a. they are facing an experience that may be painful This thief certainly was. They may know that they are going to face a great deal of pain. They may realize that they're going to go out gasping for breath or sedated with morphine to overcome the pain.

b. they are facing an experience that is unknown They've never died before. Neither have you. We don't know what it's like, how it feels, how long it takes, whether death will actually hurt or what our senses will register. On top of that:

c. they are facing an experience that is final There's no coming back. This life is over. If death doesn't turn out to be a positive experience, there are no second chances and no alternatives. Then:

d. they are facing a separation that is complete Everything they have ever known will be stripped away from them. Their family, friends, loved ones, their possessions, their home, everything that is important in life to them. Even their own five senses and their very bodies. It will be a complete and final separation from absolutely everything. And finally, as this thief realized:

e. they are facing an encounter with God that is personal No matter how much you've prayed or been religious, you've never seen God "face to face". And no matter how much faith or lack of it you have, if there is a God, in the moment of death is when you'll find out, when you'll meet Him.

These are the things a person who knows they are dying is facing, so just think about:

2. how they may feel because of what's happening to them Sometimes:

a. they may wish to deny it Some people just can't face the thought. So, they pretend it's not going to happen. They ignore it; they put it out of their minds. They refuse to think or talk about it and hope it'll go away. But eventually it stares them directly and undeniably in the face and:

b. they may feel angry and lash out (39) The crowd around Jesus was mocking Him and yelling, "If you're the Son of God, come down, show us." The one thief dying there beside him did the same. He hurled insults. In fact, Mt. 27:44 says that both of them hurled insults in the beginning, the same as the crowd. Why would these two men do that? Dying people often get angry about what's happening to them, especially if they are younger and feel that it's unfair for it to happen at this time of their life. They may become bitter and may take it out on others, on those around them, even on those they love.

c. they may feel afraid (40a) "Don't you fear God?" the other thief said, "seeing we're about to die just like he is?" I don't think he was using the fear of God in the religious, respectful sense. He was talking about being afraid to meet God, knowing what his life was like. He was scared. Many dying people are; in fact, most of them probably are. Some of them are afraid of God Himself; those of us who have dealt with that, are still often afraid of the experience of dying itself. Heb. 2:14 tells us that the fear of death is universal to the human race and Satan uses it as a tool to enslave mankind to his bondage, unless they are set free by Christ.

d. they may feel sorrow, regret, or guilt (40b-41) They may grieve and be sad over their loss of life. They may experience tremendous regret over things they have done or have never done that they wanted to. They may feel guilty about things they've done and have never felt forgiven for, or have never set straight or told the truth about or about relationships that have been severed. All these things, guilt, sorrow, fear, anger, and disbelief may flood their minds OR:

e. they may find grace to accept their death and live in eternal hope (42) This thief chose the route of accepting the fact that he was going to die and preparing for death and looking for peace. He turned to Jesus and asked as humbly as he knew how for a place in His Kingdom. He wanted to know the grace and mercy of God which would carry him through death and into glory. And thank God, through Jesus' reaction to him, he found it! Dying people may be wounded, hurting people with special needs and special fears, but they can find the grace of God to accept death and face it in confidence and assurance. And a big factor in whether or not these bruised reeds break or these smoldering wicks are snuffed out is:

II. Our Reaction Toward Those Who Are Dying When someone you know or someone you really love is dying, how do you react to them? Well, unfortunately, there are some very:

1. common reactions toward them that we often adopt, sometimes not even realizing it:

a. we may avoid them We may feel awkward when we're around them, not know what to say. Or we may feel so sad and torn up inside that we can hardly stand to see them and watch them deteriorate. So, we try to escape the pain; we withdraw, we pull back. We don't go to visit as often, occupy ourselves with other things, try not to think about it. And so, we may end up denying them the very thing they need most as they're dying: us! Or:

b. we may shelter their mind and emotions We may decide the best thing is for them not to know it's going to happen and just let it take them. Brother, don't you EVER try to keep from me the truth about my own death! I want to know; I have a right to know. Ultimately, I'm the one that's going to have to face it. So don't try to protect me from it by hiding it! Or we may just refuse to mention it in their presence or keep our whole relationship to unimportant trivial things so as not to upset them. Brother, dying people need a chance to talk about their dying! More than ever, they need to be real and to express the feelings of their hearts and to hear the assurance of those they love that it's going to be alright. And then sometimes:

c. we may overprotect their circumstances We know they're frail so we try to protect them from people or things that might upset them or from doing things that might be too strenuous. We want to shelter and coddle them and try to keep them an extra day longer, instead of letting them live their remaining days to the full.

Well, Jesus Himself was dying a painful death. He had neither time nor opportunity for a lengthy conversation with this dying thief. He had strength enough to utter one sentence. But in that one sentence we can see:

2. Jesus' reaction toward the dying man (43) and we can find the elements that are most important in our reaction toward people who are dying. First of all:

a. He told him the truth - I tell you the truth, today... You will die today. You will be in heaven today. You can count on it. Tell them the truth about themselves, about their own condition. You're not doing them any favors by withholding it or minimizing it. Even a child deserves the truth in a simple fashion he can understand. Author Joseph Bayly writes "Our little boy died at home. He began to bleed at 6 o'clock in the morning. The doctor came a little later and said, 'I could put him in the hospital and he could have a massive transfusion. Maybe he'd live a few days longer, maybe not.' We chose to have him stay at home in the familiar bedroom, with his father and mother to comfort him and love him and talk to him about Jesus' love and heaven. In the previous months, when we knew that he had leukemia - and even before - we had talked naturally about those things and he had responded with the simple faith of a child in what his parents tell him. Now he didn't want to go to heaven. He wanted to stay with us in the familiar home. (What little boy wants to leave his mother and daddy, his brothers and his sister?) At 2:30 he died." They told him the truth at a child's level and helped him be ready the best they could. They prepared him for what he had to face so that his last day would not be a terror-stricken one but the culmination of a process of gradual acceptance and understanding. Truth may be upsetting at first, but at the last only truth is healing; falsehood brings no comfort in the face of death. And then:

b. He gave him assurance - ...you will be... in Paradise. "Yes, I know you're a thief. Yes, I know you're worried about your sins. Yes, I know you have no reason to hope for anything based on yourself but listen to me. I tell you the truth, you WILL be in paradise." That's assurance. And the one thing every dying person needs more than anything is the absolute assurance and reassurance that they will be in heaven when they die. If they don't have it or if they begin to doubt it out of the fear that comes upon them, you can be the one to help them get it or to be reassured of it. You can be the one to introduce them to Jesus and the forgiveness of their sins if they don't have it. You can be the one to read the Scriptures and remind them over and over again of the promises of God, if they do. And when their confidence seems to falter, you can have it for them and let them hang onto the coattails of your own. Then:

c. He promised to be with him - ...with me... What comforting words! This thief had nobody, not a soul in all the world to care. But Jesus said, "We will die together and I will be there with you on this very day. You will not be alone." Now, of course, we can't promise to die simultaneously and end up in heaven at the same time like Jesus did, but we can still promise to be with them through as much of the process as is humanly possible; we can promise to be there and hold their hand. Nobody wants to die alone. Joe Bayly also writes of his own father, "In the intensive care unit of the hospital my wife and I were with him until the visiting hours were over. The mechanics of survival - tubes, needles, oxygen system, electronic pacemaker, were in him and on him and around him. He died alone, at night, after visiting hours. His grandsons had no chance to give him a final kiss, to feel the pressure of his hand on their heads..." Oh, that is more and more true. We've moved death out of our homes and into the hospital and put it out of sight where we don't have to bear it, where we don't have to hold the person's hand and bear to watch them go, where somebody will usher us out if things get serious. But if I have to die, I want somebody with me through the months and the days as it grows closer. I want somebody to touch me and hold me. I want somebody I love there in my final hour to be with me. The best medicine you could give me is to promise me that you'll be with me as much as you can through this ordeal and that you'll do your best to be there when I leave and hold my hand until the moment Jesus can take it from you. And then with a word:

d. He made eternal things real for him - ...in Paradise In that split-second Paradise went from being a fuzzy ethereal concept to a very real place in which to be. To most of us, eternal things are like that. We mention heaven and know we're going there, but we've never really thought about it much and it's sort of dreamlike and vague. But I've met a few precious saints in my time who talked about heaven and being with Jesus there in a way so concrete that it seemed as real to me as my talking about going home after work and seeing my wife! It's about time we started realizing, as we read the visions that God has given us of heaven in our Bible, that it's real, that these are snapshots of our own future, things we'll see and experience. Paul said to fix our minds on things above where Christ is seated at the right hand of the Father, not on things of earth. The things of heaven need to become as real to us as the things of earth which we see with our eyes. I determined some time ago that when I know a person is dying, I'm going to quit beating around the bush and talking about things that don't matter and start talking about Jesus and how wonderful it is going to be to be with Him. I read passages about heaven and talk about what it's like there. I try to talk about Paul and Peter and Bible characters like they're real people we're going to meet there. The more we can do to help them catch the reality of heaven, the easier dying will be.

Will you do that? Will you be brave enough to involve yourself with those who are dying? I know a number of you do all the time in your work, but what about the rest of us? When someone you know faces their last journey, will you be there for them to comfort and encourage? Will you be truthful and do all you can to bring them assurance and to make the eternal things real to them? You just might make the difference in how they spend their last days on earth. A man in Iowa discovered that he had terminal cancer. For weeks he moped around the house avoiding loved ones, inwardly cursing God and wondering why this tragedy had happened to him. Then one day he made a decision; "I am not dead yet, and I am going to live each day to its fullest the rest of my life." Sometime later, when he was interviewed, he said he had experienced a more abundant life in the weeks after that decision than during his prior forty-two years; colors seemed more vivid, the laughter of his children more bright and precious. One of the suggestions he gave to help others with terminal illness was, "Consider each day as a gift from God; enjoy it fully." You could be the key that helps a person change their attitude. You could be the hand that comforts a dying child or parent or spouse. And then let me close with:

III. A Message Of Hope For Those Who Are Dying (that is, all of us!) - Jn. 14:1-4 The night before, Jesus had done the same thing that he did for the dying thief for his own disciples, as they would have to face his death. He gave them these never-to-be-forgotten words: Do not let your hearts be troubled. Trust in God; trust also in me. In my Father's house are many rooms; if it were not so, I would have told you. I am going there to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come back and take you to be with me that you also may be where I am. You know the way to the place where I am going.

1. there is a real place called heaven It is your Father's house. It has many rooms. It is a place that Jesus actually went to and you will too:

2. Jesus is in that place right now preparing for you He is there and He'll be there. He's waiting and preparing in heaven rooms, dwelling places, permanent homes for each of His children and:

3. He will take you to be with Himself Whether it's at the Rapture or through means of death. He himself personally will be right there, just the other side of death's door, to be with you and take you home so you can be with Him forever. So, as you face death, your own or someone else's:

4. you need not be troubled or afraid Trust the Father. Trust in Jesus. Rest in Him. Believe Him above your own emotions and feelings. If you know Him, it will be well with you!

Many years ago, our retired missionary Ernie Kaskela was dying of cancer. He and Shirley served the Lord most humbly but wholeheartedly for many years. But in retirement, cancer was discovered in his lung area. It took the doctors a long time to identify what it was because it was a rare type. An operation was done to remove as much as possible, but there was no real cure. It grew back and is slowly took his life. Eventually treatment ceased and because of the pain he had morphine regularly. He had hospice care arranged for himself to do what Shirley could not. He and Shirley planned his funeral and set their house in order for when he would go. And when I spoke to him, he said, "I'm not afraid of death. I know I'll be with the Lord and I'm looking forward to that. It's just the dying I'm not looking forward to, whether I will suffer and have pain and agony, that sort of thing". We concluded simply that all the saints we have known receive the special grace of God to die at the moment they need it and he would too. Ernie was one of those guys who talked about eternal things like they're real, who talked about seeing the Lord. I couldn't be in Florida where he was, but I prayed for him regularly and I called him now and again. I wanted him to go out knowing he was loved. And I want to go out like he went out, in faith and in peace, knowing in whom I have believed and being absolutely persuaded that He's able to keep me, even through death. Is there somebody who's facing death that you should be ministering to? Somebody to whom you could bring comfort like Jesus did to this dying thief?

John: The Gospel Of Life The Word Become Flesh - 1:1-18

Today we begin a chapter by chapter exposition of the Gospel of John. Its prologue, the first 18 verses, are really what I call "The Other Christmas Story". Matthew and Luke report the happenings on the ground: the birth of John, the announcement to Mary, Joseph's dream, the stable, the angels, the shepherds, the arrival of the wise men and all the other things that have come to be so much a part of our thinking about the coming of Jesus into the world. They see it from man's side. But John does not tell that part of the story at all. He sees it from God's side; He talks about Jesus, God the Son from all eternity, now coming into the world in flesh and what that means to the human race. And that can be summed up in one word: LIFE! In the event of the incarnation God has given us life! Almost every chapter mentions over again this theme of life and John even said that he wrote this gospel, ...that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that by believing you may have life in his name. - John 20:31. John is truly the Gospel of Life! And he begins by telling us:

I. What Jesus Has Always Been (1-2) Here we read that Jesus:

1. He is the Logos, the living Word or expression of God The Greek word word is logos. However, as it is used here, it doesn't mean a word written on a page or even a word spoken by a mouth. A person's word is a living expression of Himself. I think the writer of Hebrews explained it well when he wrote Heb. 1:1-3. Throughout the history of the Old Testament, God spoke. He spoke through visions and angels, through dreams and prophets. But now He has spoken in a new and final way; He has spoken literally in the person of His Son! Jesus is the exact representation of God, the complete radiance of the very person of God, now down here on earth and walking around in a human body! You see, Jesus did not begin life in His mother's womb as you or I did. John tells us:

2. He has always existed, even in eternity past Gen. 1 tells us, In the beginning God created... John 1 tells us In the beginning Jesus already was! Micah 5:2 says His goings forth have been from everlasting. He never had a beginning; He just always was! He is eternal. He was around forever, literally, but at this one point in time, He entered the world in a new way. John also points out that:

3. He is distinct from God the Father yet He is God Not A god as the cults would try to make it. He was God, period! And yet He was with God. God with God, distinct and yet one, the Father and the Son, one God in two persons (three actually, because we include the Spirit also). He was not a creation of God, not a child born to God (in the sense we think of it), but fully and completely God, one with the Father. In fact:

4. He was the agent through whom all things were created (3) When God said, "Let us make man...", the us was the Father, Jesus, and the Spirit. Jesus said, Let there be light... Jesus hung the stars and planets in space. Jesus said, Let the dry land appear... Jesus made man in His own image. Not a single thing in this universe that exists was made without Him; He made it all! He sustains it all! Christmas is not about a helpless little baby in a manger; it is about the all-powerful God the Son, the Word of God, Creator of the universe, coming into His own world in a new and unique way! Charles Spurgeon, the great Baptist preacher, wrote, "This great Prince entered our abode. This little planet of ours was made to burn with a superior light among its sister stars while the Creator sojourned here in human form. If for the first time you had heard of the visit of the Incarnate God to this world, you would be struck with a wonder which would last throughout eternity. This is the heart of the Gospel--the incomparable fact of the incarnation of the Son of God, His dwelling upon the earth, and His presentation of Himself as a sacrifice unto God for the sins of mankind." And look what John says next:

5. He Himself is the source of all life (4-5) Where is life? Life is IN HIM. It's not a separate thing; it is in His own person. 5:26 says, as the Father has life in himself, so he has granted the Son to have life in himself. 1Jn. 5:11 says, God has given us eternal life and this life is in His Son. Nothing else has His life, so in order to give us His life, He has to give us Himself, His Person. He has to unite Himself with us. Now John notes that:

a. His life comes to us through light (which is a symbol for truth) Human beings receive His life through the process of understanding and believing truth, through coming out of the darkness of unbelief and evil into the light of truth. Jesus not only came into the world to teach the truth about God and sin and salvation; He Himself was the Truth. He said that. He also said, I am the light of the world. Whoever follows me will never walk in darkness, but will have the light of life. - John 8:12. To believe the message of who He is and what He has done on the cross for us and how we must be saved, is to receive Him and to receive His life! When Jesus came into this world, it was like the brilliance of the sun coming into a pitch dark room and John says that:

b. His light continues to shine despite the darkness of the world The darkness didn't like the Light. The darkness tried to stamp it out. The darkness tried to kill the One who was the Light, but it didn't work. He still shines. The darkness keeps trying to stamp out His message of Truth, to eliminate His followers, but it never works. The light still shines two millennia later and the darkness, for all of its power of evil, cannot stop it, cannot overwhelm it, cannot snuff it out. Jesus has always been and always will be the Light that gives us life. Now, John tells us:

II. What Happened To The World At The Incarnation First of all:

1. John the Baptist was sent to declare that Jesus was the Light (6-8) John was the forerunner. He was to prepare the way, to say to all men that Jesus was the Light. He himself was only a man, only a prophet, only a signpost for Israel, pointing to the fact that:

2. the true light came into the world in the person of Christ (9) He presented Jesus to Israel. He said, "Here is the One; Here is the Light, the true light that is for every man. He existed before me and now He has come into the world. Here He is, the Lamb of God who will take away the sins of the world, the true Light of the world!" John was sent by God to identify Him, but the sad fact is that:

3. His own creation did not recognize Him (10) He came into the world He had made. He made everything in it; everyone in it. It was all His doing, yet they did not recognize Him as their Creator. They didn't know Him. They didn't believe Him. They thought He was just another man, just another human being like the rest of us, the same thing that so many people think today. And what's even sadder is that:

4. His own people did not receive Him (11) He did not come to the masses in China where the knowledge of God was all but erased. He came to the very people He had chosen, to Israel, the people whom He had taken as His own and given His law and told to prepare for His coming. For centuries, they yearned for the day when Messiah would come, yet when He came, they did not receive Him. They did not believe Him. They crucified Him. But the good news is that, both then and now, SOME DO receive Him. How?

5. all who receive Him do so by believing in His Name (12-13) Verse 12 is one of the first promises of God I memorized when I was 15 years old. To receive Him is to trust in His Name, in His Person, in His work to save you. A woman was having trouble understanding the way of salvation. She just could not comprehend what it means to receive Christ. When she told an evangelist about her perplexity, he asked her this question: "Your last name is Franklin, isn't it?" When she answered, "Yes," he said, "How long has it been that?" She replied, "Ever since my husband I were married 30 years ago." "Tell me," the preacher continued. "How did you become Mrs. Franklin?" "It happened at the wedding," she responded. "The minister asked me, 'Will you have this man to be your lawful, wedded husband?' and I said, 'I will.' With those words I became his wife, and his name has been mine ever since." The evangelist went on to ask, "Didn't you say, 'I hope so,' or 'I'd like to,' or 'I'll try to take him as my husband'?" "No," the woman answered, "I said, 'I will,' and that's all there was to it." The minister explained that God wanted her to take Christ as her Savior. Then he posed this question: "What should you say to that?" The woman finally saw the point and exclaimed, "How simple!" At last, she accepted Christ as her Savior. Believing what the Bible says about Him-- that He died for her sins-- she placed her trust in Him for salvation. And what happens when a person receives Christ?

a. through His authority they become children of God They enter into a new relationship with God. No more His enemy, not even His servant, but His own precious child, His beloved son, His darling daughter; that's what happens because He says so! But there's more:

b. through His power they experience new birth They experience an inner transformation; they are born all over again. Not the way they were born the first time. Not born out of natural descent, not born because they choose it or work themselves up to it, or because someone else chooses it. God gives them a new spiritual birth and they are changed on the inside. A brand new spirit, a new nature is born in them. How? He Himself comes into them and they get His life!

Listen, it is Christmas time. The world is changed. Christ came into the world to give you His life! The majority have rejected His light, but what about you? Have you received Him? Have you become His child and experienced the new birth? If you haven't, it's for you! As many as received Him, as many as took Him as their Savior, as many as believed that He is the only way of salvation become His children. That is for you; if you haven't claimed it yet, do it today! But there is one more thing to consider and that is:

III. What Happened To Jesus At The Incarnation John says that:

1. He became flesh (14) Jesus, who always existed, who made everything that is, became flesh. That is:

a. He took to Himself a human body and sinless human nature. He didn't just appear on earth in human form like angels can do. He actually became a true human being, a person just like we are and:

b. He tabernacled among us as one of us He lived for a time right in the middle of us exactly the way we live. He lived; He worked; He ate and drank; He laughed and cried; He talked and listened. What we do, He did. What we were, He became. He was not merely like us; He was one of us. And because He became one of us, John, as one of those who walked and talked and ate with Him and listened to His every word and saw His miracles, testifies personally; he says:

c. we saw the glory of the Father in the person of the Son "We saw the glory of the One and Only, the Only Begotten eternal Son of the Father. We saw God walking on two legs among us! And what we saw was grace and truth! He was full of it! No, more than that. His whole nature was grace and truth. It exuded from Him constantly." In fact:

2. He became the agent of grace to us (16-17) Moses gave us the law. It told us how to live. It told us what was right and just. It told us what was holy and pure. But it only brought us condemnation, because we couldn't keep it. Jesus brought us grace. He ate with publicans and sinners. He forgave a woman caught in adultery. He died on a cross for the sins of the world so that we might be forgiven. The whole act of incarnation is grace, the unexplained, unmerited love of God for human beings bound in sin, so much that He was willing to become one of us and die for us. And His grace is so abundant that He has lavished it upon us time after time and has given us one blessing after another that we don't deserve. But through becoming one of us:

3. He became the means of declaring the Father to us (18) Nobody has ever seen God fully and completely. The elders of Israel went up on Mount Sinai and saw the God of Israel and ate and drank, but they didn't really see Him in all His fullness. Moses spoke with Him face to face, but could only see His back when His full glory passed by. How could we look at Him? How could we know Him? The radiance of His glory is too great, too brilliant, too much for us. How could God ever explain His true nature and heart to us? He did it in Jesus! He did it by coming as one of us, one whom our eyes could see, our ears could hear and our hands could touch. One whom we could know. He revealed the Father to us in His very person. So much so, that when Philip asked that question, here's what He said, 14:8-11. Frank Fairchild tells of a beautiful fresco on the ceiling of a palace in Rome. Painted by the artist Guido Reni in 1614, it was one of the most impressive works of its day. But the masterpiece could not be fully appreciated because palace visitors had to bend their necks in order to see it. To solve this problem, a large mirror was placed on the floor beneath the painting. This enabled viewers to study its reflection and more fully appreciate its beauty. Fairchild made this observation: "Jesus Christ does precisely that for us when we try to get some notion of God ... He interprets God to our dull hearts. In Him, God becomes visible and intelligible to us. We cannot by any amount of searching find out God. The more we try, the more we are bewildered. Then Jesus Christ appears. He is God stooping down to our level, and He enables our feeble thoughts to get some real hold on God Himself." Jesus, God the one and only, who was and is again at the Father's side, became one of us, that He might reveal God to us!

Jill Briscoe, whose name many of you will recognize, was in college before she discovered what Christmas was all about. It was then, she says, that "God became a baby for me! He came to earth because He knew I needed eternal life; the Christ child was the only way to the Father. I reeled in horror at the realization of how our family's benign neglect of the real understanding of Christmas must have offended Jesus. I knelt, then lay flat, face down in my college dorm room, crying, 'Jesus, I'm sorry. I'm so sorry. Help me make good those 18 years!' At Christmas break, my struggle intensified. On Christmas Eve, I slipped away to church--alone. I found the little chapel crammed with people. Jesus was here! When I got home, the family party was still revving inside. I slipped in as unobtrusively as I could, but my mother's friend saw me. 'Here she is. We didn't know where you were.' 'She's been to church,' my sister interjected. 'How do you know?' asked the friend. My sister smiled softly. 'Look at her face.'" [Christian Reader, Nov/Dec 1997. Page 92.] Is Jesus, the Light of the World, glowing from inside you? Have you received Him as your Savior? And if you have, in all the hustle and bustle of the Christmas rush, have you thought about what the Incarnation really means for you? Let's be on our faces with Jill in worship and adoration. God became a baby for me. In His grace He became what I am, so that I might be what He is. He took my death and gave me His life. Oh, how full He is of grace and truth!

The Lamb of God - 1:19-51

The word lamb is John's special word. He calls Jesus the Lamb some 29 times in his writings, twice here in our text and the other 27 throughout the Book of Revelation. None of the other Gospels or New Testament letters ever uses that title for Jesus, though Peter in his first letter likens the precious blood of Christ to that of a lamb without blemish or defect. Now I want you to think about the symbol of a lamb. You don't see many of them where we live, but in Israel they were everywhere in the fields and even driven through the streets. Lambs are cute, furry, weak, helpless little things. No one follows a lamb. No leader would ever put a lamb on his flag or his shield. The people of England would never have called their brave king, Richard the Lamb-hearted! He had the heart of a lion! Just so, Israel was looking and waiting for a lion from the tribe of Judah to arise, a brave warrior-king, a Messiah who would lead them to victory over all their enemies. How strange it must have been to the people of Israel as they heard:

I. John The Baptist Identifies Jesus As The Lamb of God (19-34) In the year 26 AD a new phenomenon arose in Judea. John, the son of Mary's cousin Elizabeth, was about six months older than Jesus, but he lived all his life in the desert, unknown. Suddenly, in that year, the word of God came to him and he began to preach publicly. He was a fiery preacher, dressed in a hairy mantle like Elijah of old, calling people to repent of their sins and to be baptized in the Jordan River to show the sincerity of their cleansing. Large crowds came to hear him; many joined him and became his followers and his name soon became a household word from Judea to Galilee. This, of course, disturbed the Jewish leaders and they sent an official delegation to investigate him and see what was going on. (19) Here we have:

1. his testimony to the Jewish leaders (19-28) First of all, he said:

a. I am not the Christ (Messiah) (20) Surely, people had been speculating about him. Could this be the One we've been waiting for? Could this be the Christ, our Lion-leader come at last? And John told them right off, without hesitation, "No! I am not!" And, logically, their next question was, "Well who are you then?" (21-23) Based on a promise in Malachi, the Jews had come to believe that Elijah would return just before Messiah came. John lived in the desert like Elijah; he looked and dressed like Elijah. He preached boldly like Elijah. So they asked him if he was Elijah and he said "No!" Well then, based on Moses' promise that "God will raise up to you a Prophet like me...", some Israelites were looking for "THE Prophet" who was to come, so they asked, "Are you him?" And again, they got "No!" "Well, who in the world are you then?!" And John answered:

b. I am the "roadbuilder" He quoted Is. 40:3, A voice of one calling: "In the desert prepare the way for the LORD, make straight in the wilderness a highway for our God. See, when the King travels, a road crew is sent ahead to level the road, to fill the potholes and depressions and level off the high spots and clear away any overgrowth. John says, "God is coming to you and I'm the roadbuilder! I'm preparing the way for Him. I'm softening the soil of hard hearts. I'm making Israel ready to receive Him." So, they asked him (24-25), "Why are you baptizing? What religious authority do you have?" And John replies (26-28). "The One I'm preparing the way for:

c. He is already here among you! We're not talking about some day long in the future; He's already here, already born and grown up to manhood, already standing among you and about to start His own public ministry. And I'm not worthy enough to do the job of the lowest servant and untie his sandals when He comes in the house! I call people to repent of their sins and plunge them into water because HE IS HERE and people need to be ready for Him TO-DAY!"

Now John's Gospel does not tell the story of how Jesus came to John and was baptized as the other Gospels do, but it is my judgment that that event had already happened, probably some 40 days earlier. Jesus was baptized and immediately went into the wilderness for 40 days to be tempted, before going to north to Galilee, which He does here in verse 43. So, after His temptation He comes back by the Jordan where John is on the next day after these Jewish leaders have been there and that's when John gives:

2. his testimony to the whole world (29-34) Let's go back and look closely at what John says. For the first time he declares that:

a. Jesus is the Lamb of God (29) It's a brand new title, never before used or mentioned. The Lamb of God. What on earth can that mean? Lambs in Israel have only one function; they are noted for only one thing, they are for sacrifice! Every morning and every evening of every day an innocent spotless lamb is sacrificed on the altar in the Temple for Israel. Every year at Passover, every Israelite family, takes a spotless lamb and kills it and eats it as a reminder that, because of the blood of the lamb on the doorposts in Egypt, the death angel passed over the Israelites. Abraham and his son Isaac went up to the mountain and Isaac asked, "Here's the fire and the wood, but where is the lamb for the sacrifice?" And Abraham answered, "God Himself will provide the lamb...!" Lambs are only for one thing; lambs are for sacrifice. They are innocent, pure animals who offer themselves willingly and without resistance for the guilt of others. John says JESUS is the Lamb which God Himself has provided and says:

b. He will take away the sin (not just of Israel, but) of the world! John is the first to understand fully why Jesus came to earth. He came for the cross. He came to die. He came to offer Himself as the innocent, pure, spotless Lamb who would die in the place of us all to take away our sins! Then John says:

c. He existed before me (30) That was not true in birth order; John was born first. But he knew that Jesus was not just a human being; He is God. He was with God from eternity and is now standing here in flesh to die. I am not worthy to tie His shoes! I am nothing; HE is everything. And:

d. my purpose is to reveal Him to Israel (31) He's what I'm doing here! I'm here to identify Him, to tell Israel, to tell the world that this One, Jesus, is the Lamb of God. How do I know? How can I be so sure? I didn't know. I wasn't sure. But:

e. God identified Him to me directly by sending His Spirit (32-33) God had told me, "The One on whom you see the Spirit come down and remain is the One you're looking for!" And after I baptized Jesus, I saw with my own eyes the Holy Spirit of God descend from heaven in the form of a dove and land on Him and remain on Him! God pointed Him out and confirmed Him to me directly, so I would know and so I now publicly declare that:

f. Jesus is the Son of God! (34) Wow! What a radical thing to say! This man is GOD's SON! He is GOD in a human body! God's Lamb is His Son; God's sacrifice for the sins of the world is His SON!

Think how it must have shocked the crowd of John's followers that day! The Son of God, walking among them! And there He is! They can see Him; they can touch Him; they can talk to Him; they can follow Him! Little wonder it is on this very day that:

II. Disciples Begin To Follow The Lamb Of God The fullness of the truth didn't dawn on all of them right away. Many couldn't grasp it. But a few immediately caught the implication. And so, we read first of how:

1. Andrew and Peter began to follow Jesus (35-42) Among John's followers was a fisherman from Galilee who had been listening to John and had become a follower of his. The next day, as Jesus passed by again, John pointed him out directly to Andrew and his companion (who was probably John, the author, himself). That's how:

a. Andrew believed John and followed Jesus (35-37) They followed Him literally. They began to leave John and to walk after Jesus which is exactly what John intended. Andrew believed what John had said and wanted to find out for himself. But:

b. he came to faith after spending time with Jesus (38-40) It was 10 in the morning and they spent the day with him and by that time, Andrew was convinced. He believed that Jesus was the promised Christ, the Messiah. But notice:

c. his first impulse: to bring his brother to Jesus (41-42a) We don't know where his brother Simon was, obviously somewhere nearby, but Andrew hunted high and low until he found him. He had news to share, life-changing news. It feels like he almost dragged Simon by the arm into the presence of Jesus. And that's how:

d. Simon becomes Peter "the rock" (42b) Peter, who would become the leader of the group, the one who would take care of Jesus' sheep after He was gone, who would preach the first sermon on Pentecost, who would be the first to take the Gospel to the nations, who would be the leader of the church, became that "rock" because his quiet brother Andrew brought him to Jesus! Hold that thought and ponder it for a moment.

Now please realize that Andrew and John and Peter didn't begin to follow Jesus full time right on this day. They went home to Galilee and to their fishing, where Jesus met them later and called them away from their nets to follow Him and become fishers of men. But this is why at that later time they left all to follow Him; they believed what John had said here by the Jordan. Next, we read that more disciples:

2. Philip and Nathanael follow Jesus (43-51) The next day Jesus left for home in Galilee where:

a. Jesus found Philip and called him to follow (43-44) Amazing, the connection. They're all from the same little fishing village of Bethsaida on the northeast shore of the Sea of Galilee! Jesus went there on purpose! And He sought out Philip on purpose, but the same thing happened to him that happened to Andrew. After being with Jesus, he was convinced right away of who He was. And again, notice:

b. Philip's first impulse: to bring his friend Nathanael to Jesus (45-46) He can't keep it to himself. He has a good friend that he has to find and tell! John calls him Nathanael; the other Gospels call him Bartholomew which really in Aramaic means "Son of Tolmai". It's really a tag-on like Simon Bar-Jonah (son of John). Nathanael was sitting someplace under a fig tree resting or perhaps meditating when Philip found him and started to rattle off, "We've found Him, the One Moses wrote about. His name is Jesus and He's from Nazareth...Come see!" He's a bit of a skeptic, "Nazareth, can anything good come out of Nazareth...?" Nevertheless:

c. Nathanael believes because Jesus displays omniscience (47-49) Jesus says, "I saw you sitting under that fig tree," which He would have had no way to know. And Nathanael knows the signs of God when he sees them and immediately says, "You're the Son of God!" Wow! That's not just logic; that's a Divine opening of the eyes! But this whole section concludes with the words of:

d. Jesus' testimony to Himself (50-51) "You'll see greater things than this little bit of foreknowledge. You'll see miracles. You'll see the lame walk and lepers healed and the blind see. Remember Jacob and his ladder with the angels going up and down from heaven? I'm not only the Son of God, but I'm the Son of Man, God and Man. I came from heaven to earth. Angels go back and forth to serve Me! You'll see them do it as you follow Me! I am the Son of God!"

Now what's important for us to learn here this morning? First, Jesus is the Lamb of God who died for your sins. In a small Oriental town several men were working on a scaffold high above the street. Suddenly one of them lost his footing and fell to the pavement below. Horrified, his companions quickly came down, expecting to find his body broken and mangled. To their surprise they discovered that their friend was unhurt! At the exact moment of his fall some sheep were passing through the street beneath him, and he had landed on the back of one of the younger animals. There it lay, crushed and dead, but the man was saved. As he gazed upon that lifeless young lamb, he whispered, "It died for me!" Jesus was God's Lamb; He was crushed beneath the weight of your sins on the cross. He died that you might live. So now, when you believe that Good News and take Him as your Savior, all your sins are washed away and you are made righteous. In Chinese writing, the symbol of righteousness is formed by placing the character for a "lamb" above the character for "I". In other words, when by faith I come under the merits of Jesus, God's spotless lamb, I am declared right for all time and eternity. And once you know that, once you've experienced that, your first impulse should be to share it with others! Andrew ran to find his brother. In fact, every time we see him in the gospels, he's always bringing somebody to see Jesus. Philip ran to find his friend. John the Baptist went a step further; he preached it to the crowd. He told the world what he had seen. In fact, that's why we're here and not in heaven enjoying the presence of the Lamb. He has others. He wants us to run and find, others to tell, in our families, among our friends, the people we know and even to the ends of the earth, until every last person hears the news that the Lamb of God has come to redeem them!

The First Miracle - Ch. 2

Jesus did literally hundreds of miracles during the three years of His ministry. They ranged from healings, to exercising direct control over nature, to raising the dead. From among them all, the Apostle John chose 7 to weave his record of Jesus' ministry around in chapters 2-11. He begins here in chapter 2 with the very first miracle Jesus ever did:

I. The Water Changed To Wine (1-11) Let's begin by reading:

1. the story of the miracle (1-10) This celebration was obviously hosted by a family that Jesus' family knew well. His mother was there and He himself was invited. Cana was only about 9 miles north of Nazareth where He lived. Now don't think of this wedding as being like ours with a fancy half-hour ceremony and a three hour dinner. The wedding feast in that culture often lasted as long as seven days! And in a small village where you know everybody, can you imagine having the whole town eat a major meal at your house for a week?! No wonder after a while they ran out of wine! Mary told Jesus about it as though she expected Him to do something to solve it. Of course, she knew who He was, but she had never seen Him do a miracle before. Yet somehow faith sprung up in her. With a loving, gentle reminder that He had to follow God's timetable, not hers, He does something very strange. Outside, probably, there are 6 stone water jars that hold 20-30 gallons each. The guests took water from those jars to wash ceremonially as they came into the house. Nobody would think of drinking from them! But Jesus told the servants to fill them up with water and then to draw some out and take it to the host of the feast. They did it, but I'm sure they were really skeptical. They had put water in, but what he drank was the best wine of the feast, so good that he complimented the groom on it. The water had been transformed by the power of God into wine! It was a miracle! Now God does not do miracles randomly and haphazardly. He always has a purpose. They always point to Him. In this case, if we stop to ponder a moment, we can draw several:

2. lessons from the miracle for ourselves. First of all, it teaches us:

a. a lesson about feasts Many times through the centuries, Satan has tried to introduce into Christianity in different ways the notion that there is something unspiritual about the normal pleasures of life and that it is more spiritual to abstain from them. Self-denial or asceticism has often been seen as a means of somehow gaining God's favor, as though we should all somehow be like John the Baptist, living in the desert, eating only what locusts and wild honey will keep us alive and dressing in the coarsest of garments in order to be holy. But Jesus did not fit that mold. Yes, He lived simply, but He went to the wedding feast. He stayed for days. He laughed and talked with the guests. Likely, He danced for joy with all the rest as the music was played. He ate the food and drank the wine happily with everyone else and when the wine ran out, He provided more and enabled the celebration to continue. In fact, you often find Jesus eating in somebody's house, sharing in a banquet, enjoying the simple gifts that God has given to us. So, through this miracle He teaches enjoyment, not asceticism. You can enjoy the normal pleasures of life that God has provided with a thankful heart and without feeling guilty. And, going a step further, He teaches:

b. a lesson about marriage Jesus went to the wedding and honored and blessed the bride and groom by His presence and participation. We say that in almost every wedding ceremony we have still today. Jesus himself, of course, never married. Paul, too, was single and wrote about the goodness of that. So, it's really easy to develop the idea that the most spiritual people, the closest to God, the most effective for God, are those who don't marry but give themselves only to ministry. In fact, for centuries at least one branch of the Church institutionalized that very idea. But through this miracle, Jesus honors marriage, not celibacy. He celebrates with joy man and woman becoming one in marriage, as God intended from the beginning. While in the plan of God many people may be called to or end up in a life of singleness and be given grace specially for that, through this miracle Jesus forever put away the notion that marriage itself and even the consummation of marriage in sexual union (which would have occurred and been celebrated during this feast) is somehow tainted or unspiritual or even less than God's best. It is holy and blessed and to be enjoyed. Then, there's a third lesson here:

c. a simple lesson about wine: Somehow during the early 1900's the church adopted the idea that any drink with alcohol in it is evil in itself and Christians should never drink a drop. Well, no matter how you try to twist it, you can't get away from the fact that Jesus drank wine and here, Jesus MADE wine and that, the best! On the other hand, Jesus never, ever got drunk, never gave control of Himself over to the wine. So, through this miracle, Jesus teaches temperance, not abstinence. Now let me be quick to point out that the wine Jesus drank was a far cry from the high-proof hard liquors that we distill today. And their custom was often to dilute it with water one part to three. Plus, they didn't drive home at 60 mph in their 8 cylinder donkeys! That means we have to be much more cautious and careful about using alcohol. Obviously, there is a place not to drink alcohol at all, for example, if you'll be driving or operating tools or equipment or if you know you can't exercise self-control and one will lead you to the next until you get drunk. Any former alcoholic will testify to the need to steer clear of that first drink. So, in our culture there is a real need to preach the message: be careful about your use of alcohol. It can grab you and addict you before you're even aware of it! However, that being said, we still have to affirm that all food and drink, wine included, is a gift of God to be enjoyed wisely as Jesus Himself did. Finally, we can also find here:

d. two lessons about God: Jesus indicated to his own mother that God:

(1) He has a time for all things in His plan. We want it now, today, quick. We want our problem solved so that we or the guests won't have to do without. But God has a time and maybe what we want at the moment is in His plan, as this miracle was, but maybe it's not. An earnest Christian who had prayed for 30 years about a certain matter asked her pastor why she hadn't received an answer. The minister gave this reply: "My friend, your experience is much like presenting bills to God and expecting payment for them before they are due. The Lord has His own schedule for responding to your request." We, like Mary, simply have to trust Him and wait to see what it is that He is planning to do in His time. And here's something that you'll notice about God:

(2) He often saves the best for last, the best wine, the fullest joy. The greatest blessing often comes after the lack, the adversity, the difficulty, the struggle. God's favorite timing is "in the end", not the beginning. That's what will make heaven so precious. Anyway:

Jesus didn't advertise this miracle; in fact, nobody really knew what happened except Himself, his mother, his few disciples and those servants. Neither the hosts nor the guests ever knew at the time. But for those who did know, it would never be forgotten. It had a powerful impact. John tells us in verse 11:

3. the purpose of this first miracle (11)

a. it began the revealing of His glory In 1:14 John testified, We have seen His glory, the glory of the One and Only who came from the Father... They had heard John the Baptist tell who He was; they had talked with Him and believed His words. But now they began to SEE it with their eyes in an undeniable way, because He began to reveal it, to unveil it. It was a sign, a dramatic evidence that He was indeed the Son of God! And so:

b. it began to build the faith of His disciples It taught them to believe, to trust, to fall at His feet saying, "My Lord and My God!"

Well, now we come in the second half of the chapter to a different sort of event:

II. The Cleansing Of The Temple (12-25) [Read 12-17] John says this happened right away, at the beginning of Jesus' ministry. The other Gospels don't record that; they say it happened after the Triumphal Entry in the last week of Jesus' life. John doesn't record that. How can that be? The simple answer of faith is that He did it twice, here at the beginning and later on at the end in such a way that it led to his arrest. In the two accounts His words are different, his actions are different. Here He took a whip and created a stampede of animals, driving them out of the outer court of the Temple. He cast out the people and chastised them for turning this holy place into a common market, a place of commerce to make money. Now why did He do this? What are:

1. the reasons for it Do note that it was not a fit of temper; it was not an angry flip-out. It was deliberate and premeditated. He took time to make a whip out of cords and choose His course of action, radical as it was, toward the crowd. What passion drove Him to create this very public stir? It was:

a. the defilement of His Father's house The very dwelling place of God, the place which should be approached with awe and reverence and respect. The place which should be approached in joy and thanksgiving for all that the Father has done, for all His mercy and bounty and blessings. This place should be a house filled with prayer. And what does Jesus find there? Stalls full of sheep and goats and cattle. Cages full of doves being sold. Moneychangers at big stone tables charging a high exchange rate to make their living. It was a market full of stalls, just like the open air bazaar down the street! Jesus could not stand to see it; He could not tolerate it. He had to cleanse it. He had to purify it. He had to restore it to the purpose for which it was made. His passionate love of the Father launched Him into action. But so did another factor:

b. the fulfillment of prophecy His disciples stood there with their jaws hanging open as this scene unfolded! They had never seen anything like this, yet they knew who He was. Their minds instinctively went to the Scriptures and they remembered Ps. 69:9, Zeal for Your house will consume me! And they said "That's it! It is HIS FATHER's house!" It became to them another proof in their growing understanding that this truly was the Son of God. He fulfilled the Scriptures.

Of course, one would expect that if one made such a public disturbance that there would come a public:

2. the reaction to it (18-22) And sure enough, some of those religious Jews standing around immediately question Him and make a demand:

a. the demand of the Jews for a sign (18) They want to know what right He has to do this, where He got the authority. They want to see a sign, a miracle, to prove that He is from God, because he certainly doesn't have any earthly permission to do it! So, He gives them:

b. the offer of His defining sign: His own resurrection (19-21) He will not do miracles on demand for those who do not believe. To them He will give only one irrefutable proof. His finger points at Himself, Destroy THIS Temple and in three days I will raise it up! But because He is standing in the physical Temple, they start muttering about the fact that it had been 46 years in construction and wasn't done yet, and how could he rebuild it himself in three days..yada..yada...yada. Later on, He would say it again, ...A wicked and adulterous generation asks for a miraculous sign! But none will be given it except the sign of the prophet Jonah. For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of a huge fish, so the Son of Man will be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. - Mat.12:39-40. "You're going to kill Me, destroy the Temple of my body, and on the third day I'll raise it up! That's the only sign you get, the one sign for all time!" The Jews walked off mocking. It had no spiritual impact, yet it must have stuck with them because they charged him with saying it at His trial three years later! But it also had:

c. the later effect of confirming His disciples (22) His words stuck with them also. After He rose, they remembered He had predicted His own Resurrection on this very day. Their faith was strengthened by it.

But before we leave the Temple, let's take away a:

3. lesson from it: For us it is a graphic picture of just how God views the defilement of His temple. However, the Lord our God no longer dwells in temples made with hands. In the Greek language Jesus goes into the hieros, the shrine, the physical building. But how easily He refers to His own body as the true Temple, the naos, the dwelling place of God. Is that not true of:

a. our bodies - 1 Cor. 6:19-20 Your body is the very naos, the dwelling place, the temple of the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of God Himself. God lives in you. Jesus lives in you! A story is told about a Scottish fisherman who had a beautiful picture of Christ hanging on the wall in his small hut. A friend who stopped by was impressed by the picture and asked where he got it. The fisherman explained that during a time in his life when he drank heavily, he had wandered into a pub where he was startled by that picture hanging on the wall. He said, "I was sober, and seeing the face of Jesus brought deep conviction to my heart. So I said to the bartender, 'Sell me that picture. This is no place for the Savior.'" The fisherman said that he gave the man all the money he had in his pockets and took the picture home. Then he added, "That same night I dropped to my knees and cried out to the Lord for mercy and deliverance from my sin." Christ is not just a picture hanging in the wrong place; He actually lives in your body! Think about that! Ponder it! How do you think He responds when you use your body, His dwelling place, as an instrument of sin? When you use it to cheat, to steal, to kill, to commit adultery? Or perhaps to lie, to be unloving or unkind! Or even when you use it to pursue your own will instead of His! I'll show you how He feels! Look at Jesus in the Temple! Remember this scene! Zeal for His house consumes Him. He wants to drive those things out, to purify the house for its intended purpose that the Father might be glorified in His house! And the same thing is true of His temple which is:

b. the church - 1 Cor. 3:16-17 You yourselves, the Church, Christ's body, you are that Temple in which He dwells. When His church is defiled, when His church is led astray, when His church is corrupted and tainted and destroyed, His passion is aroused! Zeal for the Father's house consumes Him! There's a good warning for us to stay pure and true!

Finally, before the chapter closes, John makes a last observation about:

III. The Effect Of His Miracles (23-25) It was here in Jerusalem at the feast that Jesus began to publicly do miracles, not at the demand of the leaders, but out of compassion, as He saw the needs of the people. From here on and as he returned to Galilee, they would be a hallmark of His ministry everywhere He went. John doesn't tell us specifics, rather he notes their effect:

1. they caused many people to believe in His power, not His true Person. They believed that He had Divine power, that He could heal, that there was power in His name. Yet Jesus:

2. He knew that their hearts did not truly believe He could see the inside. He could see that they believed for the benefit that was in it for them. That's how one day the crowd could chant, "Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord” and the next, “Crucify Him!” Crowds are fickle. There are many who will believe in the moment but it is not real and Jesus knew that. Consequently:

3. He did not fully entrust Himself to them, but rather to His disciples. He was glad to help and to heal, but He fully entrusted Himself to those He knew were really genuine, those who were His true followers. That’s where He invested His time, training them, preparing them, realizing that the big crowds would fall away, but they would persevere because they were genuine.

And Jesus knows what is in you too. He knows if you’re just one of the crowd who want to get something from Him, one who is hanging in there as long as there is some visible benefit, or if you’re one of those who has truly bowed the knee and given yourself to Him unreservedly, forever. He knows what’s in a man. He knows what’s in a woman. And if you entrust yourself to Him completely, He will entrust Himself to you. He will show you His glory. He’ll reveal Himself to you more and more, day by day, event by event and your faith will be deepened.

The New Birth - Ch. 3

In chapter 2 Jesus had gone down from Galilee to Jerusalem for the Passover and we noted that it was during this week that He began to do public miracles for the first time. The chapter closed by noting that Jesus did not entrust himself fully to the people because “He knew what was in a man”. Well, sure enough, toward the close of that time a particular man comes to Jesus with:

I. An Inquiry About Salvation (1-21) and it’s clear that Jesus knows what is in him [READ 1-2]. Nicodemus is an important man, a teacher, a leader, a member of the Sanhedrin, the ruling council of the Jews. Why He came to Jesus at night, we do not know, perhaps simply to find Him alone or perhaps to avoid being seen. At any rate he had seen the miracles Jesus was doing and drawn the obvious conclusion, “Only God can do these things; this man has to be a teacher come from God!” Yet Jesus is so different from anyone in the Jewish religious system that he knows. So, he comes to inquire, to ask questions, to find answers, but Jesus doesn’t even let him get them out of his mouth. He knows what’s on his mind, the Kingdom of God, and he breaks into his train of thought immediately and teaches three lessons that are as much for us today as they were for Nicodemus. The first is this:

1. salvation comes through spiritual rebirth (3-12) Now there’s a shock. If you want to comprehend, let alone enter, the kingdom of God, you can’t do it through obedience or sacrifice or keeping of the law. You have to be born all over again; you have to experience a transformation, a spiritual rebirth that makes you a brand-new person. And this new birth:

a. it is necessary to enter God’s kingdom and there are no exceptions! Verses (3, 5) say NO ONE. Not a king, not a teacher, not an untaught person, not a rich person, not a poor person, not a person full of good deeds, not a criminal. NO ONE can enter God’s kingdom without the experience of spiritual rebirth and this birth:

b. it occurs from above The Greek word is anōthen which means from above. It is not something you can make happen, not something you can generate by earthly effort. It is something that happens to you from on high, from a heavenly source, and it happens by the entry of the Spirit (6) The Holy Spirit does this work. You were born out of water in your mother’s womb the first time you came into the world, but to be born a second time is an act that is performed by the spirit of God inside you when He comes into you. So:

c. it is an internal act; only the effect is visible (8) It’s just like the wind. You can’t see wind; it’s invisible. You can see trees move and bushes shake and leaves fly down the street. You can hear it as it whistles by and feel the power of a strong gust. But you can’t see it. The new birth is just like that; it’s a spiritual transformation which occurs invisibly inside you. It is the creation of a brand-new spirit, a new person, a new man or woman in your spirit. You can’t watch it or see it, but you can sure see the effects of it, the change it produces in the person’s life! But if we can’t see it, how do we know it’s real, that it’s really something that can happen to us? Simple:

d. we accept the reality of it on Jesus’ authority (11) Jesus said so and that settles it. It is true. Whether Nicodemus can grasp it or not, whether we understand or agree with it or not, Jesus said that we MUST be born again to enter His Kingdom. Now when does that occur? How do we come to experience it? Here’s lesson two:

2. spiritual birth occurs when we believe in Jesus Christ alone to save us (13-18) Jesus starts by using a vivid:

a. the illustration: the bronze serpent (14-15) You remember the story in Num. 21:8-9. In their wilderness journey, Israel had sinned by grumbling and complaining against God and against Moses. So, the Lord sent venomous snakes among the people and many of them were bitten and died. They could not save themselves. They could not get rid of the snakes or heal the poison. But they came to Moses and confessed their sin and begged for mercy. So, God told Moses to make a snake out of bronze and lift it up high on a pole so that anyone who was bitten by a snake, anyone who was condemned to die, could look in faith to God’s snake on the pole and he would live. God would give him life by a divine miracle. Thousands of Israelites were saved simply by believing what God said and looking at the snake that was lifted up for their salvation, trusting that they would live. And Jesus said, "That's a picture of Me! I'm going to be lifted up on a pole, a cross, because of the sins of the world. Anyone who places their trust in Me, who believes in Me, who looks to ME to save them, will experience that Divine miracle of new birth; the Spirit will give Him life that is eternal!" Then follows:

b. the explanation (16-18) Let me break it down into three statements:

- God loved the world and sent His Son to save us on the cross Jesus came down from heaven to be given as a sacrifice for our sins, to go to the cross for us. God GAVE, He SENT, He SACRIFICED, His One and Only Son because He loved us and wanted to rescue us. You see, we've all been bitten by the snake of sin! Every last one, no exceptions. We all stand under the condemnation of the holiness of God. Eternal death would be our unavoidable destiny. But God loves us and does not want to see us perish. So, He gave His son for us and now:

- whoever believes (trusts) in Him is no longer condemned and perishing but has eternal life When I come to Him and confess my sin and my inability to do anything about it, when I cry out to Him to save me, when I trust in Him and what He did at the cross where He took my place and died for me, then I am no longer condemned. I will no longer perish. My destiny has changed forever. I have, right now, the life of God through His Spirit who comes into me. I have eternal life. And, thank God, I'm a whoever! Anyone, anywhere, anytime, rich or poor, murderer or philanthropist, ANYBODY who looks to Jesus alone, lives! But:

- whoever does not believe remains already condemned Jesus didn't come to condemn people; they were condemned already. You don't have to do one thing to be lost, to perish. Neither does your aunt, your uncle, your son or daughter, your parents, your neighbor, your coworker or the person at the farthest end of the earth who has never heard the name of Jesus. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God. The whole human race stands condemned. Anybody who hasn't looked, who won't look, who can't look, doesn't live, can't live! And finally, lesson #3:

3. we believe when we let God's light (truth) shine on our lives (19-21) You see our deeds are evil and we are afraid for them to be exposed. We don't want them to be seen for what they are. We want to be seen as nice and good and kind and generous and doing the best we can. We don't want even God to see that we're mean and selfish and unkind and proud and jealous and lustful. So, we love the darkness of ignorance and untruth because it hides them. We would rather continue to press on believing that we're not so bad, that God understands that nobody's perfect, that when we die, He'll weigh our good against the bad and we'll get in. We'd rather believe that He's a loving God who couldn't possibly send anyone to hell, that all people are basically good or they make it to heaven somehow, even if they have to suffer for a little while first. But when we're willing to let the light of God's truth shine, to accept what HE says, we see that we're all lost, every last one; we are all without hope and without God in the world and there is only one way to be saved, to look to Jesus to save us! And that's when we believe, when we trust Him instead of ourselves, and we experience new birth and are given eternal life!

George Whitefield, at the age of 16, became deeply convicted of his sin. He tried everything possible to erase his guilt through religious activity. He wrote, "I fasted for 36 hours twice a week. I prayed formal prayers several times a day and almost starved myself to death during Lent, but only felt more miserable. Then by God's grace I met Charles Wesley who put a book in my hand which showed me from the Scriptures that I must be 'born again' or be eternally lost." Finally, by the work of the Holy Spirit in his heart, Whitefield came to understand Jesus' words in John 3. He believed and was gloriously saved. After he became a preacher, he spoke at least a thousand times on the subject, "Ye must be born again." He fervently desired that all who heard him might experience the transforming power of God's grace. What about you? Have YOU been born again? If not, thank God you're a whoever! You can make a choice to believe that Jesus is the only way of salvation today and ask Him to save you!

Nicodemus left, still not fully understanding I assume, but we'll meet him again later on. After the Passover, Jesus did not go back north to Galilee right away, but stayed in Judea and for a brief time He had a parallel ministry alongside of John the Baptist. That's why, in the second half of the chapter, we find:

II. A Controversy About Baptism (22-36) [READ 22-24] Let's stop right there and learn a quick:

1. a lesson about baptism Notice first of all that:

a. it was done by immersion, by putting the whole person under the water. That's why both John and Jesus were using the Jordan river, though in different spots. The text says that John chose Aenon because there was plenty of water there. You don't need plenty of water to sprinkle a hundred people. Baptism, as it was originally practiced, was a full bath, a going under the water, being plunged in the river. And why was it done?

b. it was done as a symbol of cleansing/spiritual change Neither John nor Jesus believed in it as a magical religious rite. It was a symbol of the spiritual change that had occurred in them. People came to John because they were convicted of their sins and were tired of them. They wanted spiritual change, to call upon God for grace to live differently. He baptized them and pointed them to Jesus, telling them to believe in Him! In Jesus' case it had a particular purpose:

c. it was done as a declaration of discipleship By being baptized in Jesus' name, people declared themselves publicly to be His followers, 4:1-2. People came to declare that they believed in Jesus, that they were committing themselves to follow Him, to become His disciples. And that's exactly what baptism is and why we practice it still today.

d. it is commanded for all Jesus' followers Jesus gave us the command in Mt. 28:19 ...go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. Peter repeated it in Acts 2:38 ... "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins. And you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. Every one of us is to change our minds, to trust in the Name of Jesus for forgiveness and receive His Spirit and then be baptized in order to declare it publicly, once for all!

How about you? Have you been baptized? Have you publicly declared that you have given your life to be a follower of Jesus Christ in the way He has commanded you to show it? And if not, why not? Well, there's a second lesson here:

2. a lesson about self and success (25-30) It must have been a bit confusing. Now there were two men out by Jordan preaching and drawing large crowds and baptizing. John's disciples were certainly confused by that and especially by the fact that John's crowds were getting smaller and Jesus' crowds were getting bigger. They are a reminder to us that:

a. we must beware the jealousy that can occur in ministry Somebody else is getting more recognition, more attention, than we are. Someone else gets elected and I don't. People like that teacher or that other counselor better than me. That other class is growing and mine isn't. That other church is prospering and mine isn't. Our flesh is really self-centered and it doesn't take much for it to come out in thoughts and attitudes like this. It's something we must guard carefully against. John's response to this attitude in his followers was wonderful. Look what he taught them:

b. we must accept the place and purpose that God has given us (27) It's not our place to decide the role we play in the world. Where we are, what ministry we have and how it succeeds, that is all for God to decide. Charles One pastor speaks to millions; I speak to you. Another plays a wild guitar and sings; you babysit kids in the nursery. Wherever God has me and whatever He's given me is OK, because we can only do and be what He wants us to do and be. We just have to accept it. Our joy is not found in ourselves and the circumstances we're in. Rather:

c. our true joy must be in Christ receiving glory (29) We're not the ones getting married; we're only friends of the bridegroom arranging the wedding for him. Our joy is not to get rewarded for what we've done, not to get applause for us, but to see the Groom get His bride. Our true joy is to see Jesus being worshipped, being glorified, being followed, whether somebody else is the instrument or we are. Paul knew of brothers who didn't like him, who were envious and jealous of him, who were preaching Christ and trying to stir up trouble for him at the same time. But listen to his attitude in Phil. 1:18, But what does it matter? The important thing is that in every way, whether from false motives or true, Christ is preached. And because of this I rejoice. Yes, and I will continue to rejoice. Jesus is what matters; His glory is what's all important, not ours. John's principle must be:

d. our principle: He must increase; I must decrease (30) I need to be out of the way. I'm not the point. I must decrease, especially in my own eyes. In fact, I must die (to self!) HE is all in all. His glory. His will. His kingdom. He must increase!

Now you know that quotation marks are a modern invention and the original text had none. The rest of the chapter is probably not John the Baptist continuing to speak, but the Apostle John adding his closing comments and reaffirming again for us:

3. a lesson about Jesus (31-36) Three important facts about Jesus. First:

a. He is from above, from heaven, and because of that He knows what He's talking about; He speaks the absolute truth (31-34) We can trust what He says. Second:

b. the Father loves Him and has placed everything in His hands (35) He is, as they say, "all that!" He is everything. He is the Father's eternal love and you can't get around Him. You can't get past Him. You can't get by Him. Everything in the universe is in His hands. So, as John says:

c. placing our trust in Him is the only way to receive eternal life (36) Whoever rejects Him will never receive life. He remains under the wrath of God which will fall on him forever. But whoever comes to Jesus, whoever trusts Him, HAS (present tense, in that moment) eternal life.

Queen Victoria of England once heard a sermon that greatly impressed her. Later she asked her chaplain, "Is it possible to be absolutely sure in this life of eternal safety?" He replied, "I know of no way that one could be absolutely sure." This incident was later published in the "Court News" and came to the attention of a minister of the gospel by the name of John Townsend. After much thought and prayer, he sent the following letter to the Queen: "To her gracious Majesty, our beloved Queen Victoria, from one of her most humble subjects. With trembling hands but love-filled heart, and because I know that we can be absolutely sure even now of our eternal life in the home Jesus went to prepare, I would ask you, Most Gracious Majesty, to read the following passages of Scripture: John 3:16; Romans 10:9-10. These passages prove there is full assurance of salvation by faith in our Lord Jesus Christ for those who believe and accept His finished work." Several days later Townsend received this note: "Your letter of recent date received, and in reply would state that I have carefully and prayerfully read the portions of Scripture referred to. I believe in the finished work of Christ for me and trust by God's grace to meet you in that home of which He said, 'I go to prepare a place for you.' (Signed) Victoria Guelph." How about you? Are you resting in that finished work of Christ for you? Do you have the assurance that you KNOW that you have eternal life, based on His Word? Can you put your name into that last verse...I believe in the son; I have eternal life! Can you put it into verse 16, God so loved me that He gave His only Son so that I believe in Him and I will not perish but I have everlasting life? I hope so and if you can, take these moments to thank Him. If you can't, Jesus said, you must be born again!

The Fields Ripe For Harvest - Ch. 4

Jesus remained in Judea for some weeks out by the Jordan River near John, making and baptizing disciples. The longer He did so, the more the crowds around Him grew and it eventually brought Him negative attention from the Jewish leaders. At that point, verse 2 tells us that Jesus left to return home to Galilee in the north, and verse 3 says He needed to go through the region of Samaria which lay in between the two. Now that wasn't geographically true. In fact, most people didn't go that way. If they were religious enough as Jews to actually go up to Jerusalem to celebrate the feasts, they usually regarded Samaria as a kind of "unholy ground", a land of unclean people who were half-Gentiles, through which they didn't want to pass. So, if they were in Jerusalem, instead of taking the straight road north, they would take the road east down to the Jordan River by Jericho, then take a road north, crossing and eventually re-crossing the Jordan again nearer home, in order to avoid Samaria almost altogether! But not Jesus! He was already down by the Jordan; it would have been easy to follow the route north along the river on the east side! Instead, He deliberately took the road back west into the mountains and then north through the middle of Samaria. His need to go that way was not a physical one, but a spiritual one. He had a Divine appointment to keep and an important lesson to teach. The news of His coming and the call to believe in Him was not for Jews alone. It was for despised Samaritans and hated Romans and everyone else. All peoples are invited into His Kingdom! So, He headed north to give:

I. A Witness In Person By A Well In Samaria (1-42) [Read 5-6] After walking all day and covering about 25 miles, He and his disciples arrived at a place at the foot of Mt. Gerizim where many roads met at a well, a well dug some 1500 years earlier by the patriarch Jacob himself, still in use in Jesus' time and still there today! The nearest village, Sychar, was another half-mile further on and, tired as He was from the journey, Jesus sat down to rest by the well as night fell, while His disciples went on into town to buy food. You do realize, don't you, that homes in those days didn't have running water and one of the daily chores, morning and evening, was to go to the nearest well or spring and bring home a jar of clean water for drinking and washing. And so it is that there by the well, Jesus ends up in:

1. a personal conversation with a woman (1-30) Such a natural course of events. Weary traveler meets local resident by the water hole. Our lives are full of such interactions. We meet people naturally every day in the process of living, at the gas station, in line at the grocery store, by the school yard picking up kids. There are too many of those meetings to keep track of, but some of them, like this one, are really Divine appointments in which God wants to inject some news of Himself into that person's life through you. Watch Jesus as He meets her. Notice first:

a. his intentional connection (7-9) It was so simple and natural. He had no bucket to draw water; she did. So he simply asked ...will you give me a drink? Yet even that simple question conveyed something immediately. First, He was a Jew and she a Samaritan; a Jew would never soil his lips by drinking out of a Samaritan's water jar, let alone speak to one unless it was absolutely necessary! He would rather have died of thirst! Second, it was unusual for a man to speak to a woman who was a stranger in public. The very fact of His asking conveyed acceptance of her. Sometimes a simple conversation which you initiate is enough to communicate to someone that you care about them. So often we pass each other in silence, when intentionally choosing to speak a cheerful word or two might be God's means of leading into a great opportunity. Then notice:

b. his meaningful illustration (10-15) Jesus went right for spiritual things. You don't always have to do that. But in light of the fact that she's about to draw water out of a well for Him, He makes a return offer: ...I can give you living water! You do understand that living water in common parlance of that day means flowing water, fresh water, water from a spring instead of stagnant water. She quips, "But how would you get it?" And He says, "I'm talking about a spring of flowing water that would be inside you, one that would give you eternal life, just the way that fresh water brings life to the desert and turns it green." Somehow, she can't get past the physical water thing; after all she has to walk this half-mile and pull up water from a well that today is 75 feet deep (who knows how deep it was then). That's a chore! But she wants it, this living water. She does what He suggested; she asks Him for it. Now that conversation would be totally irrelevant, let's say, by the office water cooler today; yet it was filled with meaning then. There are all kinds of things that God may lead you to say to someone as they respond. You may say, "You look kind of sad; are you OK?" And they may tell you that a loved one is in the hospital. And it would be so natural to respond, "Oh, I'm sorry, could I pray for him? What's his name?" Who would refuse that? Yet it has already introduced both prayer and God as an element in the conversation and if God has the person ready, they may pick up on that and who knows what might happen. A person may be flustered and need help with their grocery cart or their luggage and just the kind offer of a hand may lead to them saying, "Thanks for helping me!", to which you could naturally and easily respond, "It was my privilege; I knew God had me in this checkout line for a reason!" Sure, they may smile and walk away, but then God may have their heart prepared and who knows how you might get to share about spiritual things. Intentional contact... a natural mention of spiritual things... then notice:

c. his manner of conviction (16-18) Before she can have the living water, Jesus has to address the issue of sin. It helps to be omniscient if you're going to try it this way, but He says ...go call your husband! He already knows she is living with a man and has had five husbands before that. But He makes this simple, natural request and it is enough; she hangs her head and says quietly, "I have no husband". Most women would have simply called the man they were living with their husband and told his name and offered to go get him. But she can't bring herself to do that and Jesus agrees with her and, in a sense, commends her for telling the truth. Nobody can realize their need for a Savior unless they are conscious of their need for one, unless they have a sense of their own sinfulness. You can't just explain this to someone or argue them into it. It's a God thing, a work of the Holy Spirit. Yet people whom God is in the process of drawing to Himself already know it! As her spotted record comes out of His mouth, she feels the guilt and realizes that this is at least a man of God, a prophet and the conversation is getting a little too close to home. Thus:

d. her attempt at evasion (19-24) She changes the subject ...let's talk about where to worship. Isn't that what happens? "What church do you go to? Do you believe in predestination? What about all these 'Left Behind' books I see for sale in Walmart? Why is there so much suffering in the world?" Jesus doesn't really indulge her sidestep. He says, "The place where you worship doesn't really matter. True worshippers ARE God's temple! They worship Him in their own spirit and in truth, not for show or reward but because their own spirits are connected to His." Don't let people side-track you into all those unimportant secondary issues. You don't have to straighten all those things out. The important thing is that a person must have a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. They must know and worship Him, take Him as their Savior. Stick with that; that's the message. Jesus did, and now we come to:

e. her response of faith (25-29) She knows one thing: Messiah is going to come and Jesus says, "I'm here" and she believes. She doesn't even grab her water jar, she's so excited! She runs the half mile back to town and right in the street starts gathering people and saying ...come see this man, I think He's the Christ! You know, I think we get so used to failure in this area that we kind of live in doubt. We may witness or share a word or even share the whole good news about Jesus, but we are almost pre-conditioned to believe that nobody's going to respond. Yet if God has them ready, they do! I'm looking out at 3 or 4 people sitting among you, adults, who in the last year or two heard the good news of Jesus through the witness of this church and responded. They believed; their lives are changed. They've gone back and told family and friends and are seeking to bring them to Christ. Don't give up; let God use you as a personal witness; it still works! Now Jesus planned all of this to be:

2. a strategic lesson for His disciples (30-38) What does Jesus want us to learn? Three things. First:

a. the most satisfying thing is involvement in God's purpose (34) The disciples are hungry and tired and can't think of much besides satisfying their physical needs. They say, "Here.. EAT!" Jesus says, "How can you think of food? I just gave somebody eternal life! I just did the Father's will and saw somebody's life be changed! That's real food! That's what satisfies!" How many commercials do you see where somebody is relaxing by the poolside with a drink in their hand or by a fire in the woods with the guys sipping a beer, and they say something like, "This is the life; it doesn't get any better than this!" Oh yes it does! We Americans have kind of bought into that idea that the epitome of life is to be able to relax with every physical need satisfied, but if you try it, you'll find before long that it's empty. Listen, the most satisfying thing on this earth is active work; it's being involved with God in completing His purpose, in advancing His Kingdom. It's in praying strategically and giving sacrificially and in witnessing and in discipling and teaching and in building relationships, helping people or in doing anything else that is part of finishing the Father's work! He won't say one day, "Well - rested, good subject!", but "Well-done, good servant!" That sense of "I must be about My Father's business" came out in Jesus at age 12 and it pervaded the whole of His life. That's what satisfies and:

b. the greatest joy is in spiritual harvest: bringing people to eternal life Around Jesus were fields of wheat on the plain of Samaria. They had been planted months earlier and now in May they stood tall and ripe with full heads waving in the breeze. I don't think we have any clue what harvest time meant to an agricultural society. It was the culmination of all their efforts for the year; all their hard work of plowing and planting and cultivating looked forward to one thing: the harvest. And when the harvest was reaped, it was a time of plenty, of fullness of joy, of dancing and celebration, the happiest time of the year. Everybody knew that. So, Jesus says, "We are harvesters; we are harvesting God's wheat field and bringing in the sheaves of people to eternal life! That's what every effort goes toward and that's where the greatest joy is!" And then He adds:

c. the hard work of sowing is done; now is the time of harvest! He says, "Lift up your eyes; look at the fields; they are ripe; it's harvest time now!" And as He does so, I can see his finger pointing across the fields toward the town of Sychar and as they follow His gaze, what do they see? According to verse 30, here comes that woman, leading a crowd of followers, practically the whole town, streaming toward Jesus. He's saying, "See, there is the harvest; it's harvest time now! Forget the bread and dance for joy! There's the crop for eternal life!" And now we see how this whole incident leads to:

3. a mass conversion in the village (39-42) Wow! A whole village believes in Jesus. Seems almost impossible where we live, doesn't it? Here, people come one at a time. But in many parts of the world, it still happens like this today. In 1995 John Osteen, the pastor of Houston's Lakewood Church, was driving down a road in one of the most remote parts of Mexico. He writes: "There was a man standing on the road, and he waved us down. 'My village is far away,' he said after we stopped. 'Many years ago someone told us a little bit about what is known as 'the gospel.' Our village has now appointed me to walk this long distance to the highway and see if I could find anyone who knew something about this gospel so they could come tell our village,' he said. 'I've been standing here all day, and no one I've stopped had any answer.' 'You have the right car!' I said. When we arrived at his village, the man spoke in Spanish and children started running out into the fields to get the villagers. Soon, all the men, precious, perspiring, brown-skinned men--came from the fields. 'I will never forget it. Taking off their straw hats, they wiped their faces and sat down to hear the good news. Every person in that village came to Jesus!' [Ministries Today, Jul/Aug 1995. Pages 42-43.] Now he doesn't say whether it was all on that one day or over a period of time that he stayed with them. But there is a lesson to be grasped here:

a. the Gospel flows fastest along the web of human relationships It takes a long time to learn to know a stranger well enough to trust what they say. But every one of us comes with a whole web of relationships already in place and when one person comes to Christ, it's only natural for that one to tell the ones she knows and who know her and they believe and each one of them has a web that extends farther and so forth. Especially in village societies, in places where the community is small and tightly knit, it is often tough for a stranger to come and make the initial breakthrough, but once it is made, it will often spread very quickly because:

b. the testimony of a known person gains a hearing for it When someone they already know and respect says, "I have found the Savior", they are much more ready to listen than if the speaker is a stranger. That's true even for us. In your life God has already built a web of relationships through work and school and neighborhood and even family. That will likely be your greatest sphere of spiritual influence. Work to expand that web; ask God for opportunities to share with people you already know. But note that they did not simply listen to the woman. They asked Jesus to stay with them and for two days they listened to His Word and that's why many believed. So:

c. personal experience with the Word results in faith - Rom. 10:17 ...faith comes from hearing the message, and the message is heard through the word of Christ. It requires more than just your say-so; they must hear the Word of God and read it and listen to it and think about it. That's how they will come to truly believe for themselves.

Well, after two days Jesus moves on and next, He gives a different kind of witness:

II. A Witness By Power At Cana In Galilee (43-54) He is once more back at the scene of his first miracle in the village of Cana, when a man comes to Him with:

1. the desperate request for a miracle (46-47) This is a royal official, a Roman or at least a Jew who works for the Roman government. His son lay dying, so he has come from Capernaum, some 15 miles away to try a last resort, to fall on his knees and beg Jesus to come and heal him. Jesus points out:

2. the danger in this method: which is having faith only in what you can see (48) If the doing of a miracle is the basis of faith, then when there is no miracle, there may be no faith. Jesus doesn't just want to heal the sick boy; He wants the father to believe in Him. So, he makes:

3. the demand for faith before the miracle (49-50) This puts the official in a real dilemma. Jesus says, "Go home...your son will live." But he's not at home to see that it worked. He doesn't have Jesus there in his house laying his hands on the boy and seeing him raised up. He either has to trust Jesus' word and walk away, or stay and keep on begging until Jesus comes with him. He decides to take Jesus at His word and go home - that's faith. He chooses to believe. And as he is going home, we have:

4. the confirmation of faith by the miracle (51-54) Wow! What authority Jesus had! The moment He said the boy would live, he got better, whether anybody was there to see it or not. That was enough, both for this man and for his whole household. They all believed together. Another field white unto harvest, now gathered in to eternal life.

That's what Jesus was about. That's what He's still about: gathering in the harvest. And His challenge to His disciples is still the same: Open your eyes! Look about you! What you see is God's field and in that field are people that He wants to harvest for eternal life! A man named Mark was on a golf course he had played many times before. Suddenly he exclaimed to his golfing partners, "Look at that beautiful sight!" There, stretching away over the golden sand dunes, was a marvelous view of Lake Michigan, its sparkling blue waters shimmering in summer splendor. Always before on that particular hole, Mark had been concerned with a golfing problem--the chip he had to make or the putt he had to sink. His eyes had always been focused downward. And as he gazed on in wonder, he exclaimed, "I never looked up from here before!" What course does God have you playing? What field does He have you standing in? A field of Samaritans you don't even usually talk to? Have you ever looked up from there and seen it with Jesus' eyes? You want joy? You want true satisfaction in life? Go get involved and reap God's harvest.

John: The Gospel Of Life

The Healing At The Pool - Ch. 5

We left Jesus in chapter four in Galilee healing the royal official's son. John chooses not to record much of what Jesus does over the next several months there, but rather picks up the story again when He returns to Jerusalem, perhaps alone or maybe with only John who recorded this story, since none of the other Gospel writers did. It was here as He entered the city that:

I. Jesus Does A Miracle Of Healing (1-15) Let's read:

1. the story of the miracle (1-9a) Beth-esda, the house of healing or house of mercy, was a pool near the sheep gate around which a great number of disabled people used to congregate. The reason they came there is missing in several modern translations. You'll notice that verse 4 is not there; it's in the margin. That's because the words of verse 4 are not found in any manuscript of John that we have that was written before 400 BC. It seems to have been added centuries later as an explanation. The reason that's important is that this verse may be reporting a Jewish superstition that these folks believed, rather than a statement of truth as to what actually happened. Every so often the water in this pool would become stirred or agitated and would bubble (possibly because there was a spring at the bottom that fed it). People believed that it was done by an angel and the belief was that the first, and only the first, person in the pool when that happened, would be healed of whatever disease he had. That doesn't sound much like something God would actually do or that He ever did anywhere else, but it does sound an awful lot like something desperate people who were blind and lame and paralyzed and had no chance of ever being cured would believe and stake their hope on. Jesus found a man who had been an invalid for 38 years lying there, who knows for how long, so frustrated that he had given up hope because no matter how hard he tried and how often he tried, he could never be the first one into the water. So, Jesus did for him what the pool could not. He said, "Take up your mat and walk" and, in that instant, the man was healed, totally and completely. He walked away! Jesus healed hundreds, if not thousands, during His three years of ministry and his apostles healed that many more in the years that followed in His Name. And this would be a good place to talk about the subject because it is near and dear to our hearts. There is not one of us that doesn't have someone we love and care about that is either desperately ill or permanently disabled in some way. How our hearts would wish that we could simply do for them what Peter and John did at the temple and say to the lame man, "In the name of Jesus of Nazareth, rise up and walk!" and it would happen! We pray for healing, and sometimes it does happen, even suddenly and miraculously, but often it doesn't. Why not? Well, let's gather from this story:

2. some lessons about physical healing The first is that often:

a. we would rather cling to superstition than look to Jesus Jesus had to ask this poor man, "Do you want to be made whole?" That seems like it has such an obvious answer. Why else was he lying there? However what Jesus was really asking was, "Do you want ME to make you whole?!" But the lame man can only babble on about having no one to put him in the water. He had no clue who Jesus was or that He could heal with a word. He was desperately clinging to a false hope. It amazes me what people will cling to today. Crystals, little angel figures or they'll send money to some radio speaker to get a bottle of oil to anoint themselves with or a special cloth to convey healing power. They'll journey miles, days, to some shrine where miracles are purported to happen. They'll do everything except come to Jesus and acknowledge Him as Lord and Savior and fall before Him like the leper who said, Lord, if you are willing, you can make me clean! - Mt. 8:2. You would think that the minute that lame man stood up that every person in the place would have started crying out, "Jesus, heal ME! too" He should have been mobbed, as He was so many times out in Galilee. But there is no record that they asked or that anyone else was healed. They kept lying by their pool. All healing, both physical and spiritual only comes from one source: Jesus. Whether it comes through a natural process, through doctors and medicine, or in a miraculous fashion, it comes from Jesus so it's time to throw away all confidence in anything else and place it in Him. Now lesson two:

b. Jesus can always heal but does not always choose to heal He chose this man, perhaps the worst off of the lot, but still only one, to heal. The rest He chose not to. Look at Paul's experience. Many miracles had been wrought through his own hands, time after time. Yet when he had a thorn in the flesh that needed healing and he asked the Lord three times for it, Jesus said plainly, "No, my grace is sufficient for you! - that's what you need!" It is not a question of power or ability; Jesus has plenty of that! He could heal everyone. Nor is it a question of faith; who had more of that than Paul? It is a matter of His will and purpose. He heals whom He chooses and sometimes He chooses not to heal! And if He is really our Lord, we need to leave that choice to Him and trust His wisdom. But here's lesson three:

c. when Jesus does heal by miracle, it always has a greater purpose Sure, this healing was an act of kindness shown to a crippled man, but it was more than that. Jesus used it as an occasion to declare Himself the Son of God with power by healing the man. He used it as an unarguable testimony to the Jewish leaders that His words and His claims were true. He used it for the advancement of the Kingdom. When He healed the multitudes, it was not simply for their benefit; it proved that He spoke as One with Divine authority, that His words were true. It advanced the Gospel. And when God does miraculous things today, it is still always in pursuit of His greater purpose of advancing His kingdom.

A few years ago, in a little village in Nepal in the foothills of the Himalayas there was a poor farmer whose wife was very sick. She was also pregnant. Nothing helped. He took her to the village shaman who chanted and did all his rituals and she only got worse. He took her to the shaman in the next village who did all his rituals and she was not helped. He took her home to his hut with no hope that she would live. At that time one of the young men from his village caught a ride on a truck to another village far away to find work as a carrier for an expedition that was climbing Mt. Everest. In that village was a medical missionary who invited this young man into his clinic along with some others to be his guests. He told them some simple stories about Jesus and taught them a few simple Christian songs. But soon a lady in critical condition was brought in. The men asked the doctor, "Will Jesus heal this lady?" He wisely replied, "I don't know, why don't we ask Him?" So, he laid hands on the lady and prayed to Jesus and she was healed. The young man was tremendously impressed and the whole time he was carrying packs up and down the mountain he told himself those stories and repeated the songs over and over. He was thinking of the man in his village with the sick wife. When he got back, he went right to the man's hut. His wife was barely alive. He told the man everything he could remember about Jesus and how he saw Jesus heal the sick woman. The man asked, "Would Jesus heal my wife?" And the young man replied as he had learned, "I don't know, why don't we ask Him?" So, the two laid their hands on the wife and prayed to Jesus to heal her. And He did. In a few days she was well. The two of them rejoiced in Jesus and sang their simple songs. And the man was so full of joy that he began going around his village - guess why - looking for sick people. And he would tell them all he knew about Jesus and they would ask whether Jesus would heal them and he would say, "Let's ask Him" and people would be healed. Soon there was a church meeting in that village and the man began to devote less time to his farming and more time to telling about Jesus. He went to the next village and the next. By the time a white missionary arrived in the area there were churches meeting in 7 villages! Two years ago, in that region there were more than 100 little village churches! Isn't that just like what Jesus did back then? He healed so people would know who He was and believe. He is still doing that today, especially in places like the 10/40 Window where people don't have any idea who He really is and have no way to hear about Him! But the people around Jesus on this day did not respond so well. Next, we have:

3. the reporting of the miracle (9b-15) This man was in deep trouble. To be caught deliberately working, even by carrying a mat through the streets, on the Sabbath day, carried a stiff penalty. He was only able to tell them, the man who healed me told me to, yet in the excitement Jesus had slipped away and the man never even got His name! They let him go, but he just had to go up to the Temple to worship and thank God for his healing. And there Jesus deliberately sought him out and found him a second time to tell him what he told the woman taken in adultery - Go and sin no more! It was a call to repent and believe and surely more passed between them than is recorded here. Why the man felt he had to tell the Jewish leaders it was Jesus who healed him is not clear; perhaps they had made him promise to do so as a condition of his release. But to speculate misses the point: Jesus deliberately chose to do this on the Sabbath and it brought him into a great confrontation with the Jewish leaders in which, in the second half of the chapter:

II. Jesus Declares His Deity (16-47) Immediately we read that:

1. Jesus is persecuted because of the miracle (16-18) They pursued Him; they hunted Him down. They wanted to get their hands on him for two reasons. First because:

a. they felt He was a law-breaker: He worked on the Sabbath Day by healing the lame man and by telling him to carry his mat. In reality, He was not violating God's law but He was violating the whole web of rules which they had woven around God's law. And beyond that, His response to them was, My Father is always at His work.... and that statement made them furious:

b. they felt He was a blasphemer: He called God his Father personally, and that was a claim to be equal with God, to have His Nature. For any man to claim to be God is pure blasphemy and punishable by death. So:

c. they intentionally tried to kill Him The text doesn't say exactly how, but that was their intent, to seize Him and execute Him for such serious charges. The plot to kill Jesus was not something that came up in the last week of His life; it was there throughout His whole ministry, from this early moment on. And He seems to have deliberately provoked this hatred because here, directly to their faces:

2. Jesus clearly declares His Deity (He declares that He is equal with God!) You see, claiming to be God is only blasphemy if you're not God! If you are, it's simply a statement of the truth. So, Jesus tells them the truth in seven different ways. He says:

a. I am at work on this day as My Father is at work (17) God works on the Sabbath! The grass grows, the sun shines, wounded bodies heal, all things are given life and breath. He is always at His work and in healing a crippled man, I'm acting like He acts; I'm carrying out His work. In fact, Jesus says:

b. I do what the Father does (19) Our work is one and the same. I don't do anything on my own initiative. Whatever I see Him doing, I do. His work is My work. We are one! And:

c. I know what the Father knows (20) I know everything He's doing, ALL He's doing. I have Divine knowledge, the very knowledge of God. I KNOW what I'm doing. He and I are one! And here's a really powerful claim: Jesus says:

d. I give life to whom I please (21) The Father raises the dead and gives them life; I do the same thing. I give life to whomever I please. That's what I did with the lame man. I raised him up physically to health by healing him and my power can even raise the dead. I am the source of life. I am God, and further:

e. I must be honored or the Father cannot be (22-23) Did you get that? If you don't honor me, if you don't acknowledge Me for who I am, if you don't acknowledge that I am God the Son and One with the Father, then you don't honor God! Nobody comes to the Father but by Me! So much for the Jehovah's Witnesses! So much for the Mormons! So much for the millions of liberal protestants and anybody else who wants to believe that Jesus is just a man, a great man, a good teacher, a prophet, but only a man and not God! There are not many ways to God. There are not many nice people who believe different things about Jesus, but are all OK. John got the message; here's what he wrote in his first letter, No one who denies the Son has the Father; whoever acknowledges the Son has the Father also. - 1 John 2:23. They're a package; you can't have one without the other. Worship Jesus or forget worshipping God, period. Look what He goes on to say:

f. I save and give life to all who believe (24-26) The dead in this verse are the spiritually dead who are still physically alive. Now is the hour, that whenever a person who is dead in trespasses and sins hears the voice of the Son of God, hears My word and believes in Me, I give Him life! I save Him. I have life in Myself and I give that life of Mine to him! He is no longer dead, no longer condemned. He has crossed over from one side to the other, from death to life! I am the only Savior. And what's more, one day:

g. I will raise the dead and ultimately judge all men (27-30) On that last day it is MY voice that will raise all the dead from their graves and they will stand before ME for judgment. I am the Judge of all the earth; I am God! Wow, what a statement! How much more clear can you get? And then Jesus goes on to:

3. Jesus names the witnesses to His identity (31-47) [Read 31] In Jewish law, every word must be confirmed by the mouth of two or three witnesses. One person's word is not valid because he could be lying. Jesus knew this is what they were thinking, so he lists all the witnesses to His identity. First:

a. Jesus' own words declared it (31) He himself said, "I am the Son of God; God is my Father." But He was not alone in that:

b. John the Baptist declared it (32-35) You believed John was a prophet; you investigated him. He said, I have seen and I testify that this is the Son of God. - Jn. 1:34. He's the Lamb of God that takes away the sin of the world! And that's not all:

c. the works Jesus did declared it (36) Can you do miracles? Can you deny that the lame man is walking? Can anybody but God do that? Later, Jesus would tell His disciples, Believe me when I say that I am in the Father and the Father is in me; or at least believe on the evidence of the miracles themselves. - Jn. 14:11. The very miracles declared that He was the Son of God. Plus:

d. the Father declared it (37-38) You didn't hear it; you don't want to hear it, but the very voice of the Father Himself testified to who I am. Remember Jesus baptism?...a voice from heaven said, "This is my Son, whom I love; with him I am well pleased." - Mt. 3:17. It happened there; it happened later on the Mount of Transfiguration. The Father said it out loud! And finally:

e. the Scriptures declare it (39-40, 45-46) Jesus is all over the Old Testament. He is the Prophet of whom Moses wrote, like unto him, to whom everyone would listen. He is there in the words of Isaiah and David and the prophets. Look with me at Ps. 2:7-12. David wrote of Me! You need to fall down and worship the SON, ME! But alas Jesus knew that:

4. the Jewish leaders would refuse to accept and believe it (41-44, 47) The evidence was plain, the testimony irrefutable, but they would not believe.

There is no ending to the story. They didn't seize Him and Jesus probably just walked away and left. But it reminds us of the key question in life that every human being has to answer: Who is Jesus to you? Is He a good man, a prophet, a great teacher, a figure of history? Or is He the Christ, the Son of the Living God, your Lord and Savior? Has He saved you and given you life? Have you crossed over from death to life by trusting in Him? Calvin Miller, in his book A Hunger for Meaning, has written: "At the person of Christ two roads diverge. Those on the barren road disappear over the horizon of time, muttering in hunger that He was only a carpenter. Those on the other road [the road of faith] admit that they cannot answer all questions. Still, they are on a pilgrimage to drive a stake in a promised destiny. And ever and anon they stop and cry for the overwhelming joy that fills them and spills over the brink of meaning, 'He is the Christ!'"

The Bread Of Life - Ch. 6

As we leave John 5, six more months of Jesus life and ministry have gone by. It is now near Passover time in the spring of His last year. In these months He has called His disciples away from their boats to follow Him full time and designated them apostles. He has engaged in public ministry throughout Galilee and done many miracles. He has sent out the Twelve on a preaching mission and, upon their return, He decides to take them apart to a quiet place on the eastern shore of Galilee to rest, but there is no opportunity because the crowds seek Him out and find Him. And it is there, near Bethsaida that:

I. Jesus Feeds Five Thousand (1-13) This miracle is significant because it is the only miracle of Jesus recorded by all four Gospel writers. It was evidently a watershed event in Jesus' ministry. Up to this point there has been immense popularity. From this point on, there is growing opposition and Jesus will devote Himself most fully to the training of the Twelve. We all know the story; it is so familiar. But let's not miss the lessons in it. The first is:

1. a lesson about our responsibility (1-6) John leaves out the fact that the disciples came to Him first saying, "Send them away so they can buy bread!" He replied, "They don't need to go away; YOU give them something to eat. Then He asked Philip, "Where can WE buy bread?" He's strongly making a point here: we must feed the multitude. And it's really a spiritual point, not simply a physical one. In a moment we'll see that bread is a picture of life. The multitude is dying without eternal life through Jesus. WE have to meet their need. That's a picture of the world. We, His disciples, have a responsibility for the 4 billion people in the world who either have no opportunity to hear about Jesus where they live or have the opportunity but just haven't heard yet. They can't get the bread; we have to give it to them! We can't just say, "Well, that's their problem. They need to get their own bread; they need to seek and find Jesus somehow on their own." They can't; they won't. We have to give them the Gospel which brings life. The task of missions needs to be strongly on the heart of every believer. And there's a second lesson that goes with it:

2. a lesson about Jesus' ability (7-11) The task seems so huge. There are so many to feed. The world is so big, billions of people to reach, so far away. Like the disciples we say, "How can we do this? How can our little loaves and fishes feed so many?" It was a test for the disciples to see where they would look, to themselves or to Him. And they couldn't get their eyes off their own inability. So, Jesus showed them. He sat the people down and multiplied their poor lunch and fed 5,000 men plus women and children! The lesson is obvious, ...He can provide all that's needed! He commands us to feed the Gospel to the whole world and it is a momentous task, but HE will provide all we need for the task! He is our source! And He can literally create something out of nothing to make it happen if He needs to, as long as we make ourselves available and stay committed to the task. J. Hudson Taylor said, "God's work, done in God's way, will never lack God's supply." He founded the China Inland Mission with ten pounds sterling, and "all the promises of God." His life not only touched a nation with the Gospel, but changed the course of missions history as it encouraged other brave souls to go "Inland" from the coasts to the interior of the great continents. Millions heard because of the heart of one man who believed that God could supply anything needed for His work. We can count on that for ourselves too and I think we're learning it! This scene ends with:

3. a lesson about Jesus' economy (12-13) If Jesus has given you what you need, ...don't waste the extra! He always has more people for us to feed! But we do waste, don't we? A lady fell out of a second-story window and landed in a garbage truck that was slowly moving past the house. Half buried in the litter, she tried without success to get the driver's attention. A foreign diplomat standing on the sidewalk saw her and commented indignantly, "Another example of how wasteful Americans are! That woman looks like she's good for at least another 10 years." The truth is that we Americans are wasteful. Because of the relative luxury in which we live, we not only waste food, but many things. We waste time by the hour, daily, time that God could use to serve others in ministry or in prayer. We waste money; we spend it on the most incredible things sometimes, without even a thought that God has more people for us to feed and He could use our extra! Can you hear Jesus saying to you in your life, "Gather for Me the pieces that are left over; let nothing be wasted!"

The second major event in the chapter is another miracle, but a private one:

II. Jesus Walks On Water (14-21) It begins with

1. a misunderstanding about miracles (14-17) The crowd got the wrong lesson. They thought, "Here is a man who can do miracles. He is from God. He could save our nation from the Romans. Let's make him king, whether he wants to be or not!" That's the problem with miracles. People see what He can do and inevitably end up in the position of thinking ...He will do what I want. But it doesn't work that way, even for us. When they got to that mindset, Jesus withdrew from them and He sent His disciples away also. You can't force Him to do what you want, to give you your personal miracle. They are for His purpose, not ours. But that night he also gave His disciples:

2. a lesson about fear and faith as they were rowing across the lake (18-21) He came to them walking on the water, but they were afraid because they thought it was a spirit. Yet once they knew it was Him, their fear vanished, He came in the boat and suddenly they were safely at shore. By the way, this is where Peter got out of the boat and walked on the water, for about 2 seconds before he became afraid of the wind and the waves and began to sink. The lesson was obvious to all, ...if I trust Him, I need fear nothing, not winds, not waves, not mysterious figures walking on water! Not lack, not failure, not death, not anything in my circumstances. David said, I will fear no evil for Thou art with me! He is with us so we need not fear anything!

Now both of these miracles were leading up to a point of climax where:

III. Jesus Declares His Identity (22-71) and that takes the rest of the chapter. It takes only until the middle of the next day before once again:

1. the crowd finds Jesus (22-25) They searched for Him diligently. They expended a lot of effort. Some of them even got into boats and sailed across to Capernaum where they found Him in the synagogue. But why? To fall at His feet in worship? No:

a. their purpose was the desire to benefit self (26-31) Jesus read their minds and hearts. What they got out of that miracle was that here is a man who could feed them bread every day without working! Here was a man who could feed their bellies daily and make their lives easy and secure. They wanted Him for their own benefit in an earthly way. But that was not:

b. God's purpose: In that miracle, God the Father was certifying His Son (27). He was putting His Divine seal of approval on Him before them all. He was saying, "This is My Son; Listen to Him!" and demanding belief (29). The work of God is not a work at all; it is simple faith, to believe in the One He has sent, Jesus. He fed the 5000 so they would fall before Him as the Samaritans in chapter 4 did saying, "Truly this man is the Savior of the World". So now Jesus makes a:

2. Jesus' powerful claim: He says I am the Bread of Life (32-59) This is the first of Jesus' great "I am" statements. We'll see more of them in future chapters: I am the Light of the World, I am the Good Shepherd, I am the Vine. Here it is: I am the Bread which gives life. To us that doesn't mean much. Bread is just one item in a whole supermarket full of thousands of types of food. But for a large portion of the world for many centuries and even today, bread is the staple of life. It may be all that people have to eat and bread IS the meal, not an extra to it. One field worker in Kyrgyzstan recently commented about some people in the rural villages who are surviving on "little more than tea and bread". They may not have any meat or any cheese or milk or any vegetables, but in many cultures of the world, the last, most basic staple of their lives is some form of bread. In a sense, to say, "I am the Bread" is to say, "I give life" and that's exactly what Jesus goes on to spell out. He makes three clear statements about Himself. First, He says:

a. I came down from heaven to give life to the world (32-40) They couldn't get away from the physical bread. They went back to Moses and said, "Moses, gave our fathers bread from heaven, manna, to eat. You can do that too; we've seen it!" And Jesus says, "No, no, no! I AM the real Bread that came down from heaven to give life! It's not about physical bread; it's about ME! You see":

(1) the one who believes in Me will live forever I can give not just physical existence like bread gives. I give spiritual life, eternal life, to those who believe. If you believe in Me, trust in Me, your spirit will never be hungry or thirsty again; it will never die. It will live forever with my very life. And what's more:

(2) the one who believes in Me will never be lost What assurance for us! "I will never drive you away! I will not lose a single one, a single person, of all that those that believe on Me! And not only your spirit; I will even raise up your body, resurrect it, on the last day." Isn't it wonderful? Do you believe in Jesus, trust in Him as your Savior? You will never be lost. You can't be lost. Your eternal future is guaranteed by the Son of God. No matter how you may fall or fail, no matter how feeble and doubting and timid you may be, no matter what your past may hold! You have trusted in Jesus; you have eaten the Bread that gives life and you cannot be lost! Well, this statement really rocked the crowd and Jesus made a second claim. He said:

b. I will give my body to give life to the world (41-51) They said, "Wait a minute; what do you mean you came down from heaven? You have a mother and father in Nazareth, people that we know; you were born, not parachuted down!" Jesus said, "You will only get this if God enables you to get it, but I came down from heaven and entered a human body and I am going to give that body to die upon a cross for the sins of the world. My body will give life to all who will believe. So:

(1) I am the only way to the Father "I came from heaven. I'm the only one who has seen the Father. I'm the only One who knows the Father. And you have to believe in Me to get eternal life! I and I alone am the Bread that gives life; I am the only One who can give His body for the world and life comes through believing in Me alone. So:

(2) the one who partakes of Me will never die Your ancestors ate physical manna, but it didn't give them true life; they died. If you eat Me, if you believe in Me, even though your body expires, you will never die!" Did you hear that? If you believe in Jesus, you'll never die! Oh, your body will breathe its last; they'll lay it in a grave somewhere and it will return to dust, but you, the real you, the spirit, will never die, will never be lost. You will be with Him and live with Him! The minute you close your eyes, you're in heaven! What assurance!

Well, this claim sat even less well with the crowd, because they still couldn't get their minds out of the realm of the physical. So Jesus said:

c. the one who feeds on Me will live because of Me (52-59) They said, "How can we eat your body? How can it give us life? Are we to be cannibals or something? What on earth are you talking about?" Jesus says plainly:

(1) unless you partake of Me, you have no life and let me point out that He's not talking about communion. He's not talking about the bread and the cup. He's not talking about what our Catholic friends call "the sacrifice of the table", the mass. He's not talking about some physical act where we eat and drink something. We partake of Him, of His body and blood, by believing, by trusting, and by receiving His Spirit into ourselves. Him IN us. That's what gives us life. We live because of Him, because He is in us and His life is in us giving us life. Without it we have no life! But, He said,

(2) if you partake of Me, you have life and will be resurrected You have My life right now and I will even raise your physical body to life on the day of My return, the day of Resurrection.

These are some of the most powerful claims any human being has ever made. Either Jesus is a bold liar, or He's a lunatic and purely crazy, or it's all true. He is who and what He says. Lord, liar or lunatic. Those are your choices! This crowd, I think, chose that latter. Look at:

3. the impact on His disciples (60-71)

a. many who would not believe deserted Him (60-66) There were many who were simply followers. Some of them were merely hanging around to see or get another miracle. Others had likely been following Him around for some time and had begun to believe to some level or other the things He was saying. But when He said this, when He claimed to be the very Giver of Life, to be God standing there in a body, they couldn't buy it, in spite of all the miracles they had seen and they left. For good. No more would there be huge crowds; the time had come to separate the wheat from the chaff, those who truly believed from those who were only following for selfish reasons. They went away, but:

b. the Twelve remained faithful (67-71) There it is: "We believe and know that You are the Holy One of God. There is no one else to go to!" True faith, faith that would not be shaken. So, Jesus now began to devote His ministry very directly to the training of the Twelve, preparing them to understand His coming death and resurrection. And even so, one of them, Judas, was still not genuine, but an adversary, an enemy who would betray Him.

Now try to put the lesson of the whole chapter together at once, if you can. What is Jesus saying to us? "You have the true Bread that gives life! You have Me. There is a hungry multitude out there, a world full of people who are perishing, who are on their way to eternal condemnation because they do not believe in Me. You have Me! You can't ever lose Me! Feed them! They need Me!" Max Lucado tells the parable of a beggar who came one day and asked for bread. The "baker" told him he had certainly come to the right bakery and then took his cookbook down off the shelf and proceeded to tell the poor man everything he knew about bread. He talked about how the wheat was milled into flour, reciting all kinds of interesting statistics and the precise measurements of the recipe. He was pretty impressed with his presentation himself, but when he looked up the beggar wasn't smiling. "I just want some bread," he said. The baker commended him for that desire and offered to show him the bakery. Guiding him down the hallowed halls, he paused to point out the rooms where the dough was prepared and the ovens where it was baked. "No one else has facilities like these," the baker boasted. "But here is the very best part--the room of inspiration." He just knew the beggar would be impressed as he swung open the double doors to the sanctuary with its beautiful stained-glass windows. When the beggar didn't say a word, the baker assumed that he was in awe. Quickly he stepped behind the pulpit and whispered, "Oh, I know, my friend. I find it overwhelming, too. People come here from all over the city to hear me speak, and I read to them the recipe from the cookbook of life." The beggar had slipped into a pew and sat down. The baker assumed that he knew what the man wanted. "Would you like to hear me speak," he asked, but the shabby old man repeated his original request: "I'd just like some bread." "A wise choice," the baker said and led him out through the front door of the bakery. "Now what I'm going to tell you is very important. All along this street you'll find other bakeries, but watch out. They don't serve true bread. I know one of them uses two teaspoons of salt instead of one. And at that one over there they heat the ovens three degrees hotter than they should be. Oh," the baker went on, shaking his head, "they may call it bread, but it's not according to the book!" The beggar silently turned and started to walk away. "I thought you wanted some bread," the baker called after him. With a shrug, he turned and looked back. "I think I lost my appetite." The baker went back inside lamenting the fact that the world just isn't hungry for bread any more. [A Gentle Thunder by Max Lucado. Word Publishing, 1995. Pages 41-42.] Yes, they are! But they don't want to hear about bread. They want to eat it. They want to experience life. You have the Bread; you have Jesus. Don't offer them church. Don't offer them religion. Offer them Jesus! Someone has said that evangelism is simply this: one beggar telling another beggar where to find bread. Tell them they can find it in Him.

The Water Of Life - Ch. 7

Six more months have gone by. It was Passover time in the spring when Jesus fed the 5,000 in Galilee in chapter 6. Now 7:1 tells us that Jesus deliberately stayed in Galilee for these months because the Jews in Jerusalem were waiting to take His life, ever since he healed a cripple there on the Sabbath day back in chapter 5. However, now in our September or October, more than a year afterwards:

I. Jesus Goes once again up to Jerusalem, To The Feast Of Tabernacles (1-10) [Read (2-5)] For those of you who may never have heard it said, Yes, Jesus did have brothers, four of them according to Mk. 6:3, James, Joseph, Judas and Simon -- and some sisters too! Mary and Joseph had these other children together after He was born and He grew up in a large family with them and was an older brother to them. James would later become the head of the Jerusalem church in the book of Acts and write the book of James. Judas or Jude would later pen the letter in our New Testament that bears his name. But at this point in His ministry, even after all His miracles, John says, his own brothers did not believe in Him.

1. the desire of His brothers was expressed clearly. Their thought was: show yourself to the world now If you're the Messiah you claim to be; go up to Jerusalem. Go to the capital. Do your miracles there. Show the world who you are. What are you waiting for? You can't keep hiding out here in the backwaters of Galilee. If you are the Savior, then go and show them! Go up to the Feast with the rest of Israel at this most important time of the year and show them! People are gathered from our whole nation and from all the nations where Jews have scattered. They've all come here. Show the whole world! But Jesus' concern was different from theirs. It was:

2. the timing of God (6-10) He said: the right time for me has not yet come. What is "the right time for me"? It's God's time, the time that God has planned for it to be. Your time is always "now"! Isn't that so true of us? Our time is always "Now!" We want God to act NOW! When we think like the world thinks, we try to push Jesus into doing what WE think He ought to do. WE tell Him how He should get glory to Himself, how He should show the world who He is. And it's unbelief; it's a lack of trust on our part. We don't fully trust that He is God and He knows best and His timing is always perfect so that we patiently wait for it.

Jesus would not yield to their faithless desire, any more than He will to ours. He waited until after his brothers left for Jerusalem and then He went up privately and quietly in (11-14). The Feast of Tabernacles was 8 days long and for 3 or 4 days Jesus stayed hidden and did not appear in public. Jews by the hundreds had arrived in Jerusalem from all over the land and all over the world. They had built little booths or huts out of branches and palm fronds everywhere in the streets and squares of the city, even on the rooftops. Everyone lived in booths to remind them of how their ancestors lived in the wilderness. Daily there were sacrifices at the Temple and religious ceremonies for people to attend. Naturally, the crowd was looking for Him and were surprised He wasn't there. They were bandying about their opinions of him privately. Then suddenly, in the middle of the Feast, He appeared publicly in the Temple and began to teach. The authorities' hands were tied. He had done nothing wrong and they couldn't very well seize and arrest Him in front of everyone without cause. But they could argue with Him. And so, in the next portion of the chapter, we have recorded for us:

II. The Controversy At The Feast Of Tabernacles (11-36) There were three issues on the table, really. Three things that galled the religious authorities there about Him. First of all:

1. they questioned His credentials (15-18) Even though it began with amazement or admiration at how well He taught, there was an underlying:

a. the issue: You never attended our Rabbinic schools (15) There were at least two theological schools in Jerusalem led by famous Rabbis in that day, but Jesus had never attended either one. Now, the essence of good teaching in that day was very simple, since most of it was oral and there were no books: it was to pass on as accurately as possible the words and opinions of the great rabbis who had gone before you. Jewish teaching was filled with, "Rabbi Hillel taught this..." or "Rabbi Shammai taught this about that passage..." But Jesus taught (we're told elsewhere) “as one who had authority; not as their teachers of the law”. He said, “This is what that means; this is what you should do; this is what God says, period!” How could He teach like that? He hadn’t even been to school! Well, here’s His:

b. the answer: (16-18) He cuts out the middle

- My teaching is from God! “I have an authority too, but it is not the opinions of some Rabbi. I operate on the same principle that you do. I faithfully tell you what I have heard the Father say. It’s His teaching and I just pass it on. If I was just telling you what I thought, I would be self-serving and seeking my own ends. But I simply pass on to you what I hear from God and therefore you can be assured that I’m a man of truth and there’s nothing false in it. And here’s how you can test that:”

- If you choose to do His will, you’ll know it! “If you choose to accept and believe what I say and do it, you’ll know whether it’s from God or not. It will be plain and clear to you. If your only desire is to serve Him, then you’ll see that in what I’ve taught. If your desire is to serve self, you won’t be able to do what I teach!” That challenge, still stands, by the way! If you set out sincerely to know God’s will and carefully begin to read and examine the words of Jesus, sooner or later you’ll end up believing and following Him.

Jesus then moved them along to what He knew was the real issue:

2. they questioned His integrity (19-24) He knew, as did everyone else, that there were orders out among the religious leaders to arrest and kill Him. And he knew it was because of the last time he was in Jerusalem in chapter 5.

a. the issue was: You healed a man on the Sabbath Day! “You’re a law-breaker; you even told the man to carry his mat on the Sabbath; you’re worthy of death!” That’s what was going on, kind of undercover, with the leaders, so Jesus addresses it directly.

b. the answer: He says, first of all:

- You are trying to kill Me [which is against the Law] “Moses taught you, ‘You shall not commit murder’ but you’re plotting to do it. Why are you breaking the Law by planning this? Why is it punishable by death to pick up a mat on the Sabbath but to plot murder is OK? And besides that”:

- You circumcise a baby on the Sabbath [which is working] “Moses said you have to circumcise the child on the eighth day. If the eighth day falls on the Sabbath, you circumcise him anyway. You work on the Sabbath for the good of the child. So, I found a lame man on the Sabbath and healed him fully whole. Was not God’s command to do good, to heal and help and save, more important than resting, just the way circumcision is? Here’s the problem:”

- You judge by mere appearances instead of truth! “You look at the surface. Your thinking and theology is a mile wide, but only about an inch deep!” That’s a problem with a lot of theology, even with ours sometimes. We make a rule to solve our problems and judge a person by outward appearances, rather than looking in depth at the heart of the matter. Well, this shook the whole crowd up, but there was another issue that bothered them:

3. they questioned His origin (25-36)

a. the issue is: We know where You came from! (25-27) “You’re from Nazareth. You have parents and brothers and sisters. We know your family. You’re a person just like us. The Christ is supposed to appear suddenly. He’s not supposed to be somebody we know, that grew up among us”. But look at Jesus’:

b. the answer: He said:

- I came from God! (28-29) “Yes, I grew up in Nazareth, but the truth is I’m not from Nazareth. I’m from heaven! I came down from God; He sent me.” Well, that shook them up pretty good, as we’ll see in a moment, but then Jesus added:

- I’m going back to God! (33-36) “I’m only going to be here a short while longer and then I’m going back to heaven. I’m going back to God. And what’s more:”

- You can’t come! “For all your religion and all your profession, you don’t know God and you can’t go to heaven.” That’s what He was saying but they couldn’t grasp His meaning. They scratched their heads pondering where he could possibly go that they couldn’t go.

But Jesus just left them there pondering and walked off. Having proclaimed the truth of who He was, He went back to secrecy and didn’t show his face for several more days, until the last day, the most important day of the Feast. That’s where we have:

III. Jesus’ Great Offer At The Feast Of Tabernacles (37-53) Read (37-39). Now let me paint a picture for you of what this day was like. At daybreak on this day a procession of worshippers would follow a priest carrying a golden pitcher as he went down from the Temple to the Pool of Siloam near the Fountain Gate. The pool was fed continually with running water by the Gihon spring. And the priest would fill his pitcher and lead the procession back up to the Temple. He would time it so that he would arrive just as the morning sacrifice was being laid on the Altar of Burnt Offering. A three-fold blast of the priests' trumpets would welcome the priest as he entered the Temple through the "Water Gate" and then went into the Court of the Priests. Here he was joined by another priest who carried the wine for the drink offering. The two priests ascended the steps to the altar and turned to the left. There were two silver funnels with narrow openings leading down to the base of the altar. Into the one on the east, the wine was poured and at the same time the water was poured out through the funnel on the west. At that moment the Levites would lead all the people as they began to chant the great Hallel, Psalms 113-118, responsively, waving the branches they held in their hands and concluding with Ps. 118:25-29, O LORD, save us [Hosanna]; O LORD, grant us success. Blessed is he who comes in the name of the LORD. From the house of the LORD we bless you. The LORD is God, and he has made his light shine upon us. With boughs in hand, join in the festal procession up to the horns of the altar. You are my God, and I will give you thanks; you are my God, and I will exalt you. Give thanks to the LORD, for he is good; his love endures forever." It was, no doubt, in the great pause at the end of this ceremony as the life-giving water has been poured out, that the lone voice of Jesus rings out through the Temple in the midst of thousands of worshippers making this offer: "If anyone is thirsty, let him come to me and drink. Whoever believes in me, as the Scripture has said, streams of living water will flow from within him." What a dramatic, powerful moment! Listen to:

1. the terms of His offer What is He shouting to them?

a. I am the water of life This ceremony was to supposed to remind them how in the wilderness when there was no water for the Israelites to drink, God gave them life-giving water out of the dry barren rock. They were thirsty and they cried out to Him for water and He gave them water out of the rock. Paul's comment in Corinthians is ...that Rock was Christ! In other words, Christ was there. He was their Source. He gave them the water to drink. That's exactly what He's crying out here: I am the source of life; I give the true living water and:

b. you must come to Me to drink by believing in Me Another passage often chanted on that occasion was Is. 55:1, "Come, all you who are thirsty, come to the waters; and you who have no money, come, buy and eat!... Jesus is saying it clearly: If you want the true water that gives life, you must come to ME. You must believe in ME. You can't get it anywhere else. But if you do, if you come to ME..."

c. I will give you the Holy Spirit Everybody in the crowd also knew that this pouring out of the water had a second symbolism. It symbolized the promise of God in Is.44:3, For I will pour water on the thirsty land, and streams on the dry ground; I will pour out my Spirit on your offspring, and my blessing on your descendants. Jesus says: That's Me. If you believe in ME, I will plant a spring of water inside of you, a spring of life that will satisfy you so that you will never thirst again. I will give you the Holy Spirit to live in you! So come to ME! You are welcome with Me!

