testament should show his importance. The Jews trusted in Moses and referred to him continually and even these Jewish believers would have the highest regard for him, so the writer points out:

1. the faithfulness of Moses and quotes what God says in Num. 12:7, But this is not true of my servant Moses; he is faithful in all my house. Just look what God says about him:

a. he was faithful in God's entire house Now what is God's house. Some say it is the Tabernacle and that this means Moses built it exactly as he was told, which he did, but the context of Num. 12 is that Miriam and Aaron were rebelling against Moses as the leader of God's people and God said to them, How dare you speak against Moses whom I have chosen and with whom I speak face to face; He is faithful in all My house... The word house can equally mean the building or the people who live in it. Verse 6 says WE are His house! Moses was faithful IN or among God's people. Paul wrote Timothy, if I am delayed, you will know how people ought to conduct themselves in God's house(hold), which is the church of the living God... - 1 Tim. 3:15. Moses was a part of God's people. And He was faithful in his dealings with all of them. And, Hebrews says:

b. he was faithful to God as a servant in the house God had appointed him as the leader and caretaker of His people, even though he was among them, and he was faithful to God in everything He commanded Him toward His people. Now, you and I remember how he lost his temper and struck the rock and how he didn't really want to go down to Egypt, but this is God's assessment. He was a faithful servant. He did for God's people what God told Him to do. However, as faithful as Moses was, even that pales in comparison to:

2. the faithfulness of Christ

a. He is continually faithful to the Father who appointed Him The NIV says He "was faithful" in verse 2, but the Greek says "who, being faithful"; it's a present participle. He was and still is faithful to the Father who appointed Him and sent Him down as the Great Apostle and High Priest to redeem us and, I might add, He always will be. He is continually faithful! There is no glitch, no flaw, no split second of failure. He always carries out the appointment the Father has given Him toward us! But not only is His faithfulness more absolute than Moses', it is of a different type.

b. He is faithful as the Son over the house Moses was faithful as a servant IN the house. He obeyed God as part of God's people, but ultimately, they weren't HIS people. Listen to what Moses said when they grumbled against him, He asked the LORD, "Why have you brought this trouble on your servant? What have I done to displease you that you put the burden of all these people on me? Did I conceive all these people? Did I give them birth? Why do you tell me to carry them in my arms, as a nurse carries an infant, to the land you promised on oath to their forefathers?" - Num. 11:11-12. Moses loved the people. He begged God to forgive them and even offered to trade his own salvation for them at one point, but at the bottom line, He was only one of them, a servant sent to do the job of caring for them; ultimately, they were not HIS. But they ARE Christ's. He is the SON; God's people, the Church, are His body, His temple, His building, a people of His very own. They belong to Him. He is building HIS CHURCH, according to Mt. 16:18 and He is the owner of the house, which is us! He died to redeem us, to get us for His own, and He's going to care for us faithfully! So:

c. as builder and owner of His house, He is worthy of greater honor than Moses or anybody else because He's faithful. A couple of years ago, the entire country honored one player on the Baltimore Orioles baseball team, Cal Ripken Jr. At the end of the fifth inning when the game was officially on the books, the fans interrupted it with a 22 minute standing ovation. The game was stopped by the celebration. Ripken was thrust out of the dugout by adoring teammates to run around the field and shake countless hands of idolizing fans. The President and Vice President of the United States of America had left their official duties and traveled all the way to Baltimore just to be there. Multiplied millions watched on television. Games were interrupted for standing ovations all across America and Canada when the announcement was made in their parks. Fans shouted, whistled, stomped, jumped up and down, and hugged each other. The President beamed, dignitaries saluted, California Angel players (the Oriole's opponents) took off their caps when they shook Ripken's hand. The Orioles pounded their teammate on the back and high-fived anyone who would raise his hand. Cal's kids smiled and waved; his wife wept. What had Cal Ripken done that had the world rejoicing? What great feat had he accomplished? Had he hit the ball farther? No. Hit it more often? No. Stolen more bases? No. A new strike-out record? No. His feat was simply a new record of 2,131 consecutive games played which broke a record that had stood in baseball for over 50 years. All he did was just go to work every day. He simply stayed on the job and refused to take even one day off. He was faithful. [Brown Gold, Mar 1996. Pages 2-3.] My friends, ever since the creation of the world, Jesus Christ has been faithful to His appointed task of caring for His own, the people of God, every one of them, every single day, every single night, every single moment, no days off, no vacations, no coffee breaks, no rest periods, no sleep. His faithfulness is of a caliber beyond anything Cal Ripken or even Moses or any human being can achieve. It is perfect absolute permanent faithfulness and not only doesn't the world notice it, but what's worse, the very Church, the people of God whom He's faithfully taking care of, don't celebrate it most of the time either! "Great is Thy faithfulness, Lord unto me!" ought to come out of our lips as we fall on our faces every day of our lives in thanksgiving! He is worthy of the highest honor and praise because He is faithful. That's what guarantees all the privileges and promises we have.

Now in the rest of chapter 3, the writer makes the logical application of that. He is always faithful to us and that in itself demands that:

II. We Must Remain Faithful To Him (6b-19) The writer goes back to the example of Israel and points out that:

1. Israel chose a path of unfaithfulness (7-11) He quotes from Ps. 95:7b-11 which is preceded by Ps. 95:6-7a, Come, let us bow down in worship, let us kneel before the LORD our Maker; for he is our God and we are the people of his pasture, the flock under his care. Today, if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts as they did... God's flock should have listened to their faithful Shepherd, but instead note four things:

a. they had hardened, unbelieving hearts It began in their hearts. Their hearts were easily deceived by their circumstances into unbelief, into doubting that God was faithful, doubting that He would take care of them. Despite all the proofs they had already seen in coming out of Egypt, they wanted another one every time. Their hearts became immune to the evidence of God's care; they ceased being able to see it and so, in the circumstances which were meant to test them:

b. they tested and tried Him and ultimately refused to go into the land At Rephidim there was no water and they became thirsty and quarreled with Moses and shouted, "Is the Lord among us or not?!" And God gave them water out of the rock. They cried for bread and He gave it every morning. They cried for meat and He gave them their fill. Yet every time they didn't have what they wanted, when the circumstances were difficult, their first response was to doubt God, to question His faithfulness, to make it a test or a trial of Him. And ultimately, they wound up at Kadesh Barnea where God said, "Go in and take the land," and they said, "We won't go in. We scouted it out and there are giants in the land. We didn't sign up to fight. You didn't hand it to us on a silver platter the way You're supposed to. We're not going in!" And brother, that was it. He had brought them out of Egypt for this very moment, to give them the land, and they refused because, even after all this, they doubted His faithfulness! And so:

c. God vowed they would never enter His rest Look with me at Num. 14:20-23, 28-30. Why were Caleb and Joshua different? 32:12 says, for they followed the Lord whole-heartedly. They were faithful. But about the rest of the nation, God made a vow. He swore by Himself, "As surely as I live, as surely as the glory of the Lord fills the whole earth..." and that whole generation died wandering in the wilderness and 40 years later God gave to their children what would have been their privilege, if they had only been obedient and faithful to Him. Now, what happened to them? Were they not forgiven for their sins? Were they lost eternally? Were they no longer God's people? Did He stop taking care of them? Absolutely NO! We read it, I HAVE forgiven them! He did continue to lead them, to provide for them, to take care of them, and to protect them in battle. They were still His people through that whole 40 year saga. But:

d. though still His people, they died having missed His "rest" It cost them something very important. They didn't get to go in and enjoy the rest that God had provided for them in the land of Canaan. Why? (16-19) What did they do? They rebelled; they sinned; they disobeyed or literally, they disbelieved. They were not faithful to Him who had been faithful to them and they missed His purpose for their lives! And they still stand as a warning to us:

2. we must be careful to choose a path of faithfulness (12-15) You see:

a. we must guard our hearts against the hardening of unbelief It can happen to us too. We can look at our circumstances and be deceived into thinking, "God has forgotten; He doesn't care; He's not doing His job; He is not faithful." And so enters the sin of unbelief and it hardens us. With each new problem, we pile up the evidence against God, despite His faithfulness to us over all the years. And eventually we come to a place where we have to make a choice, to obey Him or to turn away from Him to our own ways. But the warning is:

b. we must never choose to turn away from the living God and go our own way, try to solve our own problems, seek our own solutions and disobey His will as Israel did. That choice comes regularly. We can choose to lie or to face the truth. We can choose to bail out on our marriage or admit our problems and seek help. We can choose to seek our own pleasure and cross the moral lines God has set into immorality or we can say no. Over and over, we have the opportunity to choose our will or His. And the warning is to choose His. Why? Missouri senator John Ashcroft writes: [My father told me], "John, I'd like you to fly this plane for a while." I was eight years old at the time, blue-jeaned and T-shirted and wide-eyed at the world. My father was an amateur pilot. I looked around me at the spartan interior, which was nothing at all like the multitudinous controls, gauges, and computerized equipment in planes today. The control stick looked like a broom handle and came up between my legs. "What should I do?" I shouted back to my father, who was seated behind me. "Just grab the stick and push it straight forward." "Okay." I took hold of that stick and did as I was told. Immediately the plane went into a straight bombing-raid dive toward a farm on the outskirts of Springfield! My stomach came up to my throat and I lost all sense of time or place as fear gripped my insides. I let go of that control stick in a millisecond, and Dad pulled the plane back up. He had a good chuckle, and I had a good lesson: actions have consequences. I learned in a particularly vivid--in fact, terrifying--way that my decisions and actions could imperil my future. [Lessons from a Father to His Son (Nelson, 1998)] Did you hear that? Our decisions have consequences. They can imperil our future! Now, what happens if we do choose wrong like Israel did? Do we lose our salvation? Does He stop caring about us? Does He stop taking care of us? No, but it is true that:

c. our perseverance is evidence that we are His people (6b, 14) There is a careful balance between two things here. On the one hand, our salvation is eternal and if we are genuinely born again, we can never lose it. On the other, if we are genuinely born again, we will persevere and hold onto our faith to the end. We will continue to believe that Christ is our Savior and trust in Him for salvation. If we can stop that and walk away from our faith altogether and never come back, then we never really had it to begin with it. We were the shallow soil where the plant never really had roots or the thorny soil where it got choked and never really grew. We had knowledge about Him, but never really had Him in us. The very fact that we continue to believe, even though we choose to sin sometimes, is evidence that we belong to Him. But salvation is not really the issue here. It is not “whether we ARE His people,” but “whether we are FAITHFUL as His people” that is under discussion. And if we choose to turn away from Him and His way:

d. though still His people, we can miss His “rest” which was promised to us, which is what chapter 4 is all about. It is not that we won’t get to enter our heavenly home; our Canaan land is right here on earth. We will miss God’s purpose and God’s plan for our lives. There is a rest that belongs to the people of God, but we forfeit it and wander in the wilderness of life if we refuse to enter it by faith. We’ll study that next time. The point today is that our faithfulness to Him is vital in light of His faithfulness to us. And before we close, I’d like to ask whether you noticed that in what we’ve already read, God has described:

III. The Tools We Have To Enable Our Faithfulness How do we stay faithful? How do we keep from being deceived and turning away? Well, we have some tools God has given to help us:

1. we focus on the One who is continually faithful (1) We fix our eyes on Jesus. We gaze at Him. We watch Him be faithful to us every day. We watch Him be faithful to us even when we fail, which happens frequently. And we marvel at His faithfulness. If we are faithless, he will remain faithful, for he cannot disown himself. - 2 Tim. 2:13. He can’t be anything else but faithful. He can’t change His character. Look at Him. Praise Him. Worship Him. Sing “Great is Thy faithfulness.” And the more you focus on Him, the more you’ll be moved by His faithfulness to be like Him. Secondly:

2. we rely on daily encouragement from one another (13) That’s why God gave us to each other. We can’t do it alone. We are blind to our own faults. We often can’t see when we’re beginning to believe the lie. So, God has put us together to encourage one another to be faithful, to trust Him, to not give up, to not turn away, to not follow the temptation to sin. We need to have the kind of relationships where we interact with other believers daily, regularly and share our hearts and pray together. The encouragement of others will help to keep us faithful. And finally:

3. we realize the importance of each “Today” (13) Opportunities are short. Bruce Larson once saw a sign in a psychiatrist’s office which said, “In two days, tomorrow will be yesterday.” [Wind and Fire by Bruce Larson. Page 105.] Today is short; it goes by quickly. It is only called “today” for 24 hours. That’s why the Psalmist said, Today, if you hear His voice... don’t harden your heart; listen to Him! Obey Him! Faithfulness occurs one step at a time. One moment at a time. One issue at a time. Every time you say “no”, that opportunity is past and enough “no’s” become a wasted life. Say “yes” each time. Say “yes” right away. Don’t give yourself time to doubt and fear and be turned away.

Polycarp was a disciple of the Apostle John and beloved leader in the early church who was arrested for being a Christian leader. When he was asked for the third and final time to disavow his Christ, the old man replied, “Eighty and six years have I served Him, and He has done me no wrong. How can I speak evil of my King who saved me?” And 1900 years later we still quote him and tell the story of his martyrdom. [Quoted in Closer Walk, July, 1988, p. 22.] But what a point! He’s been faithful, so how can I not be? We only have three things to keep us faithful. We have Him. We have each other. And we have this moment today in which to choose. Let’s fix our eyes on Him like Polycarp did and bask in His faithfulness to us; let’s encourage one another constantly to make faithful choices in life and let’s seize each moment to say “Yes”!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Privilege Of Rest 4:1-13

In chapter 3 we saw the faithfulness of God to us. He IS always continually faithful to us as His people. And we looked closely at the warning given to us in view of that to be faithful to Him, to listen when we hear His voice and obey immediately, instead of hardening our hearts as Israel did in the wilderness. But in chapter 4 we’re going to learn a very deep truth: being faithful to God doesn’t mean DOING; it means RESTING. We, as believers, have the privilege of entering His rest. Now to understand that, we begin as the writer does by continuing to look at:

I. The Rest Of God That Israel Failed To Enter (1-3a) Here’s what happened:

1. Joshua’s generation refused to enter Canaan and died in the wilderness God brought them out of Egypt, across the Red Sea, destroying their enemies, led them to Mt. Sinai and gave them His law and then up to the very border of the land of Canaan which He had promised them. There, He told them to go in, but they rebelled and refused to go in because their spies reported giants in the land and they were afraid. So, God swore that that one entire generation would not enter His rest in the land, but would instead wander and die in the wilderness. Now let's look closely at:

a. God's instruction At Sinai He had told them in Lev. 25:38, I am the LORD your God, who brought you out of Egypt to give you the land of Canaan and to be your God., and when they got there, Moses told them clearly in Deut. 1:21, See, the LORD your God has given you the land. Go up and take possession of it as the LORD, the God of your fathers, told you. Do not be afraid; do not be discouraged." God's principle is simple: "I give; you go and receive" "I am giving it to you; that is my work. Yours is simply to believe Me and go up there and take possession of what I've given you. That's all!" But they didn't see it that way! They thought they would have to go up and fight the giants and take it away from them, all by means of normal human strength and ability. So they refused, but note:

b. the basis of their refusal was unbelief (2) They didn't believe God would do what He said, that He would give it to them, that He would take the giants out of the way. Even after all they'd already seen Him do, they doubted the ability of God and took the total responsibility for the work on themselves and that led to disobedience. They said, "No, we won't because we can't." So, they missed out on what God wanted to do with their lives and they died struggling in the wilderness instead of resting in Canaan. They missed entering His rest! But now we read that:

2. later generations had opportunity to enter His rest (6-8) A few hundred years pass and one day along comes David and writes Psalm 95 and says, "Today...when you hear his voice don't harden your hearts but obey and enter in!" We read the full quote back in chapter 3 last time. So, what the writer is saying is that now in David's day, Israel had another chance. They could have entered into His rest. It was another "Today" for them. Now:

a. Israel was IN the land, but trusting in their own works The issue was no longer physically entering the land. They were already in. But history tells us that instead of becoming God's example nation to the world, they fell away into idolatry and were taken into captivity. More generations didn't believe God so they disobeyed God and they missed His plan for their lives instead of entering His rest. And hundreds of years more pass and there's another "today". At long last, the central event of all history is upon them. Jesus, the long-promised Messiah comes in to the world. And what do we find Israel doing? Look at Jn. 6:27-29. They're trying to fill their own bellies and to work the works of God, to figure out what God wants and go do it so that they can impress Him. And Jesus says, "No, that's not it. You can't get eternal life; it's a gift God gives you. And I'm the gift. The work of God is to believe in Me, to trust in Me to give you the life and then simply go do what I tell you as My followers!" But again, that generation wouldn't do it!

b. they refused to receive God's Messiah and were set aside - Jn. 1:11-13 They crucified the Lord of glory and God set them aside in His plan as a nation and built the church instead. They missed His purpose and plan because they wouldn't believe and then simply receive and obey! Israel missed God's rest and they missed it and they missed it! They missed His plan for them because they wouldn't believe Him and obediently receive what He gave them! But notice that the writer says three times:

3. there still remains a sabbath-rest for the people of God (1, 6a, 9) There is still a rest left for the people of God to have. Today is another today and we can have it. And the writer coined his own new word here to describe it; he called it a sabbatismos, a rest like that of the sabbath. It's used only once in the Bible, here and nowhere else. It's not about going into a physical land anymore and it really never was. It's a principle of living, an entering into the way God does things. You see:

a. we become people of God by resting in Christ, not self, for salvation When I was 15 years old, I made a discovery. I figured out I was sinful and that I was trying to save myself by being good. I was going to church and Sunday School. I quit swearing and tried to sweep all the bad habits out of my life. I thought I was doing quite well until I saw that God isn't impressed by all that stuff and it couldn't save me. I saw that I was lost and only One could save me, that Jesus had died for me and that I must stop trusting in myself and trust Him to save me once for all. And one Saturday morning I did it! I did what the Jews refused to do. I exercised faith. I believed what God said and I accepted His gift of salvation. I just took it and depended on Him to save me. And all these years I've been resting in Christ for my salvation. I've been busy at a million things, but never at achieving my salvation. I'm at perfect rest in the finished work Christ has done. That's how we become the people of God, isn't it? We understand that. Most of us have experienced that. We've come to rest in Jesus for salvation. But this chapter isn't about becoming the people of God, about receiving salvation; it's about living as the people of God, about serving God's purpose with our lives, now that we are His people. And it is the same:

b. we live as people of God by resting in Christ, not self, for service Just as Israel was to believe that God had given them the land and simply to obey and go up there and let Him give it to them, that's how it is supposed to be with us. He does the doing; we believe He will do it and simply do whatever He tells us and let Him do it. We rest in Him. Now for a lot of years, I thought it worked the other way. I trusted in Christ for salvation but now as a believer I was working for Christ. I was serving Him, meaning doing things for Him, doing His work, building His Kingdom, FOR Him! I was trying to "work the works of God!" And, to be honest, that's how most Christians see the Christian life. It is a life of a Christian DOING for God! But some years ago, I found out something; maybe you have too. I got awfully tired that way. Doing and doing and doing. Always trying to do the next thing for God but worn out and weary from it. And I finally saw the principle: He does the work; I simply believe it and do whatever He tells me, resting in Him to provide both the strength to obey and the result! And friend, it's a whole new way of life! It's an exchanged life, mine for His, living through me! Now, on the outside it doesn't look much different. I still read my Bible and pray and teach and visit and do all that pastor type stuff I did before, but I've learned to approach it all a whole new way, to rest in His working, not mine. So, life right here and now becomes a sabbath-rest, a rest like God's. Now let's examine more closely:

II. The Meaning Of God's Rest (10) There you have it. To enter God's rest means ceasing our own effort and trusting in His. It means resting like He did. When? Way back at the beginning. Look at what the writer says about:

1. the sabbath rest God entered (3b-4) Did you see what that said?

a. all God's work has been finished since the creation of the world The key words are finished and all. That's a real revelation. I used to think of it this way: in six days God worked really hard and made the universe and everything in it and on the seventh day He rested from all His work (not that He was tired or anything like that, but because it's a good thing and an example to us). And then on the eighth day He went back to work like we do on Monday mornings! But that's not the way it was at all. ALL God's work, everything God ever did, was completed and finished by the end of the sixth day. His work was over. Think about it. How many times does the Scripture mention that thought? Christ was the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world! Ephesians says God chose us in Him before the foundation of the world. Revelation says our names are written in the Book of Life from the foundation of the world. Jesus said the Kingdom has been prepared for us from the foundation of the world. All God was ever going to do was already done and accomplished before the foundation of the world. It was already done even though it had not yet come to exist in the continuum of time. So, when God entered into Sabbath-rest, He was done with all of it forever! Does that mean He no longer does anything? No, the other side of that coin is this:

b. yet God has been continually at work without ceasing - Jn. 5:17, Jesus said to them, "My Father is always at his work to this very day, and I, too, am working." He's never taken a break. He works even on the Sabbath day (which is what the Jews were complaining about). God has been continually, unceasingly active since the creation, working powerfully in people and events, steering the whole world on its course. So how can that be? It's already all done, yet He's always working on it; He's always resting, yet always working. What does it mean?

c. God works continually out of a position of complete rest It's already all decreed and done. It is as certain to occur as His own Person. Now He's simply working it out as it occurs in time. It is sure, settled, established. There is no doubt about how it turns out, no desperate struggle to make it happen, no drivenness to make sure every piece falls in place. There is an absolute confidence in Himself and His power and His decree that it will be. There is a sabbath-rest and the activity is simply an unfolding day by day of what His power has already determined. Wow! But, after all, He's God. How does that apply to us? Well, first look at:

2. Jesus: our example of sabbath rest - Jn. 14:10-12 Look closely. "The Father lives in Me and He's in me doing His work. The words I say are His words; the works I do are His works and anyone who has faith in Me will do what I've been doing. This is how you will live too. You're a container. The Spirit of God will live in you and He will do the work." Look again at 8:28-29. Do you see it? He is in Me. I just believe it and do whatever He says! He does the work; I rest in His power, ability and direction by faith! I simply choose to do what pleases Him and rest in Him. That's how Jesus lived and that's:

3. the sabbath rest that we enter into Over in Matthew we have Jesus' own invitation to us in Mt. 11:28-30. He doesn't say, "Come to Me and I will make you work; you'll work for me harder than anything you've ever done because your heart will really be in it!" He says, "Come to Me and I will give you rest! I'll give you rest for your souls! I'm not a harsh driving taskmaster pushing you on to pull harder and harder to get my work done. I'm not like that; I'm meek and humble at heart. I love you. I invite you to enter my rest. How? It's simple: I'll put you into a yoke with Me! What's a yoke? It's one of those wooden beam and harness things that joins two oxen together so they can pull a plow. Now we've got a plow to pull. And here's how we'll do it; we'll get into the yoke together, you and I. The yoke will be easy; the burden will be light. Why? Because I'll provide the power; I'll pull the plow. You just trust Me and follow where I say to go. That's all!" Do you see it?

a. we cease from laboring in our own strength to achieve His work We quit trying to do it the old way, quit trying with all our might to do His work, to work for Him, to work His works, to be everything He's said we have to be, to be perfect as He is perfect. We just quit and:

b. we rest in faith that He will do all He has determined through us We trust that whatever He brings into our lives, whatever He wants us to do, He will accomplish it all. It's His business, not ours. We have nothing to accomplish.

c. we simply obey what He commands We just do whatever He says. We believe Him, trust Him and act in simple obedience, no matter how impossible it looks. No matter how many giants we think are in the land, we say, "Yes, Lord!" and march in. So, we are resting in Him while acting.