What a claim! It is to say, I am God; I give life; you must come to me to have eternal life! And if you do, I will put My life inside you! My friend, that offer is still good today! It stands for you; it stands for your friends and family; it stands for everybody you'll ever meet. And it stands for the peoples at the ends of the earth who have never heard it. Jesus says, Come to ME and drink! If your soul is thirsty, there is nothing on earth that will satisfy it, but if you will come to Him, He'll put His spirit inside you and His life will well up and you will never thirst forever! But look at:

2. the reactions to His offer First there was:

a. the divided reaction of the crowd (40-44) Their reactions varied, just like people's reactions to Christ do today. Some say, "He's a good man, a Prophet." Others, "He's the Christ," but they don't know what that really means. Some try to offer logical reasons why He can't be. Others were angry at Him and wanted Him arrested. But the most telling reaction on that day was:

b. the astonished reaction of the temple guards You see, we skipped a paragraph (30-32). Those few days before, when Jesus had said He came from God, the Jewish leaders gave orders to their Temple police to find an opportune moment to arrest Him so they could have Him killed. These several days they had waited, but Jesus had stayed hidden. So now they had their moment. Now, there He stood in the very Temple crying out to all that they must come to HIM. It was their moment to grab Him, but they just stood there with their jaws gaping open. And look what they said in (45-46), No man ever spoke like this man! How true! But how sad:

c. the hardened reaction of the leaders (47-53) Like so many today, they said, "We know better; we're smarter; we know the answers. He can't possibly be the Christ. Even when some sensible person like Nicodemus says, "Shouldn't we at least hear him out and consider what He says before we condemn Him?", they shake their fists and say, "There's no way we're ever going to believe in Him!" Their hearts and minds are hardened. You've probably met people like that. Maybe you have one in your family. How sad.

Well, it seems that everybody just left and went home. But what the guards said was true. There was never a man who spoke like this One, never a man who made these claims, never a man who claimed to be the source of eternal salvation, demonstrated it by miracles and by his own death and resurrection, and then proclaimed to all: Come to Me and drink of the water of life! During a gospel meeting in a town in Ohio, a man was greatly convicted of his need of the Lord Jesus. He concealed his feelings even from his wife, who was a lovely Christian. One evening after she left the house for a while, his anxiety of heart became so great that he began pacing the floor. His little daughter noticed her father's agitation and asked, "What's the matter, Daddy?" "Oh, nothing," he replied, endeavoring to calm the deep pangs of conviction. But it was all in vain. The youngster looked lovingly into his face and said with the profound simplicity of childhood, "Daddy, if you were thirsty, wouldn't you go and get a drink of water?" Her words startled the father. He thought of his thirsty soul, so parched and empty. Then he remembered the gospel he had heard in the meeting, which told of a freely flowing fountain opened for sin. He resisted no longer, and that night he asked Jesus to save him. It's as simple as that. If you're thirsty, come to Him and drink. It is for you; it is for everyone. He IS the water of life.

John: The Gospel Of Life

The Light Of The World - Ch. 8

In chapter 7 Jesus came down from Galilee to Jerusalem for the Feast of Tabernacles. As we left Him, it was the last, the Great Day, of that 8 day feast where the water was poured out at the base of the altar and Jesus had interrupted the whole affair by shouting out to the crowd in the Temple, "If anyone is thirsty let him come to ME and drink!" That is, "I am the water of life!" There was a mixed reaction to that scene, but no one tried to arrest Him. Then suddenly, we arrive at the last verse, verse 53 and, in most modern translations you'll find brackets or some other indicator setting apart the section of text through 8:11. This section is the familiar story of:

I. The Woman Taken In Adultery (1-11) and the first thing that we obviously need is:

1. a lesson about this text - 7:53-8:11 The footnote in your Bible probably says that:

a. it is not found in most of the earliest manuscripts that come from the first centuries after Christ's death. It IS found in many of the later manuscripts on which our earlier translations, like the KJV, were based. But today we have hundreds of copies of New Testament manuscripts that have been found and compared and we now know what we didn't know in 1611, that the very earliest copies don't have it. It seems to have been inserted later on. So, does that mean that this text is not really part of the Word of God? Well, the reason the translators left it IN your Bible (instead of taking it out altogether or putting it in the margin as they have a few other verses) is that it DOES appear in so many manuscripts, even if they were later. The fact is that:

b. it appears to be historically accurate but from another occasion It does seem to accurately portray Jesus and His words and the fact that the Pharisees tried to trap Him as they did on other occasions. But it doesn't seem to fit here. In fact, in the manuscripts where it does appear, it appears to have been inserted at several different places. With the reference to going out to the Mt. of Olives and the Pharisees' trap, it appears to fit more with the events that were going on during the last week of Jesus' life while He was in Jerusalem, rather than at this visit. One entire family of manuscripts has it as part of Luke's Gospel after chapter 21, which ends with almost the same words with which this text begins. That would indeed place it in Passion week as part of the traps being set for Jesus then. But even though it seems to be out of order, let's not miss the lessons in it. The most obvious one is:

2. a lesson about sex outside of marriage This woman was caught in the act of adultery; she was having sex with a man to whom she was not married. We live in a day when this whole issue is taken so lightly. Children become sexually active in their young teens and even below. It is natural for couples to sleep together before they are married and to live together as though they were married when they aren't. Hollywood has sent us the message that adultery and fornication are concepts that don't exist. Sex is a natural act; it is never wrong. But that is not the Bible's message. That is not God's message. God designed sex as a beautiful gift to be enjoyed between a man and a woman who are committed for life in marriage. Outside of that specific box, it is a serious sin and Jesus says to forsake it! It is so serious to God that under the law of Moses it was punishable by death; the community was to take the person out and together stone them. That is what the Pharisees told Jesus and He did not disagree with that at all. It is not "fooling around"; it is not "OK because we're in love" or "we're going to get married anyway". It is a violation of one of God's most sacred basic principles for the human race. Jesus told her, "Sin no more! Leave your life of sin! Stop it; never do it again! You have no idea of the damage that you're doing to yourself and others! Save sex ONLY for marriage." Listen to Jesus, young people! That's a powerful lesson and a warning for us. But in this story, there is also:

3. a lesson about condemnation What about when you've already sinned, whether it is this sin or another one? It cannot be undone. Is there no hope? Jesus makes a clear point by challenging her accusers, "Whoever is without sin has the right to cast the first stone!" Of course, nobody could do it. His point was that no one can condemn us! We don't have the right and the privilege to judge one another for our sins; that's God's privilege alone. The only human being without sin is the Son of God, Jesus. He could have cast the stone at her, but instead He went to the cross and died for her sin! No matter what we've done, no matter how awful it is, Jesus won't condemn us! If we come to Him and accept His salvation, there is forgiveness for ALL our sins. Rom. 8:1, Therefore, there is now no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus... What a comfort that is!

Now after that parenthetical story, we return to:

II. The Controversy In The Temple (12-58) during the Feast of Tabernacles. Read 7:52 as though the story continues directly at 8:12. The “Water of Life” incident occurred early in the morning of that last day of the Feast. The rest of this chapter occurs later on that same day. That claim was not the only one He made to the crowds. In fact, He went on to make five more very powerful claims that day. And the rest of this chapter is like a running dialogue of argument between Jesus and the Jewish leaders. Jesus makes a claim; they dispute it. He answers them; they react; He answers and finally makes a new and bolder claim. That’s the pattern repeated here. Let’s try to follow it. It begins with:

1. Claim #1: I am the light of the world! (12) This was probably toward evening of that day. Jesus was now in the “Treasury” area of the Temple in the Court of the Women. During the Feast of Tabernacles, in the evenings the Court of the Women was brilliantly lit up by giant lamps, actually a giant Menorah or lampstand. The wicks of the lamps were made from worn out garments of the priests. The people would gather there to sing and dance and celebrate. It was a reminder to them of how God went before their ancestors in a pillar of fire by night in the wilderness to give them light. But it also had a Messianic meaning. The Jews believed that when Messiah would come that He would kindle in Israel a great light of His glory which would be a light to all the peoples of the world. They would point to Israel as the People of Jehovah. When old Simeon took the baby Jesus in his arms, he knew he was holding the Christ, the Messiah and he said, My eyes have seen your salvation...a light for revelation to the Gentiles and for glory to your people Israel. So, when Jesus cried out in the Temple that evening, I am the Light of the World, everybody knew what He meant! I am the Messiah, I am the Christ, the One who will bring His light to all the nations of the world! But He made it individual and personal! Whoever follows Me will never walk in darkness but will have the light of life! They thought Messiah would make Israel so grand and glorious that the nations would come to her and worship her God. Jesus said, “No, I’m going to light the world one person at a time; when they come to Me and believe in Me, I will put My life inside them and they will never again walk in spiritual darkness. They will know the true God and the truth about life and will no longer live a way of life that is in bondage to Satan in his kingdom of darkness!” And that’s how Jesus has been lighting the peoples of the world ever since, one person at a time. As they come to Him and receive Him, His light shines in their hearts and they see the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ! The Pharisees, of course, weren’t interested in that so they began to argue:

Jews: Your testimony is not enough to be valid (13) “It’s not enough for you to say this; one person’s testimony by itself is not valid!”

Jesus: My testimony IS valid; the Father is my second witness (14-18) “I know what I’m talking about whether you do or not. I’m telling the truth and my testimony IS valid. However, my Father is my second witness. He has also testified to the truth of who I am.” What Jesus meant was that His Father’s voice spoke from Heaven at His baptism. His Father confirmed his identity by His power working miracle after miracle through His hands these past years! He was talking about God! But the Jews didn’t get it and asked:

Jews: Where is your father? (19a) Not who but where? They’re thinking of a human father. And Jesus replies:

Jesus: You don’t know Him! (19b-20) What an indictment! For all their religiosity, all their law-keeping, they didn’t know God. If they had, they’d have known Jesus! Sadly, that’s true of many religious people today. They “practice their religion”; they say prayers and take communion and do many other religious works without ever really knowing God in a personal way because they don’t know Jesus; they don’t trust in Him to save them. Now Jesus switches gears and makes:

2. Claim #2: You will die in your sins unless you believe I AM! (21-24) That phrase in verse 24 “that I am the one I claim to be” is the NIV’s attempt to render the meaning of two simple clear Greek words, ego eimi, which means I AM. Other translations fill in a pronoun, “that I am he”. But Jesus only said, I AM. I AM is God’s proper Name in Greek. The Aramaic is Jah, the short form of Yahweh or Jehovah. Remember how Moses asked God for His Name to tell the Israelites in Egypt and God said, I AM that I AM; tell them I AM has sent you! Jesus is really saying, “Unless you believe that I am God, that I am one with the Father, you will die in your sins and you’ll never go to heaven where I’m going! I’m from heaven and I’m going back there but you can’t come unless you believe in ME!” Of course, that’s still true today. There is no other way to heaven. No one can go there unless they believe that Jesus Christ is God and died for them! Of course, they don’t get it and respond:

Jews: Who are you? (25a) to which Jesus replies:

Jesus: After you crucify Me, you’ll know that I AM! (25b-30) “My Father is God. He sent Me. I do nothing on My own. I speak what He tells me. I do what He tells me. And after you have lifted me up [on the Cross, you’ll know that I AM one with Him, that I am God.” How? He didn’t say it, but He means, On the third day I will rise again! Paul said He was declared with power to be the Son of God by his resurrection from the dead... - Rom. 1:4. Now, by this point some of them actually began to believe Him, to accept His words, but their faith was not genuine and Jesus knew it, so He now addressed these who were warming up to Him with a new claim that really set them back:

3. Claim #3: My truth will set you free! (31-32) “If you’re genuine, you’ll stick. You’ll hold fast to My words and they’ll set you free!” Well, that touched a nerve. Instantly they replied:

Jews: We’re not slaves! (33) Oh, see the pride? “We’re Abrahams seed; we’re Jews. We’ve never been slaves of anyone or anything!” Jesus says, “Oh yes you have!”

Jesus: You're slaves to sin and you're acting like your father! (34-38) "You may be physically descended from Abraham, but here you are ready to kill me, to stone me. That's what's seething in your hearts. You're living in slavery to sin; the power of sin is controlling you. If you'd come to Me, I'd set you free. I'm acting like MY Father and you're acting like YOUR father!" So, they repeat:

Jews: Abraham is our father! (39a) to which Jesus replies:

Jesus: You don't act like Abraham; you have another father! (39b-41a) "Abraham did seek to murder innocent people; you're not acting like him; you have a different father! You're acting like somebody else!" They come back with, "OK, then":

Jews: God is our father! (41b) And Jesus replies:

Jesus: If He was, you'd love Me; the Devil is your father (42-47) Wow, there it is! "If God was truly your Father, you'd love Me because I'm one with Him and He sent Me. But you don't! You lie and deceive and want to kill Me. Your father is the Devil! He's the original murderer and liar and you're acting just like him, in his power." Well, that got a response:

Jews: You're a demonized Samaritan! (48) "You're nuts; you're crazy; you're not a true Israelite and a demon lives in you and is talking through you!" But Jesus says:

Jesus: No, I'm honoring My Father! (49-50) "I'm seeking His glory, not My own. This is not a power trip of self-elevation. I'm telling you the truth." And then He kicks it up another notch with:

4. Claim #4: Whoever keeps my word will never die! (51) What a great promise for us who believe! We'll never see death; we'll leave these bodies of ours, but we'll live forever! But what a stumbling block to these Jews. They say:

Jews: Abraham and the Prophets died; are you greater than them? (52-53) They still don't hear Him. He's been saying all along, I AM God! But He throws them another curve:

Jesus: Abraham saw Me and was glad! (54-56) "When He was on earth Abraham looked forward by faith to seeing My day, to seeing the coming of the Redeemer, the Promised Seed. And then He saw it! He was there in Heaven with Me. He saw Me. He saw Me that day as I left to come to earth." That was too much for them:

Jews: You're not even 50 years old; you haven't seen Abraham! (57) "How could you! Abraham died 1800 years ago. You're not even 50. What kind of nonsense is this?" Are you ready? Here comes the claim to end all claims:

5. Claim #5: Before Abraham was, I AM! (58) "I AM GOD! I existed from all eternity, before Abraham ever came into being." This time the light goes on. They understand His meaning:

Jews: AAAIIIIIEEE! Stone Him!!! (59) A long time later when Stephen said he saw Jesus at the right hand of God, the Jews covered their ears and, yelling at the top of their voices, they all rushed at him, dragged him out of the city and began to stone him. - Acts 7:56-58. That's, no doubt, what they tried to do to Jesus here in the Temple, to drown Him out, to drag Him out and stone Him. But His time had not yet come and by His Divine power he simply slipped away and left the Temple.

Now let me sum up what Jesus taught this day: Jesus IS GOD. He existed from eternity. He came down from heaven to save us by dying on the cross in our place. If you don't believe that, you die in your sins. But if you do believe that, if you do accept that, you know the Truth and you've been set free from the power and the penalty of sin and you'll never die. You'll be with Him in heaven forever! To those who heard it that day, they were words of great condemnation because they rejected Him. To you who hear them this day, they can be words of great assurance, if you have believed in Him truly with your heart. A church in Frankfurt, Germany reports recently that David, a Muslim refugee from Afghanistan who was living nearby, had a dream. In the dream he met an old man. The old man reached out and stroked David's forehead. David felt an immediate peace he had never felt before. He asked, "Who are you?" The old man reached out and touched David's forehead again. "I have never felt this peace before, who are you?" inquired David again. For the third time the old man touched David on the forehead. "Tomorrow you will know me," was all the old man said. David woke up. The next day an acquaintance of David's invited him to come to the church. The pastor felt strongly that morning that he needed to talk explicitly about Jesus. As David heard about Jesus for the first time, he jumped up with excitement and said, "I met Jesus, I know who he is!" After the service the pastor led David to place his faith in Jesus. Knowing who Jesus is and placing your trust in Him makes all the difference for anyone, anywhere in the world. It brings light to your darkness, peace to your troubled heart and assurance for your eternal future.

The Man Born Blind - Ch. 9

It has been quite a week, this celebration of the Feast of Tabernacles. Jesus has had multiple confrontations with the leaders of the Jewish people as He has made major declarations about Himself during this Feast. I am from heaven; if anyone is thirsty let him come to Me and drink; I am the light of the world; before Abraham was, I AM! At this last statement on that final night, they picked up stones to stone Him! Now it is probably the morning of the day after the feast. Jesus is still in Jerusalem and, as he passes through the streets, He meets a blind man who was probably sitting and begging at the entrance to the Temple, almost like the lame man that Peter and John met in Acts 3. So, in the first seven verses we have the familiar story of:

I. The Healing Of A Blind Man (1-7) When the disciples saw him, it does not seem that they were particularly moved with compassion toward him because of the lifestyle he was forced to live. They were more concerned academically with:

1. the cause of the blindness (1-5) People are blind for various reasons. Some are blinded in an accident. Some gradually lose their sight through some disease or aging. This man's blindness had no such cause. He was born blind. He didn't lose his sight; he never had it to start with it. He had never seen a single thing in his entire life! In the Jewish system of thinking, they had a way of explaining why that would occur. It was a punishment for sin. The parents must have sinned or been cursed somehow and God punished them with a sightless baby. Or perhaps the baby itself sinned in the womb or in some type of prior existence. The disciples were immediately convinced that such was the case. They didn't ask, "Is this because of sin?" They assumed that; they just wanted to know who sinned, the parents or the man himself. Job's three friends spend half the book trying to convince him that he must have sinned in order for all those bad things to happen to him. God was surely punishing him! I know it's 20 centuries later, but aren't we still quick to assume the same thing? When something negative happens we are quick to ask, "Why is God doing this to me? Why is He punishing me? What have I done to deserve this?" Are we not? Well, Jesus settles that kind of thinking once and for all here as He clearly says:

a. its cause was not as punishment for sin The man hadn't sinned and his parents hadn't either, at least not in any way that was connected with his blindness! Somebody raised this kind of thinking with Him on an earlier occasion; look at Lk. 13:1-5. People are abducted and killed while jogging in the park. Traffic accidents claim lives every day. Buildings still fall on people. Is it because these people are worse sinners than others? No, we're all sinners and we all need to repent. Is tragedy caused by personal sin? Well, our sins can indeed sometimes have tragic consequences, but most of the time, these kinds of things are just a part of the fallen world we live in. Congenital blindness is caused by a damaged chromosome, a developmental deficiency, a birth defect. But Jesus said:

b. its purpose was that God's work might be displayed in a life! We get hung up on why things happen. God is more interested in what He can do with them, how He can use them to show His power and glory, how He can display His almighty presence in the life of a human being. That's what He is about, even in your life. Why did Joni Eareckson Tada have an accident and become a quadriplegic? Because sometimes 15 year-olds do adventure-some things like diving headfirst into water that's too shallow and their necks get broken! Or because her diving angle was 2 degrees too steep. Or whatever; I don't know the cause but my, look at its purpose. Look how God has displayed Himself and His work in a life as she has encouraged and blessed and helped disabled people all around the world for many years. It's time to stop asking, "Why did this happen?" and start asking, "Lord, how do you want to use this to get glory to Yourself? How do you want to display your work in my life?"! Now let's look at:

2. the cure of the blindness (6-7) The first thing I notice is that:

a. it was an unusual healing in several ways: First, it involved means. How many blind men had Jesus healed just by saying a word? But here He took His own saliva and mixed it with clay to make mud. Then he plastered the man's eyes with it. It also involved time. The healing was not instant. It did not occur until perhaps half an hour later or so, after he had felt his way to the Pool of Siloam to wash. And that also meant obedience. He had to go and do something. He was sent to wash in the "Sent" (Siloam) Pool. If he hadn't gone and if he hadn't washed, he wouldn't have been healed. You know, maybe there's a mini-lesson here. Sometimes when Jesus brings healing into our lives, it comes instantly. Other times it occurs over days or weeks or months, maybe years. Sometimes He just does it. Other times He uses material means like medicines or casts or treatments or doctors. Sometimes He just does it all. Other times He requires us to act to make it happen. We have to exercise or we have to make changes in our lifestyle and habits or seek out counseling so healing will come. He heals us all differently at different times and yet all healing is from Him. At any rate, this miracle:

b. it physically displayed what Jesus taught: I am the light of the world; Whoever follows Me will not walk in darkness but will have the light of life! So, here He takes a man who walked in darkness, who had never seen light once and gives him light, makes him see. He has the power to make the blind see, to give light to those in darkness - physically! And by the end of the chapter, we'll see that it is also true spiritually. But unfortunately, this miracle:

c. it was a violation of the Sabbath laws (14) Putting saliva on sore eyes was a recognized treatment for healing soreness (of course not blindness) but to do it on the Sabbath was expressly forbidden, not in the Old Testament law of God, but in the Sabbath laws the religious Jews had developed in their traditions. Do you believe that? To attempt to heal any non-life-threatening disease on the Sabbath was illegal. Treatment had to wait until Sunday! To mix mud, whether to make bricks or eye salve was forbidden on the Sabbath. I don't even think to wash or bathe was acceptable, except maybe the hands. Jesus was not unaware of these things and, I think, deliberately chose to do them this way instead of just speaking a word. It was an intentional challenge to a religious system gone far astray. So, as we read on, you see:

II. The Controversy Created By The Healing (8-34) Immediately it caused:

1. a doubting stir among his neighbors and acquaintances (8-12) Some of them couldn't believe it was the same guy. They were sure it was someone who just looked like him! They had to explain this away somehow! Aren't these often the first people to doubt when Jesus does something in your life? Neighbors, friends, relatives, those who know you the closest. You talk about what Jesus has done and they are quick to doubt it or try to explain it away. Yet this man gave a clear testimony. He assured them it really was him and that now he could see. And even though he didn't know where Jesus had gone while he was at the pool and coming back, he still gave Him the credit. Well, this soon led to:

2. a direct conflict with the Pharisees They turned the guy in! They drug him to the Pharisees, the religious leaders, at the Temple, to see what they would make of this situation and here's:

a. the paradox they stumbled over (13-17) You know what a paradox is, right? Two things that seem to contradict each other yet are both true. Well in their minds:

(1) a man who works on the sabbath must be a sinner He made clay; He put balm on the eyes; He told you to wash. He doesn't care about the law but violates it. He MUST be a sinner! And yet:

(2) a man who does miracles must be from God Mud doesn't heal blind eyes! No doctor can even do that. Only God can give sight to the blind so He's got to be involved in this somehow. So how can this be? How can we explain this paradox? Well, in the next verses we have:

b. their attempts to explain what they could not understand First:

(1) they tried to discredit the miracle (18-23) They still feared this was some kind of hoax. So, they called the man's parents to make sure he had been born blind and, of course, they said he was. They couldn't deny it. He really was a blind man and it was obvious that he could now see. Isn't this what people do when God works a real change in our lives? They want to play it down, explain it away. "Maybe you weren't really so bad... maybe this or maybe that..." And they watch to see if you'll revert back so they can say, "See, I knew it wasn't real!" But the Pharisees couldn't deny this miracle and they refused to admit that their Sabbath traditions were invalid so all they could think of was this:

(2) they tried to discredit Jesus but credit God (24) All right, God did it. It's a miracle. Give Him the glory. But this Jesus is a sinner who breaks the laws. It's a Divine coincidence that God healed you in spite of that! That's where people go next. Of course, God does miracles; He's a wonderful guy. But this Jesus, we're not too sure about. He's not really part of the equation. We don't need Him! Tell me about God, tell me all about what He can do. But don't tell me about Jesus. I don't want to hear about Him! Well, to his credit, this once-blind man stood up to these religious authorities in spite of the consequences he knew would be coming. In the next verses we have:

3. the irrefutable testimony of the healed man (25-33) Let me summarize the man's testimony for you. It had three key points. He said:

a. one thing I know: I was blind but now I see! "I'm no expert in the law and I never met this Jesus before so I don't know much about Him, but there is one undeniable fact in this case: I know I was blind and I know that now I can see. Nobody can take this miracle away from me! I live with the reality of it every day! Every time I open my eyelids, I know it is real!" Isn't that true of the miracle of our salvation? I may not be a theologian and understand all the salient points. But I know that I was spiritually blind and lost and bound for an eternity in hell. And one day I met Jesus and now I can see. I have eternal life. I have assurance of a home in heaven. I have peace in my heart. Argue and examine all you want, but you can't deny a miracle that I experience every day of my life! Then his next point is:

b. this was an act of God: only He can cure congenital blindness! There have been cases where a person lost their sight and it came back, where they fell and hit their heads and lost it for a time. But nobody has ever heard of a person who has never had sight from birth suddenly gaining it. Only God can do such a thing; it HAS to be from Him and the obvious conclusion is simple:

c. Jesus MUST be from God! Or He couldn't have opened my eyes. God doesn't "hear" sinners; He doesn't just do whatever they want and answer all their prayers while they're ignoring Him. If Jesus was not of God, He could never have done a miracle like this! Anybody can see that!

Well, He had them and they knew it. They couldn't argue against it and they absolutely wouldn't repent and admit they were wrong, so it made them extremely mad and that leads us to look at:

III. The Consequences Of The Healing (34-41) The first one is that:

1. the man is excommunicated from the synagogue (34) This is the very penalty his parents were afraid of in verse 22. It doesn't sound like much to us, but this was a very serious thing. The Jews had three levels of excommunication. The first two were disciplinary. One might be cast out for 7 days and readmitted if repentant. In the second degree it was 30 days. But the third degree was permanent; it was to be cast out forever. It meant being cut off from all of Jewish society. As if he were a leper, people would keep at a distance of 6 feet from him. If he died, stones were cast on his coffin and he was not allowed an ordinary funeral, nor was anyone allowed to mourn for him. He was essentially considered to be dead. He was not allowed to study with others and no conversation was to be held with him. He was not even to be shown the road. He might buy the necessities of life, but it was forbidden to ever eat or drink with him. It was pretty much like the "shunning" which the Amish practice and it's really like how believers are treated in many Muslim communities or Hindu communities. The believer becomes an outcast and is treated like one dead, disinherited and despised by both family and the entire community. That ban still stands in many places where to choose Jesus means to be rejected by all. Just this week I got this request from Jalalabad in Kyrgyzstan: The second request concerns a group of four young believers who are students at a local university. Aibek, Jarkin, Simon and Ildus are all known by the faculty and other students to be believers. The Head of their Department recently called them out in front of the other students and publicly humiliated them, calling them traitors, ridiculing their faith and telling them they should resign from the university. All four have remained steadfast but they are understandably hurt, embarrassed and worried about their future at the university. Aibek is also experiencing persecution from his family. This man knew that was coming if he stood up for Jesus. These students knew it too. When they believed they expected to pay this kind of price in their community. When we get to chapter 16, we'll see that Jesus warned us that this very kind of thing and worse WILL happen to us and He taught us to expect it and not be surprised by it. What a blessing that where we live there is so much freedom to choose to believe! Thank Him for it but don't expect that it will always be so! The second consequence of the healing is that:

2. the man believes and worships the "son of God" (35-38) That phrase "Son of Man" in verse 35 is in many manuscripts "Son of God". The two are essentially equivalent anyway. "Do you believe that I am the Son of God?", Jesus essentially asks. So the man falls face down and worships Him, acknowledges that He is indeed God! And Jesus accepts his worship. He IS God. Notice how Jesus sought him out. The miracle was not done. He had received physical sight but still needed spiritual sight and now he had both. Now his physical AND spiritual blindness were healed and he could see in both realms. This is the clincher that Jesus' real point here is not about the physical but about the spiritual. He is the light of the world; He wants to give people spiritual life and calls them to believe that He is the Son of God who died and rose for them. And in the end, we have:

3. Jesus' principle about spiritual blindness (39-41) Jesus has come into the world for two purposes. First:

a. He has come to heal those who know they are spiritually blind and want to see People like the blind man here was. People like you and I were. People who know that they don't know, who know that they are lost and helpless and can do nothing to help themselves spiritually. Jesus came to give those kinds of people sight, to draw them to Himself so they will believe, but as we can also see from this story:

b. He has come to blind those who claim they see but don't want to People like the Pharisees. People who are sure they know, who won't listen, who are so hardened that they think they know it all already and will get into heaven because they're good and they act right. People who pretend they can see and are convinced they can. Those kinds of folks, Jesus blinds even further, He hardens, not because He hates them, but simply by presenting them with the truth. The truth wounds their pride and they reject it all the harder and become more entrenched in their blindness. There's a proverb that has been around in the English language since at least the 1500's that says: there are none so blind as those who will not see.

Of course, there are exceptions. There is always the occasional Pharisee like Saul whose vicious hardness Jesus breaks and he is transformed into an apostle Paul. Yet that is the exception, not the rule. Jesus' heart lies with those who know they are blind and desperately want to see. He will do anything to give them sight and so should we. A maid by the name of Maggie Shields worked in a large home in Edinburgh, Scotland. Having suffered from an incurable illness for some years, she recognized she would soon die. Yet with her sins unforgiven, she knew she was not bound for Heaven. One day the staff was informed of a gathering in the drawing room where some guests were to be addressed by John Thompson, a former fisherman who now made it his business to witness mainly in the slum districts of the great city. Maggie was very happy to hear the news, for she thought she would probably learn the way of salvation from this plain-spoken street preacher. When all had arrived, however, the servants were dismissed and the door was shut. Lingered in the hall, the maid returned and pressed her ear to the keyhole. The speaker was bringing a thrilling message about the good news, that sinners may drink of the water of life freely and receive eternal life through faith in Christ. But the aristocratic company was little moved by this itinerant evangelist, and he saw no visible results. A few weeks later Mr. Thompson was asked to visit a young woman who was dying. The girl he called on was Maggie. She repeated the words he had said, "If anyone puts his name into this 'whosoever' text in Revelation 22:17, he will be saved." She continued, "Your listeners that day were not interested, but I was. I asked the Lord to make me His child, and I felt the burden of sin roll from my heart. Now I can die with the blessed assurance that Heaven lies ahead, because God's 'whosoever' took me in! His peace and joy now flood my soul. I thought you should know that I was saved at the keyhole!" Let's go out and find the Maggies of the world; let's look on them with compassion as we pass by and let's see them as an opportunity for God to show His work in a life and tell them what we often sing in the old song, "I once was lost, but now am found, was blind but now I see".

The Good Shepherd - Ch. 10

Chapters 7 through 10 are one solid block of teaching and events that occurred while Jesus was in Jerusalem during and just after the Feast of Tabernacles in October, about 6 months before His death and resurrection. Chapter 10 is the continuation of a dialogue that Jesus was having with some Pharisees about spiritual blindness the day after the Feast, at the end of chapter 9. The subject of chapter 10 is another new claim that Jesus made: I am the Good Shepherd, the true Shepherd, the loyal, faithful caretaker of the Father's flock. Yet He made this same basic claim on two different occasions. The first, as I said, is in October as:

I. Jesus Concludes The Feast Of Tabernacles (1-21) [READ 1-6] Notice that it is not to His disciples, but rather to the Pharisees that Jesus gives this:

1. the parable of the shepherd (or more properly this figure of speech as it's called in verse 6, because it didn't really involve a story, but rather an extensive comparison. He pointed their minds toward something they knew well; sheep and shepherds were everywhere in Palestine and every Jew knew how the process of caring for sheep was handled in that day and time. A sheepfold is a large enclosure, likely a wall of stones, where all the village shepherds gather their flocks and put them in together for the night. It has only one opening, one gate. So, the sheep are safe from predators or wandering off and only one person needs to remain on guard duty, while the rest can go home and get their sleep. Now here are the points he's going to make:

a. thieves and robbers enter the fold illicitly (1) The guard is at the door so if you want to steal a sheep, you're not going to use the gate. You're going to try to quietly slip in over the back wall in the corner somewhere. People with legitimate business come to the gate; thieves and robbers try to get them some other way. So:

b. the true shepherd enters by the gate (2) In the morning he comes to the gate and is recognized and allowed to enter. Then, here's something that's quite different from the way we have done it in the western world:

c. He calls his sheep by name and leads them out (3) Sheep were not just numbers to be fattened up and sold. Each shepherd had an intimate relationship with his sheep. He spent all day with them and sometimes the night. He named each one and knew each one by name. And the sheep learned to know the shepherd too; they knew the sound of his voice. So, in the morning he would stand at the gate and call them the way you would call your pet dog, and they would come out from among all the other sheep and line up for him and he would lead them out of the fold. In fact, that's what he does all day long. Instead of driving them from behind like we do:

d. He leads them and they follow His voice (4) He starts in the direction of the pasture where they are to graze that day or the water hole where they are to drink. And as he goes, he talks to them and calls to them and they follow after him. They follow His voice, but:

e. they won't follow a stranger (5) They know the shepherd's voice. When a strange voice calls them, they know it's not their beloved shepherd and they won't follow; in fact, they may run the other direction.

Now I know what you're thinking: "Bummer, you could never take a day off in the shepherd business; nobody else could take care of your sheep!" But the real point here is not career choice. Actually, the Pharisees were quite mystified as to what the point was too. Why was Jesus talking about sheep? And so naturally:

2. Jesus explains the parable You see, the sheep are people. That's nothing new. Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Zechariah and many of the Old Testament prophets talked about Israel as God's flock and the leaders as shepherds who were to take care of the flock. In fact, those prophets were filled with words of condemnation for the false, worthless shepherds, the leaders who did not take care of God's flock! I'm sure that part of the comparison was not lost on these Pharisees, but here is where Jesus takes it a step further. He makes three very clear, very direct claims about who He is. The first one is:

a. I am the gate (7) The fold is God's sheepfold, His place of safety and refuge, His kingdom. And I am the gate, the entrance to that place of safety. One writer comments, Few people in the western world can picture accurately the Palestinian sheepfold. It usually consists of a low circular enclosure, on one side of which is an opening about 6 feet wide, the only place where entrance can be gained without climbing over the wall. There is no door that can be closed and locked, no gate or barrier of any kind. They are unnecessary, and were never provided, for at nightfall the shepherd will stand in this breach and call his sheep, counting one by one until all are safely within the shelter. Then, with his staff by his side, he lies down in the doorway and sleeps with his body across the opening. The door, therefore, is not an ordinary one of wood or iron, but is actually a LIVING PERSON! For the intruder to reach the sheep, he must first pass over the body of the watchful shepherd. Jesus used this figure of such an enclosure when He said, "I AM THE DOOR; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved [and safe]." On the other hand:

(1) the Pharisees were thieves and robbers (8) All who ever came before Me... is a thinly-veiled reference to His own listeners. The Pharisees didn't come through the door; they didn't come to Him. They tried to climb into the sheepfold some other way and only thieves and robbers do that! They were pretending to be shepherds, caretakers of the sheep, but they were really not. And the sheep know it and won't follow them. But Jesus said:

(2) I am the gate (I am the way to salvation) (9) And like the sheepfold, there is only one! I am it! "I'm the ONLY gate. A person can only get in one way, by coming to Me! But if a person comes to Me, He will be saved, kept safe eternally, and he will also find everything he needs for his daily life. He'll be pastured and cared for." Now those:

(3) false shepherds have harmful motives (10a) They want to steal the sheep, kill them and eat them, destroy them. Thieves and robbers come to the sheep to take what they want for themselves, not to care for the sheep. That's what the Jewish leaders of that day were doing, caring for themselves, their own advancement, not for the people. Jesus often criticized them for things like foreclosing on widows' houses while cloaking it in religion by making a long prayer. They didn't care if the common people lived or died, only about how they could be used for their own ends and purposes. However, in contrast, Jesus says:

(4) I seek to give my sheep an abundant life (10b) The real shepherd wants the sheep to live, not die. He wants them to have rich pasture and springs of water. He wants them to be full and healthy and to live well. Jesus loves His sheep and wants what He knows is best for them. He wants their lives to be rich and full of His Presence and grace. He wants their growth, their fruitfulness, their multiplication. And then He goes on to make a second claim:

b. I am the Good Shepherd because I will die for my sheep (11) Sheep are basically defenseless creatures. They can't defend themselves. So, when danger comes, a real shepherd, a true shepherd, has to protect them and that might mean endangering his own life (12-13). Wolves, lions and bears all preyed on sheep in the mountains and wilderness areas. And, of course, in those days there were no firearms so to protect the sheep, so it meant facing dangerous creatures with a bow or a spear or even a sling. A person would be forced to ask himself the question, "Are these sheep worth it? Am I willing to risk my own life for them?" Well, Jesus said:

(1) a hired hand does not own the sheep If you're just hired to take care of someone else's flock and they're not really yours, you don't care about them that much. So, the hired hand:

(2) he will flee in time of personal danger He'll leave the flock to the wolves to be scattered and torn. He loves himself, not the sheep.

But Jesus said, "I am the Good Shepherd... I love my sheep so much I am going to lay down my life for them. I am not only ready to die to protect them; I'm planning on it already! I'm going to a cross and die in their very place, for their sins, so that they might be saved and kept safe. I'm going to let myself be slaughtered to protect them!" The Pharisees and Jewish leaders weren't ready to do that. They were hirelings. They cared only about themselves, about preserving their own necks and their own power. Then Jesus made a third claim:

c. I am the Good Shepherd because I know my sheep (14) "I have a relationship with My sheep. I know them and they know Me." A hireling doesn't take time to know the flock; he's just doing a job. But a real shepherd spends hours and hours of time alone with his sheep and gets to know each one intimately, to love them and care about them personally. He says, "I know them the way My Father and I know each other!" and that's why:

(1) I will die for my sheep, because they belong to Me (15) "I'll die for them because I know them, I want them, I love them. But you must also realize that:"

(2) I have other sheep I must bring into the fold (16) "My fold is not just Israel; it is not just the Jewish people who come to Me. I have other sheep, Samaritans and Romans and some from all the nations of the world, from every tribe, tongue, people and nation, even white skinned people from Glenside some day. And I MUST bring them also! It's not optional; I have to bring them too and I can't keep them separate from you. There is only one fold and there is only One Shepherd, one Door, and one flock! That's my plan, to gather people to myself from all the peoples of the world, make them My sheep and give them life! And here's how that's going to work:"

(3) I lay down my life voluntarily and will take it up again (17-18) Nobody made Jesus do it and nobody took it from Him. He laid His life down and He took it up again on the third day! All on the authority given Him by the Father. Now there's a shocking prediction, I will die and rise again at my own choosing! No wonder there was:

3. the confusion of the listeners (19-21) Some thought He was crazy and some couldn't get the healing of the blind man out of their minds. At any rate, Jesus left Jerusalem at last and went home to Galilee for two months. It is not until December that:

II. Jesus Comes To The Feast Of Dedication (22-42) of the Temple. [Read 22.] We know it as Hanukkah or the Feast of Lights. It was another eight day celebration, this time commemorating the cleansing of the Temple and the resuming of sacrifices in 164 BC after the Jews gained their independence for a brief period. And Jesus no sooner arrives in Jerusalem and goes to the Temple when the Jews literally surround him as He is walking and make this challenge:

1. the challenge of the Jews (23-24) "Tell us plainly. No more mincing words. If you're the Christ, just say so!" Well, Jesus tells them more than that. He makes His last and final claim by going back and picking up His shepherd theme from two months before.

2. the claim of Jesus: I and the Father are One (25-30) Those are some of the most comforting verses I know in the Bible. How many times have I quoted them to troubled souls; how many times have they brought assurance to believers' hearts. Jesus says again:

a. I know My sheep and they know Me A man in Australia was arrested and charged with stealing a sheep. But he claimed emphatically that it was one of his own that had been missing for many days. When the case went to court, the judge was puzzled, not knowing how to decide the matter. At last, he asked that the sheep be brought in to the courtroom. Then he ordered the plaintiff to step outside and call the animal. The sheep made no response except to raise its head and look frightened. The judge then instructed the defendant to go to the courtyard and call the sheep. When the accused man began to make his distinctive call, the sheep bounded toward the door. It was obvious that he recognized the familiar voice of his master. "His sheep knows him," said the judge. "Case dismissed!" My friend, if you have come to Jesus and you're one of His sheep, He knows you! You are not forgotten and you know Him. And He promises this:

b. I give my sheep eternal life and they'll never perish Eternal life that you could lose wouldn't be very eternal, would it? Eternal life that could end, that could leave you perish at some point, wouldn't be eternal. You will NEVER, EVER perish. None of His sheep will, not one! Why? You're in His hand! He said:

c. My Father gave them to Me and He protects them "My Father is greater than all." Did you ever play that game as a child where you put something in your hand and clench your fingers tight and then defy someone else to open them and get it? Remember how tough it is to open that hand? Well, you're not just in the hand of the strongest man on earth, you're in the hand of God Almighty, the Omnipotent Sovereign of the universe. Nobody is strong enough to pry His fingers apart. "And being My sheep is being in My hand and My hand is HIS hand because."

d. I and the Father are One; I am God! He couldn't have said it any clearer than that. And they got it; they understood what He meant this time.

3. the charge of the Jews: blasphemy (31-33) That's what they thought, here's a mere man claiming to be God! That's the ultimate sacrilege, the ultimate desecration of God's person, blasphemy. But Jesus is wise and makes a rebuttal:

4. the rebuttal of Jesus: it is only blasphemy if it's not true! (34-38) He disarmed them. "There are passages in the scriptures where God refers to human beings by the title of 'gods'. And, of course, the Scripture is true. So, since I AM God's Son and He sent Me into the world, how is it blasphemy for me to say, 'I am the Son of God!' It's only blasphemy for a mere man to say; I'm not a mere man. I'm the Son of God sent from heaven!" Well, of course they didn't buy that and tried again to seize Him, but He escaped and left. And that led to:

5. the withdrawal of Jesus (39-42) He went back across the Jordan to the north where His early ministry and the ministry of John had been. John's influence was still powerful in that area and people kept coming to Him because of what John had said. So, many believed through John's witness. I've often thought I'd like that put on my tombstone, "All John said about this man was true!" I want to speak truth about My Savior.

He is the Good Shepherd who loves you, who died for you, who invites you to come to Him and be His sheep and be in His fold. He wants to give you, His sheep, eternal life. A minister in Virginia phoned in his Sunday morning sermon title to the religion editor of the local newspaper. He said, "The topic for my message is, 'The Lord is My Shepherd.'" "Is that all?" asked the editor. Trying to make a spiritual point, the pastor replied, "That's enough!" On Saturday, when the paper was delivered to the preacher's door, he immediately opened it to the section containing the church notices. His topic for the sermon read, "The Lord is My Shepherd--That's Enough!" And it is! C. H. Spurgeon once said, "I have all things and abound, not because I have a good store of money in the bank, not because I have a good skill and wit with which to win my bread, but because 'The Lord is my shepherd.'" Jesus said, "I am the Good Shepherd." Is He yours?

The Resurrection And The Life - Ch. 11

As we pass from chapter 10 to 11, we move from December to approximately February, perhaps two months or so before the Cross. Jesus is deliberately staying away from Jerusalem because of the recent attempts on His life at the two previous feasts. He is northward on the other side of Jordan in Perea making disciples, but He is interrupted now by the first of two major things that happen in chapter 11. The sickness and death of a close friend lead to the crowning miracle of His ministry, the last and greatest of John's seven reported major miracles:

I. The Raising Of Lazarus From The Dead (1-44) There is a lot to learn in this story; there are a number of key lessons, the first of which are:

1. lessons given to His disciples (1-16) as the news reaches them about Lazarus' illness. [READ 1-5.] We don't know how Jesus came to know this family of three singles. We do know from Luke 10 that He had dinner as a guest in their home, perhaps a few months earlier, where Martha was busy serving, while Mary sat at His feet, though Lazarus is not mentioned. Their home was in Bethany, a small village located on the southeast slope of the Mount of Olives, nearly 2 miles east of Jerusalem. When Lazarus became seriously ill, evidently with a high fever, their faith moved them to send messengers to find Jesus and make Him aware of it. They hoped, of course, that He would get there in time. However, as the news arrives, Jesus uses this opportunity to teach His disciples:

a. two lessons about sickness (1-5) The first one is in verse 4:

(1) God's purpose in sickness is to glorify His Son Jesus did not say Lazarus would not die. He said that the sickness was literally "not for the purpose of" death or "not for the final end of death." It had a higher purpose; whether Lazarus lived or died, God was going to use this sickness to bring glory to His Son. It's very similar to what He had said about the blind man back in 9:3, ...this happened so that the work of God might be displayed in his life. That is always His purpose, even in our sickness. His desire is that it bring glory to Himself. If we are sick and live, we testify to His grace that sustains us even in our weakness. If we die, we testify that we have a home in heaven and are confident that we go to meet Him. And people look at us and say, "That must be God; only He could do that; this Jesus must be real!" Now, the way Jesus intended to use Lazarus' particular case was even more dramatic than that, as we'll see, but that doesn't lessen His purpose and desire to be glorified in you or those you love in sickness, even right now. Will you ask Him to glorify Himself through it? At any rate, there's another lesson here:

(2) sickness or healing are no indicator of Jesus' love for us The very next verse is a simple statement of fact. Lazarus was sick and dying but Jesus loved him! Their message was, "the one you love is sick!" That is equally true of us! His love for us is not measured by our circumstances. If we are sick, it does not indicate a lack of love any more than the healing of our sickness indicates an abundance of love. Never try to measure God's love by circumstances; that's the wrong place to look. If you want to know His love, look at the cross, look to Calvary. God demonstrates his own love for us in this: While we were still sinners, Christ died for us. - Rom. 5:8. He loves us whether we are sick, dying or being healed! Nothing can change that. But there are also here:

b. three lessons about timing (6-10) Jesus seems to always have been teaching His disciples about this fact. God has a time, a plan that we must follow and:

(1) God's timing is not always what we would choose (6-7) You and I would have rushed off to Bethany immediately! We'd be overcome by the thought of being at Lazarus' bedside and all other considerations would vanish. Jesus stayed two more days right where He was, on purpose, and then said, "Let's go to Judea..." That seems awfully strange. Why wait when someone is critically ill? Jesus knew God's plan; there was a larger purpose afoot and He was following it. There are many, many times when God does not act on our timetable, when He does not answer prayer at the time we call or do what we want Him to at the time when we think He needs to do it. He always acts according to His plan and purpose and so, Jesus went on to teach His startled disciples that the same applies to us:

(2) if we act in His timing, we will accomplish His purpose (8-10) They had already forgotten about Lazarus; all they could think about was the danger Jesus would be putting Himself and them in. But Jesus taught them by a parable. He said, "There are twelve hours of light in the day; if you walk along your assigned path in them, you're safe; you can see what you're doing. If you walk the path at night, you're in danger; you'll stumble because you can't see what you're doing." In other words, God has a time for walking and when He gives you light to walk, when He tells you to do something, you need to do it. You'll succeed in accomplishing His purpose. If you wait and try to do it in your own time and way, without His light, you're going to stumble and fail. We need to learn to listen to God, to walk in the light of His direction, rather than fearing all the bad things that could or might happen to us if we obey. The safest place to be is always right in the center of His will! And here's another thing that's always true:

(3) seeing the results of His timing strengthens our faith (11-17) He now told them the reason He waited, "Lazarus is dead, I'm going down to raise Him from the dead and that is really going to cause you to believe!" Actually, if you calculate that Jesus waited two days and then took one day to walk the 40 miles or so to Bethany and when he got there Lazarus had been in the tomb for 4 days already, it's plain that Lazarus must have died right after the messengers left Bethany. He was already dead when they got there to tell Jesus and He knew it. Jewish superstition said the fourth day was the day when corruption officially set into the corpse, when the soul finally departed from all connection with the body. Jesus was waiting until there was NO possibility of life, of resuscitation, in Lazarus and that fact would be recognized by all, so that when He raised him, no one could doubt it! His timing was perfect. When we see that in our own lives, it strengthens our faith, doesn't it?

Dr. Helen Roseveare, missionary to Zaire, told the following story. "A mother at our mission station died after giving birth to a premature baby. We tried to improvise an incubator to keep the infant alive, but the only hot water bottle we had was beyond repair. So we asked the children to pray for the baby and for her sister. One of the girls responded, 'Dear God, please send a hot water bottle today. Tomorrow will be too late because by then the baby will be dead. And dear Lord, send a doll for the sister so she won't feel so lonely.' That afternoon a large package arrived from England. The children watched eagerly as we opened it. Much to their surprise, under some clothing was a hot water bottle! Immediately the girl who had prayed so earnestly started to dig deeper, exclaiming, 'If God sent that, I'm sure He also sent a doll!' And she was right! The heavenly Father knew in advance of that child's sincere requests, and 5 months earlier He had led a ladies' group to include both of those specific articles." Jesus is always right on HIS time! And as He arrives now at Bethany, we find several:

2. lessons given to Mary and Martha (18-37) Of course, when He came:

a. they displayed their current level of faith (18-22) Martha wasn't blaming Him for not being there. She realized Lazarus died long before the messengers could have reached Him. She is expressing the faith that she and her sister had:

(1) they believed Jesus had power to prevent death Mary said the exact same thing in verse (32) when she saw Jesus. They had seen Him heal the sick. They believed that He could cure even the deadliest disease. Had He been there, the fact is, Lazarus would not have died. But nobody really dared to hope that He could raise the dead, not after this many days. Martha appears to have a glimmer of that hope in saying, even now I know..., but when Jesus responds to it positively, she wilts (23-24). You see:

(2) they believed in the general resurrection of the dead, that is that one day far in the future in God's kingdom all of the faithful who have died will have their bodies raised. But that's not what Jesus meant. The word again is not in the Greek and somehow makes it seem future to us. Jesus simply said firmly, Your brother will rise! and He meant, "I'm going to raise him, as you briefly dared to hope! I am not talking about the end of time." And then:

b. Jesus called them all to a new level of faith (25-27) Oh, what a powerful claim Jesus made for Himself that day. He said:

(1) I AM the Resurrection: a believer lives even though he dies "The Resurrection of the dead is not an event. It is a POWER and that power resides in a PERSON. I AM IT! I AM RESURRECTION! One who believes in me lives even though he may die, even though his body may expire and lie in the grave. At MY call his body rises. Trust in ME and the state of your body matters not! I AM THE RESURRECTION! And:"

(2) I AM the Life: a believer has eternal life and never really dies "His body may fall asleep but one who believes never dies in eternity. He is eternally alive. Why? Because I AM LIFE! I am eternally alive and he is joined to Me; My life is His life. He lives forever and never dies!"

Oh, what beautiful truths for us! Our Jesus is Resurrection and Life. We will live when our body dies! We will never actually die! We have life that is eternal! And then Jesus put the real question to Martha personally, "Do you believe this?" It jumps right off the page, doesn't it? Do YOU believe this? Not, do you hope it's so, but do you REALLY believe this? Martha confessed: Yes, Lord, I believe that you are the Christ, the Son of God, who was to come into the world. Have you said that? Have YOU called Him Lord? Have you come to Christ and confessed Him as your Savior, the Christ, the Son of God? I hope you have! And then as the story unfolds:

c. Jesus displayed the depth of His sympathy for their pain (28-37) Jesus wept. There, as you know, is the shortest verse in the Bible, but still very profound. You can analyze it and discuss why He wept but that misses the point. Here was Jesus crying, deeply moved, over someone He loved who had died, over two sisters who had lost their brother and were grieving. Hebrews says that He is touched by the feeling of our infirmities; He sympathizes, He "suffers with us" in our weaknesses! He hurts for us when we hurt because He loves us, even though He knows that we must go through it! And then at last comes that mighty moment which holds:

3. lessons plain for all to see (38-44) Imagine the shock, the awe. Jesus calls to a corpse that has lain in the tomb 4 days and the dead man gets up and walks out the door! No human being can do that! No force on earth can do that! No doctor, no medicine, no scientist. Only God can give life. Here we see Jesus':

a. His omnipotent power to raise the dead He had declared the hour was coming back in 5:24-29. And now He showed it was true. A dead man who was in his grave heard the voice of the Son of God and came forth alive! So it will be for all of us. In fact, many have commented that Jesus was careful to specify Lazarus by name in that moment; if He had merely said, "Come forth!" the resurrection of all the dead would have occurred at that moment! That is His great power! One day at His return He will descend into the air and shout loudly once more, "Come forth!" and all the dead in Christ will rise first; their bodies will come out of the graves and be reunited with their spirits because He IS the Resurrection! And He gave proof of it to all men by rising Himself on the third day! But there is something else to see here:

b. His obvious union with the Father He only prays so that all the listeners and onlookers will know that the Father always hears Him, that He is one with the Father, that He is God! Years later, Paul asked a good question in Acts 26:8, Why should any of you consider it incredible that God raises the dead? That's just the point. They were amazed because man can't do it! It brought them face to face with the idea that here in a body in front of them stood God Almighty, Jehovah, the Great I AM and His Name is Jesus! John's record of the moment closes abruptly, but verse 45 makes clear what happened. Many fell on their faces and believed and worshipped! But not all, as hard as that is to imagine. Here we come to the second major thing in the chapter:

II. The Plotting Of The Jewish Leaders To Kill Jesus (46-57) [Read 46-48]]. You see:

1. this miracle threatened them terribly

a. they feared for their personal status Everyone was believing in Him, declaring their faith and allegiance to Him. That meant they as leaders were on the way out. But beyond that:

b. they feared for the survival of their nation They feared it would lead to an uprising, one that Rome would not tolerate, and that the Roman legions would come and destroy their Temple and, indeed, their whole people, exactly what happened 40 years later! That's why:

2. this miracle fixed their course of action: to kill Jesus (49-52) They had wanted to arrest Him and kill Him before, but now they were desperate. It became a settled conclusion. As the official High priest:

a. Caiaphas prophesied: Jesus would die for the nation (51) God even used the words of his mouth to speak truth, though not in the way he meant it. He meant that Jesus would die so that Israel as a nation would continue to survive. But in truth, Jesus did die for the nation, for their sins, and:

b. John added: for all God's scattered children (for the whole world) He spelled it out in 1 Jn. 2:2, He is the atoning sacrifice for our sins, and not only for ours but also for the sins of the whole world. The statement was more prophetic than Caiaphas could know. But what changed now was that:

3. this miracle led to public announcement of their intent (53-57) They gave public orders now that anyone knowing where Jesus was MUST immediately report it. He was a wanted man and so for his last two months or so He withdrew to the obscure little village of Ephraim about 16 miles northeast of Jerusalem on the edge of the wilderness. No more would he return until He came riding in on a donkey as their King!

How ironic when you think about it! Peter said, You killed the Prince of Life but God raised Him from the dead! That was their plan, their intent, to kill Him who was the Resurrection and the Life! What an impossibly ridiculous idea! But you know, Jesus still is that today and He's still demonstrating it. Enoch Wang is the key leader of a huge network of house churches in China today. In 1995 he had already spent time in prison and was, as usual, wanted by the authorities. He was living secretly with his family on the fourth floor of a house where other believers lived. His daughter was out on the balcony holding their little baby, just a small toddler, when she screamed. The baby had somehow slipped out of her arms and fallen. They rushed down into the street. The child had landed headfirst and was lying there, obviously dead and lifeless. Her skull had cracked and a piece of her brain was protruding through a hole. They could not go to the hospital as they would be arrested and so would the people housing them. Besides, there was no use; the baby was already dead. That day Enoch was supposed to go to one of the most important meetings in the history of the Chinese Church. The leaders of three key movements representing millions of believers were to meet for several days to unite with one another and remove the resentment and criticism that existed between them and to plan a bold new missionary thrust together. Holding his lifeless daughter, Enoch was convinced this was a direct attack of the Enemy to break up this important thing that God was doing. So he prayed, "Father, If you truly want unity in the Chinese Church, I pray you will heal my daughter. I pray that tomorrow she will feed, the day after that she will speak and the third day she will walk! And if not, I am ready to quit and never preach again!" He left his wife wailing with the lifeless toddler in her lap and went off to the meeting. When he came home, she was alive, breathing normally and sleeping soundly. When he came home the next night she was nursing hungrily. When he came home the third night, his wife put her down, held her by the arms and she took a step towards him!" The wound on her head had closed by itself with no medical treatment! Today she is a grown woman who loves Jesus! My friend, these are not just ancient stories in your Bible. Jesus is alive; He is still the Resurrection and the Life; He can still raise the dead today if He so chooses and He will raise all who believe in Him as He promised! The question still is, "Do you believe this?!"

The Triumphal Entry - Ch. 12

As we move into chapter 12 it is now Friday, exactly one week before Jesus' crucifixion. As the end of chapter 11 reports, streams of pilgrims are already arriving in Jerusalem from all over the land of Israel to purify themselves and be ready to celebrate the Passover. Jesus and His disciples are among those heading in the direction of Jerusalem once more. It is now the hour to appear and present Himself there to the nation one last time, but He enters this time differently than ever before. He enters in royal procession with followers before and behind. He enters as their King. It is Friday evening as Jesus and the Twelve enter the home of a man known as Simon the Leper in the village of Bethany. A dinner is being given there that night in his honor and Martha is, as usual, busy preparing and serving, while her recently-resurrected brother Lazarus is among the guests. And it is during the course of this dinner that an important event occurs:

I. The King Is Anointed At Bethany (1-11) It is really:

1. a selfless act of devotion by Mary (1-3) Mary had an alabastron, an alabaster box, a stone flask and in it was sealed a pound of very precious ointment made from pure nard. This fragrant perfume was probably imported by traders from India and was extremely expensive, worth a year's wages. What's that? Maybe $30,000 or $40,000 in our money? We don't know how she came by it or how long she'd had it, but it was evidently something Mary treasured and had saved for a very special occasion. And for her, this night was that occasion. She broke the flask open and poured its precious content, first on Jesus' head, and then on His feet as He lay reclining at the table. Then she bowed her head and wiped His feet dry with her own hair. The fragrance welled up and filled the whole house. What a touching act born out of love and devotion. It was as though she is saying with the songwriter, "All I once held dear, built my life upon, All this world reveres and wars to own, All I once thought gain, I have counted loss, spent and worthless now, compared to this.... Knowing YOU, Jesus, knowing You; there is no greater thing!" What a way of saying, "I love you, Lord!" The room was filled with Jesus' disciples. You would think someone would have applauded. You would think someone would have said, "Oh, how sweet, how lovely! How generous! See how she loves Him!" But not one did. Many of them began to murmur against her and the next voice we hear is:

2. a selfish cry of objection by Judas (4-6) He speaks up to criticize her. He calls it a waste. He says it could have been sold and just think how many poor people it would have fed; just think what better use we could have made of that! But he says it, not because he cares about poor people but because he's a thief. He kept the money bag for Jesus and the disciples and throughout their journeys he repeatedly found ways to help himself to what was in it. So, he cries out; he raises an objection, not for the poor, but for the satisfaction of his own greed. But though not one disciple will speak in her defense, it does not go unanswered. It brings:

3. a swift rebuke and justification by Jesus (7-8) Mark's account adds:

Mark 14:6-9 ...She has done a beautiful thing to me...She did what she could. She poured perfume on my body beforehand to prepare for my burial. I tell you the truth, wherever the gospel is preached throughout the world, what she has done will also be told, in memory of her. She was the only one who got it. For months He had been telling His disciples that He was going up to Jerusalem to die. They still didn't get it. But she understood. She believed His Word. She couldn't save Him or spare Him from death but she did what she could. She poured out this precious perfume to anoint His body ahead of time for His burial, just as though He were already lying there dead. Freely and out of love for Him, she poured out everything she had for His purpose because she believed His Word. And we're still talking about it 2000 years later on the other side of the world, just as Jesus promised. It seems to me there's a lesson here, that she's an example. We've all got our own alabaster box, our own precious treasure that we're saving for ourselves and haven't really given to Jesus. It might be a sum of money or some valuable object like hers, but it might just as easily be our precious child for whom we have our own plans or even the control over our own precious life, the choice of what we will do and where we will go. It's something we've reserved to this point because it's tough to surrender, to give up. But Mary's example calls to us this morning; whatever our treasure is, whatever we value most of all, to pour it out at His feet, to lay it down as a gift to Him in love, to bow before Him in humble surrender, wiping His feet with our hair, believing that what He has said is true and that His purpose is more important than our program. What is it for you? Your bank account? Is it your dream; your life's plan that you're trying to make happen? Is it releasing your child for the ministry or the mission field? Is it answering His call to go yourself? What is it that you hold dear, that He is calling to your heart to lay down this morning? But that day, no one was impressed. Indeed, Judas was incensed beyond measure. Mark tells us this event is what moved him to go to the chief priests and offer to betray Jesus. There was also:

4. a two-fold reaction by the Jews to all the events of that day (9-11) Jesus stayed on through Saturday and into Sunday and news got out that He was there. Crowds came, especially to see Lazarus, the living dead man. Many believed in Jesus, placed their faith in Him. The chief priests just kept on plotting against Him and now they decided to kill Lazarus too, since he was such a testimony of Jesus' power. No wonder they were delighted when Judas showed up! Their plan was taking concrete shape. But now, on Sunday, comes an event they did not expect:

II. The King Enters Jerusalem (12-19), only not quietly and privately as He had always done before. This time He comes in the middle of a veritable Passover Parade. We call it the "Triumphal Entry". Look how He rode into Jerusalem (12-13). There were two crowds, actually. Many people, including His disciples were with Him there in Bethany. They followed Him on His descent to the city. But a huge crowd of Passover pilgrims who were already in the city heard that He was coming and ran out to meet Him. They took palm branches to wave and cast as a carpet before His feet. So, with a crowd behind and a crowd in front and Himself in the middle, Jesus rode into Jerusalem on a donkey. Why? For two reasons:

1. it was a public declaration of Messiahship The crowd was shouting portions of Ps. 118:25-26 the whole way. Hosanna means Save us we pray! They called Him "Son of David", that is, the Messiah, the Promised One. They called Him "The King of Israel who comes in the name of the Lord!" They shouted "Blessed is the Kingdom that comes, the Kingdom of our Father David!" The message was pretty clear. He was coming to town as King, as the rightful ruler and heir to David's throne. And Jesus didn't stop it; He didn't silence anyone! This was His moment to declare to the world, and especially to Israel, publicly who He was. And at the same time:

2. it was a fulfillment of prophecy (14-16) Zechariah had prophesied hundreds of years before in Zech. 9:9, Rejoice greatly, O Daughter of Zion! Shout, Daughter of Jerusalem! See, your king comes to you, righteous and having salvation, gentle and riding on a donkey, on a colt, the foal of a donkey. Jesus borrowed a donkey and rode into Jerusalem this way so that everyone would recognize Him, so that all of Zion would know that their King was coming to them riding on a donkey! This was Israel's moment, Israel's opportunity. Her king was coming to her and she could turn in faith and receive Him and become part of His kingdom! But not even His own disciples understood the enormous significance of what they were doing. It was only after the Resurrection that it all became clear in their minds how God had predicted this and how they had done exactly what was predicted! And if they couldn't grasp it, certainly the Jews did not! Even though this crowd of pilgrims who had come from all over the land was ready to follow Jesus as King on this day:

3. it was a deep disturbance to the Jewish leaders (17-19) The leadership of the Jewish nation was mortified. This was the last straw! To them, their cause seemed almost lost. "The whole world is going after Him!" But sadly, instead of opening their minds to the possibility that Jesus actually could be the Promised King, they only hardened themselves further and became that much more resolved to find a way to kill Him. They knew that by the end of this Passover feast they had to find a time and a place to arrest Him, try Him and execute Him swiftly. Hey, by the way, you and I have the same choice to make. Jesus is the King who wants to ride into your life and take over. He's the King; He is Lord, Master. Yet He comes meekly, humbly, as He did that day on a donkey, not a war horse, not forcing His way to the throne of your life, but bidding you to surrender it nevertheless. Will you stand with the pilgrims and bless Him and invite Him to sit on the throne of your life or will you stand with the leaders and say, "This man shall not rule over us!"? Well, Sunday ends; Monday comes, though John doesn't record it. Jesus cleanses the Temple. He curses a barren fig tree. But sometime either on Monday or perhaps on Tuesday, another strange and somewhat confusing minor incident happens. Yet when you understand it, it is truly significant because it is on this day that:

III. The Harvest Of The Nations Begins (20-33) The immediate circumstance is that:

1. Jesus is sought out by some Greeks (20-21) These were not merely Jews who lived out among Gentile peoples, but actual ethnic Greeks who worshipped God and came to the feast. And they were drawn to Jesus. They came to Him and sought Him out. They went to one of His disciples, Philip, to ask for an audience with Him. This was new, novel, and Philip wanted somebody else in on it with him, so he got Andrew and they went to tell Jesus that Greeks had come. The odd part is that we don't know what actually happened, whether they eventually got their interview or not. John doesn't say. But it became the occasion for Jesus to reinforce to His disciples:

2. the necessity of His death (23-24) These Greeks coming were a sign to Jesus, an indicator that His hour had come, His time to be glorified and:

a. the road to His glorification was through death He used the metaphor of a seed to explain it to His disciples. He said that:

b. the death of one wheat seed is needed to produce a harvest of many That kernel of wheat by itself, if left on the stalk, remains only a single seed. But if you take it and bury it in the ground, if you sow it in the soil so that it appears itself to die, from that one seed will burst forth a plant that results in the harvest of many kernels of wheat, many seeds. Jesus is saying, "And I too have to die. If I don't, I remain by myself, the only One fit to enter heaven, the only One with eternal life. But I have to die; I have to be buried in the soil, laid in the tomb so that there will be a great harvest of many souls who have eternal life!" And Jesus went on to indicate that that is:

c. a principle for us also: we must die to self to glorify Him (25-26) He says: "You want to be with Me? You want to join Me? Then follow Me! Do what I do! Die to self! Let go of your own life; give up control over it. Hate the idea of running your own life in this world. Serve ME and you'll be with Me! My Father will honor you! Let your own life fall into the ground and die to it. Let me take it over; let me fill it with My power; let me through you produce a great harvest of many seeds, many souls who will love Me and be with Me!" The proprietor of a dry-cleaning and dyeing [D-Y-E-ing] business hung this quaint sign in his shop window: "We dye to live, and live to dye; the more we dye, the more we live; and the more we live, the more we dye." For the child of God, it is also true that the more he dies, the more he lives! Someone asked George Mueller the secret of his marvelous fruitfulness as a Christian. He replied, "There came a day when George Mueller died, utterly died! No longer did his own desire, preferences, and tastes come first. He knew that from then on Christ must be all in all!" What about you? That's the choice you and I face. Now look at:

3. the choice He made to die (27-30) [Read 27-28a]

a. He knew the suffering it would entail His heart was troubled, just as it would be two or three nights later in Gethsemane when He faced this issue again. He knew the suffering that His dying would entail. He knew the horror of the cross that awaited Him. And yet:

b. He chose to surrender to the Father's purpose What was He supposed to pray? "Father, save Me from this hour?" That's what we would want to pray! That's what His disciples wanted Him to pray. But He made a choice and He prayed differently, crying out: "Father, glorify Your Name! I accept death. I accept the suffering. I accept the cross, because that is Your will and that will bring You glory! I choose to glorify Your Name!" And at that very moment an amazing thing happened:

c. His choice was verified by the Father's voice from heaven (28-30) The Father's voice rang out like thunder; everyone heard the sound though they couldn't all distinguish the words. He said, "I have glorified it [that is, in Your life] and I will glorify it again [that is, in Your death]!" Jesus already knew that was the case; He didn't need the voice, but oh, how they did! How they needed to hear and accept that God's plan was to be glorified in the death of His Son! The Father wanted to cement that thought in their minds; that's why He spoke and then Jesus went on to explain:

4. the results of His death (31-33) His death would accomplish two eternal purposes. First:

a. it would defeat Satan and ensure his final judgment Being lifted up on that cross would be the absolute end of Satan's dominion and power. It would ensure that now he will be driven out. The kingdoms of this world will become the Kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ! Satan is a defeated foe. He likes to roar and make a lot of noise and try to work his will in the world, but his doom is sealed; his authority must bow before the authority of the King of Kings and Lord of Lords because Jesus chose the cross! But there is a second eternal result. His dying:

b. it will produce a great harvest: it will draw some from every people to Him There is Jesus' ultimate point that ties this whole section together. These Greeks who have come to Him now are just the first fruits of a huge harvest that is yet to come and is soon to start, a great harvest of souls from every tribe, tongue, people and nation. He could see it in them; it was the joy that was set before Him, the joy of literally millions of redeemed children of God from all over the earth, and so He determined to endure the cross and despise the shame in order to sit down at the right hand of God together with them!

That's why Jesus wants you and I to die to ourselves! That's why He chose to go to the cross. He wants to reap that great harvest of the peoples through us! He wants to take our surrendered lives and infuse them with His power so that through our giving, through our praying, through our going across the world and across the street, through our speaking, our serving, and our loving, His great harvest of the nations of the earth is brought to completion and gathered in! That's what will happen to us when we choose to die to self, when we pour out our greatest treasure at His feet; He will involve our life in His great Kingdom purpose. It will no longer be given to pursuing our own ends but the thrill and the passion of our life will be ministry to others, advancing His Kingdom in whatever way He calls us to do it!

Now John brings his chapter to a close by writing a summary that shows how:

IV. The Offer Of The King Is Rejected (34-50) He tells us that:

1. many refused to believe (34-36) Tuesday's crowd was not Sunday's crowd. These folks raised a theological objection to which Jesus essentially replied, "I am the light of the world. Put your trust in the Light quickly, you've only got another two days or so!" and then He left. Then John tells us:

2. the reason they would not believe: blindness (37-41) Even after hearing a voice from heaven, they still wouldn't believe because they were blinded. Isaiah prophesied that and it was about Jesus. Their continuing refusal only hardened them more and more. On the other hand, John says:

3. many did believe but would not confess it out of fear (42-43) They believed, but they were afraid of becoming social outcasts. Even some of the leaders knew Jesus WAS who He said He was, yet they were too afraid to follow Him. So, Jesus ended this day with a clear, simple:

4. warning: to reject the Son is to reject the Father (44-50) Do you hear it? "I and the Father are One! You can't have Him and not have Me! You can't hang back and say, 'Well, I believe in God but I can't accept Jesus; the consequences are just too tough.'" His own words are the Father's words and they will condemn you in the day of judgment. As He will say in 14:6, no one comes to the Father except through Him.

Many, even today, refuse to believe because they're spiritually blind. They can't see. Others believe intellectually, but are afraid to commit themselves to Jesus for one reason or another. But you can't have God without Him. You can't have true faith without Him! You can have religion; you can have ceremony; you can have all kinds of self-invented beliefs and speculations, but this truth remains: Jesus is the one and only way to God. To reject Him is death eternally; to receive Him is life eternal. I'm going to stop there and finish with a story told by Jim Cymbala: Back in 1921, a missionary couple named David and Svea Flood went with their two-year-old son from Sweden to the heart of Africa, to what was then called the Belgian Congo. They met up with another young Scandinavian couple, the Ericksons, and the four of them sought God for direction. In those days of much tenderness and devotion and sacrifice, they felt led of the Lord to set out from the main mission station and take the gospel to a remote area. This was a huge step of faith. At the village of N'dolera they were rebuffed by the chief, who would not let them enter his town for fear of alienating the local gods. The two couples opted to go half a mile up the slope and build their own mud huts. They prayed for a spiritual breakthrough, but there was none. The only contact with the villagers was a young boy, who was allowed to sell them chickens and eggs twice a week. Svea Flood, a tiny woman only four feet, eight inches tall, decided that if this was the only African she could talk to, she would try to lead the boy to Jesus. And in fact, she succeeded. But there were no other encouragements. Meanwhile, malaria continued to strike one member of the little band after another. In time the Ericksons decided they had had enough suffering and left to return to the central mission station. David and Svea Flood remained near N'dolera to go on alone. Then, of all things, Svea found herself pregnant in the middle of the primitive wilderness. When the time came for her to give birth, the village chief softened enough to allow a midwife to help her. A little girl was born, whom they named Aina. The delivery, however, was exhausting, and Svea Flood was already weak from bouts of malaria. The birth process was a heavy blow to her stamina. She lasted only another seventeen days. Inside David Flood, something snapped in that moment. He dug a crude grave, buried his twenty-seven-year-old wife, and then took his children back down the mountain to the mission station. Giving his newborn daughter to the Ericksons, he snarled, "I'm going back to Sweden. I've lost my wife, and I obviously can't take care of this baby. God has ruined my life." With that, he headed for the port, rejecting not only his calling, but God himself. Within eight months both the Ericksons were stricken with a mysterious malady and died within days of each other. The baby was then turned over to some American missionaries, who adjusted her Swedish name to "Aggie" and eventually brought her back to the United States at age three. This family loved the little girl and were afraid that if they tried to return to Africa, some legal obstacle might separate her from them. So, they decided to stay in their home country and switch from missionary work to pastoral ministry. And that is how Aggie grew up in South Dakota. As a young woman, she attended North Central Bible College in Minneapolis. There she met and married a young man named Dewey Hurst. Years passed. The Hursts enjoyed a fruitful ministry. Aggie gave birth first to a daughter, then a son. In time her husband became president of a Christian college in the Seattle area, and Aggie was intrigued to find so much Scandinavian heritage there. One day a Swedish religious magazine appeared in her mailbox. She had no idea who had sent it, and of course she couldn't read the words. But as she turned the pages, all of a sudden, a photo stopped her cold. There in a primitive setting was a grave with a white cross, and on the cross were the words SVEA FLOOD. Aggie jumped in her car and went straight for a college faculty member who, she knew, could translate the article. "What does this say?" she demanded. The instructor summarized the story: It was about missionaries who had come to N'dolera long ago... the birth of a white baby... the death of the young mother... the one little African boy who had been led to Christ... and how, after the whites had all left, the boy had grown up and finally persuaded the chief to let him build a school in the village. The article said that gradually he won all his students to Christ... the children led their parents to Christ... even the chief had become a Christian. Today there were six hundred Christian believers in that one village... All because of the sacrifice of David and Svea Flood. For the Hursts' twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, the college presented them with the gift of a vacation to Sweden. There Aggie sought to find her real father. An old man now, David Flood had remarried, fathered four more children, and generally dissipated his life with alcohol. He had recently suffered a stroke. Still bitter, he had one rule in his family: "Never mention the name of God-because God took everything from me." After an emotional reunion with her half-brothers and half-sister, Aggie brought up the subject of seeing her father. The others hesitated. "You can talk to him," they replied, "even though he's very ill now. But you need to know that whenever he hears the name of God, he flies into a rage. Aggie was not to be deterred. She walked into the squalid apartment, with liquor bottles everywhere, and approached the seventy-three-year-old man lying in a rumpled bed. "Papa," she said tentatively. He turned and began to cry. "Aina," he said. "I never meant to give you away." "It's all right, Papa," she replied, taking him gently in her arms. "God took care of me. The man instantly stiffened. The tears stopped. "God forgot all of us. Our lives have been like this because of him." He turned his face back to the wall. Aggie stroked his face and then continued, undaunted. "Papa, I've got a little story to tell you, and it's a true one. You didn't go to Africa in vain. Mama didn't die in vain.

The little boy you won to the Lord grew up to win that whole village to Jesus Christ. The one seed you planted just kept growing and growing. Today there are six hundred African people serving the Lord because you were faithful to the call of God in your life... Papa, Jesus loves you. He has never hated you." The old man turned back to look into his daughter's eyes. His body relaxed. He began to talk. And by the end of the afternoon, he had come back to the God he had resented for so many decades. Over the next few days, father and daughter enjoyed warm moments together. Aggie and her husband soon had to return to America, and within a few weeks, David Flood had gone into eternity. A few years later, the Hursts were attending a high-level evangelism conference in London, England, when a report was given from the nation of Zaire (the former Belgian Congo). The superintendent of the national church, representing some 110,000 baptized believers, spoke eloquently of the gospel's spread in his nation. Aggie could not help going to ask him afterward if he had ever heard of David and Svea Flood. "Yes, madam," the man replied in French, his words then being translated into English. "It was Svea Flood who led me to Jesus Christ. I was the boy who brought food to your parents before you were born. In fact, to this day your mother's grave and her memory are honored by all of us." He embraced her in a long, sobbing hug. Then he continued, "You must come to Africa to see, because your mother is the most famous person in our history." In time that is exactly what Aggie Hurst and her husband did. They were welcomed by cheering throngs of villagers. She even met the man who had been hired by her father many years before to carry her back down the mountain in a hammock-cradle. The most dramatic moment, of course, was when the pastor escorted Aggie to see her mother's white cross for herself. She knelt in the soil to pray and give thanks. Later that day, in the church, the pastor read from John 12:24: "I tell you the truth, unless a kernel of wheat falls to the ground and dies, it remains only a single seed. But if it dies, it produces many seeds." He then followed with Psalm 126:5: "Those who sow in tears will reap with songs of joy!" Jim Cymbala comments: They both gave their all, not counting the cost and not expecting to be rescued before pain and suffering would strike. They both died far too young by human standards. And yet their accomplishments in the spiritual realm are beyond measuring. How we live is more important than how long we live. I would rather live a few meaningful, fruitful years for Christ than hang on to age eighty-nine and accomplish little. I want to be totally yielded to God, don't you? I don't want to live half full; I want to experience what it means to be full of the Holy Spirit in the way God intended. He promised that through the gospel and the Spirit's anointing, our lives could be used, just like Svea Flood's, to bring blessing and hope to multitudes. The thought of that means far more to me than any worldly honor or achievement. I don't want a title; I don't want to be famous or meet some earthly dignitary; I don't want to be rich. I just want God to clothe me with his Spirit so I can affect people for Christ. John: The Gospel Of Life

The Washing Of Feet - Ch. 13

It is already Thursday of Passion Week as we enter Ch. 13. John does not record a great many of the events of Jesus' ministry which the other Gospels do. In fact, throughout his gospel, he seems to focus on important events which Matthew, Mark and Luke choose not to record. In each of the other Gospels these several hours in the Upper Room occupy merely half of a chapter or even less; John gives us five solid chapters worth of what Jesus said and did with His disciples on that special evening. These were His last hours with them. They celebrated the Passover together for the last time. It was a special, precious occasion, a time for Him to share His heart with them, a time to give them His last and most important instructions, a time to pray a last prayer with them. While the other Gospels focus on how from this Last Supper, He gave them the lasting ordinance of the Lord's Supper, John doesn't even mention the bread and the cup. The most important thing to Him about that meal was something entirely different; He alone records that:

I. Jesus Washes His Disciples' Feet (1-16) Let's look at:

1. John's introduction (1-3) As John reflected back on that night years later to write it down, he now fully understood what was going on and wanted to make sure that we grasp it too. So, he points out that:

a. Jesus knew the full extent of everything that was happening He knew the time had come to leave this world. He knew this was the night of His arrest and tomorrow would bring the Cross. He knew Judas had already gone to the chief priests and made an agreement to betray him. He knew that He had all Divine authority and was completely in charge of everything that was happening. And He knew He was soon to return to heaven. Not one whit of any of this took Him by surprise. He planned it; He chose it; He made it happen! So, beginning in these hours:

b. Jesus now showed His disciples the full extent of His love He had loved them all along. They were His own; they belonged to Him. The Father had given them to Him. He wanted them to know the infinite extent of that love. So, He showed it to them first by a visual illustration. Then He showed it to them by sharing from His heart the precious truths in chapters 14-16. Then He showed it as He prayed for them in chapter 17. And finally, the next morning He showed it to them on a cross, where His outstretched arms symbolically said, "I love you THIS much!" as He died. The visual illustration was:

2. Jesus' action (4-5) Nothing could have shocked them more! You'll understand why when you realize:

a. the utter pride that was in the hearts of the disciples Luke records something that actually happened at the beginning of the supper in Luke 22:24...a dispute arose among them as to which of them was considered to be greatest. Can you even imagine it? Hours from the Cross and here they are around the table, beginning their last meal arguing with each other about who is the greatest disciple, which one should be in charge, like a bunch of schoolboys clamoring to be “king of the hill”. The thought of their selfish pride is appalling (although it’s not like that kind of dispute doesn’t happen among His followers in our churches today; it does!), and it must have broken Jesus’ heart. Luke 22:25-27, Jesus said to them, ...you are not to be like that. Instead, the greatest among you should be like the youngest, and the one who rules like the one who serves. For who is greater, the one who is at the table or the one who serves? Is it not the one who is at the table? But I am among you as one who serves. My guess is that it was at that very moment that Jesus abruptly stood up from the table, took off His robe, tied a towel around His waist and began one by one to wash their feet. Now we need to understand:

b. the abject humility in the act of washing their feet Israel is a dry and dusty place. Streets and paths are dry dirt lanes. And people did not wear socks or have enclosed leather shoes; they wore simple sandals tied on with thongs. You could take a full bath and simply walk across the street to your neighbor’s house and your feet would be dirty. So, every house had its basin of water near the door with a towel for the washing of feet. If guests came, it would be the job of the lowest-regarded person in the house to wash their feet, a servant or slave if there was one. If not, then the children and if none, the guests would be forced to wash their own, because the homeowner would not do it. It was the job of a lowly servant, a slave. Any person of any level of rank or importance would never do it. They certainly would never stoop to do it for one another, so there they lay round the table with their dirty feet. But now here is Jesus, their Lord and Master, the Son of God, naked to the waist, on His knees with a basin and towel, doing the job of the lowest servant, washing the dust of the street off their feet. The significance of this was not lost on them; the very first one He came to, Peter, raised an objection:

3. Peter’s objection (6-11) First, Peter was shocked, “Lord, You wash my feet?” He could not understand. But then it became rebellion, “NO! NEVER!” You see:

a. his false humility was a mask for pride. “No person of rank, certainly no Rabbi, no Teacher, let alone Jesus, should ever wash feet. I wouldn’t! Jesus should never wash my feet!” But then it moved to, “He doesn’t know what He’s doing! I’ll stop Him; I’ll take charge and refuse!” It’s amazing how many times we want to tell Jesus what He ought to do, even though we call Him Lord! You see, true humility is complete submission, whether we understand what He’s doing or not! Jesus said, “If you don’t let me wash you, that is, if you don’t submit to Me and do what I say as your Lord, then you can’t be with Me in My work! I can’t use you!” Well, that breaks Peter’s heart and love takes over, “I wouldn’t trade You for anything; if that’s what You want, wash ALL of me; do my hands, do my head!” Once again, he missed the point, didn’t he? None of this was really about the washing or being clean. In fact, He tells us:

b. we are already clean We’re like a person who’s had a bath. You do know, of course, that in the city they didn’t have individual bathrooms, right? No pipes, no running water. They had public baths where there was a water source. So, every once in a while, you’d walk a few blocks to the bathhouse and get all clean. Then you’d put your sandals on and walk home on the dirt street. When you got home, you’d only have to wash your feet! He’s teaching us this: We’re already cleansed spiritually; we’re made pure by Him. So, we need only to yield our feet to Him; we need only shake off our bit of foolish pride and submit in order to have part in His work. Now He finishes and goes back to the table and we have:

4. Jesus’ explanation (12-16) You see, in this act:

a. He provided an example of humble service to one another He’s showing us by illustration what He did for us. He, the Lord and Master, left heaven for us and came to earth; He took the form of a Servant and became a man. Then He humbled Himself further still and went all the way to death for us, even the death of the cross. He, our Lord, took the lowest place to wash and cleanse us from our sins because He loved us. And if that’s how He acted, if He took the lowest place to love others and serve them, that’s how WE ought to act toward each other. We should not consider ourselves better than Him, more deserving than Him. In fact:

b. He gave us the command to humbly serve one another “Wash one another’s feet!” That doesn’t mean to institute some kind of foot washing ritual; it means to serve one another in love - Gal. 5:13. It means to always have the attitude, “I’m here to serve you; what do you need and what can I do for you?” That’s what is to characterize our lives and our relationships within the church. 1 Tim. 5:10 commends the widow whose habit is ...washing the feet of the saints, that is, doing a myriad of loving, caring tasks that bless other believers. Robert E. Speer says that several years ago he was visiting a small college in the South and was being entertained by its president. The school had very limited facilities for guests, so the head of the institution graciously offered him his apartment. “I woke up early the next morning”, said Speer, “when I heard someone tiptoe into the room. I lay there quietly with my eyes open just a slit to see who it was. To my surprise the president of the college walked in, picked up my dirty boots, and walked out. I got out of bed, opened the door a crack, and watched him take them to an adjoining hallway. Then he got down on the floor and began polishing them. I could have cried at the sight. His hospitality and thoughtfulness showed me what a great man he really was. That's the kind of attitude Jesus wants to build in us as His followers.

But even as He says these things, something else is strongly on Jesus' mind and He chooses to address it next:

II. Jesus Warns His Disciples Of His Betrayal (18-30) He had told them a year earlier, One of you is a devil. But now He gives more clearly:

1. His prediction of betrayal (18-20) "Not all of you are really My followers; one of you who shares my bread is going to lift up His heel against Me!" Why did He tell them this?

a. it was to keep their faith in Him from being shaken They were going to see it happen in a few short hours. Judas would arrive in the garden with a mob of soldiers and He would be arrested and led away. He didn't want it to take them by surprise and shake their faith in Him. He wanted them to know that He knew ahead of time, that it was even written centuries earlier in the Psalms, that it had to happen and when it did, their confidence in Him would be increased, not shaken. But even warning them like this, they must still have had a blank look on their faces so he proceeded to speak more clearly (21):

Well, that had an effect, (22)! The other Gospels tell us they began to question among themselves, "Who is it?" They were full of sorrow and began to ask Him one after the other, "Lord, is it I?" And He said, "It's one of you eating out of the same dish with Me." But that led to:

2. His specific identification of the betrayer (23-26) The table was about a foot off the floor. Each of them was lying on their left side and leaning on some kind of pillow while they ate, with their feet away from the table. John was in front of Jesus and Peter whispered, "Ask Him who!" so John leaned back and quietly asked. Jesus said, "The one to whom I give this piece of bread after I dip it in the dish." So, He scooped out some food on the sop and handed it to Judas. As He was doing this, the "Lord, is it I's?" were still coming at Him and being ignored, until Judas said, "Is it I?" And Matthew says Jesus replied, "It is." You see this:

a. it was Jesus' last personal warning to Judas He said, "Woe to that man! It would be better if he had never been born!" It is as though He is pleading, "Judas, I KNOW it's you and I know the price you'll pay. Don't choose this!" But that moment was also:

b. it was Judas' final choice to yield to Satan (27a) He took the bread, knowing what Jesus meant, knowing the warning was for him. He made a choice in his heart to ignore it and that was the end. Satan literally entered him and he jumped up from the table and left the room. By pointing him out, Jesus actually precipitated this and so:

c. it set in motion the events leading to the crucifixion (27b-30) Do you see? Jesus picked the night and the time of his own arrest; He is controlling the whole process. He knew Judas would run and get the Temple guards to come and arrest Him and actually urged him on in the process to do it literally "more quickly" so that they would arrive at the garden in time!

So now that Judas the false one is gone, Jesus is free to open His heart and pour out His final thoughts to these 11, his dearest friends and followers. In this final section of the chapter:

III. Jesus Gives His Disciples A New Command (31-38) He begins by sharing with them:

1. the imminence of His death and departure (31-33) "We have only a little longer. It is time. God is going to glorify Himself in Me now. I am leaving. I am going where you can't follow right now. I'm going to die and soon I'm going back to heaven." And the other gospels add, "This very night you will all fall away from Me". He made it plain: this is our last night, so listen carefully and then He gave them:

2. the commandment to love one another (34-35) He had taught them, "Love your enemies!" and reiterated "Love your neighbor as yourself!" But this new command was specifically for His followers, for the church, for us: "Love each other!" And note:

a. the manner of that love: as He has loved us How did He show the full extent of His love? By humbly serving them, by sharing His heart with them and ultimately by dying for them. He's our model. We are to humbly serve one another without thought for ourselves. We are to share our hearts with one another until we are bound as one. And we are to lay down our lives in sacrificial actions for one another, standing with each other even to the death if need be. Can you see if we love one another like this what kind of a special, unique community we will be? How attractive it will be? Jesus said:

b. the effect of that love would be a testimony to the world The community around us will sit up and take notice because they don't see anything like that. People will give their lives to Christ; they will want to be part of His body because they see the way we love each other, or else they'll be repulsed by it. Radical love has always been the hallmark and the trademark of the true church. Around 200 AD Tertullian wrote in Rome during a time of persecution: [Our offerings are used] to support and bury poor people, to supply the wants of boys and girls destitute of means and parents, and of old persons confined now to the house; such, too, as have suffered shipwreck; and if there happen to be any in the mines, or banished to the islands, or shut up in the prisons, for nothing but their fide- ty to the cause of God's Church, they become the nurslings of their confession. But it is mainly the deeds of a love so noble that lead many to put a brand upon us. "See," they say, "how they love one another", for themselves are animated by mutual hatred; "how they are ready even to die for one another", for they themselves will sooner put to death. Much of self-centered Roman society was repulsed by the selfless love of the Christians, but they KNEW they were Jesus disciples; love was their defining mark and it still is. Sixteen ladies from Evanston, Illinois arranged their schedules so they could give round-the-clock nursing care to Martha, a 26-year-old woman with Lou Gehrig's disease (ALS). They bathed her, fed her, talked with her, prayed for her, and witnessed to her. Martha, who had not accepted Christ as her Savior and couldn't understand how a loving God could let her get ALS, saw His love in these ladies and eventually became a Christian. Although she was feeble and unable to speak clearly, she gave a testimony of her faith and was baptized in a local church. A short time later, she died. She is with the Lord today because 16 women, following Jesus' example, personified God's love.

I see that kind of love here among us. I see a parade of GBCers flowing by Audrey Sherman's bedside as she's dying, singing to her, praying with her, helping make her homegoing glorious. I see it in Jim Garcia who is at your doorstep to help before I even know anything's wrong. I hear of visits and phone calls and dinners that Ken Sleep gets constantly from a group of you as he's homebound, but certainly not forgotten. I watch others of you take teenagers under your wing and mentor them and wipe the noses of little kids from our community in our Nursery School and take them to the bathroom or exhaust yourselves looking after elementary kids with ADD at Pioneer Clubs. I see you ladies wrap your arms around people with special needs like Christine DelPaggio and invite newcomers into your homes and make them part of your families. That's our trademark; that's Jesus' dying command: Love one another! And there's always room for improvement. T. W. Hunt writes about a man who exemplified genuine servanthood: "At first I thought he was showing special deference just to me. He worked hard to help me find a retirement house. He watched our house and cared for it in the year of our absence before we moved into it. He saw that the lawn was mowed. When I mentioned painting the closets, he recruited fellow church members to do it, and then worked with them. It seemed that I could not mention a need without him hurrying to fulfill that need. Then I moved to his town and joined the same church. His name was Lucian Stohler, and I soon discovered that his name was synonymous with service. He continued to attend to me and my family, but now I became aware that he attended to everybody. He met needs quietly and without officiousness. He was constantly available and working behalf of others. I asked Lucian to tell me what brought this attitude into his life. He said that a crisis led him to dedicate his life and his whole personality to servanthood. He led a 'normal' Christian life until a retreat in Michigan brought a confrontation with his life purposes. The preacher spoke on the deeper life in such a way that Lucian realized the importance of the lordship of Christ. He struggled with that concept as he went back to his cabin and poured out his heart to the Lord. He realized he had been angry with the Lord because God had not given him a wife. He said he 'regurgitated' all the bitterness he had at God. He told me that the hardest words he ever said were the words he prayed that day: 'Lord, if Your lordship means I'll never be married, I accept Your lordship.' In the three years before he met his wife, the Lord taught him the meaning of servanthood. He learned the walk of ministry, which is to say, the walk of a life given to the service of others. He learned that ministry and servanthood were synonymous. His own words were, 'My drive to serve has given me a love for people that makes me want to help them, to serve them, to witness the love of Christ to them.' For Lucian Stohler, lordship meant servanthood." [The Mind of Christ by T. W. Hunt. Broadman & Holman, 1995. Pages 65-66.] That's what Jesus was trying to get across to us on that last night by washing feet and by giving a new command. "Love one another as I have loved you; serve each other the way I have served you; that is who you are."

The Father's House - 14:1-14

It is still Thursday night of Passion Week and we are still looking at those special hours in the Upper Room as Jesus celebrated the Last Supper with His disciples. Judas had already left the room as Jesus told them in 13:33, I will be with you only a little longer...where I am going you cannot come. Then He gave them that wonderful new commandment to love one another, but Peter's mind was stuck back on that "going away" thing and he asked in verse 36, Lord, where are You going? The familiar words of this first portion of John 14 are Jesus' answer to Peter's question. First He tells them about:

I. The Place Where Jesus Was Going He says, "I am going to The Father's House" (1-3) For many people the concept of heaven is a fuzzy, unclear thing. Some picture it as a sort of state of bliss that people enter into after death, a kind of nirvana where we are one with the universe. Others see it as kind of a mythical place that "modern" people don't believe in. But according to Jesus, heaven:

1. it is a real place It's an actual location to which you can go. John was taken there in a vision and saw it. It contained a city, a huge city half the size of the United States and equally as high with walls and gates and foundations. He saw it measured with a measuring rod; it has real dimensions. It is as real as New York, Chicago or Philadelphia. It is the place that Jesus came from when He came down to earth in the body of a baby, and it is the place that He went back to as He ascended into the air after His resurrection and left His disciples. Jesus said:

a. it is the Father's home, His oikia, the house that He lives in. Just like you have a building that you live in which you call "your house" or "home", heaven is the Father's home, the place where He dwells in all His glory. Yes, He is present everywhere, all the time, but in his vision, John saw Him there, seated on a glorious throne above a crystal sea of glass surrounded by an emerald green rainbow and all the hosts of heaven. Heaven is the place where God is, where He dwells eternally and, Jesus said:

b. it has many rooms The King James translated it as “mansions” and from that we get the impression of huge buildings in which each of us live, kind of like the housing developments of half-million dollar homes up in Bucks County or the stone mansions of Chestnut Hill in Philadelphia. And of course, from that comes all the gospel songs about heavenly mansions and also the “heaven” jokes. But the word is really “dwelling places”, “places to stay, to live”. If you want a mental picture, think of this one. In Bible times a whole extended family might live together in one big house belonging to the patriarch, the father of the family. But in that house, there would be separate living chambers for each of the sons and their families, for the aged parents, for the servants and so on. Jesus said, “My Father’s house is so big, so huge, that it has many rooms, many dwelling places, enough for all who will ever believe and more! And, Jesus said:

c. it has been prepared for us In it there is a place, our own personal portion, set aside, reserved and made ready for our arrival. He Himself is there, right now, today, alive and seeing to the preparations. And the good news in verse 3 is that:

2. Jesus will return to take us there Now His primary meaning is, of course, that He is coming again. He will return one day, perhaps soon, and call all of His children up to meet Him in the air and return to heaven with Him. We call that the Rapture of the Church and it is our blessed hope. But until that day, one by one as we die, He still takes us to that place. Paul said that to die is to depart and be with Christ which is better by far. At death, we go to the place where Jesus is, to the Father’s house. And the real point is:

3. we will remain with Him forever He told the disciples, “I’m going away and you can’t follow Me right now, but you WILL follow me later! You will come to the Father’s house and you will be with me where I am. You’ll remain with Me forever; that’s My plan and purpose, even though we have to be separated for a little while.” The reason He told us this is so that:

4. we can rest in this promise despite our circumstances The disciples were about to be scattered, to see Jesus arrested by a mob and tried and scourged and crucified. Then they would see Him again, alive after His resurrection, and He would leave them. Events like these could shake them to their very core; circumstances like this could destroy their faith. Jesus said, “Trust ME! I’m going to die and rise and leave. This is all part of My plan to save you. I’m going to the Father’s house and you’re coming too. You’ll be with Me forever. If this was not true, I would have told you! Trust ME, no matter what circumstances hit you in the next few hours, no matter if it seems that all hope is lost and gone, no matter if it seems you will die!”

In AD 125, a man named Aristides sent a letter to an acquaintance to give this explanation for the rapid spread of Christianity: “If any righteous man among the Christians passes from this world, they rejoice and offer thanks to God, and they escort his body with songs and thanksgiving as if he were setting out from one place to another nearby.” What circumstances are you facing this day? Do they seem impossible, overwhelming? Does it seem that you will die? Even if you do, you will only leave this place to go to the place where He went, the place prepared for you, to the Father’s house, to be with your Living Savior! Then Jesus went on to talk about:

II. The Way To That Place: Jesus (4-6) Here is the roadmap, the directions to get to Heaven. Here is MapQuest to get from Glenside to glory. Jesus said:

1. the way is a Person: I AM THE WAY. It’s not like turning left or right and driving so many miles. It’s not a process you complete. You can’t get there by being good, by being righteous. You can’t get there by being religious, by saying so many prayers, by attending so many services, by confessing or taking communion so many times or by accepting certain doctrines. The way is a Person; it’s Jesus Himself, so going there requires a personal relationship with Him! People want information about how to go to heaven; they seek after truth and try to figure it out. But:

a. He is the Truth He said in 18:37, ...for this I came into the world, to testify to the truth. Everyone on the side of truth listens to me. People are trying to find out how to get life, what to do in order to live after they die. But:

b. He is the Life John already told us in 1:4, In him was life... And He spelled it out more clearly later in 1 John 5:11-12, And this is the testimony: God has given us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He who has the Son has life; he who does not have the Son of God does not have life. That’s what Jesus was saying, “I am the way; I am life; know Me and you have life!” But He also said that:

2. the way is exclusive: There are not many ways to heaven. It is not true that the Muslims have one way and the Buddhists have another and we have another. It is not that you have your way of believing this and that and doing this and that and I have mine. There is only ONE way to heaven and His Name is Jesus. So going there demands faith, exclusive faith. Try to remember this little acronym; FAITH means: Forsaking All I Trust Him! That’s the way! I quit depending on anything or anyone else and especially on myself and I trust Him and Him alone to take me to the Father's House. And now Jesus mentions:

III. The Master Of That Place: The Father (7-11) Philip expressed:

1. our human thinking: we wish to see the Father Somehow, we can't seem to quite get past that dichotomy in our thinking. Somehow, we get the idea that Jesus is for us, Jesus loves us, Jesus died for us, but the Father we're not so sure about. He's a Holy God who hates and punishes sin. Can we stand in His presence? Can we really live in His house? "If only we could see the Father with our eyes, just once, just one glimpse, that would do the trick. We could face anything! Then we would KNOW that He is for us." But Jesus' answer astonished them, "Here I am, don't you recognize Me?" You see:

2. Jesus was the incarnation of the Father John wrote in 1:18, No one has ever seen God, but God the One and Only, who is at the Father's side, has made him known. In Jesus, the Father was walking about in a body. Look what He said:

a. the Father, though in heaven, was IN Him and He was IN the Father The Father literally lived in His person, in His body. They were One. So:

b. the Father spoke through Him, speaking His words and:

c. the Father lived through Him, doing His works His words were the words of God; His acts were the acts of God. But His point was to give them and us assurance:

3. since we've seen Jesus, we've seen the Father! The Father whose house you're going to is standing right here in front of you telling you that you're going to His house! Or in our case today, since we've known Jesus, we've known the Father! We are reconciled to God. We have a place waiting for us in His house! We're safe; we're sure; we can face anything! And then Jesus goes on to tell us:

IV. The Promises We Have Because Jesus Has Gone To That Place (12-14) He says:

1. we will do what He was doing Think about it. Everything Jesus said about his relationship with the Father is now true of our relationship with Him. The Father, though in heaven, was IN Him. Now:

a. Jesus, though in heaven, is IN us and we are IN Him The risen Jesus literally now lives IN us. And just as the Father spoke through Jesus:

b. Jesus will speak through us, speaking His words, if we choose to let Him and:

c. Jesus will live through us, doing His works, if we let Him.

We will do what He was doing. He will live out His life through us, even though locationally He is in heaven. In fact, He promised that:

2. we will do greater things than He did while on earth Not that we will do greater or more impressive miracles than He did, but the scope of what we do will be greater. After Peter's first sermon, 3,000 people believed and after the second there were 5,000. By the end of Paul's life there were believers in literally every major city all over the Roman Empire, the whole Mediterranean world. Today the Name of Jesus is worshipped in literally every country on the face of the earth, even if only by a few. The things Jesus began to do, He planned to continue in us and bring to completion! We can expect it. But here's the best assurance. Just as the Father always heard Jesus and gave Him whatever He asked because He always did what pleased the Father, just so Jesus:

3. He will do whatever we ask Him in His Name for the glory of the Father Of course, you know that isn't a blanket promise to get anything we want. It is not "Ask me for a new car, a new house, a million dollars, anything your mind could wish, and I will give it." Rather it is this: "If I am living through you and doing My work, then you can rest assured that I'll give you whatever you need as long as your desire is solely and only to glorify the Father!" "In My Name" is not a formula where you say "in Jesus' Name" and tack it onto whatever you want. "In My Name" means, "For My sake." "Whatever you ask, whatever you need in the process of doing My work and carrying out My will for the glory of God, I will not fail to give it to you. Even though I am going away, Trust Me!"

Listen, Jesus is alive! We have a living Savior. He went back to the Father's House and He's there right now preparing an eternal dwelling place for each one of us who know Him. And His plan is, whether we die or He comes back first, that He will take us there to be with Him and the Father forever. And in the meantime, while we're still down here, He's living inside us, speaking through us and doing His work through us every day, as we yield ourselves to Him and allow Him to do it. And as we do that, as we seek His glory and build His Kingdom, He'll give us whatever we need, whatever we ask for, so that we might serve Him. There is no limit to what He will do through us or what He will supply to us! So, we can face anything that comes our way, absolutely anything! If we live, He lives through us; if we die, we are in the Father's house with Him. That's what Easter means! Let me share with you the testimony of an anonymous believer, dated January 22, 2002. Born to a Saudi family, in Saudi Arabia, and living very close to Mecca, I grew up with strict principles and traditions of Islam and the Arab culture. As a teenager I went to the mosque five times a day in obedience to my parents. One night, while I was asleep, I had this horrible dream of me being taken into hell. And what I saw there brought me real fear and these dreams kept coming to me almost every night. At this point I was really wondering as to why I should be seeing hell in this manner. Suddenly one day, Jesus appeared to me and said, "Son, I am the Way, the Truth and the Life. And if you would give your life to Me, and follow Me, I would save you from the hell that you have seen." This came as a surprise to me, for I did not know who this Jesus was. Of course, He is mentioned in the Koran... He is stated as one of our prophets, but not as a Savior who could save us from hell. So, I started looking out for a Christian who could give me some advice about this Jesus I have seen and possibly get one of the Christian Holy Books, which I now know is the Bible. But it was a difficult task for me to get any Christian to speak to me about Jesus. As you would know, Christianity is totally banned in Saudi Arabia and if a Christian is caught witnessing to a Muslim, he could be almost sure that he would be beheaded. Then the Lord led me to an Egyptian Christian who was sick. I prayed for this man's healing and this man gave me a Bible. Then I, by myself, started reading the Bible. By this time Jesus had become a close friend to me. Soon I started witnessing about the experience I had with all my family relations and friends. Soon the authorities were informed that I had converted to Christianity, and I believe this was done by one of my family members. As it states in the Koran, if someone would turn away from Islam, he is a traitor to the faith and he should be executed. So, I was taken into custody and tortured. They told me that I would be beheaded if I would not turn back to Islam. But I had already made my decision that I would never turn back. So, I told the authorities I'm willing to die for Jesus and that I would never come back to Islam. After much torture and imprisonment, I was sentenced to be beheaded. They gave me a date and a time and I told them, "You go ahead and execute me. I'm going to heaven to see Jesus. But I pray that what you would do to me would stay in your minds and not give you rest until you come to Jesus." The appointed day and time came for my execution, and I was waiting with much anticipation, yet very much strong in my faith in Jesus. Generally, the executions are carried out on the set time and date. But to my amazement, no one turned up. One hour lapsed, two hours went by, then it became three hours, and then the day passed by. And no one turned up. Then two days later, the authorities turned up and opened the doors and told me, "You demon! Get out from this place!" I also noticed that the main person who was determined to get me beheaded was not present when they came to release me. I asked them where this guy was. And with much hesitation they replied that his son had died on the same day they planned to execute me. Although I continue to go through much persecution, one thing I know is that the Lord's hand is upon me. Friend, if you really believe Jesus is alive and He has prepared a place for you, you can face anything. Do you know Him?

The Comforter - 14:15-30

We are still in the Upper Room that Thursday night before the cross. Jesus has told His disciples clearly, "I am going away; I am leaving you." Peter asked, "Lord, where are you going?" And in the first half of chapter 14 Jesus answered that question, "I am going to the Father's house to prepare a place for you and one day I'll take you there to be with Me where I am". That was the first huge promise that was intended to keep them through all the horrible things that were about to happen. But the next concern on their hearts is obvious, "But how will we survive? What will we do without Jesus? We'll be all alone!" Jesus knew this fear that was rising in their hearts and addressed it before they even had a chance to express it. He gave them a second huge promise:

I. The Promise Of The Holy Spirit (15-21) Verse 18 expresses the rising concern of their hearts, "He's leaving us; we'll be like orphans, all alone, no one to care for or help us!" So, Jesus says, "NO! I'm going, but I won't leave you like orphans! I won't leave you alone! I will send Someone to take My place with you. I will send the Holy Spirit!" I don't think any of us recognize the magnitude of that promise or the privilege we have as people now living in the fulfillment of it, who HAVE the Holy Spirit! The promise of the Holy Spirit is:

1. the promise of a paraclete; that's the Greek word in verse 16. It is variously translated as counselor, comforter, advocate, or helper. It literally means "one called alongside", someone who will be with me in whatever I'm facing, to help me in whatever way I need. If I'm in a courtroom, I need a lawyer, an advocate, someone to plead my case. If I'm in a funeral home, I need a comforter, someone alongside me with an arm around to comfort me in my grief. If I'm in a quandary of circumstances and don't know what to do, I need a Counselor with Divine wisdom to show me. If I'm crushed under the pressure of my situation, I need someone alongside me with the strength to hold me up and impart to me the strength to stand. To have the Holy Spirit means that no matter what I face, I have Someone who is with me to impart to me whatever I need to face it! I am not an orphan; I am not alone. I am not left to depend on my own resources. I have a paraclete in whom is everything I need! Secondly, the promise of the Holy Spirit is:

2. the promise of Jesus' permanent presence Jesus said, "I'll give you another counselor". That is, "while I was with you, I was your paraclete, the One who was with you, your Divine resource. Now, I have to leave bodily, but I'm going to give you ANOTHER, Someone to take My place, to be to you what I have been, and He, the Spirit, will be with you forever! He won't ever leave, won't ever go away as I've had to." In fact, in verse 18 Jesus says, "I will come to you!", that is, "I will come to you in the person of the Holy Spirit, who is the Spirit of Christ, and in Him I will be with you forever. We will never be separated. I will be with you always, even to the end of the world, in Him!" Thirdly, the promise of the Holy Spirit is:

3. the promise of personal indwelling Look at the end of verse 17, You know Him for he lives with you and will be in you! Throughout the whole Old Testament era, the Holy Spirit had been present and at work in the lives of God's people. He was with men like Moses and Joshua. He came upon people like Miriam and Deborah and Saul and David. He came upon the prophets. He was even with the disciples as Jesus had sent them out. They did miracles in His Name; they healed the sick and cast out demons. That was the power of the Holy Spirit at work through them. But now there was to be a change. Whereas before He was with them and came upon them in times and ways that pleased Him, now, after Pentecost, He would be IN them. He would indwell us, literally live inside our bodies permanently! Paul said we who are joined to the Lord are made one with Him in Spirit; His Spirit is joined to our spirit, which means He is IN us. The Resource that we need, the Counselor, the Comforter, is no longer out there somewhere. He is right in here, in our spirit, in our mind, in our body, always accessible, always in the midst of everything we're in. What a promise! And Jesus also gives here:

4. the promise of His resurrection and of His life imparted to us (19) He promises, You will see Me! "You'll watch Me hang on a cross. You'll see them pierce My side. You'll see them lay me in the tomb. But don't give up hope; trust My word: YOU WILL SEE ME! I WILL RISE FROM THE DEAD; I WILL LIVE." And here's the promise, Because I live, YOU will live too! "I will impart My life to you." When? Verse 20 says, On that day! What day? "The day of Pentecost, the day I send the Spirit! I will impart My very life, the eternal Divine life of God, to you through My Spirit who will join with your spirit and give you My very Life!" Rom. 8:11, If the Spirit of him who raised Jesus from the dead is living in you, he who raised Christ from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies through his Spirit, who lives in you. When? Not later, not just some day when we get our new bodies, but right now in this body! His life is our life! Now, that's hard enough for us to grasp and we know the whole story, which they didn't, so He gives them another promise:

5. the promise of full realization (20) "On that day, the day the Spirit is actually given, the day of Pentecost, that's when you'll really understand. You'll understand, not how all this can be, but that it is! Once He's in you, you'll realize that we are all One, You and I and the Father, through the Spirit. You'll know that He is in you and so I am in you!" Paul said in Rom. 8:16, The Spirit himself testifies with our spirit that we are God's children. We have an internal witness. We know it's true. We know Jesus is IN us and we are God's children! The Spirit in us tells us it is so! And greatest of all:

6. the promise is for all genuine believers (21) It is for ALL who love Him, not just for a few, not just for some, not just for leaders, but for all. Peter said in Acts 2:38-39, Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins. And you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. The promise is for you and your children and for all who are far off--for all whom the Lord our God will call. It is for every genuine believer, everyone who truly loves Him. But who are those? He says they are the ones who obey Him, who do what He says. He started with that in verse 15. Real believers are not those who say they believe, but those whose actions show that they believe, those who obey what He has said. If you truly love Him, His spirit lives in you and you will obey Him. What a promise Jesus gave, the Promise of the Holy Spirit! But then He went on to talk about:

II. The Program Of The Holy Spirit (22-24) The "other" Judas, the son of James who is also called Thaddeus in other Gospels, interrupted Jesus with:

1. the question: Why not show the world? (22) "If you're the Messiah, the King, why just us? Why just show Your disciples? Why not show everybody? Why not show the whole world?!" The question makes sense. But Jesus doesn't choose to answer it the way he asked it. His answer, in essence, is that:

2. the answer: Full revelation comes only by indwelling Visibly showing Himself alive to the world wouldn't make much difference. The way He planned to show Himself to the world was by indwelling people and transforming them! So, He says that:

a. God will only indwell believers, those who love Him (23) The Father and the Son will come in the person of the Spirit and permanently live, dwell, inside those who truly believe. But:

b. He will not inhabit those who do not love Him (24) He's not going to live in people who don't love Him; hence they won't be able to comprehend Him, to know Him, because:

c. they are unable to receive the Spirit (17) Unbelievers can't see Him; they can't know Him. He will not give them His spirit; He will not reveal Himself to them until they are ready to repent and acknowledge Him as Lord. So, there's the program for this age. Jesus shows the world He is real by living in us and living through us so that others will come to Him. And then they too will receive His Spirit and KNOW. One at a time. Each individually. That's the plan. Then Jesus goes on to explain:

III. The Purpose Of The Holy Spirit (25-27) The Holy Spirit does three important things in our lives. First, as He did for the disciples:

1. He will remind us of what Jesus has taught Peter and James didn't have notebooks and pencils and write down every word Jesus spoke. John didn't have a laptop that he carried around typing up notes on Jesus' sermons. When the Spirit came, He reminded them of the many things Jesus had taught; He brought them back to mind and they wrote many of them down so we could have the Gospels. Of course, He does the same thing for us. We read what Jesus taught in the Bible; we read God's Word day after day and the Spirit reminds us of it at just the right times when we need it. We sometimes call this the process of illumination, bringing the Scriptures to mind, helping us to understand them and apply them to the very situation we are in at the moment. He will do this for us! God speaks to us through His Spirit. And not only that, Jesus said:

2. He will teach us all things we need to know There were a lot of things the disciples needed to know, but Jesus didn't have time to teach. The Spirit added to what Jesus taught. That's why we have the rest of our New Testament. The Holy Spirit showed Luke and Paul and Peter and James and John and Jude other things that they and we, the church, needed to know. We call that process revelation. Today, of course, the Holy Spirit is no longer giving us new Scriptures, but He is continuing to personally reveal and unfold the plan of God in our lives step by step individually as we need to know it. Paul said the Spirit teaches us all things, the deep things of God. He gives us the thoughts of God that we need to have. He gives us the words God wants said, the actions God wants lived out, as we yield to him and let Him live through us. And then Jesus said the Spirit:

3. He will give us Christ's perfect peace We always yank verse 27 out of its context and quote it as though it is referring to peace as a "thing," as though it simply means that He would make them calm in the face of what was going to happen. I think He's saying, "I will not leave you as orphans, but I will leave you with peace, My peace, the person of My Spirit!!" If you think about it, peace is the result of our minds and emotions being totally under the control of the Holy Spirit. Peace is when we think like God thinks and feel like God feels about all that is going on. It's the Divine calm that passes all human understanding, the calm that knows all things are under control and going as planned. That peace comes from Him being in us and in control of us. He IS our peace.