Can you see what I'm saying? Oh, this discovery of His rest has been made by so many down through the years. J. Hudson Taylor, the founder of the China Inland Mission and the father of the second wave of missions in the current era wrote: "I used to ask God to help me. Then I asked that I might help Him. I ended up by asking Him to do His work through me." If He's doing the work, I'm at rest. The pressure is all off. It is all of Him and none of me. Well, if that's the case, if that's how the Christian life is supposed to work, then we have only one true labor:

III. Our True Labor Is To Enter Into His Rest! (11) What a paradox! We have to work hard to rest! It doesn't come easy. We're used to doing everything out of self, self-direction, self-ability. Our greatest battle is to die to self, to simply quit, to cease our striving, to quit thinking that we have to do it all and to let Him. What makes that so hard?

1. our roadblock in choosing to rest is the same as it was for the Israelites. The word in verse 11 in the Greek is not disobedience but unbelief. They disobeyed because they didn't believe God could or would do what He said. And we have a hard time believing God too. We have a hard time seeing how He's going to get us through this problem, how He's going to make this work or that work. So, we're sorely tempted to try to fix it ourselves and to do it our own way, instead of simply saying, "Yes, Lord, You do it; now what do I do next?" It's hard for us. We have to die to self-effort. But you know what's worse is:

2. 1. we are often deceived about our own labor: So much of the time we think we're doing His work when in actuality we've decided what His work is and set out to do it without Him or relying on Him only to back us up when we run out of steam. It may be all good stuff, all wonderful deeds but if it is not His work in and through me, then it is all my work and not His at all. I so easily deceive myself about this, so easily slip into doing things in the self instead of resting in Him. And it is in that context the writer warns us that:

a. God's Word discerns the thoughts and attitudes of our heart (12) It can tell the difference between my own mind and emotions and the spirit. It can discern the very thoughts and attitudes of my inmost being. It's not what my outside is doing but what my deepest inside is resting on. God's Word wants to pierce and penetrate me down to that level so that way down in there at the bottom line, I'm resting in Him, not in me. And then the writer adds that:

b. God's eyes see every action, thought and motive (13) You can't hide anything from Him. It's all uncovered and laid bare. He sees right through it. And when it comes to looking back at all that's been done through your life and determining whether it's the gold, silver and precious stones or the wood, hay and stubble of 1 Cor. 3., in His eyes wood never looks like gold. He knows why you did what you did, and whether you were trusting in Him to do it through you or not, far more clearly than you do.

So again, we close with the challenge of verse 11. The word disobedience is literally unbelief. Trust God to do the work through you.

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Privilege Of Grace 4:14-5:10

At verse 14 of Chapter 4 we begin a new paragraph and a new thought. The writer begins to talk to us about another privilege we have, the privilege of grace. What is grace? It is unmerited favor; it is receiving blessing and help and benefit that we don't deserve, but it's given to us anyway out of the love of the giver. Now, how are you going to explain grace thoroughly to a bunch of believers who are steeped in a background of Judaism with its laws and rituals? Well, the writer chooses to do it by telling us that we've got a Great High Priest. Our Gentile minds say, "Huh?" But these readers sat up and took notice because they understood:

I. The Office Of An Earthly High Priest The High Priest in New Testament times was the most important person in the nation. He was the chief civil and ecclesiastical dignitary among the Jews. He was chairman of the Sanhedrin and head of political relations with the Roman government. But his spiritual importance was even greater. He alone entered the Holy of Holies once a year on the Day of Atonement and also offered the daily offerings during that week. So, He alone could procure atonement for the sins of the people and from the very institution of the office in the Old Testament, we read that his sins could be attributed to the people, that he ruled the people and that his death was a national event. Read 5:1-4. The High Priest is THE one person that represents the people to God. Now look closely at him:

1. he is united in nature with those he represents to God (1) He is selected from among the people. He is one of them, one of their own number, one with a nature just like theirs, one in every point like they are. That's why he can represent them. He is appointed to go on their behalf to God. In essence, they approach God IN HIM, in his person. And:

2. he procures atonement for them by continually offering sacrifices (1b) Notice the plurals, gifts and sacrifices. The High Priest's function touched the most important area of their lives; it was to deal with their sins, to procure atonement for their evil behavior by the repeated offering of regular sacrifices. His function was to get them grace, to get them what they didn't deserve, forgiveness, instead of punishment, so that they were cleansed and able to approach God and find favor with Him. Now, a good High Priest:

3. he deals moderately with them because he has the same weakness (2-3) He has a perpetual reminder of it. Every time he offers a sacrifice for the sins of the people, he has to offer one for his own first! They go astray, but he's a man like they are, so he knows that he too goes astray. For him to deal harshly and unfeelingly and judgmentally with them is hypocritical. If he's a good one, he deals gently. He doesn't approve of their sins; he's not happy about them. But he does understand how they fall because he's one of them! And so, his people feel that they can approach him, that they can come to him, because his own weakness helps him to have an attitude of grace toward them. And finally, the writer notes that:

4. he cannot presume to enter the office but must be appointed by God (4) Several times in Scripture people tried to assume it. They tried to assert the right to be priests and approach God. And neat things happened, like the earth opened and swallowed them or they were struck with leprosy or deposed from being king! God made it very clear that the only High Priest He'll accept is the one of his choosing, the one He has appointed, the one of the chosen line of Aaron. Now you're ready to understand what the writer means when he says that:

II. Jesus Is Our Great High Priest 4:14 is the only place that this description is ever used. We have literally a MEGA-High Priest, a High Priest that is greater, more majestic, more powerful, more worthy, more able to fill His office, than any earthly High Priest the Jews ever had. He didn't just pass through a cloth veil here on earth to enter in to do His work; He passed through the heavens all the way to the true Temple of God and there entered into His presence on our behalf (5:5-10)! And you'll notice that all that was true of a good earthly High Priest was far and away more true of Him. First:

1. He was appointed as our eternal High Priest by God Himself (5-6) He didn't assume the position to Himself. The same God and Father who declared to Him in Ps. 2:7, "You are My Son..." also declared in Ps. 110:4, "You are an eternal priest, a priest who abides forever, a priest who didn't get to be priest because his daddy was a descendant of Aaron but who, like Melchizedek, was appointed by God to stand alone as a priest, the only One in His order." God has designated Jesus Christ as the One True Eternal High Priest for all men for all time. God doesn't want anybody else. There's nobody else that's an acceptable representative for the human race, nobody else qualified to approach Him. That's why He's the Great High Priest. And the writer's got a lot more to say about that in chapter 7 when he goes back to it, but we'll leave that for another day. The point he's getting to is that Jesus:

2. He sympathizes completely with our weaknesses (4:15) Jesus' response to us as sinners goes way beyond just dealing moderately or being gentle. He sympathizes is literally, He suffers with us in our weaknesses in Greek. He feels them with us because:

a. He endured every temptation we experience, yet without sin Have you ever been tempted to hate somebody for what they've done to you? He was tempted too and more deeply than we are, yet He didn't yield! Have you ever been tempted to throw in the towel and do wrong just once because the reward seemed so huge? The devil literally offered Him the world on a silver platter to fall down for one moment of worship, but He refused. Ever been tempted to show everybody how great you are or take something that wasn't yours when you needed it? Ever been tempted to think lustfully or to be jealous of others or to be self-centered and send the crowd away just to get rid of them? He experienced all those things, every temptation you will ever face. He felt it full force. He understands why sometimes you give in, sometimes you blow up, sometimes you fail, why sometimes you just don't have it in you to keep going any more. He knows the war inside your mind. He felt all of those things in the weakness that came with becoming a human being, yet He did not sin. But instead of looking at you with condemning, critical eyes of judgment, He looks at you with eyes of mercy, with a heart that wants you to be forgiven instead of punished and which was willing to pay the price so you could have it! But the depth of that mercy came by way of experience! And not only that:

b. He learned obedience as we do in the depths of suffering (7-8) Here's a deep, deep thought. He was the Son. He knew obedience from the other side. He knew what it looked like as the universe rendered it to Him. But when He became one of us, He learned the pain of obedience, not in a simple painless way, but in the very depths of agony and suffering. He learned the depths of obedience in:

(1) the agony of Gethsemane where He cried out loudly and with tears to have the cup of death taken from Him, where He sweat great drops of blood from the intensity of the pressure He was under as Lk. 22:39-44 tells us. Resisting the temptation to disobey was such an intense battle that angels had to come afterward and physically strengthen His body to get through that night to the cross! He knew what it was like to cry out for deliverance and get a "No!" and face the loss of His own life by obeying! We've not yet resisted unto blood, but He did! And He was heard because He was willing to say, "Not My will, but Thy will be done!" You say, how was He heard? In:

(2) the answer of Calvary Look back sometime at Ps. 22:1-2, 22-24, 25-28. David saw it in prophetic type. The struggle continued on the cross, My God, why have you forsaken Me? But the Psalm answers that, When He cried unto Him, He heard! How? God raised Him from the dead! He didn't save Him FROM death, but literally OUT OF DEATH. He took Him straight through death to resurrection ground and the long view is that because of His obedience, all the peoples of the earth will bow down before the Lord! But in the process of experiencing the tremendous cost of obeying and resisting:

3. He became the source of our eternal salvation (9-10) All who will obey Him, all who will place their trust in Him, receive an eternal atonement for their sins. He becomes their High Priest who saves them once and for all forever. But because of the route that He took in becoming a man, living as a man, resisting, suffering and dying as a man, here's:

III. What Having Such High Priest Means To Us (4:14-16) You see:

1. our High Priest sits on a throne of grace The High Priest was also the ruler. Jesus' priestly work of the cross is now done and He's sitting in heaven exalted high as a Priest on His throne. But the throne He sits on is not to us a throne of judgment, a throne of condemnation, a throne of punishment and destruction. It is a mercy seat! This is the only place in Scripture this lovely term occurs. It is a throne of grace, a throne where we get what we do not deserve, where we are not dealt with according to our sins, but according to His merciful love which paid for them all! So, we're told that:

2. at His throne we will find exactly what we need at that moment In that moment when we are struggling in the depths of our soul with our human weakness, when everything in us cries out to take what we want and do our will instead of His, we can run to His throne in prayer and:

a. we will find mercy that cares about us Alexander the Great once found a private in his army fainting and sick in the cold air and had him carried and seated down in his own royal seat in his tent by a fire. When the soldier came to, he sprang to his feet and apologized. Alexander smiled and said, "Don't you know that you Macedonians live after another manner under your kings than your enemies the Persians? For them it is death to sit in the king's chair, but to you it became life." For the rest of the world, the throne of God is a fearful place. If they stand before it as sinners, they find the wrath of a holy God; they find justice that is due them meted out. It is a great white throne of judgment. But because of what our Great High Priest did, for us it is a throne of life, a throne of mercy where we find Someone who cares about our struggle, our pain, our need, our weakness, our frailty, Someone who sympathizes with us in our weaknesses because He truly knows them. Yet when we come, we will not only find a High Priest who cares:

b. we will find power that enables us, grace to help us in our time of need. We'll find power when we have none, strength when ours is all gone, energy where we are all drained. How? Eph. 3:20, Now to him who is able to do immeasurably more than all we ask or imagine, according to his power that is at work within us... Eph. 1:19-21, ...his incomparably great power for us who believe. That power is like the working of his mighty strength, which he exerted in Christ when he raised him from the dead and seated him at his right hand in the heavenly realms, far above all rule and authority, power and dominion, and every title that can be given, not only in the present age but also in the one to come. The same power by which the Father answered Jesus and raised Him out of the grip of death is at work in us mightily. It is our grace to help in time of need. We can't resist temptation. We can't refuse to sin. We can't cleanse ourselves and become pure. Jesus did all that at the cross for us. But we can find power to obtain victory if we come to that throne of grace and look:

3. we are encouraged to approach Him freely (16), with confidence, with boldness, without hesitation, without thinking for even a moment that we will find condemnation instead of grace. "Lord, I am sinking, I am falling, I have no strength, I can't resist, I'm about to give in, Lord, Lord, Lord..." You're invited, you're encouraged, as much, as often, as long, as loud or as softly as you want or like, to come to the Throne of Grace. We have a High Priest sitting there who is touched deeply with our infirmities and:

4. we are encouraged to hold fast to Him (14) The Greek says literally, to hold fast to our confession and what is our confession? 3:1 says Jesus is the High Priest we confess! Cling to Him; hold fast to Him. His eyes are mercy; His word is rest! His throne is life!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Problem Of Immaturity - 5:11-6:12

There are few more difficult passages to interpret than the one we look at this morning; there are few that have been more widely debated and interpreted as to their meaning. I read almost every commentary I've got on Hebrews and most of them have a list of all the various interpretations that have been proposed and why theirs is the right one. So I've wrestled all week with these verses and prayed for understanding and here goes. If you don't agree with where I wound up, you're probably in some good company (but so am I because I checked!) This passage is actually an aside, an interruption of the flow of the epistle. The author wants to go on to explore the subject of Christ's High Priesthood and the whole idea of the order of Melchizedek and he does get back to it in at the end of chapter 6 and in chapter 7. These verses are a "But before I get to that, there is something I've just got to say..." They are:

I. A Frank Digression About Immaturity (5:11-6:3) These believers he was writing to were spiritually immature. They had been believers for a good long while now, but they were still not sure and were wavering on elementary truths of the faith. He was having real hesitance about teaching them deeper things, because they still showed confusion about the very first things you learn in the Christian life. You see:

1. maturing is a natural part of spiritual life (5:11-14), just like it is in our physical lives.

a. it is natural for new believers to need basic truths, just like a baby has to drink milk. If you try to feed a newborn meat or solid food, it will choke him or he'll spit it out. He's not ready for it, not capable of consuming it. He needs milk first. A person who's just come to Christ is not ready to debate the five points of Calvinism or the theories of the rapture and second coming. He needs milk. He needs to understand his salvation fully and have assurance and those things. That's natural. But also:

b. it is normal to deepen in understanding over time As the baby grows and his body develops and his tastes develop, he is not only able but desires to eat solid food and eventually, meat. It's a normal process that occurs. Likewise, it is normal for a new convert to Christ to deepen in his understanding over time, to move beyond what he first knew, to understand deeper things and to have his life more and more thoroughly changed by it. BUT:

c. it is ABNORMAL to be unclear about basic truths AFTER a time, isn't it? It is abnormal for a 5 or 7 year old to drink nothing but milk, to desire a bottle, isn't it? No offense to you nursing mothers, but if you see a 5 or 6 year old who still wants to nurse, you think, "Something's not right here; there's a weaning process that hasn't occurred somehow; there needs to be a moving on toward maturity." And the same is true in the realm of the spiritual life. It is abnormal for someone who's been saved for a couple of years to be unclear and uncertain about elementary truths. If they are, something is wrong somewhere! By now they should be teaching others, but they end up having to be taught the same basic things over and over again. They're still not able to have spiritual discernment and tell what's right to believe and what's wrong to believe. So either they haven't been fed properly or something is more deeply wrong. But what are:

2. the elementary truths that should be settled by now (6:1-2) The Living Bible puts it like this: Let us stop going over the same old ground again and again, always teaching those first lessons about Christ. Let us go on instead to other things and become mature in our understanding, as strong Christians ought to be. Surely we don't need to speak further about the foolishness of trying to be saved by being good, or about the necessity of faith in God; you don't need further instruction about baptism and spiritual gifts [literally, "the laying on of hands."] and the resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment. When you find people who say they've received Christ a good while back but still talk in the next breath about doing good in order to be saved or whether you have to be baptized in order to be saved or what happens when you die or whether there really is a hell or things like that, there's a problem. Those things should be settled by now! Now, what was it in the case of these Hebrew believers? You see, they wanted Jesus, but they could hardly let go of their old dependence on Judaism. They still wanted to look to Moses and the law. They still wanted to go to the Temple and offer the sacrifices, and felt the need of the earthly priesthood to help them. The overall message of the book of Hebrews is "LET GO OF THOSE THINGS! We've got something better. We've got Jesus who is better than angels, better than Moses, better than the old High Priest, better than anything. Let them go!" Those are all what verse 1 in the KJV calls "dead works" or the NIV margin calls "useless rituals" that can never save you! They were still vacillating on the essentials; is Jesus enough or isn't He? And so, in these verses the writer makes an:

3. the appeal to move on to maturity (6:1, 3) "I don't want to go back over that ground again and teach you those basic things; I want to move on to teach you about other stuff, deeper stuff, mature stuff, and I will, Lord willing, in just a moment. But you need to settle those things, choose to believe those things once for all and move on!" And then the writer gives:

II. A Grave Warning About Immaturity (6:4-8) Wow! A somber, sobering warning written to believers! What does it mean? Well, before we look at what the text actually says, let me lay a background for understanding. In this realm there are:

1. two fundamental complementary truths: They are both absolutely true and when rightly understood they complement each other, that is, they form the two halves of one vital truth.

a. a true believer CANNOT lose his salvation; he will persevere The New Testament affirms this everywhere. See Jn. 10:27-30. Salvation is a once-for-all work of God that cannot be undone or lost. When the Spirit of God comes in and the heart of the believer is regenerated, he is a new creature and that process cannot be reversed or undone. That person is secure and safe and God will keep them until the very end when they inherit the Kingdom. If you were raised a Methodist or a Pentecostal or otherwise came under the impression that you can, you'd better go back and take another look! However, the converse is this:

b. a true believer demonstrates life; he will grow and produce fruit You also read this everywhere through the New Testament. By their fruits you shall know them. You can't get grapes from thorns or figs from thistles. A tree is known by its fruit. Branches that produce no fruit are cut down and thrown in the fire. They aren't real. Faith that produces no works is dead; it's not real. Good soil produces a crop that is 30 or 60 or 100 fold. There is visible evidence of life and growth. The writer of Hebrews uses the same analogy in (7-8). Good land, true land, produces a visible, useful crop. Land that only grows thorns and thistles in spite of all the farmer's efforts, gets cursed and burned over. A genuine believer who is truly converted and regenerated produces visible spiritual fruit. He has a hunger for the Word of God and is applying it to his life and his character and behavior are changing. His understanding is deepening. He is impacting others and so on. Now that brings us to the:

2. two enigmas we encounter in people: You know what an enigma is, don't you? Something that's confusing and hard to explain. We encounter two types of people that are like that. The first is:

a. one who professes faith without demonstrating life He says, "I'm a Christian; I've accepted Christ," but over time, his life doesn't demonstrate it. He lives just the way he did before. He lies, he cheats, he steals or commits immorality and he does it all without remorse or feeling guilty. He doesn't read the Word or pray or go to church or if he does, his heart isn't really in it. He literally continues in a life of sin. It's confusing and hard to explain. How can one who claims to have eternal life live in such a way? Well, we have a word for such a person; he or she is a hypocrite, an actor, a charlatan who's fooling themselves. He is someone who's pretending to be something he's really not. He is no more genuinely saved than Adolf Hitler. No fruit means no life. Yet here's a person who's even more confusing:

b. one who once demonstrated life, but now rejects it I know someone who told me that he grew up in a Bible preaching church. He was in the youth group and was full of excitement for Jesus and ran around with a Scofield Bible and all that stuff. But today he really wants nothing to do with any of it. What happened? At one time he seemed no different from you and I; he seemed to be living and producing fruit. Did he lose his salvation? No doubt you know someone like that. There are wonderful reports all over the world of Muslims and Hindus and Buddhists being converted to Christ. But there have always been some few reports of believers who were an active part of the church, even some Christian leaders, leaving their faith and converting to Islam or Buddhism or even atheism and becoming opponents to the faith. The Roman Emperor Julian, nephew of Constantine who converted to Christianity and made it legal, was raised in the faith, educated in the church and when he assumed the throne turned against it with all his might, earning himself the title of Julian the Apostate, by which he has been known for centuries. Through the years there have often been some strong Christian leaders who have just walked away from it all and become opponents of the faith they once professed. How can that be? Well, Christianity has developed a word for such a person; he is an apostate. And down through the ages, most interpreters have agreed that Heb. 6:4-5 is about a person who becomes an apostate.