Now I don't know whether you've noticed, but this is really the first time Jesus has actually talked with His disciples about the Holy Spirit and it is His last hour with them. He has held off until now, but as the chapter closes, He tells them why He shared this precious promise of the Spirit with them:

IV. The Purpose Of Jesus In Sharing This Promise (28-31) First:

1. it was to give the disciples joy (28) He was leaving and they were sad, stricken because of it. If they understood that He was going to the Father and that the Spirit was coming, they would be glad. He told them moments later in John 16:22, Now is your time of grief, but I will see you again and you will rejoice, and no one will take away your joy. That permanent joy would be the presence of the Spirit. Second:

2. it would verify the disciples' faith later on (29) After the Spirit came, Peter stood up and said in Acts 2:32-33, God has raised this Jesus to life, and we are all witnesses of the fact. Exalted to the right hand of God, he has received from the Father the promised Holy Spirit and has poured out what you now see and hear. When the promise came to pass, they recognized it and it confirmed their faith in Jesus. They knew He had sent the Spirit just as He said He would! Finally:

3. it was to give the disciples hope, though time was short (30-31) He had only a few more precious moments. He was already getting up to clear things away and leave. In just hours, Satan was coming to the garden to do his worst. But before they experienced all of that, Jesus wanted leave them with this blessed assurance: "I will not leave you as orphans. I will come to you. I will send you My Spirit to be your Counselor, your Advocate, your Comforter. The time grows short...trust Me."

The story is told in Beams of Light of a timid prisoner who committed a minor infraction and was sentenced to spend the night in a dark, isolated cell, deep inside the prison walls. The inmates feared the silent, total darkness of that cell almost as much as death itself. As the man was led down to it, the dank and loathsome air seemed to choke him. The heavy door clanked shut, and he knew a long, lonely night was before him- far beyond the sound of any human voice. As he sank to the floor in despair, he thought he heard the sound of footsteps. Then a voice said softly, "I'm the prison chaplain. I knew you could not stand it alone, so I've come to be with you. I will be here as long as you are." Because the grateful prisoner knew that another person was with him in the darkness, his lonely chamber became a place of rest. My friend, when the circumstances of life seem awfully dark and you feel awfully alone, when despair rises up within you, Jesus says, "I knew you could not stand it alone so I've come to be with you; My Spirit is in you. And I will be here as long as you are!"

The Vine And The Branches - Ch. 15

We are still in the Upper Room that Thursday night before the cross or perhaps on the way walking out of the city. In chapter 14, Jesus assured His disciples of their future home in heaven that He was leaving to prepare and then He assured them that He would not leave them alone, that He would send them the Holy Spirit to live in them and be with them forever. Now, in chapter 15, Jesus moves on to address the issue of relationships. He knew that this band of men and those who would later follow them would form a distinct community. Out of all the world, they would be the people of God, His assembly, His Church. And in this last hour with them, He wanted to define for them the three key relationships that would characterize their lifestyle from here on as His followers, their relationship with Him, with one another and with the world around them. Of course, they are now us, so we begin the chapter by learning about:

I. Our Relationship To Christ, and to explain it He used a common, but special, image to describe it visually, The Vine And The Branches (1-8) Vineyards and the keeping of grapevines is something that was everywhere in Israel. In fact, the symbol of the vine was God's special symbol for the nation of Israel itself. He describes her as His vine or His vineyard in many passages of the Old Testament, for instance Ps. 80:8-9, You brought a vine out of Egypt; you drove out the nations and planted it. You cleared the ground for it, and it took root and filled the land. A great golden vine, the national emblem of Israel, was displayed on the very front of the Temple itself. But His vine, His people Israel, had brought forth bad fruit, Isaiah said. Hosea said that God's vine brought forth fruit for itself. She was a fruitless, faithless vine that was about to be cut down. So, there is no way that the disciples missed the symbolism when Jesus said that:

1. He Himself is the true Vine Israel was false. She was not being His people So God was now planting another Vine in the person of His Son. The vine is the living organism of people that God is growing in the world, Jesus' followers, the Church. But it is not just a group of people by themselves, rather it is a group of people formed out of their personal union with Him. Notice that:

2. He is the whole Vine, trunk, branches, leaves and fruit, the whole thing. We are the little branches of Him! We have no separate identity! It's not Him and us. God has one Vine, Jesus, and we are all the hundreds of little leafy branches He is sprouting from His trunk. Paul used a similar concept. He said that we are all together the Body of Christ. Christ has ONE body; He IS the Body. But we are all individual members or body parts of that one body. Same concept. Now, His concept is that:

3. the life of the Vine flows into and through the branches (us) to produce fruit The life-giving sap comes up from the roots of the vine through the trunk and out into each branch causing it to live and sprout green leaves. So, His life is flowing into each one of us who have been joined to Him; that's how we live. We get life from Him. And the sap in this figure is the Holy Spirit whom He has placed in each of us. His life-giving Spirit is IN us and flows through us for a purpose, to produce fruit, grapes! That's what vines are for; they're not like flowers who are supposed to look pretty. They're supposed to produce grapes for the owner's use, so he can have wine to drink. But any good farmer knows that you can't just let a vine grow untended all by itself or it will eventually produce less and less. That's why Jesus said:

4. the Gardener (God the Father) cuts off dead branches which have no life and so bear no fruit On this vine of God's, there are branches that look sort of like branches, but they're dead. No sap is flowing into them so they are not green and living and they don't bear any fruit. Any vine-dresser knows these dead branches have to be cut off the vine and thrown away or burned. Well, in God's vine there are also some people that look like the rest of us, but they're dead. They have no connection to the Vine; the Holy Spirit does not live in them. They profess to be followers of Jesus, but they have no real spiritual life and so they produce no real spiritual fruit. Judas Iscariot would be a case in point and it's quite possible that the disciples thought of him instantly when Jesus said this. He was with them, but He wasn't one of them. He was not "clean", Jesus had said earlier, and in verse 3 He repeated that all of them were clean; none of them were dead branches. But across our community and our country and our world there are people who sit in churches and who say when asked, "I am a Christian" but who have never met Jesus Christ personally. They don't have His life, His eternal Spirit in them. They are professors of Christ, but not possessors, and Jesus Himself warned that there would be many like that. In the end, these dead branches are cut off from the tree and get burned, unless they find true salvation first! But there is another thing the Gardener does:

5. He also prunes living branches to bear more fruit You see, that's His goal. He wants much fruit! So, he takes a good, living branch and he clips off a little where it tries to grow too many leaves or too many sub-branches here and there. I remember when we used to grow tomato plants in our back yard. One of our members now in heaven, old Sam Weisel who used to grow 100 tomato plants, taught me many years ago that when you plant your tomato plants, you have to watch and every time you see a new third branch starting to grow out of the middle of a joint, it's called a sucker and you have to pinch it off. If you don't, the plant will pour its energy and nutrients into that branch and make lots of leaves but little fruit. Left to itself, that tomato vine becomes a huge bush of branches with small fruits. But, if you pinch off the suckers so that all the life goes into the main stem, it brings forth huge, heavy tomatoes. And that's what God is interested in; He doesn't want a pretty looking vine with bushy symmetrical branches; He wants a heavy crop of fruit! Now, what is the fruit God produces through us, His branches? Well, Paul talked about the fruit of the Spirit or the character qualities that reflect the presence of Christ in us. He also talked about the fruit of good works, deeds that reflect the presence of Christ in us. But at the bottom line, he says in Col. 1:6 ...All over the world this gospel is bearing fruit and growing, just as it has been doing among you... He means people are being saved and added to the body, to the vine. The real fruit of a Christian is another Christian. His life flows out through us, through our character and our actions and our words to bring others to faith and make them part of the Vine! So, He prunes us. Using His Word, using other believers, using circumstances, using suffering, He clips away our flesh, our dead sections, to make us better channels for His purpose of fruit production. And the reason in verse 8 is that:

6. much fruit glorifies God Old Sam had the best and biggest tomato crop of anybody I ever knew. He had a reputation for it. People said, "What a gardener!" You see, much fruit brings glory to the Gardener and that's what God wants. It is to His glory that we, his church, are living and growing and producing much fruit, winning many to Jesus Christ. That's why verse 7 says, He will give whatever we ask to get it! If what we ask is focused on His goal of fruit-bearing, He'll give us whatever we need. We can bank on it! But this whole illustration boils down to a single:

The Point: We are called to abide in Christ (4) The branch can't produce any fruit at all by itself. The life of the vine flows through the branch and into the fruit. The branch has to abide in the vine, to remain deeply connected and attached with its central core open wide to the supply of life-giving sap the Vine supplies. That's our calling, to abide, to remain deeply connected to Christ with the core of our being yielded wide open to the life-producing power of His Spirit who will produce the fruit. S. D. Gordon tells of a spring storm that broke a large limb on his cherry tree. Although it hung by a very slender strand, to his surprise the blossoms came anyway. Later some fruit began to grow as it did on the other branches. He noticed, however, that only those in full contact with the tree bore "much fruit," while the partially severed branch produced only a scanty supply. As believers, we must be careful about our spiritual connection, making sure we are fully abiding in Christ. The fruit we bear, whether much or little, tells the story. The more deeply we abide, the more fruit we bear in our character, in our choices and in our converts. How deep is your connection? How thorough is your dependence on Him? How much of His life are you letting flow through you or are you just pursuing your own goals and dreams, living the way you want? We are called to abide in Him! And as we learn to abide, it will impact:

II. Our Relationship To One Another (9-17) and that's what Jesus goes on to talk about next. He says:

1. we are to abide in His love (9) [Read 9-11] Here He sets up a paradigm for us. The way the Father loved Him is the way He loves us. The way He was able to deeply abide in the Father's love is the way we are to deeply abide in His love. And the way:

a. we abide in His love is by obeying His commands (10) Jesus drank so deeply of the Father's love for Him that it permeated every moment and situation of His life. He was so full of the Father's love that He could only do what pleased Him; He would run to do the Father's will, to keep His commands. Now Jesus says we are to abide in His love, to drink so deeply of His love for us, to be so aware and so full of it, that we can only do what pleases Him, that we run to do His will, to obey His commands! Our deep, deep conviction and experience of that great love is what causes us to bear the fruit of good works and others won. And, Jesus adds:

b. as we abide in His love, we will experience His joy (11) Living out of His love in obedience will fill us with a deep and abiding joy, His joy, the joy He had in doing the Father's will. That joy will be ours; our joy will be brought to fullness and completeness as we live a life saturated with His love fleshed out in doing His will. And that will lead us to complete the third part of that paradigm: The Father loved Him. He loved us the way the Father loved Him and so He says that:

2. we are to love one another the way He has loved us (12) That's His command. If we love Him, that's what we'll do. His vine, His people, will be an assembly unlike any other in the world, a group who are so filled with His love that they love each other the way He loved them. How is that? They love each other:

a. sacrificially (13) - He gave His life for us, so out of His love we lay down our lives for each other. Not just literally being willing to die for each other under persecution, but laying them down for each other day after day in a myriad of small ways where we die to self and choose our brother or sister instead. And His people love each other:

b. intimately (14-15) - He shared His heart with us; that's what He's doing here in the Upper Room. We are not just people He owns and orders around. We are close confidants; He shares the secrets of His heart with us. He shows us what He's doing, His heart, His plan. He is intimate with us and includes us in His purpose. So, out of His love we will develop a deep intimacy with one another as we together pursue His purpose. We will have a bond of fellowship deeper than anything the world knows as together we bask in His love. And that common purpose of His heart is actually what He has already said:

3. He has chosen and appointed us to go and bear lasting fruit (16) Eternal fruit. Souls touched by His love through us and drawn to find salvation in Him. He chose us for that purpose and to that end. He has sent us to that end. He'll give us anything we ask in prayer, anything we need, to that end. That's His heart; that's what He's about and as we abide in His love, that will become our purpose. But Jesus again repeated His key:

The Point: We are commanded to love each other (17) Pure and simple: love each other. It's not optional, not only if we want to or it's easy. It's not selective, only for a few and not others. It's not a request; it's a command, an order and if we love Him, we'll do it. When the missionary explorer to Africa, Frederick Arnot, was on a trek through the tall grass with a group of his black converts, a lion suddenly sprang out at one of the young men. Instantly, Arnot pushed the youth to the ground and covered him with his own body. The animal landed right next to them. For some unexplainable reason, the beast did not attack the missionary, but retreated without harming anyone. When the chief of the tribe heard about the incident, he said, "I'd go anywhere with a white man who would put his own body between a lion and his black friend." It came naturally. He didn't have to think about it. Love was just there and it was a testimony to the whole tribe. And that brings up the third point that Jesus addresses:

III. Our Relationship To The World (18-27) Here is an important theme of Jesus' teaching that we have all but forgotten today here in the US. However, our Chinese brothers and sisters understand it well. Our brethren who live in the Muslim world know it first-hand. Jesus told us clearly that:

1. we are hated by the world (18-19) The world we live in, the culture and non-believing people all around us, are part of Satan's system. We find it strange, for instance, that our culture will tolerate almost any kind of religious belief or moral lifestyle, anything EXCEPT evangelical Bible-believing Christianity. There is room for all, tolerance for everyone's views and beliefs, except ours. It's frustrating. Why is that? Jesus told us plainly that the world at large will hate us. We may live in a place and a time where we are tolerated, but what is the record of history? Through the ages, true followers of Jesus Christ have often been imprisoned, persecuted, killed, thrown to lions, burned at the stake, and shot, simply for being Christians. The world at large hates the church; we should expect it. Why?

2. we do not belong to the world We're in it, but we're not of it. We don't belong. We don't act like the rest of the world. We don't do what they do. We don't hold their values and support their actions. We stand for love and forgiveness and for an exclusive faith in Jesus Christ that will not accept anything but itself. We're not citizens of this world; we don't belong here; we belong to heaven. And so, Jesus warned us clearly that:

3. we will be persecuted by the world (20-21) Did they persecute Him? Did they mock Him? Did they arrest Him? Did they beat Him? Did they kill Him? He's our Master and we're not greater than Him. That's what will happen to us, His followers. We should not be surprised by it. We should expect it; Jesus taught that repeatedly. We should expect our faith to bring us discrimination and scoffing and harm because we're different and we don't belong. But as we skip down to verse 26, we see His real:

The Point: We are sent to testify to the world (26-27) That's our relationship: we testify about Jesus Christ to the world. We, through the power of the Spirit working in us, tell the world who Jesus is and how He loves them. We show the world His love for them in how we love one another. We declare to them that He is alive and living in us. And we invite them to be grafted into His Vine, to become His people.

While conducting meetings for a regiment of British soldiers in Egypt, Dr. Stuart Holden became acquainted with a big sergeant who was a shining, effervescent Christian. Holden asked him how he had been brought to the Savior. The soldier recounted his conversion. "There is a private in the company," he said, "who was converted in Malta before the regiment came to Egypt. We gave that fellow an awful time. On one terrible night he came in very tired and wet. But before getting into bed, he knelt down to pray. My boots were soaked with water and covered with mud, and I let him have it with one on the side of his head, and struck him with the second on the other side. But he just went on praying. The next morning, I found those boots beautifully polished and standing by the side of my bed. That was his reply to me, and it just broke my heart. I was saved that day." My friend, Jesus is the Vine and as we abide deeply in Him and His Spirit flows through us, we'll bear much fruit. His character will shine out through us. We'll love each other radically. The world around us will hate it and will mock us and make fun of us and sometimes hit us with dirty boots or lawsuits or even prison sentences, just for being who we are. Yet some of them will be touched by what they see; they'll be convinced that Jesus is real and fall on their knees in repentance and be grafted into the growing Vine! And Jesus will be glorified! Abide in Him; love one another and you will testify to the world!

John: The Gospel Of Life

The Final Promises - Ch. 16

We are still in Jesus' final hours with the disciples as they leave the Upper Room. He is winding up this special evening of instruction He has spent with them. And as He closes it in chapter 16, He leaves them with what I've called His final promises, the last and final things that He wanted to assure them of. The first one is really a continuation of the conversation

He was having with them at the end of chapter 15 about how the world is going to hate them because they are different. Now, He spells out more clearly what is going to happen by giving them:

I. The Promise Of Coming Persecution (1-4) He shares with them plainly:

1. the depths that it would reach in the future I already shared with you how serious a thing it was to a Jew to be put out of the synagogue. It meant to be cut off and despised by the entire community; nobody would even talk to you. He warned them and us that our culture, our community, will often react against us. In fact, as crazy as it may seem to us, there will be circumstances where very religious people will think they are serving God by killing us. Stephen was stoned first, the first martyr. James was put to death with a sword. All the disciples except John died martyr's deaths. All because religious people thought they were serving God! Paul testified that before his conversion in Acts 26:9-10, "I too was convinced that I ought to do all that was possible to oppose the name of Jesus of Nazareth. And that is just what I did in Jerusalem. On the authority of the chief priests I put many of the saints in prison, and when they were put to death, I cast my vote against them. In the end, he himself was beheaded at Rome. The spotty persecution of these first decades gave way to open and legal persecution throughout the Roman Empire from 250-313 AD. Thousands died before Constantine the Emperor himself became a Christian. It has recurred down through the centuries time after time and it is still occurring today. Last Wednesday I had an email asking prayer for Zhamal, who came to Christ in Afghanistan (I believe). He evidently fled after his conversion and his parents warned him clearly not to come home, saying it would be their religious duty to end his life! All communication was severed. Now his family has asked him to come home because his uncle is dying and needs him and has guaranteed his safety for this purpose. Please pray for him and for their salvation! But this is exactly what Jesus promised would happen! In fact, as He ended this conversation a few minutes later He predicted:

2. the scattering that would occur that very night (32) He would be arrested that very night and they would all flee away from Him and run to hide because their lives were in danger. He told them plainly and did not hide it from them. Why?

3. the reason for this warning: so they would know that God is in control So it wouldn't take them by surprise. So they wouldn't think that this is the end, when it happened. So they would remember He had told them ahead of time and realize that their suffering and even death did not mean failure. And, at the bottom line, look at verse (33). It was to give them peace, the certain knowledge that He was in control and all things were happening according to His plan and purpose. They would know that, even though they faced pressure, tribulation, and oppression, that Jesus has already conquered the world and is in charge of all that happens. It's part of His plan and serves His purpose. In 1949 when Mao Tse Tung took over China, thousands of believers died or were imprisoned in the name of a religion called Communism. Today there are more than 100 million believers in that land and they are planning and preparing to send out a minimum of 100,000 Chinese missionaries to the countries of the 10/40 Window that lie between them and Jerusalem. My friend, suffering for the Gospel is inevitable. It will come. Jesus promised it! But don't let it shake your faith; He knows what He's doing. Through it He is building His church! He also promised that and said that the gates of hell would not stand before it! But now we come to the second of Jesus' final promises:

II. The Promise Of The Ministry Of The Spirit (5-15) The logical question is, "OK, if the world is going to hate us and reject us and even kill us, how on earth are we going to accomplish anything? How will anyone ever believe in You?" So, Jesus picks up again on His promise in chapter 14 to send the Holy Spirit to be in them and explains what the actual ministry of the Spirit will be. He starts with:

1. the absolute necessity of His ministry (5-7) The Holy Spirit HAS to come. Jesus HAD to leave so the Spirit could come. Without the Holy Spirit living in each believer, we would still have what the Old Testament shows us, failure upon failure of the people of God and a handful of genuine believers in one place. It is the Holy Spirit who propelled the church out into the world to the ends of the earth. It is the Holy Spirit who touched the very enemies of the Gospel and drew them to salvation and transformation, who took "Sauls" and turned them into "Pauls". Today evangelical believers number more than 700 million and more than 2 billion people in the world would identify themselves as Christians, despite all of the suffering and persecution. This has happened because of the Holy Spirit's:

2. His ministry of conviction to unbelievers (8-11) If it was the disciples' job to convince people that Jesus died for their sins and that He's alive and they should come to Him for salvation, the church would never have gotten off the ground! 1Cor 2:14, The man without the Spirit does not accept the things that come from the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him, and he cannot understand them, because they are spiritually discerned. We could talk until we were out of breath and nobody would fully understand or receive what we were saying. They can't; the Bible says in their natural state human beings are spiritually dead, cut off from God and from spiritual understanding; they are without God and without hope in the world. Our task would be impossible without the Holy Spirit! But Jesus promised that when He came, He would do what we cannot; He would have a ministry of conviction to unbelievers as we share with them. He would convince them internally of truth in three areas. He would convict them:

a. about their sin of not believing in God's Son We can tell them the message that God loves them so much that He sent His Only Son to die in their place, that He sacrificed His dear Son for them and how could they ignore such a gift, but it is only through the Holy Spirit that they become convinced of the truth of John 3:18, Whoever believes in him is not condemned, but whoever does not believe stands condemned already because he has not believed in the name of God's one and only Son. The Spirit of God takes the words of truth and sinks them deep into the soul so that a person knows "I stand condemned before God because I have not believed!" Then, the Spirit convicts them:

b. about the righteousness of God's Son whom they can't see We can tell them that He was the pure, innocent Lamb, without spot or blemish, who didn't deserve to die, that in Him was no sin and He knew no sin, yet He was made to be sin for them and to bear their sin. But He is not here for us or for them to see. Only the Spirit can take those words and show them Jesus as He really is, so that they know the truth of 1 Pet 3:18, For Christ died for sins once for all, the righteous for the unrighteous, to bring you to God. And then the Spirit convicts them:

c. about their coming judgment by God's Victorious Son We can tell them that one day they will stand before Jesus Christ as their Judge, that the Cross proves His victory over Satan, and that one day every sinner will face eternal punishment, just as Satan will. But only the Spirit can take those words and make them know their lostness so that they fall on their knees and cry out as the Philippian jailer did, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?"

William Mackay had been brought up by a godly, praying mother; but when he became a medical student in the local university, he renounced his early training. Joining a group called the "Hell Club," Mackay assisted one evening in a mock celebration of the Lord's Supper. Sacrilegiously he raised a glass of wine and said, "Behold the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ!" Suddenly he turned pale and trembled from head to foot. Setting the glass down, he fled from the place in terror and spent the night pacing the streets muttering, "I'm guilty of the blood of Christ!" By daybreak he had made his way to his parents' home. Under deep conviction of sin, he went to his room and began praying for God's mercy. When his mother heard him, she came and threw her arms around his neck, exclaiming, "Are you actually praying, my son?" Then with her help he accepted Christ as his Savior. Years later He would write, "We praise thee O God, for Thy Spirit of Light, Who has shown us our Savior and scattered our night. Hallelujah Thine the glory! Hallelujah Amen! Hallelujah, Thine the glory! Revive us again!" Only the Spirit of God can turn a member of the "Hell Club" into a hymnwriter! That's His ministry! You see, I was a member of the "Hell Club"; we all were! Until the Spirit of God showed me MY sin, until He showed me that pure and holy Jesus took MY place and the punishment I deserved on the cross; until He showed me that I was eternally lost and in deep need of mercy. I came so under conviction that I cried out to Him and He came into MY life. That's the ministry Jesus promised the Spirit would have in people's lives even as we go forth in His Name to share His Word, even in a world that hates us! Then He went on to emphasize the Spirit's:

3. His ministry of revelation to the disciples (12-15) In other words, Jesus promised that He:

a. Jesus would continue to speak to them through His Spirit The Holy Spirit who would indwell them, would speak to their hearts and minds and that would be His means now of conveying truth to them. Do note that there is a word missing at the end of verse 13. In the Greek it literally says:

b. the Spirit would lead them into all THE truth This is really the promise on which our New Testament is based. Look back to 14:26, He will remind you of everything I have said, that is, the Gospels, the historical portion of the New Testament. He will teach you all things, that is, in the Epistles, the doctrinal portion of the New Testament, all the things that Paul and Peter and James learned and taught that came later. And now here, He will show you things to come, that is, the prophetic portions of Scripture, like Revelation. And there we have it, our whole New Testament, all THE truth that would be delivered to us once for all for all time. The Spirit would cause it to be given, written and recorded. And now for us, He applies the truth to our lives; He illumines it; He makes it real to us, shows us how it applies to our situation. Jesus continues to speak, even to US through the Spirit and, as He noted in verse 14:

c. the Spirit's purpose is always to glorify Christ As He take the things of Christ and conveys them to us and speaks them to our lives, we praise Jesus! He is always with us! There is no spirit of Mohammed living in the hearts of his followers speaking his truth to them. There is no spirit of Buddha indwelling his followers to guide them. They're dead, but Jesus is alive and speaking to us day after day through His Spirit. What a promise! Then finally, Jesus gives them His last promise:

III. The Promise Of His Certain Resurrection (16-28) You can see through all of this long discourse:

1. the continuing confusion of the disciples (16-19) The language implies that this questioning back and forth between them went on for some time. Indeed, it had likely been going on through the evening as Jesus was speaking and, of course, they were eating and there were long pauses in the conversation that were not recorded. They could not grasp what Jesus was trying to tell them; they could not comprehend it. Especially this phrase, in a little while you will see me no more; then after a little while you will see me. So, as He concludes speaking with them, we have:

2. the clear explanation of Jesus (20-22) They may not have understood it right at that moment, but within hours they would see clearly what He was saying. That's why He told them to listen carefully. He was telling them that:

a. they would have a time of grief because of His death It would begin that very night as He was arrested and they were scattered. It would deepen in the morning as he was condemned in the public square and crucified. By tomorrow afternoon they would see Him laid in a tomb and their hearts would be overwhelmed with grief and sorrow. But He was assuring them that:

b. they would see Him alive and their pain would be lost in joy! Sunday would come! The third day He would rise again as He promised and they would see Him and, just like a mother who forgets the horrible pain of childbirth because she is filled with the joy of the new child in her arms, their time of sorrow would be forgotten and lost in the joy of seeing Him alive! And, He was explaining to them that:

c. after that He would return to the Father in heaven (28) He would ascend to heaven to be seated at the right hand of the Father. He would be alive forever and would eventually take them to be with Him.

It was this promise of His certain resurrection that He wanted most of all to instill in them, to assure them that He would live, that He would rise. To encourage them NOT to believe their eyes as He was crucified and laid in the tomb, and give up in despair, but to wait only a little while and see His promise fulfilled in resurrection life! When the women got to the empty tomb, the angels told them, He is risen as He said! and Luke adds, "Then they remembered His words!" They didn't comprehend it that night, nor the next day, but oh, on Sunday this promise came flooding back into their minds and faith was born. They believed in the risen, living Christ and their lives were never the same! Nothing could take away their joy! Not all the persecutions they would endure, not all the hatred and even martyrdoms that would come. They took the Good News to the ends of the earth and gladly died for the joy that was set before them, the joy that all of His promises were true. And He leaves them with a:

3. the new exhortation to pray (23-27) Now that Jesus has risen and gone back to heaven, we have a new way to pray, a new practice:

a. we now ask the Father in Jesus' Name We don't need a priest; we don't need any offering, any sacrifice; we don't need any intermediary to go between. We go straight to the Father in prayer; we come directly into His presence in the Name of His Risen Son. Now that doesn't mean that when we pray, Jesus has to step in with the Father for us up there in heaven. That's not what His present ministry is about, though sometimes we hear it taught that way, that Jesus has to be always pleading with the Father for us. No, Jesus said:

b. the Father Himself already loves us because we love Jesus We come to Him in the Name of the Son He loves, as followers of the Son He loves, as believers in the Son He loves, and He answers us in the name of the Son He loves!

c. the Father gives to us what we ask and by doing that, fills us with joy. We come in Jesus' Name, for His sake, and time after time we receive in Jesus' Name, for His sake.

One of the great prayer warriors of the last century was Cameron Thompson. The following quote is from his book [Master Secrets Of Prayer?]: "God's people must learn to pray--and soon. Has not our God bound Himself by the golden girdle of a thousand breathtaking promises to answer the feeblest prayers of the faintest saints--if it be for His glory and signed by the name of His Son? No one has ever been accused of praying too boldly... The Bible reveals no limit set to the number of answers that may be obtained. Those who retire to lonely spots, who... weep with their faces buried in the midnight pillow, ... with immeasurable desire for lost souls, who dig for gold before the sun has risen--all these find the accumulated love of God in a golden cascade of incredible blessing. If answers are delayed, we wait along the wharves of hope, and at last the triple sails of treasure-laden ships appear across the horizons of faith, and as the great packages are carried to shore, we are found weeping with unspeakable joy... My heart is enlarged and I cannot explain to anyone anywhere what God will do for a praying heart. But... often out of nights where the darkness could be felt, His face has slowly risen before me, the face of a Mighty Victor; and He has... said, looking through and through me, 'If ye shall ask ANYTHING in My name, I will do it.'" My friend, in this world you will have trouble. It was His last promise in verse 28. But in the same breath He also promised that based on His victory at the Cross, you can have complete peace. You have the Holy Spirit to bring conviction to the people of this world to whom He sends you and you have the marvelous unlimited privilege of praying in His Name to the Father who loves you and will do whatever you ask. What more could He leave us with?

The High Priestly Prayer - Ch. 17

As Jesus and His disciples are leaving the Upper Room that last Thursday night, He has finished His last instructions to His disciples. And now as we come to chapter 17, either just before they go out or somewhere on the way out of the city, Jesus does what we would expect Him to do. He stops to pray with them. And what a prayer it is! This is the true Lord's Prayer. The one we call the Lord's prayer is really the Disciples' prayer, the prayer He taught them. This one is His own, sometimes called His great High-Priestly Prayer. You know, you can learn a lot about a man by listening to what he says when he's about to die! When Cecil Rhodes was about to die, he cried out, "I've found much in Africa - diamonds, gold, and land are mine, but now I must leave them all behind. Not a thing I've gained can be taken with me. Eternal treasures that abide I have not sought; therefore, I actually have nothing at all!" The prospect of dying brings out what matters most deeply in the heart. The things that Jesus prayed about here are those of most profound importance to Him and therefore things that should be of profound importance to us. And some of them may be surprising! His prayer divides easily into three parts. As He lifts His eyes to heaven and begins:

I. Jesus Prays For Himself (1-5), but not like we might! As He comes to His Father in Heaven, He prays first:

1. for His glorification now on earth (1-4) What does that mean? Verse 4 says He brought glory to the Father by completing the work the Father had given Him to do. The more that He obeyed and fulfilled and completed, the more He glorified the Father. When he prays, Father, glorify Your Son that your Son may glorify You!, He is praying:

a. that He might fully complete the work given him to do That is, He is praying to go to the cross and die there! He is praying that all of the Father's will for His life would be accomplished and that meant even the death of the cross! While we would probably be praying to be spared from the cross or at least to die quickly and feel little pain, none of that mattered to Him. Only one thing mattered: that the Father's will be carried out to its fullest extent in His life, regardless of pain or suffering! And why did He pray that? Was it so He could get a "well done!", so He could get a reward for Himself? No, according to verse 2, He prayed to go to the cross and finish the Father's work so:

b. that He might give eternal life to all who are given Him He prayed to die so that every last person who would ever believe might have their sins laid on Him and be forgiven and live forever! Or to make it more personal, as the songwriter put it, when He was on the cross, I was on His mind! He was thinking about me! He was praying for me! He was praying that He might endure to death to the end that I might have eternal life! And eternal life is not just existing forever. People do that anyway! Every human being, once conceived, will be alive, will exist forever! Eternal life is not how long you live! The word eternal means having no beginning and no end, perpetual existence in both directions. Eternal life is the very life of God, uncaused, self-existent, indestructible, ceaseless being, the life that God has. And He prayed to die so He could give His very life to me, so that all of the millions who believe could be given His eternal life and, He adds in verse 3, so:

c. that they may know intimately the Father and the Son To have His life is to be joined to His Person, to be made one with Him in spirit. It is therefore to know Him in the deepest, most intimate way possible, to be capable of having a relationship with Him where we are no longer two, but one, He in us and we in Him! In other words, He prayed to die so that He would not have to live without me, without you, without all the millions that the Father had given to Him, but that we would all be joined to Him in one body forever, His eternal bride! And only then, after He had prayed to complete the Father's purpose on earth, did He pray:

2. for restoration to His pre-incarnate glory in heaven in verse (5) Glory is more than a kind of bright shining splendor, the way Jesus' robe glowed white on the Mount of Transfiguration. Paul wrote in Phil. 2:9-11 (NASB) ...God highly exalted Him, and bestowed on Him the name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of those who are in heaven, and on earth, and under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. That's the glory Jesus was praying for, to be returned to His exalted position in heaven as Lord over all, and the Father answered His prayer!

Now we're just the opposite of Jesus. We're big on being glorified in Heaven with Him, but not so much on completing all His purpose for us on earth, especially if it involves suffering! Rick Warren, the pastor of Saddleback Church who wrote "The Purpose Driven Life," found a Bible verse that he says he would like as his own epitaph: Acts 13:36, ...when David had served God's purpose in his own generation, he fell asleep... He says he prays to serve all God's purpose, to complete all God's will, everything that God wants to do through him and then die and enjoy the glory. That's not a bad way to learn to pray. That's how Jesus prayed! Too many of us are focused on OUR eternal reward instead of on HIS eternal reward, His glorious inheritance in the saints! He counts His inheritance, not in gold and jewels and mansions and crowns, but in people, in receiving all that have been given to Him in every generation until He comes! And giving them to Him needs to be our life's purpose in the generation in which we live. What are YOU living for? How are YOU praying? Well, now we come to the second part of the prayer, the part where:

II. Jesus Prays For His Disciples (6-19) For the 11 men gathered right there around Him, His own trusted and trained few. He prays for them:

1. because of their special position (6-11a) These men were to form the core of the church that Jesus was going to build; they were the foundation layer of the plan God was going to implement for the rest of human history; they were the ones who would begin the process of taking the Good News of Jesus to the uttermost parts of the earth. Jesus had invested three years of intensive personal discipleship training in them and now it's done. He says:

a. they belonged to the Father through faith in the Son They genuinely believed. They knew He came from God. They accepted His words as truth. They alone, out of all the world, believed in Him and belonged to Him. But He realized that:

b. they were being left behind in a world which hated them He was going to the Father, but they would be left on earth in a hostile environment, a world which would hate them and try to kill them, to eradicate them and wipe out their message. The fate of the whole enterprise for which the Son would die would lie in their hands. They needed special prayer! So, Jesus prayed three things for them. First, He prayed:

2. for their protection by the Father's power (11b-12) In essence, He prayed for them what He prayed for Himself, that all of them would be protected by God's almighty power, the power of the name of Jesus, until they had completed all of the will of God, everything God intended to accomplish through them in their lives. He was obviously not praying that they would all be totally safe from harm and die of old age in their beds. Every one of them suffered severely from persecution and most of them personally made it far into foreign territory with the Gospel. James was the first to die, in Jerusalem at Herod's hand just a few years later. Peter was crucified in Rome upside down. Thomas was martyred in India. Every one of them except John died a martyr's death, and even he was exiled. So, His prayer was obviously not simply for physical protection, but that none would be lost like Judas was, that none would go astray and become apostate, that none would perish eternally, that all would be one in their common faith and identity, one body. He prayed that all would be preserved to fulfill their purpose in their generation and then be part of the eternal Kingdom. And they were. But then He prayed for another thing:

3. for their permeation by the Son's joy (13) This is not to be some grim enterprise where these faithful few press on in their suffering with gritted teeth. He prays that the full measure of His joy would be in them, that they would be filled and overflowing with it! Now what was His joy? Heb. 12:2, Let us fix our eyes on Jesus, the author and perfecter of our faith, who for the joy set before him endured the cross, scorning its shame, and sat down at the right hand of the throne of God. What was that joy that was set before Him that allowed him to endure the cross? Again, it was YOU; it was ME; it was ALL that the Father had given Him being with Him in glory! The joy of knowing that all these millions of His people would be with Him sustained Him through the cross and that's the same joy that will sustain us. When we are sure that His purpose will be accomplished in our lives and that through our labors and sufferings He is getting the desire of His heart, that His dream is coming true, that ALL His people are being brought to Him through us, we are filled with a joy that nothing can wipe out! And then He prayed for a third thing:

4. for their preservation by the Father's Truth (14-19) There is another kind of protection they needed. The Evil One has many ways to destroy God's people and one of the most cunning, and yet common, is to lead them astray into error. To cause them to doubt or misunderstand or ignore portions of God's Word and to begin to behave like the world around them and eventually be absorbed by it. Jesus prayed that these would be preserved by the Father's truth, by the Truth of His Word and so remain set apart to His purpose. Just think, what if some of the 11 had drifted in their beliefs into some of the things that people in modern day churches have come to believe? What if they had fallen into the error that all religions are paths to God, that Jesus was just one Divine teacher or the belief that human beings are basically good and if they live well, they will go to heaven? What if they had become like the world saying that sexual immorality is OK; God doesn't mind!? Where would the church be today? They were the foundation layer, the ones to whom all generations of believers to follow would look and listen; they needed to be preserved in the truth and set apart from the influence of the world. So, Jesus prayed for them and they were! They died martyr's deaths, standing true to Jesus and His teachings at the cost of their very lives. What a heritage we have!

But then we come to the last part of Jesus' prayer, which is for us the most important, because now:

III. Jesus Prays For Us (20-26) [Read 20] That's us! You and me! All who have ever believed, have come to faith through the word of the apostles which we have written down for safekeeping in our New Testament. On that night before the cross, YOU and I were on Jesus' mind, and look carefully at what He prayed for us! It is really telling that the first thing on His heart was to pray:

1. for our unity with one another (21-23) Jesus never intended that there literally be thousands of denominations among His followers separate from one another. One counselor has described that as "multiple personality disorder in the body of Christ"! Yet this is something Jesus has had to allow because throughout history such large portions of His church have become cold, dead and apostate and He has had to have groups of the faithful break away and start over again. But there's no putting it back together now and besides, it's not organizational unity that He prayed for. It is spiritual unity. He prayed that our unity as His followers:

a. that it would be like that of the Father and Son Just as I am in You and You are in Me... The oneness of being, the full unity of purpose, mind and heart that the Father and Son had. He prayed that kind of unity would be ours, that we would literally be ONE body on earth and He said it three times in those few verses! And He prayed:

b. that it would result from the glory of the common mission given to us in verse 22. The Father gave the Son His glory through the mission of the cross, the glory of redeeming all who belong to Him. And He gave the glory of participating in that mission to us and prayed that it would result in our unity. You know, that's when I find Christians most united! When they're talking about their favorite doctrines or discussing difficult passages of Scripture they divide and separate easily. When they're talking about the music styles they prefer in worship or the color of the new carpet the church is buying, they divide quickly. But just put them on a short-term missions team together and watch the differences disappear! If you want true unity, focus on the heart of God for the world and you'll find it. Jesus prayed for unity out of that and He prayed:

c. that it would be brought to a perfect completion in verse 23. I think He realized there would be struggles in this area, that there would be times and periods of dividedness in His body, but He prays that God would eventually perfect that spiritual unity, bring it to a real completion. I hope that what we see today is part of the Father's answer to that prayer. Every month I get together to eat and pray with local pastors from churches as different as Lutheran and Episcopalian and Presbyterian and Baptist and more, all of whom love Jesus personally, and by the time we are finished praying for our community and the world and one another, our hearts are deeply knit. We know we have a ton of differences but we know we are one in Jesus and His mission. Years ago, I wouldn't have done that. Years ago, you didn't see that happening. I'd like to think that in some ways the church in this generation is waking up to a new kind of unity, the kind Jesus prayed for us. Then secondly, He prayed:

2. for our testimony to the world Twice! (21, 23) He prayed that this unity we have would show the world that our message of the Risen Christ is real and true. What would you think if 10 different people tried to talk to you about the same basic thing, but each one told about it with a different slant and none of the 10 would have anything to do with each other? You would dismiss the thing out of hand! That's how people feel when they see us come to them divided and separated from each other. But when we come united, with one heart and mind, despite all our differences, people sit up and take notice! Our unity in coming to them with the same heart, with the same message, holding hands together is a powerful witness. People look at it and think, "Man, something must really have happened to them all! It must be real!". Then thirdly, Jesus prayed:

3. for our destiny with Him (24) Oh, listen to that! There is our guarantee of heaven! Jesus prayed:

a. that we would be in His Presence in heaven forever, that we, all of us, would be with Him where He is, in heaven. He prayed that each one of us who are given to Him would be in His personal presence, that He would have us with Him for all eternity. He said, "I want it!" He wants us. He wants us in heaven and we shall be there. But more than that. He prayed:

b. that we would behold His glory, that we would see Him high and lifted up, seated on the throne of the universe with the Name that is above every Name, that we would see Him shine in all His splendor, that we would see all the angels and all the redeemed of all the ages gathered round His throne crying, "Here I am to worship..." and casting their crowns at His feet. If you want a shortcut to understanding this, just check out Rev. 4-5 and you can read John's description of the scene there will be when we get there, all the peoples of the earth in all their splendor bowing before the throne of God and of the Lamb. That's what Jesus prayed for and we've read the end of the Book; we know He'll get it! And we'll be there to see it! And you know what, that's when we'll all be one, when His prayer for perfect unity will be fully answered! Then finally, Jesus closed His prayer by asking:

4. for our indwelling by Him (25) Did you hear that? "I pray that the love YOU have for ME might be in THEM!" What a thing! The very love of the Father for the Son! That infinite, eternal love, now in us! How is that to be? Because Jesus prayed that the day would come when He would personally indwell every believer, and when the Spirit came 50 days later, it happened. From that moment on every believer is now indwelt by the very Spirit of Jesus. Jesus wanted you to be with Him in glory forever, but while you're on earth He wants to be in you! Personally! He never wants to have one moment of separation from you; rather He wants to go with you through every minute of your life, filling you with Himself so that you are able to live a life of love and love one another as He loved us! And, of course, the result of that will also be unity!

It's the one thing that was most on His heart the night before He died. He wanted us, his followers, to be one. But it's not easy. In his book The Mark of the Christian, Francis Schaeffer told that Hitler, during World War II, ordered the union of all religious denominations in Germany. A Brethren group became deeply divided over the issue. One segment obeyed and suffered little persecution, but gradually their spiritual vitality was weakened. The group that resisted stayed vibrant, but many died in the concentration camps due to their stand. Following the war, feelings between these groups were sharp. Tensions were high. An elder of one of the groups told Francis Schaeffer that they knew the problem had to be resolved. So leaders of both groups agreed to get alone in a quiet place to ask God to show each one where he had failed to keep Christ's commands. After several days of heart-searching, they met together. "And what happened then?" asked Schaeffer. "We just were one!" the elder replied. What will it take for Jesus to see the answer to His prayer in our own lives, in our church and in our community? Maybe we need to search our hearts too! To see where we're divided, where there's spiritual pride, to see what Jesus wants to cleanse us of so that we can be unreservedly ONE!

The Arrest And Trial - Ch. 18

At Chapter 18 we reverently enter the beginning of what has come to be called Christ's "Passion", that is, His sufferings. [Read verse 1] Jesus left Jerusalem with the Eleven, crossed over the brook of Kidron and entered into a quiet olive grove called Gethsemane to pray. It is there that His suffering began as He sought the Father in prayer and prayed, "Not my will, but Thine be done." It is there that His inner agony was such that He sweat, as it were, great drops of blood. But John passes over all of that in his account and moves ahead several hours to tell the story of how:

I. Jesus Is Arrested In The Garden (1-11) It is late at night, actually in the very early hours of the morning while it is still dark, that Jesus finishes praying and wakes His sleeping disciples for the third time to meet:

1. the arrival of the mob (2-3) Judas had left the Supper early that night and run to the chief priests. They in turn must have applied to the Roman commander for a detachment of soldiers to aid in the arrest along with the Temple guards. Judas, no doubt, led them back to the Upper Room, only to find it empty. But he was not to be dissuaded. He knew Jesus liked to go to this Olive Grove to find solitude and he led the mob there next, searching for Him. They had torches and lanterns on poles and they were armed, the other Gospels say, with swords and wooden clubs in case Jesus or His followers put up any resistance. Judas, seeing Jesus in the shadow, must have run ahead and singled him out for the mob with a kiss, but John doesn't record that either. For him what stood out that night was Jesus':

2. His total control of the situation (4-6) Jesus was in control here, not the mob! He went out to meet them. He knew everything that was going to happen; He knew that the time had come. He asked them boldly who they were looking for and when they answered, "Jesus of Nazareth", an amazing thing happened. Without hesitation, Jesus deliberately answered, "I AM", and at His words they literally "went away backwards and fell to the ground". In other words, they backed up and bowed down; they lay face down on the ground! Why on earth did they do such a thing? What force would make an entire mob of dozens of men suddenly lie on the earth? Some have said they were simply astonished at His boldness and His surrender to them, but to me there is only one explanation that makes any sense. The word "he" is not in the Greek. Jesus said, "I AM" and in Aramaic, that is Yahweh, Jehovah, the very Name of God! They did not stumble; they were driven to their knees and then to their faces in the very presence of God by the very mention of His Name! I'm reminded of the fact that at the Name of Jesus every knee will bow, whether they want to or not! I believe Jesus, for one moment, unleashed His mighty power and drove them to their faces to make a point for all of us who would hear this story in the future: they did not take Him; He gave Himself to them! No one took His life from Him; He laid it down willingly. He could have stopped the whole thing at any moment of his choosing, but instead, He chose to endure the suffering; He chose to be arrested and tried and crucified for us. So, after making them bow for a moment, He left them up and asked them the same question again. Now notice His concern for:

3. the protection of His disciples (7-9) This time He allows them to stand, but practically gives them a command NOT to arrest any of His disciples. Haven't you ever wondered why they were not seized also? There were only 11 of them. It would have been dreadfully easy to capture the whole group and put an end to the whole movement at once. But they didn't even try! Not even after:

4. Peter's brash reaction (10-11) Suddenly Peter wakes up and realizes they're really going to arrest Jesus and he goes into action. He whips out his sword and swings it at the one who was the closest, probably the leader of the group, the servant of the High Priest. But either Malchus dodged or Peter was a lousy swordsman, because instead of beheading him, he only managed to take off his right ear! Now you would think that would send the soldiers into a frenzy, that out would come the swords and a rain of blows would fall on the whole band. But they don't even move! Again, Jesus appears to be totally in charge. He commands Peter to stop and says, according to Matthew, Do you think I cannot call on my Father, and he will at once put at my disposal more than twelve legions of angels? But how then would the Scriptures be fulfilled that say it must happen in this way?" - Mat. 26:53-54. In other words, "I'm in charge here. I could stop this at any moment! But I have to do this! I have to let Myself be arrested...and tried...and crucified! I MUST fulfill the Scriptures. I have to drink the cup the Father has given Me to save my people!" And then, Luke says, Jesus quietly and calmly reaches over and picks up the fallen ear and with a touch reattaches it to Malchus' head, perfectly whole! He was sovereignly in control the whole time!

It's almost like this whole scene played in some sort of dignified slow motion and then at this moment, it all broke into fast forward. They grab Jesus and begin to tie his hands. His disciples suddenly break for cover in all directions into the darkness and scatter, leaving Him alone. Not one is captured, just as He said. And now John tells the story of how:

II. Jesus Is Tried Before The Jews (12-14, 19-24) This next section reads almost like the script of a modern movie. First, John tells what's going on with Jesus, then he breaks away to show Peter, then back to Jesus again and back to Peter and finally back to Jesus. He's telling two interwoven story lines, but for our study we'll unravel them one at a time. The first thing Jesus had to face was:

1. the initial interrogation by Annas (12-14, 19) Annas had been the High Priest for about 9 years, from 6-15 AD. The Romans had deposed him, but four of his sons had followed one at a time in his office and had themselves been removed. Now his son-in-law, Caiaphas, had been serving as High Priest since 18 AD, but in the eyes of the Jews, one is High Priest for life, so Annas was highly respected and probably the real power behind the priesthood. To him they took Jesus first for a private interview, no doubt so he could formulate some charges against Him. He wanted information about who His disciples were and about what He taught. But Jesus answered His questions instead with a challenge:

2. the challenge of Jesus: (20-21) He said, "My record is public! I always taught in synagogues or in the Temple. The whole nation heard Me. I have no secrets to hide; I said nothing evil, nothing seditious. Ask them what I said, they know!" And it's just here that John brings out:

3. the unjustness of the process (22-23) Nothing about this whole thing was done right by Jewish law. One of the officials didn't like the way Jesus answered and struck Him in the face. You can't strike an uncondemned man! Jesus even pointed that fact out, but it didn't stop the process. You can't gather the ruling council and pass a death sentence on a man in the darkness of night; a day has to pass between the ruling and the execution to give time for any hidden evidence to come to light. None of this mattered! It was all unfair. It was all unjust. You see, this interview with Annas was really just a stalling for time. The Sanhedrin had to be called, roused from their beds. Messengers had to go out and gather them together so the trial could occur by dawn. When Annas was satisfied that he would get no real answers out of Jesus, he sent him on to:

4. the trial before Caiaphas and the Sanhedrin (24) John doesn't even record it, but the other Gospels do. It's more of the same. False witnesses are brought to accuse Him unjustly, but they can't get their stories straight. Finally, they ask Him outright, "Are you the Son of God?" And He says, "I AM!" They call it blasphemy. They curse Him. They strike Him and beat Him. They spit in His face. They mock Him. They pronounce the death sentence upon Him, simply because they want Him out of the way for good!

But while all this is going on, something else of significance is happening in the outer court. As Jesus stands true:

III. Peter Denies Jesus (15-18, 25-27) right outside in the courtyard. Let's examine the story. Notice first:

1. the bravery of John (15-16) John never talks about himself in the first person and says, "I", but this is most likely him. He and Peter fled originally in the garden but did not go far. Their courage returned and it seems that they actually came back and joined in the mob, following along behind Jesus as He was being led back to Jerusalem. When they reached the High Priest's house, John was evidently known to the family and was allowed to pass through the gate and actually entered in together with Jesus. What a bold move, to identify publicly with his Master in the hour of His arrest, to go visibly in with Him to the house where He was tried! Peter, however was a stranger, and was left standing outside the gate. John had to come back and get him let into the courtyard once everyone was inside and Jesus was taken into the inside rooms for questioning. But in contrast with John's bravery, you can see:

2. the increasing fear of Peter It began at the door (17-18) The servant girl unnerved Peter and caught him off guard. He didn't want to be kept out, so he lied and said, "I am not". But it was cold and as he stood around the fire warming himself with the servants, the subject came up again. (25-27a) A second person asked him and he denied it again. But the third person to confront him had actually been in Gethsemane and was a relative of Malchus, whose ear had been cut off. Of course, it was dark and, in the confusion, it was difficult to identify anyone positively, but this man had an inkling that Peter was the sword-slinger. And Peter's fear escalates from afraid to terrified! Fear rules him and he begins to vehemently deny that he's a follower of Jesus, to curse himself and swear it so they'll believe him. You know, Peter had said, just hours before in the safety of the Upper Room, that He was willing to die for Jesus, that he would never deny Him! But when suddenly his life was on the line, humble John stood firm while proud Peter crumbled and folded. What would you do? I daresay that none of us really knows until we're actually put to the test, which here we seldom are. But our brothers and sisters around the world, especially those who live in China or who live in Muslim lands, face this kind of test in their lives regularly. If they refuse to deny Jesus, they may be cast out of their home and family or their community altogether. They may be arrested and imprisoned and with that usually comes torture. They may be threatened with death. It is easy for us to tell them they should stand firm; it is easy for us to criticize Peter. But what would we do in their shoes? In his shoes? What's more, what am I doing now where I am? How am I hiding the fact that I'm His disciple, at work, at school, at college? In my life right now am I denying Him in small ways already like Peter or am I standing up bravely like John? Well, as the story closes, notice again:

3. the absolute control of Jesus (27b) Jesus had told him, This very night, before the rooster crows, you will disown me three times. - Mat. 26:34. And at the very moment Peter denied Him the third time, the rooster crowed! Jesus is in absolute control of every part of what was happening to Him. In fact, Luke tells us that wherever Jesus was standing, at that moment He turned and looked straight at Peter and Peter "woke up". He remembered Jesus' words. He realized what he had just done; it broke into his mind like a flood. He was overcome with remorse and immediately ran outside and wept bitterly.

And there we have to leave him and continue with the story inside as:

IV. Jesus Is Tried Before Pilate (28-40) [Read 28] The Jews were a conquered people. Their leaders could pass decrees in their council but they had no civil power to enforce them. Specifically, they could not execute anyone. That had to be a Roman matter. Besides, how much better it would look for them if the evil Romans executed Jesus instead of themselves! So, off they went to the Roman Governor. He was up early, before 7 AM, no doubt having already been informed of Jesus' arrest during the night by his commander. He knew they were coming. Their religious scruples wouldn't let them come inside and defile themselves by entering the house of a Gentile. It would keep them from eating, not the Passover meal itself which was the night before, but the first sacrifice of the Passover festival which was offered that morning. Strange how they could condemn an innocent man to death without guilt, while worrying about ceremonial defilement! So, Pilate comes outside to them and we see:

1. his argument with the Jews (29-31) Pilate was no friend of the Jews and they hated him as well. After many years they actually managed to get him recalled to Rome by their protests! He has no time for them and their petty quarrels and religious beliefs, so he tries to send them away. But notice:

a. their insistence on execution They insist that Jesus is worthy of death and they want the Romans to carry out the sentence! They will not take no for an answer. But in doing so, John points out:

b. their unwitting fulfillment of the Scriptures (32) If the Jews had executed Jesus, they would have done it as they later did to Stephen. They would have stoned Him! The Romans hung their criminals on crosses for public execution. If Jesus was stoned, his bones would have been crushed, but the Scripture says, Not a bone of Him shall be broken! Moreover, Jesus had said in John 3:14, Just as Moses lifted up the snake in the desert, so the Son of Man must be lifted up, that is, on a pole and later in John 12:32, ...when I am lifted up from the earth, I will draw all men to myself. No Jewish mob would ever have done these things. In turning Jesus over to the Romans, they were unknowingly doing His will, fulfilling the Scriptures, carrying out His own words. Again, it's apparent that though He seems a victim, that He was in control the whole time. So, Pilate takes Jesus inside privately and we have:

2. his interrogation of Jesus (33-38a) The record of their conversation is brief and it probably contained much more. In fact, there are a number of things John leaves out of the story, like the fact that Pilate sent Jesus to Herod and Herod sent Him back. But two things are clear from this glimpse. First:

a. Jesus declared that He was the King He was not willing to defend Himself, but He would not deny His own identity either. He said plainly, "I am the King, not a king of this world, but of another kingdom, the Kingdom of God." And:

b. Jesus declared that He spoke the truth I think this was really a call to Pilate, an invitation... "I speak the truth; everyone on the side of truth listens to Me... YOU should listen to Me!" He is not trying to prevent His death but appealing for Pilate's own soul!

But Pilate is not so easily shaken, at least not yet. He mutters a disgusted, "What is truth!" and goes back out to the Jews. He knows the true score. He knows that it is out of envy and jealousy that these leaders want to eliminate Jesus. He doesn't want to be their patsy, their instrument and, in the meantime, he's thought of a way to outwit them at their own game:

3. his attempt to outwit the Jews (38b-40) By this time a crowd has gathered. He knows how popular Jesus is. So, he says, "I can't find any basis for a charge against Jesus, but I tell you what I'll do. Every Passover out of my generosity, I release one Jewish prisoner to you and grant him clemency. This year I'll give you the choice between two. You can have Jesus or you can have Barabbas!" Of course, Pilate's scheme was simple, to pick the worst, most insidious criminal he had in custody. Barabbas was involved in an insurrection. He had committed murder. He was in our terms a terrorist, a member of Hamas or Al Qaeda, a hated man and someone they were glad to have in custody at last. Pilate figured it would be no contest: Jesus or Osama Bin Laden! They would have to pick Jesus! Imagine his shock when they start shouting, "Give us Barabbas! We'd rather have a terrorist running around loose than have Jesus live!" So intense was their hatred of Him!

And there we have to suspend the story for today, but I don't want us to miss the point of it all. We could focus on that intense hatred and blame the Jews for killing Jesus. We could focus on Pilate's indifference and weakness as a leader, his failure to just stand up and say "NO," and blame the Romans for killing Jesus. But the point John makes over and over is the one Peter later made in his prayer in Acts 4: Indeed Herod and Pontius Pilate met together with the Gentiles and the people of Israel in this city to conspire against your holy servant Jesus, whom you anointed. 28 They did what your power and will had decided beforehand should happen. - Acts 4:27. God sent His Son Jesus to die, to die for you and me! The mob, the Jewish leaders, Pilate, the soldiers, they were all just the tools He used in offering this great once-for-all sacrifice. No one took His life; He laid it down willingly. For you, for me. In February 1941, "Maximilian Kolbe was incarcerated at Auschwitz. He was a Franciscan priest. In the harshness of the slaughterhouse, he maintained the gentleness of Christ. He shared his food. He gave up his bunk. He prayed for his captors. He was soon given the nickname 'Saint of Auschwitz.' In July of that same year there was an escape from the prison. It was the custom at Auschwitz to kill ten prisoners for every one who escaped. All the prisoners would be gathered in the courtyard, and the commandant would randomly select ten names from the roll book. These victims would be immediately taken to a cell where they would receive no food or water until they died. "The commandant begins calling the names. At each selection another prisoner steps forward to fill the sinister quota. The tenth name he calls is Franciszek Gajowniczek. As the SS officers check the numbers of the condemned, this last one begins to sob. 'My wife and my children,' he weeps. The officers turn as they hear movement among the prisoners. The guards raise their rifles. The dogs tense, anticipating a command to attack. A prisoner has left his row and is pushing his way to the front. It is Kolbe. No fear on his face. No hesitancy in his step. The captain shouts at him to stop or be shot. 'I want to talk to the commander,' he says calmly. For some reason the officer doesn't club him or kill him. Kolbe stops a few paces from the commandant, removes his hat, and looks the German officer in the eye. 'Herr Kommandant, I wish to make a request, please.' That no one is shot is a miracle. 'I want to die in the place of this prisoner.' He points at the sobbing Gajowniczek. The audacious request is presented without stammer. 'I have no wife or children. Besides, I am old and not good for anything. He's in better condition.' Kolbe knew well the Nazi mentality. 'Who are you?' the officer asks. 'A Catholic priest.' The block is stunned, the commandant uncharacteristically speechless. After a moment, he barks, 'Request granted.' Prisoners were never allowed to speak. Gajowniczek says, 'I could only thank him with my eyes. I was stunned and could hardly grasp what was going on. The immensity of it: I, the condemned, am to live and someone else willingly and voluntarily offers his life for me--a stranger. Is this some dream?' The Saint of Auschwitz outlived the other nine. In fact, he didn't die of thirst or starvation. He died only after the camp doctor injected phenol into his heart on August 14, 1941. Franciszek Gajowniczek survived the Holocaust. He made his way back to his hometown, but every year he goes back to Auschwitz. Every August 14 he goes back to say thank you to the man who died in his place." [Six Hours One Friday by Max Lucado. Multnomah, 1987.] That's John's point and that's why we are here today. Every Sunday we come back to say "Thank You!" to the man who died in our place and to worship at His feet.

The Cross - Ch. 19

We left Jesus at the end of chapter 18 in the middle of His trial before Pontius Pilate in the wee hours of Friday morning. Now in chapter 19 we come to that series of events which we have come to collectively call, "The Cross". John R. W. Stott wrote: "In daring to write a book [or preach a sermon, I might add] about the cross, there is of course a great danger of presumption. This is partly because what actually happened when 'God was reconciling the world to Himself in Christ' is a mystery whose depths we shall spend eternity plumbing; and partly because it would be most unseemly to feign a cool detachment as we contemplate Christ's cross. We are involved. Our sins put Him there.... We can stand before it only with a bowed head and broken spirit. And there we remain until the Lord Jesus speaks to our hearts His word of pardon and acceptance, and we, gripped by His love and brimful of thanksgiving, go out into the world to live our lives in His service." So, it is with great personal humility and reverence that we must approach the three principal events of the Savior's last hours that John describes for us. First, he shows us how:

I. Jesus Is Sentenced to death (1-16) Pilate has already tried to free Jesus by his first ruse of offering to release Jesus or Barabbas, never dreaming that the Jews would choose a hardened criminal, yet they did. Now he tries another tactic. He orders that Jesus:

1. He is punished by scourging (1-3) We read those words so lightly. Most of you have seen The Passion of the Christ, so I don't need to describe for you in any detail what flogging or scourging is. With hands tied to a post and bent back, the prisoner was whipped repeatedly with a "cat-o-nine-tails", a whip of 9 leather thongs with pieces of bone or metal on their ends. A few strokes would tear the flesh off a man's back. It was called "the intermediate death" because many prisoners died from the scourging before they ever got to a cross. Jesus was left in complete agony with wounds all over His body and extremely weak from blood loss. Yet the soldiers were not finished. They decided to mock His claim to be a King. They found a cast-off purple robe to put on Him, wove a crown out of thorns growing nearby and put a reed in His hand for a king's scepter. Then in mockery one after another, time after time, they bowed before Him shouting, "Hail, King!" but in rising, they struck His face. In this state of humiliation Pilate brought Him forth again to the crowd, no doubt hoping that this punishment would be enough to satisfy them, that they would see how utterly ridiculous His claims were as He stands humiliated publicly before the nation and be satisfied with that. But it didn't work. Instead:

2. the crowd screams for His death (4-7) He utters that famous phrase in Latin, ecce homo, "Behold the Man! Look, see His stripes, see how he has been punished, see how He has been humiliated. See that His claims are only a mockery; He is no King! Is that not enough?" But they immediately begin to shout, "Crucify Him!" Pilate mockingly says, "YOU crucify Him! I can't find any basis for a charge that would warrant death!", knowing full well that they really had no authority to do that nor would they ever crucify anyone. But they came back with their real charge, "This man must die because He claimed to be the Son of God! Blasphemy!" Now, that shook Pilate up. Pilate was a pagan Roman, a worshipper of the Roman and Greek gods who, according to ancient mythology were known fairly frequently to consort with human women and produce supernatural hybrid offspring. Hercules is one name you might recognize. That "son of God" claim took him back. His wife had already sent him a message that she had had a dream about Jesus and warned him to not to have anything to do with "that innocent man". He had to know who Jesus really was so:

3. Pilate re-interviews Him privately (8-11) He has to know where Jesus is from, who He is. But Jesus won't answer him. So, Pilate pulls rank; he tells Jesus that His life is in his hands to force Him to talk. But Jesus already knows what he will do and asserts that God is the one who has the real power, not him. And Jesus paints what he is doing and what the Jews are doing as a sin, an act of wrongdoing for which they are guilty before God. Now Pilate is desperate, but in the end:

4. Pilate surrenders to the crowd (12-16) Pilate worked hard to free Him. He made two more attempts to present Him to the people and might have set Him free, but there was one cry he could not get away from. "If you let this man go, you are no friend of Caesar!" That doesn't sound like much, but it is a serious threat. Tiberius, the Emperor, was a bitter man and very suspicious of any rivals. Treason is always punishable by death. The Jewish leaders threaten to report him to the Emperor, to say that he set free a rival leader, a king, and this he could not risk, so in the end, he resigns himself and surrenders to their cries.

His is the ultimate case of yielding to the pressure of the crowd, going along with the majority, doing what you know is wrong to protect yourself from their wrath. It's still with us today. Our young people call it peer pressure. In business we call it corporate pressure. And, like Pilate, we still justify it in our minds and tell ourselves, "I had to do it; I had no choice; I had to look out for myself! I didn't want to; I washed my hands in protest; it is NOT my fault." Strangely enough, centuries later, probably based on his trying to free Jesus, legends arose saying that Pilate later became a Christian. In fact, the Coptic church canonized him as a saint by 600 AD and his wife Claudia Procla was made a saint in the Greek church for her stand toward Jesus' innocence. Her feast is celebrated to this day on Oct. 27. But the hard truth is that Pilate was soon removed from his procuratorship after one of his many violent crimes against the Jews and sent to Rome to stand trial. Tiberius probably died before he got there and he went into exile. The most authentic reports indicate that he died by his own hand somewhere in Gaul. However, his most telling indictment is that for 20 centuries now, thousands of Christians all over the world have repeated in unison these words of the apostles: I believe... in Jesus Christ His only son, our Lord, who was conceived of the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate... His name lives forever in infamy. Washing your hands and blaming somebody else does not make you innocent. Folding under pressure and going along with what you know is wrong and evil, simply makes you a coward, and a guilty one at that. What a lesson he is for us! But now, leaving Pilate, John goes on to tell us how:

II. Jesus Is Crucified (17-30) The beam of a cross is laid across His bleeding back and his hands are tied to it. He can hardly stand, let alone walk, but He must bear his own cross. A procession is gathered. Two other prisoners are also brought, each one, like Jesus, attended by four soldiers and a centurion. The parade winds its way slowly through the streets of Jerusalem to:

1. the site outside the city (17-18) Jesus is too weak to make it all the way and falls under the weight of the cross. A stranger named Simon from Cyrene is grabbed and forced to carry it for Him. But eventually they arrive at:

a. the place of execution, Golgotha in Aramaic, the "hill of the skull", Calvary in Latin. It is the place of death, the place close to the road north of the city where prisoners were commonly executed. There the procession stopped. John spares us the details of:

b. the process of crucifixion which his original audience knew only too well and simply says, there they crucified Him. But to us that is such a meaningless phrase. Crucifixion was designed to be the cruelest possible means of killing a person. The Phoenicians invented it, but the Romans perfected it to a science. The upright was usually placed into the ground. The condemned man was laid on the ground on the crossbeam with his arms stretched out and bound in place. A metal spike was driven through each wrist between the bones. Then, by ropes or ladders, he was hoisted up into position and the crossbeam fastened to the upright. Only one skeleton of a crucified man has been unearthed and, in his case, they turned both his feet sideways in the same direction and drove a spike through both of those into the upright, leaving the lower half of his body twisted 90 degrees. As long as the person had strength in his arm and leg muscles, he could pull and push upward to relax the tension on his chest enough to breathe. So, every breath was agony as the raw wounds pushed against the spikes and the bleeding back against the post. But as the person grew weaker and unable to help himself, his respiration would gradually lessen. His lungs would begin to fill up with fluid and eventually he would suffocate to death. Hung up on a post by the road, humiliated before the world, naked except for the barest loin covering, exposed to the scorching of the hot sun by day and the desert cold by night, a man might live as long as three days in this agony. No wonder Paul reverently says in Phil 2:8, ...he humbled himself and became obedient to death-- even death on a cross! To say that Jesus was crucified for me is to say more than we'll ever realize. Then John mentions:

2. the sign above His head (19-22) In theory every condemned prisoner had one of these. One soldier would hold it out as he walked in front of the prisoner all the way to the place of execution and then it would be nailed to the upright above him:

a. it was a written accusation declaring the man's name and crime: Jesus of Nazareth, "The King of the Jews". Pilate ordered it to be written, probably as a mockery of the Jews, as though he had conquered them and this is what he did to their king. This outraged them when they saw it and they begged him to change it to read, "This man said...he was the king of the Jews!" But out of spite, Pilate wouldn't do it. He left it stand as an emphatic declaration rather than a false claim. But unknown to him, he was exactly right:

b. it was a Divine declaration He WAS the King of the Jews. He was God's chosen, appointed Messiah. They were indeed crucifying their King! God had written it! Next, John turns our attention to:

3. the soldiers at His feet (23-24) The average person had a turban or head-covering, an outer cloak or robe, a sash or girdle for the waist and a pair of sandals. These normally became the property of the executioners and four items were easily divided among four soldiers. But Jesus also had an undergarment, a seamless one-piece tunic, and rather than tear it in four:

a. they gambled for His clothes They cast lots (we'd say they threw dice) to see who would win it. A little sport, a little diversion. So callously done at the feet of one suffering so horribly. What cruel and un-caring men. And yet, John reminds us:

b. they unknowingly fulfilled the Scriptures David had prophesied hundreds of years earlier that it would be this way in Ps. 22:18, They divide my garments among them and cast lots for my clothing. Notice how specifically both dividing and casting lots are predicted and the soldiers did both. Another evidence that God is the One truly in charge here, orchestrating every detail. John's reasoning is simple: "He said it, so that's why they did it!" And then John moves on again to tell us about:

4. the mother at His side (25-27) You can't help but notice:

a. Jesus' love for His mother and hers for Him. She was there with Him to the very end, standing near the cross, tears in her eyes and her very soul pierced with anguish. And in turn, His last act in dying was to do something to care for her. He would no longer be there. He could no longer protect or provide for her. He did not trust His own brothers to do it, as they had not yet believed. But there was one whom He did trust:

b. Jesus' trust in John John was Jesus' cousin, but also "the disciple whom He loved". He was the one to whom Jesus' heart was most closely bound, the one who seemed to understand Him most deeply. So, Jesus simply and lovingly said to Mary, "There is your son" and to John, "There is your mother". With those words He bound the two as mother and son from that day on and John immediately took her in to his own home as part of his own household. He fulfilled that trust until the Lord took her home. Now, with that last immediate care out of the way, we come to:

5. the culmination of His purpose (28-30) Notice three things here. First:

a. the fulfillment of all the Scriptures Every last prophecy concerning Jesus' life and death was fulfilled to the letter. Ps. 69:21 had said, They put gall in my food and gave me vinegar for my thirst. So, He cried I thirst! and the soldiers gave him wine vinegar mixed with gall, according to Matthew. Not the smallest part of one of the prophecies pointing to Him was left undone. This was the last little piece. And then Jesus makes:

b. the declaration of completion He shouted somehow with a loud voice, FINISHED! Oh, that is a blessed word. In the Greek it is tetelestai and it has many meanings. Completed! Done! Fulfilled! Accomplished! All that the Father had sent Him to do was now done, completed, fulfilled, finished. There was nothing left to do. But there is one meaning that I like above the rest. This same word is found in the records of many ancient business transactions, the same way we use it today on our invoices and receipts. We mark them PAID IN FULL. That's the one that speaks to me; Jesus shouted PAID IN FULL! The debt of my sins, the punishment I deserved, the sentence of death given to me, Jesus cries is PAID IN FULL! As Hebrews says, He offered one sacrifice for sins forever; no other will ever be needed. And having shouted that with His last ounce of strength, immediately we have:

c. the dismissing of His spirit He prayed, Father, into Thy hands I commend My spirit. and then note that he bowed his head and literally gave His spirit into the Father's hands for safekeeping. Matthew says He dismissed it, He sent it away. Normally when a person dies, the spirit leaves, the life force is gone and then the body sags limp, the head bows. Jesus laid His head to rest first and then left His body. It was a choice. He had said it Himself in John 10:18, No one takes [my life] from me, but I lay it down of my own accord. I have authority to lay it down and authority to take it up again. This command I received from my Father." The soldiers did not take it from Him. The Jews did not take it from Him. The suffering of the cross did not take it from Him. On Friday afternoon around 3 PM He laid it down and on Sunday morning He took it up again! But now John tells us how:

III. Jesus Is Buried (31-42) First, he mentions:

1. the prophetic actions of the soldiers (31-37) Since a man could live for several days on a cross before dying, the soldiers had a way to speed up the process. It was called the crucifragium. They would take a hammer and with one hard blow break both of the man's legs. Not only was this more pain, but then he would be unable to push himself up to breathe and would quickly die. This is what the soldiers did to the two thieves, but notice that when they came to Jesus, He was already dead, so:

a. they did not break His legs And John sees the significance of that immediately. Not a bone of the Passover Lamb was to be broken. And not one of His was. Yet:

b. they did pierce His side with a spear to make sure He was dead. They no doubt punctured His lung and out came all the fluid, the “water” as well as blood. John saw it and wanted to verify for all to come as an eyewitness that He was really and truly dead, but he also saw the significance, even of this, for Zechariah had prophesied that one day at His return They will look on the One they have pierced... The soldiers were simply carrying out God’s instructions to the letter. Then follows:

2. the hasty interment of His body (38-42) It is strange to see:

a. the two men who buried Him (38-40) Both Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus now step boldly forward. Both were leaders among the Jews and part of the Sanhedrin. They had come to believe, yet were secret disciples out of fear. But now in the end, they wax bold and ask for His body. They lovingly take it down and carry it between them to:

b. the tomb where He was laid (41-42) It was Joseph’s own tomb and it happened to be nearby in a garden. There they laid his body down, carefully covered it with a large quantity of spices, wrapped it in white linen cloths, covered His face with a napkin and finally laid His body on a shelf in the stone cave to rest. As they went out, they rolled a large stone in place over the entrance to seal the tomb and went sadly to their homes. And there we leave Him until Sunday.

That is the story of the Cross, of how Jesus our Savior died for us. And yet we often think and even speak of it as though it is simply an event of history. Dr. Tom Dooley wrote of being in China and building a cage for a small Himalayan moon bear someone had given him. An old Chinese man came by and saw the cage and began to cry. When Tom Dooley asked the old man why he was weeping, he told him this story: He and his son had been harvesting rice on a commune in Red China. They were not allowed to keep any rice for personal use. But the son had hidden a small bit of rice in his clothes to take to his mother who was suffering from disease. The rice was discovered, and the soldiers put the boy in a cage in the middle of the town. The cage was so small his son could not sit up or even move. The father and mother watched their son slowly die in that cage under the hot sun, starving, with insects crawling over his body. Many years had passed, but he still cried every time he saw a cage. The man could not see a cage without becoming passionate. How did Peter and John react when they walked by another crucifixion? Could they ever again look at a cross without remembering what Jesus suffered for them that day and being shaken? [Tabletalk, Feb 1996. Page 28.] What about us? Today the cross has become the key symbol of Christian faith; crosses are everywhere. But the cross is more than a pretty emblem to hang on a chain around our necks or to adorn the walls of our churches. The cross was an instrument of torture, suffering and death. It is a reminder of all that our precious Jesus endured to save us. If we really love Him as we say we do, can we ever look at or think about or talk about the cross without our hearts being moved?

John: The Gospel Of Life

The Living Savior - Ch. 20

It has been a long, sad Sabbath for Jesus’ followers. After His burial late on Friday afternoon, they went slowly to their homes or wherever they were staying, confused, disillusioned, overwhelmed with sorrow. Jesus, their Lord was dead! Buried! Their hopes, their dreams were shattered. Saturday passed in silence and Saturday night was a second sleepless night. The only thing they could think of was the immediate. His burial had been so hasty; they could at least make sure His body had been properly laid to rest. As we pick up the story at the beginning of chapter 20, it is about dawn when:

I. Jesus’ Followers Discover The Empty Tomb (1-10) The discovery begins with:

1. the early visit of Mary Magdalene (1-2) Mary and (the other Gospels add) some other women went to the tomb early with more spices to anoint the body. On the way, they were discussing what they considered to be a great problem: who would roll away the stone? First, it was heavy, probably weighing several hundred pounds. Second, on Saturday the stone was sealed; that is, a wax seal was placed on it, the sign of Roman authority that it might not be moved and Roman guards were put in place to guard it. How would they get in? But when they arrived, they found the guards gone and the stone rolled away! That was the first miracle of resurrection morning. There was no way into or out of that tomb. It was sealed and guarded. Nobody could have stolen the body and no Roman soldier would ever desert his post. Matthew tells us that God sent an angel to do the job; He rolled away the stone and the guards fainted and then ran off! Why? Not so Jesus could get out, but so His followers could look in! At any rate, when Mary arrived, she looked in and the tomb was empty. She could only assume the body had been taken away, so she ran to tell the disciples and that led to:

2. the rushed visit of Peter and John (3-10) They ran as fast as they could to the tomb. John outran Peter, but when he came up, they both went inside. They too found it empty, but John noticed something significant, the graveclothes lying there. Jesus' body was gone, but the strips of linen were still lying in place and the cloth napkin that covered His face was not lying in the pile, but carefully and deliberately placed separately. I can't verify this, but one commentator says this means the headcloth was still rolled up in the shape of Jesus' face, the way it had been wrapped around it and separated from the rest by the distance of the neck. He feels it "looked as if the body were still in them when no body was there." In other words, it is as though the body around which they were wrapped suddenly disappeared (or passed right through them) and they fell in place exactly as they were. Nothing but resurrection in a spiritual body could have produced that! Anyone unwinding the burial cloths could never have made such a pattern!

But even the empty tomb and the arrangement of the graveclothes was not enough for the truth to dawn on the disciples completely. Peter and John left in confusion and went home. The empty tomb is one evidence of Jesus' resurrection, but it is not the primary one. Our faith is not in empty tomb but in a living Person. That's why next:

II. Jesus Shows Himself Alive To Mary Magdalene (11-18) Mary hung around awhile outside, weeping and crying, her grief renewed all over again, now, not only at His death, but also at the fact that even His body does not have proper burial. In her tears at one point, she looks inside the tomb again and suddenly:

1. she sees two angels (11-13) She sees angels in bright apparel. They speak with her and ask why she is crying, but even that is not enough. She remains unconvinced. She still believes the body has been stolen or moved and tells them so. But just then:

2. she sees Jesus Himself (14-17) She is so blinded by her grief and convinced that the body has been stolen that she can't even recognize Jesus standing there alive! The sound of His voice doesn't even register, that is, until:

a. He reveals Himself by calling her name There is something about someone you know really well and love dearly and the way they call your name. There is something precious about that. As soon as they say it, you know who it is by the way they speak it. Think about it: if I answer the phone and hear "John...", I can instantly tell whether it's my sister, my mother-in-law, my sister-in-law, my secretary or my wife. Jesus said, "Mary..." the way only Jesus could say it and had a hundred times before, and instantly she knew Him! Hey, do you know that Jesus does the same for you? He calls His own sheep by name and leads them out! - 10:3. I'll never forget in one of the musicals we did many years ago, we had Mike McMonagle all wrapped up playing Lazarus in a tomb over here on the side and the choir was singing, "I heard the voice of Jesus call my name" and our Jesus shouted "Lazarus, come forth" and out he came. And Mike's testimony is that it was in the darkness of that cardboard tomb as he heard the song, "I heard the voice of Jesus call my name", that salvation became real for him. He sensed Jesus speaking to Him personally, calling him by name to believe, to trust and he responded in faith! To call someone by name is to know them deeply and personally. And one day, Revelation says, Jesus is going to give you a white stone with a new name written on it which nobody knows, but you and Him. Why? So that for all eternity He can call you by name, His own special name for you! When Mary heard her name, she cried out Rabboni, "my dear Lord, my dear Teacher" and she must have lost all restraint, flung her arms around Jesus and clung to Him for dear life, as though she would never let go! So, gently, Jesus has to tell her to stop clinging to Him and then He reveals something new:

b. He states there is an intermediate time before His ascension "I'm resurrected, I'm alive again, but I'm not yet ascended. I haven't yet gone back to the Father as I told you I was going to. I do plan to, but not just yet. I need you to see Me. I need the disciples to see me. Go tell them!" There's going to be a time, which we know was 40 days, a period when He will appear repeatedly and verify His resurrection with many infallible proofs and give them instructions and then He will ascend to heaven to await His return. But look closely at verse 17. In that same sentence:

c. He declares our new relationship to the Father "My work has accomplished its purpose; it has been effective. My Father is now YOUR Father! My God is now YOUR God!" In other words, "YOU have been brought into relationship with the Father through Me. You are now His children, His sons and daughters, My brothers and sisters. Many sons have been brought to glory through My suffering. It worked. It is effective. Rejoice!" I don't know if that point was lost on Mary or not, but it shouldn't be lost on us! At any rate, off she goes:

3. she returns to tell the disciples (18) She says, "I've seen Him! I've seen the Lord! He's alive!" But even the empty tomb and the testimony of the first eyewitness were evidently not enough. They still didn't believe, so now on the evening of that Sunday:

III. Jesus Shows Himself Alive To His Disciples (19-23) Read (19-20) Suddenly, there He is, right in the room where they are gathered, greeting them, "Shalom!" You can imagine that they nearly jumped out of their skins! But Jesus:

1. He convinces them of His resurrection He shows them that it's Him and He's alive. You'll notice that:

a. He appears behind locked doors: That says He has a new body, one that can pass through doors and walls, one that can appear and disappear at will. One that is not bound by physical limitations any more. It's like the new resurrection body that you and I will get one day at His return. But at the same time:

b. He shows them His hands and side. Why? To prove that it's the same body. It has the nail prints in the wrists and the spear wound in the side. It is really Jesus, the same One who died and was buried in the tomb. They can see Him. They can touch and handle Him with their hands. He's real; He's not a ghost, a spirit. Luke tells us He asks for a piece of the broiled fish they were eating and He eats it just like they do and it doesn't fall through Him! He's real and He's alive. It's really Him, risen from the dead! And they finally believe. They are flooded with joy! They can't contain themselves. Now, once He has them convinced of that:

2. He gives them a commission (21-23) He lays out their purpose in life from here on. And He will repeat it four more times in the next 40 days, but this is the original of the Great Commission and it contains three elements. First:

a. He sends them to complete His work, as the Father has sent Him The Father sent the Son into the world to save those the Father had given Him through the cross. Now the Son sends us, His disciples, into the world to complete the job, to save those the Father has given Jesus through bearing to them the message of the cross! We are "sent ones", apostles (from the Greek apostello which means to send forth officially on a mission). And apostle in Latin comes out missionary. We've been sent on a mission, to complete the work that Jesus accomplished on the cross by taking the Good News of it to every person and every nation. That's why we're here now; that's the purpose of our lives, our life-mission. And to carry it out, in verse 22:

b. He promises them the Holy Spirit He does something really strange. He breathes on them. He blows His breath on them. And then He commands them, "Take, lay hold of, receive, the Holy Spirit!" What's He doing? He's pantomiming! He's acting out what is to happen to them exactly 50 days later. They will hear the sound of a rushing mighty wind, ruach, breath (same word) and the Holy Spirit will come and indwell them all. In the Upper Room He talked to them about the coming of the Spirit. Before His ascension He will tell them to wait in Jerusalem until they receive the promise of the Spirit. But here He is simply showing them that this mission, this being sent out, will not be accomplished by them, but by that Spirit which they will receive. They will have power. They will be equipped for this mission. And then in verse 23 He makes another powerful statement:

c. He declares that forgiveness of sins will be applied through them This verse has been interpreted in many ways. From it has been derived that the church has been given the authority to forgive sins and thus that priests have the authority to forgive sins. But I don't think Jesus had any of that ecclesiastical doctrine in view here. I think He's simply saying, "The success of this mission depends on you. Literally, if of any ye may loose the sins, they are loosed to them; if of any ye may retain, they have been retained." (YLT) "I'm sending you to all men with the message of forgiveness of sins through the cross and if you get there and share it and they believe, their sins are loosed, sent away, forgiven! And if you don't, they are retained! I'm leaving for the Father's house and giving this work, this task, to you to complete; it's up to you to change the eternal destiny of the peoples of the world. Their forgiveness depends on YOU!" It's the same thing Paul said in 2 Cor. 5:18-19, God...reconciled us to himself through Christ and gave us the ministry of reconciliation: that God was reconciling the world to himself in Christ, not counting men's sins against them. And he has committed to us the message of reconciliation. That's our mission, our ministry. We complete His work by taking the message to the world! That's to be our life-purpose! Is it yours?

The 10 were convinced, but the scene was incomplete. Thomas was missing; he wasn't with the group that night and he didn't take it well when they told him. So, a week later:

IV. Jesus Shows Himself Alive To Thomas (24-29) Notice:

1. his stubborn refusal to believe without personal experience (24-25) How obstinate! "Your word is not good enough! I can't believe unless I see, touch and put my hand in!" Do you know people like that? "Well, that's nice for you, but I only believe in what I can see. Unless I see it and experience it, it's not really real for me!" These are the people who say, "But how do you know it's true? That was 2000 years ago. I can't see Jesus and touch Him; how can I know He's real?!" That was doubting Thomas, one who had heard Jesus predict His resurrection repeatedly! Maybe that's what brought on:

2. his stern rebuke by Jesus (26-27) A week later Jesus came to the group again, just as He had on Resurrection Sunday, and greeted them with "Shalom!". But this time He came specifically for Thomas. He had heard every word Thomas said and He immediately commands him, "Look at Me, touch me, stick your hand in my side, do all the things you said you had to do. STOP doubting and believe!!" But Thomas never even gets that far, never even stretches out his hand. He no longer needs to. In that instant we have:

3. his personal confession (28) From the mouth of doubting Thomas we have that clear confession which expresses the faith of us all: my Lord and my God. In my mind I see him falling at Jesus' feet prostrate in worship. Not only is Jesus Lord to be obeyed and followed, but He is God to be worshipped and served! No Jew would ever say that. To call a man God would be the ultimate blasphemy. For him to call Jesus God is for him to be convinced that before him in a body stands God Almighty, Jehovah, in the flesh. He is not just the Son of God but He is God the Son, God of very God, God come in flesh to save us and now returning to glory! And now Jesus points out:

4. our blessing of believing without seeing (29) That's all who will ever believe after Jesus returns to heaven, that's all who have believed over the last 2 millennia, that's US! We can't see Jesus; He's not here on earth anymore. We have to do what Thomas could not. We have to take the word of those who saw Him; we have to accept their word as truth and believe without seeing! And Jesus calls us blessed, happy, because we haven't adopted that attitude of Thomas, we've chosen to believe in spite of the fact of not seeing personally! That's what we call people to, to believe our word without seeing, to trust what we tell them about Jesus. But the good news is that after they choose to believe, they DO see Him! Not with their eyes, but the Spirit bears witness with their spirits that they are children of God. They begin to see Him at work in their lives, to hear the whisper of His voice in their thoughts. But believing comes first. If you wait until you see, you'll probably never believe unless Jesus chooses to give you some vision or answer some prayer in a special way and He does do those things. But His call is to believe without seeing, to believe on the evidence of the eternal word of God. That is to be enough for us. And then, as John closes the story of this Resurrection Day, he adds a personal note which explains His:

V. John's Purpose In Writing These Things (30-31) There were hundreds of miracles and signs that Jesus did, but John only chose to record seven key ones and tell the story of Christ's death and resurrection. He explains that he deliberately limited his material; it is not meant to be an entire history of Jesus' life, but it's more like a tract that is given to the reader to make a point. What for? So:

1. that we may personally believe the Good News about Jesus There is John's altar call, his invitation. "I have told you these things; now I call YOU personally to believe that Jesus IS the Christ, the Son of the Living God! I know you can't see Him, but I'm telling you the truth of the Good News that Jesus is God and He came to earth and died for You. Now believe!" Why? So:

2. that we may personally receive His life God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in him shall not perish but have eternal life. God wants you to have life; that's why He gave His Son. Jesus wants you to have life; that's why He came and died and rose from the dead. When you believe personally that Jesus is God and died for you, you receive His life.

We always characterize Thomas as a doubter, but Thomas became convinced that Jesus is alive. In fact, he became so convinced that we are told he later ventured into the regions of Persia preaching the Gospel. After that, they say, it was Ethiopia and finally he made it as far as India where he penetrated farther and farther east to a place near the mouth of the Ganges River. Many were converted to Christ and it aroused the anger of the Brahmin priests. So, they waited for him at a place where he retired outside the city for prayer. While he was praying, they shot him with darts and one of them ran him through with a spear. Thomas was so convinced that he not only took literally the Lord's commission and ventured into dangerous lands, but he was so convinced of the truth of eternal life that he willingly laid down his earthly life for the Savior. How about you? I know you know the story. But Jesus IS alive right now today and He calls you to believe it without seeing Him, to trust that He died for your sins and that He lives to save you. If you have done that, His commission is for you! The purpose of your life is to obey Him and spread the Good News to the entire world! Is that your purpose? And if you haven't done that, would you do it right now?

John: The Gospel Of Life

Feed My Sheep - Ch. 21

The last chapter of John's Gospel is the story of one final incident that occurred between Jesus' resurrection and His ascension. Jesus had made several appearances on that first Resurrection Sunday and then one appearance a week later as the disciples were gathered together so He could set Thomas straight. Now the story picks up sometime later, no longer in Jerusalem, but back up north in Galilee where the majority of Jesus' ministry took place and where His disciples were from. There on the shores of their familiar and beloved lake, this important scene takes place. It begins with:

I. A Miraculous Catch Of Fish (1-14) Let's read:

1. the circumstances of the story (1-6) The first question is, "Why are they back in Galilee?" The answer is that:
a. the disciples returned to Galilee at Jesus' command When He appeared to the women that first Sunday, He told them plainly in Mt. 28:10, "Do not be afraid. Go and tell my brothers to go to Galilee; there they will see me" We have no record, but I'm almost sure Jesus would have repeated those instructions during His conversation with the whole group. I don't know how long it took for this instruction to sink in but eventually they got the message: "Go back to Galilee and you will see Me there!" It was in Galilee that Jesus wanted to spend the larger portion of those 40 days with them before His ascension, away from the pressure of the authorities in Jerusalem. When they arrived there, it was not clear where they should go or what they should do. Seven of the group happened to be together on this day and at least four of them were fishermen and their families still owned fishing boats. So, they did what came naturally:

b. Peter returns to fishing and the rest follow him. They get in his boat at evening for a night of fishing. They need both food and income and this is a ready means at hand. But they fail utterly. They fish the entire night, these seasoned fishermen, and have not a single fish to show for it. As morning dawns, they are coming in to shore discouraged and empty-handed. But as they draw near:

c. a person appears on shore and gives them direction They are still about a hundred yards out so they can't see clearly who it is. But sometimes people on shore can see schools of fish from their angle that people in the boat can't see. And, whether to humor him or just to give it one last try to catch some breakfast, they throw the net out on the right side at His suggestion and to their shock and surprise:

d. their net is suddenly overflowing with fish It's so loaded they can't pull it out of the water. Later they count them and there are 153 fish in there! That just doesn't happen, not even on the best of days! They stand in the boat struggling against the impossible weight of the net and suddenly:

2. the disciples recognize Jesus (7-8) John is the first to catch on, to realize that nobody could do this but Jesus and all were quick to agree. How did they know? Well, I'm quite sure it dawned on them that this:

a. it was a replay of Jesus' initial call to them When Jesus first called them away from their nets three years earlier, He had done almost the exact same thing. Lk. 5:1-11 tells the story of how, after they had been fishing all night and caught nothing, that Jesus came by and used their boat to teach from. Then He told them to launch out into the deep and let down their nets. Peter had moaned a bit, "We've worked hard all night and have caught nothing, but because you say so, we will." But they threw their nets in and suddenly they were not only full of fish, but so full that they began to break when they tried to pull them in! In that moment they had realized Jesus' Divine power and had left all to follow Him. Now here they stand again with nets suddenly full and they know it could only be the Lord! Peter is so sure that he forgets the net and simply dives into the water to get to Jesus as fast as he can! But it was more than a way to identify Jesus:

b. it was a reminder of Jesus' lesson to them: He had told them that first time when they left everything to follow Him, Don't be afraid; from now on you will catch men! That was to be their call. They were no longer to be fishers of fish and now it's clear that there is no going back to it. There was not going to be a return to life as usual now that He was leaving. They were going to catch men! And if they would listen to Him and obey Him instead of following their own plans and depending on their own abilities, they would be successful; their nets would be full. They would catch men! By the way, that's not a bad lesson for us either. The call to follow Jesus is the call to be fishers of men; that's what our lives are to be about, catching people for Jesus. But He knows where the fish are. He knows where exactly to let down the nets, to share the Gospel. And if we do what He says, the way He says it and depend on Him and not on ourselves, there will be a harvest! People will be caught in the Gospel net and become followers of Jesus. At any rate, the disciples finally arrive ashore with their load of fish and:

3. Jesus eats a meal with them (9-14) They found Jesus had bread at hand and fish already roasting on the fire, to which they added more. His appearance seemed to be slightly different somehow, but not one dared to ask who He was because they knew, they were sure it was Jesus. And no doubt, when He took the bread and gave it to them and took the fish and gave it to them it increased their certainty because:

a. it reminded them of Jesus multiplying the bread and fish Once before in this very region He had taken bread and given thanks like this and given it to them and taken fish like these and given them to them and 5,000 people were fed. And though there was no actual multiplication here, it was as though Jesus brought them 153 fish out of nothing! So together they sat and ate their meal. You see:

b. it verified again to them as a group that He was alive This was the third time He had appeared to them as a whole group. It was not just the report of one individual, but together they saw and experienced Him, talked with Him, ate with Him. And:

c. it demonstrated again the reality of His new body They touched Him; He ate the fish with them. This was no ghost. This was Jesus in the flesh, risen from the dead.

But the real point of His appearing to them this day was not so much about fish or breakfast. Last time He had appeared to give certainty to doubting Thomas; this time He came primarily to extend:

II. A Gracious Restoration For Peter (15-17) Peter had already seen Jesus alive at least three times but one issue remained to be addressed. Peter was once the ringleader, the spokesperson of the disciples, the first to open his mouth. But on that most horrible Thursday night when it counted, Peter had denied Jesus three times. It has impacted him and you can tell that it is still on his mind. Notice:

1. the sincere humility of Peter as Jesus asks him, "Simon, do you love Me more than these others do?" That night he had boldly declared, "even if all the rest fall away from you, I won't. No matter what they do, I am willing to die for you!" But he wasn't, and now he knows it. His boasting is gone. He won't compare himself to the rest again. He won't even use the strong word for love that is in Jesus' question. Jesus uses agape, sacrificial love. Peter simply replies, "Lord, you know I care for you." He uses phileo which means family love or friendship. Jesus asks him a second time and he still won't say it, so finally Jesus asks the third time using his word, "Do you care for Me?" Peter knows the pride of his heart. He knows how lifted up he was and the depths to which he fell. He's not going to make that mistake again. But notice:

2. the deep concern of Jesus He's not looking for an apology or even an admission. Peter is already forgiven. Jesus has one thing on His mind. Three times He gives him the same command: feed My sheep, take care of them, shepherd them, pasture them, feed my precious lambs! That's what is on Jesus' heart. He's leaving soon; He's going back to heaven. He has to have somebody to tend His precious little flock of followers, someone to lead them, to show them the way, to watch out for them and warn them of danger, someone who will love them like He does, to whom they will also be precious. You see, Jesus loves His sheep. He laid down His life for those sheep! He is looking for people, then and now, who will be pastors, "pasturers", literally shepherds, who will take care of His flock. Leaders who will love them and tend them when they have problems and feed them with His word. And His point was, "If you love Me, then love My sheep; feed them, take care of them, shepherd them!" I was 19 when I heard that call, when Jesus made it clear to me that I was to be a pastor, to take care of His sheep. And after some 40 years of doing it, it seems to me that one of the most needed things both here and around the world is pastors. Jesus needs pastors to shepherd His flock, but here not many seem to be signing up for the job! In many areas of the world the church is growing by leaps and bounds and the crying need is always pastors, experienced mature leaders to tend the flock! Maybe He's calling some of you here, some of you young men, to that very calling, to shepherd His flock. Maybe He's saying to you: do you love Me? Then give your life to pastoring; feed My sheep! But beyond that, nearly all of us have a little flock for whom we are responsible, whether it's our family, our own children, or our Sunday School class or our Pioneer Club or our Bible study, some little flock of His sheep for whom we are responsible. And Jesus' challenge is the same, "Do you love Me? Then love them! Feed them! Shepherd them! Care for them the way I, your Great Shepherd of the Sheep, care for you!" So, here Jesus was giving Peter:

3. the renewed charge of leadership Three times he had denied. So, three times Jesus let him affirm, "I love you!" and, in essence, said, "You fell but it no longer matters. You are forgiven. You are restored. I put YOU in charge. I TRUST you! I entrust you with My sheep!" Now there's a word of encouragement for me when I fall, when I fail, and for all of us because we all fall! He will not hold it against us! He is willing to trust us again. He will not keep us from serving, lay us aside as useless on the shelf. No matter how far we have fallen, if we are now humble and we love Him, He has a place in His program for us to serve! He is a God of the second chance! And the third and the fourth! And, by the way, that's the same grace He calls us to extend to others when they fail us, to really forgive them, to lay aside the hurt they caused and to extend to them the grace of trusting them again.

That's what Jesus came for this day, to lift Peter out of the ashes of failure and humiliation and extend to him that marvelous grace. But in the process, He also gave him:

III. An Ominous Revelation Of The Future (18-23) For here we have:

1. Jesus' prediction of the manner of Peter's death (18-19) I don't think anyone really understood what Jesus was saying at the time, not even Peter. It did sound ominous. In old age he would lose his own freedom of will; someone else would determine what happened to him and would make him go where he didn't want to go. There he would stretch out his hands. It sounded like martyrdom; it sounded like being led to death. And John, who wrote this Gospel late in the first century, maybe 20 years or so after Peter actually died, is reflecting back to Jesus' words and can see clearly now that Jesus was indeed predicting the kind of death Peter would die and how it would glorify God. But no matter whether he understood it at that moment or not, the call was clear, "Follow Me!" That meant to death. That meant to take up the cross, to serve Him until death, no matter what. But notice:

2. Peter's concern over the future of John (20-22) Peter was feeling lonely in that moment. Jesus had in essence said, "You're going to die for Me!" And Peter's response was, "What about him! Does He have to die for You too?" And Jesus response was clear, "My will for His life is not your business; it is Mine! If I want him to die in old age in his bed, that's My right. You have only one responsibility - to follow Me, to do what I tell YOU!" Have you ever asked something like that? "How come I have to go through this and so-and-so doesn't?" Have you ever looked around from the lot that God has given you in life and wanted to complain to Him about how good other people have it? They don't have to suffer what you're putting up with. But Jesus says, "That's my business. Who are you to judge another man's servant! You have only one responsibility. Accept the plan I've laid out for you to serve My purpose and follow Me!" At the same time, we have:

3. John's clarification of a false rumor about himself (23) John was already an older man when he wrote this. He was the last of the apostles to die, somewhere around 90 AD and the only one who was not martyred. Because of Jesus' words "IF I want Him to live until I come..." people had started to look for His coming based on the timing of John's life, to assume Jesus had to come back before he died and he was getting old! But John wants to re-emphasize that that wasn't true. Jesus did not say that would be the case. He only said, "IF it is, that's MY business." And then finally at the end we have:

IV. A Closing Word By John (24-25) A two verse epilogue, if you will, in which:

1. he verifies the truth of what he's written In other words, He's swearing to the truth of his writing as an eyewitness, as one who lived through it, who saw the miracles and heard the words and wrote them down exactly. And at the same time:

2. he explains the limitations of what he's written He chose only to include certain important things from Jesus' life in his account. There were many others. And he uses what I'd call a slang phrase to make his point: "the whole world couldn't hold enough books to write it all down". He means that in three years there was SO much more that he didn't and couldn't tell. To us it means not to treat this book as a simple history book. It is an account of chosen key events which prove that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God. It tells us what God has decided we need to know, not everything.

And you may have noticed that I deliberately left you hanging a moment ago when we were talking about Peter. I never did tell you what John already knew had happened to him. It seems that Peter stayed in Jerusalem for some years and then began to travel, as did all the other apostles. There is no Scriptural record of it and even the early church fathers tell us little, except this: somehow Peter and Paul ended up together in Rome in the 60's AD when that mad emperor Nero blamed the Christians for the burning of the city and he started to slaughter them wholesale. Both men were said to be in the Mamertine prison in Rome and each one wrote a final letter from there. We have them in our New Testament as 2 Timothy and 2 Peter. Paul, because he was a Roman citizen, was held and later beheaded. But Peter was sentenced to the more common fate of crucifixion. So, one day, he was led out of the prison and up the Vatican Hill on the west bank of the Tiber River to be crucified, just as Jesus was led up Calvary's hill. Upon reaching the place of execution he is reported to have told the soldiers that he was unworthy to be crucified in the same manner as his Lord and he begged them to crucify him upside down instead. And there, face down, Peter, the one-time denier, glorified Jesus to the end. Jesus had said, "Follow Me!" and He did, all the way to a cross! I don't know whether Jesus has a cross for you like Peter or a dying in old age like John. But I do know you have to leave that with Him. He has only one command for you, "Follow Me! No matter where I lead, no matter what may happen. I am your living Lord. Follow Me and I'll meet you in glory!"

Famous Last Words: The Upper Room Discourse - Jn. 13-17

Wash One Another's Feet: Humility - 13:1-17

The last hours that Jesus had together with His disciples were spent in an upper room as they celebrated the Passover together for the last time. While they ate and talked together during this final evening, Jesus shared with them His last words. Last words are important. The things you say to the people you care about when you know you're about to die are the deepest things of your heart, the things you consider it most important for them to know. We are privileged that John records five entire chapters worth of the things that Jesus said that night and we have them to treasure for ourselves. These are likely the most famous last words in all of history. They are certainly the most valuable and we'll devote ourselves to studying them in order to deepen our hearts' passion for our Savior. There are 10 sections in this discourse and each one seems to have a particular phrase that stands out, a phrase that is familiar to us as Bible readers and one that seems to summarize the content of that section. We begin today in Chapter 13 by looking at:

I. John's Introduction To This Discourse (1-3) Make no mistake:

1. Jesus knew the importance of these last hours He knew the time had come for Him to leave this world (1a), that this was His last time with these men in whom He had invested the last 3 ½ years of His life and ministry, that this very night He would be arrested and, on the morrow, crucified. According to verse (3), He knew that He was about to leave earth and return to the Father and since God literally had put all things into His hands, He chose to do the absolute most important thing He could do with these moments:

2. Jesus showed His disciples the depth of His heart's love for them (1b) He had loved them all along. They were His own; they belonged to Him, but this night He wanted to love them to the uttermost, to show them the full extent of His love. That's what these words that we have in these chapters are; they are words of love. They are Jesus pouring out His heart to us, saying, "I tell you this because this is how much I love you!" These chapters are not simply a bunch of commands to obeyed and promises to be claimed; these last words are Jesus shouting to us, "I love you with all My heart, so please listen to what I am saying. It is important! I am saying it to you because you NEED it!" Listen, John was sitting there that night; he heard every word and this is his assessment looking back on it. That night was a night of deepest love and these words are words of deepest love. Receive them from the Savior who loved you enough to tell you these things!

However, the evening did not start out exactly the way one would hope that such a serious night would. The Passover meal involved then, and still does, a whole series of special ceremonial, symbolic actions which will only distract us now if we focus on them. However, one is worth noting. The various dishes and pieces had been prepared and the first cup of wine had been served to all the men as they reclined around the low table. As they finished this cup, the host was expected to get up and perform a ceremonial washing of his hands, but instead we read about:

II. Jesus' Action Which Shocked His Disciples (4-5) Their jaws dropped. They were absolutely floored, stunned speechless, as they watched Jesus take off his tunic and begin to wash their feet. Now there's one more piece of information you need to understand. This action:

1. it was prefaced by their prideful arguing - Luke records something that actually happened at the beginning of the supper. Luke 22:24,...a dispute arose among them as to which of them was considered to be greatest. Can you even imagine it? Hours from the Cross and here they are around the table, beginning their last meal by arguing with each other about who is the greatest disciple, which one should be in charge, like a bunch of schoolboys clamoring to be "king of the hill". The thought of their selfish pride is appalling to us, although it's not like that kind of dispute doesn't happen among His followers in our churches even today - it does! But it must have broken Jesus' heart. Luke 22:25-27, Jesus said to them, ...you are not to be like that. Instead, the greatest among you should be like the youngest, and the one who rules like the one who serves. For who is greater, the one who is at the table or the one who serves? Is it not the one who is at the table? But I am among you as one who serves. My guess is that it was at that very moment that Jesus abruptly stood up from the table, and instead of washing His hands as they expected, took off His robe, tied a towel around His waist and began one by one to wash their feet. It was absolutely shocking because:

2. it was an act that displayed abject humility Israel was a dry and dusty place. Streets and paths were unpaved dirt lanes and people did not wear socks or have enclosed leather shoes like we do; they wore simple sandals tied on with thongs. You could take a full bath and simply walk across the street to your neighbor's house and your feet would be dirty. So, every house had its basin of water near the door with a towel for the washing of feet. If guests came, it would be the job of the lowest-regarded person in the house to wash their feet, a servant or slave if there was one. If not, then the children and if none, the guests would be forced to wash their own because the homeowner would certainly not do it. It was the job of a lowly servant, a slave. Any person of any level of rank or importance would never do it. They certainly would never stoop to do it for one another, so there they lay round the table with their dirty feet. But now here is Jesus, their Lord and Master, the Son of God, naked to the waist, on His knees with a basin and towel, doing the job of the lowest servant, washing the dust of the street off their feet. The magnitude of this act was not lost on them so it is no wonder that the very first one He came to, Peter, raised an objection. You see:

3. it was an act that required submission Peter had to lift his feet and give them to Jesus to wash. He had to receive that act of humility, but it was tough (6-7) "Lord, what on earth are you doing?!" Peter stammered. And Jesus said, "I'll tell you later, give me your feet!" You see, humility:

a. it is hard for us to understand Humility is not the way the world works! Rabbis and Teachers and Masters, don't wash feet! Board chairmen and CEO's and managers don't clean toilets! Elders and teachers and pastors don't sweep floors or shovel snow or put out the trash! We could never imagine the President fixing us eggs for breakfast. Humility is not the system we're part of. We clamor for the top and when we get there, we leave the bottom to the bottom people! Charles Treptow was in a building downtown. When he went into the men's room, he saw a man who seemed overdressed for the job he was doing. In a neatly pressed business suit, he was going from one urinal to another, using small scissors to remove the soggy cigarette butts. He smiled and greeted Charles, who commented, "I wouldn't want to have your job." "Oh, no, sir. I guess not, but it has to be done. It looks bad when customers come into the restroom. Makes people think we don't care, so I clean them up every day." "Do many guys throw their cigarette butts in the urinals?" Charles asked as the well-dressed man checked the stalls. "Well, every morning I pick six, eight, twelve out of every urinal!" "Why do they do that?" Charles asked. "Oh, they're just lazy...or they don't care. Maybe they weren't taught any better when they were growing up, or maybe they just do it for meanness. They probably never had to clean up after themselves," he said. Charles had finished and was about to leave. He asked one last question: "You been working here long?" The reply was startling. "Oh, I don't work here. I have an office across the street." "You what!" Charles exclaimed. "You don't work here, but you clean up the restroom? Why do you do it?" "Because of the next man who comes in here--I want him to notice that this place is clean and that someone cares." "Even if he throws a cigarette butt into the urinal you just cleaned?" Charles was getting a little edgy. "That doesn't matter," said the stranger. "Just as long as this facility is clean for an hour, or maybe two. And if the next guy who comes in here notices that the restroom is clean, maybe that will make an impression. Just maybe he'll leave the restroom a better place when he walks out..." After Charles washed his hands, he found himself using the paper towel to wipe up the water splashed around the sink. After throwing the paper towel in the trash, he stooped over and picked up a wet piece of paper from the floor and threw it away. Once outside, Charles saw the other man whistling as he straightened his tie and headed across the street to his office. Says Charles, "I departed a wiser and more alert man in the kingdom of God." [Parables, Etc. Dec 1995. Page 2.] Powerful examples of humility shock us and even move us, but much of the time:

b. our flesh wants to resist it (8) Peter didn't want his feet washed by Jesus. Why? He thought it a shame, an ignominious dishonor that he could not be part of! But Jesus said, "If you want ME, this is part of the package. If I am Lord, you have to do what I say even if it goes against everything inside you; now give Me your feet!" And Peter's resistance broke. He couldn't bear the thought of losing Jesus; he loved Him too much so:

c. Peter eventually submitted completely (9-10) Now he's overboard the other way, "I want you, Lord; wash all of me if that's what it takes! Give me a whole bath!" And Jesus has to tell him, "You're missing the point!" You see, this foot washing:

(1) it was not really about cleansing at all. You realize, of course, that in that day they didn't have individual bathrooms, right? No pipes, no running water. They had public baths where there was a water source. So, every once in a while, you'd walk a few blocks to the bathhouse and get all clean. Then you'd put your sandals on and walk home on the dirt street. So, when you got home, you'd only have to wash your feet! He's teaching us this: We're already cleansed spiritually; we're made pure by Him. Our sins have been washed away because of His death on the cross. So, we need only to yield our feet to Him; we need only shake off our foolish pride and submit to Him in order to have part in His work. This powerful object lesson:

(2) it is really about surrendering our proud preconceptions, and we all have them. We'd never do this and we'd never do that! If we want to be part of what Jesus is doing in the world, pride has to go and we have to be willing to do absolutely anything He wants.

The silence is almost deafening as one by one Jesus goes to each man and washes their feet. Then He finishes and goes back to the table and the teaching moment is set. We have:

III. Jesus' Command To Us (12-17) The command stands out clearly: Wash One Another's Feet. Now what on earth does He mean? Is it that the washing of feet should be something we do when we gather together the same way we celebrate the Lord's Supper? A few churches have taken it literally to mean that and to this day they have foot washing services. There's nothing wrong with that; I've done it twice and it really is a humbling experience, even today. But it wasn't what Jesus was getting at. The early church knew what He meant. In 1 Tim. 5:10 Paul commended the type of woman whose habit is ... showing hospitality, washing the feet of the saints, helping those in trouble and devoting herself to all kinds of good deeds. By washing feet, Jesus:

1. He provided us a binding example of humble selfless service to others, a live demonstration of what it means to ... serve one another in love - Gal. 5:13. It was the word serve and the concept of servant that Jesus wanted to imprint in their minds, not the physical act of foot washing. And even though you and I weren't sitting there that night, we still need to understand that this was not just something Jesus did for the disciples. He has done it for all of us!

a. He has "washed our feet" This simple act points to a much bigger act of servanthood. Look with me at Phil. 2:5-8. He "washed our feet" by taking off His heavenly glory and wrapping Himself in a human body and then putting Himself in the lowest place by allowing Himself to be hung on a cross as a common criminal in our place! He did it all for us! He, God the Son, the Lord of Glory, emptied Himself of all but love, He laid down everything to serve us by saving us! But Paul's point was back in verse 5, Let THIS mind be in YOU! You see:

b. His act obligates us to follow Him in doing the same That's what Jesus said in (13-14). "You have to do what I did. It's not optional! It's not merely that you ought to take Me example to heart and try to be like me if you can. Look at the verb. It's not the kind of should that means it would be nice if you do it. It is the kind of should that means you are obligated! You are bound! I did all this for you! I became a servant and served you! You have no choice but to do the same if this means anything at all to you!"

c. to do otherwise is to esteem ourselves greater than Him (16) To say, "I'm not willing, I don't want to!" is to say that I am better than Jesus Christ, that I deserve better than Jesus Christ, that I am more important in my own value system than Jesus Christ! Jesus did what He did that night and He did what He did on the cross:

2. He did it so that humility would characterize our lives (15) "I've given you a living, visual illustration of humility, of servanthood. That's how I want you to live always! Humility is to be your hallmark forever! Now what does humility mean in practical day to day terms. Well, I believe that Paul explained it pretty clearly in the two verses just before he said, Your attitude should be the same as that of Christ Jesus. - Phil. 2:3-4. There are four simple principles in those verses that define humility. First:

a. we never strive to get our own needs met ahead of others You've never lived until you've stood in line in a third world country. Whether it's to get on a bus or to get waited on by a clerk, everybody literally pushes and shoves to get ahead of one another, to be first. That's selfish ambition; it's just normal to them, but it should be absolutely abnormal to us. To thrust others aside, to ignore their needs and strive for my own first, should be actually repulsive to us. It's not like our Savior. Second:

b. we never think that we are better or more worthy than others Paul said, For who makes you different from anyone else? What do you have that you did not receive? And if you did receive it, why do you boast as though you did not? - 1 Cor. 4:7. Absolutely everything about who you are and what you have is a gift from God. It is simply a choice of His grace that you are not sitting in a pile of rubble in Haiti this morning or begging on the streets of Calcutta. If we have the mind of Christ, we see all people as people with the same needs and hurts and value as ourselves; we hold no vain, empty notion of glory about us. Third:

c. we always esteem others to rank above ourselves Notice he didn't say that we see ourselves as the worst or least of all people. Humility is not thinking that we are dirt, that we are worthless. That's simply lie-based thinking. We're all the same; we're no better and no worse. God loves and cares about us all. But in our thinking, we CHOOSE to rank others above us, to think about them and their needs and problems as a having a higher priority than our own. Or to say the same thing another way like verse 4 does:

d. we always focus on others rather than ourselves Look at the similar terms down in 2:20-21. Humility is to take a genuine interest in the welfare, the things, the needs of others, in the things that concern Jesus, rather than our own things. It is to be always all about them, not about us. If the things of Jesus are your first priority, then others will be too. I know it will embarrass him, but I can't think of any better human example of this than our own Pastor Jim. If you know him, you know that he is always thinking about you first, always offering to help you, to do things that need done before you get a chance, going out of his way and sacrificing his own time and energy because you need something, willing to do the most menial thing and to help at the most inconvenient time. That's what Christ meant when He exhorted us, Wash one another's feet! We may be failing miserably, just as the disciples were at the very moment Jesus said this, but it is never too late to confess our sins and to ask Him to change our hearts.

Vernon Grounds, who was then the president of Denver Conservative Baptist Theological Seminary, challenged the graduating class of 1973 with the truth of John 13:15, "Wash one another's feet!". Dr. Grounds told the graduates that he was going to present to them a tangible symbol that could help them in their future ministries. As the classmates filed quietly to the front, they wondered what it could be--a special Scripture verse, a little book, an inscribed medallion? To their surprise, it was a small square of white terry cloth. One graduate, who went on to serve as an overseas missionary, says, "We were commissioned to go into the world as servants. That small piece of towel, frayed and grubby from years in my wallet, is a constant reminder of that moving moment and the truth that our basic call is to serve." Go out today and always wash one another's feet.

One Of You: Apostasy and Denial - 13:18-30, 36-38

In this series of messages, we are examining together Jesus' last words to His beloved disciples during those hours they had together in Upper Room the night before He was crucified. We're studying them because He revealed these things out of a heart filled with love as the most important things he could leave us with. His first lesson as we enter John 13 was powerful. He modeled the complete humility He wanted them and us to have by washing his own disciples' feet and then commanded them: Wash one another's feet! Yet even as He knelt with the basin and the towel, there is another fact that is becoming foremost in His mind. He hints at it back in verse 10, even before He really starts: ...you are clean, though not every one of you! And when he's done with the humility lesson, He returns to explain that thought directly at verse 18. We dare never forget the sad fact that:

I. One Of Jesus' Disciples Betrayed Him That Night (18-30) Read (18-21). Did you hear His voice tremble even as the awful words came out? Listen, listen! One of YOU is going betray Me! Beside Him, reclining all around the table, lay 12 men. Chosen men. Men He had prayed about selecting to become His own disciples. Men whom He had walked with through 3 ½ years of ministry up and down the land. Men into whom He had poured every ounce of Himself to prepare them to lead the Church He would build. Men whom He had come to love as deeply as His own family and with whom He planned to share a Kingdom forever. How it must have wrenched His heart to say the words, One of YOU will betray me - tonight!

1. Jesus warned them all that one of them was a traitor They needed to know. It was important. And I have no doubt that they were as absolutely stunned and saddened to hear it as He was to have to say it, but not nearly as stunned as they soon would be. In a couple of hours, they would be prayerfully resting in the dark in the Garden of Gethsemane. And a mob would come upon them, a mob with soldiers holding swords and clubs and torches, a mob that was bent on seizing Jesus and dragging Him away under arrest. And at the head of that mob, leading them on, would be one of their own number, Judas, the son of Simon, Iscariotes, a man from the town of Kerioth, one who had been shortly before eating with them around the table. It would be like us seeing one of our Elders rush in here this morning with an AK47 shouting "Allahu Akbar" and threatening to spray the congregation with bullets and suddenly realizing that all along he's been, not an elder of the church as we thought, but an undercover Al Qaida operative! Jesus knew they would be shocked, blown away, devastated, tempted by the Enemy to think that the foundation of their whole faith in Jesus was destroyed, that it was all a hoax, a pipe dream. So, He told them about it before it actually happened because:

a. He wanted to reassure them that this was all in God's plan He did that, in verse 18, by quoting a scripture, Ps. 41:9, Even my close friend whom I trusted; He who shares my bread has lifted up His heel against Me! He's saying, "That was written 1,000 years ago, not about David only, but about Me and about this night and about My betrayal. Though it surprises you, it has not taken God by surprise. It is a part of His plan that He has known all along. Like the arrest and the crucifixion, it has to happen. This is not Satan winning the battle; this is God doing what He said; He's in control!" Look at verse 19:

b. He wanted this betrayal to confirm their faith instead of shaking it When Judas came running up with mob, He wanted them to be able to say, "Look, it's happening exactly as Jesus said it would; He really IS the Messiah! He really IS God! This is all happening just as He planned!" In reality:

c. He wanted to further confirm His own deity He wanted them to be convinced, according to verse 20, that HE was the ONE God sent and that by receiving Him and following Him, they had indeed followed God! He is who He claimed to be even though these things were happening.

What Satan wanted to use for evil, Jesus planned to turn around for good and in hindsight as they thought afterward about this saying and all the other things that had happened just as Jesus said, their faith was indeed confirmed and strengthened. But there at the table in that moment they were clueless as to what He was trying to say. So, Jesus said it again plainly in verse 21, One of YOU is going to betray Me! (22) Their jaws were hanging open, blank looks on their faces. And finally, they began to stir. The other gospels tell us that they began to ask one another who it might be and each in turn asked Jesus, Is it I, Lord?, but He did not answer. It was as this buzz was still going on that:

2. Jesus specifically identified Judas as the traitor (23-26) Jesus did not point out Judas before the whole group. Rather:

a. He whispered it privately to John as all were asking "Is it I?" John was reclining next to Jesus and Peter was across the table going, "Ask Him! Ask Him!" So, John leaned back against Him and whispered quietly to Jesus, "Lord, who is it?" And Jesus whispered back, It is the one to whom I hand this "sop", this "piece", that I'm dipping in the dish. Now please realize that this action was another part of the Passover Seder ceremony. The host at one point would take a piece of the lamb's flesh, wrap it in unleavened bread and dip it in a dish of bitter herbs. He would then pass it to the guest next to him who would break off a piece to eat and pass it on around the table. Judas must have been sitting to Christ's left and as He dipped the "sop" into the dish, He handed it directly to Judas. Thus, John would know who Jesus was pointing out, but nobody else would notice anything strange. But John doesn't tell the whole story. It was at that very moment that:

b. He warned Judas personally one last time - Mt. 26:23-25 The warning was public, out loud. But Judas was the last to say, Surely it is not I, Rabbi? just as Jesus was handing him the sop and Jesus whispered back quite literally, You have said it yourself. In other words, Yes, it's you! Do you see what He's doing? He knows that Judas has already been to the chief priests and agreed to betray Him for 30 pieces of silver. He knows that he's about to leave and go get the soldiers and lead them to the garden. He wanted Judas to know that He knew! But Jesus loves Him and is trying to pull him back from the brink of the abyss, from losing his soul for all eternity. He's quietly shouting, "Don't do it! You will regret that you were ever born, that you ever existed at all! You will burn forever! Turn back!". But Judas ignored that last appeal, took the sop without responding and in doing so:

c. Judas made his final choice to yield to Satan (27a) Satan entered him and took control. Look back to verse (2). Satan had already literally put it into his heart to betray Jesus. The idea was there, the opportunity in place. But now he chooses, he yields, he says "Yes" in his heart, and Satan takes over. The deed is now fixed and both he and Jesus know it. Judas knows he is discovered and he jumps up from the table and runs out. (27b-30) The other disciples have no clue what is happening, but when Jesus says, Do it quickly! it becomes apparent to us that:

d. Jesus set in motion the events leading to His own crucifixion He's saying, "Hurry, get the mob and bring them; don't be late!" It is apparent that He pressured Judas early in the supper, not only to root him out so that He could have time to freely share His heart alone with the 11 genuine disciples who loved Him, but so that everything would happen on schedule according to His plan. He looked like the victim that night, but He was in charge of it all! Now let's stop for a moment to ponder Judas; this is for us:

3. a most sobering lesson How can it be that one so privileged, so close to Jesus, so apparently one of His chief followers through and through, one who had perhaps even cast out demons and healed the sick in His name when he was sent out with the others, how can it be that such a one can turn on Christ, betray Him and be lost?! The sobering lesson is that Apostasy happens! Simon the Magician of Samaria believed and was baptized by Philip and followed him everywhere, but he later turned away and became an enemy of the faith. This has happened again and again from that night down through the ages. There have always been those who to every appearance seemed to be the most sincere followers of Jesus who apostatize, who turn away from Him and repudiate everything they once professed. You probably know some of them! Look with me at Heb. 6:4-8. There are those who understand the truth and know the Word and profess to believe it, who taste the blessings we enjoy, who see and experience the power of the Holy Spirit at work and yet they come to a point where they make a choice to reject it all and walk away. They leave the faith and say, "I don't believe that anymore" or "that's not real" and some even become enemies of the faith they once professed and they stay that way to the end of their lives and are lost forever. Now that shakes us! How can they do that;

how is that possible? Could it be true of people I know and love? Could they be apostates? Or worse, could it happen to me? Well, before I answer that let's look at a second fact Jesus brings up that complicates the matter:

II. All Of Jesus' Disciples Denied Him That Night (36-38) After Judas left:

1. Jesus warned them that He would be leaving them (33) and Peter picked up on that in (36). It is extremely difficult to harmonize the exact order of what was said when that night, but whether this discussion was continued at that moment or picked back up at the end of the night, it is important that we turn back to Matthew's account in order to see that it was not just Peter whom Jesus spoke to:

2. He then warned them that ALL of them would fall away - Mt. 26:31 They would all trip over a stumbling block personally and fall, not some day, but that very night! In the garden when the mob showed up, they would all forsake Him and flee to save their own lives. Jesus told them ahead of time they would do it and even that the Scripture in Zech. 13:7 predicted it, that it was part of God's plan, just like Judas' betrayal! But instead of listening and taking it seriously:

a. Peter insisted that HE would never deny Jesus (37) - Mt. 26:33 Can you hear the pride? "I will die for You! No matter what anybody else does, I WILL NEVER be unfaithful to You!" And he was not alone in that attitude:

b. all the disciples proudly joined him - Mt. 26:35 None of them believed what Jesus was saying. None of them could conceive that they would possibly ever deny Him. And we're like that too. But none of us has ever faced a mob with swords and clubs; none of us have been arrested and sentenced to death for our faith like our brother Shoiab Assadullah in Afghanistan was in January; none of us has ever been told to renounce Christ or die as our brothers and sisters have in many places in the Muslim world or in China. None of us has ever been tortured for days by the secret police or had a gun pointed at our head and been offered an immediate choice to live or die. It is easy to boast of what you will "NEVER" do, while reclining at a table or sitting in a pew. I think those words YOU WILL ALL should take us back. They tell us that apart from the supernatural power of Christ, we all have a breaking point! They tell us that if it were not for Christ's keeping us, that none of us would stay faithful to the end! But they didn't get it, especially Peter, so:

3. Jesus specifically predicted Peter's thrice-repeated denial (38) "Before tomorrow morning, YOU will deny knowing Me three separate times!" You all know the story of how Peter did just that, how he was brave enough to follow Jesus into the high priest's courtyard, but there when he was confronted by people three times he cursed and swore that he never knew Jesus. And then a rooster crowed and what he had done hit home like a ton of bricks and he ran out into the night and wept bitterly. But, fortunately for us, that sad prediction was not all that Jesus said to Peter that night. Turn with me to Lk. 22:31-34. Oh, see the love of our Savior. He told us what was really happening in Peter's case and why it was different from that of Judas.

a. He explained the limited nature of Satan's power Satan has to ask permission to shake our lives, to bring in events like what they experienced in the garden that knock us to our knees and blow away all the stuff that's unimportant to us. Just like he had to ask God for permission to test Job! And God chooses sometimes to say "Yes", to let him do his worst to try to show that our faith isn't real and that it will blow away like so much chaff in the wind when we're pushed to the limit. But Jesus:

b. He confirmed the reality of Peter's faith and His undergirding of it "I have prayed for you; I am the One holding you up; your faith is NOT going to fail! I will not let it! You will deny knowing Me and that will break your self-centered pride, but in your heart you will STILL believe. Your faith is genuine!" And:

c. He assured Peter of his and their repentance and return "You will be sorry afterward for what you did and you will repent of it and ask forgiveness and you will return to following Me. This will only be a momentary stumble for you! And so will the rest, so when you recover from your fall, strengthen them!" Yes, apostasy happens. Some people, like Judas, do fall away from the faith and NEVER return. But here is:

4. the most crucial lesson: Perseverance is true! The writer of Hebrews went on to say, "Yes, some apostatize and end up burned, but we are not of those who shrink back and are destroyed, but of those who believe and are saved. - Heb. 10:39. Genuine faith perseveres. If our faith is true, if it is real, if Jesus Christ has really come to dwell in our hearts and transformed us and regenerated us, then we will continue to believe to the end, no matter how many times we stumble and fall. We will persevere because we are kept by the very power of God. Jesus said: My sheep listen to my voice; I know them, and they follow me. I give them eternal life, and they shall never perish; no one can snatch them out of my hand. My Father, who has given them to me, is greater than all; no one can snatch them out of my Father's hand. I and the Father are one." - Jn. 10:27-30. Why do some, like Judas, fall away forever when they seem in every way to be one of us? The truth is they're not! It's not real! Their faith, whatever it was, was not saving faith that brought about a permanent transformation of the heart. If it was, they couldn't undo it, His Spirit would move them to repent when they stumbled. They would come back; they would still believe in their hearts, even though they tried to run away like Jonah!" Listen! If your salvation is real, you cannot lose it! No sin, no fall, no denial, no failure, no lapse, can take it away from you because Jesus has prayed for YOU that you will be with Him in heaven and you will be; your faith will not fail. You will persevere despite all your failings and how badly you feel about them. This message, just like Jesus' words, is not meant to create doubts, but rather to give assurance to the majority of those who follow Him. However, if your salvation is NOT real, God knows that and you probably do too. Judas had been thinking about betraying Jesus for a long time. He had explored it. He had made a bargain ahead of time. He knew in his heart that he wasn't like the rest, but He ignored Jesus' plea and warning and chose to go ahead and sealed his fate. He could have stopped. He could have repented right then. He could have confessed his awful sin and been forgiven and joined the ranks of the truly faithful. But instead, he made a deal with the devil and lost everything. Listen, just because you prayed a prayer when you were a little kid or went forward in some meeting or raised a hand does not guarantee heaven. Is your heart genuinely transformed? Are you resting completely in Jesus and in Jesus alone to save you? If not, repent now; it is not too late to heed the warning!

But how can we tell the difference between an apostate and a backsliding genuine believer? We can't. Later that night Judas and Peter don't look much different, do they? While falling away is going on, only GOD knows who's real and who's not. It only becomes clear to us later on. One hangs himself in agony; the other dries his tears and goes back to being what he always was and becomes the leader of the church. In his Bible commentary Adam Clarke [on John, end of chapter 13] tells this story from the reign of Queen Mary of England. Hard as it is for us to believe, it was an era when those loyal to the pope burned all the Protestants they could convict for denying the doctrine of transubstantiation. A poor man who had received the truth of Christ in theory, but had not yet felt its power, was convicted and sentenced by the Queen's tribunal to be burned alive. While they were taking him to the place of execution, he was very pensive and melancholy; and when he came within sight of the stake, he was overpowered with fear and terror, and exclaimed, "O! I can't burn! I can't burn!" Some of the attending priests, supposing that he wished to recant, spoke to him about recanting. The poor man still believed the truth; he felt no disposition to deny it. But he did not feel such an evidence of Christ's acceptance in his own soul that would enable him to burn for it! He continued in great agony, feeling all the bitterness of death, and calling on God to reveal himself through the Son of his love. As he was praying, God broke in upon his soul and he was filled with peace and joy in believing. He then clapped his hands, and exclaimed with a powerful voice, "I can burn! I can burn!" He was bound to the stake, and (to use Mr. Clarke's expression) burned gloriously, triumphing in God through whom he had received the atonement. God causes those with true faith to persevere to the end, whatever it may be; He always shores them up in their faltering along the way.

A New Commandment: Love - 13:31-35

What a night Jesus' disciples must have been having. It was surely unlike any Passover meal they had ever eaten before. At the very outset Jesus astonished them by taking off His robe and washing their feet to teach them the humility He wanted from them. Then He shocked them by saying, One of YOU shall betray Me! and soon Judas got up and rushed out into the night, leaving them all shaking their heads and wondering what was going on. As the evening wore on, He took in His hands the bread, and at the end, the cup of wine, and talked about His own death and how they should remember it always. That's what the other Gospels focus on, but John recalls the precious words Jesus spoke all the way through and he remembers that:

I. When Judas Left, Jesus Began To Prepare His Disciples For His Own Departure That's what the entire conversation was about that night. At the very outset:

1. He tried to shape their view of the awful events to follow (31-32) You know, those are the kinds of verses that we tend to just read over and pay little attention to, because we see the words as some kind of "God-talk" that we don't really understand or need to. Let's not make that mistake, but rather, pause there for a moment to see what Jesus is really trying to tell them. First off, I think He's saying that with Judas having left:

a. what is about to happen is now as fixed as if it was already completed The whole process of the events of that night and the next day is now set in motion. Judas is going to the High Priests. He knows where Jesus will go after supper and he will lead the mob straight to the garden and that will lead to an arrest and trials and to the crucifixion. These are the events He meant in which this glorifying would happen, yet He says NOW and uses the Greek aorist tense to indicate that this process, these events, are already complete! In other words, they are fixed and unstoppable. They will occur and that has to be accepted and understood; they have to see from God's perspective, not from their earthly appearance. That's why Jesus says that:

b. what is about to happen would bring glory to God and to Christ Jesus' dying looks to all appearance as though God failed, as though He failed. God's own Messiah is killed by wicked men! Where is the glory in that? The one who claimed to be God, to be the Christ, hangs pitifully on a cross and expires! Where is the glory in that? It's in the fact that God saved the world through that cross! It's in the fact that Jesus brought us all to heaven by that cross! Paul caught the glory and said, May I never boast except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, through which the world has been crucified to me, and I to the world. - Gal. 6:14. The most awful events of history are actually the greatest act of love the world has ever known! God so loved the human race that He sacrificed His Son to save them! Jesus loved us and washed us from our sins with His own blood! Ever after generations of believers down through history to this day have looked at the cross and cried, "Glory! Glory to God!" That is what Jesus is trying to tell them, difficult as it was for them to grasp that night. And He's also clearly explaining that:

c. what is about to happen would happen immediately, at once. In just hours the mob will arrive in the garden. Jesus will be arrested, taken back into the city and there will be two trials, all before morning. By 9 AM Jesus will be hanging on a cross on the hill of Golgotha and by 3 in the afternoon, less than 20 hours from this moment, He will be dead. There was no more time to prepare; this meal was IT! And so, in what little time Jesus had left:

2. He tried to help them understand the larger view of what it meant (33)

a. He spoke tenderly to them in a new relationship: For the first and only time that we have recorded, He called them: My children, "my little ones". It was a term of endearment that John caught right away and adopted for himself. He used it in his ministry later in the churches and repeatedly in the letters we have from him in our New Testament. My dear children... It meant, "You are more to Me than followers. You are more precious to Me than associates or fellow workers. You are more dear to Me than even friends. You are my very children, my own flesh and blood whom I have brought forth spiritually." John was overwhelmed by that thought. He wrote, How great is the love the Father has lavished on us, that we should be called children of God! And that is what we are! - 1 Jn 3:1. And that doesn't mean just them, dear friends! Yet to all who received him, to those who believed in his name, he gave the right to become children of God-- children born not of natural descent, nor of human decision or a husband's will, but born of God. - Jn. 1:12-13. We are ALL the very children of God since we received Christ; God loves us as daughters, as sons. He is not just some heavenly Monarch who runs the world; He is our very Father in heaven! He is tender toward us, gentle with us, and would have us crawl upon His lap and lean upon Him! And so just as you would do with dear children that you love:

b. He told them He was leaving and that they could not go with Him. The pattern they had known of following Him around, of walking on roads with Him and eating meals with Him, is now over. He's telling them that they would be alone, without His physical presence, for the first time. They would be on their own now and would have to trust Him without seeing Him. It was a scary thought and they didn't really understand what He meant. When He had told the Jews the same thing back in chapter 7, they thought He meant that He would leave Judea and go to some foreign area. Peter wasn't much better (36); he was still thinking of a physical place. But Jesus simply and patiently:

c. He assured them they would follow Him later But Peter's still saying, "Whaddya mean I can't follow You! I would follow you anywhere! Into prison, into death!" And that's when Jesus predicts his rooster experience but He doesn't leave it at that. The familiar comforting words of chapter 14 are the conclusion of this little discussion and while we'll study them next week, let's simply say that at that point:

d. He explained to them that He was going, not to a physical destination, but to the Father's house (14:2) and that He would come back later and get them (14:3) That's the big picture. "Through the events that are about to happen, I'm going to leave you for a good while. I'm going to heaven, to the Father, to get a place ready for us and then I will come back and get you and take you there too!" That's how Jesus gently breached with them the idea of the whole church age, that He would leave them to finish His work on earth and when it was all done, He would come a second time. Not what they wanted to hear! One of them sadly confessed three days later on the road to Emmaus, We had hoped that he was the one who was going to redeem Israel. They wanted Jesus to be King, here and now, to rule and change the world, not to go away to heaven and come back later!

But even though they didn't grasp His going away, Jesus knew what they needed most.

II. With Himself Leaving, Jesus Bonded His Disciples To One Another And to do that:

1. He gave to them a new commandment (34) A new commandment. A new rule of life to follow. Just as God had given Israel 10 commandments to govern their lives, now Jesus gave His people one, and only one: Love one another. In one way it wasn't exactly new in the sense of them never having heard it before. It was even in the Law, love your neighbor as yourself! Jesus had told them long before that all the Old Testament commands relating to people could be summarized in that one command. He had gone even further and exhorted them to love their very enemies! That was radical! Yet this was a fresh command to them for several reasons. First of all:

a. it was a new order of love He desired The Holy Spirit is careful to have John use the Greek word agape to reveal what Jesus meant here. You know how loosely we use the word love in English. Kirsten loves ice cream, so love can mean to like or enjoy something or someone. Your girlfriend says, "I love you", and you feel this rush of passion as your hormones race, so love can mean romantic attraction. Or we can tuck our little child in at night and say, "I love you!" So, love can mean that family bond of caring that we naturally have. But the Greek language is not like English; they had separate words to indicate all of those things and they used them freely. However, God led the Biblical writers to use the one word that the Greeks themselves rarely ever used; you can't find it hardly at all in Greek writings until Jesus' day. Christians literally gave this word, agape, its meaning. It is a love that goes beyond human instances of caring. One source says it represents divine, unconditional, self-sacrificing, active, voli- tional, and thoughtful love... it was used by the early Christians to refer to the self-sacrificing love of God for humanity, which they were committed to reciprocating and practicing towards God and among one another. C.S. Lewis describes it as the highest level of love known to humanity—a selfless love, a love that was passionately committed to the well-being of the other. [Wikipedia]. Agape is defined by the Cross. It is the love found only in the character of God which caused Him give His only Son to die as a sacrifice to save a world that had rejected Him. It is a caring that continues despite any cost, a commitment that perseveres without any reward, and it is a choice that is pursued without any obligation. God places that love, His own love, in our hearts by His Spirit. Jesus wanted that new order of love to spring into being and flourish among His followers. Second, it was fresh because:

b. it was directed toward a new object The commands to love neighbors and enemies still stand, but they are one-sided. You do the loving; they do the receiving. There is no sense of something coming back in your direction. But the Greek word for one another is reciprocal. Each of us is to love the other and the other to love us all at the same time. The church is to be an entire community where this unearthly love of God is flowing back and forth between all the members of it in every direction, where all the believers are caring for each other's well-being, putting each other's interests first and even sacrificing for one another all the time. And since we know the church is soon going to be composed of vastly different people, there will be Jew and non-Jew, people from all ethnic groups, men and women, rich and poor, slave and free, all loving each other without distinction. All those things that divide the rest of the race fall away and we are like one big family stretched out all over the world, the very family of God, all so vastly different but welded together into one by His Spirit and loving each other deeply with God's love. And wherever a group of us meet locally, we replicate a small segment of that vast family. Paul wrote, Therefore, as we have opportunity, let us do good to all people, especially to those who belong to the family of believers. - Gal. 6:10. We always display love to all the people around us whenever we have the opportunity, but in the family of believers it's happening constantly, all the time, in all directions. This is a new thing; there is nothing like this anywhere on earth. Thirdly, it was fresh because:

c. it was demonstrated in a new measure. Jesus said, as I have loved you! Now He's back to referring to the cross which is about to happen, in the past tense! They didn't realize it at that moment. It would be a number of days more until they would fully grasp it, but His loving them meant Him laying down His life for them! A little while later that evening He repeated and explained Himself in 15:12-14. "Love is laying down your life for someone; that's what agape means! And that's what I'm doing for you; now do the same for each other!" Love is Jonathan, protecting David, defying his own father King Saul and giving away his future throne, going to David while he's hiding in the wilderness to encourage him and saying, Don't be afraid...My father Saul will not lay a hand on you. You will be king over Israel, and I will be second to you. - 1 Sam. 23:17. Love is those early believers in Acts sacrificing for one another: All the believers were one in heart and mind. No one claimed that any of his possessions was his own, but they shared everything they had... There were no needy persons among them. For from time to time those who owned lands or houses sold them, brought the money from the sales and put it at the apostles' feet, and it was distributed to anyone as he had need. - Acts 4:32-35. Love is the way the Galatian believers treated Paul: Even though my illness was a trial to you, you did not treat me with contempt or scorn. Instead, you welcomed me as if I were an angel of God, as if I were Christ Jesus himself... I can testify that, if you could have done so, you would have torn out your eyes and given them to me. - Gal. 4:14-15. Love is radical! It is picking up a cross; it is dying to self every day and meeting the needs of the other the way that Jesus did! And:

d. it was expected to be perpetual The Greek of verse 34 says literally, keep on loving one another! It's not a once and done thing; it's not a thing that has limits; it's a command that is to characterize the whole of our lives! It is a way of life, just as Paul wrote the Ephesians: Be imitators of God, therefore, as dearly loved children and live a life of love, just as Christ loved us and gave himself up for us as a fragrant offering and sacrifice to God. - Eph. 5:1-2! "You do the same! Give yourselves up for one another! That is a fragrant offering and sacrifice to God! Live that way!"

Now Jesus concludes His commandment in verse (35):

2. He explained it would impact the world If they would obey and live this way and become a community of people who practiced radical love toward each other continually:

a. this practice would distinguish them anywhere in the world All men, any human being anywhere, would notice it because it would be SO different from anything they had ever seen before. Human beings don't live like that, not in the natural. It is a supernatural way to live and people would be drawn to it, to wonder what it is that makes that kind of living happen. And the intent is that:

b. this practice would identify them as being Christ's followers The followers of Mohammed bow down on their faces toward Mecca five times a day or cover their heads and faces if they're women. The followers of Sikhism wear turbans on their heads. The devotees of Hinduism make offerings of rice and flowers to their gods and the disciples of Buddha sit and meditate. But the followers of Jesus love each other with His radical love; that's how HE wanted to be known throughout the world.

When we live that way the community around us will sit up and take notice. They will be drawn to us and to Him. People will give their lives to Christ; they will want to be part of His body because they see the way we love each other - or else they'll be completely repulsed by it. Radical love has always been the hallmark and the trademark of the true church. Around 200 AD an early Christian author named Tertullian wrote in Rome during a time of persecution to defend Christianity. He said: [Our offerings are used] to support and bury poor people, to supply the wants of boys and girls destitute of means and parents, and of old persons confined now to the house; such, too, as have suffered shipwreck; and if there happen to be any in the mines, or banished to the islands, or shut up in the prisons, for nothing but their fidelity to the cause of God's Church, they become the nurslings of their confession. But it is mainly the deeds of a love so noble that lead many to put a brand upon us. "See," they say, "how they love one another", for themselves are animated by mutual hatred; "how they are ready even to die for one another", for they themselves will sooner put to death. Much of self-centered Roman society was repulsed by the selfless love of the Christians, but they KNEW they were Jesus disciples. Love was their defining mark and it is still to be ours today. And if it is, it will touch and impact our world as it did theirs. John was so taken with this new commandment that it became his life's theme. You read it over and over in his New Testament letters. Church tradition says that when John was evidently an old man in Ephesus, he had to be carried to the church in the arms of his disciples. At these meetings, he was accustomed to say no more than, "Little children, love one another!" After a time, his disciples wearied at always hearing the same words and asked, "Master, why do you always say this?" "It is the Lord's command," was his reply. "And if this alone be done, it is enough!"

Famous Last Words: The Upper Room Discourse - Jn. 13-17

My Father's House: Hope - 14:1-14

What an intense time these last hours in the Upper Room were for the disciples. Jesus had given them an astonishing lesson in humility followed by a command to wash one another's feet, then gave them a stern One of You... warning about apostasy and denial that ended in Judas leaving abruptly. After that, He proceeded to tell them that He was leaving and gave them a new commandment to love one another. But they could not grasp the fact that Jesus was leaving and Jesus could not leave Peter's question of 13:36 unanswered, Lord, where are you going? So, in those beautiful words in the first half of chapter 14:

I. Jesus Explained That He Was Going To The Father's House (1-3) The term heaven is a fuzzy, unclear thing for many people. Some picture it is some state of bliss that people enter when they die, a kind of nirvana where we are at peace with the universe. Others think heaven is a mythical place that modern people don't believe in. But Jesus said clearly that:

1. it is a real place It is an actual location to which you can go. John was taken there in a vision and saw it all! It contained a city, a huge city half the size of the United States and equally as high with walls and gates and foundations. He saw it measured with a measuring rod; it has real dimensions. It is as real as New York, Chicago or Philadelphia. It is the place where Jesus came from when He came down to earth in the body of a baby and it is the place where He went back to as He ascended into the air after His resurrection and left His disciples. Jesus said:

a. it is the home where our Father dwells In Greek it is His oikia, the house that he lives in. Just as you have a house where you live that you call, "my house", or "my home", the Father has a house, a place where He dwells in all His glory. In his vision, John saw Him there, seated on a glorious throne above a crystal sea of glass surrounded by an emerald green rainbow and all the hosts of heaven worshipping Him. Of course, He is always present everywhere all the time, but this is the home where His Presence dwells in all its fullness and, Jesus said:

b. it has many rooms for all His children The King James used the word "mansions" which spawned all the Gospel songs about heavenly mansions and makes us think of heaven as a kind of huge housing development with giant buildings like you might see up in Bucks County or in the stone mansions of Chestnut Hill. But the word is really "dwelling places", "places to stay, to live". Try painting a different mental picture. In Bible times, as in many places today (India, for instance) a whole extended family might live together in one big house belonging to the patriarch, the father of the family. But in that house, there would be separate living chambers for each of the sons and their families, for the aged parents, for the servants and so on. We'd call it a compound and perhaps it would have a central courtyard in the middle. Jesus said, "My Father's house is a compound so big, so huge, that it has many rooms, many dwelling places, enough for all of the millions and millions of His children who will ever believe and more! As the Newsboys sing, It's a big, big house with lots and lots of rooms! But the best news is that:

c. it has a place specially prepared for us In it there is a place, our own personal portion, our own eternal living space set aside, reserved and made ready for our arrival. Jesus Himself is there, right now, today, personally seeing to all the preparations. Imagine what it must be like! And the good news in verse 3 is that:

2. Jesus will return to take us there to be with Him forever Of course, His primary meaning is that He is coming again, that He will return one day, perhaps soon, and call all of His children up to meet Him in the air and return to heaven with Him. We call that the Rapture of the Church and we live with our minds fixed and looking forward to that. But until that day, one by one as we die, He still takes us to that place. Paul said that to die is to depart and be with Christ which is better by far. At death, we go to the place where Jesus is, to the Father's house. So, His real point is: "You will come to the Father's house and you will be with me where I am. You'll remain with Me there, forever, that's My plan and purpose, even though we have to be separated for a little while." The reason He told us this is that:

3. we are to live resting in this HOPE The disciples were about to be scattered, to see Jesus arrested by a mob and tried and scourged and crucified. Then they would see Him again for a few days, alive after His resurrection, and He would leave them. Events like these could shake them to their very core; circumstances like this could destroy their faith. Jesus said, "Trust ME! I'm going to die and rise and leave. This is all part of My plan to save you. I'm going to the Father's house and you're coming too. You'll be with Me forever. If this was not true, I would have told you! Trust ME, no matter what circumstances hit you in the next few hours, no matter if it seems that all hope is lost and gone, no matter if it seems you will die!" We are to continually live in HOPE! And hope means that:

a. we confidently trust that Jesus has told us the truth If it was not like this, if the Father's house were not real and waiting for us, He would have told us! We trust Him and so:

b. we patiently wait, expecting it to happen Look with me at Rom. 8:24-25. Hope means we know with absolute certainty that something is going to happen, although we don't see it right now, so we wait, we endure through everything that happens, confidently knowing that at God's perfect time, it will happen!

In AD 125, a man named Aristides sent a letter to an acquaintance to give this explanation for the rapid spread of Christianity: "If any righteous man among the Christians passes from this world, they rejoice and offer thanks to God, and they escort his body with songs and thanksgiving as if he were setting out from one place to another nearby." He did exactly that! He went to the Father's house! What circumstances do you face this day? Do they seem impossible, overwhelming? Does it seem that you will die? Even if you do, you will only leave this place to go to the place where He went, the place prepared for you, to the Father's house, to be with your Savior forever! Look forward to it! Live in hope! Now in His next words:

II. Jesus Declared The Way To The Father's House (4-6) The word way means a road or a path. To go to a place, you have to know the way to get there. But when it comes to going to the Father's house, Jesus said that:

1. He Himself IS the way It's not a set of directions like turning left or right and driving so many miles. It's not a process you complete. You can't get there by doing good deeds, by refusing to do evil. You can't get there by being religious, by saying prayers, by chanting mantras, by self-denial, by making offerings or by giving to the poor or by accepting certain doctrines. The path is to be joined to a Person. Jesus Himself IS the way, so going to the Father's House requires knowing Him, having a personal relationship with Him! People say that they seek after truth and try to figure it out, but:

a. He is the source of all truth He IS the truth. In Jn. 18:37 He said...for this I came into the world, to testify to the truth. Everyone on the side of truth listens to me." People are trying to figure out what's true, to find out how to get life, what to do to live after they die. But:

b. He is the source of eternal life He Himself IS life! All life comes from being connected to Him. Look with me at 1 John 5:11-12. That's exactly what Jesus was saying, "Know Me and you have the way, know Me and you have the truth, know Me and you have the very life of God! Knowing Me is life eternal!" Moreover, Jesus said that:

2. He is the ONLY, the exclusive way to the Father There are not many ways to heaven. It is not true that the Muslims have one way and the Buddhists have another and Christians have another. It is not that you have your way of believing this or that or doing this or that and I have mine and we all end up in the same place. There is only ONE way to the Father's House and His Name is Jesus. No one can get there without Him. No exceptions, not here nor in the mountains of Tibet nor the jungles of the Amazon nor in the projects of New York City. That's why we have to tell the whole world!

Now Jesus goes on from the Father's House to talk about the Father Himself (7-11) Here is another wonderful truth:

III. Jesus Revealed The Person Of The Father In verse 8 Philip expresses:

1. our human thinking: we wish to see the Father Somehow, we get the idea that Jesus is for us, Jesus loves us, Jesus died for us, but the Father we're not so sure about. He's a Holy God who hates and punishes sin. Can we really stand in His presence; can we really live in His house? "If only we could see the Father with our eyes, just once, just one glimpse, that would do the trick. We could face anything! Then we would KNOW that He is for us." But Jesus' answer astonished them, "Here I am, don't you recognize Me?" You see:

2. Jesus was the Incarnation of the Father John wrote in 1:18, No one has ever seen God, but God the One and Only, who is at the Father's side, has made him known. In Jesus the Father was walking about in a body of flesh. Look what Jesus said:

a. the Father, though in heaven, was IN Him and He was IN the Father The Father literally lived in His person, in His body. They were One. So:

b. the Father spoke through Him, speaking His words His words were the very words of God. And:

c. the Father lived through Him, doing His works His actions were the very acts of God. The point was to give them and us assurance that:

3. we who have seen Jesus have seen the Father! "The Father whose house you're going to is standing right here in front of you telling you that you're going to His house!" Or in our case today, since we've known Jesus, we've known the Father! We are reconciled to God. We have a place waiting for us in His house! We're safe, we're sure, we can face anything! We can live in hope because we KNOW the Father through Jesus! And lastly as we close this portion of the discourse, we have:

IV. The Promises Jesus Gave Us Because He Went To The Father (12-14) There are three of them. First, He says:

1. we will do what He was doing because He lives through us Everything Jesus said about his relationship with the Father is now true of our relationship with Him. Just as the Father, though in heaven was IN Him, now Jesus, though in heaven, is IN us and we are IN Him. He literally lives IN us. And just as the Father spoke through Jesus, Jesus will speak through us, speaking His words, if we choose to let Him. And just as the Father lived through Jesus' body doing His works, Jesus will live through us, doing His works, if we let Him. We will do what He was doing. He will live out His life through us, even though locationally He is in heaven. In fact, He promised at the end of verse 12 that:

2. we will do even greater things than He did while on earth Not that we will do greater or more impressive miracles than He did, but the scope of what we do will be greater. After Peter's first sermon 3,000 people believed and after the second there were 5,000. By the end of Paul's life there were believers in literally every major city all over the Roman Empire, the whole Mediterranean world. Today the Name of Jesus is worshipped in literally every country on the face of the earth, even if only by a few. The things Jesus began to do, He planned to continue doing through us and bring to completion! We can expect it. But here's the best assurance: just as the Father always heard Jesus and gave Him whatever He asked because He always did what pleased the Father, just so Jesus says in verses 13-14 that:

3. He will do whatever we ask Him in His Name for the glory of the Father Of course, you realize that isn't a blanket promise to get anything we want. It is not: "Ask me for a new car, a new house, a million dollars, anything your mind could wish, and I will give it." Rather it is this: "If I am living through you and doing My work, then you can rest assured that I'll give you whatever you need as long as your desire is solely and only to glorify the Father!" "In My Name" is not a formula where you say "in Jesus' Name" and tack it onto whatever you want. "In My Name" means, "For My sake". "Whatever you ask, whatever you need in the process of doing My work and carrying out My will for the glory of God, I will not fail to give it to you. Even though I am going away, Trust Me!"

Listen, Jesus went back to the Father's House and He's there right now preparing an eternal dwelling place for each one of us who know Him. And His plan is, whether we die or He comes back first, that He will take us there to be with Him and the Father forever. That hope energizes our lives! While we're still down here, He's living inside us, speaking through us and doing His work through us every day, as we yield ourselves to Him and allow Him to do it. And as we do that, as we seek His glory and build His Kingdom, He'll give us whatever we need, whatever we ask for, so that we might serve Him. There is no limit to what He will do through us or what He will supply to us! So, we can face anything that comes our way, absolutely anything! If we live, He lives through us and if we die, we are in the Father's house with Him. Let me share with you the testimony of an anonymous believer, dated January 22, 2002. Born to a Saudi family, in Saudi Arabia, and living very close to Mecca, I grew up with strict principles and traditions of Islam and the Arab culture. As a teenager I went to the mosque five times a day in obedience to my parents. One night, while I was asleep, I had this horrible dream of me being taken into hell. And what I saw there brought me real fear and these dreams kept coming to me almost every night. At this point I was really wondering as to why I should be seeing hell in this manner. Suddenly one day, Jesus appeared to me and said, "Son, I am the Way, the Truth and the Life. And if you would give your life to Me, and follow Me, I would save you from the hell that you have seen." This came as a surprise to me, for I did not know who this Jesus was. Of course, He is mentioned in the Koran... He is stated as one of our prophets, but not as a Savior who could save us from hell. So I started looking out for a Christian who could give me some advice about this Jesus I have seen and possibly get one of the Christian Holy Books, which I now know is the Bible. But it was a difficult task for me to get any Christian to speak to me about Jesus. As you would know, Christianity is totally banned in Saudi Arabia and if a Christian is caught witnessing to a Muslim, he could be almost sure that he would be beheaded. Then the Lord led me to an Egyptian Christian who was sick. I prayed for this man's healing and this man gave me a Bible. Then I, by myself, started reading the Bible. By this time Jesus had become a close friend to me. Soon I started witnessing about the experience I had with all my family relations and friends. Soon the authorities were informed that I had converted to Christianity, and I believe this was done by one of my family members. As it states in the Koran, if someone would turn away from Islam, he is a traitor to the faith and he should be executed. So I was taken into custody and tortured. They told me that I would be beheaded if

I would not turn back to Islam. But I had already made my decision that I would never turn back. So I told the authorities I'm willing to die for Jesus and that I would never come back to Islam. After much torture and imprisonment, I was sentenced to be beheaded. They gave me a date and a time and I told them, "You go ahead and execute me. I'm going to heaven to see Jesus. But I pray that what you would do to me would stay in your minds and not give you rest until you come to Jesus." The appointed day and time came for my execution, and I was waiting with much anticipation, yet very much strong in my faith in Jesus. Generally, the executions are carried out on the set time and date. But to my amazement, no one turned up. One hour lapsed, two hours went by, then it became three hours, and then the day passed by. And no one turned up. Then two days later, the authorities turned up and opened the doors and told me, "You demon! Get out from this place!" I also noticed that the main person who was determined to get me beheaded was not present when they came to release me. I asked them where this guy was. And with much hesitation they replied that his son had died on the same day they planned to execute me. Although I continue to go through much persecution, one thing I know is that the Lord's hand is upon me. Friend, if you really know Jesus and are confident in the hope that He has given you of a place in the Father's house, you can face anything.

Another Comforter: The Holy Spirit - 14:15-31

As we continue our study of what Jesus shared with His disciples in the Upper Room that Thursday night before the cross, you'll remember that Jesus had told His disciples clearly, I am going away; I am leaving you. Peter then asked, Lord, where are you going?, and in the first half of chapter 14 Jesus answered that question: I am going to the Father's house to prepare a place for you and one day I'll take you there to be with Me where I am. That was the first huge promise Jesus made that was intended to keep them through all the horrible things that were about to happen. But the next concern on their hearts is obvious, "But how will we survive; what will we do without Jesus? We'll be all alone!" Jesus knew this fear that was rising in their hearts and addressed it before they even had a chance to express it. He gave them a second huge promise:

I. The Promise Of The Holy Spirit (15-21) Verse 18 seems to address that rising concern of their hearts, "He's leaving us; we'll be like orphans, all alone with no one to care for or help us!" So, Jesus reassures them, "NO! I'm going away, but I won't leave you like orphans! I won't leave you alone! I will send Someone to take My place with you...I will send the Holy Spirit!" I don't think any of us fully comprehend the magnitude of that simple promise or of the privilege we have as people who actually live in the fulfillment of it, who actually HAVE the Holy Spirit! The promise of the Holy Spirit is, first of all:

1. the promise of a paraclete, that's the Greek word in verse 16. It is variously translated as counselor, comforter, advocate, or helper. It literally means "one called alongside", someone who will be with me in whatever I'm facing, to help me in whatever way I need. If I'm in a courtroom, I need a lawyer, an advocate, someone to plead my case. If I'm in a funeral home, I need a comforter, someone alongside me with an arm around to comfort me in my grief. If I'm in a quandary of circumstances and don't know what to do, I need a Counselor with Divine wisdom to show me. If I'm crushed under the pressure of my situation, I need someone alongside me with the strength to hold me up and impart to me the strength to stand. To have the Holy Spirit means that no matter what I face, I have Someone who is with me to impart to me whatever I need to face it! I am not an orphan; I am not alone. I am not left to depend on my own resources. I have a paraclete in whom is everything I need! Secondly, the promise of the Holy Spirit is:

2. the promise of Jesus' permanent presence Jesus said, "I'll give you another counselor". That is, "while I was with you, I was your paraclete, the One who was with you, your Divine resource. Now I have to leave bodily, but I'm going to give you ANOTHER, Someone to take My place, to be to you what I have been and He, the Spirit, will be with you forever! He won't ever leave, won't ever go away as I've had to." In fact, in verse 18 Jesus says, "I will come to you!", that is, "I will come to you in the person of the Holy Spirit, who is the Spirit of Christ, and in Him I will be with you forever. We will never be separated. I will be with you always, even to the end of the world - in Him!" Thirdly, the promise of the Holy Spirit is:

3. the promise of personal indwelling Look at the end of verse 17, you know Him for he lives with you and will be in you! Throughout the whole Old Testament era, the Holy Spirit had been present and at work in the lives of God's people. He was with men like Moses and Joshua. He came upon people like Miriam and Deborah and Saul and David. He came upon the prophets. He was even with the disciples as Jesus had sent them out. They did miracles in His Name; they healed the sick and cast out demons. That was the power of the Holy Spirit at work through them. But now there was to be a change. Whereas before He was with them and came upon them in times and ways that pleased Him, now after Pentecost He would be IN them. He would indwell us, literally live inside our bodies permanently! Paul said we who are joined to the Lord are made one with Him in Spirit; His Spirit is joined to our spirit, which means He is IN us. The Resource that we need, the Counselor, the Comforter, is no longer out there, somewhere. He is right in here, in our spirit, in our mind, in our body, always accessible, always in the midst of everything we're in. What a promise! Then Jesus goes on to give here:

4. the promise of His resurrection and of His life imparted to us (19) He promises, you will see Me! "You'll watch Me hang on a cross. You'll see them pierce My side. You'll see them lay me in the tomb. But don't give up hope; trust My word: YOU WILL SEE ME! I WILL RISE FROM THE DEAD; I WILL LIVE." And here's the promise: Because I live, YOU will live too! "I will impart My life to you." When? Verse 20, On that day! What day? "The day of Pentecost, the day I send the Spirit! I will impart My very life, the eternal Divine life of God, to you through My Spirit who will join with your spirit and give you My very Life!" Rom. 8:11, If the Spirit of him who raised Jesus from the dead is living in you, he who raised Christ from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies through his Spirit, who lives in you. When? No, not just some day in the future when we get our new bodies but right now in this body! His life is our life! Now that's hard enough for us to grasp and we know the whole story, which they didn't, so He gives them yet another promise:

5. the promise of full realization (20) "On that day, the day the Spirit is actually given, the day of Pentecost, that's when you'll really understand. You'll understand, not how all this can be, but that it actually is! Once He's in you, you'll realize that we are all One, You and I and the Father, through the Spirit. You'll know that He is in you and so I am in you!" Paul said, The Spirit himself testifies with our spirit that we are God's children. - Rom. 8:16. We have an internal witness. We know it's true. We know Jesus is IN us and we are God's children! The Spirit in us tells us it is so! And greatest of all:

6. the promise is for all genuine believers (21) It is for ALL who love Him, not just for a few, not just for some, not just for the disciples or for leaders, but for all. Peter said in Acts 2:38-39, Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins. And you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. The promise is for you and your children and for all who are far off--for all whom the Lord our God will call." It is for every genuine believer! Many years ago, a young Chinese convert whose given name was Lo (spelled L-O) became greatly excited when he first read Matthew 28:20 in King James English. Glowing with the joy of his newly discovered promise from God, he exclaimed, "Look, missionary, it says, 'Lo! I am with you always!'" Because he didn't know any better, he took the word "lo" to be his own name and took the promise to be direct from God to him. But while we laugh at his grammar mistake, he actually had the right understanding, didn't he? Jesus meant for us to take His promise personally! His promise of the Holy Spirit is direct from Him to YOU, whatever your name is. The Holy Spirit comes to indwell and reveal Christ to everyone who truly loves Him. But who are those? He says they are the ones who obey Him, who do what He says. He started by saying that back in verse 15. Real believers are not those who say they believe, but those whose actions show that they believe, those who obey what He has said. If you truly love Him, His spirit lives in you and you will obey Him.

Oh, what a promise Jesus made when He gave the Promise of the Holy Spirit! But then He went on to talk about:

II. The Program Of The Holy Spirit (22-24) The "other" Judas, the son of James, who is also called Thaddeus in other Gospels, interrupted Jesus with:

1. the question in verse (22) "If you're the Messiah, the King, why show just us? Why just show Your disciples? Why not show everybody? Why not show the whole world?! Isn't that what the Messiah is supposed to do?" The question makes sense. But Jesus doesn't choose to answer it the way he asked it. His:

2. the answer, in essence, is that full revelation comes only by indwelling Visibly showing Himself alive to the world wouldn't make much difference. The way He planned to show Himself to the world was by indwelling people and transforming them! So, He explains that:

a. God will only indwell believers, those who love Him (23) The Father and the Son will come in the person of the Spirit and permanently live, dwell, inside those who truly believe. But:

b. He will not inhabit those who do not love Him (24) He's not going to live in people who don't love Him, and because of that, they won't be able to comprehend Him, to know Him. Jesus said:

c. they are unable to receive the Spirit (17) Unbelievers can't see the Holy Spirit; they can't know Him. Jesus will not give them His spirit; He will not reveal Himself to them until they are ready to repent and acknowledge Him as Lord.

So, there's the program for this age. Jesus shows the world He is real by living in us and living through us so that others will come to Him. And then they too will receive His Spirit and KNOW. One at a time. Each individually. That's the plan. Then Jesus goes on to explain:

III. The Purpose Of The Holy Spirit (25-27) The Holy Spirit does three important things in our lives. First, as He did for the disciples:

1. He will remind us of what Jesus has taught Peter and James didn't have notebooks and pencils and write down every word Jesus spoke. John didn't have a laptop that he carried around typing up notes on Jesus' sermons. When the Spirit came, He reminded them of the many things Jesus had taught; He brought them back to mind and they wrote many of them down so we could have the Gospels. Of course, He does the same thing for us. We read what Jesus taught in the Bible; we read God's Word day after day and the Spirit reminds us of it at just the right times when we need it. We sometimes call this the process of illumination, bringing the Scriptures to mind, helping us to understand them and apply them to the very situation we are in at the moment. He will do this for us! God speaks to us through His Spirit. And not only that, Jesus said:

2. He will teach us all things we need to know There were a lot of things the disciples needed to know but Jesus didn't have time to teach. The Spirit added to what Jesus taught. That's why we have the rest of our New Testament. The Holy Spirit showed Luke and Paul and Peter and James and John and Jude other things that they and we, the church, needed to know. We call that process revelation. Today, of course, the Holy Spirit is no longer giving us new Scriptures, but He is continuing to personally reveal and unfold the plan of God in our lives step by step individually as we need to know it. Paul said the Spirit teaches us all things, the deep things of God. He gives us the thoughts of God that we need to have. He gives us the words God wants said, the actions God wants lived out as we yield to him and let Him live through us. And then Jesus said the Spirit:

3. He will give us Christ's perfect peace We always yank verse 27 out of its context and quote it as though it is referring to peace as a "thing", as though it simply means that He would make them calm in the face of what was going to happen. I think He's saying, "I will not leave you as orphans, but I will leave you with peace, My peace, the person of My Spirit!! If you think about it, peace is the result of our minds and emotions being totally under the control of the Holy Spirit. Peace is when we think like God thinks and feel like God feels about all that is going on. It's the Divine calm that passes all human understanding, the calm that knows all things are under control and going as planned. That peace comes from Him being in us and in control of us. He IS our peace.

Now I don't know whether you realize it, but this is really the first time Jesus has actually talked with His disciples about the Holy Spirit. He saved this discussion and this wonderful promise until His last hour with them. So as the chapter closes, He tells them why He shared this precious promise of the Spirit with them:

IV. The Purpose Of Jesus In Sharing This Promise (28-31) First:

1. it was to give the disciples joy (28) He was leaving and they were sad, stricken because of it. If they understood that He was going to the Father and that the Spirit was coming, they would be glad. He told them moments later in John 16:22, Now is your time of grief, but I will see you again and you will rejoice, and no one will take away your joy. That permanent joy would be the result of the presence of the Spirit. Second:

2. it would verify the disciples' faith later on (29) And it happened just like Jesus said. After the Spirit came, Peter stood up and said in Acts 2:32-33, God has raised this Jesus to life, and we are all witnesses of the fact. Exalted to the right hand of God, he has received from the Father the promised Holy Spirit and has poured out what you now see and hear. When the promise came to pass, they recognized it as the fulfillment of these very words Jesus spoke and it confirmed their faith in Jesus. They knew He had sent the Spirit just as He said He would! Finally:

3. it was to give the disciples hope though time was short (30-31) He had only a few more precious moments. He was already getting up from the table to clear things away in the room and leave. In just hours Satan was coming to the garden to do his worst. But before they experienced all of that, Jesus wanted to leave them with this blessed assurance: "I will not leave you as orphans. I will come to you. I will send you My Spirit to be your Counselor, your Advocate, your Comforter. The time grows short...trust Me."

The story is told in Beams of Light of a timid prisoner who committed a minor infraction and was sentenced to spend the night in a dark, isolated cell, deep inside the prison walls. The inmates feared the silent, total darkness of that cell almost as much as death itself. As the man was led down to it, the dank and loathsome air seemed to choke him. The heavy door clanked shut, and he knew a long, lonely night was before him, far beyond the sound of any human voice. As he sank to the floor in despair, he thought he heard the sound of footsteps. Then a voice said softly, "I'm the prison chaplain. I knew you could not stand it alone, so I've come to be with you. I will be here as long as you are." Because the grateful prisoner knew that another person was with him in the darkness, his lonely chamber became a place of rest. My friend when the circumstances of life seem awfully dark and you feel awfully alone, when despair rises up within you. Jesus says, "I knew you could not stand it alone so I've come to be with you; My Spirit is in you. And I will be here as long as you are!"

I Am The Vine: Dependence - 15:1-17

We continue to study those precious last words that Jesus shared with His disciples in the Upper Room that last Thursday night before the cross. Remember that in chapter 14 Jesus assured His disciples of their future home in the Father's house that He was leaving to prepare and then He assured them that He would not leave them alone, that He would send them another Comforter, the Holy Spirit, to live in them and be with them forever. Now in chapter 15 Jesus moved on to address the issue of relationships. He knew that this band of men and those who would later follow them would form a distinct community. Out of all the world, they would be the people of God, His assembly, His Church. So, in this last hour with them He wanted to define for them the relationships that would characterize their lifestyle from here on as His followers, first their relationship with Him and then with one another. Of course, they are now us, so we begin the chapter by learning about:

I. Our Relationship To Christ And to explain it He used a common but special image to describe it visually: The Vine And The Branches (1-8) Vineyards and the keeping of grapevines is something visible everywhere in Israel. In fact, the symbol of the vine was God's special symbol for the nation of Israel. He describes her as His vine or His vineyard in many passages of the Old Testament, for instance: Psalm 80:8-9, You brought a vine out of Egypt; you drove out the nations and planted it. You cleared the ground for it, and it took root and filled the land. A great golden vine, the national emblem of Israel, was displayed on the very front of the Temple itself. But His vine, His people Israel, had brought forth bad fruit, Isaiah said. Hosea declared that God's vine brought forth fruit for itself. She was a fruitless, faithless vine that was about to be cut down. So, there is no way that the disciples missed the symbolism when Jesus said that:

1. He Himself is the true Vine: Israel was false. She was not being His people. So, God was now planting another Vine in the world in the person of His Son. The vine is the living organism of people that God is growing in the world, Jesus' followers, the Church, the very people of God. And this figure of the vine shows us that they are not merely a group of people who believe a doctrine or join an organization. They are a people formed out of a living, personal union with Him. Now notice carefully that:

2. He is the whole Vine. He is the trunk, the branches, leaves and fruit, the whole thing! So, we are the little branches of Him! Do you understand what I mean? We have no separate identity apart from Him! It's not Him and us. God has one Vine, Jesus, and we are all the hundreds of little leafy branches He is sprouting from His trunk. Paul used a similar concept. He said that all together we are the Body of Christ. Christ has ONE body; He IS the Body. But we are all individual members or body parts of that one body. It's the same idea. Now His point in using this analogy is that:

3. the life of the Vine flows into and through the branches (us) to produce fruit The life-giving sap comes up from the roots of the vine through the trunk and out into each branch causing it to live and sprout green leaves. So, His life is flowing into each one of us who have been joined to Him; that's how we live. We get life from Him. And the sap in this analogy is the Holy Spirit whom He has placed in each of us. His life-giving Spirit is IN us and flows through us for a purpose, which is to produce fruit, grapes! That's what vines are for! They're not like flowers which are supposed to look pretty; they're supposed to produce grapes for the owner's use, so that he can have wine to drink. But any good farmer knows that you can't just let a vine grow untended all by itself or it will eventually produce less and less. That's why Jesus said:

4. the Gardener who owns the vineyard, (God the Father) cuts off dead branches which have no life and so bear no fruit On this vine of God's, there are branches that seem like the other branches, but they're dead. No sap is flowing into them, so they are not green and living and they don't bear any fruit. Any vine-dresser knows these dead branches have to be cut off the vine and thrown away or burned. Well, in God's vine there are also some people that look like the rest of us, but they're dead. They have no connection to the Vine; the Holy Spirit does not live in them. They profess to be followers of Jesus, they go to church, but they have no real spiritual life and so they produce no real spiritual fruit. Judas Iscariot would be the case in point that evening and it's quite possible that the disciples thought of him instantly when Jesus said this. He was with them, but He wasn't one of them. Jesus had said earlier that Judas was not "clean" and in verse 3 He repeated that all of them were clean; none of them were dead branches. Listen, across our community and our country and our world there are people who sit in churches, at least occasionally, and who would say when asked, "I am a Christian", but who have never met Jesus Christ personally. They don't have His life, His eternal Spirit dwelling in them. They are professors of Christ but not possessors and Jesus Himself warned that there would be many like that. In the end, these dead branches are cut off from the tree and they get burned, unless they find true salvation first! But this is vastly different from another thing the Gardener does:

5. He also prunes living branches to bear more fruit You see, that's His goal. He wants much fruit! So, he takes a good, living branch and he clips off a little where it tries to grow too many leaves or too many sub-branches here and there. I remember when we used to grow tomato plants in our back yard. One of our members now in heaven, old Sam Weisel who used to grow 100 tomato plants, taught me forty years ago that when you plant your tomato plants, you have to watch and every time you see a new third branch starting to grow out of the middle of a joint, it's called a sucker and you have to pinch it off. If you don't, the plant will pour its energy and nutrients into that branch and make lots of leaves but little fruit. Left to itself, that tomato vine becomes a huge bush of branches with small fruits. However, if you pinch off the suckers so that all the life goes into the main stem, it brings forth huge, heavy tomatoes. And that's what God is interested in; He doesn't want a pretty looking vine with bushy symmetrical branches; He wants a heavy crop of fruit, so He has to prune us! Now how does He do that? Well, here's a little note: the word clean in verse 3 is the same word translated pruned back in verse 2. In vineyard terminology cleaning is what we call pruning the vines. Jesus is saying, "You've been pruned! I've cleaned you!" But look at how: through the Word I have spoken to you! Jesus had been pruning them by teaching them! His words had addressed their wrong ways of thinking and convicted them of their wrong ways of acting. That's why we need a daily habit of being in the Word of God! As we read it God is always at work reshaping us, trimming off places in our thinking and our acting where we're shaped wrong, where we're growing in a fruitless direction, where our flesh is controlling the way we go about life. He is constantly busy working on us through His Word, shaping us one stage at a time, more and more closely into the image of His Son. And you know, from the plant's perspective, pruning has got to hurt! It's not pleasant to have things clipped away or pinched off! It is often a painful process for us. God frequently uses difficult circumstances, other people, and even suffering to make us ready for His Word to do its prescribed work and clean us of the stuff He wants out of our lives. Hebrews 12:11 says, No discipline seems pleasant at the time, but painful. Later on, however, it produces a harvest of righteousness and peace for those who have been trained by it. Pruning is never pleasant at the time. It hurts! But remember, He does it for a purpose; He's looking ahead to the harvest and He wants a lot of fruit. He wants tomato plants hanging full with huge ripe juicy tomatoes or apple trees hanging full with luscious red delicious apples. So, what does that mean in our case? What is:

6. the nature of the fruit He desires? Well, if you search for the word fruit in the New Testament, you'll find that in a couple of references it refers to our:

a. character: In Phil. 1:11 Paul prayed that we would be filled with the fruit of righteousness. And you're familiar with the 9-fold fruit of the Spirit in Gal. 5:22, love, joy, peace, patience... and so on. Those are character traits. When the Spirit is flowing through us our character becomes like that of Christ; we think and act in the ways that He did. That is one kind of fruit God greatly desires to produce in us. But sometimes the term goes further and refers to our:

b. behavior: In Col. 1:10 Paul prayed that we would please the Lord by bearing fruit in every good work. Not only by displaying a godly character but by actively going about doing good, like Jesus did according to Acts 10:38. Look at His 3 ½ years of ministry: He helped people, healed people, comforted people, fed people and taught people. But why should we live a life like that? He told us that as we let our light shine before people, that as we go about doing these same things He did, that people would see our good works and glorify our Father in heaven. They would become worshippers of our Heavenly Father! You see, ultimately fruit is about:

c. reproduction, isn't it? Fruit contains the seeds which grow new vines. For purposes of this analogy, the fruit represents the increase over the original. In biblical terms, a grain of wheat falls into the ground and dies and produces a crop that is 30, 60 or even 100 times that which was sown. Paul wrote in Col. 1:6 that all over the world this gospel is bearing fruit. New converts are coming to the faith; new believers are being added to the church; the church is multiplying and increasing in size! The branches on the vine are hanging low with new grapes! His life flows out through us, through our character and our actions and our words to bring others to faith and make them part of the Vine! That is the natural result and the whole purpose of the process! That's what He wants! But why?

6. much fruit glorifies God Old Sam had the best and biggest tomato crop of anybody I ever knew. The crop gave him a reputation in the community. People said, "What a gardener!" You see, much fruit brings glory to the Gardener and that's what God wants. It is to His glory that we, his church, are living and growing and producing much fruit, winning many to Jesus Christ. That's why verse 7 says He will give whatever we ask in order to get it! If what we ask is focused on His goal of fruit-bearing, He'll give us whatever we need. We can bank on it! But this whole illustration boils down to a single point:

8. The Point: We are called to ABIDE in Christ That's the old KJV word in verse (4) but it seems to say so much more than remain. Jesus says, Abide in ME! It means that:

a. we must remain connected in absolute dependence upon Him The branch can't produce any fruit at all by itself. The life of the vine flows through the branch and into the fruit. A disconnected stick can't produce fruit; that's why, when Aaron's rod budded, it was an astonishing miracle! In and of ourselves without Him we can't bear any fruit at all. It is all His doing. The life of good works He intends for us to do must never be simply our own best efforts but the result of His Spirit living through and empowering us! OK, so how do we make sure of that?

b. that connection of dependence is maintained by personal intimacy The branch has to abide in the vine, to remain deeply connected and attached with its central core open wide to the supply of life-giving sap the Vine supplies. That's our calling, to abide, to remain deeply connected to Christ with the core of our being yielded wide open to the life-producing power of His Spirit who will produce the fruit. That means the Word of God; that means prayer; that means time spent in His Presence communing with Him. S. D. Gordon tells of a spring storm that broke a large limb on his cherry tree. Although it hung by a very slender strand, to his surprise the blossoms came anyway. Later some fruit began to grow as it did on the other branches. He noticed, however, that only the branches in full contact with the tree bore "much fruit," while the partially severed branch produced only a sparse supply. Our connection is everything! The more deeply we abide, the more fruit we bear in our character, in our deeds and in our converts. How deep is your connection? How thorough is your dependence on Him? How much of His life are you letting flow through you or are you just pursuing your own goals and dreams, living the way you want? We are called to abide in Him! And as we learn to abide, it will impact:

II. Our Relationship To One Another (9-17) and that's what Jesus goes on to talk about next. He says:

1. we are to abide in His love (9) [Read 9-11] Here He sets up a paradigm for us. The way the Father loved Him is the way He loves us. The way He was able to deeply abide in the Father's love is the way we are to deeply abide in His love. And the way:

a. we abide in His love by obeying His commands (10) Jesus drank so deeply of the Father's love for Him that it permeated every moment and situation of His life. He was so full of the Father's love that He could only do what pleased Him; He would run to do the Father's will, to keep His commands. Now, Jesus says we are to abide in His love, to drink so deeply of His love for us, to be so aware and so full of it, that we can only do what pleases Him, that we run to do His will, to obey His commands! Our deep, deep conviction and experience of that great love is what causes us to bear the fruit of good works and people won to Christ. And, Jesus adds:

b. as we abide in His love, we give Him joy and our joy is completed (11) Living out of His love in obedience fills Him with great joy in us. It thrills His heart. But it will also fill us with a deep and abiding joy, His joy, the joy He had in doing the Father's will. That joy will be ours; our joy will be brought to fullness and completeness as we live a life saturated with His love fleshed out in doing His will. And that will lead us to complete the third part of that paradigm: The Father loved Him. He loved us the way the Father loved Him and so He says that:

2. we are to love one another the way He has loved us (12) That's His command. If we love Him, that's what we'll do. His vine, His people will be an assembly unlike any other in the world, a group who are so filled with His love that they love each other the way He loved them. How is that? They love each other:

a. sacrificially (13) - He gave His life for us, so out of His love we lay down our lives for each other. Not just literally being willing to die for each other when persecution comes, but laying our lives down for each other day after day in a myriad of small ways where we die to self and choose our brother or sister instead. And His people love each other:

b. intimately (14-15) - He shared His heart with us; that's what He's doing here in the Upper Room. We are not just servants He owns and orders around. We are close confidants; He shares the secrets of His heart with us. He shows us what He's doing, His heart, His plan. He is intimate with us and includes us in His purpose. So out of His love we will develop a deep intimacy with one another as we together pursue His purpose. We will have a bond of fellowship deeper than anything the world knows as together we bask in His love. And that common purpose of His heart is actually what He has already said:

3. He has chosen and appointed us to go and bear lasting fruit (16) Eternal fruit. Souls touched by His love through us and drawn to find salvation in Him. He chose us for that purpose and to that end. He has sent us to that end. He'll give us anything we ask in prayer, anything we need - to that end. That's His heart; that's what He's about and as we abide in His love that will become our purpose. Then Jesus again repeated His key point:

4. The Point: We are commanded to love each other (17) Pure and simple: love each other. It's not optional. It's not only if we want to or only if it's easy. It's not selective where we love only a few but not some others. It's not a request; it's a command, an order, and if we love Him, if the Holy Spirit life of the Vine is flowing freely into and through us, we'll do it.

Corrie ten Boom is well known for surviving the notorious Ravensbruck Concentration Camp, while her sister, Betsie, who was with her in the Camp did not. Their story is told through the book and the movie, "The Hiding Place", which I highly recommend. One writer who maintains a web page all about Corrie writes, "When I was in college in the early 1970's, I had the privilege of going with a group of friends to hear Corrie ten Boom speak. One memory I have is of a visual illustration using a glove; it just lay on the podium as she spoke when I saw her. At the right time, she said, [and here I quote from Corrie's book, Messages of God's Abundance] 'I have a glove here. It can't do anything but if I put my hand in it [The writer adds...as she is sharing this in her own words, she puts on the glove...], it can do a lot, writing, sewing and much more. Now I know, of course, that it isn't the glove; it's my hand in the glove. You and I are like gloves and the Holy Spirit is like the hand - it can do a great deal. If I ball my fist in the middle, the glove flops limply. Each finger has to be filled. Thus, the Bible says with practicality, 'Be filled with the Spirit'. Then Corrie goes on to pray, 'Thank You, Lord, that the fullness of the Spirit is for every child of God. Please show me if there is a small part of my life, or perhaps even a big part, that is not open to Your Spirit. Thank You that Your Holy Spirit is willing to fill my life to the fullest, just like sunlight fills a room that is open to its light. Listen, Lord, to anyone who says: 'I am throwing the curtains wide open! Fill every corner and make me like a glove that is able to do anything through Your strong hand that fills every finger' Thank You so much. In Jesus' name, Amen.' The writer concludes, 'What a wonderful memory, I'm glad I had that experience.'"

[<http://www.squidoo.com/corrietenboom>] Are YOU having that experience? Are you abiding, staying so well-connected to Jesus, the True Vine, that the life-giving sap of His Spirit is flowing freely into every portion of your life, empowering everything you do and bearing abundant spiritual fruit? If not, why not make Corrie's prayer your own today.

If The World Hates You: Persecution - 15:18-16:4

We continue to study together these precious last words of Jesus that we have from the Upper Room that last night before the Cross. Having given His disciples the assurance of their home in the Father's house and the promise of the Holy Spirit in Chapter 14 and having illustrated their utter dependence on Him by the figure of the Vine and the Branches in chapter 15, Jesus now turned His attention to talk about what their future would hold. Do not miss the significance of the fact that His very first words on the subject in verse 18 were, If the world hates you... The picture that Jesus painted of what a life of following Him would look like is vastly different from the picture that we have in our minds. To one degree or another, all of us here have bought into assuming that the life of a believer is supposed to be peaceful and happy and prosperous and even healthy. It's been preached from our pulpits and on our TV's: "Obey God and He will bless you and give you a wonderful life!" That's the picture Israel had, because those are the promises Israel was given; God promised her that if she would obey Him, He would bless her with all of those things so that all the unbelieving nations of the earth would be drawn to Him. Sadly, it didn't work because she didn't obey. But those are not OUR promises today as part of the Church and that is certainly NOT the picture that Jesus painted for His disciples that night. He declared plainly that:

I. The Unbelieving World Hates Us (18-19) Mark that last phrase: the world hates you! If you lived in Central Asia or in Pakistan or in North Korea today, I wouldn't have to explain this to you; you would be experiencing the truth of it in your life every day. You would KNOW what it is to be hated for what you believe. However, the fact that you happen to live in a time and place where right now you are NOT experiencing it does not mean that Jesus' words are not true. Let's begin by understanding this term world, what does it mean? In scripture:

1. the world is a series of Satan-invented systems of living which are followed by the mass of unbelievers on earth Look with me at Eph. 2:1-3. From the time that Adam handed him the keys to dominion over this earth by obeying him and sinning, the devil has busily invented ways of this world, cultural systems of belief and behavior that keep human beings enslaved to him and insulated from the knowledge of God. For example, more than a billion people are caught up in a system of life that began 3,000 years before Christ called Hinduism. It has been ingrained in them for countless generations that there are millions of gods and goddesses to be worshipped, that people are born into classes or castes that can't be changed and that the only way to escape the suffering of this world is to do good so that you're reborn to live another life in a higher station and to keep up this endless round until you "graduate" out the top into Nirvana and dissolve into oneness with the energy of the universe. Another billion and a half have been steeped for the last 1400 years in a system called Islam and to them it is utter blasphemy to say that Jesus is God and to worship Him, a crime punishable by death! In remote regions of the earth there are dozens of tribal peoples who have lived by a code of revenge passed down from their ancestors and who live in terror, appeasing evil spirits with sacrifices to this day. The Jews of Jesus' day had developed their own system of Pharisaism which was riddled with false beliefs about God and even YOU were raised in the midst of a more intellectual cultural system which believes that man is basically good and that God, if He exists, simply weighs our good and evil behavior after we die and rewards us accordingly. The huge majority of the people on earth are completely engulfed in one or more of these systems, these ways of understanding the world. It's actually a kingdom, the "kingdom of this world," that Satan rules. Before God saved us, WE lived the same way; we were part of the system, trying to satisfy the self-centered desires of our sinful hearts in the ways our culture taught us. But now, Jesus says:

2. we no longer belong to this system like everybody else all around us does. And we didn't simply "opt out" of participation, we were chosen out of it by Jesus Himself. God swooped into our lives and rescued us from the dominion of darkness and brought us into the kingdom of the Son he loves - Col. 1:13. We have a new King and we are part of a new kingdom and we live out of a new value system of behavior based on love. We are different from the world around us. Now you would think people would look at how different we are and be drawn toward us and toward God because of what they see, and some are, but only if their hearts are open and the Spirit is drawing them toward Christ. By and large the reaction is the opposite.

a. people are shocked that we refuse to live as they do Look with me at 1 Pet. 4:3-4. They are shocked that you won't get drunk with them, that you won't sleep around like they do, that you won't lie and cheat for them and you won't worship whatever gods they do! So, they literally blaspheme you. They speak evil about you; they mock and reproach and curse you and they lie about you. All over the world, Christians are the despised minority and they are called the "infidel unbelievers", the "betrayers of our religion", or those who are trying to "steal our souls". In the former Soviet Union it was widely held and literally believed that "Baptists" eat babies and drink blood in their secret ceremonies. The term Christian itself (which simply means an adherent or follower of Christ) was in the beginning a term of disdain and scorn which the pagans at Antioch coined to goad the believers there, but instead they accepted it with pride and we've been wearing it ever since! When people see that we're different, they are many times outraged and heap abuse on us. Why? The answer is in Jn. 3:19-20. Put simply:

b. people are angered because we reveal their deeds as evil We are the light in this dark world and people who live in darkness hate light, because it shows them what they truly are. If we are right, then they are wrong; if we are good, then they are evil, if we are true, then they are false and deserving of the utmost condemnation. And people don't like that; they hate that and that's why the world hates us. Therefore, Jesus said:

II. We Must Expect To Be Persecuted By The World (20) What I'm telling you may be kind of hard for you to accept. Surely people are better than that! Jesus said, "In case you have any doubts, just look at what happens to Me!" Here is the best man that ever lived, the purest, most righteous, most loving man that ever walked the earth. Here is the One whose miracles backed up and verified all His godly words, 100% of the time. And how did the world system react to Him? It called Him a criminal and crucified Him! His warning is clear:

1. how the world reacted to Jesus is how it will react to us We are not better than Him! We don't deserve more than Him. He is the epitome of everything about us and if that's what the world did to Him:

a. to expect a better reaction to us is foolish, wouldn't you agree? To think that the world is going to receive us warmly and be all glad about our message and easily join us in our faith is like walking into a terrorist camp with a personal gift, anticipating a friendly discussion over tea about giving up a life of terrorism, and planning on walking back out alive! It's naive! We're soldiers in a war between two kingdoms. We must EXPECT persecution! Paul said, In fact, everyone who wants to live a godly life in Christ Jesus will be persecuted - 2 Tim. 3:12! Expect it! Plan on it! And if it doesn't happen, remember this:

b. to receive a better reaction is simply God's grace! We happen to live in a 400 year interval of history in a country which happens to have been, up until now, majority Christian, at least in name and culture. So, we haven't experienced much in the way of persecution firsthand. But why did our founding fathers come here? Most of them were fleeing from persecution for their faith in Europe and seeking religious freedom! So, they created a society which prizes freedom of religion. It is purely a gift of God that we live in such a place and time; we are unbelievably blessed to miss out on what our brothers all over the world are experiencing, yet we need to realize that the situation in which we live is merely a quiet lull in the progress of world history! The US is rapidly becoming a post-Christian society like Europe already is. We have tremendous tolerance for every kind of religious belief or moral lifestyle, EXCEPT Bible-believing Christianity. We're already seen as bigoted and archaic and there are people that hate evangelicals and what we believe with a vengeance. I am confident that unless God sends a mighty revival in this land to hold it back for another while, it will only get worse. There will come a day when we or our children or our grandchildren or our great grandchildren will begin to understand and experience the kind of pressure that real believers have known down through the ages all over the world. Expect it! Be ready for it! But why? Why is it like that? Verse (21). Because:

2. the world hates the Name of Jesus which we bear It's uncanny. Somehow the world is not inflamed by the mention of the name of any kind of god or prophet or religious leader, but mention the name of Jesus and venom spews forth. Paul testified, I too was convinced that I ought to do all that was possible to oppose the name of Jesus of Nazareth. - Acts 26:9. It's that Name! Satan hates it and he has built that into the systems of the world, so that whenever anyone becomes zealous for their system, they hate the Name of Jesus. Even here you will meet people, some very religious people who belong to organized churches, who say "Believing in GOD is the important thing; this 'you have to believe in Jesus' bit is too narrow!" And out come the claws! Peter said, ...if you suffer as a Christian [because you are called a follower of Christ], do not be ashamed, but praise God that you bear that name. - 1 Pet. 4:16. That's exactly what you want the world to know you are! The truth is, Jesus said, that:

a. though they may be religious, they do not know God As Rom. 10:2 puts it, ...they are zealous for God, but their zeal is not based on knowledge. They don't know Him and no matter how many times they bow down or rock back and forth while they pray or walk on their knees for miles on a pilgrimage, they are completely ignorant of God and, in fact:

b. because they hate Jesus, they actually hate God (23) You can't have one without the other. They may profess to love God and be zealous for Him, but they actually hate Him because they hate Jesus and His followers. Now, of course, the most immediate people that Jesus is talking about, and a good case in point, are the Pharisees and the chief priests who have spent the last months trying to find a way to kill Him!

c. the Jewish religious leaders that Jesus faced had no excuse Verse (22):

(1) they should have received Jesus' teaching He pointed out their sin very clearly and plainly told them that they were following their father, the devil, And:

(2) they should have believed because of the miracles (24-25) They should have watched Jesus heal the lame man and rejoiced in the power of God, instead of plotting to kill Him. They should have fallen at His feet when He raised Lazarus from the dead, instead of plotting to kill them both. They saw all of these mighty miracles that proved that Jesus was God come in the flesh, but:

(3) they hated Jesus anyway. They hated him without any cause as Ps. 69:4 predicts. That's what we can expect. The world hated Him without a cause, it still hates Him without a cause and it will hate us without a cause, simply because we believe. That's why we must expect persecution. But here's Jesus' real point:

III. Jesus Expects Us To Testify In The Midst Of Persecution (26-27) There's His purpose in allowing it! It is as we remain true to Jesus and testify about Him in the face of suffering that the greatest advances are won for the Kingdom! The early church turned the whole Roman Empire upside down while suffering under severe persecution. The church in China went from several million to over 100 million in the last 50 years, the greatest success story Christianity has ever known, and the driving factor in all of it was intense persecution! In fact, house church pastors would write to us in the west, "Don't pray for the persecution to stop! Pray for us to remain faithful and testify in it!" But how can we do that? Where can we find the strength? Jesus said:

1. this is made possible by the power of the Holy Spirit He testifies to us and we testify to the world. In Mt. 10:18-20 Jesus put it like this: On my account you will be brought before governors and kings as witnesses to them and to the Gentiles. But when they arrest you, do not worry about what to say or how to say it. At that time you will be given what to say, for it will not be you speaking, but the Spirit of your Father speaking through you. HE will do it through us! That's His plan! Now Jesus went on to explain that:

2. persecution will occur over a wide range of severity (16:2) Many times:

a. it may take the milder form of ostracism To be put out of the synagogue was an awful penalty in Israel; it was to become an outcaste of society. That is still true today in many places. This week I got this note concerning Kyrgyzstan: Pray for all Christians in the village of Shapak. There are four believing families in this village. They are being persecuted. About three months ago a Christian man died in that village and Christians were persecuted badly during his funeral. Ever since people are treating believers so badly. All the villagers are against the believers. All the believers are depressed, but God's almighty hands are restoring them and giving them strength. 5-6 people (Muslim leaders and village leaders) in the village are stirring up the villagers against believers. They are not letting people connect with them. Now they are planning to close all ways for believers. They are forbidden to participate in all social events; village leaders are forbidding their neighbors, relatives and friends to visit or even talk to them. Believers are not allowed to use public transportation. Spring is coming, and the leaders of the village are trying to prevent Christians from doing any farming. They think that by doing all these things they will cause them to deny their faith. But God's love is always there in these tough times; they say that God is bringing believers of the village to real unity. Previously they had stopped even visiting each other because they go to different churches, but now they often visit each other, pray together, and encourage and support each other. Pray for God's provision for our dear brother and sisters in Shapak. Men plan to do evil, but God is the One in control. What we've seen over and over is that if the believers will stick it out and not run away in these situations, but will endure and keep testifying, that within a couple of years whole families and even whole villages will come to Christ! Of course, at times persecution:

b. it may take the deepest form of being killed It began with James and Stephen. Paul says, On the authority of the chief priests I put many of the saints in prison, and when they were put to death, I cast my vote against them. - Acts 26:10. Down through history followers of Jesus Christ have frequently been imprisoned, beaten, tortured, exiled, thrown to lions, burned at the stake, hanged and shot, simply for being Christians. How many workers in Afghanistan or Yemen have been kidnapped or killed in recent memory? Yet the truth has always been, as Tertullian wrote about 200 AD from the thick of it, We spring up in greater numbers the more we are mown down by you: the blood of the Christians is the seed of a new life. We must be prepared for that if we are faced with it, be ready to take up our cross and do what Jesus did, die for the redemption of the world if God wills it! Jesus said that:

3. persecution is evidence of the persecutors' ignorance of and great need for God (3) Jesus had compassion on them. From the cross He cried, Father, forgive them, for they do not know what they are doing! - Lk. 23:34. Paul said it about himself, Even though I was once a blasphemer and a persecutor and a violent man, I was shown mercy because I acted in ignorance and unbelief. - 1 Tim. 1:13. The world hates and persecutes us out of ignorance and unbelief, but the world is who Jesus died to save. And:

4. He warned us ahead of time so that we would not be shocked and stumble in our faith when it happens (16:1, 4) If you thought the Christian life was going to be a bed of roses when you signed up, I'm sorry to tell you that somebody sold you a bill of goods. We're not to think it strange when the fiery trial of persecution comes; it's the norm and we need to understand that Jesus wants to use it to His glory.

Peter exhorted us, Resist [Satan], standing firm in the faith, because you know that your brothers throughout the world are undergoing the same kind of sufferings. - 1 Pet. 5:9. Here's the latest news: Pakistan's only Christian cabinet member, Shahbaz Bhatti, was assassinated by gunmen on March 2, 2011. Shahbaz was the only remaining government advocate for Christian Asia Bibi, who was sentenced to death last November under the blasphemy law. • Muslims in Ethiopia's southwestern city of Jimma burned two churches and the homes of a pastor and an evangelist on Wednesday, March 3.

They also severely beat a Christian convert. In the Asendabo district of Jimma, a Muslim mob burned two churches and a pastor's house after leaving their daily teaching at the mosque. • Members of the Islamic radical group al-Shabab killed a Christian convert in the Somali capital of Mogadishu on Jan. 26. The Islamists murdered Abdirahman Hussein Roble after accusing him of spying and evangelism among Muslims. He is the 24th Christian to be killed by Somali Islamists since 2009. Beloved, the world hates us! Everywhere our brothers and sisters suffer greatly, yet they stand firm in their faith and the church grows. We must be ready to do the same.

Famous Last Words: The Upper Room Discourse - Jn. 13-17

Now I Am Going: Peace - 16:5-33

For the last seven weeks we've been studying together the Last Words which Jesus spoke to His Disciples in the Upper Room the night before He was crucified. In essence, this discourse was Jesus saying "Goodbye" to them. Throughout the course of the meal, He has said to them things like, I will be with you only a little longer...where I am going you cannot come.... I am going [to the Father's house] to prepare a place for you.... I am going to the Father.... I am going away and I am coming back to you.... Then, as we saw last week, Jesus declared clearly that the world would hate them and they could expect persecution. It was a hard lesson to hear and on the heels of it, Jesus said again in 16:5, Now I am going.... You can almost picture here:

I. The Impact Of Jesus' Words Of Parting Upon His Disciples (5-7) As He was speaking to them and revealing more and more, especially this last about suffering:

1. they were overwhelmed with grief at the news of His leaving You can hear them thinking, "OK, if the world is going to hate us and reject us and even kill us, how on earth are we going to accomplish anything? How will anyone ever believe in You? How can we go on without YOU? Why can't you just STAY and accomplish Your purpose with us, like we've been doing?" Their grief over His leaving was so deep that:

2. they were unable to grasp the good of His larger plan It was absolutely necessary for Him to leave. In fact, it was for their good, to their benefit, that He was going away, that He would not be physically with them on earth any longer! They couldn't conceive it, but as long as Jesus remained on earth, He had limited Himself by the taking on of a human body. He could not be with them all at multiple places at the same time. He could not be in Jerusalem and Judea and Samaria and the uttermost parts of the earth. He could not be with every one of them wherever they were, let alone with all of us so:

II. He Pointed Them To The Broader Ministry Of The Holy Spirit "He needs to come! That's why I have to go away, so that you will no longer be relying on My physical presence, but on His spiritual presence. And when He comes, He will have a two-directional ministry. First of all":

1. the Spirit will have a ministry of conviction to the whole world (8-11) If it was the disciples' job to convince people that Jesus died for their sins and that He's alive and they should come to Him for salvation, the church would never have gotten off the ground! Paul explained that, The man without the Spirit does not accept the things that come from the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him, and he cannot understand them, because they are spiritually discerned. - 1 Cor. 2:14. We could talk until we were out of breath and nobody would fully understand or receive what we were saying. They can't; the Bible says that in their natural state, human beings are spiritually dead, cut off from God and from spiritual understanding; they are without God and without hope in the world. Our task would be impossible without the Holy Spirit! But Jesus promised that when He came, He would do what we cannot; He would have a ministry of conviction to unbelievers as we share with them. He would convince them internally of truth in three areas. He would convict them:

a. about their sin of not believing in God's Son We can tell them the message that God loves them so much that He sent His Only Son to die in their place, that He sacrificed His dear Son for them and ask how they could ignore such a gift, but it is only through the Holy Spirit that they become convinced of the truth of John 3:18, Whoever believes in him is not condemned, but whoever does not believe stands condemned already because he has not believed in the name of God's one and only Son. The Spirit of God takes the words of truth and sinks them deep into the soul so that a person knows "I stand condemned before God because I have not believed!" Then, the Spirit convicts them:

b. about the righteousness of God's Son whom they can't see We can tell them that He was the pure, innocent Lamb, without spot or blemish, who didn't deserve to die, that in Him was no sin and He knew no sin, but He was made to be sin for them and to bear their sin. Yet He is not here for us or for them to see. Only the Spirit can take those words and show them Jesus as He really is, so that they know the truth of 1 Pet. 3:18, For Christ died for sins once for all, the righteous for the unrighteous, to bring you to God. And then the Spirit convicts them:

c. about their coming judgment by God's victorious Son We can tell them that one day they will stand before Jesus Christ as their Judge, that the Cross proves His victory over Satan and that one day every sinner will face eternal punishment just as Satan will. But only the Spirit can take those words and make them know their lostness so that they fall on their knees in terror and cry out as the Philippian jailer did, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" Now, that conviction happens all over the world. It happened to Saul on the road to Damascus. It happened to a man named Genesius who lived in Rome about 300 AD, during the reign of the cruel Emperor Diocletian who persecuted Christians severely. He was hired as an actor to entertain in the arena by pantomiming a Christian baptism before the Emperor. But in the midst of his act, he saw a vision of angels which convicted his heart and suddenly he stopped and shouted in earnest, "I want to receive the grace of Christ that I may be born again. I want to be set free from the sins which have been my ruin." Then he turned to Diocletian, "Illustrious Emperor, believe me, Christ is the true King!" Diocletian became furious and ordered him ripped with claws, burned with torches, and then beheaded. Just before his death he is said to have cried out, "There is no King but Him whom I have seen. I adore and worship Him, and for His sake, even though I be slain a thousand times, I will always be His. Torments are not able to take Christ from my mouth, nor from my heart. Bitterly do I regret that I detested His Holy Name in holy men, and came so late, like a haughty soldier, to adoring the true King." That same conviction happened to me 2000 years later on the other side of the earth! That's the work of the Holy Spirit; He's the One who would break through the world's hatred of Jesus and bring men to Christ! And at the same time Jesus said that:

2. the Spirit will have a ministry of communion to all believers (12-15) Please note that there is a word missing at the end of verse 13. In the Greek it literally says:

a. He would guide them into all THE truth This is really the promise on which our New Testament is based. Look back to 14:26, He will remind you of everything I have said - that's how we got the Gospels, the historical portion of the New Testament. It also says, He will teach you all things - that's how we got the Epistles, the doctrinal portion of the New Testament; the Holy Spirit gave all the things that Paul and Peter and James learned and taught later. And now here Jesus says, He will show you things to come - that's the prophetic portions like the Spirit giving John his Revelation. And there we have it, our whole New Testament, all THE truth that would be delivered to us once for all for all time. The Spirit would cause it to be given, written and recorded, so that we would have it. But Jesus' primary point about the Spirit is that:

b. He will make the things of Christ known to us personally Jesus could not be everywhere to talk and commune with each of us personally all the time in His physical body on earth. That's why He left and sent the Spirit who now lives within each one of us wherever and whenever we are and, 1 Cor. 2 says, the Spirit communicates the thoughts of God, the thoughts of Christ, to our minds. In fact, it says that we have the mind of Christ! The Spirit of God is always talking to us, planting the thoughts of God in our minds, showing us what He wants, teaching us what we need to see, illuminating our understanding of the Word. We have a personal intimate communion with Christ through His Spirit that we could never have all had if He had remained in His body on this earth!

But, of course, the understanding of all of that was lost on them that night. Their grief did not seem to be comforted. So, Jesus then gave them another truth to hang onto:

III. He Assured Them Of Their Joy After His Resurrection (16) I'm sure He meant it positively, that He was saying, "Listen, I am leaving you but you WILL see Me again!" But their minds could not grasp it and:

1. the disciples displayed continuing confusion (17-18) The language implies that this questioning back and forth between them went on for some time. Indeed, some of it had likely been going on through the evening as Jesus was speaking and, of course, they were eating, and there were long pauses in the conversation that were not recorded. They just could not grasp what Jesus was trying to tell them; they could not comprehend it, especially this confusing phrase, in a little while you will see me no more; then after a little while you will see me. So:

2. Jesus gave a clear explanation (19-22) They may not have understood it right at that moment, but within hours they would see clearly what He was saying. That's why He told them to listen carefully. He was telling them that:

a. they would have a time of grief because of His death It would begin that very night as He was arrested and they were scattered. It would deepen in the morning as He was condemned in the public square and crucified. By tomorrow afternoon they would see Him laid in a tomb and their hearts would be overwhelmed with grief and sorrow. But He was assuring them that:

b. they would soon see him alive Sunday would come! The third day He would rise again as He promised and they would see Him and their pain would be lost in joy. Just like a mother forgets the horrible pain of childbirth because she is filled with the joy of the new child in her arms, their time of sorrow would forgotten and lost in the joy of seeing Him alive! It was this promise of His certain resurrection that He wanted most of all to instill in them, to assure them that He would live, that He would rise. To encourage them NOT to believe their eyes as He was crucified and laid in the tomb, and give up in despair, but to wait only a little while and see His promise fulfilled in resurrection life! When the women got to the empty tomb, the angels told them, "He is risen as He said!" and Luke adds, "Then they remembered His words!" They didn't comprehend it that night, nor the next day, but oh, on Sunday this promise came flooding back into their minds and faith was born. They believed in the risen, living Christ and their lives were never the same! Nothing could take away their joy! Not all the persecutions they would endure, not all the hatred and even martyrdoms that would come. They took the Good News to the ends of the earth and gladly died for the joy that was set before them, the joy of belonging to the Living Christ who had given them His very Spirit! And He went on to explain to them that:

c. they would have a new level of privilege in praying (23-28) Now that Jesus would rise and go back to heaven, they and we would have a new way to pray, a new practice. Instead of running to wherever Jesus physically was to ask for something like the disciples did, we now ask the Father in Jesus' Name anytime, anywhere. We don't need a priest; we don't need any offering or sacrifice; we don't need any intermediary to go between. We go straight to the Father in prayer; we come directly into His presence in the Name of His Risen Son. And Jesus didn't mean that He Himself would be in heaven and ask the Father for us! That's not what His ministry there is about! He said the Father Himself already loves us because we love Jesus! So, we come to Him in the Name of the Son He loves, as followers of the Son He loves, as believers in the Son He loves and He answers us in the name of the Son He loves and gives to us what we ask, and by doing that, He fills us with joy. We come to the Father in Jesus' Name, for His sake, and time after time we receive in Jesus' Name, for His sake. Again, it is better for us that He said, Now I am going....

You see, what Jesus desperately wanted that night was this:

IV. He Wanted To Leave Them With Peace but they just couldn't grasp it. Look at:

1. their last confident assertion (29-30) Their mouths were running. "Yes, yes, now we get it! We understand it all now. We believe You. You're the Christ. We're ready to face anything!" And look at Jesus' final reminder (31-32). "No, you still don't get it. In a few hours you're all going to run away like scared rabbits dashing into their burrows! You're going to leave Me to face it alone." He knew how hard what they were about to face was going to hit them and He so wanted to prepare them to be able to face it.

2. Jesus' words that night were intended to give them peace (33) Earlier that night He had said this: 14:27. All that He told them that night, about the Father's house, about the Holy Spirit, about the awful things they would face and how the Holy Spirit would overcome them, all these beautiful words were to give them peace. Now what is peace?

a. peace is the calm absolute confidence which God has Look with me at Phil. 4:6-7. Peace is an attitude or an attribute of God. When God looks at all the turmoil in the world, does He worry? Does He get anxious? Does He wonder how it's going to all turn out? Does He fear that this might happen or that might not happen? Of course not! He looks at everything in the universe with the calm that says, "It's all under control. I am in charge and everything will always go like clockwork according to My plan!" That kind of calm, that kind of peace, is beyond human understanding and yet, Paul says:

b. it pervades our hearts and minds when we entrust all things to Him When we make the conscious decision to stop being anxious, present our situation to Him and rest in His control, that same Divine peace of His will quiet our thoughts; it will soothe our emotions; it will guard and protect us mentally and emotionally from all that the world can throw at us so that we face it with a calm acceptance just like God does. That's what Jesus was trying to tell His disciples that night and what He's trying to tell us right now. You see, here's:

3. our destiny: in this world we WILL experience tribulation Not just trouble; that sounds too minor in English. We will experience suffering and pressure and persecution. There will be times like that dread night when our world seems to be turned upside down and the enemy appears to have won the day. As long as we walk this sod, tribulation will embroil us. But:

4. our courage to face it lies in this one thing: Jesus defeated the world! The world arrested Him and tried Him, mocked Him and scourged Him, nailed Him to a cross and buried Him and at last, put a seal on the tomb as if to say, "There! That's the end of that!" But on Sunday morning, Jesus re-entered His body, transformed it and brought it to life, walked right out through the graveclothes that bound Him, out of the tomb that held Him and called an angel from heaven to roll away the stone so His followers could look in and see Who really won. Forty days later, after appearing to hundreds of people and convincing them of the truth that He is alive, He went out to the Mt. of Olives and rose up into the air out of sight and all the way into heaven where He sat down with the Father on the throne of the universe to rule it forever and ever. Why? Because He won! Because He conquered! Because He defeated all that the world had to throw at Him and accomplished His purpose through it all! And if He defeated the world through a cross, then we can face our tribulation with courage, born out of that same calm assurance that He is ALWAYS in control.

Elisabeth Howard graduated from Wheaton College and left for Ecuador to serve as a missionary among the Quechua Indians. In 1953 she married a fellow missionary named Jim Elliot and they served together in a remote station where their little daughter Valerie was born. When Jim and four of his coworkers were speared to death during an attempt to contact an unreached jungle tribe in 1957 her life was changed forever, but she stayed and continued working with the Quechua and in October of 1958 God opened the door and she actually went to live among the Waorani people who killed her husband, together with her 3 year old daughter and Rachel Saint. She stayed and worked with them for 5 years until 1963 when she returned to the States. The tribe has been transformed and many are believers; their story is told in the movie End of the Spear. Elisabeth, now 84, has led a long, full life as an author, speaker, and radio host. Most of us are familiar with the depth of her teaching and wisdom. As one thoroughly acquainted with suffering, who had by then lost two husbands, Elisabeth said this in 1977: "If we do anything to further the kingdom of God, we may expect to find what Christ found on that road - abuse, indifference, injustice, misunderstanding, trouble of some kind. Take it. Why not? To that you were called. In Latin America someone who feels sorry for himself is said to look like a donkey in a downpour. If we think of the glorious fact that we are on the same path with Jesus, we might see a rainbow." Jesus said, "In this world you WILL have tribulation, but take courage and choose My path anyway. And as you do, rest in this and be at peace: You can't lose; I have already won!"

Protect Them From The Evil One: Victory - 17:1-19

As Jesus and His disciples were leaving the Upper Room that Thursday night, He finished His last instructions to them in chapter 16. And now as we come to chapter 17, either just before they left or somewhere on the way out of the city, Jesus did what we would expect Him to do. He stopped to pray with them. And what a prayer it is! This is the true Lord's Prayer. The one we call the Lord's prayer is really the Disciples' prayer, the prayer He taught them; this prayer is His own. It is sometimes called His great High-Priestly Prayer, because in it Jesus prayed in the same way that the Jewish High Priest would pray as He would enter the Most Holy Place on the Day of Atonement each year. In the process of making atonement for the nation, the priest prayed to Jehovah once for himself, then a second time for the priesthood saying, 'the seed of Aaron, Thy holy people', and finally a third time for the people of Israel. Following this pattern, as Jesus was going to the cross to make a once-for-all atonement for the world, He prayed first for Himself (1-5), then for His disciples (6-19) and finally for all those who would believe in Him and become God's people (20-26). But please don't miss the depth of what we have before us. In John 17 we enter with Jesus into the Holy of Holies; we listen with the disciples as our Great High Priest pours out His heart to the Father about that which was most important to them both, the salvation of the world. It was a holy moment. The story is often told of A.B. Simpson, the founder of the Christian and Missionary Alliance denomination, who was discovered early one morning by his friend F.B. Meyer, sitting at his desk weeping with his arms wrapped around a globe of the world, hugging it to his chest and praying for the salvation of the lost. In John 17 we walk in on Jesus doing the same, only with the real item instead of a minute representation. He literally prayed for the world, for you and me, but as He began:

I. Jesus Prayed For Himself (1-5) Read (1). Don't gloss over that; let's think for a moment about:

1. the meaning of Jesus being glorified This is not the first time He has said it that evening. Look back at 13:31-32.

There is a two-sided reciprocal process going on. On the one hand:

a. the Son brought glory to the Father How? Look at verse (4). Jesus brought glory to the Father by completing the work the Father had given him to do. And what work was that? He's talking about providing salvation for the world through the cross. Almost every time John uses the word glorified relating to Jesus, it points to His death and the resurrection that followed. Compare 12:23-24. Now the hour had come for Jesus to glorify the Father by humbling Himself and becoming obedient unto death, even the death of the cross! He brought glory to the Father by dying for the sins of the world, thereby bringing millions upon millions to worship Him, to fall down before Him singing their own version of Thank you, O my Father, for giving us Your Son..., or as Paul exclaimed, Thanks be to God for His indescribable gift! The Son brought the Father an immeasurable amount of glory by being obedient and dying and finishing the work of saving all of us! Now here's the other side of the coin:

b. the Father gave glory to the Son How? First, by raising Him from the dead. Then by exalting Him to heavenly rule and saving all who would believe through Him. Therefore, God exalted him to the highest place and gave him the name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, in heaven and on earth and under the earth, and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. - Phil. 2:9-11. Because He glorified the Father by being obedient unto death, the Father glorified Him by exalting Him to the highest place, giving Him all authority in heaven and earth and declaring that... Salvation is found in no one else, for there is no other name under heaven given to men by which we must be saved. - Acts 4:12. All of that is wrapped up in that simple phrase in verse (1). So here's:

2. what Jesus is really asking; He's praying:

a. "Do it, Father!" "Bring it on. Let it happen now! Take Me tonight to the trial and tomorrow morning to the judgment hall of Pilate. Take Me up the hill of Calvary. Take Me to the Cross and through all those awful hours of agony. Take Me to the death of the cross and raise Me from the dead so that You will gain all those worshippers, all those millions of children who will give you glory forever!" Look at what He says next in verse (2). He's praying:

b. "Give eternal life to all whom you've given to Me!" "Father, out of all the human beings on the planet that My death can save, there are those who belong to you, those who will believe. I want to rescue them from spiritual death of being separated from Us and from the eternal death that awaits them in the future. I want them to have the very self-existent, indestructible, ceaseless being that WE have. I want them to live, like WE live, to share in our eternal existence. I want to give them our Life!" And then look at verse (3). That word know is the key. His heart is saying:

c. "Let them experience truly knowing You and Me - this is life!" "Father, I want them to KNOW us, to enter in- to OUR fellowship, into the oneness that WE have with each other! I want us to walk with them and talk with them and tell them they are our own! I want them to commune with us, heart to heart and mind to mind forever, the very purpose for which We created them! Let them be joined to Us as one forever. So now Father..."

d. "Complete it by restoring Me to heavenly glory with You!" (4-5) "Finish it! Raise Me from the dead; lift me up to heaven and exalt Me to the highest place once again! Set Me back on the throne of the universe with You once more to rule forever! Finish the work and bring all Our children home!"