3. what apostasy is: falling away (6) This is the only place this word is used in the New Testament. It is reserved for a special meaning. It means a complete rejection of Christ(ianity). It means a complete and permanent rejection and turning away from Jesus and all that He taught after having embraced it all. And not just for a week or a month, but for life. It means a complete, utter rejection of Jesus and all He stands for. Now, where do we see such a thing in Scripture. Well:

a. we see it in the shallow and the thorny soils - Mt. 13:20-22 Here's a man who seems to receive Christ and to grow, to have life. For a while he's indistinguishable from any true believer. But when persecution or trouble comes, he walks away from his faith and doesn't come back. He was not a true convert. He never had salvation. Here's another who seems just as real as any of us, but after a time turns away and back to his old life of making money or leaves the faith because of some powerful influence in his family and never comes back. He was not good soil. There was not true fruit. He was not genuinely saved. That's why he fell away. Now to be fair, some of these are people who simply lose interest and drop out and may yet come back some day. But others of them become apostates, deniers and enemies of the faith, opposites of the Apostle Paul. He now preached the faith he once tried to destroy. They now try to destroy the faith they once preached.

b. we see it in the heresy of Simon the Magician He was a sorcerer who held the people of Samaria mesmerized by his powers until Philip came and preached Christ there and Acts 8:13 says he believed. He made a profession of faith. He was even baptized and gave open testimony of it publicly. He followed the apostles around and was amazed by the power of God he saw in them. Weeks went by and at last Peter and John came down and look at 18-24. Peter told him he wasn't real; he hadn't been truly saved and regenerated for all his outward appearances. His heart was full of sin and he urged him to repent before destruction came on him and there is just a hint that he seemed sorry, or rather, worried about his own destruction. Did he repent? Well, the writings of the early church are filled with his name. It is said that he founded his own cult, proclaiming himself to be the creator god and his mistress to be his female counterpart in creating all things. Indeed, the cult of the Simonians, though very small, persisted until the third century before it died out. And the early church fathers credit him with the dubious distinction of being the progenitor and founder of Gnosticism, the constant heretical enemy of the true church in the first century. He fell away, though he seemed genuine, turned from Jesus and never looked back. He became an apostate, one who never truly had salvation, though he once seemed to manifest it, and fell away. And of course, most clearly:

c. we see it in the betrayal of Judas - Acts 1:16-17 Think about it. Judas was with Jesus for three years. He was part of the special circle of the Twelve. He had seen the miracles. His hands held the bread as it multiplied. He had been in the boat when Jesus walked on the water. He was sent out with the others and his hands worked healings and cast out demons! He was counted among them as no different. No one pointed a finger at him. He was there at Caesarea Philippi; he knew that Jesus was truly the Christ, the Son of the Living God! He waved the palm branches and shouted Hosanna. And then he turned around and betrayed Jesus for 30 pieces of silver! Compare 24-25. His heart was not right; he was not genuine and he left the faith. He threw it away and never came back and ended up where he belonged. He fell away and became an apostate. Did he lose his salvation? No, he never really had it, but he sure looked like he did. He seemed like all the rest to be genuine and true.

So it is possible for a person who seems to demonstrate spiritual life to fall away altogether! Now, we're ready to look at:

4. what the text teaches It teaches a:

a. FACT: it is impossible to renew actual apostates to repentance (4-6) There is no if in the Greek of verse 6. The person who has experienced all these things and has fallen away cannot be brought back to repentance. It's impossible! So there are some people walking around on planet earth who, despite Peter's efforts and prayers or yours and mine, just aren't coming back to Jesus, whether we like it or understand it or not. Why? Because:

(1) they experienced all God has to draw them to true salvation They tasted the work of the Holy Spirit. He has worked in their hearts. He's brought them to see and understand the truth. They know who Jesus is. They have read and known the Word of God and tried the Christian life and have seen the power of God at work in other lives and maybe even through them. There is nothing more He can do, yet in spite of everything God has done to draw them to yield their hearts truly, maybe after years, they choose to walk away and in so doing:

(2) they deliberately "re-crucify" Christ and put Him to shame In their own mind and will they choose to go back there and to shout all over again with that crowd, "Away with this man! Crucify Him! He deserves it!" They become enemies of the Gospel and in their own defection from the faith, they put Him to open shame and humiliation in the eyes of the world. And so, God says, it is impossible to bring them back. Now that goes against our grain but:

(3) it is like the Jews' eternal sin of blasphemy The Jewish leaders saw the miracles. They saw the power. They heard the wisdom. They knew Jesus was of God, that the Spirit of God worked mightily in Him, yet they called Him Beelzebub and said He drove out demons because he got his power from Satan. And look what Jesus said in Mk. 3:28-29. They had crossed the line. God had done all He could do. They were beyond forgiveness, beyond redemption, because they had trampled on it. Their sin was eternal. Of course, they didn't profess Christ to begin with, but their action was just the same as a person who did and then fell away.

It is a fearful thing, but the Bible seems to say that there are some people, hopefully not very many, but some people, walking around in this world who cannot be saved. Listen to the Living Bible of Heb. 6:4-6, There is no use trying to bring you back to the Lord again if you have once understood the Good News and tasted for yourself the good things of heaven and shared in the Holy Spirit, and know how good the Word of God is, and felt the mighty powers of the world to come, and then have turned against God. You cannot bring yourself to repent again if you have nailed the Son of God to the cross again by rejecting him, holding him up to mocking and to public shame. That's the terrible fact the writer is conveying, but why? What does this have to do with immaturity? He's really warning of a grave:

b. DANGER: perpetual immaturity COULD prove to be apostasy (7-8) Land that produces fruit, you know is good land. But land that isn't producing any fruit is IN DANGER. It might get on the bandwagon and start producing fruit at some point and prove to be good soil after all. But if it keeps on producing nothing but thorns, it might just eventually prove to be bad soil! The person who shows no growth, who claims to be saved, but can't get clear on the most elementary truths of salvation and shows no progress in his understanding or life, could, in reality, be simply a true believer who is immature but he also could actually be an apostate in progress, a Simon or a Judas that simply hasn't hit the right occasion yet to turn away! And we have no outward way to tell which one he is! Wow, what a sobering thought! If you're not growing, you need to take a hard look at yourself! There is DANGER! Now, lest we should get the wrong idea out of these harsh words, the writer ends with:

III. A Clear Encouragement For True Believers (6:9-12) First, he says:

1. this is not intended to cause any believer to doubt their salvation (9) God WANTS us who are truly born again to have full and complete assurance, to know that we have eternal life. If you are really saved, you cannot lose your salvation. So let me point out that this warning:

a. it does not refer to a believer falling into sin (backsliding) You cannot lose your salvation by sinning. If you could, we'd all be losing it and getting it back all the time. Christians sometimes fall into horrible sin. David, whose heart was after God, fell into adultery and even murder. This is not talking about a believer who sins and knows it. It is talking about an apostate who walks away from the faith altogether forever. Further:

b. it does not refer to a believer who has a temporary lapse There are plenty who have come to Christ, particularly younger in life, and then have left the Christian way and the Church, only to come back later on in life. Some of you here have done that very thing. In the early church there was debate about whether to readmit people who had been arrested and denied the Lord when their life was threatened. Could they repent? Sure! Look at Peter who denied Him three times and came back. An apostate is somebody who never comes back, who never looks back, who has become an enemy of the true Gospel and openly continues to deny Christ. Anyone, no matter what they've done or how far in sin they are, who has even the faintest desire to come back to Christ, is not the person these verses are speaking about. And also:

c. it is not meant to cast any doubt on God's character (10) It is not intended to imply that God is unfaithful, that He doesn't always keep His own and save them to the very end. He does. It doesn't imply that our loving labor doesn't matter or that He doesn't see it. He does. This warning is not intended to take away your assurance in any way but rather the opposite:

2. it is intended to promote sure hope through diligence (11) It is intended to encourage all of us to press on and seek after God and grow, which is what in itself gives us our assurance. Peter talked about goodness, knowledge, self-control, and love, the fruits of the Spirit and wrote 2 Pet. 1:8-11. Do you see it? If you see yourself growing, you know that you are real and that you will never fall away, that this awful thing will never be true of you, but that you will actually make it all the way to that rich welcome into the eternal kingdom. Your very growth makes the fact of your calling and election sure! The warning is to cause us to grow and be sure and finally:

3. it is intended to prevent laziness and promote endurance (12) You can't just sit around and say, "Well, I've accepted Christ and now I'm secure. My fire insurance is in place. Now I can do whatever I want; I can go play with matches!" You have to grow and you do it, not of your own strength, but by seeking after God. You have to join the ranks of those who trust Him through thick and thin, patiently enduring with their eyes fixed on the inheritance that is waiting for them. Only growth will take you there. Contentment without it is a DANGER sign!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Privilege Of A Secure Hope - Heb. 6:13-20

Hebrews is a deep book, but it is definitely worth wading through and struggling to understand, because there is no other book that helps us to understand the privileges and promises we have in Jesus better than this one! In Jesus we have EVERYTHING, but Hebrews helps us realize EVERYTHING WE HAVE in Him! And just after that difficult passage we looked at in the first half of chapter 6 where we have that stern warning about apostasy, we find the author reminding us of one of our greatest privileges, the privilege of a secure hope! You know, hope is such an important thing. Years ago, a seasick passenger was aboard an ocean liner during a long and rough Atlantic crossing. Before long, he succumbed and leaned over the rail, turning several shades of green. A steward came along and tried to cheer him up by saying, "Don't be discouraged, sir! No one's ever died of seasickness yet!" The nauseated passenger looked up at the steward with baleful eyes and replied, "Oh, don't say that! It's only the hope of dying that's kept me alive this long!" [Servant, Sum 1995. Page 2.] That's funny, but it parodies a truth. It is hope that keeps us going; it is a secure certainty about our personal future that gives us strength to endure life, to keep going in the struggles and the suffering it brings. 1 Cor. 15:19 says, If only for this life we have hope in Christ, we are to be pitied more than all men. We have a hope beyond the grave, a hope that supercedes death itself. We shall be with Jesus Christ forever and it is a certain, sure hope that nothing in all creation can separate us from! Now, how do we know that we have this hope? How do we know that it's not just a wishful thinking, not just what we'd like to be true, but that it's actual true truth that we can lean on? Well, Hebrews gives us a bottom line reason:

I. God Swore An Oath To Us Through Abraham (13-15) Now before you say, "What does that have to do with me?", let's read the whole story. The promise he refers to is quoted from Gen. 22:15-18:

1. God made a promise to Abraham The story of Abraham begins back in Gen. 12 with God telling him to leave everything and go to the land of Canaan and giving him a covenant, an unconditional promise about the future. This promise was repeated by God and explained and expanded on several times, in chapter 15, in chapter 17 and now we have it again in chapter 22, after his only son Isaac was already born and he had offered him to God on an altar on Mt. Moriah. Now look carefully at what God promised. First:

a. He promised him numerous descendants, as many as the stars in the sky or the sand at the shore. This, of course, is the promise that there would be a nation of Israel and that nation would prosper and multiply and be victorious over their enemies. But the promise goes beyond that:

b. He promised him a particular Seed In verse 18 this is not simply a reference to Israel. It is singular and it refers to Christ. How do I know? Look at Gal. 3:16. There we have it spelled out. This is a promise that there would be a particular Seed, the Seed of the Woman from Gen. 3:15, who would come to crush the serpent's head! This is a promise that God would one day send the Christ, the Messiah, the Lamb of God who would take away the sin of the world. And then:

c. He promised through Him to bless all nations and that means us. Through that promised Christ every people on this earth would know the blessing of salvation. Now, just to be very clear, check out Gal. 3:7-8. That promise is a promise of justification, of pardon for sin, of salvation for some from every people. So, when God made the promise, it was to more than Abraham, to more than even Jesus; it was to us!

d. we are the heirs of this promise to Abraham - Gal. 3:29 If you belong to Christ, YOU are Abraham's spiritual child in Him and YOU are the heir of God's promise of salvation; it belongs to you! You are standing here today heir to a salvation based on a promise God made to Abraham nearly 4000 years ago! Now, how do we know that that promise is true, that we will receive the salvation that He has promised, that we will actually get to heaven? Well, the point of the writer in Heb. 6:13 is:

2. God confirmed that promise with an oath We read His words in Gen. 22, I swear by Myself... God took an oath before Abraham. He made the promise numerous times, but this time He confirmed the promise with an oath. He said, "I swear..." and then He literally said, "Blessing, I will bless you..." which the Greek translates as "I will surely bless you..."! In other words, God did everything He could to indicate that His promise was sure and could not be broken. And the writer gives us the response in verse 15:

3. Abraham waited patiently, relying on God's promise First, He waited and waited and waited at least 25 years for a child to be born (Isaac), then he waited and waited another 60 years (check it out) to see his twin grandsons Jacob and Esau born before he died. That's all he ever saw of the fulfillment of that promise in his lifetime, one son and two grandsons! So He died without receiving all that God had promised Him, but He died believing it would be, nevertheless. Check out 11: 13. Abraham and Sarah and those like him, saw the reality of the promises from afar and embraced them as being true and that's what enabled them to live as pilgrims and strangers on the earth, to suffer through the journey of this life. Verse 16 tells us what the bottom line of their hope was: heaven! Verse 10 tells us what Abraham was looking for, a heavenly city whose builder and maker is God! Abraham had a sure and certain hope that God would send a redeemer who would make it possible for him and all of us to be with God in heaven forever! He died, standing on that hope, but 6:15 says:

4. Abraham received what was promised in God's time Abraham did receive what was promised! In due time the Savior came and in due time right now as we participate in the process, the nations are being blessed one by one and salvation is being brought to them, just as He said. And it's not only that these things happened and that the promise was kept, but that Abraham received it. Jesus said in Jn. 8:56, Your father Abraham rejoiced at the thought of seeing my day; he saw it and was glad. When he was alive on earth, he rejoiced at the thought of Jesus' coming, but when Jesus came, he saw it from heaven and was glad! He watched the fulfillment of God's promise and he's watching Him fulfill the promise to all nations right now! Abraham died in hope and that hope was and is being realized! But let's think about:

II. Why God Swore An Oath To Us It's something that would likely never occur to us, something we would hardly notice, but the writer of Hebrews makes a big point of it. First, think about:

1. the purpose of a human oath (16) The swearing of an oath is a process that dates back before the time of Abraham and is still in use today. We swear officials into office with an oath of office. We swear witnesses in to testify in court. We give written oaths on documents that we have witnessed by a notary, "Sworn to before me this day...". We still do this age-old thing. Why? Because:

a. an oath confirms the truth of what is said or at least it is supposed to. Human beings are inveterate liars! We say things that are not true. Not every statement we make can be counted on. So, we always make a way to indicate that we are absolutely, surely, telling the truth. We swear an oath. So generally speaking:

b. an oath puts an end to all argument or doubt How many scenes do you remember seeing where someone says, "Swear to me..." and the person swears and that settles it; it's done. Swearing is a human doubt-removal technique. How does it work?

c. it does so by appealing to the judgment of someone greater In the modern case, to lie under oath or perjury is punishable by the court with a fine or jail time. The idea is that nobody is going to risk that. To forge a document, to sign a false oath or to break a sworn contract; all those things hold us accountable to law enforcement and punishment. In ancient times the swearing of an oath was even a more serious matter. To swear by the gods was to appeal to them to punish the person if they lied! People were desperately afraid of the supernatural and to swear by a god or for the Jews to swear by their Holy Almighty God was a serious thing; to violate an oath was to commit suicide, to call down divine judgment on yourself! The ancients were convinced that curses associated with oaths came true and that's why an oath settled things. But God didn't have anyone greater than Himself to appeal to, so He swore by His own self! Now what was:

2. God's purpose in giving an oath (17-18) He used an oath because:

a. He wanted to make it clear to us that His purpose will not change We are the heirs of the promise. It belongs to us. He swore that oath to us so we would know absolutely that the word of His promise of our salvation is secure and true and it will never change. Because:

b. He wanted to make it clear to us in human terms that we could understand. So He did it the way that we do it. He swore an oath. You see:

c. He wanted us to understand that it is impossible for Him to lie God doesn't need to swear. Every word of God is true. That is His character. If He says a thing, it is so. If He says yes, it means yes and if He says no, it means no. He has no need to swear; He could not do otherwise than tell the truth, but He wanted us to understand that so He gave us TWO things, not just one. He gave us His Word, His promise, and then He gave us His oath on top of it that His promise is true! So we would be double sure to understand that HE DOESN'T LIE! And why is that important?

d. He wanted us to be greatly encouraged by the security of our hope Hey, do you remember the story of when Solomon was crowned King of Israel? His brother Adonijah had tried to steal the kingdom from him by being crowned first. But when Solomon took the throne, Adonijah was terrified that Solomon would kill him and so he fled to the Tabernacle, ran inside and took hold of the horns of the altar of burnt offering. He took hold of a hope, the hope that God would save him from the death he deserved and that he would live. That's what we've done; we've fled to Him for refuge. We've taken hold of the horns of His altar; we've clung to His promise that we are guaranteed salvation in Jesus Christ and He wants us to know that hope is a secure one, that it will not fail, so that we don't have to live in fear, so that we don't have to be terrified, so that we can face anything in the security of the fact that we belong to Jesus and we will be with Him! He swore that oath to encourage us when we understand it! Now look:

III. What His Oath Guarantees To Us (19-20) That hope we have:

1. it is like a trustworthy anchor that cannot fail to hold An anchor was a very important thing to an ancient ship that didn't have a motor to fight the wind and waves. Lives depended on a safe anchorage. In Acts Paul was in a ship on the ocean being driven along out of control by a terrible storm and the crew knew they were near land and they didn't want to be shipwrecked into it at night and die, so they dropped not one, but four anchors from the back of the ship and prayed for daylight. Why did they pray? They were terrified their anchors wouldn't hold! A sailor would give anything to have an absolutely trustworthy anchor that cannot ever slip or be broken loose! Think about it, wouldn't it be wonderful to have an anchor that every time you put it in the water you know it will not move and neither will you because you're held fast to it? My friends, we've fled to God's place of refuge and grabbed hold of an anchor that cannot move! God's oath guarantees that what we've latched our souls onto is absolutely secure and trustworthy. You see:

2. it guarantees that we shall enter into the very presence of God In the inner sanctuary behind the curtain of the tabernacle was the place where God's very presence was, where He spoke from between the cherubim. And in another couple of chapters, we'll read that that earthly tabernacle was just an earthly sort of child's model of the way the real things are in heaven. You see, we're not just going to heaven, not just going to have a cabin in the corner of glory land somewhere; we're going to enter straight through the veil into the inner sanctuary of heaven, straight into the presence of Almighty God. Nothing will stand between us and Him. He will receive us and we will dwell with Him! His oath guarantees it! And here's what confirms it once for all:

3. our security is demonstrated in a Forerunner who is already there for us Jesus already went in there for us on our behalf and He's seated there right now and we are anchored to Him. Where He is, we will be also! It's guaranteed, Hallelujah!