Listen, in the last hours of His life on earth, Jesus prayed to die so that every last person who would ever believe might have their sins laid on Him, be forgiven and share His life forever! Or to make it more personal, as the songwriter put it: when He was on the cross, I was on His mind! He was thinking about me! He was praying for me! I was the joy that was set before Him that caused Him to pray that He might endure the cross, scorning its shame and sit down at the right hand of God - Heb. 12:2. Hallelujah! Now consider this: we're just the opposite of Jesus. We're big on being glorified in Heaven with Him, but not so big on completing all His purpose for us on earth, especially if it involves suffering! Rick Warren, the pastor of Saddleback Church who wrote "The Purpose Driven Life," found a Bible verse that he says he would like as his own epitaph: Acts 13:36 ...when David had served God's purpose in his own generation, he fell asleep... He says that he prays to serve all God's purpose, to complete all God's will, everything that God wants to do through him and then die and enjoy the glory. That's not a bad way to learn to pray. That's how Jesus prayed! Too many of us are focused on OUR eternal reward instead of on HIS eternal reward, His glorious inheritance in the saints! He counts His inheritance, not in gold and jewels and mansions and crowns, but in people! In receiving all that have been given to Him in every generation until He comes! So, giving them to Him needs to be our life's purpose in the generation in which we live. What are YOU living for? How are YOU praying? Well, now we come to the second part of this great prayer, the part where:

II. Jesus Prayed For His Disciples (6-19), for the 11 men gathered right there around Him, His own trusted and trained few. These men were to form the core of the church that Jesus was going to build; they were the foundation layer of the plan God was going to implement for the rest of human history; they were the ones who would begin the process of taking the Good News of Jesus to the uttermost parts of the earth. Jesus had invested 3 years of intensive personal discipleship training in them and now it's finished and look how he prays (6). He says:

1. He had revealed the Father to these whom God had given Him God chose these men. Remember, He spent the whole night in prayer before He picked them; God told Him who He wanted. God gave them to Him and for 3+ years He had revealed the Father to them. In situation after situation, in healing sick people and opening blind eyes, in stilling storms and multiplying loaves of bread He had shown them the Father so completely that He had told them just hours earlier, Anyone who has seen Me has seen the Father!

a. He had brought them into a genuine faith (7-8) "Now they really believe! They are sure that You sent Me and I came from You. They have accepted My words as Your words. They believe!" Moreover:

b. He had brought them to belong to the Father (9-10) "Father, they are Yours! They belong to You. You picked them out and gave them to Me and I brought them to believe. They gave their hearts and lives to Me and that means they belong! They are Mine and they are Yours! Ours!" And He prayed for them now because:

c. He was leaving them behind in a world which hated them (11a) "Father, I'm leaving this world and going back to glory with You, but they'll still be here! I can't bring them with Me right now. And this world hates them and will assault them and try to assimilate them or kill them! So now I'm not praying for the world, but for them!" And here's what He prayed:

2. He now appealed to the Father to "keep" them (11b-12) The NIV protect in the Greek is literally keep. It is that same word we always sing about the shepherds at Christmas time in fields where they lay keeping their sheep; in the Old Testament we read a number of times about people keeping sheep. Jesus described Himself back in chapter 10 as the Good Shepherd and us as His sheep and declares that He is going to lay down His life for His sheep! He prays, "Father, for these last years I've kept this little band of sheep!" In fact, He literally says, "I've kept them and guarded them". There are two different nuances of meaning here. The first word means:

a. to watch over them carefully, to always have them under your watchful eye, to never let them out of your sight or take a break where they're left alone and see that they are safe and have everything they need, the way that a good shepherd is constantly watching his sheep, leading them to green pastures and still waters. Even as Ps. 121:3-4 (NASB) says about God, ...He who keeps you will not slumber. Behold, He who keeps Israel will neither slumber nor sleep. Then John's second word means:

b. to protect them safely from any assault When the hired hand who doesn't own the flock sees the wolf coming, he abandons them and flees, Jesus said. But the good shepherd stands between the flock and the wolf with his spear and puts his own life on the line to protect the sheep and even dies to save them if he must! Jesus prays, "Father, for these 3 years I was right here with them; I was vigilant over them constantly and I protected them completely. I haven't lost even one! Except Judas whom You knew was always a son of destruction and who went to destruction in order to fulfill the Scriptures. But of the real sheep, I protected every one!" And look how He did it:

c. this protection is accomplished by the mighty power of His Name The concept of a name means more than just the word by which someone is identified. In fact, back in verse 6 and again in verse 26, Jesus literally said, I have revealed YOUR NAME to them, but the NIV translates it simply, YOU. My point is that a person's name means all that the person is, their being, their strength, their reputation. To invoke the name of God is to call on all that God is, on His whole person. Jesus kept His disciples safe through the mighty power of the Father's Name, the Name that the Father had given Him. What Name was that? Well, the Father's Name was four Hebrew letters, YHWH, so sacred that the Jews wouldn't even pronounce it and the vowels have been lost to us. We mispronounce it in English as Jehovah; it is probably something more like Yahweh. But the Name God told Joseph to give His Son was YHWH combined with the Hebrew word for salvation, shua, Yehoshua or shortened, Yeshua, Jehovah-salvation, which comes out in English as Jesus and He was given it because He would save His people from their sins! In the Name of Jesus, in the Person of Jesus, is the salvation of the world and Jesus is the salvation of Jehovah; their Names are one in His Name. We're told it is the only Name under heaven that saves men. We're told that one day at that Name every knee in the universe will bow. And it was by the almighty power of that Name that Jesus kept His disciples safe. So, here's:

3. what He was asking the Father to do for His disciples "Father, I kept them while I was here, but now I'm coming back to heaven. Father, now I commit them to YOU! Protect them by the power of our Name as they're in the midst of this awful world!" But protect them from what? There are some specific things Jesus mentions. First, He was asking the Father:

a. to prevent them from dissolving into disunity (11b) Jesus had formed them into a cohesive band, yet how many times had the Twelve argued with each other over things like who was the greatest? Can you imagine how hard Satan would work to pick them apart and divide them from each other once Jesus was gone? You can see him try it early on in Acts 6 over food distribution and again in Acts 15 over circumcision, even between Paul and Barnabas over whether Mark should join them on a missions trip! Jesus is praying, "Father, prevent these men from that! Make them one the way You and I are one!". Second, He asks Him:

b. to secure them from perishing like Judas (12) He wanted none to be lost, not one of them! He wanted them all kept eternally by the Father's protection and He was confident that the Father would do that. Look at 10:27-30. Satan can't destroy them; they are kept safe in the Father's hand! Third, He asks the Father:

c. to guard them from being lured back to the world's evil (14-16) "Father, they don't belong to this world any more than I do, but they're stuck in it and I know the Evil One is out there prowling about like a roaring lion looking to devour them. And even though he can't destroy them, he would like nothing better than to deceive them and to lure them back into the lifestyle of this world where they don't belong. He will try to get them to commit sexual sin and tell them it's OK. He'll try to seduce them back into living in the pagan way of the people all around them. Father, protect them against that!" And then asked Him:

d. to keep them dedicated to their mission of declaring the Truth (17-19) The word sanctify really means to set apart. The request is set them apart unto the Truth, that is, to Thy Word. "Father, I'm sending them out into this hostile world on a mission, just the way You sent Me here on a mission. That mission is to declare Your Truth to the whole world! Keep them set apart to that! Don't let them forget what they're here for. I have dedicated Myself to the salvation of the world. I'm going to the Cross. Keep them dedicated to continuing our mission and saving the world!" Can you imagine what would have happened if the Apostles had had the kind of moral failures that the modern church sees?! Can you imagine what would have happened if they had decided that God's Word could be reinterpreted to fit the morals of the time in which they lived? Can you imagine what would have happened if they had forgotten their calling and were content to just love Jesus personally and live a contented, pleasant life and die? There would be no church! The whole foundation layer would have been destroyed! That's why Jesus prayed for God to keep them! And He did it! But here's one last thought. Jesus prayed this, not privately, but in their hearing because:

4. He wanted them to experience His complete joy in their victory (13) "I want them to hear Me pray this and understand that You will do what I asked and be filled with the same joy I have in knowing that You will answer! They WILL be one! They WILL never perish! They WILL not be lured by the world's evil and they WILL never abandon their mission! They will be victorious over all the power of the Evil One through Your power! You will keep them!" Hallelujah!

So, what happened to these men? The protection Jesus prayed for was obviously NOT physical and the unity was NOT locational. James was martyred first, slain by the sword of Herod Agrippa in Jerusalem early in Acts. Origen of Alexandria writes about 200 AD that the apostles had divided up the work of evangelizing the world between them. Peter chose Turkey, but eventually went to Rome, the very capital of the Empire, and was crucified upside down under Nero. Andrew took the Gospel to the Ukraine and southern Russia and was crucified in Greece. John in later years oversaw the churches in western Turkey and was exiled to suffering on Patmos, however he was freed and became the only one to die a natural death. Philip was scourged and executed at Hierapolis in west central Turkey after demonstrating the power of God over the local pagan deity. Nathanael or Bartholomew joined him there until his death, then later went to Armenia, the north of Iraq and Iran and was eventually skinned alive near Baku on the Caspian Sea. Thomas took the Gospel to Iran, Ethiopia and eventually all the way to southeast India where he planted the church before being later speared to death near Chennai on the east coast. Matthew or Levi took the Gospel to the continent of Africa and was killed with a spear or an axe in Ethiopia. James the Less labored in Egypt but in the end is said to have been thrown from the Temple in Jerusalem by Jewish leaders and clubbed to death. The other Judas, also called Thaddaeus, went to eastern Iraq and Iran and was crucified at Edessa in Syria. Tradition says that Simon the zealot traveled west into North Africa and even as far as Britain before being killed. Do you see? They did what Jesus did! They said, "Father, bring it on! Do it! Complete the work that You have given me to do even if it means my suffering and death in order that You might have millions of people receive eternal life." Their deep joy and confidence in Jesus' victory caused them to embrace His mission to their very deaths, to spread themselves out and take the Gospel to the ends of the earth as they knew it. Not one of them ever fell into apostasy or was lured back into the world and no matter where they traveled, they always remained one in heart and in their common faith. Jesus' prayer for them was answered! They were protected from the evil one and all the millions who've become part of the church through history have come through their faithful witness. You're here because of them! So, will you join them? Will you rest in that complete joy of Jesus' victory and pray, "Father, complete through me the work You've given me to do, no matter what the cost, that You might be glorified through using me in saving the world!"

Today we come to the end of this series of messages and to the end of this most important discourse in Jn. 13-17, the precious last words that Jesus shared with His disciples the night before He died, which I've been trying to imprint on your minds through using His well-known key phrases. We also come to the end of Jesus' great high-priestly prayer in John 17. I remind you again that this prayer is holy ground. Jesus is baring His heart to the Father before His disciples and us. We saw Him first pray about Himself in verses 1-5 and heard Him pray to go to the cross to give eternal life and the knowledge of Himself to all those who would believe. Then we watched Him intercede for His disciples in verses 19-26, asking the Father that they would never be divided, never perish, never be lured back into the world by the evil one and never abandon their mission to reach the world. And now, in the last six verses:

I. Jesus Prayed For All Those Who Will Ever Believe (20) That simple phrase includes anyone who has ever believed in Jesus Christ. Every person that has ever come to believe has come through the word, through the testimony and the teaching of the apostles, which we have now recorded for us in the Scriptures to preserve it. We have a name for all those who have ever believed; HE had a name for them; He called them His CHURCH! Jesus ended His petition that night by praying for the Church. But before we move on there are several things I want you to notice in that verse. First, when He said, my prayer is not for them alone. I pray also for those who will believe..., it seems clear to me that:

1. all that He prayed for His disciples, He intended for all of us When He prayed for their unity, He didn't mean it to apply just to them; He prayed it for all of us, as you'll hear him explain in the next verse! When He prayed that not one of them would be lost, He meant it for us too! When He asked the Father to protect them from the evil one, He asked it for us also! And when He pleaded that they would never abandon the mission He sent them on, He was pleading it for all of us! You see, as Jesus came into the Father's presence that night, He prayed as the High Priest prayed in Israel; He prayed as the living representative of the entire people before God. Every time the priest came into God's presence he carried the children of Israel with him on his shoulders, their names engraved upon two onyx stones, and he also bore them upon his heart, their names engraved on 12 gems inside the breastplate of his vestment. Actually, Jesus wasn't like the high priest; the high priest was simply an earthly picture of Jesus! Jesus came that night to the Father with all of us upon His shoulders and all of us upon His heart, so when He prayed for all those who will believe:

2. He prayed out of His vision for the church through history Paul actually shared that vision with us. Look at Eph. 5:25b-27. Christ loved the whole Church and sacrificed Himself to get her. Why? So that through all the centuries of history He could nourish and cherish and grow her by adding more people and so He could perfect her, washing away every spot and blemish, stain and wrinkle, until one day she stands complete, until He presents her to Himself at His coming, a radiant, glorious Bride united with Him forever. When Jesus prayed that night, He didn't simply see 11 men standing around Him; His mind was engrossed in the scene we have in Revelation 5 where His glorious church is gathered before the throne of God in white robes and they sing, You are worthy... You have redeemed us to God from every tribe and language and people and nation! His mind was on Rev. 19 at His own Marriage Supper where the Church, His glorious bride dressed in white, is presented to Him complete at last! When He prayed, He prayed for those gathered round Him that night, He prayed for the early church that would shake Jerusalem and turn the Roman Empire upside down, He prayed for the church that would sweep across Europe and become an empire. He prayed for the church that would grow cold and dark through the Middle Ages and would be torn in two by the purifying fire of the reformation. He prayed for the church that would be raised up on every continent through the great missionary endeavors of the last two centuries and He prayed for the multiplied millions of His followers in Asia today who will yet take the Gospel through all the hardest places on earth back to Jerusalem where it all started! All of these could Jesus see that night as He prayed, so here is the best news of all:

3. He was praying for ME! Oh hallelujah, I was there that night! He bore me on His shoulders into the presence of God to pray for ME! He carried me upon His heart that night to ask all that He desired for ME! This is not merely Jesus interceding for millions; this is Jesus pouring out His heart for ME to the Father before going to the cross! As the chorus of Dave Bolling's beautiful song puts it, It was for me He cried, for me He died, for me He shed His blood upon the tree. It was for me He came, for me His shame; For me, oh praise His name, it was for me! Hallelujah!

Now what was it that Jesus prayed for me? For us? Well, the first thing on His heart which He asked for at the greatest length was the same thing He asked for His disciples:

II. He Prayed For Our Unity With One Another (21-23) For the first thousand years until the "Great Schism" in 1054, there literally was one church! All believers were simply Christians. Afterward, there were two churches, Roman and Greek, east and west, until the 1500's when the Protestants broke away from Rome and formed all kinds of their own denominations. Somehow, I don't believe Jesus ever intended that there would be literally thousands of denominations among His followers as there are today and that we would represent ourselves to the world separately from one another. One counselor has described the current state of the church as "multiple personality disorder in the body of Christ"! Yet this division is something Jesus has had to allow and even orchestrate, simply because in many periods throughout history large portions of His church have become cold, dead and apostate and He has repeatedly had to have groups of faithful believers break away from them and start over again in order to preserve the Truth. For instance, one branch of our own church roots is a group of people who split from First Baptist of Glenside in the 1920's because it became liberal and refused to honor the Word of God at the time. But then, 90 years later, First Baptist became Resurrection Community Church and a church of evangelical believers once again. However, the damage was done; we remained separate churches and today Resurrection Community has disbanded. That's a little mini-view of what has happened within the whole body of Christ; we have been split so much, so long, and so far from one another in our beliefs and practices that there's no putting it back together now in the sense of one combined organization. It's a good thing that's not the kind of unity that Jesus was praying for; He prayed for spiritual unity. In fact, in verse 21:

1. He prayed our unity would be like that of the Father and Son Just as I am in You and You are in Me... Try to imagine that! The oneness of being, the full unity of purpose, mind and heart that the Father and Son had, He prayed that kind of unity would be ours, that we would literally be ONE and He said it three times in those few verses! Can that possibly be? Well, listen to Acts 4:32, All the believers were one in heart and mind. No one claimed that any of his possessions was his own, but they shared everything they had. They became extensions of one another. They were together as often as they could be; they were always praying with one another. They were continually involved together in ministry. When one was arrested, they all gathered and prayed until he was released. And when one had a problem or a need, they all saw it as their own and pitched in to help however they could. They freely gave and used their money and possessions to meet each other's needs because they became like the Son who said to His Father back in verse 10, All I have is yours and all You have is mine. Why was that? Because [verse 21] You are in me and I am in You! "We're one; we're the same!" That's the unity Jesus prayed for us to have! By the way, don't bother trying to drum that up somehow, as though we can simply decide to be one with each other. That's not how it happens. There is a profound thought that Jesus expressed in verse 22; be careful not to gloss over it:

2. He gave us the glory that the Father gave Him to create that unity You know, honestly, I pondered that phrase a good while and kept asking, "What does that actually mean? What is the glory that He gave us?" And my eyes were drawn back to verses (1b-2). The glory that the Father gave to Christ is declared in verse 2; He gave glory to Christ by granting Him authority over the whole world to be the only means of salvation! Salvation is not found in any other. There is no other Name, no other person, who saves. Christ is the Savior of the world and all the millions who have eternal life have been given it by Him! And He turned around and basically gave that same privilege to us! He gave us:

a. the present glory of being His means of saving the world If you'll allow me to paraphrase the Great Commission, Jesus said, "Since all authority has been given to Me over heaven and earth, now I'm sending you! Go save the world! Make disciples of all the nations!" Even when He chooses to appear to someone in a vision or dream like He is doing for thousands of Muslims these days, the person is almost always immediately connected to a believer who can explain to them the whole message. WE are the means Jesus has chosen to save all who will ever believe; the only way anyone can come to Him is through hearing the news from us! We literally hold the keys to the Kingdom of Heaven! We actually determine who gets in and who doesn't by who we tell! What an awesome privilege! But oh, what a serious responsibility! Jesus gave us that glory while we are in this world, then He also gave us:

b. the future glory of being exalted as His sons forever As Jesus prayed in verse 5, He was confident of that heavenly glory to which He would soon be restored as God the Son. And in like manner, ...as many as did receive him to them he gave authority to become sons of God -- to those believing in his name - John 1:12 [YLT]. We who believe have been granted the authority of being His sons! Jesus was sent by the Father to bring many sons to glory! And look with me at His future plan for us in Rom. 8:18-21. The whole universe is anxiously waiting for that day when God unveils and reveals His sons and daughters in all the splendor of His glory as says, "Look, these are My Children; these are My glory; these are what the whole world, the whole universe, the whole plan of history, the sending of My Son have been about! Behold them in all their glory!" And then as the chorus says, The universe with joy will ring when grace has won the day; As all creation joins to sing, "Praise God who paid man's way!"

That's the glory He gave us! But look back to verse 22. He gave it to us in order that we might all be ONE! When our hearts are caught up with the glory of the mission He's given us and the ultimate heavenly glory that will be ours, all our differences melt away and we find ourselves being ONE. When we're focusing on our favorite doctrines or espousing the music style we prefer in worship or obsessing over what color to paint the sanctuary, we divide quickly! But just put people on a mission team together and watch the differences disappear! If you want true unity, focus on the heart of God for the world and you'll find it! Jesus prayed for unity to come from that and the reason it works is that:

3. His indwelling us is the means of creating that unity (23a) The Father being IN Jesus made them one. His being IN us makes us one! Jesus lives in each one of us in the person of the Holy Spirit, so we have ONE Spirit! We are all the same, all united at the core of our very beings! So why don't we see it? James said, What is the source of quarrels and conflicts among you? Is not the source your pleasures that wage war in your members? - 4:1 (NASB). It's our flesh! Our own self-centered ways of acting and thinking. When we yield to the Spirit and walk according to His direction and in His strength, we are one! When we choose to walk according to our flesh, we quickly end up in conflict with one another! Of course, Jesus understood that and that's probably why:

4. He prayed that our unity would be brought to a perfect completion (23b) Jesus realized there would be struggles in this area, that there would be times and seasons of dividedness in His church, but He prayed that the Father would eventually perfect that spiritual unity, bring it to a full completion. I hope that what we see today is part of the Father's answer to that prayer. Once a month I spend a wonderful time praying with an Assemblies of God pastor, a couple of Episcopalian rectors, a Lutheran pastor, a Catholic priest and a deacon, a Baptist and a bunch of Presbyterians, all of whom love Jesus and by the time we leave after praying for our community and the world and one another, our hearts are deeply knit. We know we have a ton of differences but we know we are one in Jesus and His mission. 25 years ago I wouldn't have done that. 25 years ago you didn't see that in this area. I would like to think that in some ways the church in this generation is waking up to a new kind of unity, the kind Jesus prayed for us to have. But why was that so important to Him?

III. He Prayed (twice) That Our Unity Would Impact The World You see, according to (21b):

1. our unity convinces the world that Jesus truly is God's beloved Son and according to (23b)

2. our unity convinces the world that we truly are God's beloved people What would you think if 10 different people tried to talk to you about the same basic thing, but each one told about it with a different slant and none of the 10 would have anything to do with each other? You would dismiss the thing out of hand! That's how people feel when they see us come to them divided and separated from each other. But when we come united, with one heart and mind, despite all our differences, people are moved! Our unity in coming to them with the same heart, with the same message, holding hands together, is a powerful witness. People look at it and think, "Man, something must really have happened to them all! This Jesus must be real!" and:

3. the result is that they believe in and worship Him and join us! Like Paul said, when someone sees us telling the same story in unity ...he will be convinced by all that he is a sinner... and the secrets of his heart will be laid bare. So he will fall down and worship God, exclaiming, "God is really among you!" - 1 Cor. 14:23-25. Our unity impacts the world...and so does our disunity! That's why it's so important!

Now there are still two more things that Jesus prayed for us. In verse 24:

IV. He Prayed For Our Eventual Union With Him In Heaven (24) Oh, listen to that! There is our guarantee of heaven! Jesus told the Father that:

1. He wants all who belong to Him to be with Him forever He asked that all of us would be with Him where He is, in heaven. He prayed that each one of us who are given to Him would be in His personal presence, that He would have us with Him for all eternity. He said, "I want it!" He wants us. He wants us in heaven and we shall be there! And not only that:

2. He wants us to fully behold His eternal glory He prayed that we would see Him high and lifted up, seated on the throne of the universe with the Name that is above every Name, that we would see Him shine in all His splendor, that we would see all the angels and all the redeemed of all the ages gathered round His throne crying "Here I am to worship..." and casting their crowns at His feet! If you read Rev. 4-5 and see all the peoples of the earth in all their splendor bowing before the throne of God and of the Lamb, that's what Jesus prayed for, and we know He'll get it and we'll be there to see it! Job put it well, ...after my skin has been destroyed, yet in my flesh I will see God; I myself will see him with my own eyes--I, and not another. How my heart yearns within me! - Job 19:26-27. Hallelujah! Then finally, as Jesus closed His prayer:

V. He Prayed For His Empowering Union With Us On Earth (25-26) Did you hear that? As He closed:

1. He prayed that we would be filled with the Father's love I pray that the love YOU have for ME might be in THEM! What a thing! The very love of the Father for the Son! That infinite, eternal love -- in us! But how is that to be? Paul says, ...God has poured out his love into our hearts by the Holy Spirit, whom he has given us. - Rom. 5:5. That's why:

2. He prayed that He might come to personally indwell us by His Spirit ...that I Myself might be in them. Jesus prayed that the day would come when He would personally live inside every believer and when the Spirit came 50 days later, it happened. From that moment on every believer is now indwelt by the very Spirit of Jesus. Listen, Jesus wanted you to be with Him in glory forever, but while you're on earth He wants to be in you! Personally! He never wants to have one moment of separation from you, rather He wants to go with you through every minute of your life, filling you with Himself so that you are able to live a life of love and love others as He loved us! And, of course, the result of that will also be unity!

THAT THEY MAY BE ONE. It's the thing that was most on His heart the night before He died. He wanted us, his followers, to be one despite the things that divide us. In his book The Mark of the Christian, Francis Schaeffer told that Hitler, during World War II, ordered the union of all religious denominations in Germany. A Brethren group became deeply divided over the issue. One segment obeyed and suffered little persecution, but gradually their spiritual vitality was weakened. The group that resisted stayed vibrant, but many died in the concentration camps due to their stand. Following the war, feelings between these groups were sharp. Tensions were high. An elder of one of the groups told Francis Schaeffer that they knew the problem had to be resolved. So leaders of both groups agreed to get alone in a quiet place to ask God to show each one where he had failed to keep Christ's commands. After several days of heart-searching, they met together. "And what happened then?" asked Schaeffer. "We just were one!" the elder replied. What will it take for Jesus to see the answer to His prayer in our own lives, in our church and in our community? Maybe we need to search our hearts too! To see where we're divided, where there's spiritual pride, to see what Jesus wants to cleanse us of, so that we can be unreservedly ONE!

I think all of us like exciting stories, especially if they are true. And there is no more exciting story than the story of the Church of Jesus Christ. It is a story that began on Easter Sunday morning as the disciples first saw the resurrected Christ and believed; it is a story that has continued through 2000 years of history. It is a story that is filled with courageous and bold leaders and amazing exploits, with common ordinary people who gave their lives, and with miracles and powerful movements of the Holy Spirit all across the world. And it is a story that is still being written today in your life and mine and millions like us on every continent of the globe. I would say, without exaggerating, the chapter being written in our lifetime is probably the most amazing one yet. Jesus is doing things with His church in our day greater in scope than He has done in all of history. In fact, it may be the final chapter before He returns! To read the middle chapters you'll have to delve into the history books and biographies that have been written. It is a rich exploration which I wish we all had time for. But the very first chapter of the story of the church God chose to have written down for us and preserved in Scripture by a disciple named Luke. We call it the Book of Acts or the "Acts Of The Apostles" and that's what we'll be studying together for some weeks to come. But before we begin, let's get an overall perspective in our minds by thinking about:

Jesus' Program For This Age He spelled it out in Mt. 16:18. After Peter declared for all the disciples that great lesson, You are the Christ, the Son of the Living God, Jesus told them what His whole program was about: ...on this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell will not overcome it. Those five words, I will build my church, are His purpose statement. "I will build myself a great assembly, a body of believing worshippers who confess that I am the Son of God, and nothing on this earth will be able to stop Me!" That's what Jesus has been about from that resurrection morning until this one, building His church. It began by giving His followers a repeated:

1. the command - Mt. 28:19 Go and make disciples of all nations... "Go build My church. Everywhere you go, share about me and make disciples, baptize them in My Name and teach them everything I've taught you so they will go and disciple others. Don't stop. Go to the very ends of the earth. My glory is to be declared in all the earth." That is the purpose and the mission of His followers in the world, to build and build, to grow and grow the Church, not to sit and soak, not to put up buildings in His Name, but to build Him an ever-widening community of worshippers who believe that He is the Christ. The Book of Acts describes:

2. the process - Acts 15:14 (NASB) James said: "Simon has related how God first concerned Himself about taking [out] from among the Gentiles [the nations] a people for His name. That's what He's been doing down through history. That's His passion, taking out from among all the peoples of earth a brand-new people for His name, the Church. And Paul expressed:

3. the goal - Eph. 5:25-27 Christ loved the church and gave himself up for her to make her holy, ...and to present her to himself as a radiant church, without stain or wrinkle or any other blemish... When He's all done and the church has been fully built, she becomes a fully matured Bride. And He is going to stop History by His return, glorify her and make her radiant, and present her to Himself in heaven. And John tells us what that looks like:

4. the result - Rev. 7:9-10 ...before me was a great multitude that no one could count, from every nation, tribe, people and language, standing before the throne and in front of the Lamb. They were wearing white robes and were holding palm branches in their hands. And they cried out in a loud voice: "Salvation belongs to our God, who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb." That's the Church! Worshippers from all eras of time, from all peoples of earth, all praising and serving Him together. That's what He's building out of us and through us. That's the goal all of history is rushing headlong toward. And it all began here in Acts with 49 days:

The Days Of Preparation - Ch. 1

7 weeks. That's how long Jesus chose to wait after He rose before launching the Church publicly. They were important days. For 40 of them Jesus Himself actually remained on earth with His disciples after His resurrection. We call it:

I. The Post-Resurrection Ministry Of Jesus (1-8) 40 seems to be the number of preparation. 40 years Moses was in the desert being prepared to be the leader of Israel. 40 days He was on Mt. Sinai with God being prepared to give the Law. 40 days Jesus spent in the desert in warfare against Satan preparing to launch His public ministry. And 40 days Jesus spent with His disciples to make them ready to begin to build His church. Those were important days, both for them and for us. During those days, Luke tells us that some very significant things happened. First, Jesus:

1. He gave us sure proofs: that He is alive (1-3) Jesus was not planning to stay on earth; He was going to leave and return to heaven. Yet the core of our faith is that He is alive. We serve a risen Savior, not a dead man. How would His followers know that for sure? How would we who come thousands of years later know that it is true? The answer is that He spent 40 days, more than a month, with a group of men He had chosen, men who knew Him, who had been with Him for three years before His death, men who could not be mistaken or fooled. And He walked with them and talked with them and taught them and ate meals with them. For 40 days they touched Him and hugged Him and He put His arms around them. John put it like this in 1John 1:1-2, That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked at [or gazed at intently] and our hands have touched--this we proclaim concerning the Word of life [Jesus]. The life appeared; we have seen it and testify to it, and we proclaim to you the eternal life, which was with the Father and has appeared to us. He proved it to them in an undeniable way, a way that can't be disputed, a way that caused them to go out and stake their very lives on the message that He is alive, to give themselves up as martyrs for His sake. That's how convinced they were! And they shared it with others who shared with others until it was shared with us! And like the generations before us, we go out and give our lives to build His church and are willing to die for Him if it comes to that, because we're convinced He's alive, even though we've never seen Him! Paul said the church is the church of the LIVING God! And today we can sit here and know that with full assurance because of those critical days of preparation when Jesus revealed Himself to the apostles! Then during those days Jesus:

2. He made a promise: the Holy Spirit will indwell us (4-5) John made this comment much earlier in John 7:39, Up to that time the Spirit had not been given, since Jesus had not yet been glorified. Jesus Himself had said in the Upper Room, But I tell you the truth: It is for your good that I am going away. Unless I go away, the Counselor will not come to you; but if I go, I will send him to you. When he comes, he will convict the world of guilt in regard to sin and righteousness and judgment...But when he, the Spirit of truth, comes, he will guide you into all truth. - John 16:7-8, 13. Now, Jesus reiterated that promise and clarified that it would happen in just a few days. The Holy Spirit, the very presence of the living God, would now come and baptize them all, immerse them all, indwell them all, transform them all. And when Peter stood up to preach, he made it clear that this promise is for every believer in every time and every place - 2:38-39. For 2000 years people have been testing that promise and no matter what their land, their language, their skin color or their station in life, rich or poor, young or old, no matter when or where they live, when they repent of their sins and accept the truth that Jesus is alive, the same thing happens all over again; they receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. He comes and lives in them and they are transformed into brand new creatures by His power. It works in Irian Jaya and in Guinea and in Glenside. It worked in 30 AD, in 300 AD, in 1300 AD and it works in 2000 AD. That's what makes us part of the Church of the living God. 1 Cor. 12:13, ...we were all baptized by one Spirit into one body... the Church. Everybody who's in the Church Jesus is building has the Spirit. Now, lots of people are in church buildings and in organizations which are called churches and don't have the Spirit, but everybody who's in the REAL church, the one Jesus is preparing to present to Himself, has the Spirit! And it is His Spirit which bears witness with our human spirit that we are children of God, that gives us assurance that we are saved. That promise was made most clearly during these days. Thirdly, during these days Jesus:

3. He stated a principle, one that we would do well to heed. He said that we will never know the time schedule on this building project (6-7). They were still stuck on their Jewish idea of the Messiah who was coming to restore Israel's kingdom and let her rule the world, not a Savior who was planning to build a Church. And Jesus told them straight out: "It is not for you to know. The Father has set times and dates by His own authority and He is never going to tell you!" He's not going to tell anyone. When it's time to quit working on the building, the whistle will blow, or rather the trumpet will sound, and we'll all get raptured into His presence for the presentation and THEN He'll return and set up the promised Kingdom. But we'll never know when! And yet, time after time people and organizations, even ones who are true believers, set dates and get disappointed. During these days of preparation Jesus warned us clearly NOT to do that. And then during these days:

4. He revealed His plan Verse 3 says over these 40 days He spoke with them about the Kingdom of God, That is, He taught them. Some of that teaching was in Lk. 24:44 and following, where in the Upper Room He opened their minds to understand the Scriptures and explained what was written that He would suffer, rise again and that repentance and remission of sins would be preached to all nations in His name. Matthew 28 says He gave them that same plan on a mountain in Galilee. Here he met them out on the Mount of Olives and in verse (8) He reiterated the plan one more time. In those words, we find:

a. our power: it is derived from the Holy Spirit The Spirit's presence lives in us to give us power. Power for what? Here also is:

b. our purpose: to be witnesses unto Him What is a witness? Someone who tells what they have experienced. What have we experienced? Him! The living Jesus who died for our sins and rose again and whose Spirit lives within us! That's our purpose. How is the world going to know that His is alive? They look at us! They listen to our words and look at our lives and they see Jesus. How is that possible? By the power of the Spirit. As we yield to Him, His power speaks the words through our mouths, His power does the works through our hands. As Paul said, we're living letters, known and read by all men! When they see Him in us, they believe and the church is built! And here also we have:

c. our perspective: This process will advance from Jerusalem through Judea and then Samaria and on to the ends of the earth. And notice that this verse is not a command to go and be witnesses. It is a firm statement of fact. "The Spirit will come; you will receive power and you will be witnesses to the ends of the earth. It will happen. You can't help yourselves! The Spirit will drive you to it! That's the plan. That's what I'm going to do with My church and when it's all done, I'll come back. But right now, it is time for Me to leave." And so next we read of:

II. The Ascension Of Jesus (9-11) He literally floated up through the air until the clouds hid Him, showing them that He was going into heaven. And that is important for two reasons. First:

1. it certified His permanent departure For 40 days He'd been appearing and disappearing. He would meet them here or there and stay and then leave. He would suddenly appear or suddenly disappear. But the ascension told them that was over. He was leaving now for good. He was going back to heaven to the Father. He wouldn't be showing up tomorrow or next week or next year in the flesh anymore. He was gone now for the duration. But it also:

2. it clarified His pending return The angelic messengers made it clear. He's gone but He's coming back! And the way He's coming back is no mystery; it's exactly the way He left, in a body, coming down out of the clouds of heaven! His coming is not some vague veiled reference to an obscure idea or wish; the same Jesus, alive and well, will come back in the same body just the way He left to stand upon the earth and rule the nations! And if anybody says, "Look he's there; that guy says he's Jesus reincarnate!," don't believe it because when He comes every eye will see Him and He'll be coming down from heaven just like this! That knocks out every false pretender; there won't be any mistakes! So, Jesus spent 40 days preparing His disciples and then He left - for good! And for 9 more days they were all alone. What did they do? (12-14) Their preparation was not done quite yet. In these last 9 days there were also three very important:

III. The Lessons For The Disciples and for us. The first one is that:

1. in building the church all things wait on the timing of the Father Jesus told them to go back to Jerusalem and wait until the Spirit came, so they went back and waited. And chapter 2 says that when the Day of Pentecost was fully come (the day God had chosen), the Spirit came. That is one of the primary lessons of God: waiting. In building the church you can be sure of one thing: we don't control the timetable; God does. The times and the seasons are under His control. The opening and closing of doors is His. The church is built in His time and in His way. And even though we have grand visions and plans and ideas and dreams, we must learn that in all of it we are really just waiting on what God is doing, when He is doing it and being His instruments to use when He's ready. The second lesson is that:

2. in building the church all things are accomplished through prayer Jesus didn't tell them to go back and pray but they went back and prayed anyway. It was a lesson they had learned. Jesus had told them, ... how much more will your Father in heaven give the Holy Spirit to those who ask him!" - Luke 11:13. That's what they were doing in those days. They prayed for the Spirit to come. They prayed every day in the upper room and went every day to the Temple to worship and praise. In the church, all things of any eternal value are accomplished through prayer. Prayer is not ONE thing we do; it is THE thing we do. We pray and then He moves through us to build the church! And finally, the third lesson is that:

3. in building the church all of us in our variety are one There were 11 apostles Jesus had chosen. There were women who had followed and supported Him. His mother Mary was there. His brothers who hadn't even believed Him before His death were there. And verse 15 says that the group of believers was at times as large as 120. And they all prayed as one. There were no distinctions. When Peter spoke to them in verse 16, he called them "Brothers". They were all brothers and sisters in a common family. That's how it is in the church. Gal. 3:28, There is neither Jew nor Greek, slave nor free, male nor female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus. In the church, in Jesus, nobody's higher or lower, better or worse; the ground is all level. All are sinners saved by grace and transformed into saints by the Holy Spirit. That's the truth, but putting it fully into practice will take them another 10 years, as we'll see later.

So, that, in a nutshell, is what Jesus is about. It's what His followers are to be about as the main purpose of their lives. But quite frankly, we're often about other things in our lives, aren't we? About 255 BC there lived a girl by the name of Helena. She was the daughter of an innkeeper on the Turkish coast, from a lowly background. It is said that from her childhood she adored Jesus. The Roman Emperor Constantius I conquered that region, saw her and took her as a concubine. After 19 years she was banished, that is, divorced and sent away, so Constantius I could marry another woman and consolidate his power. But she had a little son and it is said that she taught her son about Jesus. In the year 306 he became the Emperor of Rome. His name was Constantine. In 312 on the eve of a great battle Constantine had a vision of the cross and heard the words, "In this sign conquer". Constantine adopted the faith of his mother; he became the first Christian Roman emperor and a year later issued The Edict of Milan which ended the persecution of Christians in the Empire and gave everyone freedom of religion. Helena has been described as such a devout servant of God that in 324, when she was nearly 70, she made one of the first pilgrimages to the Holy Land. She marshalled experts to search for the true cross in Jerusalem's neglected rubble, and they believed they found it on the location where today thousands come each year to reflect on Christ. But beyond that, Helena encouraged her son to build churches, appoint Christians to high govern- ment posts, and adopt a Christian calendar. While Constantine was not entirely successful in turning the Roman Empire toward Christianity, his mother's legacy has survived intact. She was later canonized as a saint. As writer Evelyn Waugh said, "Helena was a lonely, resolute woman with a single concrete, practical task clear before her--to turn eyes of the world back to the planks of wood on which their salvation hung." [Virtue, Mar/Apr 1996. Page 47.] This innkeeper's daughter, this captive human trophy, this divorced single-parent ex-wife, was an instrument greatly used of God to build the Church of Jesus Christ because that was her vision. Will you make it yours?

The Coming Of The Holy Spirit - Ch. 2

Nine days those early disciples waited. Jesus had left them to return to heaven. Every day they went to the Temple and worshipped Him, praising Him that He was alive (Lk. 24:53). Every day they gathered in the Upper Room and perhaps other houses to pray together and ask for the coming of the Holy Spirit that Jesus promised. They probably didn't bother to look at a calendar. They were so filled with joy they hadn't even noticed that the day Jesus rose was the day of the Jewish Celebration of Firstfruits where the first barley sheaf of the harvest was waved as an offering to the Lord. 49 days, 7 weeks, had gone by. But then this 10th day came, which was the 50th day after Jesus' resurrection. And by Divine coincidence it happened also to be the Jewish Feast of Pentecost, which means 50 days after the Firstfruits are offered. But this day of Pentecost was unlike any other, in fact this day is perhaps the third most important day in all of history after Good Friday and Resurrection Sunday. On this 50th day, the Holy Spirit comes and the Church of Jesus Christ is catapulted into existence, which changes the course of history forever. In Acts 2 we read the story of three things that happen on that day. First:

I. A Promise Is Fulfilled (1) The NIV doesn't do this verse justice. The word came is literally fulfilled. This Pentecost was a day of fulfillment. Just as the Passover was finally fulfilled when Christ our Passover was sacrificed for us and just as the Celebration of the Firstfruits was finally fulfilled on the third day when Christ rose from the dead, the firstfruits of those who slept in death, so exactly 7 weeks (or 50 days) later, the Feast of Weeks (or as the Greeks called it: Pentecost) was finally fulfilled by the coming of the Holy Spirit to birth the Church, which became a living offering of two loaves, Jew and Gentile, together presented to the Lord. So, it fulfills the Old Testament symbol. But it does more than that:

1. Pentecost fulfills the promise of the coming of the Spirit Jesus had promised repeatedly that the Holy Spirit would come. He explicitly told them to stay in Jerusalem and wait for the Spirit Who would come in just a few days. So here is the fulfillment of that promise (2-4). Two amazing signs were given so that they would recognize what was happening. First:

a. they heard the sound of wind They didn't feel it, but they heard its sound, loud and overpowering like a hurricane blowing or a tornado or the gale that nearly sunk their boat on the Sea of Galilee. They knew right away the sound of the wind, but it was not a physical wind; it was the wind of the Spirit. Jesus had said the coming of the Spirit was like the blowing of the wind when He taught them. In fact, the very word, both in Hebrew and Greek, for wind, for breath and for spirit is the same word. To say, "it is the wind" is the exact same words that say, "It is the Spirit!" Now, back in Gen. 2:7 God breathed into Adam the "wind (breath) of life" and he became a living soul. On the evening of His resurrection when Jesus appeared to the disciples in the Upper Room, He did a very strange thing while he was with them. John 20:22 says ...he breathed on them and said, "Receive the Holy Spirit." It was a symbolic act, a prophetic act. Just as the Father breathed His breath into man and gave him physical life, Jesus was saying "Soon I will breathe My Breath, My Spirit into you and give you MY spiritual life!" The sound they heard was the sound of the very breath of God breathing the life of His Spirit into them. But there was another sign. As they heard the deafening sound of wind:

b. they saw the sight of fire It wasn't actual fire, but they saw what looked like a great pillar of fire that appeared above them and then it separated into a host of individual little flames or tongues of fire and these then appeared to come down and rest upon each one of them individually, probably on their mouths. Yet instead of feeling the sensation of burning, they suddenly felt uncontrollably moved to speak! The symbol was plain. The Holy Spirit had come down on Jesus in the form of a dove at His baptism. John had said of Jesus, He will baptize you with the Holy Spirit AND FIRE! Fire was always the symbol of the presence of God. The pillar of fire, the burning bush and now tongues of fire that energized their tongues so that they were suddenly empowered to speak His praise, to be witnesses, just as Jesus had said. This indeed fulfilled what they had been waiting for; the Holy Spirit had come and He had come to stay and to dwell in each one of them forever. But it does even more than that:

2. it begins the fulfillment of the plan of God by the church The coming of the Spirit was not the only thing Divinely arranged on that day (5-13). Now, think about this for just a moment. Where is the only other place in all the Bible where anything like this happened? In Gen. 11 at the Tower of Babel! What happened there?

a. at Babel: after the flood the human race was starting to follow after evil once again. They were unified by a common language and lived in only one area and they had united themselves once again in a common rebellion against God. So, what did God do? He came down there and suddenly the unified race was divided into all different languages. They couldn't understand one another anymore. And the effect of that was that they moved away from one another and ultimately populated various regions of the earth and developed their own cultures as we see them today. Acts puts it like this, 17:26-27 And why did He do it? Not as a punishment but as a preventive measure. It controlled the development of evil in the world in some measure and it was for their salvation. It was a divide and conquer strategy. They were divided into a host of language and ethnic groups so that they might be reached and redeemed one at a time until, at last, all of them had some who worshipped God. So now think about what happened:

b. at Pentecost: Now God's people are all gathered as one body and:

(1) the unified church is suddenly given the gift of speaking "all" languages But at the very same moment:

(2) prepared representatives of "all" peoples are in Jerusalem They are from every nation under heaven! Now that obviously is an expression of amazement and not meant to be literally accurate. I don't think there were any Chinese or Africans there. But there were Jews there in Jerusalem who had been born and raised in every area of the Roman Empire. They came from way over East in Persia and from down south in Arabia. Some were from up north in Asia Minor and Crete, west into Greece and from all across North Africa. Many of these were Jews who had moved back from these lands where their ancestors had scattered to live in Jerusalem. Others were visitors for the Feast from as far away as Rome itself. Some were actually members of other peoples who had converted to Judaism. But they were all there; it was as though representatives of the whole Roman world were present in Jerusalem just for this moment and through this miracle:

(3) they hear God's praises in their own languages and believe! They hear the believers speaking languages they'd never learned, their own home languages. And they hear them telling as witnesses about the wonderful works of God and they are utterly amazed and confused. And by the end of the day, many of them give their lives to Jesus Christ. There is a point God is loudly trying to make here:

c. point: the church is now empowered by the Spirit to reach all peoples Remember Jesus' plan? I will build my Church. Go and make disciples of all nations. When the Spirit comes you will receive power and will be witnesses unto Me unto the ends of the earth! Well, here it is, already happening in miniature in one day, the church empowered by the Spirit to reach all the peoples of earth with the good news of Jesus. The Church is not only born, but it is launched headlong into its mission and purpose! And all its very first members are a picture of the way it will end up; they're individuals God has prepared from among every people to receive His Son. That's how it began. That's how it is to be built and that's how it will end, with all peoples worshipping Jesus Christ.

And now on that day, a second important thing happens:

II. A Sermon Is Preached (14-40) An entire crowd is gathered together because of hearing the loud noise and they find these believers speaking in their own languages and Peter stands up and preaches a sermon. Like any good sermon, it has three points (Ha) and I'm going to give them to you in a nutshell. First, he gives an:

1. explanation: "These guys aren't drunk! It's only 9 in the morning. This is the fulfillment of prophecy (14-21). Joel 2:28-32 said that in the last days God would pour out His Spirit on His people and they would prophesy. Well, this is it! This is a God thing." Then Peter moved to:

2. evangelization: (22-36) He said: "I have important news:

a. you Jews killed Jesus right here in Jerusalem just 7 weeks ago. Remember? But I have wonderful news: He rose from the dead just as the Scriptures said He would. He's alive! And:

b. Jesus has now sent His Spirit He did this! and guess what: He is the Messiah you've been waiting for and right now He is Lord! Wow! You killed the Savior God sent you! And this is the proof it was Him!"

So, then Peter moved to:

3. exhortation: Their hearts were smitten with conviction of their horrible sin. And they cried out to him, "What shall we do?!!" He urged them: save yourselves! (37-40). He said anyone anywhere, even you, can be saved:

a. through repentance of sin and commitment to Jesus... We recognize the vileness of our sin and we cry out to Him and commit ourselves to Him as our Lord. Eventually we publicly declare ourselves His follower through baptism. And when we cry out to Jesus:

b. we receive two things: forgiveness of sins before God (justification) and life by the indwelling Spirit! That's the Gospel!

And out of God's miraculous signs and Peter's powerful sermon, a third momentous thing happens:

III. The Church Is Born (41) Imagine that in your mind; 3,000 believe! They completely bypass the "small church" phase and the apostles have 3,000 people to care for in one fell swoop. Can you imagine if that was us? What would we do? We wouldn't know where to meet. We wouldn't have any idea how to organize this mob. But fortunately, the Holy Spirit is the one in charge of building the church. And they simply did what came “naturally” to them through the Spirit. Let’s look at what God put into them in verses (42-47) First, notice that They have:

1. a hunger for the Word of God through the teaching of the leaders (42) They couldn’t get enough of it. They wanted to know more. They wanted to learn everything that Jesus had said and taught. They wanted to re-learn how to understand the Old Testament and see where things were said of Jesus there, the things the Apostles had come to understand. They wanted it day after day. They lapped it up like a man dying of thirst. When the Spirit of God comes into our lives, He gives us a hunger to learn the things of God. At the same time, they have:

2. a hunger for fellowship together, and that means breaking bread with each other and praying together (42) They all had homes and they gathered in those homes together to eat meals and talk about their faith and to celebrate the Lord’s Supper and to pray about what was happening and how to share their new-found faith with their families and others. They wanted that. They wanted to be together with the others who believed to support one another and be built up by each other. When the Spirit of God comes into our lives, He gives us a hunger for fellowship; we want to be among the people of God. Thirdly, they share together in:

3. an awe at the mighty working of God among them (43) God continues to confirm their new-found faith by doing mighty things through the apostles. Mk. 16:20 says, Then the disciples went out and preached everywhere, and the Lord worked with them and confirmed his word by the signs that accompanied it. They shared with others and Jesus worked with them. He confirmed their message by doing miracles through His power. We see one of those in chapter 3 where they heal a crippled man. Now we could get into a big discussion about sign gifts and all of that, but my point is that wherever the Spirit of God moves His people to share the Word, He is always powerfully at work with them and miracles happen. People’s lives are changed; they are broken, born again, transformed. Amazing answers to prayer happen. Opportunities come that we would never dream of, when we’re about His work of building the church, so much so that we stand in awe! Then notice that they have:

4. a new view of their possessions (44-45) They didn’t all sell their houses and live in a commune but they quit thinking of their material things in a selfish way. They saw them as gifts from God. And they shared them with one another. They sold things and gave to those who were poor. They took money out of their accounts and helped those who needed food. They opened their homes to those who needed shelter. It wasn’t planned; it all came from the Spirit of God. When the Spirit of God comes into our lives, our whole view of what’s important changes. We learn to hold possessions loosely, to use them for His glory, to give unselfishly. And they had:

5. a new passion for worship and a joy in their lives (46) Now, they didn’t all quit their jobs, but they did all find time to come together every day to worship at the Temple. When the Spirit of God comes in, you have a passion to praise God, to glorify Him for saving you and for all He’s done. You want to worship from the heart. Your life has a new joy that nothing can squelch. And finally notice that they have:

6. a testimony that continually drew people to faith (47) Other people watched them at worship, talked to them about what was going on and every day they talked to people about Jesus and what He had done for them and every day more and more people chose to believe and become part of the church. They didn’t plan evangelism campaigns and hold revival meetings. It just happened out of their daily lives. When the Spirit of God comes in, His perspective and goal is to build the church and if you just yield to Him, He’ll use you in ways you never imagined to touch the hearts of people.

And do you know what’s really amazing? Wherever the church is born all over the world, the effects are the same! When the Holy Spirit comes into their lives, whether it’s in Central Asia or Sumatra, people hunger for teaching, they desire fellowship with one another, God does wonderful new things and they begin to worship with joy and to love others and give sacrificially. And others are drawn to their new faith. The Church grows. It just happens. The Spirit of God does it. But most of the time, we read this chapter and feel like Pentecost is over. It’s done. It was a special thing for a special day, once in all history. Today God does things in a nice orderly regular fashion. We put together doctrines to explain that tongues aren’t a normal thing for today. They weren’t a normal thing for then either! They only happened three times in Acts. But the truth is that wherever there are people whose hearts are sold out to God’s purpose of planting His church, the Holy Spirit is doing mighty things, even today. In 1999 the Advance newsletter reported this true story: Two Korean believers traveled to a village in a predominantly Islamic country in Central Asia to pray for the people of that village. Although the pair could not speak the local language, they were invited to pray for a lame old man. When the old man was healed and stood to his feet, the workers knew someone had to explain what had happened. One began to tell -- in her own Korean language -- about God and the risen Christ, and the people assembled actually heard her in their own language. [It’s a new twist on the tongues phenomenon!] More than 40 people decided to follow Jesus that day in that village. We might be tempted to ask, “Well why doesn’t God do things like that here for us?” Maybe we would do better to ask ourselves, “How fully have we yielded our lives to the control of the Spirit of God and made His passion of building the church our passion?” If we would dare to let our lives get consumed with Him and what He’s about, there’s no telling what He would do!

“I Will Build My Church” - The Book Of Acts

The Gospel In Jerusalem - Ch. 3

Hebrews 2:3-4 really summarizes the story of the early days of the building of the church. ...This salvation, which was first announced by the Lord [Jesus], was confirmed to us by those who heard him [the apostles]. God also testified to it by signs, wonders and various miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit distributed according to his will. Acts 2:43 says that after the day of Pentecost many wonders and signs were done by the apostles. Miracles, extraordinary events that could only be from God, occurred on almost a daily basis as God displayed His power in the life of His church. In Acts 3 we merely have the story of the first miracle that was recorded, and perhaps it was written down for us as an example of the rest, to illustrate the way that God has throughout the centuries used His power, not for personal gratification of believers but for the purpose of building His church. In the beginning of chapter 3:

I. God Displays His Power By Healing A Lame Man (1-10) The early believers continued to use the Temple as a site of worship. One afternoon Peter and John were going up there and at the gate they saw this crippled man begging and he asked them for money. I don't know whether you've ever had that experience. Beggars are not a common sight in our country, except that maybe some of us commute and meet folks downtown who try to panhandle for small change, often to feed their drug or alcohol habit. But beggars have been common through history and they are common in many places of the world today, people who have no way to provide for themselves and are reduced to simply standing or sitting in the streets in public places and asking passers-by for money in order to survive. When we were in Kyrgyzstan years ago, we were in the open-air bazaar shopping one morning and there was Gennady, sitting in a wheel chair. Gennady is about 50 years old and has bright blue eyes but he has no legs. In that culture he can't work. So, every day he sits in the bazaar in his little cart and a little box hoping people who pass by will give him a som or two so he and his wife and daughter can eat that day. That's how he lives. He's just a 20th century version of this man in Acts 3. Every day a few friends would carry him to the gate of the Temple so pious people going in would take pity on him and give him a few spare coins to live on. Since he was there every day and always asking, I'm sure it was often annoying to people going in. You know how you feel at Christmas time at the mall when the Salvation army bell-ringer is outside the entrance and you have to go past him to get in or out! You can't give every time! I'm sure some saw him as a daily nuisance. Others maybe felt guilty for not helping him. But Peter and John had a different response:

1. a response of Christian compassion (1-6) When he asked them for money, they looked at him in verse 4 and they didn't see a nuisance; they didn't see a free-loader on society. They saw a human being living out a tragedy, suffering every day of his life. And they didn't just walk by. Their hearts were moved. They were moved the way Jesus was moved when He looked on the crowds and saw the tragedy of their lives, that they were like sheep without a shepherd, with no one to care for them and He had compassion on them and healed their sick and taught them. The disciples had seen them as a nuisance and said, "Send them away so they can go find themselves something to eat." But Jesus had said, "YOU feed them" and then He made a way by multiplying their loaves and fishes. Before, they might have seen this man the same way, but now the same Spirit who lived in Him lived in them and they are filled with compassion for this man's suffering. When we know Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit has come to live in us, we can't look at suffering people the same way. John said, If anyone has material possessions and sees his brother in need but has no pity on him, how can the love of God be in him? - 1 John 3:17. If the love of God lives in us, we have a:

a. our natural inclination to focus on people who are suffering. Look with me at the words of Jesus in Mt. 25:34-40. Now just forget about prophecy and the end times and all that stuff. This is the story of how Jesus separates out the peoples of the world at His return into those who know Him and those who don't know Him. And what's the difference? The righteous who knew Him saw people who were hungry or thirsty and fed them and gave them drink; they saw people who had no place to stay and took them in; they saw people who were sick and tended them and some lonely and wasting away in prison and visited them. It came so natural to them that they had to ask "When did we do these things to You?" and He replies, "When you did those things to human beings, you did them to ME!" Christians have always, from day one, been people who naturally (or I should say supernaturally) looked with great compassion on the needs of suffering people and did something about them. This man was a beggar; he was poor and Christians naturally have compassion for:

(1) the need of the poor It is the Christians who have started World Vision, Compassion International, Food for the Hungry, Samaritan's Purse, the TEAR Fund and a host of other organizations that rush to help the poor and suffering of the world. It is Christians who started the rescue missions and the homeless shelters and the soup kitchens in the inner cities. It is not the Muslims; it is not the Hindus; it is not the Buddhists; it is not the humanists. To them suffering is just an expected part of life. It is Allah's will, bad karma, the way of life or nature's way of weeding out the lesser fit specimens in the race. But we see poor, suffering people as jewels made in God's image and we are filled with compassion to help them. And we are also moved by:

(2) the need of the infirm The sick, the crippled, the handicapped, the victims of war. In the Middle Ages I'm told that the church in Europe was nearly wiped out by the black plague because the Christians were the only ones who would tend the sick at the risk of their own lives, and of course they caught the plague and many died. It is the Christians who have built the hospitals and sanitoriums and the clinics and the leprosy hospitals and started organizations like Rainbows of Hope for the children. It is normal for us to have compassion on the infirm! If we don't, if we push hurting and suffering people out of our minds, we grieve the very Spirit of God who lives in us. And look again at verse 6. What is:

b. our normal response to those in need?

(1) we share whatever we have been given by God Peter didn't have any money. His pockets were empty. But he had been given power and authority and a special gift by Jesus to heal the sick. And so he said, "What I have I give you...rise up and walk". Now leave the miracle aside for just a moment and isn't that what we do? We don't have infinite resources. Our pockets are sometimes empty. But we share whatever it is that God has given us and we trust Him to meet the person's need. We do whatever God has enabled us to do and we do it in the name of the Lord Jesus. We can't feed all the hungry children, but we can sponsor one. We can't comfort all the sick people but we can visit one or two. The point is that we freely make what we have available to God to meet the needs of others who are suffering. However, let me also point out another principle:

(2) we share in a way that meets the genuine need Peter could have gone and found money somewhere to give the man to keep him alive one more day. But the man needed to know Jesus and needed to walk so he could care for himself. Sometimes what needy suffering people ask you for is not what's best for them. You know the old saying, "Give a man a fish and you feed him for a day; teach a man to fish and you feed him for a lifetime." Sometimes a person is just so helpless that all they need is the immediate just to stay alive, but often we can give them something in the name of Jesus that will change their lives for the better forever, not just for today. Years ago, a man named Mike Baer developed a ministry called Joldosh where he took teams of Americans into Kyrgyzstan three times a year to help believers there learn how to start a small business for themselves. A lady named Usara and her husband were in that program and received a small loan and a lot of knowledge and proceeded to start a successful copy machine business that supported them and their church. You see what I'm talking about. Simple handouts are not always the answer; helping people in a way that will change their lives is the wise target of our compassion. Anyway, let's move on to talk about this:

2. a miracle of Divine healing (7-10) Now, remember this man had been lame from birth (verse 2). He had never walked a day in his life. But suddenly at Peter's command he is not only walking but leaping and praising God all the while. No wonder the people were amazed! What we have here is an example of:

a. the New Testament gift of healing Jesus said in Mk. 16:17-18 that one of the signs that would accompany believers was that they will place their hands on sick people and they will get well. Just as Jesus had the gift of healing people at will, by touch or by command, so it appears that that gift was given to the apostles and to others in the early church. Not many people seem to have been given it, nor does it seem to have continued to be a normal thing down through the years. There may be some believers that have it today and there are certainly some who are given it momentarily in some special circumstance. But I'd rather point out:

b. God's continual practice of healing in answer to prayer. Down through the centuries God's people have cried out for the sick and He has not always chosen to heal, but many, many times He has, in unexpected ways just as miraculous as this lame man walking. They have cried out for provision and He has sent miraculous answers. They have cried out for protection and His very angels have surrounded His people visibly. He does it today. He does it in my life and yours and through the prayers of this congregation. But here's the point:

c. God's primary purpose in healing, whether instantaneous or by slow recovery, is to glorify Jesus (13) That's why He does it! That's ultimately why He heals and provides and protects and does all the other awesome things He does, to glorify the name of His Son Jesus, that people might believe and be saved and become worshippers and followers of Him. You see, what the second half of this chapter teaches us is that:

II. God's Display Of Power Builds The Church (11-26) That's always His primary purpose. It's what He's about. So, now this man is leaping and praising and causing a ruckus and a whole crowd gathers together and they figure out that this man is healed and Peter seizes the opportunity to preach to them and I'll recap his sermon for you real briefly. First:

1. Peter gave an explanation: this power is from Jesus (11-16) "It's not me. I can't heal anybody. But I believe in Jesus, you know, the man that you recently took and crucified! But God raised Him from the dead and He's alive and I called on His power to do this. He did it; give Him the credit!" Then:

2. Peter gave an exhortation: repent and turn to Jesus (17-19) "Repent, change your minds about Jesus! Receive Him as your Savior and you'll find forgiveness of your sins. Plus, He is the Messiah, the One God plans to send to rule the world. He is coming back again. So turn to Him and be ready." And then:

3. Peter gave justification: He said the Scriptures point to Jesus (20-26) "Moses talked about a special prophet God would raise up: it's Jesus. All the prophets said things about this and they point to Jesus. Even when God told Abraham, "Through your seed all peoples on earth will be blessed", the word seed was singular and that was about Jesus! And here you are and Jesus is doing it!" That was his sermon and the result of that sermon was first that he got arrested (imagine that - we'll talk about it next week). but at the same time:

4. God gave multiplication: new believers are added to the church (4:4) The number of men grew to about 5,000. At least 1,000 to 2,000 were brought into the true church of Jesus Christ by faith through the healing of this crippled man.

That's why God heals! That's why God does miraculous awesome things on the earth. He is glorifying the name of His Son Jesus who said, "I will build my church." So many times, we just want God to fix everything in our lives so that we can be healthy and comfortable and have everything we want and have a life full of happiness. And most of us don't have it. Instead, we get grace to endure. And we learn and grow and find Him sufficient. But when we go forth to share the news of Jesus, God so often accompanies that with wonderful answers, mighty signs of His presence. And the more our hearts are set on His purpose and the farther afield we're willing to go and the more difficult the setting in which we're willing to proclaim Him, the more wonderful the things He is willing to do to show the power of His name. The Book of Acts is not just something that happened 2000 years ago. It is being lived out right now in many cultures throughout the world. All over the Muslim world God is giving people visions and dreams in which they see Jesus and people are coming to faith. Last weekend at a conference on Kyrgyzstan, we heard the testimony of a woman who we had prayed for in 1998 whose husband was going to divorce her because she hadn't been able to have a baby and when workers there showed her Jesus, they cried out together to Jesus for a baby and in two weeks she was pregnant. Today her husband is a believer and their miracle child Mirgul was climbing around on the platform and they have surrendered their lives to be missionaries to the Batken region where there is only one small church. God answered your prayers in a mighty way. Let me close with this story that was told by Galen Burkholder of Global Disciples to our Perspectives class: Some years ago in a little village in Nepal in the foothills of the Himalayas there was a poor farmer whose wife was very sick. She was also pregnant. Nothing helped. He took her to the village shaman who chanted and did all his rituals and she only got worse. He took her to the shaman in the next village who did all his rituals and she was not helped. He took her home to his hut with no hope that she would live. At that time one of the young men from his village caught a ride on a truck to another village far away to find work as a carrier for an expedition that was climbing Mt. Everest. In that village was a medical missionary who invited this young man into his clinic along with some others to be his guests. He told them some simple stories about Jesus and taught them a few simple Christian songs. But soon a lady in critical condition was brought in. The men asked the doctor, "Will Jesus heal this lady?" He wisely replied, "I don't know, why don't we ask Him?" So, he laid hands on the lady and prayed to Jesus and she was healed. The young man was tremendously impressed and the whole time he was carrying packs up and down the mountain he told himself those stories and repeated the songs over and over. He was thinking of the man in his village with the sick wife. When he got back, he went right to the man's hut. His wife was barely alive. He told the man everything he could remember about Jesus and how he saw Jesus heal the sick woman. The man asked, "Would Jesus heal my wife?" And the young man replied as he had learned, "I don't know, why don't we ask Him?" So, the two laid their hands on the wife and prayed to Jesus to heal her. And He did. In a few days she was well. The two of them rejoiced in Jesus and sang their simple songs. And the man was so full of joy that he began going around his village - guess why- looking for sick people. And he would tell them all he knew about Jesus and they would ask whether Jesus would heal them and he would say "Let's ask Him" and people would be healed. Soon there was a church meeting in that village and the man began to devote less time to his farming and more time to telling about Jesus. He went to the next village and the next. By the time a white missionary arrived in the area there were churches meeting in 7 villages! But that's not all. The healed woman delivered a healthy baby, a son. Unlike his parents he now had the opportunity to learn to read and write. The worker who came gave the man a New Testament which the son would read to him. In fact, the son would then travel with his father from village to village to hold the Bible and read it and the father would preach about Jesus. The boy became the first one from this region to receive an education. He went on to graduate from a Bible school and went home to his people. Today in that region there are more than 100 little village churches and this boy is a leader among them and is now beginning discipleship and leadership training programs for his people. God will do anything to glorify the name of His Son Jesus and build His church. The day of miracles has not passed. And we'll see more of them if our hearts are focused on His purpose.

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts

The Power Of God - Chs. 4-5

It's easy for us living here in America to fall into thinking that growing the church is simply a building project to planned, but Acts 4-5 serve as a powerful reminder that building the church is a cosmic battle. We have a great and powerful enemy, the enemy of God and the enemy of our souls, Satan himself. The scripture says, We know that we are children of God, and that the whole world is under the control of the evil one. - 1 John 5:19. As we build the church, we are taking back his turf and he doesn't like it. In His great purpose statement in Mt. 16:18, Jesus declared: I WILL BUILD MY CHURCH! And the gates of hell shall not prevail against it; that is, they won't prove strong enough to stop it! That's not a slogan for a building campaign; it's a battle cry! We are fighting a battle for the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ on many fronts, in Glenside, in Philadelphia and to the ends of the earth. And the Enemy fights back. He lashes out at us. In fact, the more impact we make on the lives of people for the Gospel, the more intense the reaction becomes. And we rapidly become aware, as that early church in Jerusalem did, that we cannot fight this battle in our own strength. We rely upon the power of God and that's exactly what we see in these two chapters. First, we see:

I. The Power Of God In Emboldening His Church (4:1-31) The lame man had been healed that day and a huge crowd had gathered. Peter had preached a second powerful sermon and just as he gets through the invitation we have:

1. the sudden arrest of Peter and John (1-4) The Sadducees, who didn't like that Peter was preaching the resurrection, and the soldiers of the Temple Guard pushed their way through the crowd and arrested them. They dragged them away and put them in jail overnight, intending to bring them before the entire Sanhedrin, the Council of 70, in the morning for trial because of the disruption they had caused. The next day when they had gathered, they brought them out and asked a loaded question in verse 7. How did you heal this guy?! And so, we have:

2. the bold testimony of Peter and John (5-12) Wow! What an answer! They were standing before Annas and Caiaphas and all those others before whom Jesus had stood, the very ones who had condemned him to death! And see how bold they are! "You killed Him but He's alive! And it is by His Name, the name of JESUS, and His power that this 40 year old man who's been lame from birth is healed!!" Where did they get that answer, that boldness to tell the truth at the risk of their own lives? Look at verse 8! From the control of the Holy Spirit and by His power! Remember what Jesus had promised? But when they arrest you, do not worry about what to say or how to say it. At that time you will be given what to say, for it will not be you speaking, but the Spirit of your Father speaking through you. - Mat. 10:19-20. This is the first fulfillment of that promise, but it's good for us too. I doubt whether any of us have ever been arrested or spent a night in jail for anything, much less for our faith. Yet there are times when we do stand before people in critical situations, people whom we know don't agree with us or like what we believe. They aren't the Sanhedrin; they may be relatives or coworkers or kids at school but that same fear comes over us. Fear of embarrassment or fear of alienating them or fear of being rejected, maybe of losing our job. But we also have resident within us the power to speak in spite of fear in the person of the Holy Spirit. And if we will in that moment call out to Him and yield to His control, we'll be given exactly the right words that He wants us to say. Look at:

3. the impact of their bold testimony (13-22) Read 13-14. They were amazed at these agrammatotai kai idiotai, ungrammared idiots, unschooled ordinary men, who knew so much because they had been with Jesus and had done an actual miracle. How can you argue with a miracle that everyone has seen? It impacted even their enemies. So, they huddled together and decided to let them go, but to warn them sternly not to preach any more in Jesus' Name. To which they replied in verse 19. More boldness and so they went back to where the church was gathered together and told their story. And the church fell on its knees and began to pray. And I want us to look at:

4. the prayer of the church in the face of opposition (23-31) It's amazing. First of all:

a. they recognized God's sovereignty (23-28) God's in charge. Not the Sanhedrin. Not the Devil. Even all the forces that were gathered against Jesus only did what God had determined they were supposed to do ahead of time. Often, as soon as we hit trouble, as soon as we see opposition, we begin to think the Devil's in charge and God's on the run. But it's not so. He's ALWAYS IN CONTROL! The forces that oppose us in life, whatever they are, are ultimately under the control of God. They can't do one thing to us that God doesn't choose to allow. Read the first chapter of Job. God says, "This far and no farther, period!" You are not being tossed about in a world out of control, even when it seems like it. Twila Paris wrote: God is in control, We believe that His children Will not be forsaken. God is in control, We will choose to remember And never be shaken. There is no power Above or beside Him. We know, oh God is in control. That was their confidence and it should be ours as well and then look at this:

b. they prayed for boldness, not deliverance (29-30) We pray to get out of trouble, don't we? They prayed for boldness. Who were they thinking about? God. His Name. His Glory. His reputation. That was all they cared about. We so often think about us. We're scared; we want out of trouble. But persecution is a normal part of the Christian life; we're told to expect it. Paul warned us in 2 Tim. 3:12, In fact, everyone who wants to live a godly life in Christ Jesus will be persecuted. We signed up for that when we got saved! But when we know that God is in control of it all, we can do like they did; we can pray for God to make us bold in Jesus' name. We can pray for Him to show his power in mighty ways in people's lives. We can pray for Jesus to be glorified and quit worrying about ourselves. And look at what God did:

c. God granted their desire (31) The place was shaken. And they got the boldness they asked for and went out and shook the city some more! That's one prayer you can count on God answering, "Lord, give me boldness through your Spirit to share the good news of you with others!" He'll give that boldness and also the opportunity to use it!

Now the second thing we see in these chapters is:

II. The Power Of God In Purifying His Church (4:32-5:16) The writer now goes on to describe:

1. the sacrificial lifestyle of the believers (4:32-35) Their attitude toward material things changed. They saw that everything they owned belonged to God and they started to be obedient with it. They quit living for themselves and dug deep into their pocketbooks to help one another. They sold things, houses and lands and gave the money to help the poor. They sacrificed and gave away large amounts. You have recorded here:

2. the godly example of Barnabas (4:36-37) who was from Cyprus and evidently owned a field. He sold it and gave the money to the apostles so they could divide it among the widows and the poor who didn't have enough to eat. And he was not the only one doing this kind of thing; many others were too. And it is in contrast to that that we read about:

3. the hypocritical act of Ananias and Sapphira (5:1-4) What did they do? They sold a piece of property too. But they kept a part of the price of it for themselves. Was anything wrong with that? No. It was theirs. In fact, it was a truly generous act. So, what was wrong? They lied. They told Peter they had only sold it for what they gave away. Why? So they would look as generous as everyone else. Were they worried about the poor? No, they were worried about themselves, about their reputation. They wanted everyone to think more of them than they actually were, so they lied. The early church wasn't perfect. It was reluctant; it was sometimes full of argument and division and at least once it had hypocrites in it, just like people say it does today! But if this kind of deception and dishonesty had continued right from the beginning, there is no telling what kind of corruption the church could have fallen into. So, rather unexpectedly we read of:

4. the powerful intervention of God (5:10) What did He do? He struck them dead, one at a time! Why? Because they had thought they could lie to the very Holy Spirit who lived inside them! They thought they could have the Holy Spirit in them wherever they went and lie and get away with it. Were they believers? Yes, I think they were. I think they were believers like the ones over in Corinth who were dishonoring the Lord's supper and God struck them with weakness and sickness and, Paul says, many died. I think they were believers that committed the "sin unto death" that John talks about in his first letter and God had to take them home early as a disciplinary measure to guard His Name because they were dragging it through the dirt! Would God do that today? I don't know that He hasn't! How many Christians have paid heavy, heavy prices for knowingly disobeying the Spirit of God? I wouldn't doubt some have gone home early. But look at:

5. the tremendous impact on the church and the community (11-16) A tremendous awe and respect seized both the church and the community. The believers said, "Man, we aren't going to play games with God. We're not going to live with one foot in the world and one in the church. Jesus, take it all; I'm yours all the way!" And the community looking on said, "Man, I'm not going to become one of them unless I really mean it. I'm never going to go and mingle and pretend I'm one of them unless I really am, lock stock and barrel!" And yet they did. Hundreds more came and believed anyway. But no pretenders came. They didn't come thinking they could keep their sin, that they could hold on to their mistress and keep cheating their customers and live pretty much any way they wanted, if they would just raise their hand and say, "I believe in Jesus". They came knowing it is a dreadful thing to fall into the hands of the Living God but that's whose hands they wanted to be in anyway. God's power was keeping His church pure. And this passage ought to give some real second thoughts to believers today who are choosing to sin and know it! Hypocrisy is not something God tolerates very long. It always comes out. And the price can be heavy. He is still jealous for the purity of His body! Then the third thing we see in these chapters is:

III. The Power Of God In Protecting His Church (5:17-41) As the ministry continued and the church grew and miracles multiplied and crowds continued to come, the anger and jealousy of the Jewish leaders grew until they decided to arrange:

1. the deliberate arrest of the Twelve (17-18) They rounded up all of the apostles and arrested them, figuring that if they could remove and silence the leaders that the movement would disperse. So, they put them in jail overnight again. But what they didn't figure on was:

2. the miraculous release of the Twelve (19-25) Whew! God opened the jail and when they went to look for them the next day, not only were they not in the jail, even though the doors were locked and the guards in place, but somebody ran in and said, "Hey those men you arrested are over in the Temple teaching again!" God stepped in to protect His church! He demonstrated His mighty power and it really set them back. In January a small home group of 19 was meeting in a village in the south of Kyrgyzstan. Their leader was a young man named Shafkat who had come there to start a church. But the local religious leaders didn't like it and at the end of Ramadan, the Muslim month of fasting, they managed to stir up about 1,000 people. They literally dragged out Shafkat and three others and were about to actually kill them when at that moment the police arrived and intervened, saved their lives and placed a guard around their house. That was God, because over there the police are often worse criminals than the criminals! It was a miracle. Sometimes God intervenes very directly like that; sometimes it comes in other ways as we'll see in a moment. Next, we have:

3. the re-arrest and trial of the Twelve (26-33) The leaders went to the Temple and arrested them again, but this time quietly and peaceably and brought them to the Sanhedrin. They said, "We told you not to teach in Jesus' Name any more but you keep doing it!" Look at their answer in verses 29-32. Boy, did that rile them up. They were furious and wanted to kill them on the spot. But again we see:

4. God's intervention and re-release of the Twelve (34-40) This time it was through a wise old leader, Gamaliel, Paul's old teacher, who had been thinking deeply about it. Look what God moved him to say in verses 38-39. "Let's be careful here. We might be fighting against God!" Sometimes God will protect us through making a friend out of an enemy! Sometimes He'll move someone we would never expect to come to our aid. Anyway, that speech persuaded them and they decided to release the apostles. But before they did, they had them flogged (verse 40). Don't read that lightly; that's what they did to Jesus before they crucified Him. They had them publicly whipped with a cat-o-nine-tails until their backs bled and then they ordered them to not teach in Jesus' Name any more. That would have been it for many. That said, "Next time we'll kill you". It's only one step to a cross. But look at:

5. the attitude of the church in the face of opposition (41-42) Hallelujah! They left bleeding but rejoicing that they had been counted worthy of suffering disgrace for His Name and they never stopped! What does that mean? Did they enjoy the flogging? No. Were they masochists that enjoyed pain? No. Did they want to get flogged again? NO. What were they thinking? If being a Christian is a crime, then convict me; I'm glad of it! If being a follower of Jesus is a shame and a disgrace and a terrible thing, then I'm guilty and I'm glad the world can see it and convict me of it. Peter said, If you suffer, it should not be as a murderer or thief or any other kind of criminal, or even as a meddler. However, if you suffer as a Christian, do not be ashamed, but praise God that you bear that name. - 1 Pet. 4:15-16.

As believers we need to accept that we are in a battle, that the Evil One will try to discourage us and get us to quit any way he can. He wants us to sit back and focus on ourselves and enjoy life and let the rest of the world be lost. Ted De-moss writes: "In the course of my job selling insurance, I walked into an apartment building one day to call on a man whose name had been sent to my office in response to a direct mail program. I went to the door of his third-floor apartment and knocked. The man spoke through the door without opening it, 'Who's out there?' I had learned in selling insurance that you never say, 'The insurance man,' because people might not open the door. So, I just cheerfully replied, 'I'm Ted DeMoss...' The man inside bristled defensively, 'If I open this door, I'll throw you down those stairs. Now get away from my door!' Since I sincerely thought he had inquired about insurance, I persisted. 'Mister, I'm not going to hurt you. Please open the door. I've got to talk to you.' I fully intended to talk with the man about insurance, but when he opened the door, I realized there was no point in that. Before me stood a man with a white beard who looked like a thin Santa Claus. I hadn't been in the business long, but I knew he was too old to buy any insurance I might sell him. Looking directly at me, he demanded, 'I opened the door. Now, what do you want to talk about?' 'I want to come in and talk to you.' 'What do you want to talk about?' he snapped. I persisted. 'May I come in?' As I spoke, the Spirit of God impressed me to talk with this man, a complete stranger, about Jesus Christ. At age 25, I had never done that before. Finally, he stepped aside and said, 'Come in, then.' I entered, and we both sat down on the couch in the living room. Looking straight at me, the elderly man asked curiously, 'What do you want to talk about?' I paused for a moment, then said the only thing that came to mind. 'I want to read the Bible to you.' He consented. 'I don't have a Bible,' I said weakly. 'Do you have one?' He looked puzzled for a moment. 'I don't know whether I have a Bible or not. I've been blind for many years.' I asked if I could look around the apartment for one, and he agreed. After a brief search, I found a Bible covered with dust on top of a stack of books. Walking back to the couch, I opened the Bible to the third chapter of John and began to read slowly. The further I read, the more scared I felt. My Christian friends had never told me what to do next. So, I read slower and more deliberately until I got to verse 18: 'He that believeth in Him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.' I finished that verse, praying silently for the Lord to give me wisdom as to what I should do. I looked over at the old man, and what I saw shocked me-- his beard was wet with tears! God had indeed spoken to this man through His Word. 'Sir, would you like to invite Jesus Christ into your life right now, right here?' I asked softly. The man nodded thoughtfully, 'Well, I would like to do it right now, but not here.' 'Where do you want to do it?' 'I want to do it with my mother.' Mentally, I was scratching my head. The man had told me he was 81, and I thought, 'What do I say now?' I decided to ask, 'Where is your mother?' 'In the kitchen,' he pointed. Thinking he had a picture of her hanging in the kitchen, I supposed he wanted to go there for sentimental reasons. We made our way back to the kitchen, and to my surprise, there was his mother sitting in a canvas-backed chair. She was 98 years old and an invalid. I can still hear the old man's words as if he were speaking them today, 'Mother, God has sent a man to our home.' I had gone on this call thinking the insurance company had sent me, but I quickly realized that what he was saying was true. 'He's been reading the Bible to me, and I'm going to accept Jesus Christ.' I have never heard anyone scream like she did in my life! When she regained control of her emotions, the aged woman said an amazing thing: 'Mister, I don't know who you are, but I have prayed for my boy every day for over 80 years.' Her son and I got on our knees, and I had the joy of praying with him and seeing him come to Christ. [Paperclip, Oct 1992. Page 8.] We can give up and quit and live in fear. Or we can choose to trust God to embolden us and then, if and when the backlash comes, we can trust God to protect us. Not that we won't suffer at all, but that the process of our suffering will be used by Him to build the church, to bring others into the joy of salvation.

The First Martyr - Chs. 6-7

Last week we saw how our Enemy fights back as the church advances. We saw the first persecution of the church. But there is another way that Satan will attack the church. If he cannot frighten or discourage its people or take away its leaders, he has another strategy. He goes to work from the inside to divide it! It's an age-old strategy: a house divided against itself cannot stand. And it's in this context that we see arise:

I. The First Officers In The Church (6:1-7) Let's look at:

1. the problem that developed (1) The church was growing at this point almost beyond count, definitely more than 5,000 and perhaps up to 10,000. Imagine the problems that arose in caring for the needs of so many! One was this: among their number were quite a few who were widows, women who had lost their husbands, women who were probably older and had very little, if any, income and no relatives to care for them. There was no social security system and the church felt a responsibility to care for and feed its own so they developed some means where every single day these widows were being helped with food or money. It was the “meals on wheels” of its time and a tremendous example of ministry for us! However, even though the believers there were one in heart and mind, they came from two different backgrounds. Some were natives of the land of Israel whose primary language was Aramaic, while 2:5 tells us that there were many Jews who had been raised in other lands who had moved to Jerusalem to live and many of the first converts came from this group. So, of course, their primary language was Greek. Now, there already is the potential for division; you know that it's hard to relate to a person who doesn't speak your language well. But the Greek-speakers began to notice something: the widows who spoke Greek were being overlooked or forgotten in this daily distribution. Why, we don't know. Maybe it was just the size of the task; there's a good chance that those in charge of the program were Hebrew-speakers and didn't know all the Greek widows. Maybe there was a bit of cultural prejudice lingering in their hearts that God needed to deal with. In any event, the Greek-speaking brothers began to murmur, to mutter under their breath, to secretly complain about their Hebraic brothers. Bad feelings began to divide them and eventually these were expressed and when the Apostles saw it, they knew they had to do something. So here is:

2. the proposal that was made (2-4) Look at this wonderful recognition of the diversity of gifts! Some are given the gifts and the calling of teaching and preaching, of studying the Word of God and interceding in prayer. And that should be their primary focus. Those who are called to that kind of leadership, those we might call pastors or elders or teachers today, should not feel that they have to do everything themselves. They should concentrate on that most important thing. It is not that “serving tables” is unspiritual or unimportant. Widows' lives depended on it. But there are people whose primary gifts are serving and helps and organization; so, we should identify those people and turn the responsibility for that kind of ministry over to them and let them go to it! For example, one of our men who would never preach a sermon came over to our house to close a two foot hole in our living room wall where we took an old air conditioner out. What would have taken me a half day he had done in about an hour and we were sitting drinking iced tea! He has a gift of carpentry. One of our ladies has a gift of working with kids; where it would drive me nuts. Some of our musicians can lift our hearts to the throne in a moment through their musical gifts. A whole team of our ladies so wonderfully organize and provide luncheons when there's a funeral or make church dinners happen; you don't even want to know about my cooking! And we have a whole team of people whose gift is to go each month and visit our elderly and shut-in folks and love and encourage them. It would be crazy to think that I have to be them or they have to be me; rather, the body needs us ALL to exercise our gifts. So, the plan was to choose seven men to be in charge of meeting this need, men who were known to be spiritual, known to be in love with Jesus and filled with the Holy Spirit, but who also had the gift of wisdom to handle this need.

3. the people that were chosen are listed in verses (5-6) Stephen, Philip and five other men who all seem to have Greek names were chosen, probably all Greek-speakers! They felt these guys would not only be sensitive to the needs of the Greek-speaking folks, but would also not be prone to neglect the Hebraic folks! So, they prayed over them and committed them to this work and look at:

4. the effect that it had (7) The church grew better and faster when everyone focused on their own ministry and the division was gone, and even numbers of their former enemies, the priests, saw God at work and came to Christ! There's a principle in there somewhere. Paul said, From him the whole body... grows and builds itself up in love, as each part does its work. - Eph. 4:16. When each one of us does what God has gifted and called us to do, He grows the body!

Now two of these men developed their gifts and their ministries way beyond where they started. Philip later became a powerful evangelist and was the first to take the Gospel to Samaria in chapter 8. Stephen had much the same gift and was using it right there in Jerusalem. And it was he, not one of the apostles, who soon became:

II. The First Martyr In The Church (6:8-7:60) On Memorial Day we honor those who have given their lives in the service of our country, to protect our freedom. Stephen is the first of that long line of the faithful we also need to honor who have given their very lives because of their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Martyrs, witnesses faithful unto death. Their blood, it has been said, is the seed of the church because it is often the very death of His servants that Christ uses to build His church all the more. It began with:

1. Stephen's arrest (6:8-15) Stephen began to pioneer the approach that would later be used by the Apostle Paul throughout his journeys. He went into the synagogues, particularly those of Greek-speaking Jews like himself, and shared during the teaching time that Jesus was the Christ. The members of one synagogue (or several, depending on how you read the text) got really upset with him. In fact, Saul or Paul was from Cilicia; it's likely he attended this very synagogue and was among those who heard Stephen. A few verses later we find him among those who stone him so he was no doubt there with the others who got upset. Why?

a. the true reason: they could not refute God speaking thru him (8-10) The Spirit of God gave him such wisdom and understanding of the Old Testament that nobody could out-argue him, nobody could refute what he was saying about Jesus. So, in their frustration and anger, at last they seized him and dragged him in front of the Sanhedrin, and because they didn't have anything to really accuse him of, they lodged a:

b. the false accusation: They persuaded some men to distort his words and level two false charges. They said: He speaks against the Law and Temple (11-15). Now there is nothing more sacred to the heart of a devout Jew than the Law of Moses and the Temple in Jerusalem. Speaking against those things is blasphemy, a slander against God Himself! It is a crime worthy of death! And so, when the high priest (who was still Caiaphas!) asked him whether those charges were true, he gave a lengthy explanation. We have:

2. Stephen's sermon recorded for us in (7:1-53) Though there is a lot of valuable information in it, particularly if you're a student of the Old Testament, I'm simply going to summarize it for you, like I did with Peter's two sermons in the earlier chapters. Again, like any proper sermon, he has three points! First:

a. He affirms the law (1-43) To us this message sounds strange; it seems like he's going back and recounting the whole story of the Old Testament from Abraham on. Our western minds think, "Why would he do that? They already know it!" But it's an affirmation. He's telling them he believes it, that he believes what the Old Testament Scriptures say. First:

(1) he affirms the patriarchs (2-16) He declares that the God of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph is his God too; he's not promoting some foreign god, but rather "the God of our fathers" who appeared to them. Then:

(2) he affirms Moses and the law given through him (17-38) He tells the story of Moses' whole life in detail, from floating in the basket in the Nile to leading Israel through the Red Sea on the way out of Egypt. He's saying, "I believe it all; I affirm it. I accept the Law given by God to Moses. Moses gave us living words, the very words of God!"

(3) but then he points out that the Israelites rejected both Moses and the Law (39-43) They began at Mt. Sinai by making a golden calf idol and they continued that idolatry right through the time they were taken captive to Babylon. The Israelites rejected the Law of God, not him! That was point 1. In point 2:

b. He affirms the Temple (44-50)

(1) he affirms the Tabernacle (44-45) He says that God gave the directions to Moses for its making. It lasted all through the conquest and the judges until the time of David. But David wanted to build a permanent Temple and:

(2) he affirms the Temple (46-47) David enjoyed God's favor and he wanted to build it, but finally his son Solomon built it. It was from God.

(3) but, he points out, even God says the Temple is only symbolic (48-50) Even Solomon admitted that no temple made with hands could contain Him. If you read Is. 66:1-2, God Himself says it! The Temple was never meant to house God or contain God, but to be a place where His Name was remembered. Then he moves to point 3:

c. He accuses the leaders (51-53) He turns the tables and charges the Sanhedrin as the leaders of the Jewish nation. He says: You disobeyed the Law, killed the prophets, murdered the Christ and are now resisting the Holy Spirit! What an indictment! It made them absolutely furious. They ground their teeth and seethed in anger! And that's what led to:

3. Stephen's martyrdom (54-60) Now remember this is the third time that Christian leaders have stood before the same Sanhedrin in a short period of time. In chapter 3, Peter and John stood there and defied them openly and they were dismissed with a warning. In chapter 4, all 12 of the apostles stood before them and defied them and they were dismissed with a flogging. Now here stands Stephen the third time and he defied them even more boldly than the others. You know the saying, "Three strikes and you're out." There was only one place left to go for them. Death was the only avenue of punishment remaining. And what really pushed them to it was:

a. his vision before dying (55-56) He looked up and God lifted the veil between heaven and earth. He saw a vision of Jesus in all his glory. And he pointed to the sky and said, "Look, I see Him. There's Jesus. There He is in all His glory. He's in heaven and He's standing at the right hand of God!" Therefore, HE IS GOD! God has many times seen fit to do this for dying saints. He will often lift the veil and let them see the other side just before they cross over. He'll let them see Jesus and the angels waiting, hear the music, see the lights of glory so that they slip into His presence with joy and not fear. He doesn't always do it, but He doesn't have to. He did it for Stephen and we can see it through His vision. That's what sustains us in the face of death. Jesus is there in the glory waiting for us, waiting to receive us. He promised us, I'm going to prepare a place for you and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself that you may be where I am! That's death for the believer. We go where Jesus is! We need not fear those that kill the body because to die is to depart and be with Jesus which is better by far. Are you ready to die? Do you know you belong to Him and that He's waiting for you? If I saw that vision, that would be enough for me, but it was too much for those Jewish leaders. It was the worst blasphemy they ever heard. They put their hands over their ears so they wouldn't hear any more and they grabbed Stephen and dragged him out of the city and began to pelt him furiously with stones. And look at:

b. his attitude in dying (57-60) It is like a mirror image of the Lord Jesus:

(1) he had absolute confidence "Father into thy hands I commit my spirit"; "Lord Jesus receive my spirit". That's how we go out of this world, absolutely confident, expecting Jesus to be there in that instant, that our spirit will be with Him! We have a confidence with which to face death that the world never can have. Listen, you may not be stoned by a mob, but this is where the rubber meets the road. For some of us it won't be too long until we cross that river and even the youngest of us will get there in a few years. We'll stand at the brink of death and we'd better be sure whose hands we're putting our spirit into! But if we know Jesus, we can close our eyes with confidence knowing we'll slip safely into His arms! And look what else:

(2) he expressed complete forgiveness "Father, forgive them." "Lord, don't let the sin of killing me be on their hands because I forgive them". What a way to die. Pagans don't die like that. Atheists and humanists don't die like that. They would die under a hail of stones kicking and screaming and cursing and hating. Stephen displayed the supernatural love of Jesus and made intercession for the very ones who were killing him. And he fell asleep; he slipped into His presence. That's not natural; that's Jesus.

We might be tempted to think, "What a sad thing! What a tragedy! What a waste of the life of such a godly man!" But do you know what the ultimate effect of his death was? 8:1 says there was a young man standing there, glad to watch him die, and his name was Saul. Saul was fired up by this event to become a fierce persecutor of the church. He hauled many Christians off to prison and to their deaths. Until one day he saw the very thing Stephen had seen. He saw the glory of Jesus in heaven and it knocked him to his knees and he became a believer. Jesus told him, "I've been poking and goading you and it's been hard for you to kick against it, to resist it!" What was pricking his conscience? Years later he testified that he told the Lord, probably with tears, And when the blood of your martyr Stephen was shed, I stood there giving my approval and guarding the clothes of those who were killing him. - Acts 22:20. Stephen's death stuck with him all his life. He couldn't get away from it. It prepared him to meet Jesus and, in that sense, it gave the church the greatest missionary it ever knew, the apostle Paul. The ultimate effect of his dying agony was that the church was spread to the very ends of the Roman Empire. His blood was, in a very real way, the seed of the church. *George Otis tells the true story of one incredible night in 1983. In a small Muslim village in the North African country of Algeria, God came and through a series of visions, dreams, and angelic visitations, brought each and every household face to face with the reality of His Son, resulting in 450 conversions. There were no missionaries working in this village. There was no reason, from the human perspective, for the miracle to happen in this place at this time. Later it was discovered that a Spanish missionary named Raymond Lull had visited this spot. Lull was known as the first missionary to Muslims. Where the village now stands was the place he had been stoned to death for preaching the gospel--600 years ago! Lull had written that Islamic strongholds would not be conquered by force, but only "by love and prayers, and the pouring out of tears and blood." We can imagine that as he was dying a martyr's death, he was praying for the Muslim people. God answered Lull's prayer six centuries later. [SBC Life, Jan 1997. Page 3.] God doesn't waste anything, especially not the deaths of His saints which are precious in His sight. Are you willing for Him to use yours? Are you ready to say like Paul did, I eagerly expect and hope that I will in no way be ashamed, but will have sufficient courage so that now as always Christ will be exalted in my body, whether by life or by death? For to me, to live is Christ and to die is gain. - Phil. 1:20-21?*

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts

The Gospel Goes To Samaria - Ch. 8

The martyrdom of Stephen proved to be a very important turning point in the history of the church. To this moment the church had enjoyed a relative amount of freedom. Its leaders had been harassed twice but the believers themselves had continued to meet freely and openly and their numbers had grown astronomically. However, after Stephen's dramatic confrontation with them that day, the Sanhedrin could stand it no longer. The rulers could no longer wait and hope that this sect of the Christ-followers would die out. They had to squash it and right now, before it did any further damage. And so, as we move into chapter 8, we read how for the first time:

I. The Church Is Persecuted In Jerusalem (1-4) The Jewish leaders were not accustomed to this. They were older men. They dealt with questions of the law and the Temple, not campaigns of violence and arrest. But among them was a young man named Saul and he was absolutely furious at what Stephen had said. He quickly emerged as the leader of this unpleasant task and he undertook it with a Nazi-style vengeance. He set about destroying the church one household at a time. He would ferret them out house by house, arrest them and drag them off to trial and to prison. Now let me point out two things about this persecution. First notice:

1. its intensity and the suffering of the believers (1-3) It is so easy to read those words, but they are so far from our experience that they mean little. Suppose Christianity was suddenly declared illegal. And when you go home today the police show up at your house. They say, "You were seen in a Christian church today; you're under arrest." And they drag you out and throw you in the car, and take you off to jail. Your family is dragged off separately. You don't know what happened to them. Your house and possessions are left standing for looters. You don't know whether you'll be stoned to death like Stephen was or not. You'd be terrified; your life destroyed. I hope it never happens here, but let's not minimize the suffering they endured because it is happening every day to believers just like us in China, in Sudan, in parts of Indonesia and scores of other places. In 1997 Turkmenistan passed a law requiring all religious organizations to register but banning any from registering who have less than 500 members. Thus, every Christian church in the country was suddenly illegal; almost all were closed or confiscated. All foreign workers were deported and pastor after pastor was arrested, tortured and imprisoned. The church, even today, is no stranger to persecution. And word about such things spreads quickly. Once they get one or two of us, the rest of us will contact each other as fast as we can. What will we do? I know what I'd do! My family would be in the car with whatever they could grab and be out of town as quick as I could get them there, looking for a place in the country to hide! That's what they did. The believers fled wholesale from Jerusalem into the countryside of Judea. Some went further north to Samaria. Where once they would gather in meetings of thousands at the Temple, now they are scattered throughout dozens of towns and villages trying desperately to reassemble their lives, find places to live, get jobs and hoping the authorities don't come after them there. The suffering was intense. But look at:

2. its effect and the purpose of God (4) It had just the opposite effect of what was intended. Instead of renouncing their faith, these believers took their faith with them and they shared it! Little house churches sprang up all over the place! And instead of the believers being all in Jerusalem, now where were they? Scattered throughout all Judea and Samaria, two provinces! The root of the word scattered is the verb to sow seed. In their scattering, God was planting the seeds of His church! And do you remember what Jesus had predicted in 1:8? Where would they be witnesses? You see, they didn't go on their own. It was exciting there in Jerusalem. A lot was happening. The meetings were thronged. They had the Apostles teaching them. They forgot all about Jesus' last command to go into all the world. So, God sent them out the hard way! That seems to be a pattern for the church throughout history. We become satisfied, in-grown, focused on where we are and what we're doing. So, we forget God's command, the mission God has given us to build His church among those beyond our reach. And God has to break into our lives with powerful reminders, often with suffering, to thrust us out into the harvest He has planned! It is true repeatedly in the history of the church. It has been true in our own century many times that the suffering of the body becomes the seed of a great harvest; just look at China. And it is often true in the life of a local church; God often has to do something as a wake-up call to get us to look outward beyond our walls to the fields that are white for His harvest. It's a whole lot easier to just listen and obey, but one way or the other, He WILL build His church.

Now the biggest immediate result of this tragedy is that:

II. Philip Preaches The Gospel To The Samaritans (5-25) That is actually an amazing statement in itself when you think about:

1. the tremendous barrier that had to be overcome (5) In Jn. 4:9 The Samaritan woman said to [Jesus], "You are a Jew and I am a Samaritan woman. How can you ask me for a drink?" (For Jews do not associate with Samaritans) Why not? There were seven centuries of prejudice and bad blood between them. Samaria used to be the northern Kingdom of Israel, but the Assyrians conquered it and carried a lot of the population away and brought many of their own people to live there and intermarry. So, to the Jews, they were an impure mixed race of half-breeds. In Nehemiah's time the Samaritans fought the rebuilding of the Temple. In fact, they later built their own temple on Mt. Gerizim. They fought against the Jews during the Jewish war of independence in the first century BC and the leader of the Jewish forces in return destroyed their Temple and the city of Samaria. In Jesus' time they were living under a forced Roman peace, but there was no love lost between them. Samaritan villages refused to receive Jesus, and his disciples wanted to call down fire from heaven to destroy them! For believers of Jewish background to consider preaching to Samaritans, to even think that God might love Samaritans and want them to be saved, was almost beyond comprehension. It carries much the same connotation as saying to us that God loves Nazis and terrorists and we should all care about them. It was a huge cultural barrier. The people God wants to send us to are often on the other side of the tracks from us culturally! But maybe Philip, being a Greek-speaker and probably raised somewhere other than Jerusalem, didn't have as big a barrier or maybe he caught on to what God was doing. Anyway, he was given courage to tell the Samaritans about Jesus Christ and look at:

2. God's power displayed through Philip (6-8) Philip started out being in charge of food distribution in Jerusalem, but now God developed him into a true missionary evangelist. And God got confirmed his message to them in a very special way. He did miracles through the hands of Philip. Handicapped people were healed. Demons were cast out, all in the name of Jesus and that really got their attention. You'll see why that was so important when you read about:

3. the "conversion" of Simon the sorcerer (9-13) In this city in Samaria there was a leader named Simon. He was a sorcerer, an occult practitioner, who basically claimed to be the very agent of God. He called upon demonic powers and was able to do signs and wonders of his own. Some of them were pure deception. Others were empowered by Satan himself. And the whole region was so spiritually ignorant that they were amazed by his powers and thought they were from God. That is, until they met Philip and saw real miracles, miracles that could only be from the hand of God! When they saw that the true power of God in the Name of Jesus was so much greater than what they had been following, they believed in Jesus and openly declared their faith by being baptized. Dozens came, maybe hundreds. It touched the whole city and filled them with joy! Even Simon himself realized that the power he was facing was the true power of God and he followed along with the crowd. He gave assent, at least outwardly, to be a follower of Jesus and was baptized too! But it seems that here in Samaria God withheld something:

4. the giving of the Holy Spirit (14-17) Remember what a barrier there was with the Samaritans. When word filtered back to the apostles and the few believers who were left in Jerusalem of the revival in Samaria, they were surprised; they could hardly believe it. They sent Peter and John to check it out firsthand and see. What they discovered was that these Samaritans had believed and were committed to Jesus but they had not received the Holy Spirit; they hadn't been regenerated; He hadn't come to dwell inside them permanently. Now that was unusual. Ever since the day of Pentecost when the Holy Spirit first came, everyone in Jerusalem who believed INSTANTLY received the Spirit. But it didn't work for the Samaritans. God withheld it. So, Peter and John did the only thing they knew to do. They did what they had done back in Acts 1. They prayed for God to send the Holy Spirit. And then they began to put their hands on each one. And as they did, He came! No doubt there was some evidence of that; perhaps they spoke in another language as they did at Pentecost, or gave testimony that they sensed the difference. But He came. Now there are two important things we need to know:

a. this delayed coming of the Spirit is a transitional exception It's not God's normal method. It's not how He did it up to that moment and it's not how He's done it since. The Holy Spirit lives in you the moment you believe. It is something God chose to do once, at this very special time for a special purpose. Why? Because:

b. it broke down the barrier between Jewish and Samaritan believers God did a similar thing when the Holy Spirit fell on Cornelius and his household in 10:44-45. They were Romans, pure Gentiles. And the lesson Peter learned from that is the same one he learned here; compare 11:17. God gave His one Holy Spirit to the Samaritans and to the Gentiles who believed, the same as He did to the Jews. Without that, the old prejudices might have remained; the old wall of separation might have stayed in place. But by letting the Spirit come to Samaritans through their Jewish hands, God declared, "These people are MY people just like you are; there is no longer any difference. All of that prejudice must now be laid aside." Paul said, There is neither Jew nor Greek, slave nor free, male nor female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus. - Gal. 3:28. Even Samaritans! It was a hard lesson and it took years to fully learn as we'll see. Now, unfortunately in the next verses we see what we might call:

5. the "reversion" of Simon (18-24) You notice it says that Simon believed and he was baptized but it doesn't say that they laid hands on him and he received the Spirit. Rather he was awed by this new kind of power and tried to buy it for himself. But Peter told him he was basically lost and unsaved and full of sin. The Spirit didn't live in him! He was still looking to get power and have people be in awe of him. Peter warned him to repent. But he didn't; he turned away and became an enemy of the Gospel. His name is mentioned repeatedly by early Christian writers. He went on to become the leader of a false cult and declare himself to be the very incarnation of God. Some credit him with being the founder of the doctrine of the Gnostics that the New Testament speaks so strongly against. One tradition says he died when he predicted he would rise from the dead and had himself buried alive at Rome but couldn't quite pull it off. How sad! He is a stern reminder of Hebrews 6 about those who taste and who see and who know and come SO close, but fall away and it is impossible to renew them again to repentance because, to their loss, they have crucified the Son of God afresh. But look what happens after all this:

6. the apostles minister in Samaria (25) All the way home Peter and John now stop and preach in Samaritan villages. God's lesson worked, didn't it?! That's how the church was planted in the region of Samaria. But God wasn't done with Philip yet. In the rest of the chapter, we read about how:

III. Philip Preaches The Gospel To An Ethiopian (26-40) The way it happens is this:

1. God's arranges a Divine appointment (26-31) First:

a. He prepares the messenger (26-29) Philip has been up north in Samaria and God tells him to head south on the road that goes out to the coast down by the old site of Gaza. There he sees a man riding in a chariot. It turns out that this man is the royal treasurer of the queen of Ethiopia, but Philip probably doesn't know all that yet. The Spirit says, "Go walk next to that chariot." Now, Samaria is 40 miles north of Jerusalem and they meet at Gaza 50 miles southwest of Jerusalem. So who left first? God had Philip leave at least a whole day before the Ethiopian left. It was a Divine appointment. God MADE his path cross that of just the right person. Now at the same time:

b. He prepares the recipient This man has met Jewish people in Ethiopia. He's come to believe that the God of Israel is the true God. He has even come 700 miles in a horse-drawn chariot to go to the Temple to worship. Of course, he can't get in. First, he's a Gentile, so as close as he can get is the outer court where all the buying and selling of animals is going on and you can't even pray properly out there. Beyond that, he's a eunuch, a castrated male servant, and the Law of Moses says that folks like him aren't permitted in the congregation. But somehow, he was able to buy a copy of the scroll of the Prophet Isaiah (30-31). Now, what are the odds of meeting a man in a chariot in the desert who is longing to know God and is reading his Bible and asks you to help him understand it? This is a God-thing, a Divine appointment. Sometimes God works in mighty displays of power to reach blinded hearts who've been deceived into false religion. But often God saves people by preparing and sending you into appointments that He's arranged in your path with people that are seeking and ready to hear about Him! Especially if you take the initiative and ask Him to do it! So, up hops Philip and:

2. Philip explains the Scriptures (32-35) Of all things, God has this man reading Isaiah 53, which is such a vivid description of the sufferings of Christ and ask, "Who is this talking about!" And Philip could simply say, "Let me tell you about Jesus!" And no sooner does he blurt out the story of who Jesus is and what He did than:

3. the Ethiopian is converted (36-39) Read verse 37. It's probably in the margin of your Bible because this sentence is not in some of the early manuscript copies, but its contents are everywhere through Acts and the New Testament.

a. he believes with his heart He trusts that Jesus died for him, that Jesus is His Savior. And immediately:

b. he gives testimony through baptism He wants to tell the world, so they stop by this pool or creek and go down into the water and Philip baptizes him in front of all his retinue of servants as a follower of Christ, and then suddenly disappears. This miracle of disappearance confirms the man's new faith and fills him with joy on his way home. Irenaeus, one of the early church fathers, comments that he became the first missionary to the Ethiopians and I'm sure he did! He went home and told everybody about the name and the power of Jesus! And Philip? Well, he:

4. Philip ministers along the coast (40) He reappears at Azotus, about 20 miles north, and heads north, stopping in every coastal village to preach the Gospel until he comes to Caesarea, where he settles down to live. So, look what God has done. One church has now resulted in dozens of small worshipping groups throughout all Judea and Samaria and it has sent at least one person all the way to Ethiopia!

God is still in the business of making Divine appointments. He's still preparing people to receive the Gospel and He's preparing us to encounter them. The question is whether we'll have courage to be obedient and share. After being hit by a beer bottle thrown by a passing motorist, Nashville police officer Tim Sullivan began pursuit of the car--not knowing the situation was an answer to prayer. As he pulled the motorist over, Sullivan saw the driver was crying and upset. "He'd been married 18 years, and his wife had decided it was time to get a divorce," says Sullivan. A field sobriety test revealed the driver was sober, and Sullivan concluded the man hadn't seen the police car when he threw the bottle, so no citation was given. However, Sullivan, who had just prayed that week for a witnessing opportunity, saw a divine appointment. He shared the plan of salvation. "The man realized if he didn't do something with his life he was going nowhere," says Sullivan. "We talked about what Christ could do in his life. The motorist called my house a couple of days later and told my wife it was probably the most important time in his life, being stopped by me." [SBC Life, Nov 1995. Page 10.] If you'll pray and ask Him, God will give you opportunities to share your love of His Son. Most of them won't be this dramatic, but He has prepared people out there, hurting people, seeking people, many of them from the other side of the tracks, people you wouldn't expect to be receptive. And if you'll listen to the Spirit, He'll use you in their lives.

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts

The Conversion Of Saul - Ch. 9

In chapter 8 we saw how persecution began against the church in Jerusalem and drove the disciples out of the city, but God used it to bring the Gospel to the towns of Judea and Samaria. However, God's design is always bigger than our vision. His eyes were already set on the regions beyond. In the last verse of chapter 8 He had already sent Philip on an initial preaching tour in the villages up the entire coast of Palestine until he reached Caesarea. God had plans for a harvest for the Kingdom in that area very shortly as we'll see. But at the moment there is something even bigger in His sights, something beyond the 30 mile radius of Judea, beyond the 60 mile radius of Samaria, even beyond the 90 mile radius of Galilee. They are fixed 140 miles northeast on the Roman province of Syria with its capital city, Damascus. That's like us in Glenside targeting the city of Scranton or York! Some of the believers from Jerusalem had actually fled that far and were already living there. But even that was not far enough. God was already thinking in long range terms of “California”, of Greece and Rome and Spain beyond. And enroute to that purpose, God did what is probably the greatest miracle of the Book of Acts:

I. The Conversion Of Saul (1-31) Do you remember:

1. his intense persecution from chapter 8? Well, now it is even worse! (1-2) He wanted to kill them all, all those wicked Christians. He wanted to stamp out every last one in the world and managed somehow to get permission to extradite them from as far away as Damascus if he found them there! Well, you're familiar with the story of:

2. his dramatic confrontation (3-9) That light from heaven was more than a light; it was the glory of God bursting upon him. In 1 Cor. 7 he says plainly that Jesus himself appeared to him, but it was in heavenly light so bright that it blinded his eyes and drove him to his knees. And He says, “I am Jesus; this mad pursuit you're in, this vicious anger to follow and slay my followers: you're after ME!” What a revelation! The guy you thought was dead and his followers were all fakes and cultists is alive and he's God like he said! There is only one possible response: “Lord, what shall I do?”! And with that surrender, Saul the persecutor became a disciple of Jesus Christ. Now, what I really want to point out in this is:

3. God's glorious purpose (10-19a) For three days Paul doesn't even eat or drink anything because he's praying so hard, really praying for the first time in his life! But Ananias knows Saul's reputation. He knows the reign of terror he's been inflicting on believers in Jerusalem. He even knows why he's come to Damascus. It's hard for God to convince him that Saul is now one of us! And you know that we're much like Ananias, don't you?

a. we have trouble believing God could transform someone We put limits on God in our minds. We think, “Surely that person will never be saved.” Saddam Hussein? Never! Yassar Arafat? It couldn't be! I heard a WWII correspondent who was present telling the story live on the air of some high German officers who were tried for war crimes after the war and sentenced to be hanged. One of them whose name I can't even remember had the particular reputation of being a cruel butcher. He did not limit his reign of terror to the Jews, but on Sundays he loved to raid Christian churches with his Gestapo officers and hang every last person from a handy tree outside. Only he didn't use rope; he used piano wire to cut their throats as they hung, and he would laugh the whole time. A monster! This man, when the noose was put around his own neck, was asked if he had any last words. And he quietly said this, “Yes, I do. I put all my faith in the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ in whom I have come to believe in these last few weeks. I can only pray that He will have mercy on my wretched soul and forgive the horrible things that I have done.” And as our jaws drop, our unbelieving minds cry, “It can't be, he's a fake, it can't be real, it's only a deathbed conversion...” We cannot believe that God would save such a person! But he saved Paul and that lesson was not lost. Paul himself wrote it in 1 Tim. 1:13-16, Even though I was once a blasphemer and a persecutor and a violent man, I was shown mercy because I acted in ignorance and unbelief. The grace of our Lord was poured out on me abundantly, along with the faith and love that are in Christ Jesus. Here is a trustworthy saying that deserves full acceptance: Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners--of whom I am the worst. But for that very reason I was shown mercy so that in me, the worst of sinners, Christ Jesus might display his unlimited patience as an example for those who would believe on him and receive eternal life. In other words, if God could save me, then God can save anybody; I am living proof of His power to save! To save persecutors, war criminals or maybe that person in your life who you think is so resistant that you don't even pray for them anymore! That enemy, that boss, that neighbor, that relative, that parent, that husband, that child who is so far from the truth, who is so against what you believe, even that one, God can save! Will you pray for them in faith, believing it can be so? But there's another powerful lesson here:

b. God has sovereign purpose for those He saves (15) “This man is a particular tool I've selected for a particular purpose; I need someone to spearhead missionary outreach to the world and this guy is it!” Look with me at the full text of what Jesus told Saul there on the road in Acts 26:16-18. “I'm going to save the nations of the earth through you; that's your job!” That was the last thing old Jewish, “I'm a Hebrew of Hebrews”, Saul wanted to hear, but it didn't matter now. Jesus was Lord and if God wanted to save heathens through him, that was OK! And by the way, did you know that God has that very same purpose in saving you! How do I know? Because that is His purpose, period, that every people, tribe, tongue and nation might hear of His glory and worship Him! And you have a part in that purpose just like Paul did. You may not be an apostle (in Latin they translate that word as missionary). You might be an intercessor who prays for those who go. You might be a short-term team member or a giver to the work or one who welcomes internationals in your home or one who builds a missionary's house, but that's still God's purpose in saving you! He's going to build His church all the way to the ends of the earth! Anyway, now we come to Saul's:

4. his early ministry (19b-31) Luke leaves out some of the story of it, but here's a brief outline. First Paul:

a. he testified immediately in Damascus (19b-22) After only a few days of gleaning all he could from the believers there, he began to go publicly into the synagogues and declare his new faith. “Jesus IS the Son of God and I know because I saw Him!" What an impact that must have had! The Jews were confused and no doubt a little angry. He was a traitor to them now. Next:

b. he spent time alone in Arabia This is the part Luke omits, simply ...when many days had elapsed (23a). But Paul says in Gal. 1:17, ...nor did I go up to Jerusalem to see those who were apostles before I was, but I went immediately into Arabia and later returned to Damascus. In fact, it was three years, he says, before he went up to Jerusalem in verse 26. That three years was split between Arabia and Damascus. Arabia was a sparsely populated desert. He went there, not to preach, but no doubt to listen, to get away by himself and get to know Jesus, to re-study the Old Testament and adjust his understanding. Likely it was there in Arabia in that time alone that his theology was developed. Who knows but that the wonderful doctrines in Romans didn't come out of those days with God! At any rate:

c. he returned to Damascus and was forced to flee (23-25) When he got back, he had grown so much that he was very powerful in arguing against the Jews. And like Stephen, they couldn't refute what he was saying, so they simply decided to kill him. They hatched a plot, but he learned of it. Notice that now he has followers of his own, disciples, people he's led to Christ. The church has grown through Saul from those first few seeds which were planted in Damascus and God's purpose is accomplished. So now the disciples lower him at night on a rope through a window and down the city wall to make good his escape. And he went and:

d. he ministered in Jerusalem (26-29) Good old Barnabas, the encourager, the one who is easy to convince, who is open and willing to listen and willing to believe that God can do anything. He puts his reputation on the line and brings Paul into the fearful fellowship there, brethren who clearly remember the zeal with which he persecuted them! And they are reconciled. And now Saul begins to do the same thing he did in Damascus. He's a Jew and when he goes to the synagogue, he stands up and preaches that Jesus is the Son of God and not only that, he proves it from the Scriptures. Eventually, the anger of the Greek-speaking Jews is riled up like it was against Stephen and they make an attempt on his life. But the leaders don't want to risk another martyr so:

e. he is sent home through Caesarea to Tarsus (30) in Asia Minor. And for 7-10 years he stays there, quietly serving Christ on his own. We read nothing about it; we don't know what happened, but I'm sure the church is planted there by him. Is there a lesson in all this? Maybe it is this: you don't become the Apostle Paul overnight, do you? Moses spent his 40 years as a shepherd; David spent 10 years being hunted in the wilderness. God's most useful servants are molded and shaped over long periods of time and through varieties of experience that usually include suffering. There is no other way. Saul had periods of fellowship, of solitude, of shared ministry, of solo ministry, of success, of failure and even of opposition, and God used all of these over a long period of time to produce the kind of leader that Paul became. Don't expect Him to take a shortcut with you, or with your spouse or your kids or even your pastor either! But out of this great miracle of saving a persecutor:

5. God ends the first wave of persecution (31) Look where the church is planted now, in Judea, Samaria and Galilee. It had known a time of growth, then a time of persecution which thrust it out into these regions and now it enjoyed a time of peace where there was strengthening and encouragement and growth both in numbers and in maturity. God has seasons for His church, that He uses to mature it and to build it. Those early days in Jerusalem were not the norm; we tend to think that the church should always be in great expansion and filled with exciting miracles, but the truth is that there are seasons in the work of God, just as there are seasons in the year and they're all needed to grow the church. Well, now Luke has run ahead in the story a little bit, so he backs up to look at what was happening, while all this was happening to Saul, in:

II. The Continuing Ministry Of Peter (32-43) Peter had developed sort of an itinerant ministry at this point, going out to the towns and villages and visiting the scattered believers and the little churches they'd raised up and teaching them. As I said at the beginning, Philip had sown some seeds in the towns north along the coastal plain, but in these verses, we read the story of how:

1. two miracles extend the Gospel to the coastal plain Both are familiar stories. In the first incident:

a. the healing of Aeneas impacts Lydda and the plain of Sharon (32-35) Lydda is about 15 miles northwest of Jerusalem. There Peter meets a paralyzed man and heals him in the name of Jesus. Well, the news of that spreads, not only throughout the town of Lydda, but all up and down this whole coastal plain, called the plain of Sharon. And:

b. the raising of Dorcas impacts Joppa In fact, word of Aeneas' healing spreads 10 miles further northwest to Joppa, where they have a problem. A beloved sister named Dorcas has died (36-43) So, they send for Peter and when he gets there, he sees how vital Dorcas was to the fellowship there and how much they missed her and he turns to the body and commands her to rise in the name of Jesus and she does! Imagine the impact of THAT, the glory that the name of Jesus received! And how the word spread! Now from these experiences let's draw:

2. two conclusions about miracles First:

a. they are done in the providence of God God doesn't choose to heal every paralyzed person, nor does He choose to raise every saint from the dead back to live on this earth again. If He did, we'd have no sick believers and there'd be billions of us, because we'd never die. These are extraordinary miracles, things that God chooses to do in a specific time or a specific place with a specific person. And God has his reasons for doing them. Very often that reason is not so much for the benefit of the person involved. Rather, as in this case:

b. they are done for the purpose of God: to build His church (35, 42) Through these two mighty acts of power, people in these two villages and all up and down the coastal plain heard the name of Jesus and believed. The church was planted in a dozen new villages and a great harvest of souls was gathered into the Kingdom.