What a privilege! If you have that, you can face anything. You can face suffering, you can face persecution, you can face hatred and bitterness. That's how Stephen could face an angry mob that was stoning him to death without denying his faith; he looked up and saw his Anchor standing up there inside the veil and said, "Lord Jesus, take me home; receive my spirit; here I come!" And he went! That's how you can face trials and discouragements and fears and diseases and death itself. You have a secure hope. You're anchored to a promise that won't let go, that won't fail, that will take you all the way into the very presence of God forever. In the old hymn I remember singing in church as a boy, Priscilla Owens asks: Will your anchor hold in the storms of life? When the clouds unfold their wings of strife? When the strong tides lift and the ca- bles strain, will your anchor drift or firm remain? Then with confidence she replies, We have an anchor that keeps the soul, steadfast and sure while the billows roll, fastened to the Rock which cannot move, grounded firm and deep in the Savior's love. Listen to the second verse, It is safely moored, 'twill the storm withstand, For tis well secured by the Savior's hand, and the cables passed from His heart to mine can defy the blast through strength divine. The next verses tell us, It will firmly hold in the straits of fear; it will surely hold in the floods of death. Listen, we have an anchor that grips the soul steadfast and sure; we're fastened to the Rock which cannot move by the cables of a Divine promise given on oath that our anchor will hold through all the storms the enemy can send our way. We live in a secure hope, a certain knowledge that we are safe, that we are held, and as the hymn says, We shall anchor fast by the heavenly shore with the storms all past forevermore!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Privilege Of A Living Savior - Heb. 7

There is a profound contrast between our faith and any other religion in the world. We celebrate that great difference every Easter. The One we follow, the One we're counting on, the One we're believing in, is alive. Mohammed died and he was gone. Buddha died and he was gone. Lao Tsu died and he was gone. Jesus died and on the third day He rose from the dead and over a period of 40 days He showed himself to more than 500 people and convinced them with many infallible proofs that He is indeed alive! Then He ascended to heaven in their sight, still living! What's the point? Even though He experienced death, He was permanently victorious over it and He is eternally alive and that makes all the difference in the world. Now, the writer of Hebrews emphasizes that fact and illustrates it by comparing Jesus to an Old Testament character who appears on the scene briefly in Gen. 14 whose name is Melchizedek. He had started to talk about this subject in 5:10, saying that Christ is our High Priest forever in the order of Melchizedek, but then he digressed saying, "I have much more to say about this..." and went on a tangent to warn about immaturity in chapter 6. Then in the last verse of chapter 6, he finally comes back to it and repeats himself saying, "Christ has become a high priest forever in the order of Melchizedek." The purpose of Chapter 7 is to explain what that means. Let me break down what I think the author is trying to say like this. First of all, we learn that:

I. Melchizedek Is A Foreshadowing Of Christ's Person (6:20b-7:10) Do you remember the story in Gen. 14? Lot had been captured, along with the inhabitants of Sodom, and Abraham led a successful rescue attempt and brought all these folks back. On the way home, a priest named Melchizedek came out of nowhere to meet Abraham and he pronounced a blessing on him and Abraham gave him a tithe or a tenth of the spoils he had taken. Then he went on his way. To us it is an interesting three verse side note that we quickly forget. But the author of Hebrews says, "No, that Melchizedek is like Jesus; He is a picture of Jesus; He is a visual picture, a foreshadowing of Jesus that points out some key things about Him." Well, how does he foreshadow Jesus?

1. he is both King and Priest (1-2) He was the King of Salem, (Jerusalem), meaning the King of Peace. The name Melchizedek actually means "king of righteousness". Yet he was also a priest of God Most High. That is unusual. Most kings are not priests, but in him the two offices were combined, just as they were in Jesus. He was called "Prince of Peace" and "King of the Jews". Jesus is a King who will rule in righteousness, yet Jesus is also a priest. He offered to God a sacrifice, the sacrifice of Himself. He will literally, as Zechariah said, rule as ...a priest on his throne and the two shall be in harmony, just as they were in old "Mel". So that reminds us of Jesus. Then:

2. he appears to simply "be living", to symbolize eternity (3, 8) Now, the writer is not saying that Melchizedek is some eternal angelic being of a different order. He is merely commenting that in the written record of Genesis, he just "shows up". It doesn't record his genealogy (which is important for a priest; if you can't prove you come from the right line of priests, you can't be a priest!); it doesn't record his birth, his parents, nothing. And it doesn't record what happened to him or his death. He just "shows up" alive and full blown, acts as a priest and disappears. So, according to the record, he was declared to be a living priest and that's how the record stays forever. And that pictures Jesus who we know is alive forever. He is the Eternal Son of God; He has eternal life. Thirdly:

3. he is greater than Abraham and all his descendants To the Jew Abraham is the greatest! "Our Father Abraham; I am a Child of Abraham; I am of the Seed of Abraham!!" They challenged Jesus, Are you greater than our Father Abraham? Well, He was. And that fact is pictured in old "Mel" in two ways. First:

a. they paid tithes to him as greater (4-6a) Abraham's great grandson Levi's descendants collected tithes from others. But Abraham PAID a tithe to Melchizedek, so Abraham acknowledged his greater position! In fact, verses 9-10 tell us that you could say that when Abraham did that, he was acting in behalf of all his yet unborn offspring, including Levi and all the priests of his order. So, in one sense, they were paying tithes through him to a greater priest! At the same time:

b. he blessed them as greater (6b-7) Melchizedek pronounced a blessing on Abraham and his descendants. In this formal, official sense, it is always the greater who pronounces the blessing on the lesser; it is the father or the grandfather who blesses the child, the older who blesses the younger. But Abraham didn't bless Melchizedek, Melchizedek blessed Abraham, so who's the greater spiritual authority?

The point is that a greater than Abraham is here! Melchizedek is greater and he pictures Jesus who is greater. But who cares? Why are we talking about this anyway? Well, the reason is that:

II. Melchizedek's Order Was A Foreshadowing Of Christ's Priesthood (11-22) What's he talking about? Well, did you ever wonder how Melchizedek got to be a priest of God? He just kind of showed up as a priest of God. So:

1. his priesthood was of an entirely different order from Aaron (13-14) Melchizedek didn't get to be a priest because he was of the priestly line. He was directly appointed by God to priestly service. So was Jesus. Humanly He was from the tribe of Judah and nobody from the tribe of Judah ever gets to be a priest. Jesus received a special appointment to priesthood from the Father. And here's the point this whole chapter turns on:

2. God declared His King Son an eternal priest of that order - Ps. 110:4 is quoted in verse 17 and verse 21, but let's turn to Ps. 110 and read the first four verses. This is the holy record of a transaction that occurred in heaven between the Father and His eternal Son and we are privileged to have it recorded. Jesus himself implied that this passage was talking about Him. The Father says, "Sit here at my right hand on the throne until I crush all your enemies. I will install you as My King. And I also declare that you are a Priest forever..." and then he throws in these words "after the order of Melchizedek!" Just as Melchizedek was a priest because God declared him one outside of the whole Levitical system, so now God declares His Son, the Messiah, Jesus, is a priest forever in the same way. Now notice:

a. this declaration came through David after the law (28) Back in Moses' day, the law was given; only Levi's son Aaron and his sons can be priests. But 500 years later in the time of David and through his pen, God made a new declaration. "I declare a new Priest, My King, My eternal Son. He is my priest forever!" And that declaration:

b. it was sealed with His oath (20-22) God swore it to be true to make sure we know He will never change His mind. He guarantees to us that Jesus is the only true Priest. So, what was God doing? In those words:

c. thus God set aside the Levitical system for a better one (18-19) Instead of counting on the lambs and the goats and the bulls of the Levitical system offered by a bunch of priests who die, we count on something better. We count on an eternal Priest who's been appointed forever and has offered a better sacrifice, the once-for-all sacrifice of Himself in our place! We aren't saved by the work of a priest like Aaron, but of a priest like Melchizedek who simply "lives"! So, the point is in verse 22:

3. His indestructible life and unchanging oath guarantee our salvation (22) Jesus is our guarantee of salvation. He has two things. He has an indestructible life. How do we know? Because they tried to take it from Him on the cross and they couldn't. He laid it down and picked it back up again! He is eternal and nothing can kill Him. And He has an unchanging oath from God the Father who will not change His mind that He is the only true acceptable High Priest forever. He has the permanent office of bringing men and women to God! So, when we come to God by this Priest, our salvation is guaranteed!! Now let's forget the whole example of Melchizedek and make it more personal and look at:

III. What Our Living Savior Means To Us (23-28) First of all:

1. His eternal life means a permanent priesthood (23-24) He'll never go out of office, because He'll never die. He'll never have to pass that office on to somebody else. He will always be alive to continue in His office as Priest, which for us means Savior! Second:

2. His eternal life means a permanent presence in heaven for us (25) He is able to save us all the way, forever, because He's always there in Heaven for us. Now, some have tried to paint this verse to mean that He's always there reminding and pleading with the Father, begging Him to forgive us, pleading His blood every time we sin, as though the Father still wants to punish us and Jesus stops Him all the time. Well, I know you've heard that concept preached, but that is just not biblical. Jesus doesn't have to show the Father His hands and side every time we sin to remind Him to forgive us! The Father sent the Son and installed Him as both Priest and Sacrifice so that He could forgive us. It's not His words and His pleadings that intercede on our behalf, it is HIS ETERNAL PRESENCE! He can save us forever because He lives forever. We are saved by His life and His life is eternal; as long as He lives, we live and since He lives forever in Heaven seated as a Priest on His throne, we are saved forever and live forever with Him. Thirdly:

3. His utter holiness offered a permanent sacrifice for our sins (26-27) We don't need somebody to offer some animals or go through some rituals over and over again, somebody who sins just like we do and who has to find salvation himself before he can save us. We need Jesus who is utterly holy and without sin, who is eternally separated from all sin and cannot ever be defiled, exalted High in heaven, who offered One sacrifice for All our sins forever! HE's who we need! That one act saved us forever and His living presence guarantees it! So:

4. His appointment as our Savior is eternal (28) Men are weak. The religious leaders of the world and of history are weak; they cannot save us. The priests of the Old Testament order are weak; they cannot save us. They can't be our savior because they all die. The law was weak; it could not save us. But Jesus lives forever and as our Living Savior, His appointment is eternal and He saves us forever.

You know, in our experience nothing is forever; nothing is permanent. Our bodies deteriorate, wear out and die; our house is always falling apart and needing repair. Our car rusts or wears out or gets hit and we have to get another one. Our loved ones die; our friends move away. Even empires fall apart and whole countries go through change. You can't count on anything; you may not even be alive tomorrow. James said, your life is like a vapor which vanishes away. You brought nothing into this world and it is certain that you can carry nothing out. Even heaven and earth shall pass away. But thank God, there is One who is permanent, One who is eternal, One Living Savior who saves us forever because He lives eternally. He's our only hope, our only guarantee. And He's enough!

*Rejoice, rejoice O Christian, lift up your voice and sing, Eternal hallelujahs to Jesus Christ the King....
He lives, He lives, Christ Jesus lives today!
He walks with me and talks with me along life's narrow way.
He lives, He lives! Salvation to impart.
You ask me how I know He lives, He lives within my heart!*

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Privilege Of A Changed Heart - Heb. 8

To understand chapter 8 of Hebrews, we have to talk about something that we don't relate to very much anymore. In our society we have lots of contracts. We have insurance contracts and contracts between businesses and service contracts on equipment. But rarely do we ever use the word covenant. We hardly even understand the concept. The only covenant that we commonly know is the marriage covenant. And anymore our society treats that more like a contract than a covenant. But God has always related to His people through covenants. He made a covenant with Noah and we still have the sign of the rainbow in the clouds to remind us that He has covenanted never to destroy the earth by a flood again. He made covenants with Abraham and with David, making sure and certain promises about their future. But before we go any further, let's discuss:

I. The Nature Of A Covenant

First of all, a covenant:

1. it is a sacred agreement between two parties It is far more than a simple contract where one party can cancel out any time. It is sacred and holy and binding; it takes the two parties and unites them; it is inviolable, unbreakable, something you can never walk away from. It is a tie that binds and it stands until death! That's why marriage is once for all forever; it's a covenant! Secondly, a covenant:

2. it is often arranged by the intervention of a mediator If the two parties don't know each other or are estranged from one another, to bring them into covenant requires a mediator, a go-between, someone who goes to each party on the other's behalf, someone who stands to represent the heart and soul of both parties to one another to bring them in to one. Thirdly:

3. it involves promises by each to the other Each party pledges a sacred vow to do what is required of them as party to the covenant. The husband promises to love and protect and nurture his wife, to be a husband to her. The wife pledges to submit to his leadership, to support and encourage him, to be a wife to him. And finally:

4. it is usually sealed by a sacrifice in the Old Testament era Often the covenant would be sealed with the sacrifice of an animal, with the shedding of blood and the taking of life. Sometimes the sacrificial animal would be divided into two pieces and the two parties would walk between them, signifying that through the sacrifice they are one. The point is that the covenant costs a life and it is bound through the giving of a life; it is as sacred as life itself! It is no simple business arrangement. Now:

II. Through Moses God Made A Covenant With Israel If you look in your Bible at the page right before Gen. 1, what does it say? Old Testament. Testament is another word for covenant. It is the old way that God bound Himself to His people, The Old Covenant. We can read that covenant in Ex. 19:3-7. Moses mediated that covenant. He went up on the mountain to represent the people of Israel to God and came down to represent God to the people. Through him God entered into a covenant relationship with Israel that out of all the peoples on the earth they would be His special, set apart people, belonging to Him. He would bind Himself to them. But on their part, this covenant:

1. it required obedience to commandments which He spelled out in the next chapter, the 10 commandments and then on throughout the rest of Exodus and all the way through Deuteronomy. God had a Law which he gave to His people that they must obey. As part of that law:

2. it required sacrifices mediated through a priest Every day there would be sacrifices offered to God on behalf of the people by a priest and most particularly, on one day each year, the Day of Atonement, the High Priest would enter the Holy of Holies in the Tabernacle where God's presence was to dwell and sprinkle the blood of a sacrifice on the mercy seat to signify the people's repentance and God's willingness to have mercy and forgive their sins. Now this Old Covenant:

3. it offered a conditional relationship Seminary professor Maurice Robinson tells this story about when he was a boy: "A neighbor lad gave me his pet squirrel for the very good reason that his mother had told him to get it out of the house! My parents spoke with his parents and agreed to the gift. I was quite thrilled with my new possession and greatly enjoyed the animal until the same kind and generous neighbor lad came back three days later and told me that his mother had changed her mind, and therefore I had to give him back the squirrel. I protested; I complained. A gift was a gift. I beseeched my own parents to intervene, but the decision went against me because of certain conditional arrangements made with the boy's mother of which I was unaware. So, the squirrel was gone. My parents then gave me a brief lecture concerning gifts. There are gifts that are given permanently--such as birthday presents--but some gifts come with 'strings attached,' and these might be revoked under certain circumstances. Here the 'string attached' was a reversed decision by my friend's mother, which my parents knew could occur. I learned some theology that day," Prof. Robinson explains. "God provides two types of gifts: some are absolutely free, but some have conditions attached. We speak of these as God's covenants; some of which are 'conditional' while others are 'unconditional.'" [SBC Life, Apr 1996. Page 6.] The covenant God made with Abraham in Gen. 12 to bless him and make out of him a great nation and bless all the families of the earth through him was unconditional. It was not predicated upon his behavior. It was his regardless. But the Mosaic covenant was conditional; God gave Israel the gift of special relationship with Him IF they would obey (verse 5). But if they chose not to obey, not to do what they promised as their part of the covenant, then the covenant called for God to discipline them, destroy them as a nation and scatter them throughout the peoples of the earth. After repeated chances and mercy, they failed to obey and rebelled against their part, but God kept His and you know the rest of the story. However, if you look at the page before Matthew 1 in your Bible, what does it say? The New Testament, that is, The New Covenant.

III. Through Jesus God Made A Covenant With Us, The New Covenant At the Last Supper Jesus held up a cup of wine to His disciples and said, This cup is [symbolizes] the New Covenant in my blood which is shed for many for the remission of sins, Drink it, all of you! On the cross Jesus was about to ratify a whole new way of God relating to man, to those who believe and become part of the Church of Jesus Christ. We stand in relationship to God today through a brand new covenant. That's what Hebrews 8 is going to show us. Now, this New Covenant:

1. it is made through a superior Mediator (1-6) The old covenant was given by Moses, but after him it was continually mediated by the High Priest who continually offered animal sacrifices and entered the Holy Place only that one day a year and then in fear and trembling. But the one who mediated our covenant:

a. He serves in a permanent position of exaltation As we saw last week, He is seated as a priest on His throne. His is at the right hand of the Father, the highest position of honor, and He's seated. He's staying there. So:

b. He enters into the true presence of the Father in heaven The old High Priest was only entering a skin tent with a wooden box overlaid with gold and a gold lid or seat with two angel statues on either side. It had a cloth curtain with pictures of angels embroidered all over on it. That's all he had to go into, a poor earthly replica of God's true presence in heaven. It was a shadow, a type, an earthly object lesson to help visualize the real thing. That's why Moses had such very specific directions to make it a certain way! But after He made His sacrifice on the cross, our Jesus didn't enter into some tent that man set up. He entered into the very presence of the Father in heaven itself, surrounded by myriads of REAL angels right up to the REAL throne where the Father sits and He sat down there at His right hand and stayed! That's what our mediator did! Now which mediator would you rather have, a frail sinful human being or the Son of God who remains seated in His very presence? I'll take Him! He is the one who created the covenant by which you and I are bound to God! Now this New Covenant:

2. it is declared to be new and superior to the old covenant (6-9, 13) Hundreds of years later after multiple violations of the Mosaic covenant, when much of Israel had been carried off into captivity by their enemies and when the other part was about to follow, God spoke through the prophet Jeremiah in chapter 31 and we have it quoted here in Hebrews. And He said, There is a new time coming, a time when I will make a new covenant... Verse 13 says that to make a new covenant means the old one is OUT! It is replaced! You see:

a. the Mosaic covenant was broken by the failure of Israel Time after time they didn't keep it. They ran after other gods; they broke every commandment He had given them. They were promised a relationship as His people, but the old covenant of laws and sacrifices never changed their hearts to become His people, to love and treasure that relationship. They did not remain faithful and He was forced to turn away from them. It failed and:

b. through that failure it has been replaced by the New It has now in Jesus been set aside and replaced. God's Son came as the Mediator of a new covenant between God and man. He offered Himself as the once and for all sacrifice to ratify that Covenant and now offers us the opportunity to enter into that covenant individually by faith, by trusting Him and His sacrifice on the cross as the only payment for our sins. Now just in case you're uncomfortable about the words Israel and Judah in verse 8, you should know:

c. this covenant will be applied to Israel in the future but NOW to us When Christ returns and sets up His millennial Kingdom on earth, the believing remnant of Israel will experience the fullness of this promise, but for right now, Jesus says and the writer of Hebrews explains, that this promise of a new covenant is for us who believe in Christ right now! We have been bound to God in an unbreakable permanent covenant through His blood. And the point of all this is that the New Covenant:

3. it provides for us better, unconditional promises (10-12) There are four tremendous privileges we have that Israel never had, promises that never were available under the old system of performance. First:

a. we have a transformed heart When we get saved, when we come to Christ and accept His death as the atonement for our sins, a tremendous transformation happens. Jesus described it with the radical term new birth. Paul described it in 2 Cor. 5:17, Therefore, if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; the old has gone, the new has come! The old me is put to death, the old man, the person I used to be at my core which was bound to sin. It's killed. And I'm given a new heart, a new nature, one that is holy and pure like Jesus. And the writer of Hebrews describes that same change as having His laws placed in our hearts and minds, written there. Under the old system of performance, a person would have to try to be what they were not. Inside they were a sinner and they had to act like a saint. Now we are made a saint inside, in the very core of our being by the presence of the Holy Spirit, and we obey and follow Him because we WANT to, not because we HAVE to! It comes naturally. It is natural for us to love and obey God and it is unnatural or against our nature for us to sin and rebel against Him. We are transformed. That is what God promises to do for all those who enter into covenant with Him by Christ. Second:

b. we have an unconditional relationship with God The promises of this covenant all start with "I will". There is no condition, no if you will, then I will. God says, "You WILL be my people; I WILL be your God." That relationship is unbreakable and unconditional. It is not dependent on my behavior, on my measuring up, on my ability to perform for God and do what He requires and if I don't, He won't. I belong to Him by an eternal covenant and nothing can break that covenant! He says, "I will never leave you nor forsake you!!" I never have to worry about rejection, never have to worry about my acceptability, about the fact that if I fall or if I sin, that God will punish and send me away! I am completely and totally accepted in the Beloved one! Third:

c. we have a personal knowledge of God Young Samuel was a boy serving at the Tabernacle and 1 Sam. 16 says, he did not yet know the Lord; God had never yet spoken to Him personally and directly. That's why he didn't recognize God's voice when He called, "Samuel" and ran to Eli instead. The average Israelite was pretty much in that boat. He knew about God. He knew the law and the commandments. He offered sacrifices and he prayed to God, but he did not have a personal knowledge of God. They had to continually teach and encourage one another to seek further knowledge of God. But in the new covenant it's different. In this covenant, EVERYONE, from the least of us to the greatest of us, from the youngest to the oldest of us who believe, we ALL have the same privilege of a personal knowledge of God, a personal relationship and a walk with God, because His Spirit lives inside each one of us! We can all talk to Him and have His Spirit whisper to our hearts and His word impress His thoughts on our minds. We live in a state of communion with Him, instead of a state of obedience to His demands! What a privilege! And finally:

d. we have an absolute forgiveness The best any Israelite could hope for was to have his sins covered for another year. Each new sin was a fresh violation of the covenant and demanded a fresh sacrifice. Forgiveness had to be kept up to date; it had to be renewed often. But in Jesus we are forgiven once for all, forever. Our sins and our iniquities are remembered no more, all of them, past, present and future. Arnell Motz writes, "The Bariba people of Benin, Africa, have an interesting custom. When two people have had a disagreement that they cannot resolve, they call in a third person to mediate. When the matter has been settled, the mediator splits a cola nut in two. (Cola nuts are chewed by the people, offered at ceremonies, and so on, so they have great significance.) He then gives a half to each person. By accepting the piece of cola nut, they are agreeing they will never refer to this argument again--it is forgiven and forgotten. When God forgives our sin 'He remembers it no more' (Is. 43:25). But how can a God who is omniscient not remember our sin? He chooses to forget. [Christian Week, Jan 30, 1996. Page 15.] Because of the sacrifice which bought us, the sin question is settled! He has "chewed the cola nut" with us! We are in a new covenant, because of what He did, not because of how I perform. Hallelujah! What a privilege!