Is God still doing those things today? Sure, He is. Reports come in all the time. Does He still convert His enemies? While workers in one restricted-access country conducted a retreat for new Christians recently, they noticed one young man constantly writing in a notebook. When the workers asked retreat participants to share testimonies, the young man stood up and said he had been sent to spy on the meeting and give a report to authorities. Then he told the group that he himself had now become a believer. Praise God for the way His spirit still works in the hearts of even those who have made themselves His enemies. Pray for Him to use this young man to bear powerful witness to God's power to change hearts. [Advance, 5/31/01] Who knows, this man could be the next apostle Paul in that region! Does God still do miracles like Aeneas and Dorcas? A Christian worker ministering among refugees in Central Asia was invited recently to pray for a sick woman. Upon entering her tent, the worker saw a frail old woman lying so still the worker wondered if she was dead. The worker prayed in the name of Jesus for the woman and for the other refugees in the camp. Days later, the worker learned that the old woman had recovered so much she was able to walk and that two days after the visit relief groups had come to give out food ration cards. The worker reported: "People in the camp said 'God has seen us. He heard that foreigner's prayer!' They all gave glory to the Lord for the food that was sent." Praise God for showing Himself powerful for this elderly woman and the other refugees. Pray for them that the good news of His love would spread throughout that camp and draw many to salvation in Jesus Christ. [Advance, 5/31/01] You see, the Book of Acts is still being written. The story of the building of the Church of Jesus Christ is still in process! We're helping to write it around the world and some of the most exciting things are happening over there. But that story is still being written here in Glenside also. Would God save hard cases here? Would He do powerful things to show His glory here? I think so. The real question is two-fold. First, do we have the faith to ask Him? Or have we resigned ourselves to believing that things can't be changed, that people won't be saved. And the second is this, do we really care? Do we really care that Jesus Christ gets the glory of having vital living growing churches full of followers in Glenside and its surrounding community; do we really care that every neighborhood has a testimony and a witness for Christ in it, do we long to see people find Christ and have their lives transformed. Or have we become content to simply enjoy our suburban lifestyle and go about business as usual. All of these folks lived for the Gospel; Jesus Christ was the center of their life and their clear primary purpose in life was to expand His Kingdom, not to prosper or to achieve the goals of the people around them. If you want to experience God in a powerful way, you have to get on board with what He's doing and make it the center of your life. But when you do, watch out, because God will do more than you are prepared to ask or think.

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts The Great Lesson: God Is No Bigot! - 10:1-11:18

When the Church began, there was one great problem in it that kept it from expanding. That problem was so deep that it was not fully resolved and settled in that generation for nearly 20 years. It keeps cropping up over and over until Acts 15, more than half-way through the book. That problem is so pervasive that it has resurfaced again and again in the body of Christ repeatedly throughout the history of the church. It is always the problem that ultimately keeps the church from expanding and it is a problem so pervasive that it is almost built into the very fabric of all human existence.

I. The Great Problem: is Human Ethnocentricity Human beings tend to be ethnocentric. That is:

1. we inherently value persons of our own ethnicity (of our own race because they look like us, of our own culture because they act and think like us, and of our own language because they talk like us and we can understand them. Often, they share a common history; they come from the same roots. In essence, they ARE us; everyone else is a "them", an outsider. Human beings almost unilaterally see the world that way; we divide it into "us" and "them". Ultimately there are barriers between us and them and the more of these characteristics we don't share, the greater the barriers. Now, of course, it is God who created these differences in the human race. He "invented" all the peoples of the earth at Babel. He designed it that way. But into what God designed to be a beautiful diversity, Satan breathed a lie: "We are better than them." So:

2. we easily develop prejudice toward persons who are different We judge them as having less value, and ourselves as being superior in some way. I am not just talking about prejudice between blacks and whites here in the US; it's all over the world and often much more bold. The Iraqis hate the Kurds; the Arabs hate the Jews; in Africa the Hutus and the Tutsis have had war. In Kyrgyzstan there is tension between the Kyrgyz and the Russians. And even where there is not hatred or tension, there is still a barrier of superiority. Years ago, my daughter and her team of seven in Kyrgyzstan rode four hours on horseback with their Kyrgyz friends way up into the summer pastures high in the mountains. There they stayed in a yurt, a felt tent. They ate the feast they were offered, the lung of a sheep filled with boiled curdled milk and sheep brains for dessert. These people had never seen an American. They had no technology. They didn't make any money but then they didn't need any because they lived off their flocks like Abraham did 3,000 years ago. They probably had little idea of anything going on in the outside world. They went to the bathroom outdoors behind a bush. In our minds, we'd call them what? Primitive? But now turn around and put the shoe on the other foot and think like them. "Here to my mountain comes a 23 year old American girl (and she's not married yet - there must be something wrong with her). She dresses in funny clothes. And she has no idea how to ride a horse, something any mountain child could do! She needs to be led like a child and we laugh at her. She talks funny; she can't even speak our language. And she dislikes the sweetest taste on earth, the taste of our sheep. She wouldn't begin to know how to kill one, let alone to skin it or carve it or cook these delicacies. She'd never last a week up here on her own. She's PRIMITIVE!" You see, even though we may be nice about it, inside we ALL feel that WE are superior to THEM. Look at James' example in Jas. 2:1-4. You all look pretty nice here this morning. Suppose Eddie the homeless guy you see up at Burger King comes in and sits down. Or maybe some teen with bright red hair and earrings in his nose and lip. You may not have enough guts to tell him where to sit, but you certainly will make a value judgment based on appearances. We inherently value people who are like us and de-value the others! Now:

3. for Israel it was compounded by being God's chosen people In Deut. 7:6 God says to them, For you are a people holy to the LORD your God. The LORD your God has chosen you out of all the peoples on the face of the earth to be his people, his treasured possession. What a wonderful blessing, to be God's treasured possession! The exact same thing is said to be true of us as believers! But what does our human nature say that means? That all other people are less valuable than us! God loves and cares about us more! And Israel took this so far as to regard all people other than Jews with disdain. They lumped them together in one term, Gentiles or literally, peoples, meaning "anybody but the Jews". In Jesus' day they wouldn't go into the house of a Gentile, they wouldn't eat with a Gentile, they wouldn't touch a Gentile, and to make matters worse, Israel was a captive people being ruled by Gentiles, the Romans, so they hated them all the more. All the first Christians were Jews initially, but when they got saved, their cultural feeling toward Gentiles didn't go away. They could hardly conceive that God would even save one or forgive his sins! What a deep-seated problem! But in this chapter, we have:

II. The Great Lesson: God's Pan-ethnocentricity (10:34-35) We may be ethnocentric (valuing our own people) but God loves ALL peoples. You see:

1. God does not value persons by external differences He has no favorites. He is not a "respector of persons" as the KJV puts it. Literally, He does not receive persons by their faces, by their appearance. It doesn't matter whether they're white or black or yellow, whether they live in South America or China, whether they use cell phones in an office or plow rice paddies with water buffaloes, whether they are brilliantly educated or illiterate, whether they have green hair and ripped jeans or a three piece suit. God doesn't value people by any of those things. They are ALL created in His image. He looks upon the heart, Samuel says, and so:

2. God receives to Himself true worshippers from all peoples Anybody who calls on the name of Jesus will be saved and forgiven and become a child of God. In fact, He WANTS that to be the case; He has decreed that it will be the case. But how do you teach that lesson to a bunch of people who all their lives have thought themselves superior? Well, Acts 10 -11 is the record of:

III. How This Lesson Was Taught To The Church

1. it began with the vision of Cornelius (1-8)

a. who he was: a seeking Roman (1-2) He was a centurion, the commander of a regiment of 100 men, originally from Italy. He had been a worshipper of the gods of Rome, but in years of being stationed in Palestine he had come to learn and believe from the Jews that there is only one true living God and he was seeking that God with all his heart, praying regularly each day and giving to help the poor. So, God gives him a vision (3-4). Now, in there is a:

b. the lesson: God is already at work among the peoples Notice that:

(1) He hears the prayers and sees the hearts of sincere seekers Does God hear the prayers of unbelievers. Sure, He does! And the ones who have sincere hearts, who genuinely want to know Him and not just use Him to solve their problems, He listens to and remembers and:

(2) He sends those who will bring the Gospel to them In (5-8) the angel tells him to send for Peter who is down the coast at Joppa and listen to his message! That's the missionary process, whether it's in Mongolia or North Hills. God has prepared people out there. He's already been at work in their lives. In their hearts He has put a desire to know Him. And then, in the course of His time, He puts you and I or someone else into their lives to share the Good News about Jesus and boom, they believe! Some of those people are just like us but some are very different! Some look different and speak different, especially where we live. There are 50,000 Muslims in Philadelphia; there are hundreds, likely thousands, of international students in our schools; there is a huge Hispanic community. There are whole Korean communities and Cambodian communities and the Buddhists even have a temple in Glenside. But among all of them, as well as among our Anglo-suburban neighbors, God has prepared people with seeking hearts that He wants us to discover and share with. So, Cornelius sends off three men to find Peter at Joppa, but meanwhile this same lesson:

2. it was illustrated in the vision of Peter (9-29) Peter is up on the roof and has a hunger dream. To summarize it:
 - a. three sheets full of animals come down from heaven and Peter says, "I can't eat those! They're unclean!" But God says (15), "Eat! I call them clean!" (9-16). This dream is repeated three times and Peter is scratching his head and trying to figure out what on earth this crazy dream meant and why it was repeated three times, when all of a sudden:
 - b. three men arrive Cornelius' messengers show up and knock at the door and God says, "Go! I have sent them!" (17-20) And Peter is pretty smart; he knows how to put three and three together! Three sheets of unclean animals, three unclean Gentiles at the door and God wants me to go with them? Maybe there's a lesson here! So, he listens to the story of who Cornelius is and how he had this vision and had sent them to ask Peter to come to Caesarea and speak to them and the next day he goes. He never would have gone before, but now he gets:
 - c. the lesson: "I should not call any man unclean!" (21-29) As he enters Cornelius' house, look what he says in (28-29). Did you hear that? "Nobody is common or unclean. I'm not better than anybody. God doesn't love me more than anybody else. All people can have a place in His kingdom and I have to give up my prejudice!" He's got it, but just to drive it home:
3. it was confirmed visibly by the Holy Spirit (30-48) Cornelius tells Peter about His vision and Peter tells him the lesson we already looked at:
 - a. the lesson: God wants to save non-Jewish people (30-35) "Now I realize how true it is! God wants to save everybody, not just me or people like me." And so, for the first time ever you have:
 - b. the Gospel presented to non-Jewish people (36-43) Peter tells the story of Jesus, who he was and how He died for our sins and rose again on the third day. And as he is giving sort of an invitation (43), they believe his words in their hearts and suddenly:
 - c. the Holy Spirit is given to non-Jewish people (44) Just like He had come to dwell in the Jews at Pentecost in Acts 2 and in the Samaritans in Acts 8. And that:
 - d. the lesson made a powerful impact (45-48) They were astonished. God saves Gentiles and Jews alike and gives them the same Spirit. As Paul would later put it, There is neither Jew nor Greek, slave nor free, male nor female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus. - Gal. 3: 28. What a radical concept! It went against everything their culture had ingrained in them, but God had shown it clearly to be true. Yet even still:
4. it had to be proven to the Church (11:1-18) Doesn't it always? Even when God works powerfully in your life and reveals wonderful things to you about Himself, you still have to deal with:
 - a. the accusation of the critics (1-3) There's always somebody who wasn't there and their first response is to criticize you. So, Peter explains the whole thing again:
 - b. the explanation of Peter (4-16) He tells about how he saw the sheet and the animals and heard God's voice and right then the three Gentiles were at his door because of the angel in Cornelius' vision, and how he went and preached the Gospel to these Romans and, as he did, God sent the Holy Spirit on them just like He did on us... And instead of continuing to criticize, the whole church grasps:
 - c. the conclusion: God has granted life to all peoples! (17-18) Even the Gentiles! Even those who we've always thought he hated and who we've learned to hate, or at least to dismiss, even to those we've been prejudiced against. God has granted life even to them! And it's my role to be out there among them so that the ones in whose hearts God has been at work can hear and believe!

You know that great problem of people thinking they're better than others is never going to be solved in the world until Jesus comes; it's etched into the heart of man. And it won't be solved in the church either until we recognize it in our own hearts and allow God to eradicate it from us. Tim Stafford writes: "When my wife Popie was in the sixth grade, she was a member of the popular crowd. Every Friday night she and her friends gathered at the country club to drink Pepsis and do the twist. Popie led the list of girls to be called before school to see what everyone was wearing. One day her teacher asked her to stay after school. When they were alone, she asked Popie if she had ever heard of India's caste system. Popie said no, so her teacher explained it to her. She drew a little sketch on the blackboard, explaining that a Brahman, in the top caste, could not even allow an untouchable's shadow to fall on him. 'You and your friends,' said the teacher thoughtfully, 'remind me of those Brahmins.' Popie did not cry. She did not even let the teacher know how those words affected her, but they did, deeply. She was shocked. She had never realized the ugly meaning of the word 'exclusive.' She had never thought about the way she and her friends affected those who didn't belong to the popular crowd. That brief conversation changed Popie's life. She became one of the most inclusive persons I have ever met. Thirty years later Popie could remember her teacher's words as though they were spoken yesterday." [That's Not What I Meant! by Tim Stafford. Zondervan, 1995.] Kids are notorious for being ethno-centric, developing cliques like this of people just like themselves that are acceptable. We adults often become better at hiding it, but our prejudices remain. Sometimes they come out in racial slurs and ethnic jokes or in wicked thoughts that secretly cross our minds. Sometimes they're denominational prejudices; sometimes they're socio-economic; sometimes they have to do with gender. And God still needs to teach each one of us that great lesson that He is no bigot! He has no favorites. He doesn't regard any human being or any type of human being as better or worth more than any other. He loves and wants to receive them all. So must we.

Expansion, Protection and Judgment - 11:19-12:25

It has now been about nine years since Stephen was murdered in Jerusalem and the first great persecution began, scattering thousands of believers out into Judea and Samaria, then Galilee and as far north as Damascus. But God saved Saul the persecutor and gave the church rest and so dozens of little churches sprang up in the towns and villages of Palestine through Philip and Peter and many others. Now, by the middle of chapter 11, God is ready to take the next step:

I. The Expansion Of God's Church to Antioch (11:19-30) Antioch lay 300 miles to the north of Jerusalem. It was the third largest city in the world, after Rome and Alexandria. It was beautiful and carefully planned out, yet immoral and full of wickedness, but God had a purpose for it of which its founders never dreamed. Antioch was to become the headquarters for world missions in the first century. It is here that we see:

1. the planting of the first purely Gentile church (19-21) Antioch had a large Jewish community and the first believers to flee there in the early days did try to reach them, but evidently with few results. However, now, having been emboldened by the news of the conversion of Cornelius the Roman centurion at Caesarea in chapter 10 and the fact that God proves He is willing to save pure Gentiles, new workers came to Antioch and began to preach directly to the Greeks. And God had prepared a great harvest in that city. Huge numbers of them gladly became followers of Jesus Christ and the church was born there. But wherever the church is born, it must also be taught and brought to maturity. So, we read of:

2. the discipling of the new church through Barnabas and Saul (22-26) The mother church in Jerusalem sent them a sound teacher, Barnabas, to disciple and grow them. He was impressed with the work of God there, but people were coming to the Lord so rapidly that he realized he alone was not enough. And then he realized that Antioch was right around the corner, less than 100 miles, from Tarsus where Saul had been sent. Saul was a powerful teacher and really knew the Scriptures, so Barnabas went and got him and together they spent an entire year there in Antioch just teaching these new believers who had never even read the Scripture before, who had no acquaintance with God's mighty works in the Old Testament. They had to relearn their whole way of thinking. They had believed in many gods, capricious gods. Now they had to learn all about the one true God who is constant and faithful. They had no knowledge of right and wrong; they came from a culture where the vilest practices were accepted. Now they had to learn how to live. And it took a while. By the way, new believers need that. More and more we discover that even here, the folks coming to Jesus have NO religious background; they don't know the simplest things that we take for granted. They need people to take them under wing for six months or a year and disciple them, teach them line upon line and answer their questions and help them learn to make godly decisions. If that isn't done, Satan chokes out the word and they fall away. That's why we try to hook up new believers one on one with more experienced ones to disciple them. You know, YOU could do that! We need people who are willing to give an hour of their time and their lives once a week to root and ground someone else. Now, as an aside, another thing happened there:

3. the new name, "Christians", was attributed to believers there (26b) Now, that is significant. The name Christian means of the party of Christ, or the followers of the Christ. The Jews referred to them as a "sect", a heretical branch of their faith that had turned into a cult. They called them Nazarenes because Jesus was from Nazareth. The believers called themselves followers of the Way. But the Greek unbelievers in derision criticized them, calling them Christians, Christ-followers. The Greeks saw that they were not Jews, but something entirely different. And the believers accepted this term of mockery because it fit and they began to wear it proudly. Peter wrote, If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed! But there's something important under the surface here. Rome had recognized Judaism as a legitimate and legal religion in the empire. As long as believers were lumped into that category, they had some legal standing. However, if Christianity is NOT just a branch of Judaism, then it is an illegal religion and its followers may legitimately be persecuted, as we'll see in a moment! The last thing we see in this chapter is:

4. the new church connected with others in the bond of love (27-30) We read in history that there were severe famines in various parts of the Roman Empire during the reign of Claudius. The crop failure in Judea was particularly severe and those believers who lived there were suffering. The commerce in Antioch was still prospering and the believers there still had plenty. But their hearts were touched by the suffering of their brothers and they raised an offering. Every one of them gave what he was able, as God had given to him, and the result was a sizable sum. They sent Paul and Barnabas down to Jerusalem with it to turn it over to the elders there for distribution. Now, these churches were 300 miles apart. They didn't know each other personally. But when one part of the body suffers, the others suffer with it! Or at least that's the way God has designed it to work. We Americans are so individualistic by nature and that creeps into our churches too, particularly us independent churches. We don't build relationships with one another and we don't think about what happens to one another. We each are involved in our own little kingdom and we're more likely to erect fences out of our minor differences than to send an offering to meet another fellowship's need. But that's not the way God intended it to be. The principle of loving one another and caring for one another's needs is not just for individuals; it also applies to individual churches and entire regions of churches! Now, in chapter 12 we go back to Jerusalem and pick up what's been happening there about the same time, and we read about:

II. The Protection Of God's Servant, Peter (12:1-19a) It is at this moment, ten years after Stephen's death, that:

1. the second wave of persecution begins in Jerusalem (1) This Herod is Herod Agrippa I. His grandfather, Herod the Great, had tried to kill Jesus at His birth. His uncle, Herod Antipas, had beheaded John the Baptist and tried Jesus at Pilate's request. True to his heritage, this Herod set out to please his Jewish subjects now by destroying the church. So, he arrested some of the leaders and we have in verse 2:

a. the martyrdom of James, John's brother (2) One ancient writer, Clemens Alexandrinus, says that, as James was led to the place of martyrdom, his accuser was brought to repent of his conduct by the apostle's extraordinary courage, and fell down at his feet to request his pardon, professing himself a Christian, and resolving that James should not receive the crown of martyrdom alone. Hence, they were both beheaded at the same time. [Foxes Book of Martyrs] Even in his death, James led someone to Christ. But the Jews loved it! Finally, they had a ruler who would eradicate these horrid Christians! And Herod loved that they loved it, so he had his SS men go out and snag Peter:

b. the imprisonment of Peter (3-4) He was in a prison, behind locked doors, guarded by 16 soldiers, two of which were personally chained to his wrists. Herod didn't want to violate the Jewish holiday and offend them, so there Peter languished in jail for perhaps a week. But the church was not idle and in verse 5 we see:

2. the intercession of the church for a persecuted believer (5) The church mobilized and went to prayer. It touched their roots. James had already been executed and Peter was going to be next. They began to storm the gates of heaven for their brother who was the victim of this persecution. Now, just maybe there's a second lesson here about caring. So many of our fellow believers around the globe today live in places where they are persecuted, where they are arrested, imprisoned and even martyred. We hear about it sometimes and take a moment to pray, maybe. But look at how these folks prayed:

a. it was continual: they prayed earnestly They loved Peter and cared about him. They didn't just go about their lives. They got on their knees and begged God for his release. Did they not pray for James? Is that why he was martyred? No, I'm sure they did pray for James. But it seems that he was arrested and killed very quickly. That was how God planned to take him home. Peter was kept in jail for a few days and they had time to find out and to mobilize, so they prayed with all their hearts; they prayed for hours; they prayed long into the night. And notice:

b. it was corporate: they prayed together They didn't sit at home and pray as individuals. A ton of them gathered (verse 12) at Mary's house, John Mark's mother's place, and they prayed together. They stormed the enemy's gates together in prayer. And notice:

c. it was specific: they prayed for him They had an object; they wanted Peter freed! So, they didn't pray generic, "God bless..." prayers. They had a man they prayed for by name and they determined to see the matter through to the end for him. And look at:

3. the miraculous deliverance God wrought (6-11) It was so unreal that Peter had to pinch himself to see whether it was real or not! The chains fell off, the door opened all by itself, no guards woke up, and he was led by an angel! Wow! What a tremendous miracle! God is still able to do those, you know! That's what they were praying for. So, when Peter shows up, look at:

a. the simple joy that should have been theirs (12-14) Rhoda realized right away what a miracle it was! She recognized Peter and went running off in exuberant joy to tell everyone that God had set him free. She was so overwhelmed with joy that she forgot to open the lock and left him standing out there! That's the joy every one of them should have had but instead look at:

b. their hesitation to believe God's answer (15-17) They said, "You're nuts! Peter's locked in prison (even though we're here praying for him to get out!) Well, maybe they killed him and his spirit is here..." When they finally quit bickering and opened the door they were astonished. They were amazed! They had been praying all night for his release and when they got what they prayed for, they weren't ready to receive it. They had real trouble believing God would do the very thing they prayed for.

Sometimes we can hardly believe that our praying will make a difference. But it does! Jesus said, Whatever you ask in My name believing you will receive! What if God would move us to pray like they did? A few years ago Ruth Ashlock's cousin Grace Morillo was captured when her plane was hijacked by Colombian guerillas and we and a lot of other churches went to prayer and after several months she was set free unharmed. This spring we prayed regularly when Regina Madonna's sister Maridol and her daughter Alexa, were kidnapped by armed men in the Philippines. I don't even know whether she is a believer, but after 4 months they were set free unharmed because people prayed! It makes a difference when the church prays together, consistently and specifically! There are dozens, probably hundreds, more cases like that which could use intercessors. There are many modern day "Peters". Who will pray for them? You can. Subscribe to Voice of the Martyrs magazine or look at their website www.persecution.com or check out Open Doors USA at www.opendoorsusa.org. The responsibility to pray for those parts of the church which suffer is truly ours, even though we're not the ones going through it...yet. But look at:

4. the fury of the persecutor (18-19a) How mad Herod must have been! He looked everywhere! He personally examined the bewildered guards. And when he could not get an answer, he showed no mercy, but rather had them executed! And that leads us to what we read about in the last part of the chapter:

III. The Judgment Of God's Enemy, Herod (12:19b-25) Now, just let me point out three things. First, mark carefully:

1. the danger of destroying the church If you will compare verses 1 and 23, it literally says that Herod stretched out his hand against the church and so God put forth His hand against Herod and struck him! Look with me at 1 Cor. 3:16-17. The word you is plural; it refers to the church. God is building His church. Anyone who stretches out his hand to destroy the church sets himself against God and God will eventually destroy him if he doesn't repent. The ancient historian Josephus says that immediately Herod doubled over with intestinal pain. Five days later he died in total agony, his bowels probably obstructed by roundworms. Persecutors seal their own destruction! That has been shown time and again throughout history! Yet people do it, because they get caught up in:

2. the deathtrap of human pride Josephus says that Herod appeared that day for his audience in robes made entirely of pure silver that shone marvelously in the morning sun. It was so bright that the people stood in awe. In their superstition and also in their desire to get the grain they needed in this time of growing famine, they flattered him. They stroked his pride. They called him a god. And he loved it. But pride always goes before destruction, Solomon said! Around the world today, God still has some enemies, some Herods. Some of them are trying to stamp out His church in China, in Indonesia, in Sudan and many other places and I wouldn't want to be in their shoes. But some of them sit in the hallowed halls of Washington DC. Some of them are elected senators and representatives and appointed judges who arrogantly believe that the message of salvation through Jesus Christ alone has no place in this land. It doesn't belong in our schools; it doesn't belong in our moral decisions. They want to take the credit that rightfully belongs to God for creating and preserving this nation and proudly deify man with it by saying WE did these things ourselves. Let me tell you, I wouldn't want to be in their shoes either. Yet I must be careful, lest that kind of arrogant pride that takes credit for what God has done, that makes me think that I can care and provide for myself in life, should be found in me, but sometimes it is and it is still a deathtrap! Herod never lived to learn what every other persecutor in history eventually learns:

3. the futility of trying to destroy the church (24) The Word of God continued to grow and spread in spite of persecution. It always does. It always will. Mao Tse Tung, in trying to eradicate the church in China, grew it to be the largest church on the face of the earth, more than 100 million strong. The Ayatollah Khomeini who so radically championed fundamentalist Islam and repressed the church, literally drove thousands of Iranians into the arms of Jesus Christ and into His church.

Jovo Jekic was 105 years old in 1996. He lived at that time in Petrinja, Croatia, which was in the war zone occupied by rebel soldiers. "Old Brother Jekic" as he is affectionately known in the area, was 26 years old in 1917 when he immigrated to the United States where he found work with the Ford Motor Company. In 1919, Jovo was invited to a church where he heard the gospel for the first time. Some people took a special interest in him, and he trusted Christ as Savior. Soon, he became convinced that he should return to his native Croatia with the message of Christ. Through the years, Jovo faced much opposition--from the established churches, then the Nazis, later the Communists, and in just the last few years, from rebel factions in the Yugoslav civil war. When he was already over 100 years old, he started holding Sunday services in his home after soldiers had closed the local church. It wasn't long before the soldiers came calling. They forced their way into Jovo's house and took him and his daughter out into the yard. There they told them to renounce their belief in Jesus Christ and to stop holding services, or else they would shoot them. Brother Jekic looked the soldiers in the eye and said, "Go ahead and shoot me because I am going to do what God wants me to do." Then he said to the leader, "I know where

I am going when I die, do you?" The rebel soldier's face turned ashen. He spun around and walked out of the yard. God used Jovo Jekic to start 17 churches in Croatia. Because of him--and because of a handful of faithful Christians in a little church in Detroit many years ago--hundreds of people in Croatia have found faith in Jesus." [Europe Today, Oct-Dec 1996. Page 4.] My friend, that same faith is required of us. Compared to them, the mocking we might endure at our workplace or school seems small. But to be His disciples Jesus said we must take up our cross. We must follow Him after the example of these early believers, even if it means death. Thank God we are not experiencing this here, but it should still do two things in us. It should move us to examine the reality of our own faith and it should move us to pray for our persecuted brothers and sisters, so many of whom suffer in the way Jesus said the church normally would. Let's think about them and pray for them.

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts

The Mission To The World Is Launched - Ch. 13

Chapter 13 is a key turning point in the Book of Acts. Let me share with you four:

I. Important Transitions Which Begin With Acts 13 First of all:

1. the church's focus shifts from the Jews to the peoples of the world The church began in Jerusalem; all its first converts were Jews. The church spread out into Judea and Samaria and Galilee, where most who came to faith were Jews. Even the folks who first went as far as Damascus and Antioch worked with the Jews that were there. The big question that had to be answered (and it was in chapters 10-11) was "Can God save other peoples who are not Jewish?" But now that hurdle has been crossed and the focus from here on is primarily on ministry to non-Jews, to the other peoples. At the same time:

2. the church's base of operations shifts from Jerusalem to Antioch It is no longer the church in Jerusalem where the apostles have remained that is central to the work. They are consulted for doctrinal issues and are helped financially, but the church at Antioch in Syria is now the headquarters of the world Christian movement.

3. the church's central leadership shifts from Peter to Paul Peter has been the key figure in the first half of the book. But now Paul will emerge as the clear leader and theologian in the church. The rest of Acts is the story of his three major missionary journeys and his life-career as a missionary. And most importantly now:

4. the church's strategy shifts from evangelism to missions In the beginning, the believers simply shared their faith wherever they went. That was the natural process of evangelism. If they moved from Jerusalem out into Judea or Samaria, they shared their faith and a little church was planted. If they moved north to Caesarea or Antioch, they shared where they were and the church was born in those places. But now they adopt a new strategy, which we call missions, deliberately sending out workers to plant churches in key centers across the Roman Empire which could then evangelize their own region and reproduce by normal evangelism. Evangelism is kind of like giving everyone in the sanctuary a candle and lighting only the first one in front and letting it naturally pass from one to another. Missions is like sending an usher down the aisle to light the first candle in every pew and then let it pass naturally down the row. The church is lit in 1/20th of the time. That's the mission strategy: choosing key urban centers in every region of the Roman empire, then sending workers to plant the church in each so that by evangelism the entire region can be reached. The workers, meanwhile, move on to another region! That was the strategy Paul developed and we're still using it today. It's been refined and complicated a bit by the many support roles that missionaries may be in, but at the bottom line, we still send workers to plant the church in key places among each people group and let the church grow to reach its own people while workers move on to other strategic targets. Now let's look at:

II. The Missionaries Sent Out By The Church At Antioch (1-3) Let me point out three things. First:

1. this church developed gifted leaders and released their best In the beginning it was Barnabas who came to Antioch as their teacher. Then he went and got Saul and the two of them spent a whole year developing and maturing the church. And now look, there are five of them! Three more have grown to leadership status in that time. What a healthy sign, a church maturing and developing leaders from within! But look which ones they sent out! It wasn't, "Well, who can we spare..." They didn't selfishly cling to their two most mature and experienced people; they didn't say, "We need Barnabas and Saul right here!". Instead, those are the very ones they were willing to release! The work of mission is the most demanding part of planting the church throughout the world and it demands the very best folks that we can send! Then note that:

2. these leaders sought God's will and were sensitive to the Holy Spirit They were fasting and praying and worshipping together already. It was their habit. Why? They wanted to know God. They wanted to hear from God. They wanted to carry out His will. And so, when the Holy Spirit spoke to them, they were able to hear Him. They were listening for His voice, for His direction. Here's a challenge for us elders and leaders. They weren't just throwing out ideas and shooting from the hip. They sought God's will and sensed His leading clearly. Let me give you an example. Years ago, the Steering Committee of the Kyrgyz Partnership in Kyrgyzstan met for two days of retreat. They basically prayed for two solid days and God gave them a unified vision for the Kyrgyz church. But to choose their leader, they went to prayer and after a long time they went around the room and asked, "Who did God tell you should be our leader; what name did He put in your mind?" And one after another, every last person said, "Henry". And Henry was American, not Kyrgyz, and he had only been on the field two years! Nobody went in there thinking about him for that position, but they listened to God and God told them who He wanted. What a lesson for us! Then notice that:

3. these missionaries were called by God and set apart by the church God made it clear, to both them and the others, who was to go. And the church laid its hands on them; it set them apart for the special work God had for them to do. The church recognized the call of God on their lives to that special work, laid hands on them and sent them off to do it. We'd call it commissioning. Among us there are those God has planned to call beyond the realm of ordinary outreach in our own community. There are those He's planned to use in that special work of reaching the ends of the earth where nobody knows Him and we need to be listening to Him, recognize His calling upon their lives and send them out!

And so, it was in this prayer meeting at Antioch that the mission to reach the world began. In the rest of this chapter, we see the beginnings of that effort. First, we see:

III. The Church Planted On The Island Of Cyprus (4-12) Cyprus is a large island over 100 miles wide and half that long, situated in the corner of the Mediterranean between the shorelines of Palestine and Asia Minor, about 50 miles off the coast from Antioch. It has always been important to trade and sailing in that region and even today some of our missionaries have lived there and used it as a hub for ministry to the Middle East. It was Barnabas' home, so they had some familiarity with it and chose to start there (4-6a). On the east end of the island lay the city of:

1. Salamis and it must have had a Jewish community and several synagogues where they could start. What I want to point out is the itinerant nature of the work. They never stayed in one spot very long. Even in this one city they spoke in several different synagogues over the course of a couple weeks. Then they set out on a hundred mile walk to the capital city at the other end of the island. Surely, they stopped overnight in villages and spoke to people but basically the point was to move from one key point to the next and plant the Gospel. From Paphos they would hop north to land at Perga and go inland to another large city named Antioch, the capital of the region of Galatia, then to other key cities. It was going to be a vigorous task and it eventually proved too much for John Mark who came along as a helper and he left them and went home in verse 13. The pressure involved in this lifestyle is evident. But at Paphos we see:

2. Paphos: the demonstration of the power of God (6-12) It's like the last verse of Mark's Gospel, they went out and preached everywhere and the Lord worked with them confirming His Word with signs of power. The Roman proconsul was eager to hear; he was one of those folks God has already prepared, but Satan didn't want him to listen and used this Jewish sorcerer named Bar-Jesus to try to turn him away and keep him in darkness. Paul saw it so clearly and the Holy Spirit grabbed control of him and told him what to say. The sorcerer was immediately struck with blindness since he loved the darkness. Can't you just see him going, "I can't see, help me, help me, where am I..."? And that clinches it; this Roman governor believes in Jesus on the spot! Wouldn't you? Now, that's just one incident; I'm sure other things happened there and a church was planted because Barnabas later went back to visit the churches that were planted on the island. But the record moves on to tell in more detail:

IV. How Paul Planted The Church In The Region Of Galatia (13-52) which is the central part of Asia Minor, modern Turkey. What we see here is pretty much a typical pattern of how Paul operated over the next several years and what happened as a result. First:

1. he chose a strategic place: Antioch (of Pisidia) (13-14a) This Antioch was the capital of the region and was a large, important commercial center. If this region was to be touched, this was the place to start. Paul knew that if the church was started at Antioch, it would radiate outward from there. Next:

2. he began with the most prepared people: Jews and God-fearers (16) Imagine trying to tell someone who has never heard of Jesus who He was and what He did. Once outside of Palestine, most people were pure Gentiles. They knew nothing of the Scriptures, the stories and people and concepts that are so familiar to you and I. They worshipped many gods and knew Greek mythology like you know Bible stories. They would say, "Another god, one named Jesus?" and you would have to start with, "There is only one God", a foreign concept to them. It is so much easier to start with somebody who believes there is one true God, who understands what sin is, and so on. But God had made some advance preparation for this problem. Beginning after the Jews were taken as captives to Babylon, He began to disperse them further and further from the Holy Land. They followed the lines of commerce and trade. Communities of Jews sprang up all over the Mediterranean world. Wherever there were 10 families they would start a synagogue. They would share their belief that there is only one God with the non-Jewish people around them and over time some of them began to attend the synagogue and worship the one God of the Jews. We call them "God-fearers". These people had the background to understand who Jesus was and what the cross was about. So, Paul started with them and:

3. he used an acceptable platform: the synagogue (14b-15) Paul had the credentials of a trained rabbi. I guess the news of his life change hadn't gotten this far. It was natural for him to be invited to teach in the synagogue, so he took advantage of that natural platform provided to him as a starting place. Then:

4. he conveyed the message in understandable terms Because he was talking to Jews, he talked to them in a way they would understand and identify with. First:

a. he affirmed a common heritage and Jesus as its fulfillment (16-26) When you read (16-26), our minds wonder why does he go back and tell the story of the exodus and the conquest of Canaan and the judges and David again? They know those things like the back of their hand. Why? He's saying, "I believe those things; I believe the same things you do; I am not from some strange new cult." The point is verse 23. Jesus is not some new strange teacher; He is the fulfillment of the promise God made to David, the One we've been waiting for. And then:

b. he shared about Jesus' death and resurrection (27-31) How he was crucified but rose again and that there were many witnesses who saw Him. Then:

c. he reasoned with them from the Scriptures (32-37) as to why this had to be so. And then he quotes passages of Scripture. The Book says this had to be. It is a fulfillment of the Scriptures. And then came the invitation:

d. he urged them not to reject forgiveness through Jesus (38-43) "Forgiveness is yours if you'll receive it, but watch out that you don't reject it!"

And his approach worked. They listened. Their hearts were touched. A number of them talked further with him. He was invited to come back. But it was TOO good. They talked about what he had said all week. They talked about it all over town. So, the next week the whole town showed up and that produced an adverse reaction that almost invariably happened wherever he went:

5. he turned to the Gentiles when the Jews rejected his message (44-49) The Jewish leaders were jealous of the crowd and now tried to discredit him. So now, having a base of a few believers with some Scriptural background, he turned away from the synagogue to direct ministry to Gentiles and they were glad. Many of them believed and among them were these Jewish converts who could teach them the missing pieces from the Old Testament. And in weeks, the church began to spread throughout the whole region. But inevitably Paul:

6. he eventually faced opposition that forced him to leave (50-51) The Jews always proved to be Paul's enemies in the end. This time they stirred up some important people with their complaints and got him thrown out of town. This happened almost everywhere he went. Yet despite having to leave so suddenly and so soon:

7. he left behind a joyful and fruitful fledgling church (52) that then began to reproduce and plant other churches. It is to the churches of this region that Paul eventually wrote his first letter that was recorded in Scripture, the letter we call Galatians.

And for the next decade of his life this same story virtually repeated itself everywhere Paul went. He'd start with the Jews, go to the synagogue, gather a few believers; they'd get mad, he'd start reaching Gentiles, they'd get really mad and persecute him one way or another and within a short while he'd move on leaving a little church to grow on its own in very difficult soil. Not exactly the way I'd plan it if I were God, but it sure worked! But just so you don't go home saying, "That sermon was about missions strategy; it didn't have anything to do with me!", let me just point out that maybe some of this applies to you too. God has key people prepared in your life's journey who are equipped and prepared to hear and understand the Gospel. He's got his Sergius Paulus's everywhere. Ask God to show you who they are in your life and lead you to them. Then find an acceptable way to share about Jesus with them. Find something you have in common; find some time or occasion where you have the right and the privilege to speak. Share about Jesus without all the religious terms you're used to. Tell the truth in a way that relates to their life. Some may get mad and want you to go away, but some are those that are good soil and they will receive that seed that you plant and they will believe and have eternal life and be filled with joy. Our missionary in Michigan sent me this note: Hey, I just had a great experience at the end of last week. I was elected school board president last week and met for breakfast with the outgoing president, a man just turned 40. He's been a good friend for three years and a man of high integrity but I didn't think he was a believer. In the last three weeks he's asked me very specific spiritual questions that I didn't have time to really answer at a meeting, so I came to breakfast primed with my "Share Jesus Without Fear" New Testament. Wow, ripe fruit just asking to fall off the tree. We did practically no board business but spent two hours with a Bible between us and by the time we finished and headed to a meeting with the Superintendent, he was absolutely sure of his new salvation. My husband is the one who usually does this, but this time God gave ME the incredible privilege. And He'll give it to you too. Start asking Him to show you His strategy for you!

The Dangers Of Gospel Work - Ch. 14

Paul and Barnabas are in the middle of their first missionary enterprise. They were sent out by the church at Antioch in Syria and they first went to the island of Cyprus. After planting the seeds of the church in Salamis and Paphos they sailed to Perga and went directly inland to the other Antioch, the capital of the province of Galatia. There Paul was run out of town so he crossed the “county line” eastward to Iconium. There they plotted to kill him so he crossed another province line eastward to Lystra, where they actually stoned him. And finally, he went on to Derbe. It almost sounds like a catalog of all the kinds of bad things that can happen to a missionary! And indeed, that’s how I’d like to study this chapter. I’d like to use it to examine some of:

I. The Evil Forces That May Be Directed Against Us (1-20) because we are involved in Gospel work. They are faced by our brothers and sisters across the world on the mission field and they are faced equally by those who are engaged in reaching their own city or their own neighborhood for Christ right here. One thing you don’t see in the text that the Enemy often uses to keep people from proclaiming the Gospel is sickness. Paul later revealed the reason he went to Antioch in Gal. 4:13, As you know, it was because of an illness that I first preached the gospel to you. It is said that Perga was a low, swampy place plagued with malaria. Maybe Paul caught it. At any rate sickness was what drove Paul away from Perga and kept him from really planting a church there. All you need to do is to read Job to see how the enemy tries to use sickness as a weapon against the servants of God. But he also has many other tools at his disposal. For instance:

1. the poisoning of minds against us (1-2) The Greek word means to cause a person to think and feel evil toward someone, to embitter them toward someone. Those who don’t want us sharing the Good News will often speak bad words about us or start rumors to dissuade others from listening. In all of the former Soviet Union, the communists spread the rumor widely that Baptists were a sort of cult where they kill babies and drink blood, to keep people away from them. It was widely believed and in fact still is today! Those who don’t like James Dobson’s nationally known ministry accuse him of all kinds of things from being in it for the money to spreading hatred toward gay people. And people who don’t like you sharing about Jesus at work will label you a “fanatic” or a “religious nut” to discredit you. You can expect that; Jesus said, Blessed are you when people insult you, persecute you and falsely say all kinds of evil against you because of me. - Mat. 5:11. Don’t be surprised; I think this is the most common kind of opposition we face. But sometimes it gets kicked up a notch to:

2. the stirring up of people against us (2-4) Sometimes simple discrediting moves on to actually stirring up people to work against us, inciting them to take actions to stop us. One winter the Islamic mullahs in the Jalalabad region of Kyrgyzstan were so upset about people coming to Christ that they actually stirred up a crowd of almost 1,000 people to physically take action against a house church there. Muslim fanatics in Indonesia are doing the same thing there, stirring up people to act against the Christians. Years ago, when we wanted to create our parking lot, some community folks tried to stir up the zoning board to prevent it. Today, those folks are our good friends, but we are not immune from this. Some who refuse to believe may stir up the bosses at work to stop you from having that Bible study at lunch, or the administrators to stop you from having that Christian club after school. A neighbor can stir up the other homes to shun you. And though it’s hard for us to imagine where we live, sometimes it moves to:

3. the deliberate plotting of harm toward us (5a) We’d never sit down and think, “How can I hurt someone?” So it’s hard for us to imagine that someone might do it to us. They did it to Jesus. The Jewish leaders planned for a long time how they could arrest him and kill him. In Iconium and lots of other places they deliberately plotted to hurt Paul. And there are those that may actually do it to us; they may sit down and actually plan a way to discredit us, to silence us, to get us fired, to damage our property, or to drive us out of the community. Often that kind of plotting involves:

4. physical abuse and intimidation toward us (5b-6) Paul’s ministry was full of not only threats but actual beatings, arrests, imprisonments and worse. Christians and their leaders in China, Indonesia, Sudan, the Middle East, parts of Mexico and many other places suffer those very things today. But you don’t have to look that far. Those who’ve begun Christian work in inner city Philadelphia are used to it; over the years colleagues have told me that their lives have been threatened, their windows smashed, their tires slashed. In our relative comfort, we feel like these things can’t be toward us, but they can and we must be aware of it! On the other hand, Satan can use an entirely opposite strategy. Instead of moving people against us, he can cause us to be:

5. being welcomed with a wrong understanding or motive (8-18) In Lystra the people saw the power of God but credited it to their false Roman gods! They made Paul and Barnabas out to be gods and quietly prepared to worship them. Now, the missionaries didn’t figure this out because they didn’t speak the local language which everybody was talking in until somebody later translated it! People can appear to receive us and our message, but do it for the wrong reason or without understanding. They may listen to us and associate with us because we are Americans and they are aware of the financial help they can get from us, just like some followed Jesus because they wanted Him to keep on multiplying more loaves and fish. People, even here, may be warm to us because they hope to get something from us, because they need a handout, because they need sympathy, because they need a friend, because they have a romantic interest and want someone of the opposite sex, because they want to use us somehow. We have to beware of this false acceptance and strive hard against it, just like Paul and Barnabas did. Not just to make sure Jesus gets His proper glory, but also because when this false acceptance is rejected, it can turn sour very rapidly as it did for them. And finally, we need to understand that Satan's ultimate objective is:

6. the taking of our very lives (19-20) That would have been the end of Paul's ministry if God hadn't raised him up. The thief comes to kill. The more effective we are in the service of God, the more he would like to see us dead, dead on the highway, dead in an accident, dead by a bullet, either stray or intentional, dead by a disease, dead any way he can arrange it. Of course, our lives are in God's hand and we won't die a minute before He chooses to allow it, but that doesn't stop the enemy from trying! And it's a scary thing when we begin to seriously realize the intent of the Enemy against us! And that's why we have to talk about:

II. The Vital Processes That Prepare Us To Face These Forces Now, think about it. Here were these small groups of people that had come to faith in Jesus in Antioch and Iconium and Lystra. And in each case the whole town is already stirred up against Christians. They have literally been born into an atmosphere of opposition from moment one of their faith. They have had little time to mature. How will they face this army of enemy forces arrayed against them and the suffering they could cause, without falling away? Well, Paul and Barnabas knew what they needed and it is exactly what we need (21-22). There are three important concepts in verse 22 that we don't want to miss:

1. we must have our souls confirmed by truth They went back to all those cities, to those small bands of disciples, and did the most necessary thing. They confirmed their souls; they literally propped them up or reinforced them. How? Compare John 17:14-19. We are protected from the effects of the evil forces the enemy marshals against us by the truth of God. It is the truth that keeps us holy and set apart to God. So, in each of these places they went back and taught them. Jesus told us to do it: make disciples...teaching them everything I have commanded you... We must be rooted and grounded in the Word of God. We must know what is true and be able to recognize error. My friend, if you do not have an appetite for the Word of God, if you are not feeding on it and absorbing it, you have no basis on which to stand in the evil day! If we are to stand firm, we must know what the truth is. Then:

2. we must be encouraged to abide in the faith [that is, in the truth] in spite of all the obstacles or the temptations we face that would seek to turn us from it. Jude wrote, Dear friends... I felt I had to write and urge you to [earnestly] contend for the faith that was once for all entrusted to the saints. - Jude 3. Jude said it's a struggle, a fierce and agonizing wrestling match to hang on to what you know to be true when everybody around you is teaching things that are false. We need to recognize that there will come along those who will try to lure us from the faith, those who will try argue us away from the faith, those who will try to scare us away from the faith. We must expect that and our response must be to endure! To abide! To stand unmovable as Paul exhorted Timothy, ...evil men and impostors will go from bad to worse, deceiving and being deceived. But as for you, continue [abide!] in what you have learned and have become convinced of, because you know those from whom you learned it, and how from infancy you have known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make you wise for salvation through faith in Christ Jesus. - 2 Tim. 3:13-15. God commands us to endure, to hold fast, and we must come with the mindset of tenacity, with the God-given, Spirit-empowered, determination to let nothing in this world separate us from the love of Jesus Christ because nothing in this world has the power to do it! Then, here's the real key:

3. we must be taught the inevitability and the necessity of suffering They taught those new believers something very different from what we tend to teach today, even to our own children. They taught them that the path we're following which ultimately leads to the Kingdom, is filled with hardships and suffering through which we must inevitably pass. It will be that way and it has to be that way! "Come to Jesus and He'll solve all your problems" is not found in the Bible! "Come to Jesus; He wants His children to be healthy and happy and to enjoy all the good things of life" is not in the Bible. "Come to Jesus and He will always protect you from suffering and danger" is not in there either. What's in there is this. Suffering:

a. it is a normal and expected part of the Christian life Look what Paul said in 2 Tim. 3:10-12. Paul modeled a life of God's power to endure suffering at Antioch and Iconium and Lystra before these new disciples. They watched him. And the punchline is in verse 12. It's not just for him; it will be the lot of all who will live godly! Suffering for the sake of our faith is normal; it's expected. Jesus said the world would hate us like it hated Him. His teaching is filled with that theme. When you sign on with Jesus, you're not signing up for a joyful cruise to heaven; you're enlisting to fight in a war to extend His glory to the ends of the earth and you expect to get shot at! It's picking up a cross and following Jesus out to Golgotha so that your suffering and pressure and persecution will extend His salvation to the world! That's the normal Christian life! But in it, God has purpose:

b. it produces His character in us Look at James 1:2-4. It is through these very trials, these very sufferings for His sake that Jesus Christ produces His character in you. It is only through suffering that you become mature and complete, that you are changed from glory to glory into His likeness. That suffering is the fire which melts and shapes us for glory. And it does more:

c. it proves us genuine and brings glory to Christ - 1 Pet. 1:6-7 When you stand through all these trials and sufferings, it proves that you're the genuine item, that you're the real deal, that Christ really lives in you. And in that day when it's all over, it brings Him, not you, great glory. Your momentary trials and afflictions are producing an eternal weight of glory that far outweighs them all! When it's all over at last, all the peoples of earth will fall at the feet of Jesus and give him the glory due His Name, because through our sufferings His salvation was extended to the very ends of the earth!

Now that's the kind of teaching we need in order to stand in a hostile world. That's the kind of teaching that propelled the Gospel to the corners of the Roman empire in the first century and that's what will be required of us if God is to use us to transform Glenside.

And when Paul and Barnabas were all done strengthening the churches we have:

III. The Conclusion Of The First Missionary Enterprise (23-28) First:

1. they appointed recognized leaders for the new churches (23a) They laid hands on elders. Young's translation (YLT) says, and having appointed to them by vote elders in every assembly... The point, I think, is that together Paul and Barnabas with these new assemblies chose the most mature and experienced of their number to be their leaders. Then:

2. they entrusted them to the Lord's care (23b) There was little else they could do to provide continuing care and help. They simply let go; they trusted that God would take care of His own as He had taken care of them and:

3. they came home to report and be rejuvenated (24-28) This time they stopped to preach in Perga, but from there they sailed home to Antioch to report to the ones who had sent them out what God had done and how their intercession had borne tremendous fruit. More than they could have dreamed. At least seven and probably many more churches had been planted. The island of Cyprus and the province of Galatia to the north had a solid Christian presence and the range of the penetration of the Gospel into the world had doubled. How they must have rejoiced! Paul and Barnabas stayed there a long time. They'd been gone now 3-4 years and it took a good while to recover from the hardships and rigors of life on the missionary trail. It still does for missionaries today. The pressures they face can be intense and the time at home is invaluable both for us and for them.

But even at home and at rest, the lesson of suffering must not be forgotten. It doesn't go away. It is normal. It is inevitable. There will be more to face. Richard Wurmbrand endured 14 years of imprisonment and torture in Romania between 1948 and 1964 because he was a pastor and refused to deny the Lord and turn in his coworkers. He's with the Lord now but his ministry, Voice of the Martyrs, serves the persecuted church around the world. He wrote these words: "Here comes the great need of preparation for suffering which must start now... I remember my last confirmation class before I left Romania. I took a group of ten to fifteen boys and girls on a Sunday morning, not to a church, but to the zoo. Before the cage of lions, I told them, 'Your forefathers in faith were thrown before such wild beasts for their faith. Know that you also will have to suffer. You will not be thrown before lions, but you will have to do with men who would be much worse than lions. Decide here and now if you wish to pledge allegiance to Christ.' They had tears in their eyes when they said, 'Yes!' We have to make the preparation now, before we are imprisoned.... Nobody resists who has not renounced the pleasures of life beforehand. [Let The Nations Be Glad, Piper, p. 80-81]. My friends, know that you too, will suffer if you give your heart to taking the Gospel to this neighborhood and to the ends of the earth. Jesus said so. Decide here and now whether you really want to pledge allegiance to His cause; don't wait until you're in the midst of it.

The Question Of The Law - Ch. 15:1-35

The expansion of the church of Jesus Christ always creates theological problems as it encounters the traditions and practices of the cultures it invades. For instance, in many of the Greek cities of Paul's day, the cheapest meat was meat that had been offered as sacrifices in the pagan temples. When people came to Christ, they faced the issue of whether they could continue to eat meat that had first been sacrificed to idols or whether that was idolatry. It sounds simple enough, but Paul had to write at length about that issue in 1 Cor. 8 and elsewhere. American Indian believers today wrestle with whether they can use drums in worship because in their traditional religion drums are associated with the spirit world. Almost the same issue. When the Gospel came to the Masai of Kenya a few decades ago, many of the men had multiple wives and children by them. They had to wrestle with the question of whether a believer in Jesus Christ could continue to have more than one wife. And if not, then what would happen to the other wives and children? What would you tell them? It sounds simple, but their church leaders met to seek God over this issue and study the Scriptures and they came to a decision. In studying the Bible, they decided that God's ideal is to have one wife and that men should not seek to marry additional wives, but there were many people in the Bible who belonged to God who had more than one wife, so it must be left up to the individual to decide whether to continue to keep more than one wife. However, if he did, he should not be a leader in the church according to Timothy and Titus. Yet if he did not keep them as wives, he must still provide for them and their children in every way according to Thessalonians. Pretty good answer, isn't it? And the church has grown in that culture because of it. Acts 15 is almost exactly like that. It is the record of how the church faced and solved a serious theological problem, a landmark issue that threatened to divide it.

I. The Huge Issue That The Church Faced is in (1-5)

1. the immediate issue is circumcision There were thousands of believers who were Jews before they believed and were circumcised and kept the Old Testament law and offered sacrifices. When they believed, they kept on doing those same things, seeing Jesus as the fulfillment of every one of them. Some of them had even been Pharisees before and nobody ever told them they had to stop keeping all the regulations they had been used to. They joyfully did every one of them out of their new love for Jesus. But now there are thousands of Gentiles out there who believe in Jesus yet live very differently. They don't do ANY of those things that have always been so important to the Jews. They are not circumcised, so they don't have the sign of the covenant. They offer no sacrifices, keep no feasts, and observe no dietary laws. So, some of these, especially those who had been Pharisees, said, "Wait a minute. This is not right. These folks are told they can believe in Jesus but they don't need to do ANY of these important things." And they went up to Antioch to the seat of the Gentile church and began to teach two things:

a. its premises:

(1) non-Jews must be circumcised to be truly saved "It isn't that non-Jews can't be saved, but that when they are saved, they should essentially enter into our heritage and become Jews through circumcision, take on the lineage of Abraham and his blessing. In fact, if you choose not to obey God and do this, you cannot be truly saved." Furthermore, when the church sent representatives up to Jerusalem to speak to the apostles and elders about this, these folks insisted in verse 5 that:

(2) non-Jews must be required to keep the law of Moses "They have to live like we do; they must do all the things God has commanded Israel to do." Now, this issue has likely been brewing for some time before it broke out at this level. Why? Where does it come from? It has two:

b. its roots: The first is:

(1) the carrying on of tradition from the past These people had given all their lives to the study and observance of the law with meticulous care. To them it was not only the command of God, but a way of life. It was ingrained in the core fibers of their very being. To think that it didn't matter, that somebody could simply believe in Christ and ignore all those things is almost incomprehensible. The second thing going on is:

(2) the fear of losing cultural identity If the non-Jews don't have to keep the law to please God, why should the Jewish believers do it. Soon you'll have a whole church that is identified with the Gentiles. The world is mostly non-Jews. As they come to Christ in masses, the whole hope and heritage of Israel will disappear. So, they decided the better way was to take Christians everywhere and make them Jewish!

Now the issue of circumcision is long-dead for us. For most of us it's a medical decision, not a spiritual one. The issue of law-keeping is dead too. None of us would think about offering a Passover lamb or a guilt offering, even if there was a Temple to offer them in. That's because of the decision the church made in this very chapter! But underlying this specific issue is:

2. the ever-continuing issue which we call legalism. Whether the issue of the day is circumcision or meat sacrificed to idols or multiple wives or any one of a hundred other issues, its root is the idea of legalism. It has two:

a. its premises:

(1) outward behavior is defining proof that salvation is genuine People who believe in Jesus Christ must prove it by behaving in certain ways. Now, that's not a totally unscriptural idea. Jesus said that we would know people by their fruits. There are lots of places which make it clear that continuing to live a lifestyle of sin is evidence that you don't really know the Savior. But all of us display sinful behavior on a regular basis and if you push this idea too far, you end up with a gospel of grace PLUS works. You must believe BUT YOU MUST ALSO DO the right things to keep in the favor of God. And instead of the things being the evidence that you are saved, the things themselves actually help to save you! The line between the two is a very subtle one! The second problem is that:

(2) non-scriptural boundaries can be set to define godly behavior A lot of the things that we choose to define godly behavior don't come directly from the commands of God in Scripture; they are things that we ourselves set up outside of or around what the Scripture says. For instance, in many of our lifetimes in American culture the Church has often loudly proclaimed things like these: Christians must never drink any alcohol. They must never dance. They must never go to movies. Men must not have long hair (or beards). Women must not wear pants (or jewelry or makeup). Is any one of those things in the Bible? No, though people have tried to twist some few verses into saying them. Have they been held by the church at large around the world? No. Yet for years the Gospel preached by the evangelical churches in America was, "Now that you are saved, you must not do the following things....and if you do them, we don't believe your conversion is real; don't fellowship with us." But if those things are not in the Bible, where did they come from? The same place legalism always comes from:

b. its roots: First, they come from:

(1) the carrying on of traditions from the past “I think it because I was told to think it and I have always thought it, so I teach my kids to think it, but I never examine it to see if it’s true. I read a King James Bible because my daddy and his daddy and his daddy before him did and if it was good enough for him, it’s good enough for me (even though I can’t understand the words).” Music is perhaps the most current issue in the church where a similar debate goes on. “This modern Christian stuff, especially Christian rock music, is all wrong. The hymns I sang growing up are godly and spiritual.” And what’s really going on is that, just like these believing Pharisees, we set up standards for acceptable behavior that are from our tradition or heritage and not from the Scripture and then want to force others to follow them. And the other thing that drives us, just like it did them is:

(2) the fear of being swallowed up by the world If we’re not visibly different, if we don’t look different, if we don’t sound different, then we’re “worldly”. We’re just being swallowed up by our culture and our message will pass away. That’s legalism. The issues vary in each culture and in each time period, but legalism we have with us always and that is the real issue that the church is always facing. Now let’s look at:

II. The Compelling Testimonies That Were Put Forth (6-18) in this historic conference that they had over this issue.

First, there was:

1. Peter’s testimony (6-11) You remember the story of how Peter had the vision of the sheet and all the animals back in chapter 10 and then was led to the house of Cornelius, a Gentile, to preach the Gospel. His point is that on that very day:

a. God chose to save uncircumcised Gentiles by giving them His Spirit It wasn’t Peter’s choice. He wouldn’t even have been there! But God gave the Holy Spirit to these uncircumcised Gentiles who believed, just like He did to the Jews. God showed clearly that He chose to accept them without circumcision, simply because they believed the message about Christ. Then secondly, Peter added this thought:

b. salvation for all people is purely of grace; legalism is adding works It is grace that saves us, Jew or Gentile. When we add anything to it that we must DO, we are putting forth another gospel, a gospel of WORKS. That’s what Peter had to say. Then Paul stood up:

2. Paul’s testimony (12) His point is that God chose to do miraculous signs and wonders among the Gentiles in order to save them. How he had struck the sorcerer blind to save the Roman proconsul in Cyprus, how He had healed crippled Aeneas over in Lystra, tale after tale of miracles that God had chosen to do, just to save pure Gentiles, who were born again, transformed and brought together into worshipping little churches all over the region of Galatia. It was the story of a movement of God where people had no background and no knowledge and it thrilled the listeners. Why would God do such a thing if these folks were all unacceptable without circumcision! Then James stood up. This was Jesus’ brother and by this time the most respected leader in the Jerusalem church.

3. James’ testimony (13-18) He quotes Amos 9:11-12 where God says that at the return of Christ there will be believing Jews and ALSO believing Gentiles. His plan is for all the remnant of the peoples of the earth to bear His name.

James’ point is: this is exactly what we’re seeing God do today. Our experience agrees with Scripture! It’s valid! And these are the key thoughts when we see people who are believers who have different customs and practices from us or who don’t do things we think they should do, things that have been a real part of our lives. Has God put His Holy Spirit in them, are they truly born again by faith in Jesus? Is He obviously at work in their lives and ministries? Does what they’re experiencing agree with the Scriptures? What is it that makes me recoil back from them and want to insist that they do things my way? Is it really Scripture or is it merely a tradition that I’ve come to hold dear and want to enforce on everyone else? And if I take a hard look at myself, more often than not, it is. Look at:

III. The Wonderful Decision That The Church Made (19-35) First:

1. the decision was announced right there in Jerusalem (19-21) James spoke for the church and gave us two important principles. First:

a. no additional behavior may be required for salvation Whether it is circumcision for Jews, eating meat for Greeks, the use of drums for Indians, multiple wives for Masai or anything else. The message is simply and always, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and you will be saved. That is for all people for all time. However, he made it clear that in every situation:

b. behavioral limits must be carefully considered You can’t just say, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and do anything you want!” You must carefully consider the behaviors you choose and their effects. You may wonder why he chose to mention the four things he did. These are specific things that have been a regular part of Greek life. They bought meat in the idol temples regularly. Sexual freedom was a normal part of life and sex in the temples was part of pagan worship. Eating meat with blood in it and even blood itself never phased them. Now it's obvious that some behaviors:

(1) some are clearly commanded in Scripture Sexual immorality is simply and purely wrong because God says so. It's all over the Bible. That was an aspect of their lives that needed to change, not in order to be saved, but because they were saved! And God had told Noah not to drink blood because the blood was God's chosen symbol of life; it would ultimately represent the precious blood of His Son. On those issues and many more, we can go to the Scripture and get clear advice on how we should live as believers. We should not steal; we should be honest, not lie, etc. etc. But some behaviors:

(2) some are necessary to prevent offense toward the Gospel Who was it that stirred up trouble and persecuted the believers in Galatia? The Jews! So, James said it would be wise to avoid doing things that would offend them in order that they would be reached with the Gospel and would not oppose it so vehemently! Get your meat somewhere else, not because you have to, but because it'll help your neighbors come to faith. Drain the blood out first before you eat it, not because it's a legalistic issue, but because no Jew will ever believe you know God. Paul explained this at more length in 1 Cor. 9:19-23. Paul lived differently when he was in Jerusalem than when he was in Galatia. In Jerusalem he went to the Temple and made vows and shaved his head and offered sacrifices like the Jews, to reach them and not create offense. In Galatia he ate whatever they ate and never asked them to do any of these Jewish things, to reach them! It's not that he was hypocritical; he recognized what things were genuinely commanded and which were areas of freedom and he chose to limit his freedom in either direction to reach people!

And so, the leaders in Jerusalem made the decision not to require the Gentiles to be circumcised or to keep the law. Then:

2. the decision was conveyed to the churches (22-29) They wrote their decision out in a letter to all the Gentile believers and sent men along as witnesses to go back to Antioch to confirm it along with Paul and Barnabas. It was shared with other churches throughout that whole region. And look at:

3. the joyful reaction of the churches (30-35) They were full of joy that their freedom in Christ was not to be enslaved by the traditions of their brothers. We're still living by that decision today and enjoying that freedom, praise God!

Perhaps the best result that can come out of studying this chapter is for us to search our own lives for those areas where we've become legalistic, where we've taken things that are really our own traditions and have insisted on imposing them on others. Maybe not to the degree of making it a divisive issue in the church like these folks did. Maybe just inside my own mind in the way I think about others. Paul Powell writes: "Two of the most famous Christian preachers were contemporaries during the 19th century. D. L. Moody was a great American evangelist. Charles H. Spurgeon literally took Great Britain by storm through his powerful preaching of the gospel. Moody went to London to meet Spurgeon, whom he had admired from a distance and considered to be his professional mentor. However, when Spurgeon answered the door with a cigar in his mouth, Moody fell down the stairs in shock. 'How could you, a man of God, smoke that?' protested the great American evangelist. Spurgeon took the stogie out of his mouth and walked down the steps to where Moody was still standing in bewilderment. Putting his finger on Moody's rather rotund stomach, he smiled and said, 'The same way you, a man of God, could be fat!'" [Open Windows, Oct-Dec 1995. Nov 5.] Our issues may be different, but those kinds of things are inside all of us. We need to live in freedom and let others live in freedom without imposing on them a yoke of unnecessary bondage to our traditions.

The Gospel Goes To Europe - 15:36-16:40

In the 20 years since the day of Pentecost, the Gospel has still not spread beyond Asia Minor, less than 1,000 miles from Jerusalem. From a human perspective, that's pretty good progress, actually! However, God's perspective is to the uttermost parts of the earth, the whole world, and that's where He wants to keep the eyes of His church focused. It is in this chapter that the Gospel makes the jump and lands in Europe and the ultimate result of that is that the peoples from whom my ancestors and many of yours come, not only heard it, but in the centuries that followed became the custodians of the faith to pass it along to us today. We pick up the story in chapter 15 as:

I. God Launches A New Wave Of Missionary Outreach (15:36-16:10) which we call Paul's second missionary journey. Paul and Barnabas have been home in Antioch for a good while now and they decide to go back to those areas where they'd preached in Asia Minor:

1. its intent: to strengthen the new churches (36) They thought they would encourage and confirm and teach, maybe push on a bit farther or extend the territory a little more, but they never dreamed what God had in store for them. But as they prepared to start out there was a:

2. the disagreement between Paul and Barnabas (37-41) Hey, even apostles argue! John Mark had deserted them once and Paul didn't trust him yet (though in later years he did). Barnabas was Mark's cousin and insisted on a second chance. And what is noteworthy is that they couldn't resolve it. It was not a matter of biblical right and wrong, but of making a wise decision about the work and on this issue, neither felt they could give in. The division grew very sharp between them to the place where they decided to actually part company, even though they'd been a team for years. You know, that's not ideal, but it is real. It happens. Even to missionaries, pastors, elders, and sometimes family members. Sometimes we come to those places where the issue is so important to us that we can't in good conscience give in. But instead of fighting one another and becoming enemies, they simply decided to find new partners and work separately. They split the areas they touched on their first journey in two, so Barnabas took Mark and went home to the churches on Cyprus, while Paul went overland back to the churches of Galatia to strengthen them. They agreed to disagree, divided their labor, took new workers with them and in that way multiplied the work. And God blessed even this division and used it to build the church! Sometimes He does that! When there can't be complete unity, God even uses separation to build His church, as long as the parties have sincere hearts and a right attitude toward Him and one another! So, Paul and Silas went overland visiting the churches through all of Syria where the church at Antioch was reaching out, and Cilicia where Paul had labored for years on his own, and finally, they arrived in Lystra in the province of Galatia where they met a young man named Timothy. What irony! Paul is delivering a letter that says to all, "You don't have to be circumcised" and at the same time we read of:

3. the circumcision of Timothy (16:1-5) Why did Paul do that? Not for salvation, that's for sure! But so that he could get a hearing among the Jews in the area where they were going and not offend them. It was a personal change, a personal sacrifice he made because he wanted to; he literally became as a Jew to the Jews, so that by that means he might save some. Hudson Taylor grew his hair long and braided it and wore Chinese dress because he wanted to reach the Chinese and that's what it took. Sometimes you're going to have to do things you don't personally need to do or want to do, even things that hurt, things that require sacrifice, in order to remove offense and relate to people in a way that will reach them. So, taking Timothy, Paul went on:

4. God's call to Macedonia (6-10) Here he was in Galatia and he wanted to take some more steps to expand the boundaries of the Gospel. The natural thing would have been to keep on pressing southwest to Ephesus and the big cities of the province of Asia. But God:

a. He did not allow them to follow their natural desires (6-8) The Spirit of God restrained them. They had learned to listen to Him and He distinctly impressed them that they should not go there. So naturally, they turned north to go into Bithynia, but again the Spirit said "No!" They didn't know what to do, so they just kept following the coast westward down to Troas, where I honestly think Paul was hoping to catch a ship home! However, there in Troas a marvelous thing happened. God:

b. He called them to launch out to the unreached regions (9-10) Macedonia! Nobody had ever thought of going that far. That was twice as far from home, nearly 2,000 miles! It was essentially on another continent, across the Bosphorus strait in Europe. And when Paul saw this vision of a man from Macedonia begging them to come over and help, he was hearing the heart of God. "Pass by those regions where the churches you've already planted can go. Don't stay in the shallow water where it seems natural to be. There's a whole world to be reached and somebody has to make a beachhead for the Gospel. Launch out into the deep and let down your nets! Come over here where no one's ever taken the Gospel!" We might hear God say, "Come over to the 10/40 window. Come to the barren deserts of North Africa and help us Bedouin; we've been so long locked away. Come over to the Middle East and help us Iranians veiled under the black cloth of Islam. Come over to the barren valleys of Central Asia and Mongolia and China where we Kyrgyz and Uzbeks and Uighurs eke out an existence. Come over to the frozen slopes of the Himalayas in Tibet where even our yak herds die in the cold and we're bound in spiritual darkness or come to the steamy jungles of Asia where we worship spirits and ancestors and have no hope." That's the Macedonian call today! And only 5% of the current missionaries in the world have been given that call; the other 95% are called to serve back in "Asia Minor", the lands where the church has already been planted. But Paul and Silas heard the call and went to Europe; that's why you're here today and we need more like Paul who will answer the call of God's heart today and go where nobody's ever gone in 2,000 years! And because they went, we see:

II. How God Plants His Church In Unreached Places (16:11-40) (Read 11-12) Philippi was an important city. And as we read about the church being planted there, we can discern five key elements of how God plants the church in places where there is no background and where it's never been. First:

1. God has people prepared to receive Him (11-15) Here's:

a. an example of God preparing a person The place was so pagan there weren't even enough Jewish families there to start a synagogue, but there were a few women who had come to learn about the God of the Jews and met each week to pray down by the river. Paul went there and met dear Lydia. In this idol-ridden place she was already a worshipper of the true God, a seeker. Her heart wanted to know Him and as Paul spoke to her, God opened her heart and she believed without hesitation. Oh, God has those people everywhere. All over the world. All over the 10/40 window. In your neighborhood! Those whose hearts are open and ready. We're simply sent to find them and deliver the message! Also, here we have:

b. an example of the conversion of a family as a unit Lydia and all her household came to faith at the same time; they chose together to believe. This is something we have a hard time with. Our worldview is that the individual is central. The individual makes decisions. But much of the eastern portion of the world is not like that. The family is the basic unit of society. Many times, for an individual to consider trusting Christ or making any other important decision on his own is almost unthinkable. So, they come as a group. It's not that God saves all because of one; it's that they all make a group decision to trust Him together at the same time. Sometimes it's not only families but whole villages that decide to trust Christ! Recently I read about a village in southeast Asia that was experiencing a severe drought and their crops were dying and some native Christian workers came to preach the Gospel there. The village elders met to consider this and told them that if they would pray to their God for rain and He answered them, that they would believe He was the true God and the whole village would follow Christ. They prayed for 2 or 3 days and it rained and the drought ended and the entire village came to Christ. It doesn't mean that each individual doesn't have to receive Christ. It means that they all choose to do it together as a unit. This is a wonderful way that God is planting His church in some of the most difficult parts of the world! The second way God plants His Church is that:

2. God displays His power over the enemy (16-18) Now let me take a moment to talk about:

a. the reality of demon possession because most people in the west, and maybe some of you sitting here, don't believe they're real, that maybe they are just an ancient way to describe schizophrenia or mental illness. The Bible teaches clearly that demons exist, that they are spirit beings like angels and that they seek to inhabit human bodies when they can. Ask anybody who lives in the Eastern world where they worship spirits and idols and live in fear of them whether it's real and they'll tell you it is, because they've seen it. And once you see it, you'll never forget it! I've seen it several times, once quite a few years ago in a person from a Satanic cult, writhing on the floor, frothing at the mouth, cursing and screaming. You don't forget that and all your modern skepticism goes right out the window! This slave girl had a spirit who would speak through her and predict the future. And her owners sold the information for profit. Paul knew that if he dealt with it there would be trouble. But she kept following and he couldn't let Jesus' name be associated with this demonic testimony, and what you see next is:

b. the authority of believers to cast them out He stood and said, "In the name of Jesus I command you to come out!" and it did! That authority was given by Jesus to all His followers. You and I have it. Sometimes a simple command in faith is enough. Sometimes it takes hours of praying and commanding. Sometimes it is an extended period of praying and fasting and pleading the blood of Christ over the person, but in the end the result is the same: the demonic hosts must obey the name of Jesus and leave!

You can imagine the effect this had on the public and how many were ready to believe because of it. It is often through visible displays of power like this that God will plant His church in a place the enemy has held for centuries. Whether it is public answers to prayer, defying the power of evil spirits, or miracles of healing or even an earthquake as we'll see in a moment, God will often confirm what His messengers say and prove that He is real by acts of power. Thirdly, in these hard, unreached places, God uses another means:

3. God sustains and delivers His workers through suffering (19-40) First look at:

a. the horrible treatment they received (19-24) Most of us have never been beaten with anything, much less having our clothes torn off and our bare backs beaten with wooden rods. Think of somebody swinging a 2X4 at you with all their might! They laid many stripes on them, it literally says. Then they were put in prison and their hands and feet confined in wooden stocks so they couldn't even move or care for themselves. And God chose to allow it. He often does. His workers often go through great times of suffering. That's another way He proves He's real, by:

b. the testimony of their joy in suffering (25) In the midst of it all they were full of joy, singing, praying. How can that be? Listen to Col. 1:24, Now I rejoice in what [I] suffered for you, and I fill up in my flesh what is still lacking in regard to Christ's afflictions, for the sake of his body, which is the church. Now, that's a deep verse but John Piper explains: This means, then, that Paul exhibits the sufferings of Christ by suffering himself for those he is trying to win...God really means for the church to experience some of the suffering he experienced so that when we proclaim the cross as the way to life, people will see the marks of the cross in us and feel the love of the cross from us. And Paul said, "If I know that's going on, then I rejoice!" The other prisoners were listening; so was the jailer. They knew the suffering and they heard the singing, the joy. It is often that joyful endurance of suffering that is so unlike anything the world has to offer, that wins people to Christ. That in itself may have led many prisoners to believe. But on top of it, God worked a:

c. the miraculous deliverance God provided (26-28) An earthquake shook the prison, but the real miracle is that everyone's shackles fell off and the doors opened! Yet instead of running away, they all stayed and ran to Paul; they knew where the power was! And it made a:

d. the tremendous impact for the Gospel (29-34) The jailer's been listening, alright! He runs to Paul and falls down trembling and another whole family comes to Jesus and is transformed. I wouldn't doubt that all the prisoners did the same. Dozens were saved that day because of the suffering of Paul and Silas and then their deliverance. God can use either. In the end He brought about their:

e. the sudden release and continuation of ministry (35-40) The magistrates came down and let them out and asked them to leave the city, which they did, only to go somewhere else to preach the Gospel.

Yes, when you listen to His call to go out into the unreached places, God has some people like Lydia prepared and ready to believe. He will often display His mighty power over demonic forces and all the power of the enemy to confirm your message. But what God most often uses the most powerfully is the suffering of His people to touch hardened hearts with His love. Judy Anderson, whose husband is the West Africa Director of the World Relief Corporation, grew up as the daughter of missionaries in Zaire. As a little girl, she went to a day-long rally celebrating the one-hundredth anniversary of Christian missionaries coming to that part of Zaire. After a full day of long speeches and music, an old man came before the crowd and insisted that he be allowed to speak. He said he soon would die, and that he alone had some important information. If he did not speak, that information would go with him to his grave. He explained that when Christian missionaries came a hundred years before, his people thought the missionaries were strange and their message unusual. The tribal leaders decided to test the missionaries by slowly poisoning them to death. Over a period of months and years, missionary children died one by one. Then the old man said, "It was as we watched how they died that we decided we wanted to live as Christians." That story had gone untold for one hundred years. Those who died painful, strange deaths never knew why they were dying or what the impact of their lives and deaths would be. They stayed because they trusted Jesus Christ. [Leith Anderson Eden Prairie, Minnesota] That same process goes on right where you are. God allows the sufferings of Christ to flow over into your life too. And as those around you watch you singing songs at midnight when your back is bloody, as they watch you struggle through hurts and hardships with thankfulness to Jesus on your lips, they will say, "That Jesus is real! If He can do that for them, I want Him too!" Paul's life is a catalog of suffering, but it planted the church throughout the Roman Empire. And we too are called to suffer for His sake.

The Gospel Invades Greece - 17:1-18:22

Acts 17-18 is the story of the Gospel invading a brand-new country on a new continent where it had never been before. That country is today known as Greece; then it was Macedonia in the north and Achaia in the south. It is the story of the Gospel going to four strategic cities, three of which are still there today: Paul went from Philippi (last week) to Thessalonica, then to Berea, then way down (probably by ship) to Athens and over to Corinth. Each of these cities has its own story. Each was different. Each reacted differently. And we can learn something from each one. We begin with:

I. The Story Of Thessalonica (17:1-9) Thessalonica was a prosperous trade city. It was the chief port of the province of Macedonia and also its capital. And Paul headed directly there after leaving Philippi.

1. the general nature of the community as it concerns our story would be characterized as religious (1-4). Unlike Philippi, here there was a large Jewish population and a synagogue. They had a powerful influence on the city. Quite a number of Greeks had been attracted to the message of the Jews and were part of the synagogue community. And because he was dealing with people who had a background of knowledge about God:

2. the presentation of the message was biblical He reasoned with them out of the scriptures which they revered and respected. He explained that Jesus was the promised Christ, the Messiah. He proved from the Scriptures that the Christ had to suffer and die and be raised. He declared boldly that Jesus is the long-awaited Christ! Now, that wouldn't have made much sense to Greeks who didn't have that religious background, but since they did, Paul tailored both his message and his method to take advantage of it. And a great number, it says, of the Greeks and even some of the prominent or leading women of the city believed. But:

3. the response of the community was opposition (5-9) They stirred up a crowd against them and tried to bring legal charges. Now, why did they do that? According to verse 5:

a. there is jealousy over people leaving their religion Jealousy. The leaders see the Gospel drawing away their followers from them and they are jealous! This is often the response when the Gospel comes to a community, a region or even a whole country where there is strong organized religion that has a powerful influence over the people. It doesn't seem to matter what the religion is. When followers begin to be drawn away in any numbers, this jealousy engenders a real hatred and:

b. there is often an open attack on the messengers Where our national missionaries Lamine and Nene Kante are in Guinea, fundamental Islam has a strong hold on the people and they have faced powerful opposition. Lamine's life has been often threatened and an actual plot to murder him was uncovered. Militant Hindus in North India, jealous of the impact of the Christians, burned Australian missionary Graham Staines and his two children to death in their car. One of the most powerful enemies of the Gospel in the former Soviet Union is the Russian Orthodox Church. It will join with the Muslims to persecute and drive out the evangelicals. Wherever the Gospel encounters strongly organized religion, there is usually a backlash as the Gospel invades the culture. Next comes:

II. The Story Of Berea (10-15) Paul and Silas left town that night and headed to the smaller, more quiet city of Berea, about 40 miles southwest. It also had a Jewish population and a synagogue, but:

1. the general nature of the community was different from Thessalonica; they were open (10-12). Verse 10 says they were of more noble character. They were more sincere, more genuine, more truly interested in knowing God than in building a kingdom of power for themselves. And because of that sincerity, that openness:

2. the response of the community was reception Many of the Jews themselves believed. It was not just Gentiles, although many of them did too. There are times when an individual, when a family, and even sometimes when an entire community, have a heart to seek truth and really want to know the living God. On those occasions, note what happens:

a. there is an eagerness to hear that is born out of a true desire to know. In some places seekers will sit for long hours to hear Bible stories, to ask questions. They will request someone to come and stay with them to teach them more. In Irian Jaya, the village of Pubuan sent messengers to our missionary Dan Lunow and the Sougb church he had established there, begging them to send someone to their village to teach them about Jesus! That is not unusual! Several villages in Kyrgyzstan have asked for workers to come and teach them. Some individuals will ask you to tell them instead of you trying to find a way to tell them and them resisting it. These are prepared people, like Lydia, like the eunuch in chapter 8, people in whom God is already at work drawing them. And in such cases:

b. there is often a thorough examination They had deep respect for the Bible and went back and checked out Paul's message every day to see for themselves that it was true. Often, sincere people take some time to come to Christ; their very sincerity causes them to think deeply and examine carefully what they're being told. But once they are convinced:

c. there is often a real movement of people to Christ As in Berea, many will come to Jesus in that town, in that region, in that family. These folks are the good soil where real fruit is born, 30, 60 and 100 fold. But:

3. the enemy can always import trouble (13-15) Berea was an open place, but their Thessalonian neighbors were still so jealous and angry that they came over and made trouble for Paul in Berea and he had to leave! Satan doesn't give up his turf or his followers easily. Oftentimes where there is no trouble, he will import some from outside. The first person I ever led to Christ was my lab partner in college. The second was a high school classmate who went to the same college. And the three of us were sitting in a lounge and I was trying to do a bit of discipleship and follow-up but other students came by and began to listen and began to raise objections and to interrupt and argue and we had to quit and leave. The semester ended and I never did get a further opportunity. A young person may be receptive but their parents may keep you from ministering to them. It happens over and again. So, Paul left his partners to encourage the new believers and was whisked away some 200 miles and now we come to:

III. The Story Of Athens (16-34) Athens was the capital city of this province of Achaia and it was a different kind of place from Macedonia. As we read, notice:

1. the general nature of the community:(16-21) In a word I would sum it up as an intellectual community, a community on a head trip. Note that in this community:

a. there is a proliferation of idols Athens was known as the city of idols. It was filled with statues and temples of every imaginable Greek and Roman god and goddess; hundreds of them covered the city's central hill, the Acropolis, and lined the main roads. It was said of Athens that it was easier to find a god than a man. It was so extensive that it shocked and distressed Paul. They were inclusivists. Instead of being devoted to one particular god and depending on him or her for protection as many cities were, they figured, "Why be exclusive. Let's worship every god we can find; we'll appease them all so as not to offend any!" It was Pluralism, "Everybody worship whatever they want" - to the extreme. And idolatry always multiplies; there are always new gods to worship. I can't help but think that we're a society that spawns even cults that worship UFO's and believe that aliens from other planets are coming to take them away and commit mass suicide! At the same time:

b. there is a proliferation of ideas There were philosophers everywhere, Epicureans, Stoics, all kinds who believed all kinds of things. There was an Areopagus, a Mars Hill society, where the elite would sit around and debate philosophy and history. Verse 21 shares the prevailing intellectual climate of the city. They were into logic and reason and the process of debate. Educated, brilliant, intelligent, well-read. It almost sounds like many in our generation of Americans! But these are often the hardest people to reach because:

c. there is a pride that hinders belief They called Paul a “babbler”, literally a “seed-picker”, a guy that just picks up bits and pieces of what he hears and parrots them back. When he mentioned the resurrection of the dead in verse 20, many of them mocked him. You’ve seen that before in people that pride themselves in their intellect; you’ve felt the disdain when you tell them you actually do believe that the world didn’t evolve but was created, or that there is a literal heaven and hell. They know better; they have advanced beyond such archaic beliefs. You’ve met them. A lot of them run our educational institutions! Some of them run our seminaries and lead major denominations. This group actually invited Paul to their meeting to share his ideas. Now, with this type of an audience, Paul used a different:

2. the presentation of the message Since they don’t know or regard the Scriptures, Paul used an approach that was more natural (22-31) and we sometimes miss the significance of how he started out, because we don’t know the whole story. He began with:

a. the use of a redemptive analogy (22-23) A redemptive analogy is something that is already found in their culture, something they already know and respect that can be used to illustrate the Gospel. The Kyrgyz paint the doorposts of their yurts red and once a year they sacrifice a lamb and eat the whole thing in one night; they won’t break any of its bones. What a perfect opportunity to share the story of the Passover and how the lamb represents Jesus. The Sawi people of Irian Jaya used to make peace with their warring neighbors by giving the son of the chief to their enemies and as long as he lived there would be peace between them. And Don Richardson used that analogy to explain Jesus, God’s peace child, and plant the church in that culture. In his walking around the city Paul found an altar without any idol attached to it that had an inscription, agnosto theo, to the unknown God. That means nothing to us, but these folks knew where that altar came from. Six centuries earlier, the city of Athens lay under a severe plague; people were dying everywhere and sacrifices to all of the gods of Athens had failed to halt it. The Pythian Oracle told the elders of the city to send to the island of Crete for a wise man named Epimenides who would solve their problem. When Epimenides arrived, he reasoned that the plague was because of some other god not represented by all the idols in the city. So, he took a bold and daring step. He asked for a flock of sheep to be kept from feeding and then brought to him at dawn. He gathered the elders and then prayed something like this, “O thou unknown God. Behold the plague afflicting this city! And if indeed you feel compassion to forgive and help us, behold this flock of sheep. Reveal your willingness to respond, I plead, by causing any sheep that pleases you to lie down upon the grass instead of grazing...And those you choose, we sacrifice to you-- acknowledging our pitiful ignorance of your name!” Then the hungry sheep were released to graze on the hillside but miraculously, a number of them almost instantly lay down instead of grazing. An altar was built on each of those spots and the sheep was sacrificed. The altars were not inscribed with the name of any god, but simply “to the unknown god”. By dawn the next morning the plague’s grip on the city was already loosened and within a week the sick had recovered. The city overflowed with joy and thanksgiving. Epimenides made a treaty of peace for his people and went home to Crete. They made a statue of him sitting with his head bowed. [summarized from Eternity In Their Hearts, Don Richardson] Over the centuries the memory of that event faded. The altars crumbled from neglect and were overgrown with vines, no doubt. But one of them remained for six centuries until Paul walked by it. It really got their attention that day when Paul said, “That unknown god that you worshipped in ignorance, that god who once saved the city of Athens, that is the God I’ve come to tell you about!” And then he proceeded to make clear:

b. the differentiation of our God from idolatry (24-31) He says, “Our God isn’t like all the idols you see in this city. He doesn’t live in temples made with hands. He is greater than the universe because He made the world and everything in it. He made the human race and we need to repent of this idea that he can be represented by something that man designs and makes. He is going to judge the world one day by His Son Jesus whom He raised from the dead!” You see, he presented the Gospel so differently to these people than to the religionists of Thessalonica! There is no one right approach. How we share with each one depends on what they know and believe and what their attitude is. To these intellectuals, Paul made a logical argument rather than a “the Bible says” kind of presentation. But, as is so often the case with these kinds of people:

3. the response of the community was indifference (32-34) Only a few got past their intellectual pride and believed. Some scoffed and the rest put it off until another day. It didn’t grip their hearts; it was only an intellectual exercise. How sad! Paul left pretty quickly and we have:

IV. The Story Of Corinth (18:1-17) Now, Corinth was the exact opposite of Athens. It had about 500,000 people and was the major commercial city of the region, situated on an isthmus between two major waterways:

1. the general nature of the community was wicked It was a city of flesh, a center of vice and moral corruption. The temple of Aphrodite with its 1,000 prostitutes topped the city’s hill. It attracted merchants and sailors, professional gamblers and athletes, all the lower types of the world. There were no standards. In fact, the term “to Corinthianize” made it into the Greek language as a derogatory phrase meaning to utterly corrupt! In verses (1-6) Paul tried going first, as usual, to the Jews in the synagogue and, of course, they wouldn’t listen but when he turned to the Gentiles, the regular people of the city:

2. the response of the community was what I would characterize as: extraordinary (7-11) First of all:

a. there was an extended time of fruitful ministry There is nowhere else up until now that Paul stayed a year and a half, and the Lord indicated clearly to him that there He had MANY PEOPLE in the city. There was evidently a considerable response. People kept on coming to the Lord out of the depths of their sin. On top of that:

b. there were noteworthy conversions Crispus, who was the very ruler or leader of the synagogue, abandoned his position to follow Jesus. Paul mentions baptizing him in 1 Cor. 1. Later on, his predecessor Sosthenes (mentioned as being beaten in verse 17) also came to salvation and went with Paul on his journey. His name is beside Paul's in the opening of that letter to Corinth. Important people came to Jesus and in this hard place:

c. there was Divine protection from opposition The Lord promised him protection in that vision. No one would attack him. That was new! Everywhere else he had enemies after him within weeks, but here by grace he continued a whole year and a half before any opposition was stirred up and when it was in verses (12-17), the proconsul dismissed the case and wouldn't listen to it!

And so overall, what would seem to us the hardest place, became the most fruitful place. There are places everywhere that are more or less like that. Amsterdam has its red light district, New York its Harlem, Philadelphia its projects. Places we don't want to go, places we're a bit scared of, dark places. But the darkest of places sometimes produce the most wonderful and sustained response. For instance, in the darkness of inner-city Brooklyn with all its broken lives, God raised up the Brooklyn Tabernacle. Teen Challenge was born among the gang wars of New York City. Anyway, with that we come to:

3. the end of the second missionary journey (18-22) Paul sailed straight for home at Antioch, with a quick stop at Ephesus.

But in leaving, I want us to reconsider the lesson from these four cities. Not every place and not every person is the same. They have different characters, different problems, different things that hinder them from believing the Gospel. They require different methods of sharing. We get different responses from them, yet no matter what the response, in each of those places God still drew people to Himself. Wherever God puts you and whoever He puts you among, He can still do a work there, if you're faithful in listening and sharing as He directs you to!

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts

The Gospel Spreads Throughout Asia - 18:23-19:41

As we return to our study in Acts, I want to take a moment to review what we have studied thus far. The Book of Acts is really the story of the beginning of:

I. The Transformation Of The World: A Quick Review Of Our Study In its first half we see how the Gospel is spread:

1. From Jerusalem through Judea and Samaria to Antioch - Chs. 1-12 Thousands were saved in Jerusalem as the apostles preached there and a growing church was established but, you remember, they were reluctant to move out. So, God moved them out through persecution. Stephen was stoned and Saul became the chief persecutor. Believers scattered out throughout Judea and up into Samaria. Through the ministry of Peter, the Gospel was taken to pure Gentiles, non-Jews, for the very first time at Caesarea. Meanwhile Jesus knocked Saul to his knees and saved him and transformed him into an apostle. Believers went as far as Antioch and a thriving church was established there and Paul wound up teaching there for a year. This church at Antioch then became the new center from which the Gospel would be spread:

2. From Antioch to the uttermost parts of the earth - Chs. 13-28 Paul became the leader of the missionary enterprise sent out from Antioch. He made three great missionary journeys, each lasting several years, that planted the church throughout extensive areas of the Roman Empire.

a. Paul's first journey planted the church throughout the island of Cyprus and then the eastern portion of Asia Minor - Chs. 13-15. He came home rejoicing in all that God had done, though he had suffered great persecution, even stoning. But some of the Jewish converts had a real problem with non-Jews not being circumcised and keeping the Law so Paul went up to Jerusalem to the apostles in chapter 15 to settle that matter once and for all. Then he set off on a:

b. Paul's second journey It led him back through eastern Asia Minor but then over to Macedonia, to Philippi where Lydia was saved and the jailer was converted and eventually throughout Greece, Thessalonica, Berea, Athens and Corinth - Chs. 16-18:22. At last he sailed for home but stopped briefly at Ephesus, the chief city of the province of Asia, yet he would not stay. Instead, he left his traveling companions and fellow disciples, Priscilla and Aquila, there and promised to come back, which he did some time later on his third missionary journey and that's where we pick up the story today at 18:23. Paul was headed back to Ephesus to keep his promise. Now what we see first as we pick up the story is two distinct cases of:

II. The Transformation Of Religious People - 18:23-19:7 The first is a man by the name of Apollos and here's his story.

1. a lesson from Apollos - 18:24-28 Apollos was a Jew from the huge city of Alexandria in Egypt, a center of Jewish thought and culture. He was a learned man, a trained orator. Somewhere he had come into contact with followers of John the Baptist. He believed the message of John and was baptized himself. And he believed what John said about the One who would come after him; he even knew His name. It says he taught "accurately about Jesus", from John's words and the Old Testament but had never heard the rest of the story! So, Priscilla and Aquila took him home with them and told him how Jesus had gone on to die on the cross for our sins and to rise from the dead on the third day and that now He was seated in heaven and preparing to return. And he believed without hesitation and with all his knowledge of the Scriptures became a mighty preacher of the Gospel! In fact, they sent him back over to Corinth to continue the work of building up the church that Paul had left there! But there's a lesson here we don't want to miss: Without faith in the finished work of Christ, religion is nothing! Here was a man who was deeply religious, who knew the Scriptures, who knew and talked about Jesus, even accurately, but until He placed His trust personally in the finished work of Christ on the cross for His salvation, he was as lost as Pontius Pilate! You know, Apollos is not unlike a lot of people in your neighborhood, is he? Religious, going to services, talking about Jesus, believing that He is the Son of God, but they've never really trusted in Jesus' death and resurrection alone to save them. They're still trying to be good and believe the right things and hoping that when they die, they'll have been good enough! God help us to be like Priscilla and Aquila, to quietly take sincere people like this aside into our homes and lives and explain to them the way of God more adequately! Now, by this time Paul is on his way back and nearing Ephesus and he runs into another group of John's followers just like Apollos:

2. a lesson from John's disciples - 19:1-7 A dozen more, just like Apollos, disciples of John the Baptist, knowing the name of Jesus, believing in Him as the one to come, but never having heard the rest of the story. Paul knew something was lacking in the way they talked about Jesus and he asked them whether they had received the Holy Spirit. They replied they had never even heard of the Holy Spirit. They never heard about the cross, the resurrection, Pentecost or the growth of the church and so on. So, Paul filled them in on the rest of the story and when they heard it, they wanted to be baptized in the name of Jesus and declare themselves His followers and when they were, the Holy Spirit came on them with a visible sign, just like He did at Pentecost in Jerusalem and just like he did at Samaria in Acts 8 and again at Caesarea in Acts 10. But there's a lesson here: Without having the Holy Spirit, baptism is nothing! Apollos had been baptized; so had these 12. They were sincere about it, but without the Spirit of Christ coming to actually indwell you, you can go through all the religious rituals there are and still be absolutely lost! A lot of the people that live around you are living proof of it. They go to church; they have been baptized; they celebrate communion. But they've never had the life of Jesus come to live in them through His spirit and cause them to be born again. And they need your help to understand that. In fact, there is here an actual:

3. a lesson about baptism itself: You can see here two types of baptism:

a. John's baptism: a sign of repentance expecting a future experience People came to John because he called them to repent of their sins and turn away from them and get ready for the Lord Jesus who was to come. He put them under water as a symbol of washing, that they promised to change their lives and live differently and look forward to a Jesus who was yet to come to them personally. But that's not:

b. Christian baptism: a sign of identification and an inward experience It is a testimony that I have become a follower of Jesus; I am identified with Him; I am trusting in Him completely for my salvation and my future; Jesus has come into my life and I died with Him and received His new life. I am a brand new creature! That's the baptism that Jesus commanded His followers to receive and that's why, once these 12 believed and received the Spirit of God, Paul baptized them again, but now in the name of Jesus.

A lot of the folks around you have been baptized. Most were sprinkled with water as infants and words were said over them. But for most of them it was a like a "baptism of John"; it was an act of religious obedience which someone told them to do; it was a promise by them or by their parents to do better, to live better, hoping that in the future Jesus will accept them. But all the water in the world won't save anyone. Religious people, "baptized and churchied" people, need to be transformed by a personal encounter with Jesus Christ and after they have it, they need to be baptized in His Name! Now in the rest of chapter 19 we see:

III. The Transformation Of An Entire Region - 19:8-41 First, let's notice:

1. the method of ministry Paul used in Ephesus

a. he began in a synagogue (8) He always started there. Why? Because it was a religious place, a place where there were prepared people that already had a belief in one true God and accepted the authority of the Scriptures. For three months he wrestled and debated there and as he did, a group of disciples were won to Christ. But eventually:

b. he moved to a school (9) Why? Well, obviously he was no longer wanted in the synagogue and those who were going to believe there were now saved, but I think also because it was a secular place. The owner of the school would use it in the morning to teach his students and Paul would make his tents in the morning and then rent it in the afternoon when the Greeks had their leisure time to teach his disciples. Idolatrous, pagan, idol-worshipping Gentiles are not going to come to a Jewish synagogue, any more than they're going to show up in church Sunday morning today, nor would the Jews welcome them. To reach them Paul had to go out among them, out where they were, out in an arena where they could participate. And I think there's a lesson in that for us today. Only so many are going to be won by coming in to where we are. Only so many are religious enough to feel comfortable coming to hear the message in a religious building. If we want to reach the masses, it would seem to me that we're going to have to find ways to put the message "out there" where they are, out there in a setting where they feel comfortable listening and asking questions. And in this fashion Paul:

c. he impacted the surrounding area (10) The entire province of Asia, which had been skipped by the direction of the Spirit on the second journey, was now reached over this two year period as people came in to listen and went home converted. I would also assume that Paul and his disciples made forays out into other towns and villages during this time as well. That was one key piece of the strategy. A second thing we need to understand is:

2. the spiritual battle Paul faced in Ephesus Ephesus was the center of:

a. the cult of Diana or Aphrodite, the Greek fertility goddess. So, it was a center of idolatry where her statues were worshipped and her temple stood, a center of immorality because sex with temple prostitutes was part of their very worship. It was a place of demonization as people invited the spirit of Diana to possess and control their bodies and became controlled by evil spirits and it was a place of sorcery where occult arts and practices, the casting of spells and calling on the dead and placing of curses and all that goes with it was practiced by many. It was in a very visible way a spiritual stronghold of Satan. But in the midst of that deep spiritual darkness:

b. God displayed the power of Jesus (11-12) These were not things that God does for every believer, every day, everywhere. They were extraordinary things, signs and wonders that displayed the power of the name of Jesus. Where the darkness is the greatest, God is often willing to do extraordinary things to bring people out of it. Advance Newsletter reported that a Christian worker ministering among refugees in Central Asia was invited to pray for a sick woman. Upon entering her tent, the worker saw a frail old woman lying so still the worker wondered if she was dead. The worker prayed in the name of Jesus for the woman and for the other refugees in the camp. Days later, the worker learned that the old woman had recovered so much she was able to walk and that two days after the visit relief groups had come to give out food ration cards. The worker reported: People in the camp said "God has seen us. He heard that foreigner's prayer!" They all gave glory to the Lord for the food that was sent. In the Muslim world God is constantly using visions and dreams of Jesus to make people receptive to the Gospel and save them. Where there is spirit worship, He defies the power of evil spirits and the power of the name of Jesus. By doing these extraordinary things:

c. God displayed the uniqueness of Jesus (13-17) There were others trying to do similar things, to cast out demons. They made a living at supposed exorcisms and there are plenty of people in other cultures that do the very same thing today. But when they saw the power of Jesus, they tried to use His Name and look at the reply, Jesus I know and I know about Paul, but who are you! It became very clear to everyone that only Jesus has that power over the evil one! He is unique, not one way among others, but THE way! A terrible hailstorm struck a Buryat village in rural Russia, destroying roofs and window panes, injuring farm animals and, worst of all, ruining this year's crops. God showed himself strong, however, for the one believer in the village, whose crops were not destroyed! [Advance - Sept. 24, 2001] Can you imagine the testimony she has been in that village! God makes a difference between us who hold the name of Jesus and the Egyptians. As we pray and are faithful in sharing His Word, He works alongside us and declares the power of His Name and His uniqueness as the only way. That kind of thing went on for two years and as you look at the text you can see:

3. the spiritual transformation that occurred in Ephesus Because of these displays of His power:

a. there was widespread reverence for the name of Jesus (17) Those who didn't believe held His name in high honor and reverence. Instead of a defiant, unbelieving attitude, there was a whole shift in the spiritual atmosphere of the city. And:

b. there was public repentance of occult involvement (18-20) Believers came forward now and publicly admitted their sinful involvement in deep and shameful occult things. They burned their books in renouncement of it all. 50,000 drachmas is the equivalent of 3-5 million dollars in America today! These people were in it deeply; they'd invested all their money and their lives in it, but they burned it all, sent it up in smoke as so much garbage, because of their newfound love of Jesus. At the same time:

c. there was financial damage to impure businesses (23-27) These silversmiths had a profitable business going. Ephesus was the center of Diana worship for the whole empire and all the tourists and worshippers who came wanted their personal little silver idol to take home and put on their shelf to worship. It was a tidy little operation employing a whole guild of people, until so many people began to convert to Christ and stop worshipping idols. Sales fell off! They were going out of business for lack of customers, praise the Lord! That's what happens as God begins to move and Christians begin to pray. The adult bookshops and the strip clubs and the psychic readers and the bars begin to close down. Nobody goes there anymore. The town begins to be transformed! And if you sneak a peek ahead at verse 31 you can see:

d. there were friendships developed with high officials (31) Paul had made friends with, as the text says literally, the Asiarchs; these were the 10 most honorable citizens of the region who were put in charge of organizing for the entire province the annual games in honor of the gods and the Emperor. And some of these leading officials were Paul's friends and sought to protect him! When the Gospel really takes root in a region, it touches public officials and civic leaders.

Wouldn't it be great to see that kind of transformation happen here? That's what we're praying for. We want what happened in Ephesus to happen here. We're inviting God to do it again, to transform Glenside-Abington-Roslyn-Willow Grove, indeed all of Philadelphia! But don't forget:

4. the personal opposition that arose in Ephesus (28-41) That day there was a riot against Paul, but they couldn't find him, so they dragged his two companions into court and the crowd shouted for two hours. It could have turned really ugly and sometimes it does. Sometimes the enemies that Satan mobilizes against the growing church get pretty violent. However, in this case the Lord used a sensible city clerk to quiet the crowd, to tell them they were endangering themselves through their own irrational behavior and send them away. Satan does not give up his turf easily. Our brothers and sisters all over the world suffer persecution in various forms right now. If you really want to see our town transformed and multitudes come to Christ, expect it. It will come in one form or another. Be ready. But at the same time trust that the Lord will make a way through it all!

A pastor in Myanmar was accosted by police, mercilessly beaten in front of his wife and 2-year-old daughter, then left bound overnight in front of the village chief's house. The next morning, he was taken to jail, where he boldly spoke to guards and inmates about Jesus. He was released after his congregation prayed for him and appealed to authorities, and he continued to proclaim Christ in the community. Twenty-three people came to Christ, and the church had to add meetings during the week to accommodate seekers. [Advance - 12/20/2000] The Book of Acts is being lived out all over again in our day by our brethren in all the corners of the earth. Let's determine to ask God not to allow America to be the exception! Let's renew our determination to pray for transformation of our community, no matter what the cost.

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts

Paul Refuses To Avoid Suffering - 20:1-21:16

After staying for two years in Ephesus on his third missionary journey, Paul left after the riot of chapter 19 and headed back up to visit the churches in Macedonia that he had planted on his second journey and then swung down into Greece to Corinth where he hung out for three months, before heading back north to Philippi. Along the way he has been picking up both a love offering from each of the churches given to help the poor churches in the land of Judea who were suffering [we read about it in 2 Cor. 8-9], and also representatives from many of those churches to accompany him there. From there he sailed to Troas, where we pick up the story this morning because in this passage, we get two important:

I. Two Glimpses Into The Life Of The Early Church At Troas we get a firsthand:

1. a look at a local church meeting (20:6-12) In its essence, it is no different from ours this morning, a group of believers gathered on the first day of the week to celebrate the risen Christ around the preaching of the Word of God and the celebration of the Lord's Supper. But outwardly it was vastly different. Just think about:

a. the circumstances of their meeting They met at night. Why? They had no illusions of Sunday being the Sabbath day; in their culture it was a work day like every other day. Some were slaves; many worked for others and they simply were not free until evening. They had no building of their own, but they had an upper level room in a house where they gathered faithfully each week to worship and to share an evening meal. And if the truth were told, the gatherings of much of the church as it is being planted around the world today look a whole lot more like Troas than they do like Glenside! Picture a church in Jalalabad in Kyrgyzstan. It has 19 people and they sit on tushuks on the floor in the main room of a house. It's typical of the rural church movement there. Our partner Urias down in Babo in Irian Jaya and his group of 30 meet in a hut. So much of what we associate with church, like buildings and pews and stained glass and 11 AM on Sunday morning, are all cultural practices we've inherited and not really inherent to the church, so when we take the Gospel to the ends of the earth, we have to be careful not to take our Western cultural forms with it! And even here, we have to be careful not to insist too hard on things that are merely cultural tradition (like our music and worship styles, for instance) and think that our way of meeting is the only way or the best way. Anyway, also note:

b. their humanness and their dedication There was nothing perfect or ideal about the early church. They were not super-Christians, but were just like us. Their preaching ran on too long. It was hot in the room and there were lots of smoky lamps and at least one person fell fast asleep and probably there were more. He just happened to be sitting on the window sill, trying to keep cool. But do note how important being together was to them. They had been at work all day until sunset. Then they came together and they stayed up till midnight to worship and then up the rest of the night eating and fellowshiping together and they left worship to GO to work again! They were serious about their need to be together as a church body. Thousands of Christians in Korea get up at 4 AM, 5 AM or 6 AM to go to prayer meetings every day before work. The early believers in Jalalabad in Kyrgyzstan met in the middle of the night at first to avoid detection and persecution by the community, just as many house churches must do in China. Around the world the young churches like this can teach us a real lesson by their dedication to practicing their faith. It is really life to them, not just one more thing in their schedule. And maybe that's why so often:

c. the power of God is displayed in their midst Poor Eutychus died from that fall, but God restored his life in answer to Paul's prayer. Powerful acts of God like that are not uncommon in the emerging church even today as we talked about last week in studying Ephesus. God is still pleased to confirm His reality in mighty ways as His people call upon Him.

At any rate Paul and his party sailed on along the coast to Assos, Mitylene, Kios, Samos, and then to Miletus. Paul didn't want to get stuck at Ephesus again by visiting there, so he sent for the elders of the church he had appointed while he was there and asked them to meet him at Miletus one last time to say goodbye, and through this meeting we get:

2. a look at the ministry of an elder (20:17-35) This is Paul's message to those elders and by extension to church leaders everywhere. In it we have both:

a. the example of Paul and the admonition of Paul. The first responsibility of any elder, any pastor, any leader is to live what he teaches, to be a living example to those under his care. Paul was an example first of:

(1) sincerity and humility (17-19a) He lived as a slave to God, as God's servant. He wasn't in it for money or prestige. He was real. He cried; He wept. And he did in humility, never looking for any credit for himself, for any applause. His only desire was that Jesus would be glorified. Then in his ministry he was an example of:

(2) perseverance, boldness and balance (19b-21) He didn't quit at the first sign of trouble but continued for two years in spite of threats and plots by the Jews. Twice he says he didn't hesitate to share anything with them that was needed, even if it was difficult or hard to hear. And in verse 27 he says he declared the whole counsel of God, not biased, not focused only on one area to the neglect of others, but balanced teaching. In his personal life he was an example of:

(3) honesty, industry and generosity (33-35) He supported himself with his own hands by making tents each day. He worked hard and was honest in all his business dealings. He didn't look to get from people, but instead displayed a spirit of generosity; he was always giving to those in need, the poor, the sick, the helpless. What an example Paul is for those of us involved in the leadership of the church and the work of the ministry. Elders, teachers, leaders, I pray that each of our lives may constantly reflect these very things. Let's look at our hearts. Could we say this to our people, "You know how I lived the whole time I was with you!"? Then here we also have:

b. the admonition of Paul to those who are elders. We have two directives, first:

(1) to pasture the flock (28) We're to be shepherds who feed our sheep, that is, who lead them to green pastures for spiritual nourishment and still waters for spiritual drink. That's way more than just teaching them. It involves caring for them, praying with them, encouraging them, guiding them. It means picking them up when they're wounded and comforting them when they're sad and searching for them when they start to go astray. It means sitting alongside them in hospital emergency rooms, going with them to the cemetery, and listening to their deepest hurts and fears. It's kind of like being a parent! And our second directive is:

(2) to protect the flock (29-31) Wolves will come in among the sheep. False teachers who will distort the truth and try to lead people astray. Some will arise right from within the body. But we elders are the preservers of the true faith that was delivered once and for all. It's our job to warn our sheep when they're being led astray into popular religion, to protect them from the boatload of lies that are out there

Elders and leaders, we have our work cut out for us! But the lesson I really wanted to get to in our text this morning is:

II. An Important Lesson About Facing Suffering that we can see in Paul's life at this point. There were:

1. two things Paul knew with certainty (20:22-23, 25) First, he knew that:

a. God wanted him to go to Jerusalem It was an overwhelming conviction. He says he is literally "bound" in the Spirit to go. He knew with certainty this was God's will. The Spirit told him to go there and he was compelled to obey. He had to deliver the offering he had collected to the church there. But he also knew that:

b. suffering awaited him there when he arrived The same Holy Spirit told him that hardships and prison were waiting there for him. He was going to jail. He was going to suffer. This fact was confirmed to him repeatedly everywhere he stopped. People would tell him the Spirit had showed them the same thing. One prophet declared that he would be bound, tied up by the Jews and handed over to the Romans.