The problem is that Christians have a hard time appreciating and appropriating all their privileges! We always want to try to crawl back under that old system of performing and trying and feeling like God's response to us is conditioned on how well we perform! Paul chided the Galatians for wanting to go back under law, wanting to go back to a system of performance! I don't know about you, but I'll take the new deal!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Privilege Of Knowing Reality - Heb. 9

Ruth Francke had a funny experience after her arm was operated on. She says, "The hospital physical therapist taught me exercises to strengthen my arm muscles. In one, called 'climbing the wall,' I faced a wall and 'walked' the fingers of both hands up it, trying to reach as far with the injured arm as with the other. I seemed to be 'climbing the wall' morning, noon, and night. After watching me for some time, the woman in the next bed said, 'Excuse me, but what religion do you belong to?'" [Reader's Digest, Mar 1992. Page 125.] That's funny, but why would she ask that? I guess because Ruth seemed to be "reaching up to God" three times a day! Probably because strange rituals and religion seem to always go hand in hand, don't they? If you think about it, when God made His covenant through Moses with the nation of Israel, a good part of what He commanded them to do was a series of strange rituals! They were to build a special tent to carry around with them and make certain special pieces of furniture to put in it. And then certain people chosen as priests were to dress in certain clothes and kill certain animals at certain times and sprinkle blood on things and make cakes of grain and pour out oil and do all kinds of things, the details of which take up about half of Exodus, all of Leviticus and the first third of Numbers! And if they meticulously did all those things correctly, in the way they were told, then they could have some sense that they were accepted by God. But I don't think they ever had much of an idea what the things they were doing were all about, do you? I don't know whether you've ever thought about it, but we as Christians have such a tremendous privilege in that we have a full and complete knowledge of the way that God went about saving us and we are not stuck repeatedly performing a system of symbolic rituals and revering material objects without understanding. And it's such a blessing because:

I. We Have A Confidence Of Acceptance That The Old Covenant Could Never Provide Under the Old Covenant that God made with Israel, acceptance with God came:

1. the Old Covenant way: through the sacrifices of the Tabernacle (1-10) God gave them this special tent where He said His Presence would dwell as they carried it about with them and all these objects and rituals to be performed. But as the writer says, let's not get lost in all the details but pull out three important facts. First:

a. the sanctuary was earthly: merely a manmade replica (1) The word used here for it is the common word for a tent and at the bottom line, that's all it was. It was cloth and wood and gold and silver. It was material objects made by the hands of human beings. It was not the real thing, but only a scale model, a replica of the real things in heaven where God's real presence is. Angels were represented by embroidered figures and statues, prayers by burnt incense, God's throne by a gold covered box, God's people by loaves of bread and God's glory by a lampstand! It was at best a poor, cheap imitation of the real thing. Secondly:

b. the sacrifices were faulty: (8-9) They were not enough; they failed to accomplish two things that the worshipper was really seeking.

(1) they gave the sinner no access to the presence of God God's presence dwelt in the inner or second tent, the Holy of Holies, and even though a sacrifice had been offered for sins, the worshipper could never go in there! It didn't take the veil away and open the door to go freely in and fellowship with God! Only the High Priest could go in, and that only on one day a year, the Day of Atonement. And even he went in there in grave terror. If he didn't do it right, he would die. I read somewhere that in later years the High Priest would afterwards throw a party with his friends celebrating the fact that he survived the danger of that Day! Can you imagine living in that kind of fear of acceptance by God? What was wrong? The whole system makes it plain that those sacrifices:

(2) they could only cover the sin, not cleanse the conscience The sin was covered in the prescribed way, but it wasn't really gone; there was always somehow guilt that stood between you and God. You could never have a sense in your conscience and heart that all was absolutely clear and clean. Even the prophet Isaiah, when He had a vision of God in the Temple, his reaction was not to run and say, "Oh, Father, I am so glad to see you at last; I love you so much!"; it was, "Woe to me!" I cried. "I am ruined! For I am a man of unclean lips, and I live among a people of unclean lips, and my eyes have seen the King, the LORD Almighty." - Is. 6:5. He thought he was going to die from contact with God's holiness; his conscience was not cleansed. The Old system never did the trick. And thirdly:

c. the system was temporary: until the time of the new order (10) Everything about it was temporary. The tent itself and the curtains were made of cloth, not stone; how long could it last? The sacrifices were repeated daily and by cycles and annually. The point is that they didn't last. The whole thing, the whole system, was designed to be temporary, to be a way for Israel to obey God and wait for Him to bring in a whole new order. And we're fortunate enough to understand what that new order is. Now we approach God:

2. the New Covenant way: through the sacrifice of Christ (11-15) You see, we're fortunate enough to know that all of those things, those symbols, those rituals which stayed in place for 1400 years, were just representing ahead of time what Jesus Christ was going to do!

a. the real sanctuary is heaven itself (11) God doesn't live in a tent and sit on a box. The earth and the heavens cannot contain Him. But Revelation opens the door of vision for us and we can see God in His dwelling. It is heaven itself with all of its glories, with myriads of real angels surrounding Him, with throngs of saints before Him, and the light of His glory illuminating the whole thing! That's where our Jesus went in as our High Priest! And He didn't just run in and back out. He went in there and passed through all of heaven while the inhabitants cried, "There goes the Lamb; He is worthy!" And He took the title deed to the Kingdoms of earth from the Father's hand and the Father said, "Well done, My Son, now sit here at My right hand until I make your enemies a footstool for your feet!" Now, could He do that? Because:

b. His true sacrifice on the cross was complete (12-14) He didn't offer some animals who were simply innocent victims, but had no spirit at all, no eternal life in them, no conscience of righteousness or sin. He offered Himself, put the body that contained His own eternal spirit to death on the cross and put His spirit in the Father's hands. And that one, once for all act:

(1) it provided a permanent eternal redemption It took care of sins forever. It actually removed them and sent them away as far as the east is from the west. The guilt of sin is actually gone and so:

(2) it provided an internal cleansing When we approach God through the way of what His Son did, we do get that internal cleansing. We are washed whiter than snow. We are justified, pardoned, so that we stand before God just as if we'd never sinned. We stand before Him completely different from the way Isaiah felt; our consciences are clean. Our sins are forgiven. We can run into His presence crying, "Abba Father!" You see, His sacrifice on the cross:

(3) it made us free to serve the living God, to minister to Him, to walk into His presence at any time and to go out with His blessing and power and to walk with Him and talk with him along life's narrow way! Free! The way in is clear! And get this:

c. our inheritance through Him is eternal (15a) There's nothing temporary about it. Christ has entered there for us to stay and we're going to enter there with Him one day and stay forever and everything we've been given in Him, our status as accepted, forgiven and being made His child, it all belongs to us and goes on and on and never ends!

Now somebody better shout hallelujah soon! Thank God that we know the reality of the truth in Jesus Christ and we're not stuck back there going through a bunch of rituals and symbols and wondering what it all means and living in fear! But on the other hand, I don't want you to think that God simply did an about-face in midstream here, that He said, "I used to want people to approach me that old way, but now forget all that; I'm doing something new and now I have a new way." Yes, our new way of relating to God HAS replaced the old way, but not by simply rejecting the old way. Rather:

II. The Death Of Christ Was The Fulfillment Of The Old Symbols (15b) Look at that carefully. Christ's death paid the price, not only for our sins in this age many years later, but also for the sins committed under the first covenant, that is, throughout the whole Old Testament era! The sins of all those generations of folks who offered sacrifices at the old Tabernacle and through the Old Testament system were not actually paid for until the cross! You see:

1. the old sacrifices taught very important symbolic lessons (16-22) They were given for a very wonderful purpose and reason. They were preparing the way for us to understand what Christ would one day do and even looking back at them now, we can see those lessons that help us to understand more about our salvation. For instance, those old sacrifices taught two things very clearly:

a. a will [testament] is only put into effect through death (16-17) Now here's something you might want to understand. Your Bible has two testaments; it doesn't say covenant. English has two distinct words that we use. A covenant is an inviolable agreement between two parties; a testament is an inviolable command about what to do with a person's property after they die, a "last will and testament". Greek has only one word that means both things at the same time. It means something like "an authoritative laying down of things that must be done". That word is used of all the covenants God makes with people, because they are God-determined and unbreakable, but it is also the standard word for a will, and that's how the author uses it in these two verses. Now, a will is only put in force after the person dies. While he lives, he can change his mind! He has to die to make it valid and unalterable; it was sealed by the giving of life. The same was true of a covenant under the old system. It required death; an animal had to die! A life had to be given to make it valid. And that's why we find all through the Old Testament or Old Covenant in everything this one principle:

b. without shedding of blood there is no forgiveness (18-22) When Moses made that old covenant with the people and they said "we will", he sacrificed bulls and took their blood and sprinkled it on the people. The same sprinkling of blood was used over and over again on everything for cleansing. Why? It was designed to drill home over and over again, day by day, this one lesson: without death there is no forgiveness; it requires the giving of a life to purchase acceptance with God and forgiveness of sins. And you see all of:

2. those lessons pointed to the better sacrifice of Christ Himself (23-28) They all pointed the way, set the stage, made our minds ready for us to understand that the life it all pointed to was that of Christ, the sacrifice it all led up to was the one final complete sacrifice that would take away the sins of the world, the sacrifice of the ultimate lamb of God, His own Son! But His sacrifice was in every respect better and these next verses point out why. Notice that the word appear occurs three times. There are three facts that make what Jesus did better. First:

a. He appears for us in God's very presence forever (23-24) He didn't just go into some man-made tent on earth. He entered into the very presence of God in heaven and notice the tense carefully, NOW to appear. He is there in the presence of God appearing for us forever. He has entered in and sat down; He's staying. He's there for us always. And not only that, but look at verse 25:

b. He appeared on earth once to do away with sin permanently (25-28) He's not there in heaven pleading and pleading and offering Himself and sprinkling His blood on the Throne over and over. There is no continued or continual sacrifice that He offers. He did all of that just one time and He did it right down here on earth on the cross! He appeared here on earth once for all to do away with sin by the sacrifice of Himself on the cross and that did it, permanently, once and for all, forever, no repeats! Just like human beings get one death and afterwards one judgment. Jesus died once and took the judgment of all, past, present and future, on Him there. When He said, "It is finished!", He meant it! So, our forgiveness is permanent. And then look at this:

c. He will appear a second time to deliver those who are waiting (28b) The next time there will be no cross. The next time there will be no sacrifice. The next time He appears, He'll be riding a white horse and bringing the armies of heaven to set up a Kingdom on this earth and deliver all those who are still alive who've been waiting for Him!

Do you see, it's all done! It's over with! We're not going through rituals, hoping to achieve atonement for our sins and acceptance with God; it's already done and made. We know what all the symbols mean and we know how they were fulfilled in reality in Jesus. So, we're just waiting for the Kingdom to come. Yet do you know what is really sad? When Jesus came, Israel chose to hang on to the symbols. And what's even more sad is that such a large portion of that which calls itself Christendom has worked long and hard to effectively turn this glorious knowledge we have of Jesus back into just what the old covenant was, a system of rituals and acts which the worshippers don't really understand. Catholics do it with the rituals of the mass; the Orthodox do it with their icons and even the evangelicals like us take our faith and turn it into rituals of Bible reading and church-going, the going through of motions for acceptance, instead of celebration of what Jesus has already done for us! Gerard Reed writes, "Religiously, we often elevate means above ends. We want to worship God, but we become obsessed with certain ways to do so--or not to do so. We devise sophisticated strategies, often of great artistic ingenuity, whereby to approach and serve God. Idolatry, rightly understood, simply means focusing on the means (how we worship) rather than the End (the One we worship). My wife Roberta is a fine cook. Just imagine, however, that she decided to demonstrate her love for me by giving herself full-time to cooking. Day after day, all day long, she'd shop for the finest foods in the most exclusive specialty shops. She'd prepare unique and tasty breakfasts and dinners. Her skills as a gourmet cook would shine like a star. In fact, she'd make sure her talents were evident to all. She'd invite numerous guests to join us as every meal--making sure they knew she was giving herself completely to cooking meals for me, showing her love for me. Further imagine that, as time went on, she became so busy preparing and serving the food, entertaining the guests, demonstrating her devotion, that she never sat down and ate with me. In fact, morning, noon, and night, she would say little or nothing to me. Should that happen, it would be obvious that my wife had become obsessed with means (the cooking that demonstrates the good wifely character) rather than ends (maintaining a warm relationship with me, her husband, for whom she was cooking). In truth, the really important thing about mealtime is that it enables us to be together, to talk together, to just look at each other. If my wife reduced our relationship to her activity (cooking), I'd soon tire of the good food and start skipping meals--knowing she'd keep on cooking and entertaining folks because she wanted to impress the world with her devotion to me. Similarly, we break fellowship with God when we get so obsessed with the ways we do things, the ways we sing or serve, that we forget why we're doing them and for Whom we're doing them. When we reduce God to human scale, focusing on our ways of doing things, we become idolatrous." [The Liberating Law: Ten Steps to Freedom by Gerard Reed. Beacon Hill Press of Kansas City, 1996. Pages 66-67.] Or to put it another way, we go back under the Law. Listen, My Savior appeared once to settle the sin question; He's appearing every moment in heaven for me right now, guaranteeing my future and one day He'll appear to set things on this earth right! It's all done; all that's left to do is appreciate the privilege we have of knowing it and celebrate!

The Privilege Of A Perfect Sacrifice - Heb. 10:1-18

I'd like to beg you to indulge me a little bit this morning because I think that as we look into chapter 10, you'll find a somewhat:

I. A Different View Of The Christmas Story (1-10) This whole section turns on the phrase in verse 5, "Therefore when Christ came into the world..." And that's Christmas, isn't it? The sweet story of the baby laid in the manger because there was no room at the inn and the story of the shepherds on the hillside surrounded by angelic hosts and running to find the babe, all those things we love and treasure most about the Christmas story are simply the minor details of that which is summed up in this overwhelming statement, Christ came into the world! That's what happened that night! The very eternal Son of God who was with Him in glory from eternity past, entered into this world through the womb of a virgin as a human baby. And when He did that, it changed everything. Now, the writer begins by telling us about:

1. the way things were before Christ came into the world (1-4) You see, before Christ came into the world, it was a sorry state:

a. the people of Israel had only symbols, not realities to deal with As we've studied in chapter 9, they had a tent which was a poor earthly symbol of heaven. They had a box with a gold lid as a symbol of God's glorious throne and a table with bread to represent all of God's people and so on. All symbols, only shadows that show the simple outline of the real objects. They never dealt with realities. It's kind of like always playing with toy cars all your life, but never driving a real car. And as part of the symbols God gave them:

b. they offered animal sacrifices repeatedly, year after year Every day two lambs would be killed, morning and evening, others on the holy days and still others given by individuals. Over and over again, day after day, year after year, animal after animal was killed and burned upon the altar. It went on for centuries, 14 or more of them since the law was given, but before that all the way back to Cain and Abel. Generation after generation kept up the process. But the author of Hebrews brings up an interesting point:

c. the very fact that they were repeated showed they were ineffective If they did the job that a sacrifice is intended to do, that is, if they actually took away sins and removed them, then wouldn't you stop offering them? Even if you look at just one person's life and how many times he repeatedly brought sacrifices year after year, if any one of them had actually taken away his sins, wouldn't that have been the last one? Wouldn't that have been enough? But it never was and the truth is:

d. the sacrifices never took away sins but instead reminded of them The reason they were repeated is not that this year's sacrifice took away this year's sins and next year's took away next year's sins and so on. God had them repeated over and over and over again, not to make sure that all sins were forgiven, but quite the opposite, to constantly remind people of the need for forgiveness! You're a sinner this year and next year and next year and it requires a sacrifice. The sins are not gone; they require a perfect sacrifice; learn that lesson and look forward to it. So, century after century the world trudged along in the darkness repeating symbols that only said, "we need a Savior". But then we come to verse 5 and see:

2. what happened when Christ came into the world (5) What we have here first is:

a. the author's quotation (5-7) He quotes from Ps. 40:6-8 which is written in the first person. Someone is speaking and, the writer says, that someone is not David, but Jesus, the Son, speaking to the Father on the eve of His coming into the world. He declares that it is a glimpse of a holy conversation that occurred as He left heaven to come into the world. And in that sacred moment He says two immense things. First, "Father, you didn't want sacrifices and offerings; instead, you have prepared a body for Me."

(1) God prepared a body for His Son That's what the Incarnation is all about. God prepared a human body to be inhabited by and united to His own Son so that He would truly become man. When you look into that Bethlehem manger, see the body that God prepared for His Son. You see that the Son came into the world in a body of human flesh and bones and blood. That's what God had been waiting for and planning all along. Then secondly, He says, "Now here I am; I have come to do your will, Father!" You see:

(2) the Son came to do the Father's will and what was that? Well, do those words sound familiar? Aren't they the words Jesus agonized over in Gethsemane? "Father, thy will be done." And what was that will? We are not left to wonder; verse 10 tells it was to offer that body upon the Cross. When Christ came into the world, the Father prepared Him a body so that he could offer that perfect sinless body upon a cruel cross as the perfect sacrifice for our sins! Now in the next verses we have:

b. the author's explanation (8-10) You see, these words reveal to us that:

(1) God was never truly pleased with animal sacrifices Even though He required them to be made. They never satisfied Him; they never took away His judgment upon sin.

(2) they were only symbols to picture what His Son would do As the innocent animal was sacrificed in the place of sinful people and gave its life, so His sinless spotless Son would one day come and offer His body upon a cross as a sacrifice for the sins of the world. And so, it follows that:

(3) they were set aside as unnecessary when Jesus came When Jesus came into the world and did what He did, that was the end of the whole system. It was a reminder that pointed to the real thing that was coming and when the real thing happened, it became unnecessary any longer! The Jews could have bulldozed the Temple and sent all the priests home and quit making those sacrifices because what they pointed to was already done and over with. In reality:

(4) we were made holy by the sacrifice of His body once for all He came into the world; He offered His body for our sins and now it's done; it's over with. Our sins are forgiven and we are holy. That's it, pure and simple. Because of what happened on Christmas, Good Friday and Easter, we are now saints, pure and holy in spirit and absolutely cleansed from all sin, worthy to be in His presence. Our whole way of relating to God, of thinking about ourselves, everything is changed now that He has come into the world, taken the body prepared for Him and done the Father's will.

Now what's most important is:

II. The Impact Of This Knowledge On Us (11-18) It makes such a tremendous difference in our lives. Once we know this and are convinced of it by accepting what Christ has done for us:

1. we rest in a perfect sacrifice (11-14) You see:

a. the rest of the world stands daily offering empty sacrifices The Jews kept right on going, offering their lambs twice a day as long as they had a Temple to offer them in. When Jesus died and the veil in the Temple was done, God was saying, "It's done, you can come on in now!" but as I said before, they sewed it back up and kept offering their empty and meaningless sacrifices. Yet they're not the only ones doing that. Millions of Muslims will sacrifice a ram during the sacred month of Ramadan to please Allah. Millions of Hindus will offer rice and fruit and flowers to statues and to snakes, to gods that are no gods, hoping to appease them and atone for their bad karma. Millions of good-deed-doers who think the sacrifice God requires is perfect behavior are busy vainly offering Him their best performance every day in the vain hope that it will erase their bad deeds and get them into heaven. Even within the so-called church, priests stand every day and declare that they offer the sacrifice of bread and wine, the body and blood of Christ over and over again day by day and those who are counting on it hope against hope that that act will absolve their sins. That's just what the whole world does; it offers and offers, over and over, empty offerings to God that never could and never will take away sins. But that's not what Jesus did:

b. Jesus offered a perfect sacrifice and sat down to await His return He went up and sat down on the Throne in heaven beside the Father to wait until it's time to come back and vanquish all His enemies and set up His Kingdom on this earth. He's been seated there for 2000 years and He hasn't offered up one thing since the cross. Why not? Because there He offered a perfect sacrifice. What makes it perfect?

(1) He offered one sacrifice, not many sacrifices, many animals. One body, His body. That was the one and only sacrifice God wanted or accepted. And:

(2) He offered one time on the cross of Calvary. It was an act never to be repeated like the animal sacrifices over and over. He only needed to do it once. And in that once:

(3) His offering paid for all sins, not just for the ones past or for a few select ones, but for all sins, past, present, future, and not just for some people, but for all of those who will trust in Him as their Savior. It was enough to do the whole thing at one time. And so:

(4) His offering is effective forever It doesn't matter how much time goes by until He comes, how many generations pass; the blood of Jesus is still enough to save. When He said, "It is finished", it was finished. Done. Over with. Once, for all, forever! We don't count on temporary, repeated, ineffective, empty, symbolic sacrifices. The Son came into the world and did it and that settles it. We rest in a perfect sacrifice to which nothing can ever be added and so:

2. we receive a perfect forgiveness (15-18) Now the author quotes Jeremiah 31:33-34 again, as he did back in chapter 8, but this time he emphasizes the last verse to illustrate that the Holy Spirit says that in our new relationship with God:

a. the penalty of our sins is completely gone Our sins and iniquities are remembered no more. Does this mean that God has erased part of His omniscience and He doesn't know those bad things anymore? Certainly not. He knows every evil thing we ever did. But the penalty of every last one of those things is paid by the blood of His Son so that they are as far removed from us as the east is from the west. Our forgiveness is absolute and complete. In fact, the point of verse 18 is this:

b. there is nothing that can make us any more forgiven than we are! We've got all the forgiveness there is to get. It's complete! Nothing that we could do say or sacrifice can add to that forgiveness; we have it all already. It's complete! Every sin I've ever committed or will commit is taken away and nailed to the cross because I've trusted in Jesus Christ as My Savior and I'm free! There is no condemnation for me because I am in Christ Jesus. He came into the world and changed my trying and struggling into resting in His perfect sacrifice once for all forever!

It's almost impossible to describe the impact of this, to grasp what Jesus has done, what that perfect sacrifice means. Just saying it doesn't seem to do it justice. So, let me read to you this story that someone sent me and let the visual picture of it sink in: In that place between wakefulness and dreams, I found myself in the room. There were no distinguishing features except for the one wall covered with small index card files. They were like the ones in libraries that list titles by author or subject in alphabetical order. But these files, which stretched from floor to ceiling and seemingly endlessly in either direction, had very different headings. As I drew near the wall of files, the first to catch my attention was one that read "Girls I have Liked". I opened it and began flipping through the cards. I quickly shut it, shocked to realize that I recognized the names written on each one. And then without being told, I knew exactly where I was. This lifeless room with its small files was a crude catalog system for my life. Here were written the actions of my every moment, big and small, in a detail my memory couldn't match. A sense of wonder and curiosity, coupled with horror, stirred within me as I began randomly opening files and exploring their content. Some brought joy and sweet memories; others a sense of shame and regret so intense that I would look over my shoulder to see if anyone was watching. A file named "Friends" was next to one marked "Friends I have Betrayed". The titles ranged from the mundane to the outright weird. "Books I Have Read", "Lies I Have Told", "Comfort I Have Given", "Jokes I Have Laughed At". Some were almost hilarious in their exactness: "Things I've Yelled at My Brothers". Others I couldn't laugh at: "Things I Have Done in My Anger", "Things I Have Muttered Under My Breath at My Parents". I never ceased to be surprised by the contents. Often there were many more cards than I expected. Sometimes fewer than I hoped. I was overwhelmed by the sheer volume of the life I had lived. Could it be possible that I had the time in my 20 years to write each of these thousands or even millions of cards? But each card confirmed this truth. Each was written in my own handwriting. Each signed with my signature. When I pulled out the file marked "Songs I Have Listened To", I realized the files grew to contain their contents. The cards were packed tightly, and yet after two or three yards, I hadn't found the end of the file. I shut it, shamed, not so much by the quality of music, but more by the vast amount of time I knew that file represented. When I came to a file marked "Lustful Thoughts", I felt a chill run through my body. I pulled the file out only an inch, not willing to test its size, and drew out a card. I shuddered at its detailed content. I felt sick to think that such a moment had been recorded. An almost animal rage broke on me. One thought dominated my mind: "No one must ever see these cards! No one must ever see this room! I have to destroy them!" In an insane frenzy I yanked the file out. Its size didn't matter now. I had to empty it and burn the cards. But as I took it at one end and began pounding it on the floor, I could not dislodge a single card. I became desperate and pulled out a card, only to find it as strong as steel when I tried to tear it. Defeated and utterly helpless, I returned the file to its slot. Leaning my forehead against the wall, I let out a long, self-pitying sigh. And then I saw it. The title bore "People I Have Shared the Gospel With". the handle was brighter than those round it, newer, almost unused. I pulled on its handle and a small box not more than three inches long fell into my hands. I could count the cards it contained on one hand. And then the tears came. I began to weep. Sobs so deep that the hurt started in my stomach and shook through me. I fell on my knees and cried. I cried out of shame, from the overwhelming shame of it all. The rows of file shelves swirled in my tear-filled eyes. No one must ever, ever know of this room. I must lock it up and hide the key. But then as I pushed away the tears, I saw Him. No, please, not Him. Not here. Oh, anyone but Jesus. I watched helplessly as He began to open the files and read the cards. I couldn't bear to watch His response. And in the moments I could bring myself to look at His face, I saw a sorrow deeper than my own. He seemed to intuitively go to the worst boxes. Why did He have to read every one? Finally, He turned and looked at me from across the room. He looked at me with pity in His eyes. But this was a pity that didn't anger me. I dropped my head, covered my face with my hands and began to cry again. He walked over and put His arm around me. He could have said so many things. But He didn't say a word. He just cried with me. Then He got up and walked back to the wall of files. Starting at one end of the room, He took out a file and, one by one, began to sign His name over mine on each card. "No!" I shouted rushing to Him. All I could find to say was "No, no," as I pulled the card from Him. His name shouldn't be on these cards. But there it was, written in red so rich, so dark, so alive. The name of Jesus covered mine. It was written with His blood. He gently took the card back. He smiled a sad smile and began to sign the cards. I don't think I'll ever understand how He did it so quickly, but the next instant it seemed I heard Him close the last file and walk back to my side. He placed His hand on my shoulder and said, "It is finished." I stood up, and He led me out of the room. There was no lock on its door. There were still cards to be written. Oh, do you see, it is finished! He has washed us from ALL our sins in His own blood! Every vile thought, every heinous deed, every awful desire, all washed white as snow in the blood of the Lamb once for all! And all those cards I haven't even written yet are already signed in His blood. Does that mean I now live however I want? No, it means I now live in complete freedom from guilt and fear but in utter gratitude to the One who loved me enough to do this. I am His servant. I want nothing else in life but to please Him, to glorify Him, to see Him glorified in all the earth. You see when He came into the world, He transformed the way things work forever. And I'm so glad He did!

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

Warning and Encouragement For The New Year - Heb. 10:19-39

The future is an uncertain thing. We are so spoiled with our prosperous American lifestyle that we easily get lulled into the false sense of security that life will always be the way we know it. But the future is not like that; it can change, rapidly. There are no guarantees of continual peace and prosperity and safety on this earth. If nothing else, history teaches us that lesson. Nations make war and topple one another. Life can change in an instant. And Jesus told us to expect that in this world we will have tribulation and to expect that as believers we will be hated by the world. The wind has blown us some pretty fair weather as American believers in our short history, but if you're watching at all, you can see the wind shifting. Our culture is changing, morally and ethically; the forces that drive our society are driving it steadily toward wickedness and the church is standing pretty much alone against the tide. Once we're enough of a minority, it won't take much for us to become a target. The only thing certain about the future as we enter the 21st century is that the future is just as uncertain today as it was in the 1st century. Now in chapter 10, the author of Hebrews offers us some help for us as believers in facing an uncertain future. He gives us three things: an exhortation, then a warning, and finally an encouragement.

I. An Exhortation When Facing An Uncertain Future (19-25) All that we have studied and learned in this book makes a practical difference. We have this wonderful knowledge that Jesus has opened the way into God's presence with His own blood through His death on the cross and it should make a difference in our lives. Because we have it, we should use it. And the writer exhorts us to use it in three ways. Each one is a "let us" statement, a statement of resolve, of determination. In fact, they are three things I would love to see us as a church resolve to do in this New Year. The first one is this:

1. let us draw near to God in faith (22) What's that mean? It means we need a resolve to be a praying people.

People who know they are pure and clean and who come together to God with sincere impassioned hearts full of confidence that He will hear and answer. We need to become a people of prayer. If you read the account of the early church, you will find one thing that stands out everywhere like a sore thumb. They were always gathered together somewhere praying and worshipping. At the Temple, in somebody's house, every time they faced danger and every time they experienced victory, they prayed together. And if I asked you to name the one element in the life of the church that is gradually disappearing in our day, what would it be? Corporate prayer! Somebody said the difference between the first century church and the 20th century church is this: Of us it is said: "And when they had prayed the offering was taken..."; of them it was said: "And when they had prayed the place was shaken." We have developed all kinds of 20th century ways of fixing our problems. If we don't have enough money, we have credit. If we get sick, we have the best medical system in the world. If your car breaks down, there's a phone which will get you help. We've got services and systems for everything. And so, we've been gradually conditioned NOT to call upon God, but rather to trust in our own resources. Listen, when our van broke down in Kyrgyzstan on a road, miles from nowhere, and we knew there were no tow trucks and no phones and no houses from which to call for help and no buses to flag down, and where the police charge you money and don't help you, there was only one thing left to do; as Sergei, our driver, crawled under the van to try to fix it, we called out together to God and in five minutes the van was running. Listen, when we as a congregation saw our financial need and we knew that we ourselves couldn't meet it and we began to cry out to God together to meet that need and in just 7 weeks as we made ourselves available to Him, He supplied to and through us around $28,000 so that we ended 1999 nearly $2000 ahead! That's how we need to face the next century and the future, on our knees together, coming to Him boldly in confidence that He will answer. And we need to begin to apply it in all the areas of our lives. We need to resolve to boldly seek His face for our world, for the 3 billion unreached that have never heard and to cry out to Him to use us in ways we've never dreamed of to turn the world upside down. We need to resolve to boldly seek His face for our community, where 90% or more of our neighbors don't know Jesus and will go from their comfortable suburban life straight into everlasting fire at the rate we're going unless we learn to cry out to God and He shows Himself powerful through us to touch them in ways we've never dreamed. We need to resolve to boldly seek His face for marriages that are falling apart on every hand and call out to Him to bring repentance and restoration and put homes back together. We need to resolve to boldly seek His face for our children because there's a war on out there, a war for their souls and in case after case we're losing the battle and the enemy is dragging them off into the world and away from Jesus. That kind of battle can only be fought on our knees and it's time we learn to cry out to God together and win them back! In the year 2000 it's time we draw near to God in faith, actually believing that He is still the same God He's always been and calling out to Him to do great and mighty things. That's the only way to face the future! The second exhortation is this:

2. let us hold fast to our hope (23) What does that mean? It means we need a resolve to be a pilgrim people. A people who know and confess that they are only pilgrims and strangers on the earth, that their real home is in heaven and the things that matter are not the earthly things but the eternal things. We need to be a people like Paul described in Col. 3:1-4, Since, then, you have been raised with Christ, set your hearts on things above, where Christ is seated at the right hand of God. Set your minds on things above, not on earthly things. For you died, and your life is now hidden with Christ in God. When Christ, who is your life, appears, then you also will appear with him in glory. That's the hope we possess and it's where our lives should focus. But the catch is in one little word in verse 23; did you see it? Unswervingly! The word means to steer a ship on a straight course without letting it veer off in another direction. And for us it is so easy to let our ship get off course, to start getting our eyes fixed on things that are below. There are so many things that crowd into our life and crowd out the that eternal perspective. In a prosperous society like ours where so many of our needs are met even if we don't call out to God, there are so many things to take our eyes off of Him. There's the whole work and success thing, climbing the ladder, making money, gathering houses and lands. Listen, our job is a mission field where Almighty God has planted us to impact the people around us and draw them to Himself by our transformed life! Our homes and our cars and all our possessions are His, things to be used for His glory, not just to satisfy our own desires, but to be shared with others and used in ministry to draw other people to Him and to build them up in Him. So many people get so wrapped up in secondary things like hobbies, like sports, like golf, like music, or you name it, things that are fine as activities, but which become life-consuming and take our eyes off the things that are important to God like the Word and prayer and people's souls. As we face an uncertain future, it's time to remember that we're a pilgrim people who are just passing through a world that is not our home and start seeing from an eternal perspective and making investments of our money and our time and our abilities in the things that matter for eternity. Then the third exhortation is this:

3. let us provoke one another to love (24-25) We need a resolve to be a caring people. It is so easy in the face of an uncertain future to become self-centered. At the turn of this century, you read about people moving out into the desert with their little family where everything will be OK for them while the rest suffer. You hear of people buying weapons, assault rifles, to fight off the mobs who will come to steal their water and food supplies. It's absurd. If I had ten thousand gallons of water and everybody around me was thirsty, I would hope that I would be giving out cups of cold water in the name of Jesus Christ to save them all! But self-centeredness isn't always quite that blatant and obvious. Most of the time it creeps into our lives subtly when we're doing well. We gradually lose our heart for those who are suffering and hurting and dying and lost. It gradually ceases to matter to us that others are homeless and hungry and addicted to drugs and searching for love in all the wrong places and dying with HIV or that they are lost and have nobody to tell them how to be saved and find eternal life in Jesus. We need to learn to care beyond our normal boundaries, to care for people that are not "just like us", to care for people who are hopeless and hungry and sinful and lost, to reach out to people we'd rather not be around and embrace people we'd rather avoid. How can we keep from becoming callous and cold? Well, did you see that thing about spurs in there? That's a loose translation of a word that means to provoke or irritate, but it's not a bad picture. When you sit on a horse that doesn't want to move, you dig your heels into his side and if you're a cowboy you're wearing spurs, you spur him with those heels. We're to spur one another into acts of love and caring, to provoke one another, not to frustration but to love and self-sacrifice! You see, on our own we'll easily grow self-centered; we need one another's nudging, one another's encouragement and example. And how do we get that? Verse 25 tells us that we have to stay in the habit of meeting together and that more and more as we see the day approaching, instead of running off after everything under the sun that's less important. We need to be together, to come together to pray and worship and share our burdens and our victories with one another; that's what will keep our flame of love and compassion burning!

Hey, for those who like a simple outline, that's faith, hope and love from 1 Cor. 13, isn't it! Now I know some of you are getting really worried. I'm only at point #3 on the outline and that looks like a powerful long way to go! But set your mind at ease. The outline of the second major point is below if you want to study it for yourself. It's a warning against apostasy. Because it is those times of suffering that separate the true from the false, that root out the "Judases" from the true apostles. And what's the best assurance that you're not one of those? It is that your life is wrapped up right now in the very things we've talked about, that it is vibrant in prayer, focused on eternal things and abounding in love. If these things don't matter much right now, what assurance can you have that they will when things turn difficult!

II. A Warning When Facing An Uncertain Future (26-31)

1. the serious nature of apostasy (falling away from Christ) (29)

a. it is trampling the Son of God underfoot

b. it is counting His blood as an unholy thing

c. it is insulting the Spirit of grace

2. the certain judgment of apostates

a. no sacrifice is left only the punishment of enemies in fire (26-27)

b. rejecting Christ's work is more severe than rejecting Moses (28-29)

c. God will definitely judge and it is a fearful thing (30-31)

The future will no doubt see some fall away from the faith and you do NOT want to be one of those. But let's skip now to verse 32 where we find:

III. An Encouragement When Facing An Uncertain Future (32-39) The writer points out that:

1. it's encouraging to remember the earlier days (32-34) We don't know exactly what their history was, but at some point after they had come to Christ, these believers who came out of Hebrew background:

a. these folks had stood their ground in spite of suffering They had been persecuted for their faith. No doubt some had been arrested; others had lost their jobs or been shunned by their community. Some may have been flogged or jailed, as many in the early church were. On top of that:

b. they had accepted public humiliation The whole society in which they lived rejected them and mocked them for believing in Jesus and clinging to Him. And for Jesus' sake:

c. they had been willing to lose their possessions They let their property be confiscated rather than deny the Lord that bought them. Why? Because their minds were fixed unswervingly on the eternal hope and they knew they were only pilgrims. They knew they had those everlasting possessions that no one can take away from them!

That is the history of the early church, abiding faithful in great tribulation. It sounds like the story of the church down through the ages as it has been tried by fire time after time and yet emerged victorious. It sounds like the story of the church in China today, driven underground yet flourishing, or in Sudan or in any of a hundred places where our brothers and sisters in Jesus are suffering right now just because they believe. Now, we don't have the history these folks had, but their example can be a great encouragement to us. There is nothing to guarantee that in a few months or a few years or a few decades our road will not be similar to theirs. The future on this earth is always uncertain. But if we remember the faithfulness of those who have stood the test, steadfast in faith and hope and love:

2. it encourages us to continue in that perseverance (35-39) You see, you have a promise from Almighty God who always abides faithful. Your faith and hope and love in the face of tremendous adversity:

a. it will be richly rewarded; you will receive what He has promised Eye has not seen and ear has not heard the things that God has prepared for you. Henceforth there is laid up for you a crown of glory that will never fade away and when He comes you will receive it. And remember that in eternal terms:

b. it will happen in "a very little while" comparatively It may be next week or next year or even next century but it doesn't matter; the time we spend here is still just a little while in comparison to the eternity you'll spend with Him in glory. That's why you can't get wrapped up in the things of this earth; forever is what really matters. One day soon and very soon we are going to see the King.

Let's make Him the center of our lives as we enter this New Year and resolve afresh together to be a praying people, to be a pilgrim people and to be a caring people. A friend passed this note on to me:

The Top 10 Things You Won't Have to Worry About With The Y2K Bug:

10. The Bible will still have the answers.
9. Prayer will still work.
8. The Holy Spirit will still move.
7. God will still inhabit praise.
6. There will still be anointed preaching.
5. There will still be the singing of praise.
4. God will still pour out blessings on His people.
3. There will be room at the cross for His children.
2. Jesus loves you.

(And the number one thing you won't have to worry about with the Y2K bug)

1. Jesus still saves.

Dear friend, I don't care what the future holds, what dangers and deprivations and suffering may come, these things will always be true. As we enter this new millennium let's fix our eyes on the things that are above where Jesus is seated at the right hand of the Father and resolve to live for His glory.

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Life Of Faith (I) - Heb. 11:1-7

Chapter 11 of Hebrews is one of the most glorious portions in all of Scripture and, as you know, its theme is faith. All through the book we've been talking about the privileges and the promises that we have because we are in Christ, but this chapter holds the key to appropriating every one of them. They are ours only by faith! Without faith they may exist, they may be ours, but they will do us precious little good without faith on our part. Indeed, what God intends for us is to live a life of faith; a life of faith is at the very center of the way we understand and think about everything and at the core of everything we do. So:

I. Faith Is A Concept That We Must Understand (1) For all the times faith is mentioned or displayed, this is the only place in all of Scripture where it is described in a definitive way. And it is so important. Notice first of all:

1. the two realms in which faith operates First:

a. it concerns future things that have not come to pass, what we hope for... Hope is about the future. Hope is about things that we expect, that we look forward to, but we don't see them, we don't have them. So, our faith has to do with how we regard things that have been told to us about the future, things that have not yet come to pass. And second:

b. it concerns invisible things that cannot be seen There are a multitude of things which exist that we cannot see, that we cannot touch, that we cannot experience directly. Unseen things, yet they are real. And the link that connects them to us is faith. So, verse 1 is describing:

2. the reality which faith brings to things you can't see and things that are still future.

a. it is a conviction that unseen things are real God Himself, angels, heaven, salvation, the new birth, all these things which are so important to us are invisible. They cannot be proven scientifically or examined with a microscope or a telescope. The only thing that assures us they are real is faith. We have staked our lives and our eternity on them. We have chosen to regard them as being as real as the things we can see. We have a conviction, a rock-solid certainty in our hearts that these things are real. It's like Moses. Compare verse 27. At that point Moses hadn't seen God visibly. He had seen a bush burn and heard a voice and had seen a number of miracles. But the deeper fact is that by faith, he saw Him who is invisible. He was convinced at the core of his being that God was real, that God was calling him to lead His people out of Egypt and that God was at work daily in their lives making that happen. He could see that by faith! So can we. And secondly, faith:

b. it is a certainty that future things will be Our arrival in heaven, the return of Jesus Christ to this earth, the glorious millennial kingdom, reigning with Him forever and ever, these things are yet future. They have been spoken of; they have been declared and promised. But they have not come to pass. Yet we are absolutely certain that they will; we hold these things as a hope that anchors our souls. We are convinced by faith that they will occur and we live as though they will. That's why Abraham was willing to spend his whole life living as a nomad in a tent. Compare verse 10. He had his eyes on a better place. He left an earthly city to wander about because He was convinced of the reality of a future city which God built and which we call the New Jerusalem and he lived all his life in light of that. So can we.