Now that's an awful position to be in, to know that obeying God means walking straight into suffering. But you and I are also put into that position in life at key points, aren't we? There comes that moment when you know God wants you to be honest and to tell the truth, but you know it will cost you your job (or in some countries maybe your life!). There's that moment when God's called you to serve in some foreign place, but you know that going means the pain of leaving loved ones and maybe living in a difficult culture or climate where life will be hard. There's that moment when you know that standing up for what you believe will draw the criticism and ridicule of everyone in the room or maybe their anger and animosity. Now there are:

2. three temptations that come when we know that we face suffering The first is simply:

a. to deliberately disobey God to avoid the pain of suffering, to turn like Jonah and run the other way, to say "I'm not doing that! There's no way!" It is to choose, unlike Moses, to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season rather than endure affliction with the people of God. It is to choose me and my needs and my safety and my protection over God. That's a pretty obvious temptation, but there are others that are more subtle. One is:

b. to confuse information with the direction of God After praying and embracing his friends Paul sailed on from Miletus to Cos, then Rhodes, then Patara, and he finally landed at Tyre (21:4). Now this is an interesting verse. In fact, based on this verse, some have said that Paul made a mistake, that the Holy Spirit was telling him not to go and he was disobedient. But I think the verse is just a one sentence summary of all that went on. These disciples also had been told by the Spirit that Paul would suffer in Jerusalem, but they assumed that meant he shouldn't go there! It's easy to assume that because you know it's going to hurt that God wouldn't want you to do it! "God couldn't possibly want me to do something that would hurt me that much!" It's a way of rationalizing our way around obedience. It's also easy:

c. to confuse the concern of friends with the wisdom of God Paul prayed with those folks and continued on to Ptolemais and then Caesarea, where Philip was still living with his four daughters (21:10-12). Agabus came to Antioch in chapter 11 and predicted a famine and it happened, remember? He spoke for God. Note he said the Jews will bind Paul and will hand him over. The Spirit had told him, not what might happen, but what WOULD happen. It's the most explicit information he's had yet. But all Paul's friends couldn't bear the thought of it and begged him not to go! It says "we," so even Luke was in on it! Your friends love you; your family loves you. And sometimes they love you so much they will beg you not to put yourself in harm's way, they'll beg you to spare yourself and them the pain of the suffering that will come. It's easy to confuse that with the voice of God, to wonder whether He's changed His mind and is telling you NOT to go through these dear ones.

How in the world do you proceed? Do you press on to your Jerusalem when everybody's telling you not to go? Well, Paul's response shows us:

3. the basic conviction we must have in order to persevere He told the Ephesians this:

a. we must value our life only according to His purpose (20:24) The Living Bible puts it like this: But life is worth nothing unless I use it for doing the work assigned me by the Lord Jesus--the work of telling others the Good News about God's mighty kindness and love. My life is worth nothing if I use it to serve myself, if I use it to pursue pleasure and stay safe and pursue my own goals and die happy. The only true value it has depends upon whether I lay it down to accomplish the purpose God has designed for it. Shortly after September 11th, the international director of People International, Clive Pritchard, sent a message to everyone stationed throughout Central Asia at a time when most other agencies were pulling out their people. He wrote, "If we truly want to deal with the refugee problem and destroy terrorism at its very roots then we need to send in Christian workers to the very breeding grounds of these 'reigns of terror.' Central Asia needs more Christian workers. Bombs and rockets will in the end only create greater hatred and more vengeance and killing. The Gospel is the only thing that can change people and change nations. The price of missionary advance in Central Asia will be very costly because it means that Christians will need to move from their comfort zones of the Western world and give their lives for the Gospel... When people come to Christ, lives change, communities are affected and even whole nations develop a new thrust and direction. This is radical yet the Gospel is radical, Christ is a radical Savior. He died so that people from all nations, tribes and tongues may experience new life... Officially I need to encourage you to be wise and not take any risks and even to ask you to come home if the situation gets too difficult. However, I must confess that I believe that when difficulties, hardships and danger come upon the people of Central Asia, that is where we ought to be. I want to encourage each of you to stay if at all possible, for these coming days may give you a unique opportunity to share Christ in a very real way. To put the same thing in another, even more blunt way, as Paul did to the folks at Caesarea:

b. we must be ready to die for the name of Jesus (21:13-14) To obey Jesus, to follow Jesus, is worth more than life itself. That's a radical thing to say! That's a radical thing to believe. How can we say such a thing and plunge headlong into certain suffering? Well, Paul knew:

4. the tremendous consolation we have as we choose to obey

a. Jesus Himself has been there for us Paul was in exactly the same situation as Jesus was. Mk. 10:32-33, They were on their way up to Jerusalem, with Jesus leading the way, and the disciples were astonished, while those who followed were afraid. Again he took the Twelve aside and told them what was going to happen to him. "We are going up to Jerusalem," he said, "and the Son of Man will be betrayed to the chief priests and teachers of the law. They will condemn him to death and will hand him over to the Gentiles. And Luke comments, ...He resolutely set His face to go to Jerusalem - Lk. 9:51. Paul went to Jerusalem because Jesus went to Jerusalem. Paul went to bonds and affliction because Jesus went to a cross. Jesus wrestled over it in the garden, but He chose to go all the way to the cross to save me. How can I do any less for Him? C.T. Studd, the night before he was to sail for the Congo, had a man try to dissuade him from leaving his family and going off to what was almost certain death in the missionary graveyard of Africa. His reply has become the motto of the mission he founded: If Jesus Christ be God and died for me, then no sacrifice can be too great for me to make for Him. John Piper explains it like this: "When Christ calls a man, he bids him come and die. This is simply a paraphrase of Mark 8:34, 'If any man would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me.' To take up a cross and follow Jesus means to join Jesus on the Calvary road with a resolve to suffer and die with him. The cross is not a burden to bear. It is an instrument of pain and execution...It would be like saying, 'Take up this rope and carry it to the gallows.' The domestication of cross-bearing into coughs and cranky spouses takes the radical thrust out of Christ's call. He is calling every believer to 'renounce everything that he has' and to 'hate his own life' and to take the road of obedience joyfully, no matter the loss on this earth. Following Jesus means that wherever obedience requires it, we will accept betrayal and rejection and beating and mockery and crucifixion and death. Jesus gives us the assurance that if we will follow him to Golgotha during all the Good Fridays of this life, we will also rise with him on the last Easter day of the resurrection. 'Whoever loses his life for my sake and the gospel's will save it'. 'He who hates his life in this world will keep it for eternal life'. [Let The Nations Be Glad - John Piper, pp. 74-75] Sure, we'd rather avoid suffering. Yet our call is to persevere in obeying Him no matter what the cost may be. It's radical! But if we sneak a peek ahead at what happened when Paul obeyed, you'll see our consolation in all this:

b. Jesus Himself will be there with us - Acts 23:11 Jesus will stand near us too. When we go through the waters, He WILL be with us...

What is it in your life that you're tempted to run away from? Where is it that God is calling you to obey but the price looks too big, too costly? What is there that you know you need to face, to give up, to let go of, to hang in with, because that is His will? Do it. Don't run from suffering. His promise is this. He will be with you always even to the end of the age!

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts

God Protects His Servant - 21:17-22:29

With Paul completing his third journey, his missionary career (as we think of it) has now come to an end. But, as we saw last time, he knew it and was prepared to face suffering and imprisonment. In China, I'm told, many of the house church leaders have had this same attitude over the years. They have expected to be arrested sooner or later and have seen it simply as a transfer of their ministry. If arrested, they simply serve a new audience inside the prison and reach those inside for Christ until they are released. That's exactly what is about to happen to Paul in this next section of Acts. He's transferring from the church planting wing of the church to the prison ministry section! As we begin at verse 17, we read first of:

I. Paul's Arrival At Jerusalem - 21:17-26 The year is around 58 AD and things have changed a lot in Jerusalem while Paul has been away these last years. It is a time of turmoil in the land, a time filled with violence and insurrection. There are Zealots and daggersmen and false messiahs on the scene. Jewish patriotism is building toward the revolt that brought about the destruction of Jerusalem twelve years later. The Romans are edgy about keeping control. And this whole situation has even impacted the church. Thousands of Jews have believed once again in the city, but they are all still zealous for the Law, still going to the Temple and offering sacrifices, while they're praising Jesus as the fulfillment of it all. It was not unlike the moment we're in today where there is danger in the air and patriotism for America is running strong even in the hearts of believers. Well, in this text there is:

1. a lesson about false impressions between brethren that could be very helpful to us. We often have false impressions of one another in the body of Christ and:

a. we must guard against them carefully because they so easily arise. Paul has spent his last 10 years or so living out among the Gentiles. He has been up to Jerusalem eight years earlier to press for the unpopular decision at that time that the Gentiles don't need to be circumcised and keep the Law. These last years had taken him all the way to Macedonia and Greece for long periods and it didn't take much for these Jewish believers to assume that during this time, not only was he telling Gentile believers that they didn't have to keep the law, but he was telling the same thing to Jews who believed and he himself had stopped acting Jewish and was living like a Gentile. It doesn't take much for other believers to make wrong assumptions about us, especially if they don't know us or have contact with us very much. We easily judge and make assumptions about one another! I'll give you a personal example. For years I drove up and down Old York Rd. in Abington and passed by St. Ann's Episcopal Church. I saw the name and just assumed that there was a liberal congregation where nobody really knew Jesus personally. But it turns out that their pastor was a young man whom God saved out of the liberalism of his denomination and set on fire for Jesus Christ. He became my good friend until God took him home. I made a wrong assumption; I've asked forgiveness for it. We have to guard our thoughts toward one another in the body of Christ carefully. But not only that, when there are wrong impressions:

b. we must take steps to correct them because they so easily divide us! In Paul's case, James and the others recommended that Paul do something to show them they were wrong and that he did not just throw out the Law and look down upon them for keeping it. They suggested he participate in a purification ceremony at the Temple with some other men, which he gladly agreed to do. When there are false impressions, letting them continue only leads to division; we need to take steps to correct them to maintain unity. And often it is not so much words that are needed as actions. So, in Paul's actions there's:

2. a lesson about accommodating brethren who differ It is so easy to say, "I don't care what other people think; I only answer to God!" and even to take some verses out of context to try to prove it, but that's not how Paul reacted and that's not the overwhelming teaching of the New Testament. For a key passage on this check out Rom. 14:13-15:3. Both this passage and Paul's example in this case teach us that:

a. we must be willing to hold back from our personal liberty when that is necessary to keep from offending others. It might mean sometimes not eating meat that's been sacrificed to idols if you live in Rome or Corinth. I don't know whether Paul learned to like pork out there in Greece, but you can bet he chose not to eat it around his brothers in Jerusalem! I don't know whether he made tents out there on Saturdays like everybody else did or not, but you can bet he didn't do it around his brothers in Jerusalem! There are times I need to curb what I might otherwise do or say because I love my brothers and sisters and don't want them to think evil of me, even if they would be mistaken! And conversely it means that:

b. we must also be willing to go beyond our personal necessity when it will benefit others. Paul didn't need to go through that purification ritual. It cost him a decent sum of money and it took seven days of his time. It was really going out of his way to make the point that he still had respect for the law and was willing as a Jew to follow its rules. But He paid the price. Why? Because it was about more than just him personally. There was a big rift brewing in the church as a whole between Jewish and Gentile Churches. It would be really easy to just divide and separate and let each do their own thing. But the unity of the body was worth it to him. There are times when unity with our brothers and sisters is worth doing a lot of things we might not otherwise do!

So, did it work? Well, I think this concession on Paul's part may have been the key that opened the door for the Jewish believers to consider and listen to his writings, which show that it's OK to let go of the Jewish system of law. Whether it was Paul or whoever that wrote the letter to the Hebrews, to these very Jewish Christians, a few years later, it urged them to come outside the camp, to leave their Jewish ways and practices and not cling to the Temple. And they seem to have been ready to listen because a dozen years later, the Christians in Jerusalem left their city, abandoned the Temple and went to Pella across the Jordan, just before Jerusalem was put under siege by Rome. Those patriotic zealous Jews in Jerusalem were all destroyed, but many of the believers were spared then, perhaps because Paul made this concession now that made them open to listen to his voice. Something worth thinking about, isn't it! Now in the next section we see:

II. Paul's Arrest In Jerusalem - 21:27-40 and in it we have:

1. a lesson about God's protection in danger (27-36) Look at:

a. the opportunity Satan used against Paul (27-29) He was in the Temple going about this purification business, being quiet for once in his life. But there were some Jews visiting from Ephesus who knew Paul from there and already hated him, plus they also knew this Trophimus guy they had seen with Paul in the city and saw their opportunity to get rid of Paul. Defiling the Temple was the one capital charge the Jews could enforce. There were big signs up which said that any Gentile could not proceed past a certain point under pain of death. So, they screamed that Paul had brought a Greek into the Holy Place and that did it. Every Jew in sight grabbed him, drug him out and began to beat him! You might be amazed at the kinds of opportunities Satan will find to use against you in one fashion or another. But note something strange here:

b. God divinely kept the mob from killing him (30-31a) Now let me ask you: how hard is it for a mob to kill you? It takes only seconds. Two or three guys hold you and another one strangles you or bashes your head with a stone or they all stomp you to death. 60 seconds and you're in glory. But not this crowd. They kept beating Paul and "trying to kill him" for long minutes, long enough for a whole crowd to gather, long enough for the local commander to hear the ruckus and assemble his soldiers and, if you read ahead, Paul doesn't even appear to be severely injured! God shielded him from their blows! And to really top it off:

c. God rescued him by a troupe of Roman soldiers (31-36) The commander who is in the Fortress of Antonia on the corner of the Temple hears the commotion, sees the mob and assembles centurions, captains of 100 who grab their men and weapons and down the steps they come right into the crowd, dozens of them pushing and shoving Jews out of the way. They're God's emergency ambulance come to rescue Paul and they literally carry him out of the midst of the boiling crowd on their shoulders back up those steps to the barracks. Doesn't God have class?! Listen, if you're in danger, God is not limited in the means by which He can save you! He can use invisible angels to shield you from a bullet or even your very enemies to protect you in their jail if need be! Pioneer missionaries Bob and Catherine Smith were traveling around Kenya looking for a site to establish a new mission in 1932: Their truck bogged down in the mud, and they had to spend the night in an unpredictable African jungle. About midnight, aroused from sleep, Bob sensed a shaking of the ground. Gun in hand, he stepped outside the tent and was shocked to see 15 elephants moving toward him. He wondered if he, Catherine, and their two small children were to be killed before they even got their work started. He determined that he would do all he could to protect his family or die trying. As Bob checked the chamber of his rifle, he braced himself to fire at the oncoming elephants, knowing that there was no way he could kill all 15 jungle giants by himself. Before setting up their cots in the tent, Bob and Catherine had cooked supper over a campfire and piled the utensils and tin plates on a little table just inside the tent. As Bob backed up to prepare himself, he bumped the tent wall and tipped over the table: pots, pans, and plates crashed to the ground. [Immediately] the elephants, as if on command, suddenly turned and marched back into the dark jungle. Bob immediately breathed a prayer of thanks. Later Bob met a seasoned hunter who said, "Smith, if you are ever face to face with wild elephants, bang pans together and they will run every time." [Evangelical Advocate, Jan 1996. Page 12.] He uses slingshots against giants and pots and pans against elephants. God is not limited in the means He has to protect and keep you! I hope that's reassuring to you in these days of fear in our nation! but here's also:

2. a lesson about our reaction to danger (37-40) Notice that:

a. Paul responded in a polite and gentle manner He calmly asked, "May I speak?" He didn't yell and scream like I would have. Plus:

b. he did not return angry behavior or accusations He didn't accuse his attackers and demand protection or defend himself. He didn't curse and call them names. He reacted like Peter told us to in 1 Pet. 3:9, Do not repay evil with evil or insult with insult, but with blessing, because to this you were called so that you may inherit a blessing. He actually:

c. he sought the welfare of those who were against him He asked the captain to speak to the crowd. Why? He saw it as an opportunity to share Christ with them. He wanted to see them saved!

Man, that is against everything that is in my flesh! If a driver passes me on the right and nearly hits me, my first words are not, "Bless him, Lord!" Are yours? When I see Mullah Muhamed Omar on TV, my first thoughts are not "Save Him Lord!", are yours? Jesus' first words from the cross were, "Father forgive them..." Maybe we need to live more out of Jesus' power! Well in chapter 22 we have:

III. Paul's Testimony To The Jews - 22:1-29 He quieted the crowd and spoke to them in their own Aramaic language. We won't read it but here's a quick:

1. the outline of what Paul shared Point 1:

a. I am a good Jew (1-5) I was born a Jew, trained by Rabbi Gamaliel, zealous for the law and I was so much like you that I arrested and killed Jews who believed in Jesus. Point 2:

b. I saw a vision of Jesus that blinded me (6-11) I saw this light and got knocked to the ground and I heard a heavenly voice speak to me and it was Jesus and He told me I was persecuting HIM! Point 3:

c. I was ministered to by a Jew and my sight restored (12-16) I went back to Jerusalem and this guy Ananias came, a guy who observed the law devoutly and was respected by all the Jews and when he said, "Brother Saul, receive your sight!", I could see! God did a miracle and that's why I became a follower of Jesus! Point 4: At first:

d. I sought to work among the Jews (17-20) I thought my greatest service would be in Jerusalem. The Jews knew me. They knew what I was. They could see the change in me. That's what I wanted to do; that's where I thought I would be effective, but God told me they wouldn't listen and (Point 5):

e. God chose to send me to the Gentiles (21) It was God's idea. And the second they heard this, it was blasphemy to their ears and they began to scream and it was the end of the opportunity. But let's not miss:

2. some important lessons found in this text First of all:

a. we can shape our testimony to be understood by our audience Note how colored with Jewishness Paul makes it. He has told his story before and he'll tell it again in chapter 26, but it'll be slightly different, not in the actual facts, but in what he chooses to include or leave out or emphasize. A Greek Diana-worshipper in Ephesus could care less where Paul was brought up or whether he was circumcised or trained by Gamaliel. They just need to hear about a God who's alive and appears to you and that isn't like the stone statue they worship! An abandoned single mom may need to hear about a heavenly Father who loves her while a man who's enjoying his sin may need to hear about a Holy God before whom we must all stand. We can ask God to shape our words so that His Spirit can use them to strike the specific heart of the listener.

b. God does not call us to abandon our culture Paul never stopped being a Jew. Nor did he call on Jews to stop being Jewish, but simply to believe in Jesus. Nor did he call on Greeks to stop being Greek and become Jews, but simply to believe in Jesus. His goal is to send most of us back into our cultures to plant a church that is a true expression of that culture, but that's another story. Third:

c. God may be preparing us for a purpose we cannot imagine We always have it figured out what God ought to do with us, just like Paul did. He thought he was equipped to minister to Jews and God sent him to the ends of the earth where there weren't any. We think God ought to do this or that with us and sometimes He surprises us. When I was 18, I told God the last thing on earth I wanted to ever do was be a pastor. I hated crowds; I hated dressing up. I didn't like talking in front of groups. But a year or so later I was preaching every Sunday. You tell God he made a mistake; it wasn't my idea! Don't limit Him in your life either! Then you'll notice in Acts:

d. the repeated rejection of Jesus by the Jewish people as a nation (22-23) Even after they rejected His Son, God sent His apostles back to them time and again and repeatedly say "No". This is virtually their last chance and again they violently reject. There is nothing left but for God to set them aside as a nation in his plan and go after the Gentiles who are responding. Twelve years later it happened and from AD 70 to 1948 there was not even a homeland for the Jews. As Jesus predicted, They will fall by the sword and will be taken as prisoners to all the nations. Jerusalem will be trampled on by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled. - Luke 21:24. And so it has been to our own generation. Lastly there's a quick lesson here about:

e. the need to have all the facts before we act (24-29) The commander figures he can beat the truth out of Paul and nearly does, without taking the time to find out that Paul holds Roman citizenship! He himself would have violated Roman law and been liable to severe punishment. So, it pays to get all the facts before you act. Boy, have I learned that lesson over and over again through the years.

So, in the end, God protected Paul again. First, it was through miraculous intervention, then through the Roman soldiers carrying him out of the crowd and now through his own privilege of citizenship. You'll see it a few more times as we continue. And that confidence with which Paul faced danger can still be yours and mine today. The following letter was sent home from Heather Mercer, one of the two Christian workers who were being held by the Taliban in Kabul: "I have seen more clearly in my time here what an exciting hour this world is in; but equally or more so what a dangerous hour. This helps to keep me sober and thankful... There are times as Paul said to his Corinthian friends that this pressure has been so great we've even sensed the sentence of death within ourselves, but even that is so we trust not in man nor in ourselves, but in Him who raises the dead... We know He is our only hope and deliverance; therefore, we are so grateful to all who call upon Him. Please remember this nation as well. Just like us, they need a miracle as well. We believe for a new day, a glorious day, to dawn for these precious people... Though at times everything in me screams otherwise, we'll soon see the purpose and glory in this mad situation. May it be to glorify our friend and to rebuild this desperate nation."

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts The Faith Shared Before Governors - 22:30-24:27

Jesus made this prediction to His disciples during the last week of His life and interestingly enough, it reads almost like a catalog of Paul's life which certainly fulfills it, But before all this, they will lay hands on you and persecute you. They will deliver you to synagogues and prisons, and you will be brought before kings and governors, and all on account of my name. This will result in your being witnesses to them. But make up your mind not to worry beforehand how you will defend yourselves. For I will give you words and wisdom that none of your adversaries will be able to resist or contradict. - Lk. 21:12-15. Paul had already had angry hands laid on him and been run out of town. He'd been castigated in synagogues and locked in prison. But now came the time to stand before governors, before those governing authorities who ruled the land. Jesus said that the purpose of standing before them would be that of a witness to them and that's exactly how Paul saw and understood his situation. As we pick up the story, immediately after his arrest in the Temple in Jerusalem and speaking to the crowd:

I. Paul Stands Before The Sanhedrin (22:30-23:10) The Roman commander decides to assemble the Sanhedrin, the ruling council of the Jews the next morning to see whether he can figure out what Paul has done that he is so hated by the Jews. It doesn't start out well, but we can learn a lesson from:

1. Paul's fleshly mistake: responding in anger (22:30-23:5) It's good for us to see this. Even Paul was not perfect. He had flesh and sometimes he responded out of it just like we do. He'd been away for long years and didn't know the current High Priest (who evidently didn't have his robes on that morning). So, when the guy ordered him to be smacked in the mouth, he got mad and called him a "whitewashed wall", a hypocrite! It's pretty natural; there isn't one of us who doesn't make the fleshly mistake of responding in anger sometimes. That doesn't excuse it. When we feel anger rising within us, we need to immediately turn to the Spirit and ask Him to control us so that we respond in the Spirit and not in the flesh. Yet the good part is this: In this outburst, Paul was insulting the ruler of his people which was itself against Scripture, but the moment he realized it, he was convicted and confessed it as sin and asked forgiveness. That's what God is really looking for! That's why I think David was a man after God's own heart; it's not that he was sinless (far from it!), but when a Nathan pointed his sin out to him, he was convicted and confessed it and repented of it immediately. God is looking for the kind of people who are not too proud to confess their sins, little or big! Now it's ironic, but in the same scene as Paul's fleshly mistake, we can see:

2. Paul's divine wisdom: dividing his enemies (23:6-10) It became clear to Paul in that moment that he was not even going to get a chance to speak, much less a fair hearing. And now his blunder had killed any shred of a chance he did have. But at that moment, just as Jesus promised, both wisdom and words were given to him. It occurred to him suddenly, what he had always known, that half of this crowd were Pharisees who already believed in the resurrection and the other half were Sadducees who were basically the liberal modernists of the time and didn't believe in anything supernatural. And he knew how volatile an issue this was to them both, so he simply identified himself as a Pharisee with a firm belief in resurrection and like the Ammonites, Moabites and men of Mt. Seir who came against Israel in Jehoshaphat's day, they fought against one another and killed each other! Divide and conquer! It's a strategy Satan uses against the church all the time! We go out with a common purpose to serve Christ and end up fighting with each other over our pet doctrines and he wins! The enemy is always splitting churches and dividing brethren, usually over nothing worthwhile, and we don't even see who's behind it! But if we could pray for Divine wisdom and power to divide the enemies of the Gospel against each other, instead of them being united in fighting us, how the cause of Christ could go forward!

So, Paul had to be rescued from the Sanhedrin themselves who actually became violent in their disagreement over him! And now we move ahead to look at the next incident where:

II. Paul Is Rescued From His Enemies (23:11-34) First, let's notice:

1. God's comforting decree (11) Jesus himself appeared to Paul once again that night, just as He had at Corinth, to comfort and reassure him and give him courage to go on. And He gave him a decree: "You will testify in Rome. I am sending you to Rome." I'm sure Paul was wondering if this was it, if the end was in sight, if he would end up on a cross outside Jerusalem because of the mob calling for his blood, just like Jesus did. But Jesus was telling him, "No, these enemies will not harm you and no matter what the circumstances may seem to tell you, I'm sending you to Rome. Believe and trust Me!" But now we move from Paul's cell to the chambers of the Jews where:

2. Paul's enemies plot against him (12-15) More than 40 of them hate Paul so much that they are willing to give their own lives to kill him. They are willing to attack the Roman soldiers who guard him and will bring him from the barracks down into the council chambers; they are willing to face the wrath of Rome and die at the point of a spear or on a cross for treason in order to destroy Paul. They take an oath before God that they will neither eat nor drink again until they commit this murder! So, the chief priests and elders are ready to make their deadly request. But in the middle of it:

3. God reveals their plot (16-22) Paul had a young nephew at Jerusalem, whether living there with Paul's sister and family or studying there we don't know. But he loved his uncle and he overheard the formation of the deadly plot and he did the only thing he knew to do: he told Paul. Then he bravely repeated it to Lysias, the Roman commander, and as unlikely as it may seem, through the courage of this young lad:

4. God foils their plot (23-35) The commander takes the threat seriously; he's seen the violence against Paul twice already. So, he decides to send Paul out of town, to write a letter and send him to the next level up, to the Roman governor Festus who lived in Caesarea to the north. And so, that very night 470 soldiers guard Paul safely on his way out of the city and 400 of them walk while he rides! Lysias wasn't taking any chances! But isn't that ironic? First the Romans pull Paul out of the crowd and carry him on their shoulders to safety; now they give him an armed escort. Doesn't God have class!

Well, you can imagine how angry the Jews were in the morning when they found this out! Remember the king of Syria who got so mad when he wanted to destroy Israel back in Elisha's day? Every time he'd try something the Israelites would already know about it and anticipate it and it wouldn't work. And one of his generals told him, Elisha the prophet tells the King of Israel the words you speak in your bedroom! God would reveal to Elisha everything and foil the plans of the enemy! Here He did the same thing. The enemy had a deadly plot 40 grown men strong, but God revealed it by through one courageous young man and foiled their scheme entirely! Let me ask you, whose plan stood? Jesus' plan or man's plot? "You're going to Rome!" or "You're dying today before I eat another bite!" I'm reminded of Psalm 2, Why do the nations conspire and the peoples plot in vain? The kings of the earth take their stand and the rulers gather together against the LORD and against his Anointed One. "Let us break their chains," they say, "and throw off their fetters." The One enthroned in heaven laughs; the Lord scoffs at them. No man can go against what God has decreed and win! Oh, is there comfort in that! The world can amass all its resources against you to say, "No you're not; you die right here!" but if God says "You're going to Rome", you're going to Rome and nothing on this earth will stop you! Last week I read you a letter from Heather Mercer, one of the eight Christian workers who were held by the Taliban in Afghanistan. She said, "Sometimes like Paul we feel the sentence of death within ourselves, but we trust in God who raises the dead!" When the Taliban abandoned the city of Kabul, they decided to take these prisoners with them and that was disturbing news. We could only imagine they would be used as human shields or be executed as a means of revenge against America. But thousands were praying. Their home church in Texas held a 24 hour a day prayer vigil for weeks. That Wednesday morning at our pastors' prayer meeting we begged God to set them free, even as they were in transit, that He would open the door of their prison like He did for Peter and let them walk out. And then Wednesday night the report came on the news that US Special forces through tips on the ground had extricated them about 2:30 in the morning their time, somewhere in the country outside Kabul and they were free and safe! Hallelujah! If God says you're going to Rome, you're going to Rome and if God says you're going home, you're going home, no matter what your enemies say! Take comfort in that! He's in control! He will complete His purposes for you and you are invincible until He chooses to call you home! Well, as we move into chapter 24, now:

III. Paul Stands Before Governor Felix (Ch. 24) Jesus had said, You will stand before governors and here that is fulfilled. Now Felix' title was that of procurator; his job was to "procure" funds for the Emperor by whatever means necessary. Tacitus wrote about him, "He reveled in cruelty and lust and wielded the power of a king with the mind of a slave." He enticed his wife Drusilla to leave her first husband and marry him and he often employed "daggersmen" to assassinate people for his own purposes. This is the character of the man before whom Paul now stands as the representative of Roman justice! First in this chapter we see:

1. Paul's public trial before Felix Look at:

a. the accusations made against him (1-9) Their fancy lawyer, after buttering up Felix, called Paul in the NIV a "troublemaker", but the Greek says literally "a disease"! A blight, a plague! Everywhere he goes he stirs people up; there are riots! He's a heretic, following a false and illegal religion, a sect, and he's a ringleader of it! And the specific charge is that he tried to desecrate our Holy Temple. Now before you dismiss those as false charges born out of hatred, let me point out that from the point of view of the unbelieving Jews, they're pretty much true. That's how they saw Paul and, believe it or not, that's pretty much how we are seen by many world governments and religious leaders even today! The government of China. The leaders of Muslim countries. The former Soviet countries. We're a spreading plague they've had to contend with. We're an illegal and unrecognized religion trying to win converts. Every place we go there are riots against us by the people or people complain about our influence. They would rather be rid of us! Even in America, I'm sure we are seen in a similar light by some of the more radical groups. We're a trouble-causing problem that needs to be eliminated! So, how on earth do you change that viewpoint? How do you help people who see us that way to see that we want to bring them the life-changing message of Jesus Christ in love? Well, you probably won't do it by making a public defense. In verses 10-21 you have:

b. the defense he presented (10-21) Instead of reading it, let me just sum it up for you. Paul says:

(1) there was no time (10-11) "I only got to Jerusalem 12 days ago. I had no time to raise trouble and start an insurrection."

(2) I made no trouble (12) "I was in the Temple, not arguing or even teaching, just being quiet."

(3) I believe no heresy (13-16) "I hold the same belief these men do that there will be a resurrection of the dead. They call us a sect, but we follow the God of Israel and respect all the Scriptures."

(4) I hold no animosity (17) against my own Jewish people. I had collected an offering which I was bringing back to help the poor in Jerusalem."

(5) there are no witnesses (18-19) "The Jews from Asia who hate me and who started this whole thing by screaming in the Temple aren't even here! These leaders who accuse me weren't even present. Eyewitnesses would tell you I wasn't causing any trouble." So:

(6) there was no crime (20-21) "I've already been tried before the Sanhedrin and even they found no crime in me; unless they want to accuse me of starting a fight between them by saying I believe in the resurrection!"

There really was no case and Felix knew it. But he didn't want to anger the Jews either, so he put off his decision and said he'd wait until the commander, Lysias, comes to tell the Roman version of the story. For the moment Paul was safe, but nobody was convinced. The only real way to change people's minds and hearts about Christianity is one on one. And in these last verses we see:

2. Paul's personal ministry to Felix (22-27) Now let me point out some things about Felix:

a. he knew the Way He was well-acquainted with Christians and had an accurate understanding. He knew they weren't insurrectionists and rebels. He also:

b. he knew the Jews He was married to one! He had been procurator for a while. He knew how they hated Christians and were jealous. He knew they had no real case. Over a period of 2 years:

c. he heard Paul often He would send for him repeatedly and let Paul talk to him about faith in Christ and about things like righteousness and self-control and the judgment to come. Some of that was out of greed; he hoped for a bribe. But some must have been something of a genuine interest. In fact:

d. he felt conviction He was an immoral man living in lust and adultery. The thought that one day he would stand before God to be judged scared him. He trembled. In his soul he knew it was true, but he wasn't ready to give up his sin so:

e. he put off making a decision Every time Paul started getting to his heart, he'd say "Enough for now..." and put it off. And the next time and the next time and so it went on for two whole years. And that whole time he left Paul sit in jail because he wanted to keep on the good side of the Jews.

Meanwhile he was involved in continual political intrigue and unscrupulous practices like hiring and supporting robbers. When a dispute at last broke out between the Jews and the Greeks at Caesarea, Felix settled it by military retaliation against the Jews and killing them, taking them prisoner or plundering their personal property. A delegation of Jews went to Rome to Nero, the Emperor, to complain and Felix was recalled to Rome and would have suffered severe punishment if his brother hadn't been in high favor with Nero just at that time. We don't know his end but we do know that he heard the truth repeatedly and put off receiving it to his eternal loss. Procrastination is the most serious thing a person can do once they've heard the truth. David Branon writes: "It's a good thing our local library gives a grace period before it starts charging for overdue books. My family checks out books by the dozen, and sometimes we forget to get them back on time. Recently one of my daughters passed the grace period--by more than three weeks. When I went to pay the fine, I asked if we could get credit for the grace period and pay just for the days after that. I was told, however, that once the grace period has elapsed, the full penalty is due." Oh listen, that's true spiritual!; once the grace period has elapsed, the full penalty is due. All of us only have so long to decide, so many opportunities to hear. And then either the opportunity goes away or we die or maybe Jesus will return. Either way, when the grace period is over, the full penalty is due! Now is the time; today is the day of salvation. That should move us to fervently pray for the unsaved people in our lives and in the world. But if you're here today and you're a procrastinator, listen, this is your day of grace. You know about the sinfulness of your own life and you know that Jesus died for you and you need to take Him as your Savior, and if you pass it by and think, "I'll come to Jesus later", by the time your heart is touched again, it may be too late! Take a lesson from Felix and receive Him right now!

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts

The Faith Shared Before A King - Chs. 25-26

You will be brought before kings and governors... - Lk. 21:12-15

We're nearing the end of our trip through Acts; next week will be our last study. As we enter chapter 25, Paul has been sitting in a prison in Caesarea for two whole years, because Felix, the Roman governor at that time, was a corrupt man and would not give him justice. But, as I shared with you, Felix's day in court also came and a new Procurator named Porcius Festus was sent by the Emperor to settle all the problems Felix had left. He appears to have been an honest and fair man, one who was concerned to get all the facts, to rule well and to uphold Roman law.

I. Paul Is Tried Before Governor Festus - Ch. 25 Festus wasted no time; he went right to work to quell the unrest with the Jews, but in the process notice how:

1. God divinely protects Paul again (1-5) Can you believe those guys? Two years have gone by but their hatred of Paul is so strong that the first issue on their docket with the new governor is an urgent request to get Paul back to Jerusalem for trial. And here they are again with a plot to risk their own lives and commit suicide by attacking Roman soldiers in order to kill him before he gets there! Hate is a real tenacious thing and it dies hard. But look how God protected Paul through Festus, who doesn't even realize he's doing it! Instead of doing them a favor, moved by the Spirit, he unwittingly says, "Nope, I'm going to Caesarea in a few days and you go with me there!" And Paul is rescued once again! Solomon wrote, The king's heart is in the hand of the LORD; he directs it like a watercourse wherever he pleases. - Prov 21:1. God is in control; even of the hearts of despots and tyrants, and He can use that divine control to protect His people! What a comfort that is! But He can also use other things, even things like the legal system of society, as we see in the next section where:

2. Paul directly appeals to Caesar (6-12) Now let's go back to verse 11 and think about two things that are evident here. First, notice:

a. his willingness to accept just punishment "If I am guilty, if I've done anything deserving death, I do not refuse to die." You know, that's not how our flesh works, is it? If I'm guilty, I have a good excuse. If I'm guilty I deserve a break. If I'm guilty I want to use the legal system to get me off anyway or at least to shield me from as many of the consequences as possible. Our flesh would be speeding, get a ticket for it and then go to court hoping the cop wouldn't show up and we'd get out of it, rather than pay the fine and take the points. But when the Spirit of God is in control of your life, he convicts you of sin in such a way that you're willing to admit it and you're willing to accept the just consequences. That's something to think about even in our relationships at home, isn't it! Taking responsibility for our actions. But the other thing to notice here about Paul is:

b. his valid use of the legal system In the Roman system every citizen had the right of appeal if he did not feel he had a fair trial. He could appeal directly to the Emperor for his final decision on the case. In this case, it was Paul's only option. Festus was trying to press him to go back to Jerusalem because he wanted to do something to quiet the Jews, but Paul knew too well what that meant. His only out was to appeal to Caesar and he used that right. And there's nothing wrong with that. When you have a legitimate complaint, when you're falsely accused, and you have rights under the legal system of your country, there's nothing wrong with using them. In fact, through this appeal God was at work doing two things. First, He protected Paul again from the Jews and their plot, but more importantly God had already promised Paul that he was going to Rome and through this appeal he got there (and didn't even have to pay for the trip!). The churches of Kyrgyzstan are working hard to become registered legal entities in their country so that they can have legal rights and protections. There is a society of Christian lawyers that is forming all across Central Asia from Turkey to China whose goal is that very thing, to obtain for the emerging churches the rights and protections of their society under law. Now, Festus has no choice but to send Paul to Rome, yet he is faced with a genuine dilemma; there are no clearly definable violations of Roman law to charge him with! So

3. Festus deliberately appeals to King Agrippa (13-27) Now let me explain the family tree a little bit. This is King Herod Agrippa II. His dad was Herod Agrippa I, you know, the really proud guy we met back in chapter 12 who was eaten by worms and died! And his grandfather was King Herod who tried to snooker the wise men and ended up killing all the infants in Bethlehem. Great heritage! He ruled the area northeast of Palestine for Rome, though he was a practicing Jew and, because he had a friendship with the Imperial court, he had obtained the privilege of appointing the actual High Priest in Jerusalem. So, when Festus arrived as the new procurator on the block, King Agrippa came to visit him along with his sister Bernice, with whom he was living incestuously. And Festus decided to ask his advice about this Paul problem. There are two lessons in this part of the story. The first is:

a. a lesson about seeking counsel (13-22) Festus was a Roman; he knew nothing about the Jews and even less of Christians. He could see no crime, just a petty religious quarrel, yet the Jews are demanding the death penalty and Paul is appealing to the Emperor and he has no charge to write. So, to his credit, he was willing to admit his own ignorance, to say "I am at a loss...", to admit "I don't understand, I don't know what to do". And then to ask somebody for counsel and advice. That's such a healthy thing, but sometimes so hard for us. We'll keep on driving for hours before we'll stop and ask for directions just to prove to the wife we're not lost. We'll struggle for an hour over the math problem rather than call someone and admit we can't get it and ask for help. Or more seriously, we'll press boldly on with our life falling down in shambles all around us, insisting, "I'm fine, I know what I'm doing." Rather than admit that we're at a loss and need help and invite someone with wisdom and experience into our lives to help us. Now, I wouldn't have picked Herod for an advisor, but that's not the point of this story. He did turn out to give Festus good advice in the end and Festus actually had a whole group of advisors to help him. But as we continue there is:

b. a lesson about true greatness (23-27) Agrippa and Bernice entered with great pomp and circumstance. They were famous, well-known. They had a position of greatness in their day. He was called King. Men bowed down and called him, "Your highness, your excellency, your majesty..." But 2000 years later who remembers them? Who were they? What did they do? It seems ironic to me that today, their prisoner in chains, the Apostle Paul, is known, respected and read by more than 2 billion people in the world, while they are only known as two insignificant people who happened to cross his path for an hour on this particular day and through that coincidence got their names recorded in Scripture. Didn't Jesus say that many who are first shall be last and the last first? There are lots of people who aspire to be somebody, who want the applause, the spotlight, the clothes, the fame, the power. But it's all fleeting. Even in the church there are those like Diotrefes in 3 John who love to be first, who love to have the preeminence, who love to be seen and heard and to have power and control. But Jesus said, ... You know that those who are regarded as rulers of the Gentiles lord it over them, and their high officials exercise authority over them. Not so with you. Instead, whoever wants to become great among you must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be slave of all. For even the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give his life as a ransom for many." - Mark 10:42-45. In almost every one of his letters, Paul called himself a slave, a servant and many times a prisoner. Yet his spiritual legacy touched the world. So will ours if we follow his example.

Now, as we move into chapter 26, the prediction of Jesus comes true, probably for the first time but not the last, But before all this, they will lay hands on you and persecute you. They will deliver you to synagogues and prisons, and you will be brought before kings and governors, and all on account of my name. This will result in your being witnesses to them. But make up your mind not to worry beforehand how you will defend yourselves. For I will give you words and wisdom that none of your adversaries will be able to resist or contradict. - Luke 21:12-15. In this chapter:

II. Paul Shares His Faith With King Agrippa - Ch. 26 Instead of defending himself, he witnesses to a king and it's evident that the Spirit of God gave him the words to say. But before we look at them, let's extract from Paul's testimony:

1. the purpose for which we are sent (16-18) These are key words. They are Paul's commission from Jesus and they are also our commission, as they are another reflection of the Great Commission. And Don Richardson points out that they contain an important progression that goes something like this: eye-opener → darkness to light → power of Satan to God → forgiveness and faith. In order to be saved, people first need to have their eyes opened. They need to see and understand the reality of their separation from God. Only then will they have a desire to change their behavior from deeds of darkness to light. When they do, they'll discover they need to be set free from the power of Satan and belong to God. And eventually they will come to experience forgiveness and the holiness that comes only by trusting in Christ. So many times, we come to people to get them to change their behavior when what they need first is light; they need to see the difference; they need an eye-opener. And in most cases that eye-opener is YOU, your life, your words, your presence in their lives. YOU are what opens their eyes as you share your faith with them! That's our calling! And that's what Paul is doing with King Agrippa as he stands before him. And since we've seen his testimony twice before in Acts, this time let's examine it as:

2. an outline for sharing our faith: Everybody always wants to know, "What would I say?" Start where Paul did. Talk about:

SELF - what I have experienced (4-21) The most natural way to talk to anyone about anything important is to tell the story of what happened to you. Paul didn't launch into a discussion of theology or a treatise on the nature of God and who Jesus was. He simply told what happened to him and so can you. Think of it in three categories:

BC - life before Christ came in Tell what your life was like without Jesus. If you were saved very young, you don't have much to say about this part; you pretty much start with the next one. Anyway, you can:

- share the positive (4-8) "I was a Pharisee, an extremely religious man. I believed in the resurrection of the dead." Maybe you were a nice person, a churchgoer, a religious person but without Jesus. You can share that. You can also:

- share the negative (9-11) "I was wicked; I persecuted and imprisoned people; I voted for their deaths." Maybe you were not so nice. Maybe you were a drug-dealer, a thief, an adulterer and Jesus changed you. You can share that. But after BC comes:

DC - how I discovered Christ (12-15) Now, it's not real likely that the story of how you discovered Christ is quite as dramatic as Paul's story. Nevertheless, do:

- include the details: they make it real Paul tells what road he was on, what time, the circumstances, and so on. These are the things that make it real to the person. I was in a class, in church, this is what was said, what I prayed, etc. But in sharing the details:

- remember the point: emphasize Christ It is not the details that the person really needs to know. Some are saved in a church service, others at home watching a crusade on TV, others on the street. What's important is that I came to see that I'm a sinner, lost before the presence of a holy God, that I came to understand how Jesus died for my sins and that He is alive right now. And I placed my complete trust in Him and invited Him into my life. You may not get to share beyond this, so it's important to share the Gospel in the process of telling your story. But then move from BC and DC to:

AC - life after Christ came in (19-22a) Tell what life is like or has been like now that you have Christ and:

- emphasize the difference There is one. Almost every Kyrgyz I've heard share their testimony says the same thing. "Before I knew Jesus I was scared; I had no peace in my heart. But since I know Jesus, I am not afraid; I have peace." Tell what's different about your life and:

- share what He means to you now Tell how you walk with Jesus, how He comforts you, how He encourages you. Here's where you who were saved as children can really shine. Tell how He answers prayer, how He has brought you through this crisis or that problem.

But when you're done telling about your SELF, do what Paul did and move to:

SCRIPTURE - what God's Word says (22-23) This is important. It is the Word of God that is living and powerful and sharper than any two-edged sword and pierces the heart. It speaks with the authority of God and He honors His Word. Share from it about the death of Christ, how all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God but how God showed His love for us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. Share how Christ rose from the dead and that He is alive right now and willing to save those who will come to Him. Now, you might get interrupted, but if the person is still with you after you share about SELF and share the SCRIPTURE, then do what Paul did and make a:

SUGGESTION - what the hearer needs to do (24-32) What did Paul do? He was bold. He shared the message and then:

- extended the invitation "Do you believe the prophets?" For us it is, "Would you like to receive Christ even now? Most people come to Christ because somebody invites them to, somebody asks them the question, somebody encourages them to take the step. But whether they say "yes" or they respond sarcastically like Agrippa did, that's not your problem. In the end you:

- leave the results with God It is He who draws people to faith, He who works in the heart and it might be now or next week or next year or never. We are simply called to be witnesses, those who've experienced Christ and share what we've seen and heard.

Paul was sent this day to be the eye-opener for a King. You and I have been sent to be eye-openers for people we meet in life every day. And you never know how God will use what we share. One author tells this story: "In 1967 while taking a class in photography at the University of Cincinnati, I became acquainted with a young man named Charles Murray who also was a student at the school and training for the summer Olympics of 1968 as a high diver. Charles was very patient with me as I would speak to him for hours about Jesus Christ and how He had saved me. Charles was not raised in a home that attended any kind of church, so all that I had to tell him was a fascination to him. He even began to ask questions about forgiveness of sin. Finally, the day came that I put a question to him. I asked if he realized his own need of a Redeemer and if he was ready to trust Christ as his own Savior. I saw his countenance fall and the guilt in his face. But his reply was a strong "no." In the days that followed he was quiet and often I felt that he was avoiding me, until I got a phone call and it was Charles. He wanted to know where to look in the New Testament for some verses that I had given him about salvation. I gave him the reference to several passages and asked if I could meet with him. He declined my offer and thanked me for the scripture. I could tell that he was greatly troubled, but I did not know where he was or how to help him. Because he was training for the Olympic games, Charles had special privileges at the University pool facilities. Sometime between 10:30 and 11:00 that evening he decided to go swim and practice a few dives. It was a clear night in October and the moon was big and bright. The University pool was housed under a ceiling of glass panes so the moon shone bright across the top of the wall in the pool area. Charles climbed to the highest platform to take his first dive. At that moment the Spirit of God began to convict him of his sins. All the scripture he had read, all the occasions of witnessing to him about Christ flooded his mind. He stood on the platform backwards to make his dive, spread his arms to gather his balance, looked up to the wall and saw his own shadow caused by the light of the moon. It was the shape of a cross. He could bear the burden of his sin no longer. His heart broke and he sat down on the platform and asked God to forgive him and save him. He trusted Jesus Christ twenty some feet in the air. Suddenly, the lights in the pool area came on. The attendant had come in to check the pool. As Charles looked down from his platform, he saw an empty pool which had been drained for repairs. He had almost plummeted to his death, but the cross had stopped him from disaster." You never know how God will use what you share. I know it feels scary and awkward. You may be worried that you don't know what to say. This little outline may help, but at the bottom line remember Jesus' promise, Do not worry about what to say or how to say it. At that time you will be given what to say, for it will not be you speaking, but the Spirit of your Father speaking through you. All we need to do is share what we're given.

"I Will Build My Church" - The Book Of Acts

The Gospel Goes To Rome - Chs. 27-28

With this message we come to the close of this first chapter in the story of how Jesus is building His church in the world that we call the Book of Acts. It has been an exciting story. We've seen the church grow from Jerusalem to Judea and Samaria, to Caesarea and Antioch, spread throughout Asia Minor then over into Macedonia and Greece. We've followed Paul through three wearying missionary journeys and then through his arrest and imprisonment for two years at Caesarea. And now the story closes with an exciting ending as the Gospel, in the person of Paul, goes all the way to Rome, the capital of the world. We pick up the story in Acts 27 where we have the account of:

I. The Hazardous Journey - Ch. 27 Here was:

- 1. the plan (1-12) There were no transport companies, so Julius, the Centurion who was in charge of Paul, had to find passage on trading ships. He caught a ship in the harbor sailing north along the coast to Asia Minor. In those days nobody sailed across the open Mediterranean directly; ships hugged the shoreline. They stopped at Sidon overnight, then were forced by the wind around the lee side of Cyprus because they were sailing against the prevailing winds and having trouble making headway. They landed at Myra where they switched to an Egyptian grain ship bound for Italy. They were forced by the winds over to the large island of Crete and started around the south side, but they were really having trouble sailing against the wind and finally made it to a place called Fair Havens. Sailing in those days in this region was seasonal; it was not done in winter because the prevailing winds and storms were wrong. So, ships would spend the winter safe in harbors and wait until spring to move on and that's what Paul wanted to do, but the majority wanted to go on further to Phoenix and winter there. That was the plan, but they didn't know about:

2. the storm (13-26) Now, before we continue, let's not pass over a worthwhile:

a. a lesson about trusting appearances (13) They thought they got what they wanted, but as the cliché says, appearances can be deceiving! And they often are! There are a lot of things that look fair and sunny with a gentle wind blowing in the right direction to give you what you want and you can be greatly tempted to ignore that warning voice of God that says, "Don't sail that way!" God's "Fair Haven" isn't good enough for us; it doesn't suit us because we want more. Our flesh wants to bask under the "palm trees" of Phoenix down the coast. God's "don't sail there" warnings include a lot of things like not dating or marrying a person who doesn't know Christ, like not having sexual relations with someone you're not married to, like not leaving your spouse to go seek another one, like not using drugs or alcohol to get high, and a thousand other things that have to do with honesty and integrity and morality. God says, "Don't sail there; it's dangerous water!" But the devil arranges the appearances to be so appealing and inviting that you do like the centurion and give more credence to the voices urging you on than to the voice of God warning you. And before you know it, the storm hits and you're in a pile of trouble bigger than you can get out of and you wish you'd listened. Just remember not to trust in appearances! eLT's read on. Now there's:

b. a lesson about trusting God's presence (16-23) They were in a terrible position. Everyone else had lost hope that they would be saved. They were so far out to sea and there were no rescue planes or vessels. It seemed so certain that everyone would be lost. However, in that night of despair in a place that seemed so far away from everything, God was right there with Paul. He sent an angel to appear to him to comfort him. When he was in jail back in Jerusalem after the riot, at his lowest, thinking he was going to die, Jesus appeared to him; He was there. No matter how low your circumstances, how dark the night of your soul, how alone and forsaken you feel, how hopeless everything seems, Jesus is right there with you. He has promised, I will never leave you nor forsake you! You can trust that His presence is with you. Now here's another:

c. a lesson about trusting God's promises (24-25) Paul says, "I believe it will happen just as God told me! I have faith that God keeps His promises!" Way back in Jerusalem two years earlier, Jesus had told Paul (23:11) "You will testify in Rome!" Now the circumstances were shouting loudly, "You'll never get to Rome; you'll die in this ocean!" But God's promise still stood and Paul believed it, and when you read the end, you see he was right! Some of us may be in the middle of one of those storms of life, one of those hurricanes that has blown you far away from all security and safety and into a place of hopelessness and despair. Your marriage has fallen apart, your spouse has deserted you, your son or daughter has broken your heart, you're a single mom with a handful of kids gasping to keep your head above the surface, you're in financial ruin and about to lose it all, you've lost your job, you are in that life and death battle with cancer. And wherever you are, the storm is shouting, "You're not going to survive this; you're going to die right here." But you have a decision to make. You can give in to the voice of the circumstances, or like Paul you can stubbornly believe that God's word is true, that He is with you, that He is in control, that every promise He has made will come true, that He will never leave you nor forsake you, that He will give you His strength, that He will work even this thing together for good and if He chooses to take you home through it, you will be seated with Him and reign with Him in His kingdom! Wherever you can find a promise of God in His Word that is meant for you, count on it! Rest in it! Let God be true and every storm a liar! Well, getting back to the story, now comes:

3. the shipwreck (27-44) Now there is:

a. a lesson about facing adversity (33-36) Everybody else had been in a constant state of fear, stress and anxiety for two solid weeks. They hadn't eaten hardly anything; they hadn't slept much. They were consumed with their situation. That's how a lot of people face difficult circumstances. They worry; they fret; they fume; they whine. They can't eat or sleep; they're a nervous wreck, living in fear and anxiety. But in those same circumstances Paul was calm and confident. His faith overcame the fear. He took bread and ate it to keep up his strength. He even stopped to give thanks first, to have an attitude of thanksgiving in the midst of adversity. What a testimony he was to these others and what a testimony you can be for Jesus to the people around you, if you will cast all your anxieties and care upon Jesus and face the adversity in your life with that calm confidence, that peace of God that passes all understanding. But back to the story. Read 39-44. Wow, what:

b. a lesson about God's sovereign power (44) 276 people on board. The ocean so violent that it breaks the ship apart. Many couldn't swim. But every last one of them reached land in safety as God had declared they would. Not one of them was injured! God is well able to do what He promises! What a mighty God we serve! And now we come to the story of:

II. The Maltese Winter - 28:1-10 Here's what had happened to them. That strong wind out of the northeast drove them west 600 miles across open ocean, but also swirled them back slightly to the north. If it hadn't, they would likely have run aground in North Africa, however, in God's providence they ran into an island called Malta, the last speck of land off the tip of Sicily and the Italian peninsula where they were headed. There they will spend the winter. Two noteworthy events are recorded for us by Luke. First:

1. the miraculous snakebite (1-6) These people are dyed-in-the-wool idolaters. They're steeped in it. Paul gets bit by a snake and they think the god justice has marked him for death. The next minute when he doesn't die, they think he is himself a god. Luke doesn't give Paul's reply, but you can bet they got a sermon about turning away from worthless gods to the true and living God who can deliver from the power of the ocean and also from the power of the poison! Then over the next 3 months Luke records:

2. the ministry of healing (7-10) The leading man of the island took them in and Paul prayed and healed his father of fever and dysentery in the name of Jesus. Soon, all the sick on the island are coming to find healing. It was just like Jesus had predicted in Mark 16:18 ...they will pick up snakes with their hands; and when they drink deadly poison, it will not hurt them at all; they will place their hands on sick people, and they will get well." and in verse 20 Mark comments, Then the disciples went out and preached everywhere, and the Lord worked with them and confirmed his word by the signs that accompanied it. That's exactly what He was doing here, confirming the truth of what Paul had to say to these superstitious idolatrous minds by demonstrations of undeniable power. And He's still doing it today. Recently in Mahdya Pradesh in India there was a widow who worshipped her idols faithfully. One night she had a dream in which one of the idols spoke to her and said, "In a few days a man with a book will come and turn your faith away. It would be better for you to move somewhere else, so we can remain together forever." But she didn't and as predicted, the visitor came--a Christian evangelist and when she heard the good news of God's love and salvation in Jesus Christ, she turned her back on her idols. In a remote village in southwest China a middle-aged woman had suffered from demonic oppression for years. Various cures and solutions had been tried and all had failed. But when a group of Christians from a nearby village visited, they offered to pray for the woman. As they gathered around her and called out to God for healing, her countenance and behavior changed dramatically and she was set free. Now one year later 70 believers are worshipping God and sharing the good news in that area! [Advance - 12/01] In the "Malts" of the earth, in those places where the spiritual darkness is the deepest, in the remotest and most idolatrous places, God is powerfully at work confirming His word and the church is being built in wonderful new ways and we have the privilege of being alive in these days to be part of it!

Anyway, by March or so, the long Maltese winter was over and the story moves on to tell about:

III. The Ministry At Rome - 28:11-30 First, there's a description of the last lap of:

1. Paul's final journey to Rome (11-16) Now note how good God was to Paul in this. First note:

a. his spiritual encouragement (15) I'm sure Paul was wondering how he would fare in this pagan city filled with vice, greed, corruption and idolatry. His destiny would be in the hands of a ruler who was growing more mad each year. But some 40 miles out, there was a welcoming committee of believers who came out to meet him and escort him in, men he'd never met but had only written to, yet men who loved him and hailed him as a spiritual father and conqueror. He was led into Rome in sort of a little victory parade, the way returning generals were greeted. And it greatly encouraged his heart. Isn't God good? And then we read of:

b. his special treatment (16) How unusual is that. Everyone else went to prison but Paul was allowed to rent a house and live there under guard, making his own living sewing tents and free to have people in, to preach, teach, and write. What gracious treatment God arranged for him, no doubt born out of four months of relationship with the centurion who had guarded him on the journey! And it is here in this house that we read of:

2. Paul's final encounter with the Jews (17-29) The first thing Paul does is what he did everywhere. He couldn't go to the synagogue, so he called the leaders of the Jews together, so that he might speak to the Jew first. But this session seems to be more than just an incident; in its position in the Book of Acts, it's almost like God's last offer to the Jewish nation. God has sent Paul to them everywhere from Jerusalem through Asia Minor and Macedonia and everywhere their response has been to reject him. Now here it is one last time, all the way over in Rome, the capital of the world. And look at:

a. their opportunity to hear (17-22) These Jews were a clean slate. They hadn't been tainted against Paul by letters or visitors. They were curious. They had every opportunity to hear without hindrance and so comes:

b. their offer of grace (23) For a whole day Paul reasoned and explained and pleaded with them from the Scriptures to believe. Here is the last remaining major group of Jewish leaders in the world, the Jews of Rome. It's like God was reaching down one last time to give the Jews the opportunity to receive their Messiah before their nation was destroyed. But look at:

c. their obstinacy that continues to this day (24-29) Isaiah was told in his day that Israel would hear and hear but not understand, because they didn't want to, because they had deliberately closed their eyes and their hearts. It was true then, it was true in Paul's day and it continues to be true today. A couple of the churches in Abington had a joint Thanksgiving time in a local synagogue and the leaders were offended that the name of Jesus was simply mentioned four times during the service, by Christians! In Romans 11 Paul writes that there is a blindness, a hardening that has happened to Israel and it will continue all through this age until the full number the Gentiles has come in, that is, until some from every tribe, tongue and nation have heard and believed. And even though a small remnant of Jews are being saved, the primary work of God in this age is reaching the nations. How sad their refusal, but as we conclude the book we read of:

a. his personal ministry and it was fruitful! He wrote, Now I want you to know, brothers, that what has happened to me has really served to advance the gospel. As a result, it has become clear throughout the whole palace guard and to everyone else that I am in chains for Christ. - Phil. 1:12-13. His own guards came to Christ and he mentions that some of Caesar's household were won to the faith in 4:22. From there he directed the ministry of others like Luke, Mark, Timothy, Aristarchus, and one of his converts was a runaway slave named Onesimus whom we read about. From there he labored in prayer daily for all the churches. It was a fruitful time and not only that, but from there Paul wrote:

b. his prison epistles, some of the greatest and deepest letters in the New Testament. Ephesians, Colossians, Philippians and Philemon all came to us out of this time. Oh friends, God doesn't waste anything. When you're laid aside or facing adversity and frustrated that you can't do the things of ministry you'd like, just look up! God has a work for you in that prison, in that hospital, in that bed, in that room at home. It may be the work of prayer, of encouragement, of witness, of writing, but there is a work even from where you are that He has for you, if your heart is open.

As for Paul, tradition says (and Scripture seems to support it) that he was released after his first trial and traveled in ministry once again for at least a year through Macedonia, Achaia and Asia, and maybe even on to Spain as he originally hoped. He wrote 1 Timothy and Titus. But eventually he was arrested again, and this time imprisoned for real at Rome, just as Nero began his famous hatred and persecution of Christians. From his cell he wrote 2 Timothy, where he indicates that the time of his departure was at hand. At length, tradition says, he was beheaded and died a martyr for the cause of Christ. But Luke ends his story without telling any of this, because that isn't his purpose. He has chronicled the story of the building of the church of Jesus Christ from Day 1 with a handful of believers in Jerusalem until a brief 30 years later when it had filled the Roman world and there was virtually nowhere in the Roman Empire that had not had a church planted or heard the Gospel or at least heard of it! But the story did not stop there. Through 2000 years Christ has continued to build His church through faithful men and women like these we've read about. By 1974 half of the population of the earth was at least within reach of the church and had the opportunity to hear the Gospel. And now at the end of the second millennium after Christ (even though the world has mushroomed to 7 billion people) ONLY 1/3 of the earth still has no opportunity to hear and the gap is closing fast. There are thousands of Apostle Pauls out there in the farthest reaches of the earth and their adventures are no less exciting and dangerous. Several hundred thousand people every day hear the Gospel, and more than a hundred thousand of them are being saved. Hundreds of churches are being planted weekly. The final chapters of the story of Acts are being written in our lifetime and through our praying and our giving and our sending out workers and our going, we are a vital part of finishing the task. And one day soon when every people, tribe, tongue and nation has finally heard the Good News, the story of the Acts of God will be finished and Jesus Christ will return to take His church home and set up His Kingdom. And then those from the first century will come to us and say, "Is it true? Is it true that you lived during the time when God was doing His greatest work? Tell us, what was it like?" And we'll all sit down together at the table and tell our stories of His great work forever.

ACTS: BIBLE SCHOOL COURSE

INTRODUCTORY MATERIAL

I. The Importance of the book of Acts to us

1. It is the only accurate historical record of the early church It is like having the missing link in a story; without it we'd know about the death and resurrection of Christ and His ascension, but then skip to seeing a full-blown church all over the world with no idea how it got there!

2. It is a historical background for the Epistles They are loaded with references to people coming and going and doing things. Without Acts, many of those verses and even the dating or occasion of Epistles would be unintelligible. So, it's important to read the Epistles in light of Acts; it is a foundational study to them like Kings and Chronicles are to the Old Testament prophetic books.

3. It is the account of the transition from Israel to the Church Think dispensationally for a moment; ever since the time of Abraham, God had been dealing with one people, Israel! In the Epistles it is clear that Israel is now set aside; her law and sacrificial system are now declared to be obsolete, not binding on Christians. Instead, God is dealing with Gentiles all over the world. What a change! Now that transition was not instantaneous, as we might like to think, but took many years and Acts tells us how God brought it about. And that brings up an important fact: Acts is the story of a transitional period. God did some special things then that were given to make the transition but were not necessarily intended to be normal for the church in all ages! Here are practical applications:

- we don't have to interpret Acts in light of today For example, God no longer gives the Spirit by laying on of hands like He did in Acts 8. That was special, part of a special transition for a purpose. We don't have to sit and figure out why God doesn't do that now!

- we don't have to "get back to the way things were in the early church" So many folks want to be "New Testament Churches", by which they mean various things from having miracle healings in every service, to the way they set up their church officers with no single pastor but a plurality of elders. We don't have to imitate everything we see in Acts; God is always busy developing new methods and means. However:

4. It provides for us a tremendous example and challenge The most challenging verse is 17:6. Even pagans recognized the fact. God took a small group of committed Christians and in 30 years planted churches all over the Roman world. It contains the great example of sacrifice, courage, obedience, and faith found in early believers. We do well to imitate them!

II. Facts Concerning the Writing of the Book

1. Author: Luke Compare 1:1-2 with Lk. 1:1-4; they are addressed to the same person, Theophilus (which means God-lover), a Christian friend, but by its meaning, to us!

2. Purpose for writing - Lk. 1:1-4 His purpose was to write an accurate, orderly, historical account as a permanent record. Many accounts were being shared orally, but Luke wanted to provide a sure and certain record of the things so important to the faith. Compare Acts 1:1-2. Luke is the record of what Jesus began to do and teach on earth until His ascension. Acts is the sequel to Luke and is the story of how the Holy Spirit continued the work of Christ in building the church.

3. Method of writing - Lk. 1:2 Luke used sources. That sounds anti-scriptural but inspiration has to do with the recording of Scripture, not the source of the material. The final written document was the direct product of the Holy Spirit, but He gave Scripture writers information by sources such as:

a. personal experience Luke was personally involved in some of the things he reports. He uses the pronoun we.

b. Paul, who was his traveling companion

c. other eye-witnesses like James and Peter whom he met in Acts 21

d. personal research Luke was evidently in Palestine during Paul's two year imprisonment, so he had ample opportunity to meet many of first Christians and gather information.

4. Date of writing: circa 60-62 AD There is no mention of Nero's persecution which began in AD 64 in Rome, nor of Paul's death. The Temple is still standing, so it is before AD 70.

CHAPTER ONE

Chapter Outline:

- I. Post-resurrection Ministry 1-8
- II. The Ascension 9-11
- III. A Decision 12-26

I. Christ's Post-Resurrection Ministry - 1-8 It lasted 40 days. Only Luke lays it out for us in any detailed fashion.

1. Christ had chosen apostles (2) Compare Mark 3:14. He had two purposes, that they would be with Him and that He would send them forth. He prepared them during His ministry on earth and then they continued His work when He left, but He still had a few things to do with them by way of preparation for their role.

2. He convinced them of His resurrection (3) During those 40 days He showed them infallible proofs; they had to be absolutely convinced. This became basis for their message, "This Jesus hath God raised up!" Compare 1 Jn. 1:1-2.

3. He taught them about the Kingdom (3) Compare Lk. 24:44-47. He gave them a concentrated Bible course on the Old Testament with two emphases. First, He showed them the prophecies concerning Himself and how they were fulfilled. That explains how the apostles in all their speeches quoted specific Old Testament passages and applied them authoritatively to Christ. Second, He explained the prophecies concerning the Kingdom (by which He meant the Millennium and His return to establish it, not the Rapture). Thus, verses 6-7, their last question, is a natural outgrowth.

4. He gave instructions (4) For the short term He said, "Stay in Jerusalem and wait for the Holy Spirit." For the long term He commanded them to carry out the preaching of His message to the whole world, similar to the commands in Mt. 28:18-20 and Mk. 16:15.

5. He clarified the timing of the coming of the Spirit (5) The promise had been given earlier, particularly in the Upper Room in Jn. 13-16. But He refers back to Mt. 3:11 where John gives the promise and says it is about to come true. The word baptize means to identify with here. That is, the sign of being a follower of John was water baptism; the sign of being a follower of Christ is the personal presence of the Holy Spirit. Compare 1 Cor. 12:13. The disciples associated the Spirit with the coming of the Kingdom because of Old Testament prophecies like Joel 2. Jesus clarifies that the Spirit is going to come now, but the Kingdom will come later and gives a basic principle in verses 7-8. It is not given to the church to know either the duration of the age or the date of its ending; that was reserved to Father's authority. They would get power (dunamis) to be witnesses to the world. Note, the Great Commission is both a command and a compulsion; it is commanded in Matthew and Mark; here it is a compulsion of the Holy Spirit.

II. The Ascension - 9-11

1. it certified His leaving He didn't just disappear as on earlier occasions. He made clear to the disciples that He was gone for good. They might expect Him to reappear otherwise. Now see the meaning of verse 1: He began, He left, we continue! The church is His physical replacement in the world, His body!

2. it clarified His return It demonstrated that it would be the same Jesus in the same literal resurrection body literally coming down from clouds, just as He went up, so no one would try to change the meaning of His words.

3. it gives us a slow-motion picture of the Rapture - 1 Thes. 4:17

III. A Decision - 15-26 They followed His instructions and remained in Jerusalem, using the Upper Room as meeting place and prayer chamber, praying for the Holy Spirit to come for 10 days. During this time, it dawned on them that there are only 11 apostles now and they decided to elect a successor for Judas.

1. what happened to him (18-19) This seems to contradict Mt. 27:5 which says, he hanged himself. Evidently, in hanging himself, either the rope broke or after a few days of hanging there his body burst open. The site was the very field purchased by the priests with the blood money Judas had returned and it came to be known as "the field of blood" for both reasons.

2. their reasoning

- David prophesied that Judas should be replaced (16), that his position should be taken by another

- He was numbered with them (17) Compare Mt. 19:28. This is a literal promise that the Apostles would sit on 12 thrones during the Millennial Kingdom and judge the 12 tribes of Israel. But now that promise of 12 can't be fulfilled with him gone.

- it is necessary to appoint one to replace him (22)

3. their method (26)

- they located by themselves the two best-qualified men and then left it up to the Lord by casting lots They probably put their names on two stones in a jar and dumped them out. Note:

- these are Jewish people; this had always been God's method for them They even had Scripture on it - Prov. 16:33

- it was done after the best human efforts, between two equal choices, and with much prayer The Holy Spirit hadn't come yet; after He does, they don't use this method anymore. Rather they let the Holy Spirit guide them. Compare 13:1-2 where He selects qualified men for them. There are no more fleeces or lots.

THE BIRTH OF THE CHURCH - Chapter 2

Chapter Outline

I. The New Dispensation	1-13
II. The Great Sermon	14-40
III. The First Church	41-47

I. The New Dispensation - 1-13

1. the events that happened

a. the day: Pentecost (1) It was the day of the Old Testament Feast of Weeks which occurred 50 days after Passover. This indicates that the coming of the Holy Spirit is the fulfillment of the Old Testament promise just like Christ's death and resurrection were foreshadowed in the Feasts of Passover and Firstfruits. Also, this was the very day that God gave Israel the Law. So, the day of Law is over; God has given a new law, the law of Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus, a law written on the fleshy tablets of the heart.

b. the sound of wind (2) It was not an actual wind but a sound, loud and overpowering like that of a tornado or hurricane, yet they felt nothing. Why?

- Jesus symbolized Spirit by wind - Jn. 3:8 The reason is that in Hebrew ruach can mean wind or breath or Spirit; the same is true of the Greek word pnoe. The Lord used a symbol they would recognize to convey the meaning of what was happening.

- at creation God breathed into man the ruach of life - Gen. 2:7 and man became living soul. The same Greek word (enphuseo which is used in the Septuagint and means to infuse) is used in:

- Jesus breathed on them and linked it with coming of the Holy Spirit - Jn. 20:22 Jesus is symbolically preparing them to understand that He would breathe on them the Holy Spirit and they would have spiritual life. At Pentecost Jesus was breathing the Holy Spirit of life into His church. Note: The Spirit did not actually come in Jn. 20:22. Acts 1:4 says, wait for the promise, 1:5 says the baptizing with the Holy Spirit would still be a few days in the future, and 1:8 uses the phrase, after the Holy Spirit is come upon you" indicating that it hadn't happened yet. This was a prophetic symbolic act, much like Ezekiel digging through the wall (Ez. 12:1-12) or Jeremiah hiding his belt at Euphrates. The thing was counted as settled and done because it was imminent and certain; thus, Jesus' strong language, Receive the Holy Spirit....

c. the sight of fire (3) It was not actual fire, but the appearance of it. God often appeared in the Old Testament in fire (the burning bush, the pillar of fire). Fire would symbolize for these Jews the presence of God. From the language, it seems that it was a great mass of fire and then divided (was cloven) into individual small units called tongues. This is the Greek word for the actual tongue; human-tongue-shaped units then came to rest on each person, probably on their mouths! The symbols say this is the fulfillment of 1:8; God the Holy Spirit is now going to indwell each believer and be with their mouth so they can be His witnesses.

c. the baptism/filling of the Holy Spirit (4) The term baptism of the Holy Spirit is found only twice. It is used by John the Baptist (Mt. 3:11) and by Jesus (Acts 1:5). Both times it is a reference to a specific time event that is still future. Jesus equated the coming of the Spirit (verse 4) with the baptism (verse 5). This happened once for Jews here, once for the Samaritans (8:14-17) and once for the Gentiles (10:44-46). We now have a new promise, that we individually receive the gift of the Holy Spirit when we believe (2:38). There is no scriptural foundation for the modern use of the phrase baptized in the Holy Spirit, unless it refers to 1 Cor. 12:13 which says that to be baptized by the Holy Spirit is to be placed by Spirit into the body of Christ through His indwelling presence. That's what happened at the end of 2:3; in 2:4 they were literally filled of the Spirit. The best translation is not with but by. The Holy Spirit is a person like Christ, not a vapor that comes in quantities. In verse 3 He came into them; in verse 4 He controlled them, that is, He took over control of them. This is a statement repeated throughout Acts, sometimes of the same disciples. Therefore, it was not a once and done thing. The Holy Spirit baptized them once, but He filled them often, and I would say daily, not just on the occasions mentioned!!

d. the speaking in tongues (4-6) The result of the Spirit's control was speaking in other recognizable languages. The word in verses 6 and 8 is dialect; they spoke properly! Obviously, this was to provide a testimony to all those Jews who were gathered for the feast. Their subject was praise (11) but the term wonderful works may easily refer to the death and resurrection of Christ. The purpose of tongues is mentioned in Mk. 16:17; it was a sign, a mark of the power and authority of God. Compare:

- Heb. 2:3-4 - God used signs to confirm the words of the Apostles, that is, to convince the Jews that their message was true.

- 1 Cor. 1:22 - The Jews require a sign Gentiles you can convince with logic, but Jews have a history of God doing signs and miracles to prove Himself. They asked Jesus for a sign to prove Himself! There are only three occasions of speaking in tongues in Acts and all were for Jews. Never in Acts do you find tongues as a personal gift to be sought; even Paul in 1 Cor. 14 said that tongues are for a sign to unbelievers!

2. the significance of the events: the church was instituted The Holy Spirit created a new organism, the body of Christ, the Church (compare 1 Cor. 12:13 which says it is the Holy Spirit who knits believers into the One body, with Col. 1:18, 24, which says that His body is the Church). So, the Church did not exist before Pentecost. It was a mystery (a sacred secret) that was hidden from previous ages and generations (Col. 1:24-27). Jesus announced and predicted it in Mt. 16:18, and now He brought it into being, a single body made up of Jew and Gentile alike who believe on Him. It is totally distinct from Israel (1 Cor. 10:32) and in it, there are no Jew-Gentile distinctions (Eph. 2:11-16).

II. The Great Sermon (14-40) Peter stands up at this God-given opportunity and preaches the first recorded sermon in church history! Here is the outline of it:

1. Explanation (14-21) Peter explains what had happened. The Holy Spirit had come as predicted in Joel 2:28-32. Note that this whole passage is not fulfilled; the rest of it waits for the Tribulation Period. But it becomes his sermon text; he begins with an explanation of the pouring out of the Spirit and ends with an evangelistic appeal.

2. Exposition (22-36) Now he tells how it was that the Holy Spirit had come. Christ was authenticated by signs as God's Messiah (22). He was crucified and slain, though not by accident, but by plan (23). He was raised from the dead (24). And now as Messiah He had sent forth the Holy Spirit and the signs they observed (32-33). He uses several Old Testament passages to prove that these things were prophesied beforehand and shows that they could not be applied to David. His main point is verse 36. All Jews must know that Jesus is their Messiah!

3. Exhortation (37-40) Now he tells them what to do about it. Note that this generation of Jews stands condemned for rejecting Messiah, but they could individually escape that condemnation (39-40). The same promise is for Jew and Gentile alike. The method is to repent, that is, to change their mind concerning Him and then to be baptized as the sign that they were followers of Him.

4. Extension (41) 3,000 of his hearers were saved and bound together into the very first local church. Note the normal order: conversion, baptism, addition to a local church.

III. The First Church (41-47) Note the regular activities of the first church. They occurred naturally and still should today:

1. teaching (42) by apostles

2. fellowship This is defined as the breaking of bread and prayers (these are an appositive in verse 42. They ate together, shared the Lord's Supper and prayed together.

3. sharing (45) with fellow believers in need

4. outreach (47) by their positive testimony

THE CHURCH AT JERUSALEM 3:1-5:16

Section Outline:

I. A Healing And A Sermon Ch. 3

II. An Arrest And A Release 4:1-31

III. Sharing And Discipline 4:32-5:16

I. A Healing and A Sermon - Ch.3

1. the healing of the lame man - 1-11 Peter and John go up to the Temple to pray at the regular Jewish hour of prayer, 3:00 PM. They meet a lame man and heal him in the name of Christ and it creates quite a stir; a large crowd gathers. This brings up the question of miracle healing or the gift of healing. In the New Testament church there was a distinct gift of healing, mentioned in 1 Cor. 12, which was not simply praying for the sick, but healing by touch or command on the spot.

a. its purpose

- Mk. 16:17-20 It was a sign like tongues, given for the purpose of confirming the message of the apostles.

Mark's summary of the early days of the church is that God was working with them giving signs like healings to confirm their word. This was illustrated directly on this occasion as a sermon to crowd follows. There is never a command given to church to go and heal all the sick!

- Heb. 2:3-4 Here we find the same thing, except it indicates that signs primarily occurred among apostles and those who had seen the Lord; there is a sense that they are not continuing to occur so frequently.

- Acts 2:43 says that many signs and wonders were done by the apostles initially. You can watch through Acts as the frequency decreases. The New Testament epistles seem to know little of miraculous healings apart from the reference in 1 Corinthians and the mention in Hebrews. Instead, we find the frequent mention of sickness, as in 2 Cor 12. Church history records no miracles for a century or two after the apostles died, but then begins to record reports of outlandish and unbelievable miracles unlike the Bible, obviously connected with relics, sacraments, and priestly doings in writings that would obviously be regarded as spurious.

b. does the gift exist today? God certainly heals miraculously at times and even tells us to pray over the sick but the gift of miraculous healing is rare; I know of no one who has it, though some certainly claim it. Many cases of fraud have been exposed. And maybe some even do get healed in healing services, but if so, not because of the man, but because of God's sovereign will. It is not that God can't or even doesn't do these sign gifts today; His ability is the same and He can do anything He wants.

2. Peter's sermon - 12-26

Note it is to Jews and has two main points:

a. an explanation - 12-16 Peter explains that the man was healed in the Name of Jesus (16) and identifies who Jesus was and what the Jewish leaders had done to Him. Really, he charges them with a heinous crime (13-15), where note a three-fold contradiction in their actions.

b. an exhortation - 17-26 Peter tells them what they must do. This is very significant. Peter is offering the Jews the Kingdom one last time. He says:

- 17 their crime was done in ignorance (agnoia means not knowing) Compare 1 Cor. 2:7. But it was also in God's sovereign will (18).

- 19 their duty was to repent, to turn and as a people receive Christ.

- 20 if they repented God would send Christ who was literally appointed for you, that is, as Messiah and:

- 21 the times of restitution will come (literally, restoration to a former state) The promised millennial kingdom spoken of by all the prophets will come. Here is Israel's last chance (26) before God turns to the Gentiles and allows judgment to fall on that generation of Jews. God literally offered them the Kingdom, just as He was doing in the person of Christ in Gospels. Leave the question, "What if they had accepted the offer?" to God!

- 4:1 the result is rejection by the leaders and so Israel is nationally set aside until the Tribulation Period, when she will repent and the Kingdom will come. Meanwhile, all must come to Christ as individuals and many did (4:4).

II. An Arrest and A Release - 4:1-31

1. the growth of the church (4) The Greek uses ginomai which means become, so it means 2,000 were added and the total grew to 5,000 as the NIV puts it. Note the cycles in the growth of church. In 2:41, 3,000 were saved; then there was an unknown interval during which they grew through some new believers being added daily (2:42-47). Then 2,000 more were added at once (chapter 3) and they grow slowly once again (chapters 4-5). We ought to expect cycles in church growth and recognize the importance of growing new converts!

2. the first opposition (1-3) Peter's sermon was interrupted by the Temple authorities who arrest Peter and John. The reason is that most of the priests belonged to the party of the Sadducees. There are three reasons they were upset (verse 2):

a. they were teaching Look at verse 13; they were agrammatotai kai idiotai which means ungrammared idiots! They had never been to rabbinic schools and were laymen who had no right to the realm of religious teaching.

b. they were influencing the people They had an obvious effect on the crowd; 2,000 of them believed. They were worried about their own following.

c. their doctrine The Sadducees denied the resurrection (23:8) and afterlife. Peter and John were preaching the resurrection through the person of Christ.

3. their trial and release They were let go with a warning after speaking boldly to the council. Note in verse 8 we have the first fulfillment of Jesus' promise in Mt. 10:19-20. The result was the oft-quoted principle of Spirit-given wisdom (19-20) Notice that they were filled with the Spirit; they couldn't help but be witnesses!

4. the prayer meeting - 23-31 When they get back to the brethren, they have a prayer meeting. There are three principles they express here (what maturity)!

a. God is sovereign and in control (24)

b. God's plan includes believers facing opposition (25-28)

c. the important thing is a bold testimony, not deliverance (29) There is no room here for the gospel of health, wealth, and prosperity which is fed to so many Americans and others around the world, the concept that God wants Christians to always have health, prosperity, and enjoyment of life. That is never found in the New Testament.

III. Sharing and Discipline - 4:32-5:16 Here is a glimpse of life in the Jerusalem church.

1. the caring in the community (32-35) This is sometimes viewed as though they set up some sort of commune, but note:

a. 2:46 says they met from house to house right after they sold their possessions Obviously, they did not sell everything; they lived in individual houses. 12:12 says Mark's mother's house was a place of prayer.

b. the change was in attitude not ownership (32) They still owned things but now they saw all their possessions as gifts of God to be used for the good of all. So, they began to sell off things in order to help others, rather than selfishly hoarding them. Their hearts were touched by the need of others.

c. their actions were voluntary; they were moved by the Holy Spirit No rule or law was laid down by the apostles. This is different from communism. Spurgeon put it like this: "Communism says, 'What's yours is mine'; Christianity says, 'What's mine is yours!'" Nothing here is any different from what ought to happen today, except that it doesn't very much anymore! We give our extras; they sacrificed. The reason this is noted is that it is so strikingly different from the Jews of the day!

2. Barnabas (36-37) Luke introduces him as an example of that kind of giving. He sold some land (evidently back home in Cyprus) and gave the money. His name means son of encouragement; we'll meet him again later.

3. Ananias and Sapphira (5:1-11) They are introduced in direct contrast to Barnabas. He did it right; they did it wrong. Their sin was two-fold: 1) lying both to men and to the Holy Spirit, and 2) hypocrisy, falsely imitating the sincere believers. Here we get the first inkling that there is sin in the church and God punishes it by death. Why?

a. personally Ananias and Sapphira were believers but they had committed the sin unto death spoken of in 1 Jn. 5:16. Evidently, they had a testimony for Christ and were part of visible church, but instead of being filled by the Holy Spirit, they had opened themselves to be filled by Satan (3). What a warning to us! It's like 1 Cor. 11:28-32.

b. to guard His Name (5) God didn't want the world to have occasion to say, "see the hypocrites". He taught the whole community that He is a holy God (13).

c. to teach the church the seriousness of sin (11) This lesson is like that of Achan in the book of Joshua. The church is to be a holy people!

4. more miracles (12-16) This is like a final flurry, a last testimony of the power of God before real persecution began. Note here the fulfillment of Mk. 16:17-18 about the casting out of demons (16) and also the dangers of the attraction of healing. Jesus had the same problem; people came for the physical benefit instead of the spiritual. See their superstition that Peter's shadow could heal!

REAL PERSECUTION BEGINS 5:17-7:60

Section Outline:

- I. The Arrest of the Apostles 5:17-42
- II. The Appointment of the Seven 6:1-8
- III. The Address of Stephen 6:9-7:60

I. The Arrest of the Apostles - 5:17-42

1. the Twelve arrested (17-18) The reason for the hatred of the Jewish leaders was disobedience to their previous order (4:18), but also the success they had in 5:13-14 with the people. The church had grown by now to 7, 8, or perhaps even 10 thousand. Their strategy is to arrest all the leaders at once. You can see Satan trying to destroy the fledgling church.

2. the Twelve miraculously released (19-25) by an angel like Peter in chapter 12.

3. the Twelve found and tried (26-33) Note what bothers them in verse 28; the apostles are bringing accusation against them for crucifying Jesus, which is exactly what they say in verse 30. See how God is still pleading with Israel on a national basis! And notice the effect it had on them in verse 33; it cut them to the heart. That can be a positive thing as in 2:37 where it brings conviction, but it can also be a negative thing as it is here, where it is enraging. They made up their minds to kill them.

4. God's intervention (34-40) Gamaliel, Paul's teacher, advises restraint. His line of reasoning is that false works come to nothing but works of God continue on, so let us wait and see, lest we end up fighting God. It sounds pious but he's really saying that this thing will die out by itself, so let's not dirty our hands. Still, what he said is true and is one of the basic proofs of the reality of Jesus Christ. If the church was a mere human movement, it would have died centuries ago! But the fact that it has survived centuries of persecution and grown all the way says God is in it!

5. the principle of civil disobedience (41-42) A Christian is normally to obey the government and its laws in every way, but (29) when the government tells you to do the opposite of what God says, you choose to obey God. They did not cease their preaching, but they were also prepared to accept the consequences of suffering! See what maturity had come.

II. The Appointment of the Seven - 6:1-8

1. the problem The church at Jerusalem had two elements, Greeks and Hebrews, that is, Greek speaking Jews from other lands who remained in Jerusalem after their conversion at Pentecost and Aramaic speaking Jews from Jerusalem who were converted in the weeks that followed. There was a sizable element of each. In such a large number there were many widows whose care fell to the church and evidently this task was being handled by the Jerusalem faction with some general oversight by the Apostles (note that the Greeks were mad at the Hebrews, not the Apostles!) and the Greek speaking widows were getting neglected in process. This problem elevated into a general dissension and division between the two groups. See Satan at work again; if he can't kill the apostles, he'll divide the church!

2. the answer Appoint seven men to handle this ministry. Note that all seven chosen have Greek names and would undoubtedly see to the problem. Were they deacons? Not in the later sense of occupying the office of deacon or even elder. That had not yet developed. They were simply seven godly men who were appointed to handle a specific ministry. Note how qualified you have to be to handle finances (3); it is a spiritual job! They do, however, set a good precedent for us: our church leaders and those involved in our church ministries should be like these!

3. the principle (2-3) Here is the beginning of the concept that in the church there should be those gifted ones who devote themselves to study and teaching and prayer, while others with different gifts minister in other capacities. It is the beginning of the concepts of bishops and deacons, pastors and lay leaders.

III. The Address of Stephen - 6:9-7:60

1. Stephen targeted - 6:9-15 Note in verse 8 that Stephen was really used of God, maybe more obviously than the apostles at that moment. He was evidently trying to preach in a certain synagogue and really got the Jews very angry. So, they hired witnesses and dragged him before the Sanhedrin.

2. Stephen's sermon - 7:1-53 This is the longest recorded message in Acts. See the two accusations against him in 6:14, blasphemy against the Law and against the Temple. He probably did say these things, only they twisted them to use them against him. He addresses both of these. Here's a brief outline of his message:

- He affirms the Law (1-43) He identifies himself with what God did through Abraham, Jacob, Joseph, and Moses, in essence saying, "I believe the Law" but:

- Moses prophesied of a greater One to come (37)

- Israel would not listen to him and obey (39)

- He affirms the Temple (44-50) He says that both the Tabernacle and later the Temple were from God but:

- even God does not limit Himself to the Temple (49-50) according to the Old Testament prophets

- He accuses them of denying the very things they claim to believe in (51-53) Their fathers did not obey Moses or God's law and now they had crucified the Son and were resisting the Holy Spirit.

3. Stephen's martyrdom (54-60) He died very much like Jesus, on the charge of blasphemy out of his own lips and with forgiveness for his executioners on his lips. Note that this is the last straw for Israel. With the death of Stephen God begins to turn to Samaria and to the Gentiles from chapter 8 on. Israel has now officially sealed their own destruction as a nation and their being set aside in God's plan as a national entity until the Tribulation Period. The destruction of Jerusalem and the nation in AD 70 was the result. Now Jesus will build His church primarily of Gentiles.

TO SAMARIA Chs. 8-9

Section Outline:

I. Philip and the Samaritans	8:1-25
II. Philip and the Eunuch	8:26-40
III. Saul and the Lord Jesus	9:1-31
IV. Peter and the wider ministry	9:32-43

I. Philip and the Samaritans 8:1-25

1. wholesale persecution at Jerusalem - 1-4 Stephen's death began a great persecution at Jerusalem, a door to door manhunt, Nazi-style, so a large majority of the church had to flee to other areas. Verse 1 says all but the church at Jerusalem did continue on, so the persecution was probably directed mostly against Greek speaking Jewish Christians (like Stephen and Philip). Why did God allow this destruction of such a great work?

- the word scattered in verses 2 and 4 is literally to sow seed (from the Greek speiro.) While the Jews think they are breaking up the church, God is busy sowing, planting the seeds of the church in other areas (4)!

- note the words Judea and Samaria in verse 2 This is the first mention of those terms since 1:8. God is carrying out His plan for the spread of the Gospel. It is now moving into stage two. It is also possibly God's way of getting a reluctant church to move outward.

2. Philip reaches Samaritans - 5-8 Philip was the number two deacon at Jerusalem and he went to Samaria. This was a real breakthrough, because the Samaritans were considered dogs by the Jews! Note that this occasion was just like what happened at Jerusalem. God confirmed His Word by signs and miracles so that many believed and were baptized (12), but God withheld the giving of the Holy Spirit to them immediately upon belief (14-17), unlike what was going on currently at Jerusalem. He waited until Peter and John came from Jerusalem and laid hands on them. Here is a unique situation which occurs again in 19:6 and also in Paul's conversion, but it is not intended to be the norm. The Holy Spirit came much more often without it; it is not a pattern to be followed today, to lay on hands and pray for the Holy Spirit. Why did God do it this way? For two primary reasons:

- it proved validity of this new work to the Jewish apostles It is preparation for chapter 10 and the Gospel going to the Gentiles. When it happened, I'm sure they recalled 1:8!

- it prevented a possible schism The Jews naturally hated the Samaritans. This event tied the two together and prevented the developing of two churches, Jewish and Samaritan.

3. Philip and Simon - 9:11 Simon was a sorcerer, one who used black magic (the occult) to achieve power over the city. Philip's arrival with miraculous signs was a clear challenge to him as people saw the real power of God, so he followed them in believing Philip's message (13). However, later (18-24) he tried to buy the power to impart the Holy Spirit like apostles had done. He was not really saved. To summarize:

- in verses 12-13 note, *when they..then he He wanted to keep those people.

- in verse 13 he was impressed by power, not by Jesus.

- in verse 23 it never says he received the Holy Spirit Peter says he is still captive to sin. Later history tells us he became the founder of a heretical sect.

In verse 25 the apostles now adopted the pattern of reaching Samaritans.

II. Philip and the Eunuch - 8:26-40 This is a familiar story so just two quick points:

1. God's direction The Eunuch was from Ethiopia (modern southern Egypt and Sudan, ancient Nubia). He was a worshipper of Jehovah and desirous of being a proselyte to Judaism. He was traveling southwest from Jerusalem down to Gaza in a chariot; God has Philip walk to where he is from Samaria which is north of Jerusalem. It is clear that Philip had to leave long before the Eunuch did; God arranged this opportunity!

2. in 36-39 we have the first clear hint of the mode of baptism used by the church They came to a body of water, that is, probably a stream or pond by the road. They went in and came out which indicates immersion, which is what the very word baptize means.

Philip then preached in Azotus (Ashdod in the Old Testament) and northward through villages until he reached Caesarea, where he settled and is still found there 20 years later in 21:8.

III. Saul and the Lord Jesus - 9:1-31 You know story well, so let's look primarily at overall thoughts:

1. the order of events There is some missing data here which we have supplied from the book of Galatians.

- Saul's conversion enroute to Damascus The New Scofield Reference Bible says AD 31-33, Unger says AD 36.

- a brief period of ministry in Damascus - 18-22

- three years in Arabia mentioned in Gal. 1:17 These are the many days mentioned in verse 23.

- further ministry in Damascus - 23-25 Compare Gal. 1:17 where it says he returned.

- going up to Jerusalem - 26-29 Compare Gal. 1:18-20.

- going to Caesarea - 30

- ministry in Tarsus - 30 Compare Gal. 1:21-24. This was either 4 or 7 years until AD 43, so it is a total of 7-10 years before Paul begins his prominent ministry in Acts.

2. what God was doing - 15 God chose Paul as a tool to take the Gospel to the Gentiles; God is gearing the church up to move in a new direction, both to the Gentiles of the Roman world and to Jews living abroad. So, God adds another apostle to spearhead this new movement and has him in training.

3. why God chose Saul He was thoroughly Jewish, raised in Jerusalem; he spoke the language and knew the culture but:

- he was born in Tarsus and therefore familiar with Greek culture and language.

- he was a Roman citizen and therefore had privileges which enabled him to have a wide ministry.

- he was theologically trained and therefore had credentials to deal with the Jews in synagogues.

- he was able to support himself in a secular trade as necessary.

III. Peter and the Wider Ministry - 9:32-43 Evidently Peter became involved in ministry to the villages of Judea and Samaria, beginning with 8:25 on his return trip to Jerusalem. He must have kept it up, according to verse 32. On this particular trip he healed Aeneas in Lydda and raised Dorcas from the dead at Joppa (this is notable because the last one to do that was Jesus Himself; it was definitely a sign of His power). God is preparing Peter during these years (number unknown) for what will happen in chapter 10, the acceptance of the Gentiles into the church.

- he is in an area that is partially Gentile and God works the same way!

- he stayed in Joppa with Simon, a tanner This was considered a ceremonially unclean occupation by the Jews because of contact with dead animals. God is preparing him to see that the Law has been set aside.

THE GOSPEL TO THE GENTILES Chs. 10-12

Section Outline:

I. Peter and Cornelius Ch. 10

II. Peter and the Jerusalem church Ch. 11

III. Peter and Herod Ch. 12

I. Peter and Cornelius - Ch. 10

1. the vision of Cornelius - 1-8 Cornelius was a Roman soldier, a full-fledged Gentile, serving in Caesarea, the Roman port city for Palestine. He was evidently a worshipper of Jehovah, but not a full proselyte because he was not circumcised (11:3). He had thrown away Roman idols! Now an angel appears to him and has him send for Peter at Joppa, which is 33 miles south, so the trip took four days there and back. Note:

a. God rewards seeking with light If a person wants it, He will send it.

b. God hears the prayers of nonbelievers (4) who sincerely seek Him.

c. God says seeking is not enough or He wouldn't have sent Peter!

2. the vision of Peter - 9-22 Peter is praying before lunch and sees this vision of a great sheet full of animals and is told to kill and eat. Peter, being a good Jew, knows the dietary laws and refuses to kill and eat unclean animals, but a voice says that they are declared cleansed by God. The first thought is that God is declaring the end of the law! But Peter recognizes (28) that God is declaring all men clean, that he can associate with and reach out to Gentiles. God taught it this way: the vision happened three times and instantly there were three Gentiles at his door! Peter readily agrees to go back with them.

3. the vindication by the Spirit - 23-48 Peter goes with them to Cornelius and preaches to those gathered. He took 6 men with him for witnesses, just in case (11:12). He tells them how to be saved and as they believe in their hearts (44), the Spirit falls on them and the sign of tongues is given (46), so Peter and the others will know this is a work of God. This is very significant:

a. the Holy Spirit is confirming that Gentiles can be saved This is the same manifestation as what occurred at Jerusalem and at Samaria, a Gentile Pentecost! The Holy Spirit is demonstrating that He will come upon all men alike.

b. the Holy Spirit is also showing how He will come from now on He will come instantly and without means on every believer alike.

c. God is revealing the mystery of the church to Peter, that Jew and Gentile will be welded into one body with no distinction.

d. the church has now entered phase 3 of its missionary program (1:8) The salvation of a Roman opens the door of ministry to whole of the Roman Empire, which was most of the known world! So, they are baptized and Peter stays to teach and instruct them.

II. Peter and the Jerusalem Church - Ch. 11

1. Peter's accounting to the Jerusalem church - 1-19 Some of the Jerusalem believers were pretty upset at Peter, not so much for preaching to Gentiles, but for eating with them which indicated fellowship and acceptance. Peter explained to the church all that had happened in chapter 10. His point was, "This is not my idea; it is God's doing (8,16-17)". At this, they were changed in their attitude. Verses 18-19 are very significant for two reasons:

a. it changed their doctrine The church has now discovered the truth that there will no longer be a distinction between Jew and Gentile, that the church will be one body in Christ composed of both. Compare Eph. 3:1-6. This was a hidden mystery, a sacred secret for ages but it is now made plain to the whole church.

b. it changed their practice They had been scattered and preached, but only to Jews wherever they went! Now the way is open for direct ministry to Gentiles and that follows immediately in 19-26.

c. it changed their image The church had been in favor with the common people (2:47; 5:13, 26). But now Law-loving Jews will hate Christians (12:2-3). Christianity will no longer be seen as a branch of Judaism.

2. the church at Antioch established - 20-30 This is important because Antioch became the mother church for the Gentile churches. They sent out the first missionaries. Antioch was a key city, the third largest in the Roman empire, some 300 miles north of Jerusalem. It was a very wicked place. When Jerusalem heard of the work there, it sent Barnabas to check it out and provide proper instruction, but the work soon grew so large that he went to Tarsus and got Saul, who had already been working with Gentiles, to help. The Antioch church was even able to send some famine relief money to Jerusalem and Barnabas and Saul took it there. Note:

- for the first time the church actively went after Gentiles

- the name Christian evolved (26) It was derogatory, not positive. The ending ian means of the party of. They were recognized as a party distinct from Judaism.

III. Peter and Herod - Ch. 12

1. Herod's attack on the church - 1-19 This Herod is the grandson of Herod the Great who tried to kill Christ at His birth and is just like him! He kills James (the disciple, John's brother; the James of verse 17 is Jesus' brother) and sees that the people like it so much that he's going to kill Peter after Passover. He locks him up with 16 soldiers to guard him, but through the prayers of the church, God delivers him and he goes into hiding out of the province.

2. God's attack on Herod - 20-23 God only tolerates such blasphemers so long. God smote him and he died of a horrible disease.

3. the point - 24-26 You can't oppose God!

- God will accomplish His task in spite of opposition

- opposition ultimately serves God's purpose This whole incident brought glory to God and strengthened the faith of the church.

II. The Itinerary of the Journey	13:4-14:28
III. The Conference at Jerusalem	15:1-35

Introductory Remarks: 13:1 is a key turning point in Acts. Up to this point the church has not spread over 300 miles from Jerusalem. From here to the end of the book it spreads to the whole of Roman Empire. Note four transitions in the life of the church here:

(1) from Jewish to Gentile ministry Phase 3 of its 1:8 commission.

(2) from Jerusalem to Antioch as its center

(3) from Peter's ministry to Paul's

(4) from natural missions to deliberate missions, the deliberate sending out of missionaries and church planting

I. The Maturation of a Church - 13:1-3 The church at Antioch began back in 11:20-21 with raw converts. It grew in 11:25-26 under the ministry, first of Barnabas, and then of Barnabas and Saul. By 13:1, it has reached full maturity as a church. Note its characteristics:

1. it had developed mature leaders (1) Not just the two external leaders, but leaders from within itself, at least five altogether.

2. it had a consistent ministry of the Word by those leaders. It has leaders that can lead it on to maturity without outside preaching and leadership.

3. it was seeking the will of God (2) They wanted to know God's mind, to do more, to know the next step. A maturing church is looking to God, not to imitate other churches.

4. it was burdened to plant other churches (3) It wanted to reach out beyond itself and plant the Gospel in other areas. Just as a mature Christian reproduces himself in converts, so a mature church seeks to reproduce itself in daughter churches. Note that this is the missionary program for Acts: plant churches in key places which can mature and reproduce themselves in their own areas.

II. The Itinerary of the Journey - 13:4-14:28

Verse	Place
13:4	Seleucia	- Antioch's port 16 miles away, then by boat to Cyprus, an island in the northeast Mediterranean and Barnabas' home
13:5	Salamis	- the largest city in eastern Cyprus, then traveling on foot 100 miles southwest to:
13:6	Paphos	- the provincial capital. The Roman proconsul is converted through a conflict with a sorcerer named Bar-Jesus. Then by boat back to the mainland.
13:13	Pamphylia	- a province in Asia Minor. The first stop is the city of Perga where Mark leaves them. Then they go on foot 100 miles north.
13:14	Antioch	(of Pisidia, not Syria), the capital of southern Galatia, the center of a system of military roads, a Roman colony. They stayed over a week but were driven out by persecution.
13:50-51	Iconium	- There is a response but a plot is formed to stone them so they fled to:
14:6	Lystra	- A city of Lycaonia, a thoroughly pagan city with a shrine to Jupiter (Zeus). Here the apostles were almost worshipped as gods but ultimately Paul was stoned and left for dead.
14:20	Derbe	- A neighboring city where they preached and then returned to:
14:21-23	Lystra, then Iconium, then Antioch	- now confirming converts and appointing elders and returning through:
14:24	Pisidia and Pamphylia	to Perga and then to:
14:25	Attalia	- the neighboring port city and then by boat home to:
14:26	Antioch	(of Syria) where they started.

Total Distance: Approximately 1200 miles Elapsed time: Possibly 3 years

Some special things to note from this journey:

1. Paul's methods in church planting process The process he used is typical of his whole missionary career.

a. he picked a key place (13:14) He always picked important centers.

b. he went to the most prepared people (15-16a) He went to the Jews of the dispersion, but in their synagogues were a host of Gentile God-fearers.

c. he used an acceptable method (16) He didn't start a protest at the local idol shrine! He taught in the synagogue.

d. he gathered a small group of converts (42-3) Some Jews but mostly Gentile God-fearers.

e. he used them to reach unprepared Gentiles (44)

f. he stayed and taught until they were established (14:22)

g. he trained leaders to take over and moved on (23)

2. Paul's relationship to the church at Antioch

a. he was sent out by the church (13:2-4) The Holy Spirit worked through the church to call the workers to service and send them out.

b. he reported back to the church (14:26-28) He returned, reviewed the work and stayed with them, perhaps a whole year. During this time Peter came to visit and the events of Gal. 2:11 and following occurred. Also, during this time the book of Galatians was written (the churches established on this trip into Asia Minor ARE the Galatians). The general description of this time is in 14:35.

III. The Conference at Jerusalem - 15:1-35 Date: AD 49, perhaps 10 years after the first real going to the Gentiles in the Cornelius incident.

1. the problem (1, 5) Men came from Jerusalem asserting that Gentiles must be circumcised and keep the Law in order to be saved. That is, Gentiles had to become Jews in order to be Christians because salvation is of the Jews. We refer to these people as Judaizers. The same group either went to or evolved on its own in Galatia itself (thus the letter to the Galatians). Paul and Barnabas withstood them strongly and the church decided to send a delegation to the apostles in Jerusalem about the matter.

2. the conference It is really three sets of testimonies:

a. Peter testified about how God began this by his experience with Cornelius (6-11) He argues from experience, saying that God gave them the Holy Spirit just like He gave Him to us.

b. Paul and Barnabas testified how God used them on their journey and confirmed their words with miraculous signs (12)

c. James (Jesus' brother and evidently now the head of the Jerusalem church) testifies that the Scriptures teach Gentiles will be saved but will still be Gentiles, not Jews in the Kingdom (13-18)

3. the decision (19-21) This was sent by a letter (23-29) and accompanied by Judas and Silas. They were to abstain from three things;

- things offered to idols
- sexual immorality
- meat eaten with blood in it

Not only would these things keep them from offending the Jews, but they are particular moral sins to which Gentiles were prone. It is saying they must cut themselves off completely from their idolatrous past, from the immoral sexual patterns of heathen worship and culture, and that they are still under the Genesis 9 prohibition given to Noah about blood being a sacred symbol of life.

THE SECOND MISSIONARY JOURNEY 15:36-18:22

Section Outline:

I. Churches Revisited in Asia	15:36-16:8
II. Churches Planted in Macedonia	16:9-17:14
III. Churches Planted in Achaia	17:15-18:17
IV. The Return to Antioch	18:18-22

I. Introductory Notes

1. the reason for the trip (15:36) It was to visit the churches established on the first trip and see how they were faring, particularly after the Galatian problem and letter. Paul took the Jerusalem conference decrees with him to deliver (16:4).

2. the apostolic argument (15:36-41) Barnabas wanted to take Mark again and give him a second chance (he deserted them on the first trip -13:13). Paul was so opposed to this that they separated and Barnabas took Mark and went to Cyprus, while Paul took Silas and went overland through Cilicia to Galatia.

II. The Itinerary of the Trip.

Verse	Place
15:41	Syria then Cilicia	- where the Antioch church worked locally and where Paul had labored years in waiting
16:1	Galatian churches	- Derbe, Lystra, Iconium. Here he meets and recruits Timothy.
16:6-8	thru Asia Minor	- preaching in Galatia and Phrygia but heading west. Every attempt is stifled and they wind up at Troas where Paul sees a vision.
16:9	entry of Macedonia	- they sail to Neapolis and go overland to:
16:12	Philippi	- Lydia is converted and then the jailer is converted
17:1	Thessalonica	- a riot occurs
17:10	Berea	- there is another disturbance and Paul sails south
17:14-15	Achaia	- southern Greece to the city of Athens and the scene on Mars Hill
18:1	Corinth	- Paul stays over a year and a half. There is another riot. He goes to:
18:18	Cenchrae	- and sets sail for home. On the way he stops at:
18:19	Ephesus	- preaches a little there and lands at:
18:22	Caesarea	- goes up to Jerusalem for the feast (Passover?) and then home to Antioch.

Total Distance: about 2200 miles

Time Elapsed: about 2 years

III. Some Important Things to Consider

1. the circumcision of Timothy (16:3) Why would Paul do this after the chapter 15 controversy and while carrying letter saying that circumcision is not necessary for Gentiles? It seems like a reversal of thinking, but that is not so. Here it is not a matter of justification before God, but of ability to witness to the Jews in that area who knew his mother was Jewish and he should therefore be circumcised. Paul's principle is to "become all things to all men to win some".

2. the presence of Luke (16:10, 40) The pronoun we shows Luke joined Paul at Troas and went along to Philippi, where he evidently remained to build up the church, while Paul went on to Thessalonica.

3. God's preparation of the Mediterranean world This makes possible all that Paul is able to do on this journey and particularly as he entered Europe. Almost all the known world was united under the jurisdiction of Rome. This brought:

- Roman travel A series of good military roads connected all major cities and shipping and the roads were protected. The Via Ignatia that led to Rome begins at Philippi.

- Roman peace Rome enforced peace and allowed free travel between areas of its jurisdiction.

- Roman law Now the world had a common higher law. Roman citizenship guaranteed some measure of justice everywhere. Paul used this at Philippi which was a Roman colony (all residents had citizenship).

4. the importance of women Lydia is the first convert in Europe (16:13-14). There is also a woman convert at Athens. And note the importance of Priscilla at Corinth and later at Ephesus. It seems that often the first converts were women and many are mentioned in Paul's letters. Women were raised to a new level of importance in the church and to equal status before the Lord. This was contrary to paganism which treated them as objects or Judaism which practically made them come to God through the husband.

5. the two households saved and baptized Lydia's (16:15) and the jailer's (16:30-34). Please note that a household included all the servants as well as children and it is clear that all heard the message, all believed and then all were baptized. It was not "family salvation" through one member or infant baptism.

6. the resistance of Thessalonica (17:5) Hard core Jews there attempted a public assault and even pursued Paul to Berea to cause trouble in that city, yet God planted a church. Paul wrote two letters back to Thessalonica from Corinth during his two year stay there.

7. the intellectualism of Athens (17:16-18,21) They were the cultural and philosophical center of the world, given to every conceivable idea from pleasure-seeking to self-denial. But verse 16 says it was all idolatry! Paul calls them very "religious", but the Greek word has the term for demon in it. They were great worshippers of demons! See what a difficult time Paul had here; it is his only major stay where no church was actually planted.

8. the corruption of Corinth Corinth was a thriving center of trade and shipping and with it came all kinds of vice. Just look at the problems in the Corinthian church! Its temple of Apollo had 1,000 prostitutes; the city was given to immorality and greed. The term "to Corinthianize" made it into the Greek language as a derogatory saying! Yet note 18:10; God had many people there and a thriving church was planted.

9. caring for the new believers It may seem like on this trip Paul stayed briefly and left new converts to fend for selves, but notice that Luke stayed at Philippi, probably for 4 years until Paul made it back there on his third journey. Silas and Timothy were left at Berea to establish the church there while Paul went alone to Athens and waited for them. 1 Thess. 3:1-2 implies that they, or at least Timothy, came and Paul sent them back to Thessalonica to strengthen the church and Paul himself stayed in Corinth a long time. So, all the churches were cared for at length!