But I need to say something very clearly here. Faith is not just deciding that something is true without evidence. Some children believe sincerely in the tooth fairy and the Easter bunny and Santa Claus. That doesn't make those things real. Some adults sincerely believed that last January 1 would bring the end of civilization as we know it and prepared for it in radical ways. That didn't make it come to pass. The world accuses us of mistakenly believing in fairy tales or myths, but the faith that the Bible is talking about is very different from blind faith in non-existent objects:

c. its root is a personal experience of the reality of God Every one of the people mentioned in this chapter had a personal experience which convinced them of the reality and character of God. Carole Mayhall tells about the first time God proved Himself to her: "I couldn't have been more than eight years old, but I was having my first deep struggle of faith. I don't remember what set it off, but in my mind doubts and questions had been raging for several days. 'Have I been told a fairy tale? Is there really a God who looks over the world and cares about me? Does He exist? How can a person really know that He is there?' ...One night we were visiting a favorite aunt and uncle, and I was put to bed in an upstairs room located under the eaves. The roof sloped downward steeply and overhung the small window. It was there that I challenged God to prove to me that He existed...out of desperation, it was a cry which pleaded, 'Oh, Lord, I want to believe in You. I need desperately to know that You are there. Please show yourself to me.' 'But how,' I thought. I didn't feel I could ask for a vision or a voice from heaven. So, in my immature, non-thinking way, I blurted out, 'Oh, God, just prove to me that You are there by...by...by waking me up with the moon shining in the window.' Then I went to sleep. Silly girl, never thinking that God would have to bend the moonlight many degrees in order for it to shine in that window way back under the eaves. Never thinking that there might not even be a moon that evening. Never thinking. Period. But God was thinking, and preparing. First, He sent some other guests to my aunt's that night. This meant that the bed I was in was needed for an adult, so I was moved to the sofa in the living room, without even waking up. Second, God arranged for my aunt and uncle to have a house with a round window located on a landing going to the second story. He also had my aunt place the furniture so that the couch was in the exact spot it needed to be. Third, He provided a clear sky and a full moon. So, sometime that night, I was awakened as though a gentle hand had touched my shoulder. And there, framed perfectly in that port-hole window, was a full moon beaming down like a spotlight. I got out of bed, fell to my knees, and cried for joy. 'Lord,' I said, 'I promise that I will never again doubt that You exist. Thank You.' I never have. Oh, I have had my share of doubts--doubts that He could use me, doubts that He had a plan for me, doubts even about His character--but never doubts that He exists. The God of all detail had proven to me on that desperate night that He is there and He is not silent." [Lord of My Rocking Boat by Carole Mayhall. NavPress, 1981. Pages 149-150.] Look at verse 6. That's where it all begins. The folks mentioned in Heb. 11 didn't see Him; some of them didn't hear Him; many of them never saw an on-the-spot miracle and some even died at the hands of their enemies. Yet He entered the life of every one of them and revealed Himself to their hearts in such a way that they were transformed. They knew He existed and He cared about them. And so, He became more real to them than the things they could see, than the Egyptian army or the prison cell or the walls of Jericho. His word of promise became more real to them than all the guarantees and promises of earth. Once they knew God, they were convinced that unseen things were real and that future things were certain. Their faith was in a very real object and so is ours. Once we come to know the true and living God through trusting His Son Jesus Christ as our Savior, it transforms our view of reality. We're sure of things we can't see and we are confident of things we know will happen. We have faith. Now let's skip to verse 3 for a moment and look at:

3. the example of our faith regarding creation (3) When it comes to the world around us, we believe what seems like this crazy thing:

a. we believe God formed the universe by speaking He said, Let there be light and light instantly came into existence. He spoke the sun and the moon and the stars and the earth into existence. He commanded the waters to be gathered and the dry land to appear and the birds and fish and animals to come into being in them. His word created it but:

b. it was not made from pre-existing matter as science often says One of the laws of physics says, "Matter can neither be created nor destroyed." That may be true in figuring out chemical reactions today, but it's not true. Matter can be and was created. Some say it just always existed in some form and then chance random events and forces solidified it and blew it apart with a big bang and evolved it into us. We are convinced that it didn't exist at all, that it came into existence instantaneously at the command of a Creator. We're sure of it. But how?

c. we are convinced of this only by faith in God's person and Word We're convinced that the One who told us this is real and that He is the kind of God He said He is who can do such a thing and that what He has told us He did is true because He cannot lie. There is no other way to know it for sure. The creation shows all kinds of evidence that points to the design of a Creator; there is good reason to believe in creation. But still, the bottom line is that our experience of God has put in us a faith, a conviction, a certainty that has made the act of creation a reality to us. It is as real as the birth of your body or the construction of your house or the pew you're sitting on. Yet it is made real to you by faith. Understand?

But faith is far more than a concept to understand:

II. Faith Is A Way Of Life That We Must Practice You see:

1. God intends that His children should live by faith The writer begins this study of faith from something he said at the end of the last chapter (10:38). Faith impacts our daily lives. It is a stance that affects everything we do and say. We live by it. Then we look at verse 2 and we're told that:

2. God honored this in the lives of His Old Testament people (2) The ancients, the heroes, the elders, the greats of old that God chose to put down for us in His Word so we would know and learn from them. They were not some super-race of spiritual giants; they were people just like us. What God honored in them and used in them and testified to about them in this chapter is simply that they were people who lived life on the basis of faith. And that's what God wants of us. He wants us to live in the reality of things we can't see and to function confidently on the basis of things that are yet future because we know Him. Because we trust Him. And so, as we look all through the Old Testament:

III. The Lives Of His People Give Us Lessons In The Life Of Faith and we'll just mention the first three of them this morning. First is:

1. Abel (4) You remember the story of the first recorded worship in history. Both Cain and Abel approached God and brought Him an offering. Abel brought Him a lamb he had raised and Cain brought some things he had grown. And God accepted Abel and his offering, but He didn't accept Cain. Now the question is why? And this verse has the answer:

a. God accepted Abel's offering based on his faith It wasn't so much what they brought to God or how much they brought to God. That's never what God looks at. He looks at the heart of the worshipper. 1 Jn. 3:12 says, Do not be like Cain, who belonged to the evil one and murdered his brother. And why did he murder him? Because his own actions were evil and his brother's were righteous. Cain belonged to the evil one and so he acted like the evil one. Abel experienced God and loved God and acted like he loved God. So, when he came to God it wasn't a sham or because he had to. He came in faith, trusting God, trusting that God was righteous and pure and even though he knew he had sinned and atonement had to be made, yet God loved and cared for Him and he brought the lamb not to buy God off, but trusting what God had asked him to do, trusting that God would forgive and accept Him. And:

b. God therefore declared him righteous based on his faith, not on his offering. It says God had respect to Abel and [therefore] to his offering. By accepting the offering God declared that Abel had come in the right attitude, the attitude of trust, of faith and proclaimed him righteous, even though he was a sinner like the rest of us. And even though he's been dead now a few thousand years, his life is still shouting out to us a very important lesson: Faith is the basis on which we come to God! It is the basis of all our worship. Go to church all you want. Pray and sing all you want. Give all you want. But if you are doing it thinking it will make God like you and accept you, you won't even get near Him. We come to God trusting that we are accepted by Him on the basis of what Jesus did on the cross for us, believing with all our hearts that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us, the just for the unjust that He might bring us to God and we are accepted in the Beloved. And when we come in faith, we are declared righteous and accepted and invited into fellowship with Him! Then second comes:

2. Enoch (5-6a) We don't know much about him. All we know is that:

a. Enoch pleased God by walking with Him daily It's found in one famous verse, Gen. 5:24, Enoch walked with God; then he was no more, because God took him away. Every day he walked with God. In whatever he did, he talked to God, he asked God for wisdom and for strength and for guidance. He depended on God in the daily things of his life and involved God in every moment of his day. And that pleased God greatly, but it was not his actions, really, that pleased God:

b. God was pleased by his faith shown in daily seeking Him earnestly Verse 6a tells us that the root of everything that pleases God is faith. What pleased God was that Enoch believed, that he believed so strongly that God was real and was a vital part of his moment by moment existence that he never stopped seeking him, never stopped crying out to Him. And so God did a wonderful thing for him, something he probably never even dreamed of asking for:

c. God translated him directly to heaven because of faith He missed out on dying. One moment he was talking to God on earth and the next he was talking to Him in heaven, body and all. And he never came back. A little girl came home from Sunday School after hearing the story of Enoch. She said, "Mother, we heard about a wonderful man in Sunday School today. His name was Enoch, and you know, Mother, he used to go for walks with God." The mother said, "That's wonderful dear. How did it end?" "Oh Mother, one day they walked on and on and got so far, God said to Enoch, 'You are a long way from home. You had better come in and stay with Me!'" Now don't be too jealous of him. After all, ultimately isn't that what God is going to do with you? Oh, you may have to go by way of physical death, but one day you'll be translated in an instant straight into His presence, even if it is through death. Yet there's a lesson here we don't want to miss: Faith is the basis on which we please God! By trusting in Him so much, by believing so much that He is and that He will reward us, we keep coming to Him and coming to Him until we are walking with in as real a way as we might walk with our spouse. That's what pleases Him. And finally, there is:

3. Noah (7) The story is so familiar, but the root of it is this:

a. Noah believed God's warning of destruction through a flood that would cover the whole earth. He also walked with God, Genesis says, and God told him this flood was coming and the human race would be destroyed. And He told Noah to build an ark to save his family. So:

b. he gave 120 years of his life to preaching repentance because God was going to destroy the world in a coming flood and building an ark the size of an ocean liner in the middle of dry land, hundreds of miles from any ocean. It was a massive project if you consider it. He must have had to employ others to help him build it, it was so big. The people around him must have laughed and ridiculed and called him "Crazy Noah". Yet Noah had heard from God and Noah believed God. He trusted God. He knew God wouldn't lie. And so:

c. his faith condemned the world; it stood in stark contrast to the unbelief all around him and highlighted how awful it was. It said, "You can have all that; I believe God and I'll take Him." and so it made him an heir of righteousness. Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord. Why? Because of his faith. He believed God; God declared him righteous and he set out to live his life according to what God had told him to do. There's a lesson here: Faith is the basis on which we choose how to live! God says there is destruction coming. The whole human race is on a broad road that leads to destruction, to a fiery pit called hell. They can't see it; they don't believe it. They go about their lives as they did in the days of Noah, marrying and buying and selling, succeeding in business and giving themselves to every sort of wickedness you can imagine, firmly believing there is no God or if there is, He will never judge me. But do you believe what God has said? And if you do, do you believe it enough to devote the rest of your life to building the ark Jesus said He was going to build, to building His church, to reaching out and rescuing souls and leading them into the refuge of the rock of salvation in Him and joining them to His body?

The world may laugh at us for believing what we believe; they'll think we're strange that we don't run with them and we waste our lives following what they call a religion and missing out on all their "good stuff". But our faith has convinced us who is worth listening to. Al Munger writes: "It was a narrow two-lane road twisting through the hills toward Mazatlan, Mexico. The trucks were slow and traffic was backing up. Our friends, Betty and Joe, had just piloted their motor home around a big truck that was coughing diesel smoke. Now it was our turn to pass this monster. A dozen impatient drivers were behind us. "CURVA PELIGROSA" (Dangerous Curve) the sign warned. We could only see about 150 feet ahead before the road disappeared around the mountain, but I decided to go for it. Shifting into second gear, I put the pedal to the floor and we started around the truck. The drivers behind us must have thought we were crazy. An oncoming bus or truck would scatter us all over the landscape. But they didn't know that just seconds before we started to pass, Betty had called us on the CB radio saying, 'The road is clear for half a mile.' The move that appeared suicidal was safe because our friends could see the road ahead and knew there were no cars coming. I chose to believe Betty. I knew she wouldn't lie to me." [Time Out! A Men's Devotional compiled by Clint and Mary Beckwith. Evergreen Communications, Inc., 1989. Pages 77-78.] Who are you going to choose to believe? Do you really trust God? Do you really believe what He says enough to act on it, to live by it, to say, "Rain on what the world says! I'm doing it God's way!" Faith is a way of living. It's a way of walking, of involving who God is and what He says in every minute of every day of your life. That's what pleased God about the ancients and why He tells us about them. Will you be like them? The choice is yours.

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Life Of Faith (II) - Heb. 11:8-19

As we begin let's review what faith is from verse 1. Faith is a way of life where you're sure of things you can't see and certain about things that have not yet happened, based on your experience of the living God. All the Old Testament people mentioned in this chapter are examples for us of what it means to live so convinced of the reality and character of God that you believe and obey Him concerning things you can't see and things that are still future. And no one is more universally used as an example of this in Scripture than Abraham who is actually called in one verse, "the man of faith". The author of Hebrews gives more space to him than to anyone in this chapter and rightfully so because he draws out for us:

I. Four Faith Lessons From The Life Of Abraham There are four key occasions in Abraham's life where the lesson is so clear you can't miss it. The first one is:

1. faith is willing to obey God without knowing the outcome (8) We always want to know what will happen, the outcome, the result, before we do something. If somebody told me to just pick up and move away from my hometown and my family and my job and go somewhere far away, I'd have a few questions before I'd go, wouldn't you? I'd want to know where? And I'd want to know why? I'd want to know what would happen there. I'd want to be sure that the result of doing it would be worth the cost and the pain involved. If it was a human being telling us to go, we could understand that, but the one who told Abraham to go was God Himself. In Gen. 12:1:

a. Abraham was simply called to leave everything The LORD had said to Abram, "Leave your country, your people and your father's household and go to the land I will show you." Everything! His home and his city and the culture he knew, the extended family he had, everything that was familiar and dear to him. And notice particularly that:

(1) he did not know anything about the destination God didn't tell him that the destination was Canaan; He wouldn't tell him where he was going. He only told him to go, to pack up and start the move. He didn't even give him a direction to walk in. And note this also:

(2) he did not know he would receive a land as his inheritance at that moment. That didn't come until he got into the land of Canaan, as we'll see in a moment. God never told him, "Leave this land and go and I'll give you another land. He told him only that He would bless him. Yet he obeyed God and went without knowing anything at all about what the outcome would be. Why? Because:

b. he trusted God who would "show him" as he went - Gen. 12:1 God said, "I'll show you as you're going" and that was good enough for him. He didn't need to know the outcome; he knew that God would guide each step of his way. LuAnn and I know a little bit of what that feels like. In 1979 I graduated from seminary. That spring God had made it clear that we could no longer continue to be in the United Methodist denomination, of which we had been a part. The reason was simple. They would not ordain me and let me serve because I held to the inerrancy of Scripture and because I wouldn't baptize infants. I wasn't willing to sacrifice my theology, so the call was simple, "Go out, leave. Leave the people you know, leave the churches you know, leave the security of the system that has cared for you and given you a place to serve." And the prayer, "Yes, Lord, but where?" turned up empty. We looked at some potential options but none seemed right. The call became for us, "Just go and I will show you..." So, when our time was up in July and we had to leave, we still had no real place to go so we went the only place we knew to go: home to parents, convinced that in His time God would show us. What we didn't know was that God planned that in late August a little church we'd never heard of in suburban Philadelphia, a place we'd never been, would call us to serve them and we'd live and serve there for almost five decades. God never told us that; if He had, it would have been easier. He just said, "Trust Me and go!" And we chose to live by faith, rather than by sight, and went. It wasn't easy. There are many times in our lives where God calls us to do things, things we don't understand, crazy things, like giving away money when we don't have enough for ourselves, things like leaving our family and our culture and moving to the other side of the world to become a missionary, things like selling our house and giving up our career in midlife to go share the Gospel in a steaming jungle where people will break into your house and threaten your life. Things like choosing to love and forgive people who have hurt you, not knowing how they'll respond. Things like taking on a responsibility or teaching a class or starting a Bible study or sharing the Gospel with someone, not knowing whether you'll be a flop or whether anyone will listen. God calls us to many things that don't come with guarantees, only with, "Trust Me and I'll show you!" And faith believes so strongly in who God is that it says, "Yes, Lord, I'll go and I don't need to know. It is enough that you will lead me." What is there in your life that you've sensed Him calling you to, but you've refused because you're scared of the outcome? Well, on to the second lesson:

2. faith is willing to give up the temporal to gain the eternal (9-10) Well, once he arrived there:

a. Abraham was promised the land of Canaan God said, "I will give you and your offspring this land." in Gen. 12:7, 13:14-15. He told him to look around in every direction and said, "All this will be yours and your children's." There was only one problem. At that time the land was owned and occupied by seven different people groups. They were strong people, armed people that outnumbered him. He was one man and his household. He couldn't take the land by force and he couldn't buy it. The truth is that he never owned one square foot of it except for a cave he bought to bury his wife in. In fact:

(1) he lived all his life in it as a stranger in tents, as did his sons He was the immigrant, the foreigner who didn't speak the language, who didn't have the family there and the connections. He went from living in a house in a city to a lifetime of living in tents, living off of herds and flocks, moving from place to place to find pasture, never having a place to permanently call home and settle down. He literally became a nomad the rest of his life and we're talking 100 years. That's a long time to live in a tent! Now I don't know about you, but after a while I'd have been tempted to head back to Ur. Or I'd have been complaining to God, "Hey, when do I get to own a piece of this turf like you promised! I'm tired of this tent living; I want to build a house or move into town. All those things in life that everybody else has, I don't. You promised!" But he went on living in tents and so did his son Isaac and so did his son Jacob. Three generations never saw the promise come true, never owned a square inch of real estate, even though God reaffirmed His promise to each of them. In fact:

(2) the promise was not fulfilled for more than 400 years It was not until four generations later when Joshua led the people of Israel across the Jordan into the promised land and the walls of Jericho fell that fulfillment began to come. How could Abraham do that? How could he be content to live almost his whole life on a promise of the future that he never tasted. How could he be willing to give up so much here and now to obey God? Well, the answer is in verse 10:

b. his true expectation was an eternal home designed and built by God He didn't really care about living in a city. He wasn't looking for an earthly reward. He knew that even 175 years on this earth is just a drop in the bucket of eternity with God. He was looking for an eternal city, a home in heaven, a home designed and built by God himself where he'd stay and enjoy Him forever. He didn't care about what he lost in this world because his faith was willing to trade what was temporary in favor of the things that would last forever! How many of God's servants today, pastors, missionaries, Christian workers of all types, are never going to own a house, are never going to have a secure retirement where they can travel and do whatever they please, are going to move many times during their lives and maybe be far away from their loved ones and not get to be around to hold their grandchildren very much, and yet they lay it all down willingly! They trade a lifetime of what most people call normal, because they're convinced that this world is not their home and obeying God's call on their lives is more important' they're staking their hope on a city that has foundations whose builder and maker is God! What is God calling you to lay down for His eternal cause? Is it a tithe or a significant portion of your income to give to His work that may keep you from having everything you want? Is it your time to serve Him in ministry that will mean you can't be part of every recreational idea you'd love to pursue or to trade your vacation for a short-term missions trip? Is it to release your son or your daughter to leave you and go to the ends of the earth so others will hear the Gospel? Or is it to give up your career and serve Him full time yourself or retire early and give 10 or 20 years to a second career in ministry? Whatever it is, are you living by faith, willing to trade the temporal for the eternal? Now on to the third lesson:

3. faith is willing to believe God in spite of circumstances (11-12) You see, God had made a promise to Abraham way back in Ur that He would make him into a great nation, and to do that he would obviously have to have a child. God repeated that promise time after time, but 25 years went by. Abraham and Sarah prayed, they complained, they even tried having a child by a surrogate mother, Sarah's maid. But Sarah had no child to fulfill God's promise. At last, in Gen. 18 when he was 99 years old, God appeared to Abraham and said, "Next year Sarah will bear you the child I promised." But by this time:

a. Abraham and Sarah were incapable of having a child Both Abraham and Sarah were past childbearing ability. The text says they were "as good as dead" in this department. Sarah laughed when she heard it at first. So would anybody else. The circumstances said it was impossible. But Abraham's:

b. his faith in God's character was not lessened by circumstances - Rom. 4:18-21 Against all hope, Abraham in hope believed and so became the father of many nations, just as it had been said to him, "So shall your offspring be." Without weakening in his faith, he faced the fact that his body was as good as dead--since he was about a hundred years old--and that Sarah's womb was also dead. Yet he did not waver through unbelief regarding the promise of God, but was strengthened in his faith and gave glory to God, being fully persuaded that God had power to do what he had promised. Abraham was of that persuasion that says, "Let God be true and every man a liar!" The impossibility of the circumstances did not matter because God is Lord of all circumstances. He was certain he heard God and he believed God, no matter how crazy or ludicrous it seemed to everyone around him. And so, through his faith:

c. God ultimately did exactly what He promised He took little Isaac and multiplied him over those 400 years into the nation of Israel that numbered in the millions and ultimately into generations of descendants that were as innumerable as the sand on the seashore or the stars in the sky.

Two children were playing on a hillside, when they noticed that the hour was nearing sunset, and one said, wonderingly: "See how far the sun has gone! A little while ago it was right over that tree, and now it is low down in the sky." "Only it isn't the sun that moves; it's the earth. You know, Father told us," answered the other. The first one shook his head. The sun did move for he had been standing there all the time. "I know what I see," he said triumphantly. "And I believe Father," said his brother. The whole human race still divides into those two camps; those who believe what they see, what their senses and their circumstances tell them, and those like Abraham, who believe what God says. How do you live, by sight or by faith? Do you trust that God will care for your financial needs when your circumstances tell you you're going to sink? Do you trust that God will make a way through what looks like an impossible situation in your life or your ministry? Do you trust that God will carry you in His strong arms through the death of that loved one you can't stand to live without, through that painful divorce you never wanted but you can't stop, through that seemingly endless battle with cancer or some other disease so that whether you live or die you are victorious with Him? When the world screams at you from every direction at you, "There is no way!", do you simply say, "I believe Father!" That is the life of faith. And one more lesson, the deepest of all:

4. faith continues to believe God when He doesn't make sense (17-19) You know this story from Gen. 22 very well. After that promised son Isaac was born and grown up, God tested Abraham. He said, "Take your son, your only son, Isaac, whom you love, and go to the region of Moriah. Sacrifice him there as a burnt offering on one of the mountains I will tell you about." Whoa! There's an ultimate test. Now, there have been many others who have sacrificed their sons in battle to save their country or lost them on the mission field reaching the unsaved. But what makes this one tougher than all those is that it doesn't make any sense:

a. God appeared to be making an unconscionable demand of Abraham Not only is God asking him to take the life of his own son, which in itself is an unbelievable thing to require of anyone, but:

(1) He appeared to be contradicting His own promise God had said that His promise to Abraham of having offspring and becoming a nation would come specifically through Isaac. Isaac was the child of the promise, but Isaac wasn't even married yet. Isaac had no child. If Isaac is dead, there will be no offspring and no nation through him. God seems to be sabotaging His own promise; it doesn't make sense. Plus:

(2) He appeared to be contradicting His own character God never, ever wanted human sacrifice. It went on among the heathen around Abraham. Babies would be sacrificed in fire to Molech and other false gods but Jehovah never wanted that. Later on in the law He made it clear how abhorrent that is to him and how anyone who does that should be put to death! How could a God who hates human sacrifice command it to be done? What kind of fickle, self-serving, mind-changing God would do such a thing as this? But Abraham didn't think that way. He headed off to do what God commanded. He had Isaac tied up and lying on the altar and his hand raised with the knife in it; that's how far he went. How could he do that? Because:

b. Abraham applied the reasoning of faith The author of Hebrews lifts the veil and the Holy Spirit tells us what Abraham was thinking. You see:

(1) he was convinced that God could not be untrue to Himself The promise that Isaac would have children had to stand. God could not lie. He could not change His mind. He could not promise and then break it. Isaac had to live and have children, even if he had to die. So, Abraham simply:

(2) he reasoned that God had power to do the impossible He could raise Isaac from the dead, because after all He is God and He can do anything. He can flood the world and kill the entire race. He can raise someone from the dead if He needs to. So, Abraham simply figured that God would raise Isaac from the dead. He said to his servant, "Stay here with the donkey while I and the boy go over there. We will worship and then we will come back to you." - Gen. 22:5. He wasn't lying. He was speaking in faith. He was confident God would raise him and they would return together, because God is still a true and righteous God who can be trusted even when He doesn't appear to make sense! Of course, God didn't do it the way Abraham had imagined; He stopped him with the knife in the air and provided a ram, but still, Isaac was as good as dead; his life was forfeit, but God delivered it by providing a ram, which pictures Jesus. But the point is:

How about those times when God doesn't appear to make sense to you! Those times when you've been faithful, but you end up in misery and agony and pain or He takes you up to the door and it closes in your face, those times when everything in you wants to cry out, "There is no way that this thing works together for good. This just doesn't make sense. Why, God? You're not fair; You're not just; it's not right that you're letting this happen to me, that you're asking me to go through this thing. How can you be the kind of God that you are and let my world fall apart this way?" I'm sure in China and Sudan and East Timor and other places around the world we have brothers and sisters tempted to cry out, "How can you let me be imprisoned for my faith? How can You put me in this labor camp or let me be kidnapped and my family killed?" But the reasoning of faith says, "God's love for me never changes. He is the same yesterday, today and forever and I don't have to understand it; it doesn't have to make sense to me. I just trust You, Lord, and I'll obey and keep on trusting no matter what." You see, through Abraham the author is really giving to ALL of us:

II. A Lesson About Faith And The Promises Of God (13-16) It is not just for these of old, but for all people who say such things, for all people who would live by faith. It's a lesson that says:

1. faith is content not to receive the fullness of God's promises in this life Faith doesn't have to have every promise already in hand. It is able to see the truth of what God has promised from afar off and embrace it, receive it and act on it and live based on it.

2. faith is convinced of our heavenly citizenship and ultimate reward Faith knows that "this world is not our home; we're just a-passin' through. Our treasures are laid up somewhere beyond the blue." We're waiting for a Savior who will take us to be with Him in those many mansions He's prepared. We're waiting to join Him in that New Jerusalem where the streets are gold and the gates are pearl and glory of the Lamb is the light of it. And the reality of that makes the things of earth grow strangely dim! People who say such things, who live that way of faith, that's what they long for and that's what they will get. God has it all ready as He promised and He will never be ashamed of us as His people if we stand firmly on His promise. But verse 15 reminds us that:

3. faith is a conscious choice we are free to reject If you want to live by sight, you can go back there. If you want to go back to Ur and live the way the rest of the world does, you can live that way. A lot of Christians do. Their lives are indistinguishable from anybody else around them except that they trust Jesus to take them to heaven after they die, but while they're here they depend on themselves, figure out their own problems, take the path of least resistance, strive for all the things the world has to offer and care less about eternal things, instead of trusting Him. They live by sight and not by faith like Abraham.

An anonymous author describes it this way: At first, I saw God as my observer, my judge, keeping track of the things I did wrong, so as to know whether I merited Heaven or Hell when I die. He was out there sort of like a president. I recognized His picture when I saw it, but I really didn't know Him. But later on, when I met Christ, it seemed as though life was rather like a bike ride. But it was a tandem bike, a bicycle built for two, and I noticed that Jesus was in the back, helping me pedal. I don't remember just when it was that He suggested we change places, but life has not been the same since. When I was in control, I knew the way. It might have been boring but it was predictable, the shortest distance between two points. But when He took the lead, He showed me delightful long cuts, up mountains and through rocky places, at breakneck speeds. It was all I could do to hang on. Even though it looked like madness, He said, "Pedal!" I worried and was anxious and asked, "Where are you taking me?" He laughed and didn't answer, and I started to learn to trust. I forgot my boring life and entered into the adventure. And when I'd say, "I'm scared," He'd lean back and touch my hand. He took me to people with gifts that I needed, gifts of healing, acceptance and joy. They gave me gifts to take on my journey, my Lord's and mine. And we were off again. He said, "Give the gifts away. They're extra baggage -- too much weight." So, I gave them away to the people we met. And I found that in giving I received, and still our burden was light. I didn't trust Him at first to take control of my life. I thought He'd wreck it, but He knows bike secrets, knows how to make it bend to take sharp corners, knows how to jump to clear over high rocks, knows how to fly to shorten scary passages. And I am learning to shut up and pedal in the strangest places, and I'm beginning to enjoy the view and the cool breeze on my face, with my delightful constant companion, Jesus. And when I'm sure I can't do any more, He just smiles and says, "Pedal."

Hebrews: Our Privileges And Promises

The Life Of Faith (III) - 11:20-28

Faith is the key that unlocks all of God's privileges and promises and makes them ours. So let's review again what faith is from back in verse 1. Faith is being sure of things you can't see and certain about things that are still future based on your experience of the reality of God. I heard David Jeremiah ask this question on the radio this week, "Suppose you were an ice fisherman. Would you rather have a little bit of faith in two feet of ice or a whole lot of faith in two inches of ice? If you answered, the latter, please don't invite me to go fishing with you!" The object of our faith, our God, is real and is worthy of our trust. We're not just working up a lot of false hope in some myth. Our God has proved Himself over and over and once we know Him, once we experience Him, faith becomes a whole new way of living for us. Every step in life we trust Him. We believe what He says and we act on what He commands before anything else. The Old Testament people listed in this chapter are examples of this life of faith and the ones we'll look at today tell us that faith can triumph over two of the most powerful forces that come against us, death and fear. The three men we'll look at first all have lives that lay out for us the same lesson:

I. Faith Believes God's Promises Even In The Face Of Death (20-22) The thread that connects these three verses is dying. Isaac was dying. Jacob was dying. Joseph was dying. You know when a man is dying, what he really believes comes out. It's no time to play and pretend. And virtually on their deathbeds, each one of these looked ahead with absolute confidence that even though they were dying, God's promises would not fail and encouraged their own children to trust God.

1. Isaac believed God's promise to Abraham would come through his blessing (20) Now, if you focus on the story in the Old Testament, it's a little hard to see Isaac's faith in Gen. 27:2-3. You see, he's worried about dying. He knows it's coming and he wants to pass the blessing of God, the covenant and the promise God had made to his father Abraham and then to him, on to his son. It wasn't a gushy, "I love you, son" relational thing. He was really acting as a kind of prophet of God here, speaking the word of the Lord, talking on His behalf and he believed that his verbal blessing would result in the actual things God had promised being done. There was only one problem.

a. he first intended to bless Esau contrary to God's will You see, Isaac had twin boys and his favorite was Esau, because Esau was a hunter and he brought great tasting game dishes for him to eat. I don't know if that's the only reason; he came out first, so he was the first-born, and so on. But he knew full well that just as God told his father that Isaac was the one through whom the promise would be fulfilled, not through his half-brother Ishmael, so when his boys were born, God had made a similar pronouncement. Compare Gen. 25:23. God would multiply both Esau and Jacob into nations. But Jacob and the people descended from him are the ones God chose to be the greater and to inherit his promise. He knew it all along, but hoped to ignore it, to play his own favorite and do what he wanted. But you know the story of how Jacob put on Esau's clothes and pretended to be Esau and tricked him. So, he ended up pronouncing this grand blessing that he intended for Esau on Jacob. He used the very words of God's blessing to Abraham, "May those who curse you be cursed and those who bless you be blessed!" But then Jacob left and Esau came in and he learned what had really happened. And his response is certainly not what mine would be:

b. he found God's plan can't be thwarted and endorsed it by faith Look at Gen. 27:33. He trembled. He shook. God got hold of his soul. In that minute he knew that God had turned the tables on him and held true to His Word and there was no stopping it. There's the faith, "I have given him God's blessing and he is blessed. I can't undo it. Sorry, Esau, he is heir to God's promise and you're not and there's nothing I can do about it. I believe it will be as God has said." And the clincher comes in 28:3-4 where he talks directly to Jacob with no tricks involved. Even though he himself would die without receiving the promises, without becoming a nation and owning the land of Canaan, that promise would hold true for his son. He believed it and he believed that nothing could stop it. And look what happened. His son:

2. Jacob believed God's promise to his fathers (21) Now Jacob is an old man and ready to die. Remember there was a famine in Canaan and now he lives down in Egypt reunited with his beloved son Joseph who is taking care of him. Life is great now. Earthwise, his needs are met; he can die peacefully. But you can tell where his heart is because:

a. he requested burial in the land of promise - Gen. 47:29-31 He believed the promise of God that the land of Canaan would belong to his descendants and he didn't want his bones to lie in Egypt. He wanted to be buried at home, in the land God promised! And when Joseph promised he would bury him there, Jacob bowed in worship and praise and thanksgiving to God! Then, a short while later he became ill and he knew his death was really near and it was time to pass on the blessing of God to Joseph and to his sons like Isaac had to him and notice that:

b. he chose God's order in blessing Joseph's sons, Ephraim and Manasseh - Gen. 48:15-21. By faith he saw that there would actually be a whole nation called by his name, as God had promised, and that these two grandsons would be two major tribes and again, that the younger would be greater than the older. He believed God's promise to Abraham and Isaac to make their seed into a great nation and stood by it even in the face of his own dying! And, of course, then it is no wonder that:

3. Joseph believed God's promise to his fathers (22) Now Joseph is dying. Though he'd been a slave and a prisoner from age 17-30, for the last 80 years he's been second to Pharaoh, married to an Egyptian and one of the rulers of Egypt. You would think Egypt is home; it's where the future lies. What could Canaan hold in comparison to this? Yet as he was dying:

a. he announced the exodus despite his position in Egypt - Gen. 50:24 "God will surely keep His promise. He's kept me all these years and I know He'll keep the oath he made to my fathers. He can't lie. I trust him. So, God will come to help you as a people and will take you out of this land. There will come an exodus. You'll need help. The handwriting is on the wall. You'll be oppressed and treated harshly. God said so back in Gen. 17. But He'll surely send you that help and lead you out. Believe it! I do!" And then he made his brothers swear as his father had made him swear that they would take his bones with them when they left. And so:

b. he reminded four generations of God's promise by his coffin - Gen. 50:25-26 Joseph was never buried, never put in a tomb. He was embalmed and put in a coffin and that coffin was put in a safe and a known place. And for the next couple centuries as his brothers died off and faith in God died out among their descendants, that coffin was the only Bible the people of Israel had. It was the sole reminder of the promise of God, the only way for them to remember that God would one day come to help them and lead them out to the land He had promised! What faith Joseph had!

What faith they all had! They all died without seeing God's promise of a land and a nation fulfilled, but their own death didn't stop them from believing it. They stood on the assurance that those unseen and promised things were sure and certain. And one day, it will be your turn and mine. One day, we'll be dying, staring it square in the face. And those unseen things that we've talked about all these years, things like heaven and seeing the Lord and being with Him forever, reigning with Him, walking with Him in white, things like to depart and be with Christ is better by far, or to be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord. Those things that God has promised you will either evaporate and become meaningless as the fear of death presses in on you because they were nice to talk about but you never really believed them, or else they'll stand real and solid and sure by faith. And you'll close your eyes in confidence that in the next moment you'll see Jesus. How many of our dear brothers and sisters have we laid to rest these last few years who had full confidence in the things they couldn't see, who said "I'm ready to go; I'm not afraid." 'omorrow we'll bury another dear sister. She loved Jesus since she was a teenager. She loved His Word. She prayed and talked to Him every day. And she knew that if her body didn't beat this pneumonia, that she was ready to go and be with Jesus. She told us so. Her favorite Scripture was Ps. 91:1-4, He who dwells in the shelter of the Most High will rest in the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the LORD, "He is my refuge and my fortress, my God, in whom I trust." Surely he will save you from the fowler's snare and from the deadly pestilence. He will cover you with his feathers, and under his wings you will find refuge; his faithfulness will be your shield and rampart. The specter of death did not melt away her faith. It remained strong and firm and those unseen things were real and she slipped off to experience them! You see, faith is a choice. Abraham and Isaac and Jacob chose to trust God, to believe what He said. Our sister chose to trust what He said. Will you? Now we come to Moses' life, which lays before us another similar lesson:

II. Faith Chooses God's Will Even In The Face Of Fear (23-28) The author begins at the very time when Moses was born. As you remember, the children of Israel had multiplied into a whole nation and the new Pharaoh had not only oppressed them into slave labor, but had even made a law that every Hebrew boy that was born must be cast into the Nile! However:

1. Moses' parents hid him because their faith overruled fear (23) Literally, it says they saw he was a beautiful child. Does that mean that if he was ugly, they'd have thrown him in the Nile? No, fortunately Acts 7:20 tells us more, And it was at this time that Moses was born; and he was lovely in the sight of God; and he was nurtured three months in his father's home. Those two slave parents looked at that baby and said, "This baby is healthy and whole and he belongs to God; he is the gift of God; God has a plan for his life; God would not have us destroy him; God will provide a way to preserve him!" And so, in faith, trusting in God, they defied Pharaoh's command, not because they had no fear of the king's command, but perhaps, more accurately, because they were not terrified by it, were not seized with fear and panic that made them rush to the Nile to save their own necks. Their faith overruled their fear and they chose God's will! Now, you know how Moses was found in the rushes by Pharaoh's daughter and was raised as an Egyptian in the very royal court. Well, when he grew up and got to the very prime of his life, Moses made a startling decision:

2. Moses chose in faith to identify himself as an Israelite (24-26) He knew he was Hebrew. And he knew about the God of the Hebrews. And something moved him to make a choice, to throw away his Egyptian heritage and throw in his lot as one of the people of God. Listen to Acts 7:22-25, Moses was educated in all the wisdom of the Egyptians and was powerful in speech and action. When Moses was forty years old, he decided to visit his fellow Israelites. He saw one of them being mistreated by an Egyptian, so he went to his defense and avenged him by killing the Egyptian. Moses thought that his own people would realize that God was using him to rescue them, but they did not. He made a choice; he made a decision. God opened his eyes and he saw the inhumane slavery to which his own people were being subjected. And he chose to step in and in the process killed an Egyptian, who probably deserved it. But the punchline is that he saw himself as an instrument of God! He thought, "I am a Hebrew, yet God has put me in a high place as an Egyptian prince. I am the answer. He can use me to stop this horrible suffering. I'm going to trust Him and take a step right now!" And it changed his life. It drove him out of Egypt into the desert of Midian to become a shepherd. But he knew it had that possibility when he took the first step. In faith he made a choice:

a. he chose temporary suffering over temporary pleasure He knew what the pleasures of Egypt were, but he also knew that they only lasted for a short time. He looked at the suffering of his people and said, "These are my people; their God is my God; I need to take a stand for what is right here, for God's cause, even if that cause costs me suffering in the short run. And the author tells us that:

b. his eyes were focused on God's eternal reward He looked at what lasts forever and said, "I'm willing to trade all of this for that! I'm willing to be a disgrace and a reproach and a despised Israelite slave for that!" His faith was stronger than his fear of the consequences and he dove in and chose God's cause. Then we find that 40 years later:

3. Moses led Israel out of Egypt in faith (27) Now, since Moses left Egypt twice, once to flee to Midian and again at when he led Israel out at the Exodus, interpreters are divided over which time this verse refers to. Personally, I think this a summary of the whole experience of the 10 plagues that God brought upon Egypt and Moses' leading them out at last and Pharaoh chasing after them with all his chariots. You see, this time in his life:

a. he was not afraid of Pharaoh's anger He didn't run away in fear when the firstborn of the Egyptians were killed. He didn't say, "Let's get out of here quick while we have the chance!" God told him this in Ex. 14:3-4; he knew Pharaoh was going to change his mind one last time and send the royal army after him. And he knew that God was going to give a mighty deliverance. So, when the army showed up and all the people were screaming and crying in despair Moses replied in verses 13-14. There it is, his faith. "I believe God will do what He said and I choose to follow Him." How could he do that? How could he stare in the face of certain death and not fall prey to the fear that was all around him? The text says:

b. he endured as though he saw the Invisible One He didn't see the Egyptians with death in their hands. By faith he saw God. God was his protector and preserver and so he led them out at God's command, regardless of the retaliation he knew was coming! His faith overruled his fear! And then finally we read, backing up in the story just a tad, that:

4. Moses kept the Passover in faith (28) The death angel was coming and he knew it. God had told him and it didn't matter whether it was an Egyptian or a Hebrew or even an animal, the firstborn would die. But God also made him a promise, Ex. 12:12-13. And Moses believed God. God had already destroyed Egypt with nine plagues, so the tenth was not hard to believe. The Israelites trembled in fear already! But he also believed God that the blood of the lamb over the doorposts would protect the Israelites as God had said, and so:

a. he made the Israelites eat the Passover meal and sprinkle the blood It wasn't simply that he personally kept it. The point is that he made them all keep it. His faith implored them all, "Get a lamb; make a feast; smear the blood on the door. Do it quickly today!" And God's point is that:

b. his faith preserved all the firstborn of Israel Because he believed God, thousands of lives were preserved. He trusted in the blood of the lamb to save them all from death.