THE THIRD MISSIONARY JOURNEY 18:23-21:14

Section Outline:

- I. To Ephesus 18:23-28
- II. In Ephesus 19
- III. To Jerusalem 20:1-21:14

I. The Itinerary of the Trip

Verse	Place
18:23	overland to Galatia and Phrygia	- confirming the work of the second journey
19:1	through interior to Ephesus	- to keep Paul's promise. He stayed 3 years and left after a riot about the goddess Diana

20:1	to Macedonia
20:2	to Achaia (Greece)	- stayed 3 months at Corinth until a plot formed
20:3	back to Macedonia	- the city of Philippi
20:6	sailed to Troas	- stayed one week; Eutychus falls out a window
20:13-15	Assos-Mitylene-Kios-Samos-Miletus	- a series of quick stops. Paul calls the Ephesian elders for a farewell.
21:1-3	Cos-Rhodes-Patara-Tyre	- where he stayed seven days with the brethren
21:7-8	Ptoemais-Caesarea	- where he stayed with Philip
21:15	Jerusalem at last

Total Distance: about 3100 miles Time elapsed: 3-4 years

Major Accomplishments:

- 1. the building of the church at Ephesus This was a three year project.
- 2. the writing of Scriptures Three New Testament letters were written this trip:
 - a. 1 Corinthians while at Ephesus
 - b. 2 Corinthians while in Macedonia
 - c. Romans while at Corinth

II. The Ephesian Years

- 1. Apollos 18:24-28 Priscilla and Aquila had evidently begun a fledgling work there already; Apollos came to town teaching accurately about Jesus from the Old Testament, having only had the message and baptism of John. Priscilla and Aquila were able to fill in the missing points and he became a mighty defender of the Gospel. He then went to Corinth (thus the Apollos faction in 1 Corinthians).
- 2. the disciples of John 19:1-7 They weren't even as informed as Apollos; they didn't even know John's teaching about Jesus. Paul led them to Christ and they were now baptized in His Name. This is the only case of "rebaptism" in the New Testament; evidently Paul's belief was that only baptism of a believer in Christ was valid baptism. Note that the Holy Spirit came upon them.
- 3. triumph over the occult 19:11-19 Note the widespread occult practices of the day. It is not new! Note the power of Jesus and His disciples over demons and also the utter abandoning of occult practices and materials by believers. Believers have no place messing with astrology, palm readings, seances, and so on.
- 4. the riot 19:23-41 Business for the silversmiths began to decline; the Gospel had a social effect! What a tremendous change it can make in a town. Note also verse 31. The Gospel had reached some important people; they warned Paul not to go into the assembly and were on his side. The term officials in the Greek is Asiarchs, those entrusted with maintaining proper emperor-worship at festivals! Don't think God saves only the lowly or common people; Acts clearly shows He can reach even government officials!

III. The Tour of Macedonia and Greece - 19:21-22 It had two primary purposes:

- 1. strengthening of the churches
- 2. gathering of a relief offering for believers at Jerusalem Compare 2 Cor. 8:1-7, 9:1-5; Rom. 15:23-29. That's why Paul was accompanied by representatives of the churches (20:4). Note that Luke rejoined the party at Philippi (20:6) and stayed with Paul for the rest of the book.

IV. The Voyage to Jerusalem Remember that sailing in that day was in small ships which did not usually venture out on the open sea but stayed near land and put in to shore often. So, there were many brief stops. Note three things:

- 1. Troas - 20:6-12 Here we have a picture of the daily life of the Gentile church:
 - they met on Sunday, the first day of the week They had a regular pattern of worship.
 - they met in evening after a hard day's work.
 - they followed the Jerusalem pattern They had teaching, the Lord's supper, a fellowship meal, and fellowship with each other.
 - they worshipped as long as needed but were still human Eutychus fell asleep!

2. the farewell to the Ephesian elders - 20:17-38 It shows the extent of organization in the Ephesian church, but more than that, it is a key passage for any pastor or local church leader, elder or deacon. It is a real glimpse into the heart of Paul.

3. the gift of prophecy - 20:22-23 Paul felt the Holy Spirit was compelling him to go to Jerusalem, yet was constantly warning him at every stop that bonds and afflictions awaited him there, for example at Tyre (21:4) and at Caesarea (21:10-12). The New Testament often speaks of the gift of prophecy, the direct revelation of a message by God to a gifted person. This was used by God to establish the church, especially before they had the New Testament Scriptures. Note that Paul wasn't being disobedient in going to Jerusalem; the Holy Spirit told him to go. Human feelings impacted others when the Holy Spirit told them what would happen in Jerusalem and they said, "Don't go!". He went anyway. What an example for us!

PAUL ARRESTED AT JERUSALEM 21:15-23:35

Section Outline:

I. Paul's Arrest	21:15-40
II. Paul's Defense to the Mob	22
III. Paul's Defense to the Sanhedrin	23

I. Paul's Arrest - 21:15-40

1. Paul's arrival - AD 56 Things have changed much in Jerusalem while Paul has been gone. It is a time of turmoil, unrest, and violence with the threat of insurrection. Two years earlier (38) there was a serious revolt involving 4,000 people. Jewish patriotism is building towards the final revolt that caused Rome to destroy Jerusalem 14 years later in AD 70. It has even affected the church (20-21) and Paul is not in good favor with many Jewish believers.

2. the attempt at placation The Apostles suggest that Paul show his respect for the customs of Judaism by paying the expenses for the sacrifices of four men who were just finishing a Nazirite vow. This placed Paul in the Temple.

3. the mob (27) Some Jews from Asia (where Paul had ministered on his third journey) were there for the feast and recognized Paul. They roused a mob scene on grounds that he had taken Gentiles into the Temple (28-29), which he hadn't.

4. the arrest (31-32) Attached to one corner of the Temple proper was the Fortress of Antonia where a garrison of the Roman 10th legion was quartered. The Roman commander heard of the mob and immediately took officers (centurions) and their men (at least 200 soldiers) down the steps into the Temple and seized Paul.

II. Paul's Defense to the Mob - Ch. 22 As Paul is being carried up the stairs, he talks the commander into letting him speak to the mob. His defense is in three parts:

1. his conduct before conversion (1-5) He stresses that he was a zealous Jew and persecutor of Christians.

2. his conversion (6-16) He tells of his encounter with Jesus on the Damascus Road, of his blinding and the restoration of sight by Ananias. Note that verse 16 is in the past tense, having called. His baptism was the symbol to show that his sins had been washed away by having called on Christ.

3. his commission (17-21) He stresses that God told him to leave Jerusalem and go to the Gentiles. At that, the crowd became violent and the commander ordered Paul scourged to extract a confession of his crime. Paul averts it by mentioning his Roman citizenship, so the commander orders a hearing before the Sanhedrin to find out exactly what they have against Paul.

An Important Note: The Jews' response indicates that they had irrevocably refused Jesus Christ (as we saw in the early chapters repeatedly, especially with Stephen) and sealed their own fate. Only 14 years later God destroyed the city and brought utter destruction upon "this generation".

III. Paul's Defense to the Sanhedrin - Ch. 23

1. Paul's mistake The High Priest has him smacked on the mouth and he gets hot and tells the man he's a hypocrite! Paul was human! But when he was told of the man's position, he bowed to the Scriptures and admitted his mistake (5).

2. Paul's wisdom (6) He perceived the two parties in the Sanhedrin and chose a way of speaking about his case that he knew would divide them! He identified himself as a Pharisee and said his only crime was preaching resurrection. He actually had Pharisees coming to his defense! The dispute became violent and the commander took Paul back to jail for safety.

3. the conspiracy (12-13) 40 men bound themselves under a curse to kill Paul. But Paul has a nephew (16), his sister's son living in Jerusalem, who warns Paul. Paul sends him to explain to the commander, who determines to send Paul to Caesarea to Felix the Roman Governor of the province. He sends him by night with an armed guard of 400 soldiers, along with a letter explaining the case (25-30). His thought is that at Caesarea there will be less danger of violence by the Jews.

PAUL HELD AT CAESAREA 24-26

Section Outline:

I. Paul Before Felix	24
II. Paul Before Festus	25
III. Paul Before Agrippa	26

Paul is now tried by Felix and left bound at Caesarea for two years (AD 56-58). Then he is tried again and sent on to Rome.

I. Paul Before Felix - Ch. 24

1. Felix is a Roman Procurator (One who "procured" funds for the Emperor!) He was a former slave who gained freedom. Tacitus wrote, "He reveled in cruelty and lust and wielded the power of a king with the mind of a slave." Drusilla was his third wife and he had enticed her away from her husband. He often employed "daggersmen" for his purposes. This is the kind of man to dispense justice?!

2. the accusations against Paul (5-6) The Jews hired an orator to state their case; they were careful to state it in a political way that would concern a Roman governor. They said Paul was:

- a troublemaker, one who breeds disturbances across the Empire (which very much wanted peace in every province)

- a heretic, the leader of an illicit religion or cult separate from Judaism and not recognized as a legal religion by Rome

- a desecrator who tried to desecrate the Temple by bringing in Gentiles. The Romans allowed the Jews the right of execution in this case, even of Roman citizens!

3. Paul's defense He says there was:

- no time (11) He had been in Jerusalem only 5-6 days after a three year absence; there was no time for him to stage an insurrection.

- no trouble (12) He was not found talking to crowds but worshipping.

- no heresy (13-14) He simply claimed that the promises made to the fathers were fulfilled in Christ, that Christ-followers were not really a sect.

- no animosity (17) He had even brought an offering to help the poor in Jerusalem.

- no witnesses (18-19) The Jews from Asia who accused him were not here to testify.

- no crime (20) Even the Sanhedrin didn't convict him in Jerusalem.

4. the disposition Felix thought of a pretext to postpone the case and kept Paul in jail. He even let Paul witness to him a number of times, but hoped for a bribe! Finally, he lost his office through his cruel handling of a problem in Caesarea two years later!

II. Paul Before Festus - Ch. 25

1. Festus, the new procurator was an honest, fair man who appears to be concerned to get the facts, to rule well and to uphold Roman law. He goes right to Jerusalem and the Jews mention Paul to him. They want him brought back to Jerusalem because their case is too weak and they want to ambush him on the way. But he won't do it and makes them come again to Caesarea.

2. the trial It is reported summarily in verses 7-8. Festus realized that the crime was a religious matter and wanted to be in favor with the Jews, so he asked if Paul would go to Jerusalem for yet another trial.

3. Paul's appeal (10-12) Paul's point is: "I am being accused of a crime against Rome, therefore I am standing now before Rome's appointed authority, so if you will not decide the case, then I appeal to Caesar". Roman citizens had the right of direct appeal to the Emperor. This is another turning point in the book. God uses this appeal to see that Paul gets to Rome as He promised him (23:11).

4. Festus' problem (20, 26-27) He doesn't understand the religious accusations of the Jews and must have a charge to send to the Emperor against Paul that is of some consequence. So, he turns to seek advice from Agrippa who comes to visit him.

III. Paul Before Agrippa - Ch. 26

1. King Agrippa is Herod Agrippa II, the son of Herod Agrippa I of 12:1, and the grandson of Herod the Great. He ruled the area northeast of Palestine, but he was a practicing Jew and, because of his friendship with the Imperial Court, he got the right to appoint the Jewish High Priest in Jerusalem. As a practicing Jew he was well acquainted with Christianity. He was also corrupt; he was involved in an incestuous relationship with his own sister, Bernice.

2. Paul's defense He turns this hearing into an opportunity to witness! This is now the third time we have Paul's testimony recorded in Acts. See in it an effective plan to share the Gospel and use it for yourself!

SELF First Paul shares his own testimony.

B.C. - what he was before Christ (1-11)

- the positive (4-5) He was good, moral and religious.

- the negative (9-11) He was a zealous persecutor of Christians.

D.C.- how he discovered Christ (12-15)

A.C.- what he was like after he met Christ (19-21)

SCRIPTURE (22-23) He then shares the scriptural basis for his faith.

SUGGESTION (24-27) He suggests that the hearer also receive Christ.

3. Agrippa's response (28-32) The NIV translation, Do you think that in such a short time you can persuade me to be a Christian? is better than the KJV's, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian. He was actually being haughty about Paul's appeal to him; however, he concurred that Paul was innocent of any Roman charges. Still, Paul had appealed to Caesar and so he had to be sent to Rome.

THE JOURNEY TO ROME Chs. 27-28

Section Outline:

- I. The Hazardous Journey 27
- II. The Maltese Winter 28:1-10
- III. Paul at Rome 28:11-30

I. The Journey Luke gives a whole chapter and a half to it. Why? Probably for two reasons: 1) when Luke wrote only two years later it was still very fresh and important in his mind because it had brought Paul to the wonderful Roman ministry and he was along on the journey, and 2) to show God's sovereign direction and protection in Paul's ministry. God wanted him to minister in Rome!

1. Outline of the Trip

Verse Place

- | | | |
|------|-------------------------|--|
| 27:1 | Departure from Caesarea | |
| 27:3 | Sidon | - it is above Crete and sheltered from the prevailing west winds |
| 27:5 | Myra | - a port on the southern coast of Asia Minor. Here they change ships onto a grain ship going from Egypt to Rome. Egypt was Rome's breadbasket; such ships were considered to be in imperial service, therefore the centurion was able to use it. |
| 27:8 | Fair Havens, Crete | - It was difficult sailing (9) because it was Sept.-Oct. and sailing normally ceased for the Winter by that time. The captain attempted to make Phoenix but a hurricane-like storm from the northeast drove them out to sea and they drifted helplessly for 2 weeks. |
| 28:1 | Shipwreck on Malta | - They spent the remainder of winter there. |

28:11-12 Syracuse, Sicily - They caught a ride on another grain ship.
 28:13 Rhegium - on the toe of Italy
 28:13 Puteoli - They walked the famous Appian Way to Rome, approximately 100 miles north.
 28:16 Rome at last!

Total Distance: approximately 1400 miles Total Time: approximately 6 months Date: 58-59 AD

2. Some lessons from the trip:

a. about appearances (12-13) Appearances said the south wind would blow them north to Phoenix. Be careful; appearances can be deceiving!

b. about God's presence (23) He'll never forsake you, not even in your darkest hours.

c. about God's promises (24) Compare 23:11. He never breaks even one of them.

d. about God's protection (44) 276 men were on board, some of whom couldn't even swim, and fell into surf so rough that it tore the ship apart, yet all arrived safely on land!

e. about expectations Compare Paul's expectation in Rom. 15:23-24. God doesn't always do things the way you expect!

II. The Winter on Malta - 28:1-10 This fulfills Mk. 16:18 on two counts and is wonderful evidence from God of the truth of His word in the life of Paul.

1. the snakebite (3,5) Don't try this at home like some snake-handling churches in Kentucky do! God granted a miraculous intervention in this case. Also, see how the culture was; they so easily deified the creation and not the Creator!

2. the healings (8-9) These furnished an open door for Gospel ministry there.

III. The Ministry at Rome - 28:11-30 It lasted two years while Paul was imprisoned there. The church had already been established in Rome, possibly by converts returning home after Pentecost.

1. ministry to the Jews He first calls the Jewish leaders together, as always, and tries to convince them of the Gospel, but, like always, the majority reject Christ. It was sort of a final opportunity offered to the Jewish community in the capitol of the world and they rejected it, sealing the decisions made by Jews in other places and particularly in Jerusalem which began with rejecting Christ in the flesh. Paul's proclamation in verses 27-28 is significant. Jews, because of their obstinacy, will be blinded and God will deal with the Gentiles during this age.

2. personal ministry (30-31) Paul had special treatment as a prisoner. He was allowed to rent a house and be guarded by a soldier. This had a tremendous effect, compare Phil. 1:12-14. He was able to win many soldiers who guarded him (4:22) and probably some of Caesar's own household were won by him. He also directed the ministry of others like Epaphras, Luke, Mark, Timothy, and Aristarchus while there. One of his converts while imprisoned is a runaway slave named Onesimus who became like a son to him! What an encouragement to minister in whatever circumstances you find yourself!

3. written ministry During these two years Paul wrote his "Prison Epistles," Ephesians, Colossians, Philippians, and Philemon, some of the most wonderful and deepest books of the New Testament.

IV. Postlude Luke leaves off story here. Tradition says (and it seems so from Scripture) that Paul was released. He probably never made it to trial seeing there were no real charges against him and the Jews at Rome did not press his case. During the following year or longer of freedom that followed, Paul probably traveled in ministry again through Macedonia, Achaia, and Asia and then perhaps on to Spain as he originally planned. He also wrote 1 Timothy and Titus. Eventually though, he was arrested again, this time just as Nero began his famous hatred against Christians. In prison again in Rome, he wrote 2 Timothy where he indicates that he knows his time has come to die. Tradition says that he was beheaded, a martyr for Jesus Christ.

ROMANS 1:1-15 AN INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOK

1:1-7 Welcome To Romans

There are longer books in the New Testament, but there is certainly no book that explains and delineates the core of the Christian message better than it does. Romans is a letter written by Paul near the end of his third missionary journey to the Christians in Rome, a place he had never been and people he had never seen. Compare 1:13, 15:23-29. He intended to go and visit them after he returned to Jerusalem. His intention was fulfilled, but he ended up there as a prisoner in chains, rather than a traveler to Spain. But anyway, a friend, Phoebe (16:1-2) was evidently going to Rome and Paul wrote this letter and sent it by her hand to prepare the way for his coming and to give to them the core of his message. Now, I want you to notice three things about this church at Rome:

(1) 1:8 - it was important Its good reputation was spreading to the whole Roman Empire. It was in a strategic location to have an effect on the world. It was said that "all roads lead to Rome". Rome was center of commerce, business, and government. A witness here could change the world; thus, it was important that this church be well grounded and firm. Friends, we are in a strategic area, here in Philadelphia. There are something like 4 million people here of every background, color, and nationality imaginable. It is an area that draws and attracts the business community, which affects the entire state and the eastern seaboard. We are in a place where our stand for Christ can make a difference in the world much better than if we were in a little town in the hills of Potter County. So, Paul's message here is especially important to us!

(2) 15:14-15 - it was mature This is not a letter written to new converts, to babes in Christ, but to a church that had knowledge and competence. We are a mature church, have had years of solid Bible teaching, but we need Romans to remind us again of the important points of our faith and practice, of the bedrock from which we are hewn.

(3) 16:19 - it was obedient to the Lord. Check the context. It had not fallen into any of Satan's snares, been deceived into false doctrine or even fallen into divisions among themselves. This letter was designed to help keep it that way! Folks, we've been true to the Lord; we haven't wavered, but Romans will help keep us on guard, keep us on right track. This book is just meant for us!

OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

I. Introduction	1:1-17
II. God's Grace (doctrinal)	Chs. 1-8
III. God's Government (dispensational)	Chs. 9-11
IV. God's Guidance (developmental)	Chs. 12-15
V. Conclusion	15:24-16:27

Now, let's go back to the opening seven verses of the letter and find in Paul's greeting some very important facts that establish the viewpoint that Paul has about himself and about the church at Rome, and therefore the viewpoint from which we should approach not only this Book, but the Christian Life:

I. Our Vocation (1) Paul describes to them who he is and what his life is all about in three phrases. We are not what he was in the strictest sense; we are not apostles placed into a special office among the churches as he was. But everything he says about his vocation is also true of us:

1. we are servants The word is doulos which means bonds slave. The picture is that of Ex. 21:2, 5-6. Here's a master who set his servant free, but the servant didn't want to be free; he loved the master and became his devoted willing servant for life. Friend, that's us! In Christ you were set free from slavery to sin but you acknowledged Christ as your Lord, that is, Master. In love you submitted yourself to be His servant for life. You are not your own! Your existence here is not to please yourself, to do what you please, to follow plans you like. Your life belongs to Him, to do what He pleases, to follow His plans. We'd better get that through our heads! We exist only to please Him.

2. we are sent The word apostle means "one sent out". Note he was a called apostle; the Master called him and sent him out. Much like you would call your employee and send him to do a job. We are in this world as servants with a job to do. Christ called us to Himself and sent us into the world for a purpose. We are a people with a purpose; God saved us to accomplish something.

3. we are separated, limited to a specific, single purpose and that purpose is the Gospel of God, the good news of what God has done in Jesus Christ. We are sent to proclaim it in the world. That is the mission of our lives. That is what each of us is to be about. We may accomplish it in different ways, such as preaching, teaching, witnessing, tracts, or practical ministries. But the goal is that in all we do the end result is that the Gospel is proclaimed and people come to Jesus Christ.

II. Our Message (2-5) Now, Paul takes a brief look at the message we are to take into the world. We have:

1. a message that was promised It was given ahead of time in the Old Testament. It was looked for and waited for for hundreds of years. We have a precious message to bear, the fulfillment of God's plan of redemption! Because of this, Paul quotes the Old Testament time and again in this letter. It is not a newly dreamed up message of man, but the very fulfillment of the Word of God.

2. a message that is about a Person The Good news we have is really summed up in a Person, the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul mentions His Humanity as the Seed of David and His Deity as the Son of God, which was proved by the resurrection. God became man in Jesus Christ and He remains now the eternal God-Man. Fully God and fully man. We are not here to tell men how to make a better world or how to solve the world's ills. We are here to tell them about Jesus Christ, the God-Man who died for their sins and rose again.

3. a message that must be published It is for His Name's sake that we have our assignment: to publish the message, to proclaim it high and low to Jew and Gentile, to the ends of the earth, so that others might come to faith. Folks, that's what we're here for. We are people who have a message to proclaim to a needy world. That is the purpose of our life on earth! But note that in that purpose there is a great privilege:

III. Our Position (6-7) We as believers have a wonderful position, a beautiful standing in Christ:

1. we are selected We are called too. We are those who have heard the message and responded to God's call. We belong to Jesus Christ. We are a select group of people; from among all the people on earth, all 7 billion, we are called His people.

2. we are special We are the beloved of God. Now, God loves the world, but we are His beloved because we are in Jesus Christ. We are a special set-apart people, the pearl of great price that cost God all he had to purchase! He loves us in a way that is unique in the universe.

3. we are saints We are not "called to become saints" or merely "called saints", holy ones. We are not people who have been declared saints by men but people that have in Jesus Christ been declared holy and pure and righteous. That is our position before God, selected from among all people, beloved by Him in a unique way, and declared of all men to be holy right now. And it is in light of our privilege that our purpose comes. Seeing the position that God has put us in, should we not willingly get on with devoting our lives to their God-given purpose, to bearing the Message of His Son to all men?!

What are you living for today? What is the goal and purpose of your life? Is it to gather things, to be happy, or is it to serve Jesus Christ? During the closing months of World War II, a group of American soldiers set about to rebuild a partially destroyed cathedral in one of the bombed-out towns of southern Europe. They were able to reconstruct the walls and roof, restore the windows and pews. One GI had been assigned to repair the life-sized white marble statue of Christ that stood by the door. Not being able to find the hands of the figure in the rubble, he was about to admit failure and throw the statue on the rubbish heap. Then he was struck by an idea. He found a white rectangle of cardboard, tied a length of string to its two corners, and hung it around the neck of the statue. On the cardboard he wrote these words: "I have no hands but yours!" You are the hands of Jesus Christ to accomplish His purpose in this world. Is that what you are doing?

ROMANS 1:1-15 AN INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOK

1:8-15 A Shepherd's Heart

As Paul opens his letter, he gives us a glimpse of his heart and we find that it is the heart of a shepherd; it is always on the sheep. Compare 2 Cor. 11:23-28. What do you think bothered him most, those persecutions and hardships or his concern for the churches? Most of us, in facing the things Paul faced, would become totally self-centered, wrapped up in our own problems and deliverance from them. Not Paul; he had a shepherd's heart; he loved the sheep more than anything! This is exactly the kind of heart every pastor ought to have (the Greek for pastor is literally shepherd). It is the kind of heart every Christian leader should have as an elder, deacon, teacher, or youth worker; this is the heart you ought to have. It is the kind of heart every Christian ought to have, leader or not, a heart that loves the flock. Now, let's see how Paul's love revealed itself:

I. A Leader Lifts Up His People in Prayer (8-10) Paul prayed for those Roman believers even though he had never seen them! These verses reveal the prayer life of Paul as it relates to this church and probably to every other church. The real sign of his love for these folks is that they fill his prayer life! A Christian leader needs to have a prayer life, one that is filled with the concerns of his people. First, do you have a prayer life? Do you spend serious daily quantities of time in prayer?

Then, what is your prayer life filled with? With personal concerns or needs of others? That reveals you who you love most! Now, see the elements of his praying that he brings out here:

1. he praises God for them sincerely (8) Paul starts seven other New Testament letters this way too. Let me just read 1 Cor. 1:4, Phil. 1:3-4. I thank my God is not just a trite phrase like "Thank God for your help". Paul meant that when he prayed for these folks, he literally thanked God in prayer for them. Now, note which ones:

a. for all of them He prayed, not "thanks God, for the believers at Rome" but he thanked God for each and every one that he knew as individuals and families and groups. Compare Ch. 16 and try applying it beg. w. verse 3! Now note what he gave thanks for:

b. for their testimony for Christ He gave thanks for their standing firm, their witness to the life-transforming power of Christ, given in different ways in their various lives. But it gained for the entire church a reputation that was spreading throughout the whole Roman Empire and having an influence everywhere because of it. He did not give thanks that they did well in business or that they were physically well, but that they were fulfilling their purpose on this earth, being witnesses. Now, I don't know about you but this verse puts me to shame. Thanksgiving is the thing I do least of in prayer and if I do, it is usually for personal things. I need to learn in praying to thank God for the people in my life! Is your heart filled w. thanksgiving?

2. he prays for them constantly (9) Thanksgiving is only part of his prayer life; he also prays for their needs, but the emphasis in this verse is how often he does it, constantly! Daily and through the day he prayed for them; they filled his prayer life (along with other churches). But note also:

3. he prays for them specifically (10) He did not pray "God bless the church at Rome, at Philippi, and at Colossae, Amen". He prayed specifically about a trip he planned to go there. I firmly believe Paul had prayer lists, he had to! They may have been memorized or written but he had them. I think the greetings of Rom. 16 probably were an elaboration of his prayer list for Rome! He prayed for them as individuals and for their needs. What fills your prayer life? Leaders, what fills yours? Teachers, youth workers, how about yours?

II. A Leader Longs For His People (11-13) Paul longed to be with them and see them. The Greek word is a strong word meaning to really long, to deeply desire. His heart yearned to be with them. A leader loves to be with his people; it is the fondest desire of his heart, but here's why:

1. he longs to feed them (11) He means "I long to help you grow spiritually, strengthen, encourage, teach, minister to you." Paul longed to use the gifts God had given him to benefit them. Every Christian ought to have a ministry based on the gifts God has given him. It may be public or private, big or small, but the desire of your heart ought to be to do that thing for others, to benefit others by it! Moreover:

2. he longs to fellowship with them (12) He doesn't mean to sit down and enjoy food and have a good time or tell Christian jokes and laugh. There's nothing wrong with those things, but what he really longs to be with them for is mutual spiritual encouragement, to share together the concerns of their hearts, to comfort and encourage each other in Christ, to pray with each other. That is fellowship! Note his desire was not one of a superior to bless the inferior; it was a mutual thing. He needed their strengthening and support and they his! Thirdly:

3. he longs to have fruit among them (13) Paul wants a harvest there; I believe he wants to be able to work with them there in Rome to win others to Christ. That fits the context of the next verses. His desire was not to go and be part of a tight little clique of saved people and enjoy them forever, but with them to win still others and grow the church there. What's the desire of your heart? Do you love the ministry God's given you? Do you love doing it? Do you love being together? Do you just enjoy each other's company or do you really long to minister and share with each other and work together serving the Master?

III. A Leader Loves All People (14-15) Paul's heart was big; it went beyond the Church at Rome to all those in Rome and to the rest of the world. Paul's heart came to be like God's heart, which is not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance. See:

1. he feels an obligation to all (14) He owes something to them because God saved him; He reached down by grace and saved a blaspheming, Christ-hating Pharisee. He feels a debt to every man, whether a Greek or a barbarian (non-Greek-speaker), whether wise or foolish. Paul's heart was burdened for the lost; it longed that they might hear and so:

2. he is always ready to fulfill it (15) He is eager, ready, anxious; he can't wait to get there and bring the message along with them to the Romans. Now that's a leader's heart; it's open, not closed; it encompasses the world, all the lost, the unsaved. Does your heart go beyond this church, your Christian friends and brothers? Are the people of Glen-side and Ardsley and North Hills on your heart? Do you stand ready to reach them?

Oh folks, if your heart really belongs to God, is wrapped up with Him, it will become like His. It will lift up your brethren in prayer; it will long for them; it will love all men and want to see them saved. I want to leave you with an Old Testament verse from the KJV, 2 Kings 10:15, And when (Jehu) was departed from there he came upon Jehonadab, the son of Rechab, coming to meet him; and he greeted him and said to him "Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thy heart?" And Jehonadab answered, "It is." (Jehu says) "If it be, give me thy hand!" And he gave him his hand and he took him up with him into the chariot". And off they went to serve God together. Is your heart right tonight? Is it like God's, like Paul's? Does is have the same longings and desires as his? If so, then give me your hand and let's serve God together!

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

The Gospel: God's Good News To Us - 1:1-17

On Easter and Good Friday as we focused on Christ's death on the cross and His resurrection from the dead, what we were really celebrating was the fact that God provided salvation for us through Jesus. But what does that really mean? In Eph. 3:18 Paul says he prayed that all believers would to have power, ...to grasp how wide and long and high and deep is the love of Christ. To say, "Jesus loves me" is simple enough and is true, but evidently God wants us to go much deeper and to grasp all the dimensions of how great that love really is and what it means to us. Likewise, to say that, "I am saved" or that, "Jesus saved me" is a simple concept that can be simply understood, but maturity requires us to grasp how wide and long and high and deep that salvation really is, to understand the utter greatness of the thing that God has provided for us. So today we're going to embark together on a study of the first 8 chapters of the book of Romans. In these chapters Paul gives us what is probably the longest and most systematic explanation in all the Bible of what our salvation really means. By way of:

Introduction Let's read verses (7-15). There is lots of good stuff in those verses that we could study, but for our purposes, two things are really obvious. First:

1. Paul had never been to Rome but knew and loved the Roman church We have no idea how the church got planted in Rome but it obviously happened very early on and by the time Paul wrote, the Roman church had a reputation throughout the whole of the Empire. Paul wrote this letter near the end of his third missionary journey about 57 AD to believers he had never seen in a place he had never been, even though he prayed for them continually. Actually, he was planning to go and visit them after he returned to Jerusalem, but we know it didn't exactly work out as he planned and he ended up there a few years later as a prisoner in chains instead. However, at this point, he wrote them this letter to prepare the way for his planned visit. Why?

2. Paul wrote to make sure the Romans clearly understood the Good News or the Gospel that he preached. That is, he wanted to make clear to them the very core of the message that he proclaimed everywhere he went, the Good News of God's salvation for mankind. And we are blessed because God has preserved this wonderful letter for us to learn from today.

So, let's start at the beginning and look at:

I. The Message Of Good News God Has Entrusted To Us (1) God Himself has a message of Good News to declare to the human race. It is a message of the greatest importance, first because it is from God Himself, the most important being in the universe, and when God speaks, everyone should listen! Then, it's important because it is a message about the most important subject there is, our eternal salvation, how we can be rescued forever and ever. It is a great message, a glorious message, and in verse 2, Paul points out that:

1. it is a message that was promised beforehand (2) This message of God is not something that came onto the scene with Paul or even with Jesus. This Good News was promised ahead of time in the Old Testament. It was declared by the prophets, it was pictured in the entire sacrificial system of the Tabernacle and the Temple, it was sung in the Psalms. Moses looked forward to it, Abraham rejoiced to see the day of its fulfillment and David was caught up in its glory in his prayers. Century after century, the faithful waited for the promises to be fulfilled. The message that we proclaim, the Gospel, is nothing less than the fulfillment of what God has promised for ages; it is God declaring, "I have kept My Word!" About what? Verse 3 tells us:

2. it is a message about a Person, about His Son Jesus (3-4) The Good news we proclaim is summed up in a Person, the Lord Jesus Christ. What about Him? Paul says He was one of us, a genuine human being with a royal genealogy that can be traced back to King David. But at the same time, He was also the very Son of God and God proved it by raising Him from the dead. The Good News is that God became a man in Jesus Christ to provide salvation for the world and now remains the eternal God-Man, fully God and fully man. We are not here to tell people how to make the world a better place or how to have a nice happy life. We are here to tell them about a Person, about Jesus Christ, God who became man, died for their sins and rose again. That's the message and because it is so great, so marvelous:

3. it is a message that must be proclaimed to all the peoples (5-6) This message, the Gospel, is such momentous Good News that it must be taken to all the nations, to all the peoples, all the ethnic groups of the earth, and they must all be called to obey it and follow Jesus. What He did is so glorious, so awesome, that for the sake of the reputation of the name of Jesus, it must be published to the whole world and they are responsible to believe it and obey it. Yet right here in Kensington in the last few weeks, a team who were serving there met Cantonese speaking people who know virtually nothing about the name of Jesus and had no idea who He was and what He did, even though Easter bells were ringing in churches all around the city! And they are not alone; around the globe Joshua Project says that today there remain some 2.9 billion people in more than 4,000 ethnic groups who are unreached, that is, who have had still never had the realistic opportunity where they live to hear the Good News of Jesus. My point is NOT simply that they deserve the opportunity to hear for the first time what we've known all our lives, which they do. My point is that what Jesus did to save human beings is such an unspeakable gift that it absolutely MUST be told to every one of them for HIS sake! And we, like Paul, have been given both the power (the grace) and the commission (the apostleship) to do it. Or, to put it another way:

a. we have been set apart for this very purpose Back to verse (1). Paul says God set him apart for the Gospel, that is, God made the sharing of this Good News the very purpose of Paul's life on earth and he was to dedicate his life to proclaiming it. Now before you say, "Wait a minute; I'm not an apostle; I'm not called like he was", in 2 Cor. 5:19-20 Paul says this, ...in Christ God was reconciling the world to himself, not counting their trespasses against them, and entrusting to us the message of reconciliation. Therefore, we [all of us!] are ambassadors for Christ... God has this incredible message, this great good news of how Jesus provided salvation for the whole world and He has entrusted that message to US to deliver to them all as His ambassadors. This IS our core purpose in life, to share God's News with the world! It's why we live; it's why we're still here and not in heaven. As believers, God has set us apart, entrusted us with His message and commanded us to declare it to the whole world. But why should we do that? Why should we not be free to give ourselves to the pursuit of our own interests, of the things that make us happy? Why? Because:

b. we owe a debt to all people without distinction (14) Paul said, "I am a debtor! I owe a tremendous amount because Jesus reached down from heaven by His grace and saved me, a blaspheming, murdering, Christ-hating Pharisee! I owe Him my very soul, but He has commanded me to "pay it forward", as it were, to all the peoples of the world. My salvation puts me under obligation to tell the News to every human being. And that obligation applies whether the person is a Greek or a Roman like me or a barbarian, one of those 'other' Turkish or Persian or Chinese or Germanic or African peoples. It applies whether they are wise and educated and civilized or foolish and ignorant or even savage." Friends, we owe God a debt that we pay with our very lives as we devote them to proclaiming the Good News of His Son and, like Paul:

c. we should always be eager to fulfill it (15) He is eager, ready, anxious. He can't wait to get there and bring the message, along with these dear brothers, to the people of Rome. Our debt is not a burden that we laboriously pay back like a slave grudgingly earning his freedom. Our debt is one that we pay eagerly, with gladness, because of the immensity of what God has done for us!

I read about a man who once laid a piece of chocolate candy on a table. Then, picking up an ant, he put it near the delicious bon-bon to see what it would do. He expected it would immediately gorge itself on this huge delicacy but he was surprised to see it take only a single bite and then scurry off down the table and out of the room. However, very soon the little creature returned, followed by a long train of other ants who enjoyed the treat with him. Now why did he do that? Because built into his core instincts was an obligation, not to hide what he'd found, to keep it for himself and satisfy his own hunger with it for weeks, but an obligation to inform the rest of the colony so that the whole of his kind might survive with him. Folks, the message of the Gospel is so great, so huge, that it is too big and too wonderful to be kept to ourselves and enjoyed by us. In saving us, God has built into us the obligation to proclaim the Good News to our entire global colony because we have found it, so that they might be rescued along with us! Let's do it eagerly! And also, confidently! Why? Because:

4. it is a message that contains the very power of God (16) Think about that for a second. Paul has just written that he can't wait to get to Rome to preach the Gospel there. That is no light statement. Rome is the eternal city, the capital of the world, home of the mightiest power and force on the face of the earth, the Roman army, home of the most powerful man on earth, the Emperor, a city where allegiance and worship are demanded of everyone. It is a very dangerous place to preach the Gospel, not a place like Athens where men sit and endlessly debate religions and philosophies, but a place where power and might and strength are the understood language of the day. Telling Romans the story of how Jesus was put to death on a cross by Roman soldiers could well cause them to think that Jesus lost and Rome won! And yet Paul says he is eager to preach there and he is not ashamed of the Gospel. Why? Because it is not a human message. It is a message that contains the very power of Almighty God. That message itself, not anything that we do, a. it saves human beings from the wrath of God The Roman legions were the most vicious means of death and destruction the world had ever known. But God declares that His Gospel has power to save, to deliver from something that even the mightiest soldier could not stand against. Look at verse 18. A sword may deliver from the wrath of man but nothing can deliver from the wrath of God! Even the Romans in their paganism would admit that men can't fight gods; their wrath must be appeased because it can't be resisted. Yet Paul brought a message that has the ultimate power of delivering a man from the very wrath of God, from the punishment of God which is far worse than any earthly destruction because it is eternal and infinite! Paul is not ashamed because the weapon he carries is a powerful force, something that transforms lives and changes eternity. You can see it work! Look at the Book of Acts: Saul himself, the furious persecutor of Christians is gloriously transformed and now preaches everywhere the faith he once tried to destroy. Cornelius, a Roman Centurion, is now a humble servant of Christ. Sergius Paulus, a Roman proconsul on the island of Cyprus, now believes in Jesus Christ, not the Roman gods. A rough and tumble jailer at Philippi is now rejoicing with his whole family in Christ. Century after century down through history, this Gospel has impacted the lives of countless people who were living under the wrath of God and transformed them into fervent followers of Jesus who dedicate their very lives to His service. Warring Yanomami people and headhunting Sawi tribesmen, as well as civilized suburbanites like you and I, have been changed forever by the power of the message that we heard. And that message:

b. it is needed by every human being without distinction It doesn't matter whether that person is a Jew who zealously tries to keep the law of Moses or a pagan Roman who lives by the sword or an ardent Muslim who bows with his forehead on the ground toward Mecca five times a day or a Hindu who places rice and flowers before a stone statue or an educated American who lays his life on the altar of scientific evidence or materialism. EVERY single human being needs to hear this message in order to be rescued! Not one can be saved any other way, but the good news is that this message:

c. it saves every human being who believes There are no limits on who God can save. The Gospel will save a Roman soldier or a slave, a rich man or poor beggar, a drunken wretch or a gentle princess. We need never be ashamed to tell anyone, no matter who they are, where they live or what language they speak, because if they believe, they will be saved! No one is too good or too bad or too difficult. God's power is so vast that it saves absolutely everyone who believes! Sometimes we get intimidated because those around us seem to have it all; they have intelligence, education, money, success, or maybe great power and authority, or they may be hostile toward Christianity. But we have been entrusted with the mighty power of God Himself. If anyone, even one of those who seems farthest from it, will believe, God will save that person from eternal wrath and transform his life!

Listen to this: George Thomas of CBN News wrote recently: In a region once hostile to the gospel, tens of thousands of Muslims are now following Jesus. Muslims across Northern Africa are converting to faith in Jesus Christ in record numbers. Filmmaker Tino Qahosh said, "What God is doing in North Africa, all the way from Mauritania to Libya is unprecedented in the history of missions." He has spent years traveling the region to document the transformation. He said, "I have the privilege of recording testimonies and listening to firsthand stories of men and women, of all ages... Pastor Salah leads one of the largest churches in Algeria. Some 1,200 believers attend the church, and they have baptized an average of between 150 to 160 believers per year. He said, "God has given to us many opportunities to witness at the police stations, at the courts, and in fact one time I went to the police station and they gave me 45 minutes to speak about Jesus! Just imagine yourself, they are all Muslims sitting and telling me, 'Tell us about Jesus!'" Emboldened by God's power, Thomas says Algerian Christians are now on a mission to take the gospel to the four corners of the globe. "God has put in our heart to be able to send 1,000 missionaries by the year 2025." Dear friends, the Gospel is powerful! Its power is breaking forth today in some of the most resistant places on the earth! Now in verse 17 we have:

II. The Content Of This Message (17) We usually think of the Gospel the way that Paul spells it out in 1 Cor. 15, Christ died for our sins, was buried and rose on the third day. That's the story of what Jesus did, but it is not enough simply to tell a person the story. Paul focuses on the meaning of the story. The Gospel:

1. it reveals that there is a righteousness that comes from God Human beings almost universally think that they can attain a right standing before God by their behavior. They believe that they must be good or be religious or keep certain laws or act in certain patterns to find favor with God, depending on the culture. It is universally hidden from us that there is another kind of righteousness, God's kind of righteousness, a perfect righteousness where a human being can stand before God with absolutely no record of any wrong-doing, perfectly accepted by God with all his sins totally removed. The Gospel reveals that that God-kind of righteousness is not only something that only God Himself has, but He is willing to GIVE it to us! We cannot generate it or attain it by our own efforts, no matter how hard we try. Rather, the Gospel:

2. it reveals that this righteousness can only be obtained by faith It is literally out of faith unto believing, that is, it comes by means of faith to those who believe it. In other words, this right standing is bestowed on men by God as a free gift when they place their complete trust in what Christ did for them by dying on the cross and rising again. That's the Gospel! That's God's Good News for us! And in the first eight chapters of this letter Paul goes on to spell that message out in detail:

3. the four sections of God's message (1:18-8:39) which we'll be studying together in the rest of this series:

- a. Condemnation: we all lack righteousness (1:18-3:20)
- b. Justification: God provides His righteousness to us (3:21-5:21)
- c. Sanctification: God's righteousness transforms our lives (6:1-8:17)
- d. Glorification: we are ultimately made completely righteous (8:18-39)

Now, in verse 17 Paul confirms what he's saying by quoting what the Prophet Habakkuk wrote in 2:4 when he was pondering the impending invasion of the land by the Babylonians and said, the righteous one will live (that is, will save himself from the impending wrath of God on the nation) by faith (that is, because of his faith, not his strength, his might, his skill, but only and simply because of faith)! This is the concept that transformed the life of Martin Luther, a Catholic monk who was possessed with the idea of being right before God to the point where he was driven into every kind of pious deed, into a monastery, into extremely severe self-deprivation. Yet he had absolutely no assurance of being right with God. In the preface to his works, he writes: I had indeed been captivated with an extraordinary ardor for understanding Paul in the Epistle to the Romans. But up till then it was not the cold blood about the heart, but a single word in Chapter 1, "In it the righteousness of God is revealed," that had stood in my way. For I hated that word "righteousness of God," which, according to the use and custom of all the teachers, I had been taught to understand philosophically regarding the formal or active righteousness, as they call it, with which God is righteous and punishes the unrighteous sinner. Though I lived as a monk without reproach, I felt that I was a sinner before God with an extremely disturbed conscience. I could not believe that he was placated by my satisfaction. I did not love, yes, I hated the righteous God who punishes sinners, and secretly, if not blasphemously, certainly murmuring greatly, I was angry with God.... Nevertheless, I beat importunately upon Paul at that place, most ardently desiring to know what St. Paul wanted. At last, by the mercy of God, meditating day and night, I gave heed to the context of the words, namely, "In it the righteousness of God is revealed, as it is written, 'He who through faith is righteous shall live.'" There I began to understand that the righteousness of God is that by which the righteous lives by a gift of God, namely by faith. And this is the meaning: the righteousness of God is revealed by the gospel, namely, the passive righteousness with which merciful God justifies us by faith, as it is written, "He who through faith is righteous shall live." Here I felt that I was altogether born again and had entered paradise itself through open gates. There a totally other face of the entire Scripture showed itself to me. Thereupon I ran through the Scripture from memory. I also found in other terms an analogy, as, the work of God, that is what God does in us, the power of God, with which he makes us wise, the strength of God, the salvation of God, the glory of God. And I extolled my sweetest word with a love as great as the hatred with which I had before hated the word "righteousness of God." Thus, that place in Paul was for me truly the gate to paradise. God's Good News in that one verse transformed Martin Luther's life and put him in the forefront of a wave of salvation that shook the world and resulted in you and I sitting here today, a movement that we know as the Protestant Reformation. Let's be eager to share it with others!

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

The History Of The Human Race 1:18-32

From 1:18 to 3:20 Paul sets forth in detail the first point of the Gospel message, which is: CONDEMNATION (1:18 - 3:20). If we are to fully understand what our salvation means, we first have to thoroughly understand what we have been saved FROM. So, his design in these chapters is simply to show that without Christ, the whole human race stands condemned before God, without exception. He will go on to show us that even "good" people are lost, that "religious" people are lost, that every single person starts out lost. But in this first section, he's going to show us how we got that way; he's going to show us a picture of the history of the human race from God's perspective and he starts in verse 18 by telling us that:

I. All Human Beings Stand Under God's Wrath (18) That word wrath is a term we seldom use. What it means is that:

1. God has an abiding, rightful anger The most basic truth we must realize is that God is God! He is the Maker, Owner, and Rightful Master of everything in the universe. He made it, He owns it and He has the right to control everything about it. Furthermore, He is holy. So, everything He created, He made to be holy and pure like Himself and when it is not, He is rightfully angry because of the evil. His very nature demands that He must eradicate and destroy sin and evil from His creation. Nevertheless, notice in the verse that His anger is directed toward ungodliness, that is:

a. against all who rebel against Him, against those who fail to acknowledge that He is God and has the right to control their lives and behavior and deliberately choose to ignore Him and do what they please. That ungodliness, dear friends, is a part of every one of us. It is in the nature we're born with to ignore God, to think and act as if we have the right to do whatever we want and thumb our nose at Him and His standards. And His anger is directed toward unrighteousness, that is:

b. against all who treat their fellow humans unjustly, who lie and cheat and steal and hurt others for their own advantage. Which of us does that not include? Listen, it makes God rightfully angry when we human beings sin both against Him and against one another. Fortunately for us, His mercy and patience is also involved in this process, so that He does not immediately destroy us. He pours out His wrath, sometimes in the events of our personal lives in this world, as He did when proud Herod was eaten by worms and died in Acts 12, or in the events of human history as He did in sending Israel captive to Babylon. But ultimately that pouring out of His wrath occurs after death in a lake of fire where the individual suffers the consequences of rebelling against God forever. This is the truth that God has revealed from the time He spoke to the first man, "If you sin, you will die!" Yet, verse 18 says that:

2. in our wickedness, we human beings suppress the truth about God We don't want to hear it and we don't want it to be known. So, we hold it down, we repress it, we bury it. We cover it up with lies and myths. We doubt it. We do everything in our power NOT to acknowledge the truth that God exists, that He has the right to control us and, especially, that because we rebel against Him, we stand under His wrath toward us.

Miroslav Volf, a Christian theologian from Croatia, like many today, used to reject the concept of God's wrath. He thought that the idea of an angry God was barbaric, completely unworthy of a God of love. But then his country experienced a brutal war. He writes: "My last resistance to the idea of God's wrath was a casualty of the war in the former Yugoslavia, the region from which I come. According to some estimates, 200,000 people were killed and over 3,000,000 were displaced. My villages and cities were destroyed, my people shelled day in and day out, some of them brutalized beyond imagination, and I could not imagine God not being angry. Or think of Rwanda in the last decade of the past century, where 800,000 people were hacked to death in one hundred days! How did God react to the carnage? By doting on the perpetrators in a grandfatherly fashion? By refusing to condemn the bloodbath but instead affirming the perpetrators' basic goodness? Wasn't God fiercely angry with them? Though I used to complain about the indecency of the idea of God's wrath, I came to think that I would have to rebel against a God who wasn't wrathful at the sight of the world's evil. God isn't wrathful in spite of being love. God is wrathful because God is love." [Miroslav Volf, Free of Charge (Zondervan, 2006), pp. 138-139] We think, "Yeah, that makes sense. God should be angry at people who commit such atrocities!" But what we fail to realize is that it is also atrocious for a created being to refuse to worship and serve his Creator, for a person for whom Christ died the cruel death of the cross to reject Him or for a subject to deliberately break the righteous commandment of his rightful King. Before we come to Christ, God's wrath abides on every single one of us and we genuinely deserve it. But so does His love or He wouldn't have made a way to save us! Now Paul goes on to declare that we humans have absolutely no excuse for not believing the truth about God. For one thing:

II. We Have No Excuse Because God Reveals Himself In Creation (19-20) In other words, Paul is saying that:

1. the complexity and magnitude of the universe plainly reveals a Creator You don't find a watch or a camera lying on the ground and think, "I wonder how that evolved?" You KNOW somebody made it. It is too complex, too intricate, too detailed to have happened by chance. Everything about it screams, "Somebody made me!" Yet you watch nature program after nature program on TV graphically detailing the wondrous intricacies of the many plants and animals on earth, their instincts and capabilities to survive, the cycles of the natural world that never vary and the amazing complexity and capabilities within the human body and the punchline is always simply, "It's amazing how that evolved!" Listen, the odds of even one of the most common natural phenomena, like say birth, happening by evolutionary chance are trillions to one! Ps. 19:1-4 challenges us to look upward, The heavens proclaim the glory of God. The skies display his craftsmanship. Day after day they continue to speak; night after night they make him known. They speak without a sound or word; their voice is never heard. Yet their message has gone throughout the earth, and their words to all the world. [NLT] Mankind has been looking at the stars for millennia and tracking their movements but instead of saying, "Somebody made all of those and put them exactly where they are!", people worshipped them and tried to use them to predict the future. It is no accident that there is only one place, only one planet, in our solar system or anywhere else in the universe that we have discovered so far that has the conditions necessary to sustain living beings. GOD made the earth to put life on! And if Somebody made all this:

2. He must transcend His creation and be unlimited in power If He made it, He can't be part of it. He's got to be above and beyond it, greater than it, so there's no use worshipping what He made. The God who made it must have a nature unlike any other being, a Divine nature. Plus, if He made all this, the stars, the sun, the earth, the mountains, the seas, the complexity of living things, then He must have infinite power. He must be more powerful than any force He has created. Indeed, He must be omnipotent. Any human being anywhere on earth, living in any era of time, can simply look at the world around them and know that there is a God who created it and them and if there is, then HE ought to be known and worshipped! Now let me be clear:

3. this general revelation (as we call it) can't save us. This realization that there is a God can't bring us forgiveness for our sins; it can't remove His wrath against our wicked behavior. Rather, it makes us responsible to seek God and try to find Him and know Him. It makes us responsible not to worship any created thing or any human being, to worship only the God who made it all. Yet that is not what human beings do! And this witness, this evidence:

4. it has been present from the time of the creation of the world No human being that has ever lived or will ever live has an excuse to say, "I did not know that there is a God!" Regardless of whether or not anyone ever tells them, or any missionary brings them word, every human being ever born is responsible to know that there is a God and to seek Him.

I like the song There Is A God that you hear on Christian radio by the group 33 Miles. Its chorus goes, There is a God, this is the proof, That all around the evidence is speaking the truth. From the center of my soul, to the edge of the universe, Creation is crying out, believe it or not, there is a God! That's the choice man faces. The evidence is all around us and we must choose to believe it or deny it, but we cannot ignore it. Then Paul goes on to declare that we humans have absolutely no excuse for not believing the truth about God for a second reason:

III. We Have No Excuse Because God Revealed Himself In Our History (21-23) Now don't read over those verses too quickly because in them is God's description of the entire history of mankind. Not only has every person always had the evidence of creation:

1. from the beginning the human race had direct knowledge of God (21a) ...they knew God. Adam and Eve knew God directly, personally. They walked with Him. Their sons Cain and Abel knew God and talked with Him. The human race began with the direct personal knowledge of the one true God. But within just a few generations Cain's descendants had forgotten or ignored Him and so did almost all of Seth's descendants. They threw away the knowledge of God, so much so that by the time of Noah the earth was filled with violence and the Scripture says that the thoughts of man's heart were only evil all the time. So, God in His righteous wrath against evil wiped the earth clean and started all over again with one man. Noah knew God and walked with God and talked with Him. His sons and their wives all knew God and saw what He did in the great flood. When they got off the ark literally every member of the human race had full knowledge of and relationship with God. But within only a few generations they threw it away for the second time and built the tower of Babel for their pagan worship in rebellion against Him and God confounded their languages, scattered them abroad and created the root stock for all the ethnic peoples of the earth. Skeptics always ask, "What about the people who have never had opportunity to hear?" The answer is, "That's not God's fault! Their ancestors had it and threw it away!" As Paul puts it:

2. they consistently refused to worship or thank God (21b) Man consistently said, "I know God but I don't want to worship God. I want to do things my way!" Pride got in the way, just like it did for Adam and Eve in the garden. And:

3. their pride led to foolish ways of thinking (21c-22) They got impressed with their own wisdom and in doing so became fools. And remember, a fool, according to the Psalms, is one who says in his heart, "There is no God!" Mankind proudly and consistently chose not to worship the God they knew. Instead, Paul says:

4. they exchanged the worship of the True God for idols (23) They wanted gods that they could control and manipulate. So, they made their own. They exchanged the worship of the glorious immortal God for the worship of gods made with their own hands, idols, images of created things, people, birds, animals, reptiles, you name it. Go to India today and you can see it everywhere, people bowing to statues of elephants and monkeys and grotesque demonic looking figures of gods and goddesses. Mankind did it from the very beginning in every culture on earth. Our ancestors were all idolatrous pagans. Of course, we think we've become more sophisticated than that. It is true that our idols aren't made of wood and stone and gold and silver, but we have made false gods of concepts and ideas and worship at their shrines just the same. "The universe was NOT created; it evolved." "Human beings are essentially good in their very nature." We believe, "Each person has the inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of their own happiness", yet we deny that those very privileges are gifts we are endowed with by our Creator! We call evil good and good evil because as a culture we have exchanged the True God for proud, foolish, idolatrous thinking. All human beings do that, one way or another. And in the end, Paul says:

5. they devoted their lives to worshipping and serving created things (25) The entire human race exchanged the truth of the Eternal God for THE lie, that universal lie that someone or something can be venerated in His place. So, apart from Christ, all of us lay ourselves at the feet of some manmade god or idolatrous man-invented idea and spend our lives serving it. That is the history of mankind; that is MY history. No wonder every human being stands under the wrath of God who created all things for HIS glory.

Now we ought to consider momentarily why they did that? Why did the race turn from the knowledge of God? Why do humans refuse the light all around them? The answer is that every human being is born with a sin nature that we inherited from our first parents Adam and Eve. It is more than a tendency; it is a bent, a driving force inside us toward sin. Human beings universally choose to follow their own inner nature which hates God and wants nothing to do with God rather than retain the knowledge of Him. Therefore, Paul says:

IV. God Gave The Human Race Over To Pursue Their Own Evil Desires (24) In His wrath, God removed the restraining influence of His grace and allowed them to follow their own evil nature to where it naturally leads. You can see where it has led in cultures down through history and all over the world. First of all:

1. it resulted in rampant sexual immorality Right away Lamech took two wives, then there were multiple wives and concubines. As idolatrous religions developed, sexual rites became a part of man's self-invented worship with both male and female sacred prostitutes at the shrines. As Paul wrote this letter, he was in Corinth which was known for its unbridled sexual practices and where the Temple of Aphrodite, the fertility goddess, had more than 1,000 priestesses serving male worshippers all day long! The practice still exists in India where young low caste girls are devoted to the goddess or see it as their only choice to survive in life. To be fair, don't blame the women; the whole system is driven by the evil lusts of men! Remember the Browns telling us about a 15 year old Yanomami girl who was causing jealousy in their village by sleeping with one man over another. So, he threw an arrow at her and it killed her. That's their culture without Christ! But honestly are we any better? Since we've eliminated God from our thinking, sex is everywhere right here. Down in the city our teachers deal with 15 year old girls who are pregnant. In their culture they believe they have to be sexually active in dating. It's expected and normal. And much of America is right there with them, even though

God has said that sex belongs ONLY inside the boundaries of marriage. We don't care! We follow our lusts and reap the consequences! Second, Paul says:

2. it resulted in the practice of homosexuality (26-27) David Guzik says: Paul wrote to a culture where homosexuality was accepted as a part of life for both men and women. For some 200 years, men who openly practiced homosexuality, often with young boys, ruled the Roman Empire. At times, the Roman Empire specifically taxed approved homosexual prostitution and gave boy prostitutes a legal holiday. Legal marriage between same gender couples was recognized, and even some of the emperors married other men. At the very time Paul was writing, Nero was emperor. He [later] took a boy named Sporus and had him castrated, then married him (with a full ceremony), brought him to the palace with a great procession, and made the boy his "wife." Later, Nero lived with another man, and Nero was the "wife." Think how dangerous it was for Paul to write this! He says clearly that homosexuality is against nature. Our culture has almost universally believed a lie, "People are BORN that way; they can't help it any more than they can help the color of their skin or hair!" No, they are not! Scientists have never found a "gay gene" and they never will because there isn't one. It is a practice that they are led and introduced to by their life experiences, fueled by their inner passions, just like any other variety of sexual immorality. So, it can be stopped and changed, as many former practicing homosexuals would testify. Then note that Paul says it is, shameful in character. It is not something to be "brought out of the closet" and paraded openly. It is dishonorable, beneath human dignity. Eph. 5:12 says of behavior like this, ...it is shameful even to speak of the things that they do in secret. We shouldn't be talking about it openly, much less passing laws legalizing gay marriage! Then Paul says, it carries its own penalty. Sometimes it is the visible penalty of venereal disease or HIV, but even deeper is the emotional damage that universally occurs in the hearts of people who practice sexual sin. Now, let me be clear: does God hate homosexuals? NO! God LOVES people that practice homosexuality, just like He loves adulterers and murderers and liars and thieves and the rest of us; Jesus died for every one of them! He just hates what they DO. In fact, Paul says thirdly that God's giving us over to our own desires:

3. it resulted in every form of wicked behavior (28-32) Mankind practices an overwhelming array of evil. Primitive societies like the Yanomami or the Sougb we know, tribes that have been isolated completely from any godly influence, don't end up "peaceful savages" living idyllic lives; their societies are filled with cruelty, violence, murder and revenge, even headhunting and cannibalism. Africa is a perfect model of where the human race goes. In South Sudan in recent months the Nuer tribe rebelled against the Dinka government and thousands were killed and driven from their homes. Just a week ago Dinka forces including a mob of 300 youth stormed the refugee camp where 5,000 Nuer people were sheltered, killing 58 and wounding 100. UN troops couldn't stop it and the cycle of vengeance continues. It's happened in Uganda, Rwanda, Liberia and it's still going on today in the Central African Republic. Women raped, children killed, houses burned, that's where the nature of man leads him. Are other parts of the world better? Watch World News tonight and see ethnic Russians in Ukraine smashing windows and trying to take over buildings while Putin has his troops poised on the border to make sure Russian control is not lost. We inherently KNOW all of this is wrong, that all these things evil, yet we do them anyway!

No wonder Paul warns in Col. 3:6, Because of these things the wrath of God is coming on the sons of disobedience. And Jude wrote: Look! The Lord is coming with thousands and thousands of his holy ones, to execute judgment on all, and to convict every person of all their thoroughly ungodly deeds that they have committed, and of all the harsh words that ungodly sinners have spoken against him. - 14-15. We have taken God's perfect world and turned it into giant version of the Black Hole of Calcutta. On June 20, 1756 the Bengali commander of Fort William, took 146 British prisoners and locked them in the Fort's guardhouse overnight. All of them were crammed into a space 14x18 feet with but little ventilation and the door barred shut. By nine o'clock several had died, and many more were delirious. A frantic cry for water now became general, and one of the guards, more compassionate than his fellows, caused some to be brought to the bars, where several received it in their hats, and passed it on to the men behind. In their impatience to secure it, nearly all was spilt, and the little they drank seemed only to increase their thirst. Self-control was soon lost; those in remote parts of the room struggled to reach the window, and a fearful tumult ensued, in which the weakest were trampled or pressed to death. They raved, fought, prayed, blasphemed, and many then fell exhausted on the floor, where suffocation put an end to their torments. At 6 in the morning the door was opened and of the 146 only 23 crawled out alive. A monument remains in a nearby church yard today. [http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Black_Hole_of_Calcutta]. God left us to our own devices in His world and we've made it a black hole of clawing, struggling, blaspheming people trampling one another to survive. And the only ones who will get out of it alive are not the strongest, but those who trust in Jesus Christ to save them.

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

The Lostness Of "Good" People - 2:1-16

In these first 2 ½ chapters of Romans, Paul is explaining in depth the first aspect of the Gospel: the fact that all human beings are lost and rightfully deserve God's wrath. At the end of chapter 1 he outlined the history of the human race and how we end up in all kinds of sexual sin, envy, murder, strife, deceit and all other types of wicked behavior that plainly deserves God's wrath. But Paul is a mind reader. He knows that somebody reading his letter is thinking, "But wait a minute! I'm not like that. I don't do all those bad things. People like that obviously deserve punishment, but do I? I'm a GOOD person!" And this hits home for us, even as believers, because we know people like this and even love some of them dearly! They are "good" people; they are moral and kind and generous. They are helpful and regularly do good and admirable things. In fact, some of them put Christians we know to shame by their principles and behavior! It grieves our hearts to realize that they are lost and separated from God. This also bears upon the case of those who have never had the opportunity to hear the Gospel. Surely among the billions of them in other lands who have no contact with the Gospel there are some who do not live licentiously and strive to do good! Are they really lost too? Would it not be enough to strive to be good if you have no opportunity to know Christ? So, Paul pretends he's talking to this "you", this imaginary questioning person and explains in verses 1-4 that:

I. "Good" People Sin Just Like "Bad" People (1-5) [Read 1-2] Such things... What things? The evil stuff I just mentioned at the end of chapter 1. There's no question that:

1. we know that people who do "bad things" deserve punishment It comes naturally to us to realize that murderers and rapists and kidnappers and traffickers and drug lords deserve punishment. We're angry about what they do, so surely God must be angry about it. It's easy to compare ourselves to other people and what they do and categorize them as "bad" and ourselves as "good", or at least "better than them". But Paul points out that:

a. we fail to see that we actually sin against God just as they do Oh sure, I've never committed murder or kidnapped anybody or done most of the other awful things on Paul's list. But you see, to put it in language that is easily understood today, God has a zero-tolerance policy about sin! You know, just like a school may have a zero-tolerance policy about drugs: get caught once and you're out, no exceptions. Or against fighting: get involved in one fight and you're expelled. It is not that God can tolerate a little bit of sin or a few sins but do something major and you're gone. It takes only one sin to make me a sinner. All Adam did was eat a piece of fruit that God told him not to eat; that hardly rates as what we'd call a "serious sin" and yet through that one sin death came upon him and all his descendants! Why? Because God is an unfair, intolerant being who won't cut us any slack? No, because God is HOLY, absolutely pure, and NOTHING impure or unclean can be in His presence or, ultimately, in His creation! It's not simply His policy, something He decided to make up and put in place; it's His very NATURE! As Habakkuk put it [1:13], Your eyes are too pure to look on evil; you cannot tolerate wrong.... If He could, He would cease to be absolutely good! He wouldn't be the God we know and love. So, OUR sins are just as evil in nature, just as much diametrically opposed to the heart and character of God as those of the people we think of as being "really evil"! Therefore:

b. when we judge others, we are really judging ourselves! When we say, "Sin like that deserves to be punished!", we're really saying, "I deserve to be punished!", because our sin is sin too! In fact, Paul goes on to say:

2. it is arrogant to assume we will escape God's judgment by being "good" [Read 3-4] It is the height of arrogance to say that "God won't condemn ME; I'm too good to deserve that!" I'm reminded of a certain Pharisee Jesus mentioned who was in the Temple one day praying, God, I thank you that I am not like other men, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even like this tax collector. I fast twice a week; I give tithes of all that I get... - Lk. 18:11. That guy didn't get very far with God, did he? His prayer bounced right off the ceiling. We're appalled at how arrogant he is when we read the story, but "that guy" is every person who thinks that they are good enough that their good deeds make God obligated to save them! "That guy" is the huge majority of all the people we know who live all around us! "That guy" is everybody who says, "Well, of course I'll go to heaven, I've always been a good person!" If you were truly good, Jesus didn't have to die for you; God went through the agony of sending His own Son to a cross to save a person who didn't need saving in the first place! Basically, to say "I'm good enough to go to heaven" is to say "I am as good as God!" The story is told of an attorney who sued a large corporation, asking for a huge sum of money as a settlement. The amount seemed utterly ridiculous to everyone in attendance, including the judge, who asked the attorney why he was demanding such an exorbitant compensation. The lawyer responded, "I'm doing this for one reason," and with head held high he announced, "I am, you understand, the best attorney in the whole world." When the trial was over, a good friend asked him, "Why did you brag about yourself the way you did?" Without batting an eye, the attorney responded, "There was nothing else I could do. After all, I was speaking under oath. I had to tell the truth!" We laugh at this kind of arrogance, but when we think, "I am good", that is exactly what we're doing, sincerely believing a delusion of grandeur about ourselves that is not merely far from true, but it is a rank offense to God. You see, according to verse 4:

3. God's kindness is intended to reveal our sin and lead to a change of heart We think God is kind to us and blesses us with so many things because we deserve it, that He is patient with us and overlooks our faults and failures because our goodness merits it. But the exact opposite is the case. The more we see of Him, the more we should see of how we can never measure up. His goodness toward us is intended to open our eyes, to help us to see how good and kind and loving He is and how we rebel against Him over and over and over again. It is supposed to lead us to a change of mind about ourselves, to take the proud Pharisee in us and change our prayer into, God have mercy on me, a sinner! It's supposed to make us wake up and see ourselves as we truly are, to shake us out of this grand delusion about our own goodness and give us an attitude that says with Paul, Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners - of whom I am the worst. - 1 Tim. 1:15. So:

4. when we presume others deserve judgment but we don't, this is what happens (5). This attitude:

a. it reveals a hardened, unchanged heart toward Him His kindness and goodness toward us is not having its intended effect. Instead of making us humble, it's making us proud, hardening us in our arrogance toward Him and therefore:

b. we are storing up wrath for ourselves on the day of judgment The more we insist how good we are, the more wrath is waiting for us on that great day when we stand before Him and see at last how truly wrong and deceived we were! We're just throwing more fuel on the fire!

Now, in verses 6-11, Paul goes on to explain that:

II. God Judges Each Of Us According To Our Actual Deeds (6-11) [Read (6)]

1. God judges what we actually DO, our works, and that includes not only our actual deeds or actions, but also our words, what we say, and even our thoughts and attitudes that He alone can see. His judgment of us is not based on some overall opinion or generic evaluation, but on the actual rightness or wrongness of every word, thought and deed of our lives. They're all there; every one of them is recorded and Rev. 20 tells us that at the Great White Throne the books are opened and the dead are judged by what is written in the books! Now read verses 7-10. Look at the two contrasting persons here. Paul says that:

a. one who steadfastly, constantly, perpetually, does good shows that he seeks God (7, 10). He does not seek the things mentioned in verse 7 in a selfish fashion, to obtain glory and honor and immortality for himself as a reward for his deeds. Rather, it means that:

(1) he desires God's glory, honor and eternal existence with Him He is all about God, not about himself. He wants God to get the glory and honor He deserves as God and longs to be with God forever, so he unflinchingly does what God wants every moment of his life. And as a result:

(2) he receives eternal life, glory, honor and peace with God He gets the object of his heart's desire, God and all that comes with Him.

On the other hand, Paul says:

b. one who does evil shows that he is self-seeking (8, 9) He is acting in his own interests, not God's. In fact, at that moment:

(1) he disbelieves God's truth and follows injustice An act of evil is an act of unbelief; it is saying, "I don't believe God is right about this" or "I don't care whether He is, I'm going to do what I want; I'm going to be my own god and live my own way. I'm going to choose to do what I know is not right, to follow injustice". And that person, Paul says:

(2) he receives God's passionate wrath at the judgment, plus trouble and calamity from Him here in this life.

Now here's the rub. Do you know anyone who fits into category number one, who perpetually, always seeks God and not self? Solomon put it like this, Surely there is not a righteous man on earth who does good and never sins. - Ecc. 7:20. Nobody qualifies! Everybody, every human being, every man, woman, boy and girl sins! We all choose to serve ourselves and disbelieve God! Look with me at Jesus' discussion with an expert in Jewish law in Lk. 10:25-28. He had the right answers, the very ones Jesus Himself gave on another occasion. "Love God with all your heart, soul, mind and strength and love your neighbor as yourself." Jesus says, "Great! You know the right answer; you see it more clearly than most people! So, go DO it and you will live forever!" But look at his response (29). He knew he couldn't DO it; no human being can DO it! So, he immediately looked for a way to excuse himself from having to be perfect! That's what we all do. The best we can say is, "I'm not so bad, not as bad as...." None of us loves God with every fiber of our being and always does what pleases Him the way Jesus did. We can't get life that way. And here's the kicker:

2. God is completely impartial (11) He plays no favorites. He grants no exceptions. As far as the matter of salvation is concerned, He cannot say, "Oh well, you tried really hard; I'll let you in because of your good effort! Good is good, evil is evil and all evil must be punished and eradicated! So, every one of us, even the best of us, stands condemned before Him.

But wait a minute. What about people who don't know anything about God, who have no idea what right and wrong, good and evil truly is. Well, in verses 12-16, Paul goes on to explain that:

III. God's Judgment Does Not Depend On How Much We Know (12-16) What is evil and what is good can be known clearly because:

1. God spelled out the nature of righteousness in the Law given to Israel about 1400 BC. You shall not worship any other god...you shall not murder... you shall not steal... you shall not covet, and so on. He gave Israel a written code of His law, of what is good and what is evil, and they were blessed to have such a precious revelation from Him. However, no one can use the excuse, "Well, I never knew about that..." because:

2. God has placed in each person an internal awareness of right and wrong We know by nature, by that remnant of the image of God that is still within us when we're born, by instinct if you will, the difference between right and wrong. Look at almost any society on earth, even the most primitive, and you will find that universally people regard it as wrong to kill someone who is not an enemy, to steal what belongs to another, to take the wife of another, to lie to those who trust you, to ill-treat parents and so on. All the basic commandments God gave in the decalogue about our relationship to other people are recognized in nearly every society all over the world. Why? Because we KNOW inside ourselves that certain deeds are just wrong. God, in that sense, has written the essence of His law directly on every human heart. And what's more:

3. God has also given each person a conscience to apply it Conscience is something hard to define, but every person has one. It's that part of us that takes what we know and uses it to evaluate what we do. It's what makes a little kid feel guilty for taking cookies he was told not to take. Your conscience takes what your nature knows is right and wrong and either accuses you to yourself or excuses you, that is, defends your behavior as being right. Now, to use scriptural terms, a conscience can become corrupted, weakened, or seared. That is, evidently you can ignore it; you can deaden it and desensitize it so that after while it will not function very much, but it was there to start with. Every human being has enough light to know basic right and wrong and a conscience to convict him when he does evil, whether he ever hears God's written statement of it during his life or not. Every human being knows enough NOT to sin, but not one of us DOES it. But, Paul says:

4. one day Jesus Christ will pronounce judgment on all acts, secret or overt God has appointed Him the Judge and when we stand before Him ALL the things we have done will be revealed, especially the ones that other people can't see and don't know about, down to the last and most minute acts and words and thoughts, and what will be clear is just how many of them were evil. And the punch line is back in verse 12:

5. ALL who have sinned will perish with or without external knowledge (12) If we didn't know about the Law, we'll perish because we violated the inner law God planted in us. If we did know the Law, we'll perish because we failed to keep the Law He revealed to us. Either way, we perish!

The point of this whole section is clear: Without Christ, those we deem to be "GOOD" people ARE actually lost! As I've mentioned before, Martin Luther tried as hard as anybody ever had to be good, to be righteous, to live up to God's holy standards and the more he tried, the more miserable he became because the more he tried, the more aware he became of just how short he fell. But that's exactly how God intended it to work! When we become proud of how good we are, we miss the point in our arrogance. We do not see in truth at all. But when we see how far short we fall, no matter how hard we try, then we can see just what Jesus did for us. Until then, we can't. After he came to see, Martin Luther wrote this poem, which I hope expresses what all our hearts realize today:

*I do not come because my soul is free from sin and pure and whole and worthy of Thy grace;
I do not speak to Thee because I've ever justly kept Thy laws and dare to meet Thy face.*

*I know that sin and guilt combine to reign o'er every thought of mine and turn from good to ill;
I know that when I try to be upright and just and true to Thee, I am a sinner still.*

I know that often when I strive to keep a spark of love alive for Thee, the powers within Leap up in unsubmissive might and oft benumb my sense of right and pull me back to sin.

*I know that though in doing good I spend my life, I never could atone for all I've done;
but though my sins are black as night, I dare to come before Thy sight because I trust Thy Son.*

*In Him alone my trust I place, come boldly to Thy throne of grace, and there commune with Thee.
Salvation sure, O Lord, is mine, and, all unworthy, I am Thine, for Jesus died for me.*

If you happen to still be trusting in your goodness today or if you're hanging on to hope that someone you care about might "squeak through" because they're good enough, give it up once and for all. You don't have any goodness. Neither do I. Neither does that person you care about, so pray for them and share with them the good news. The only hope any of us have, the only basis on which we can ever stand before our Holy God is by humbly clinging to this simple truth, "Jesus died for me!"

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation The Lostness Of "Religious" People - 2:17-3:8

Remember that in these first 3 1/2 chapters, Paul is spelling out in great depth the first fact of the Gospel message: our CONDEMNATION. In the end of chapter 1, he showed us that the pagan peoples of the earth who traded the knowledge of the true God for idols and ended up practicing every variety of evil stand under God's wrath. In the first half of chapter 2 he showed us that even "GOOD" people who try their best to be moral are lost, because in reality they still sin. Now another thought comes to his mind. Paul, even though he is an apostle of Christ, is still every ounce a Jew, both in ethnicity and in his religious background. Thousands of the early believers were also Jewish like him and came out of a zealously religious background like he had. So:

1. Paul wrote this next section mainly to his own Jewish people (17) The big question is, "What about Israel?"

God had created them and chosen them to be His very own people from the time of Abraham nearly 2,000 years earlier. God had taken them out of Egypt and given them His Law. The whole of the Scripture written at that time centered upon them. What about the Jewish people, many of whom, Paul admitted in 10:2, had a genuine zeal for God? Well, here is the Jewish mindset:

a. Jews divided the world into two categories: Jew and Gentile The Jews were God's people; everybody else was not. To fully worship the true God, one needed to convert and become a Jew and keep God's laws as the Jews did. And the sign of entering into that special relationship, for males, was circumcision. Therefore, the Jews used the term circumcised to refer to themselves as belonging to God and the term uncircumcised as a term of derision to refer to Romans, Greeks, Syrians and everybody else. So, Paul wrote specifically to his own people, the Jews, to address this "I am a Jew; I keep God's laws!" attitude, but:

b. we can apply its truths to other "religious" people In our day there are millions of people who take the generic name of being Christian, who fill church buildings all across our land and throughout the world, who give assent to the Bible, who pray, who attend worship services, who observe religious rituals like baptism and communion, who try to do good things and follow the teachings of Jesus. They call themselves Christian and do Christian things, but they are relying upon their good deeds and religious participation to make them right with God. They do not really understand the meaning of the Gospel nor have a genuine personal relationship with Christ. There are "Christian" religious people like this living all around us; many of them identify with the Roman Catholic church or with other mainline Protestant churches. Now hear me clearly: there are some TRUE, GENUINE believers who get it in all of those churches, but there are thousands upon thousands who are relying upon their religiousness rather than Jesus, having (as Paul said to Timothy) the appearance of godliness but denying its power - 2 Tim. 3:5. They are just like the Jews Paul is talking to. We might also apply some of this to people who are zealous about a different religion, Islam, for instance. There are a billion Muslims in our world today, hundreds of thousands of them here in the US, 50,000 in Philadelphia, and many are zealously religious, doing the things that their book commands, bowing in prayer toward Mecca 5 times a day, fasting during the month of Ramadan, going to the mosque on Friday, keeping dietary rules and so on, counting on their performance of these duties to gain merit before Allah. A few blocks from where we sit this morning is a Buddhist Temple that sees lots of activity. At the bottom line, Buddhists hold that their proper behavior in this life will get them a better one in their next incarnation and ultimately release them into Nirvana. People who rely upon being religious are everywhere all around us! Well, in verses 17-20 Paul explains:

I. The Thinking Of People Who Rely Upon Being Religious (2:17-20) He begins in verse 17 by saying:

2. they rely on performance of duties and are confident that God accepts them because of it (17) The word rely in Greek means to lean upon; it's what you're doing to your pew right now, putting your weight on it! The Jew relied upon the fact that he was born a descendant of Israel and that he was privileged to have God's Law, confident that it gave him a special relationship to God. The religious person relies on the fact that he was "born Catholic" or "born Muslim" or whatever and trusts in the fact that he is doing the religious duties that God wants and expects of him and that God is pleased by that. Then, in verse 18 Paul points out that religious people like this:

3. they know and even approve of many of the right things God expects (18) They know immorality and adultery are wrong. They participate in worshipping God as they understand it and in giving and helping the unfortunate. They abhor lying and deception and are concerned for things like justice and peace and the rights of the downtrodden. The religious person knows right from wrong, approves of and even does many of the right things. Furthermore:

4. they are often confident that they are right and a guide to others (19-20) The pious Jews Paul knew tended to look at themselves as having arrived, as being a guide for the blind who don't understand, a light to help others out of darkness, instructors of those who are less wise, teachers of those who are "babes". In other words, the religious person is convinced that by his religious knowledge and practice of rituals that he is pleasing God and, very often, that he is superior to others. The best example, and I'm sure the one that Paul is thinking of because he was one, is the Pharisees of Jesus' day. They loved the law and reveled in it; they even kissed the scrolls! They were zealously concerned to keep it in every minute point. But their zeal for religion produced in them the attitude that they had arrived, that they were pleasing to God and totally acceptable to Him, the epitome of what God wanted, and everybody else was beneath them. Yet their hearts were so far from Him! You see, Paul says, here is:

II. The Problem That Jews And, indeed, All Religious People Have:

1. they break the very Law they rely on (21-22) The point is that we who have the most knowledge of God and what He demands, don't actually DO it! Paul raises the example of three particular areas where this is often the case and what comes to mind for me is the examples that Jesus experienced in the intensely religious culture of His day. For example, practically everybody knows, agrees with, and even teaches the command, You shall not steal. Yet the very people that say it do it! In Mk. 12:40, Jesus castigated the scribes, the men whose lives were given to meticulously copying the scrolls of the Law, because while they would zealously defend the command not to steal:

a. they devoured widows' houses and for a pretense made long prayers Here were women whose husbands had died and left them without anyone to protect them, who were scraping to find some way to make a living and feed their children and these pious, religious men had found ways to take advantage of them and swindle them out of the little they had. I have always pictured it as foreclosing on the poor widow when she could no longer pay the debt on her house, but doing it with great empathy and even praying over the family as they were put out into the street. Now that's an extreme case of hypocrisy, but people who loudly espouse "not stealing" seem to always find creative ways to steal, whether it's taking money under the table without reporting it or cheating on taxes or downloading copyrighted songs you didn't pay for. There is NO ONE who hasn't stolen something somehow. Then there were the Pharisees, careful keepers of the Law, who certainly stood firmly behind the command, you shall not commit adultery. And yet

b. they lightly divorced their wives for others They found a legalized way to do what they wanted, to have another woman. That's why they came to Jesus in Mt. 19:7-9 and strongly asserted that Moses had told them to give a wife a writing of divorce and send her away. Jesus had to explain to them that God's intent was for the husband and wife to be one forever and that it was their own hard hearts that created the problem. I don't have to tell you that even the very religious people in our society while clearly holding that it's wrong to cheat on your spouse, have no problem legally divorcing a spouse because they met someone else they'd rather be with. Jesus said clearly, "If you divorce your spouse to marry someone else, that's adultery!" Then, in Paul's time, all Jews vehemently abhorred idolatry. No Jew would ever think of worshipping one of the idols of the Greek and Roman people around them. So, what does Paul mean when he says, Do you rob temples? Nobody knows exactly, but here's at least something similar. You remember how on at least two occasions Jesus cleansed the Temple, how he overturned the tables of the moneychangers and drove out the vendors selling animals for sacrifice. And what did He shout?

c. the leaders had made God's Temple a den of thieves - Mt. 21:13 They had managed to take the very worship of God Himself and through their greed turn it into a business opportunity, right in the very courts that were built for the nations to come and pray in! Religious thieves were robbing God by selling sincere worshippers overpriced sacrifices while claiming they were advancing worship! They would never worship a statue but they'd embezzle money for themselves that would have gone straight into the Temple treasury! How many religious charlatans through the years have had the audacity to literally steal from God by turning their ministry into a cash generating machine for themselves! And, of course, it's easy to say, "Well I'm not like those guys! No wonder Jesus chewed them out! They deserved it. They were all total religious hypocrites!" But go with me to the Sermon on the Mount for a moment.

d. Jesus explained that we break God's commands, not merely in outward acts, but in our hearts Look at Mt. 5:21-22. God didn't simply mean not to commit the outward act of murder; you can commit murder in your heart and with your words. God wants us not even to have ill feelings toward others! Or look at 5:27-28. God didn't simply mean not to commit the outward act of sexual sin; you can sin sexually with someone in your mind. That's why pornography is such a serious thing! God wants us to have pure thoughts toward other men and women who we're not married to, not to lust after them!

You see, God's standard is perfection! He commanded us to be perfect as He is perfect; that's the true aim of the Law. But every one of us who espouses it breaks it! We all do the very things we tell people not to do! We're all like the old mountain man who claimed to be the best shot around. All over the valley where he lived, he had targets that were painted on trees and fenceposts with the bullet hole dead in the middle. One day an observer hid out and watched him for a while and the truth was that the old man would shoot at a tree, then go find the bullet hole, paint the target around it and carve his initials next to it! Instead of shooting at God's target, which is perfection, that we know we'll miss, we find a way to create our own target to show we're good enough, when we're really not! We, especially the religious people among us, tend to justify our behavior to make it appear right instead of falling on our faces and admitting how far short of holy we really are. That's why Paul says of the Jews that:

2. their behavior dishonors the God they claim to worship by causing Him to be disrespected (23-24) People tend to recognize and spot hypocrisy quickly. When they see us do something that is the opposite of what we proclaim, people say, "If he's a... (Jew, Christian, Muslim or whatever), I don't want anything to do with it." That applies to us sincere believers as well as "merely religious" people. We all dishonor our God by our behavior.

Now in the next section, Paul tells us:

III. The Truth About Being Religious (2:25-29)

1. religious identity and ritual have value only if God's law is kept (25-27) All that circumcision does is to reaffirm that you are committed to keep the law. But it is deeds that God looks at. If a non-Jew kept the whole law that's written on his heart perfectly, he would be much better than a Jew who knows the law but has broken it. However, it is what we actually DO that counts. Keeping commanded rituals, such as circumcision for the Jew, is only one small part of overall right behavior. However, no one keeps the Law or follows their conscience perfectly. That's why:

2. external identity and rituals do not produce relationship with God (28) A person is never accepted because he is born Jewish or born Catholic or born Muslim or whatever! Outward rituals like circumcision or baptism or bowing toward Mecca cannot remove our sins and bring us into God's presence. In fact:

3. circumcision is to reflect the work done by the Spirit in our hearts (29) A person who is truly accepted by God is accepted because God has done a work in his heart, not in his flesh! Circumcision was meant to be a picture of the fact that when you come to Jesus and His Spirit comes into your heart, He kills that old, dead spirit inside and creates a brand new one that is pure and holy. Just like baptism, it's a reminder that the "old me" died with Christ and I'm a new person. Rituals are never meant to be ends in themselves, means of saving us, not even the sacrifices of the Old Testament; God always intends that these things are merely signs and symbols to point us to His true work in saving us. Simply being religious can't save you!

But, of course, when you tell this to a religious but lost friend, they are not going to buy it. They will begin to raise objections. In the beginning of chapter 3 Paul anticipated four different:

IV. Objections That Religious People May Raise (3:1-8) The first is that:

1. Israel has no advantage as God's chosen people (1-2) The Jew says "Well then, what's the use of being a Jew and doing all these things?" The "Christian" says, then what's the use of church-going and praying and being baptized and taking communion? Paul's answer is: you have been entrusted with the very words of God! You have the opportunity to know in a clear and concrete way what God requires, that much of the world doesn't have. You can read what God says and know your state before Him! The second objection is that:

2. God would appear unfaithful to Israel if they are lost (3-4) "If there are religious people without true faith, doesn't that make God look unfaithful? Doesn't that make Him look like he doesn't regard what people do, like He doesn't care whether we try to worship and obey Him or not?" Paul says, "Not at all; God is always right. You can't malign the character of God; He's perfect! If there is any unfaithfulness, it is not on God's part but on ours! God will always be proved right!" The third objection is that:

3. God is wrong to punish us since our sinfulness shows His righteousness (5-6) The religious person says, "If human beings can't do any better than this, if it's impossible for us to keep God's standards, then it's not fair for us to be held accountable. After all, we wouldn't expect a child to do something he could not do, would we? So, God would be unjust to judge us! Our failures serve to point out how perfect and holy He is!" Paul says: "God is never unjust; if that were so, how could God be the judge of all the earth; how could he judge men; He would be disqualified. He is a just judge!" And the final objection is that:

4. this teaching encourages people to do evil (7-8) So, a religious person could say, "Well, since my sinfulness only serves to point out how holy and righteous God is, then let's disregard the Law altogether. It isn't doing us any good to try to keep it and God is only being proved more and more righteous by our sinful behavior, so let's go ahead and sin!" Paul comments, "People who think like that are condemned and deserve it!" It's a thought so utterly ridiculous that it needs no rebuttal!

God's CONCLUSION is this (9b), ...we have already charged that all, both Jews and Greeks, are under sin... That is, All people, Jew and Gentile alike, religious and nonreligious and pagan, all stand condemned for sin! Listen to Gerry Seltzer's testimony: When I think about my religious or spiritual experience during the first 45 years of my life, it would be most accurately described by words such as rituals, rules and regulations. From the time that I was baptized as an infant, I virtually never missed mass. It was part of every weekend's ritual. I took "holy communion" at most services and carefully avoided all "mortal" sins. Any "venial sins" I committed, I would dutifully confess to a priest once every month or so. Along with my three brothers, I attended Catholic school from kindergarten through the tenth grade. Throughout my childhood and into my teen years, I tried to be a "good Catholic." ...I went through all the right motions, and almost never considered becoming inactive or dropping out. I essentially never questioned or doubted what I was being taught, but faithfully followed the teachings of the Catholic church. But God changed all that when He caused one of His servants, named Jim, to intersect my path and initiate a friendship. I met Jim at work, where he and I were both employed as accountants. We began walking together during our lunch breaks to get some much-needed exercise and our walks included many talks. I noticed that Jim often brought Scripture into our conversations and was able to quote many verses from the Bible. ...Jim's talking to me about spiritual things really got my attention. When Jim invited me to visit his church, I readily went with him and very much enjoyed the preaching. Soon after that, I did a Bible study with Jim to learn more about how to be saved. At the conclusion of the Bible study, I prayed a prayer to be saved. However, I was so trained to follow rituals and do what was expected of me, that I did not realize that I had simply gone through the motions of a false profession, without truly repenting of my sin and trusting in Jesus Christ alone as my Savior. ...it was not long before I realized that my life had not changed and that I was still unsaved. I felt the same old way, trapped in mechanical rituals without a changed heart. In September of 2003, while driving to church, I was thinking about my lost condition before God and certain eternity in hell. I was scared and had come to the end of myself. I cried out to God, "What do I need to do to be saved"? I had nowhere else to turn, but to Jesus. As I continued to pray to God, I let go of any dependence I had upon my religion or self-righteousness for my salvation; I repented of my sins and put my faith totally and completely in what Jesus Christ had done for me on the cross of Calvary as my only means of salvation. At that moment of surrender and commitment, I sensed Christ's presence and the peace that only He can give in my heart. I knew I was now saved!

[<http://www.lvbaptist.org/gseltzer/>] Dear friend, THAT'S the Gospel, that's what God wants of each one of us. Being religious saves no one. Only Jesus can do that. You can be in a church all your life, even this church, and still be completely lost, if in your heart you're relying on your religious identity or keeping religious rituals to save you. If that's you, do what Gerry did, trust Jesus alone.

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

The Lostness Of ALL People - 3:9-20

There is a doctrine that pervades our land society today called humanism. It has been around for a long time in various forms but in our day, it saturates our entire society, our schools and universities, our media and many of our mainline churches. Indeed, it is the way that most people in our culture think. The Merriam Webster Dictionary defines humanism as a system of values and beliefs that is based on the idea that people are basically good and that problems can be solved using reason instead of religion. That is, man is good and he doesn't need God. Somewhere down deep at the core of every human being is an inherent goodness. It tends to get corrupted by his environment as he grows up, so if we can just improve the environment in which people live, improve family structure, social structure and educational structure, then people will do good and be good and the whole world will become a better place! If that were true, you'd think that in 5,000 years of recorded human history we ought to be able to see hard evidence of it by now, yet the world is just as violent and dangerous a place as it has ever been, and probably more so. Well, God has always had a radically different view of the human race. Paul has been explaining it to us beginning at Rom. 1:18. Here is:

I. God's Conclusion About The Human Race (9) God says, ALL Human Beings Are Under Sin. It doesn't matter whether we are Jews or one of the thousands of other peoples of the world, every last one of us sins and stands under God's condemnation and wrath because of it, without exception. "But wait a minute, isn't there somebody, somewhere among the 7.2 billion people of the world that is worth saving? Certainly, there must be at least a few who seek after God and live nearly perfectly. Surely there must be someone whom God will let into heaven without knowing Jesus Christ because they are good!" God's answer is a clear, "NO." Paul has already shown us that people don't live up to the light of creation; they worship it! People don't live up to the light of conscience; they deaden it. And they don't live up to the light of God's direct commandment; they break it! In our text is:

II. God's Scriptural Statement About The Human Race (10-12) Period! That is God's final statement on the matter. Really, what Paul has done through verse 18 is to pull together a collection of Old Testament Scripture references and these three verses are a rather direct quoting of Ps. 14:1b-3, ...there is none who does good. The LORD looks down from heaven on the children of man, to see if there are any who understand, who seek after God. They have all turned aside; together they have become corrupt; there is none who does good, not even one. God actually looks down at the entire human race, all 7.2 billion individuals and not only sees each one of us, but knows us! And here are six things that He sees:

1. no human being is righteous - not even one! That is, there is no human being without sin, not one single person who never does an evil act, says an evil word or thinks an evil thought. Not one. And you don't have to be God or even a rocket scientist to see that. Of the hundreds of people you've met in your life, you can't name one! Am I right? We all sin because it is in our very nature to do it. Second, God sees that:

2. no human being understands what God wants We just don't get it. On our own, none of us comprehends just how holy God is and how sinful we are and that we can never earn our way into His favor. We always think we can find a way, that we can measure up somehow or that He will somehow overlook our sin. None of us could ever comprehend that the only way for God to save us and still be holy and just is for Him to take the penalty for us upon Himself! Even when someone comes and tells us that, we can't grasp it! Think how many times the Gospel goes out and people hear it and walk away without responding. Why? 1 Cor. 2:14 says, The natural person does not accept the things of the Spirit of God, for they are folly to him, and he is not able to understand them because they are spiritually discerned. Unless God's Holy Spirit does a work in our hearts and turns on the light of understanding, not one of us gets it! But even if we did, God sees that:

3. no human being genuinely seeks God Left to ourselves, we don't search for God and try to find Him. The word means to crave, to desire. We don't want Him; we don't thirst for Him; we don't desire Him above all else even though

He created us. Why not? Jn. 6:44 says, No one can come to me unless the Father who sent me draws him... It's not in our nature to seek Him; it's in our nature to serve ourselves! We're spiritually dead, absolutely unresponsive, completely flat-lined. Unless God Himself plants a desire in us by His Spirit, not one of us would ever want Him. That's how far gone we are! Then, as God looks down on us, He sees that:

4. every human being has turned aside from God's path God started us down the right path, the right way to live, but every single one of us turns off the path and goes the way we want to go. Of all the dogs I've had in my life, only one of them ever obediently and quietly walked by my side and went whatever way I wanted to go. The rest of them all pulled on the leash as hard as they could wanting to go to that tree, to this fire hydrant, to chase this squirrel or to run after that other dog. Walking them was a continual tug of war. Do you know what I mean? God says that's us! We all, like sheep, go astray, instead of going where the shepherd leads; every one of us turns to our own way! Even little Lucky who walked so good got to where he snuck and went to the bathroom in the house because he didn't want to make the effort to go outside anymore! So, he's gone, but you get my point! We are all self-willed creatures and that's not how God created us! That's why God says:

5. every human being has become useless for God's purpose We've become spoiled like a rotten banana or soured milk that you can't use for the purpose you got it for. God made us to serve His purpose and carry out His will and because of our sin, we're worthless; He can't use us to accomplish His purpose in the world. We keep going our own way and doing our own thing, acting in our own self-interest all the time. And finally, God sees that:

6. no human being continually practices goodness - not even one of us! The Greek word good here means kindness, unselfishness, and the verb is present tense which carries the sense is of continuation. Sure, a person may do things that are good and kind and unselfish once in a while, but apart from God changing us, we are basically self-centered. We cannot be continually good all the time; not one of us can! And that's God's point:

We are all alike; there are no exceptions! This quote begins and ends with not even one! From our human perspective we may see great differences in people in terms of their character, but God looks inside us and He says we're all the same. We're all under sin, regardless of our culture, race, religion, or location! When Harry Truman was thrust into the presidency by the death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, a friend took him aside and said, "From here on out, you're going to have lots of people around you. They'll try to put up a wall around you and cut you off from any ideas but theirs. They'll tell you what a great man you are, Harry. But you and I both know you ain't." If we're honest, we all know deep inside that we sin, that we do evil, that we do wrong. Not one of us, not even me, is righteous. But then Paul goes on to compile a string of quotations from the Old Testament in which we have:

III. God's Graphic Portrayal Of The Human Race He paints a picture for us of what we humans look like using the image of a person in (13-18). First of all, God says that:

1. our mouths spew out vile things (13-14) Imagine opening a tomb that has decaying bodies in it and getting hit in the face with the stench and the flies swarming out. The point of the image is that inside are vile, detestable things and these come out through our mouths. Jesus Himself said that what comes out of the mouth defiles a man because what's in his heart pours out through his mouth and He mentions all manner of evil things. Here it says:

a. we use them to deceive others Verse 13 actually quotes Ps. 5:9, For there is no truth in their mouth; their inmost self is destruction; their throat is an open grave; they flatter with their tongue. We lie. We flatter others. We deceive them by telling them things that are not true. We all do it. Then, quoting Ps. 140:3, it says:

b. we use them to harm others, like a poisonous snake which keeps its deadly venom in a sac under its lips. It uses its mouth to kill and destroy people and so do we. We use our mouths to do great harm to others! Every one of us does it! Then, in verse 14 it says:

c. we use them to curse God and man quoting Ps. 10:7. I think of how James put it in the New Testament; look with me at James 3:8-10. Our very mouth that God created to praise Him we use to curse and condemn and criticize both God and our fellow human beings! We all do it! But our mouths are not our only problem; God says that:

2. our feet run quickly to sinful behavior (15-17) Here Paul quotes Is. 59:7-8, pointing out how quick we are to sin, how easily it comes to us, so easily that it is impossible for us to avoid. When God looks down, He sees that:

a. we easily kill one another without cause In just one recent conflict, the war in Syria alone, some 114,000 people have died, 11,500 of them children! Thousands have perished in South Sudan and the Central African Republic in the last year or two. Unbelievable atrocities occur regularly because a person simply happens to be from another tribe! But we're no better here. 92 people were murdered in Philadelphia last year and we're already up to 88 this year! But that pales in comparison to the fact that we take the lives of 1.2 million unborn children every year with hardly a thought! God sees that wherever we go:

b. we leave a trail of destruction and misery Everywhere human beings live there is a trail of violence and injustice and crime. Human beings kidnap and sell one another for forced sex, for forced labor, even for organ removal and sales! Human trafficking generates 9.6 billion dollars a year in OUR country and the Attorney General says that the Superbowl is the single largest human trafficking event in the US! All over the world we see example after example of the suffering that human beings inflict upon one another and, God sees that:

c. we are completely unable to live in peace. He's not talking about inner peace but about the fact that we can sing songs about peace and making the world a better place all we want; we simply can't do it. While Russian President Putin was demurely observing the Olympic Games and welcoming the world and celebrating harmony between nations, he managed to slip away and finalize plans to invade Ukraine and take Crimea! Ethnic tensions exist on every continent and in every nation; there are literally dozens of armed conflicts currently in progress on all over the world! The only way peace will ever come to this world is when Jesus comes! Our mouths spew out filth, our feet run quickly to sin, and, God says:

3. our eyes do not perceive reality (18) This is a quote from Ps. 36:1-2, Transgression speaks to the wicked deep in his heart; there is no fear of God before his eyes. For he flatters himself in his own eyes that his iniquity cannot be found out and hated. We human beings don't fear God because:

a. we are convinced that our sin can be hidden, that nobody can see it or nobody knows about it, that we can put one over on God and the world, that we can get away with our sin. And even if we sin boldly:

b. we have no fear of God's judgment We tell ourselves that God IS however we want to imagine him, that if He exists, He will never judge us, that we are invincible. We just can't see the reality of how things are. We are blind to the impending doom awaiting us and we run swiftly toward it without thought. Scripture says, It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. - Heb. 10:31.

The point is that humanity is totally corrupt in every aspect, our speech, our deeds, our thoughts and our perceptions. We are totally depraved and there is not a thing we can do to save ourselves. Like it or not, that is the human race as God sees us and that is you and I before we were transformed by Jesus Christ. Yehiel Dinur survived the holocaust of World War II. Many years later, he was called upon to testify at the trial of Adolf Eichmann, one of Hitler's architects who orchestrated the holocaust. A film clip from Eichmann's 1961 trial showed Dinur walking into the courtroom, stopping short, seeing Eichmann for the first time since the Nazi had sent him to Auschwitz eighteen years earlier. Dinur began to sob uncontrollably, then fainted, collapsing in a heap on the floor as the presiding judicial officer pounded his gavel for order in the crowded courtroom. People wondered, was Dinur overcome by hatred? Fear? Horrid memories? No, as Dinur explained in an interview with Mike Wallace of CBS News, all at once he realized Eichmann was not the godlike army officer who had sent so many to their deaths. This Eichmann was an ordinary man. "I was afraid about myself," said Dinur. "...I saw that I am capable to do this. I am ...exactly like he. Eichmann is in all of us". [http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Yehiel_De-Nur]. What a vivid way to say what Paul said, all [human beings], both Jews and Greeks, are under sin, controlled by sin, driven by sin. It is not just some; it is ALL of us. So then why did God give His law to Israel and through them to the world? Why did He bother to spell out all those things that are evil for human beings to do, if trying to keep them does no good? Well, before he moves on, Paul explains:

IV. Why God Gave His Law To The Human Race (19-20) First of all, the Law:

1. it was intended to produce humility by giving us the knowledge of sin He gave it to silence our mouths. Did you ever get caught doing wrong, let's say speeding or something like that where you were deliberately guilty and you knew it and when the officer asked why you broke the law, all you can say is, "I have no excuse". If you can imagine that, that's what Paul means. God wants us to come to that place where we humbly admit that we are sinful and lost and that we have no excuse for it. The written law was designed to define sin in concrete terms with the intent that it would bring that kind of consciousness of sin in order that the whole race could stand humbly before God without excuse, knowing that we have broken His commands. Secondly:

2. it was intended to show us that we stand under the judgment of God, that every human being is accountable to God for his sins, that there is a day of condemnation and punishment coming where the Righteous God of the universe will give us what we truly deserve. The Law was given to show that the entire human race has a universal need for righteousness because not one of us is righteous! We have to find a way to escape our condemnation by the Law or we are doomed! Yet, Paul says:

3. no human being will be made righteous before God by trying to keep it Not one single person will ever stand before God and be declared righteous by his deeds. Why? Because not one of us is without sin, no not one. No matter how hard we may try, not one of us can become holy. God never gave the Law as a way to make us righteous; He gave it to show us that we are all unrighteous!

So, how then can anyone be saved if there is nothing we can do? The answer is obvious: only by the grace of God, only if God steps in and does something to save us from our fate! And that's the message Paul begins to declare from verse 21 on. God has done something to rescue us from our plight; He sent His Son. Now, I know that this has not been a pleasant message to listen to and the last three have not been either. But please remember that it is only when we fully comprehend the situation, we were in that we can fully appreciate what God did for us when He saved us. Our condemnation before God is the first basic truth that a person must understand in order to be saved, so that he gives up trying to find ways to save himself. Once a man was bent over on the sidewalk looking for something. Soon a policeman came by and asked what was wrong. He said, "I've dropped my keys and can't seem to find them." So the policemen helped him look and after a few minutes the policeman asked, "Are you sure you lost them here?" He replied, "Oh no, I lost them over there in the grass, but it's much easier to look here on the pavement." We have to understand that we've all been looking in the wrong place for salvation, trying to get to heaven on the wrong basis, before we can ever find it. We have to see ourselves as lost sinners, condemned and undone, and recognize that there is nothing in us or about us that can save us, before we can experience God's wonderful grace.

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Justification: God's Provision Of Righteousness - 3:21-5:21

How God Makes Us Righteous - 3:21-31

At 3:21 we move into a whole new section of Paul's letter to the Romans. Up to this point He has been focusing on CONDEMNATION, proving that the whole human race is lost and desperately in need of salvation. From here he moves on through end of chapter 4 to explain the process of JUSTIFICATION, the way that God makes us righteous. If all human beings, even the best and most religious of them, stand under God's wrath because of their sin and can't do anything to earn salvation, then there must be an entirely different way for them to be saved, if any are to be saved at all. And that way of salvation has to originate with and be provided by God Himself, since we can't save ourselves. Of course, that's exactly what God did. Paul says:

I. God Has Revealed A Different Kind Of Righteousness (21-24) Human beings (and especially the Jews whom Paul has in mind) always think that righteousness comes by doing deeds, by keeping the law, that righteousness is the sum total of a life of perfect actions. But there is a different kind of righteousness. God is not righteous because He does right actions; He does right actions because He is righteous. Righteousness is at the core of the character of God. It's a purity and holiness of being, without one speck of sin. So, there is this God-kind-of-righteousness that is totally different from the way we understand it that God wants us to have.

1. it is a righteousness that comes from God; as the NIV puts it, a righteousness from God, apart from law, has been made known... It is a righteousness that originates from God Himself so that:

a. it has nothing to do with human performance We don't get it as a result of anything we do such as trying to keep the Law or trying to be good. We receive it totally apart from any work, any good deed, any effort that we make. It is totally separate from the principle of keeping rules. But, wait a minute, where did this idea come from? Didn't God for centuries demand that His people keep the Law in order to be accepted by Him? Did God just radically change His method? No, as Paul will prove in the next chapter:

b. the Old Testament attests to it. The idea of God giving righteousness is mentioned concerning Abraham and also by David. It was known in the Old Testament, although it was somewhat obscured there, but it is now fully revealed since Jesus has come. It is not that God changed His method of saving people; rather in the coming of Jesus, God revealed what His method of saving people has really been all along and it's the same method that He uses ever since Jesus came. Verse 22 says:

2. God gives His righteousness to all who believe in Jesus Christ! Now pause a moment and let that sink in. It's a tremendous statement: God gives His righteousness to all those who believe in Jesus Christ. Let's think carefully about what that means. No human being is righteous, so God turns around and gives His own righteousness to some of us. Which ones? Not to those who try to earn it, but only to those human beings who believe in His Son Jesus. First, notice that this:

a. it is His universal and only means of saving people As God sees the human race there is no distinction between people; it doesn't matter whether they are part of Israel or any one of the other thousands of peoples of the earth, whether some are better behaved than others. ALL have sinned and fall short of the glory of the holy, righteous, pure God of the universe. The only way for Him to save any of us is for Him to give us HIS righteousness. It's the only way for everyone without exception. Then notice the word gift. That means:

b. He gives it freely, simply and only because He wants to. He didn't have to; He was under no obligation because we contribute nothing that causes Him to give it. He doesn't give it because we've tried so hard and done so much; He gives it simply and only because He loves us and chooses to save us. And hand in hand with that is the concept that:

c. He gives it out of grace That means He gives it even though we deserve nothing. We deserve the very opposite! We deserve wrath, punishment, an eternity of fire! But God chooses to freely give us what we do not deserve, His righteousness. Yet it is not as easy as simply making the choice to give it:

d. He gives it because of the liberation procured by Jesus Redemption means to set free. God is a just God, a just Judge. He cannot simply let us off the hook, pardon our sins and ignore the punishment due us. He can't let the murderer walk and release the terrorist to return home as our officials may do. He can only give us His righteousness because of what Jesus did on the cross to set us free from the penalty of our sins. Without that, God couldn't spare us. Therefore, the decision to give us salvation WAS the decision to send His own Son; there was no other way for Him to do it. So how do we get this righteousness?

e. He gives it when we place our faith in Jesus and what He did for us He doesn't just randomly pick people to save. He saves those who choose to believe that Jesus provided that gift of salvation for them. Now let me be clear about what faith is. It is not an intellectual thing. It is not believing facts about who Jesus was or what He did. Faith is reliance; it is trust. Tim Hansel writes: One day, while my son Zac and I were out in the country, climbing around in some cliffs, I heard a voice from above me yell, "Hey Dad! Catch me!" I turned around to see Zac joyfully jumping off a rock straight at me. He had jumped and then yelled "Hey Dad!" I became an instant circus act, catching him. We both fell to the ground. For a moment after I caught him, I could hardly talk. When I found my voice again, I gasped in exasperation: "Zac! Can you give me one good reason why you did that???" He responded with remarkable calmness: "Sure...because you're my Dad." [Tim Hansel, Holy Sweat, 1987, Word Books Publisher, pp. 46-47.] Zac had absolute complete trust that his dad would save him by catching him as he jumped off that rock. He wasn't thinking, "Well, if he misses, I can roll when I hit the ground and I won't get hurt too badly." or "I'm such a good jumper that I will land on Dad just right so he can't miss me." He was thinking, "Dad will save me!" His trust was all in Dad and none in himself and that's what faith in Jesus is, being absolutely convinced that He alone can save me and crying out, "Jesus save me!", trusting that He will.

And when we do that, when we place our faith, our complete trust, in Jesus:

3. God declares us righteous, or to use the word in verse 24, He justifies us. That's a fancy theological word which means that God declares me, who was a sinner, to be just or righteous. It is a legal term that comes to us from the courtroom. The picture is that the person stands before the judge and the judge pronounces him to be free and cleared of all the charges against him. As a young person I learned a simple way to remember its meaning: justified means that I stand before God just-as-if-I'd never sinned! It means that I stand before God with a clean slate, with not one single sin on my record.

But how can that be? My slate is black! My rap sheet is pages and pages of wrongs and evils that I have done! How can God declare me or any of us righteous? Well, Paul says that:

II. God Himself Provided This Righteousness For Us (25-26) God Himself sent Christ to earth to be a sacrifice of atonement (some translations use the word propitiation) for our sins. That's another way of saying that:

1. Christ's blood made atonement for our sins; the offering up of His life satisfied the wrath of God against the evil that we had done. Look with me at 1 Pet. 3:18. Christ brought us to God, from whom we were separated, because:

a. in His death Christ received the full penalty for all our sins Look back to 1 Pet. 2:24. On the cross God made a great transfer. In the Old Testament a person who sinned would place his hands upon the head of a lamb or a goat to be sacrificed and confess his sins over it, symbolizing that his sins were transferred to the animal, then the animal was slain in his place. That was to picture what God would do at the cross; He would place all our sins upon Jesus on the tree and pour out the fullness of His wrath against our sins upon Jesus in our place as our substitute. But that's only half the story:

b. through His death God gave to us Christ's righteousness Look with me at 2 Cor. 5:21. God laid our sins upon Him for our sake, so that He could give to us the very righteousness of Christ. There was a great exchange: He became what we were; we became what He was through the cross. Now, God actually gave us His righteousness in two senses. First of all, He didn't simply SAY we are righteous, even though we aren't. He actually did MAKE us righteous by placing His own Holy Spirit inside us and causing us to be born all over again, so that now at the core of our being we have a nature, a spirit, that is holy, righteous and pure, just like Christ. But that's a subject Paul takes up in chapter 6 and in his other epistles. In our text here, he means that God assigned Christ's righteousness to us and declared us to be righteous. He gave us Christ's righteousness as a free gift through Christ dying in our place.

But wait a minute, that doesn't seem quite fair! Can God really not punish us for our sins and still be just? Paul asserts twice that:

2. God Himself was absolutely righteous in doing this He is not an unjust judge who deliberately punishes the wrong man and lets the true criminal go free. Well, what about those who lived before Christ? How could He make them righteous? Paul says:

a. God patiently withheld judgment on those who believed until Christ came There were millions like Abraham and Jacob and David and Elijah and Isaiah who had genuine trust in the true God alone. They believed God and God counted their faith as righteousness until Christ came to take their penalty. To put it in plain language, they were "saved on credit". Knowing that He would send Christ, God held off collecting on the sin debt that they owed until Christ came and paid the bill! OK, but to be just, didn't God actually have to punish US, the ones who actually committed the sin? No, Paul says:

b. God was perfectly holy since our sin was fully punished in Christ Think about it another way. The Bible says that God placed me IN Christ, that He joined me to Him, in such a way that what happened to Him happened to me. He didn't merely take my place as a stand-in. I've been joined to Him so that when He died, I died! He didn't just represent me; He was joined to me and it was fully right that my penalty should fall on Him. When it fell on Him it was, in essence, falling on me. God's wrath, His justice, was completely satisfied and justice was meted out fully to me in Him. Therefore:

c. God's tremendous love was free to justify us who believe Because my sin was paid for completely, there was no condemnation left and God, because He loved me so much, could declare me righteous and even make me righteous, because I am joined to Christ. At the cross, God's love and His justice met in perfect harmony. He was absolutely just and could still justify me! Hallelujah!

Martin Luther wrote: "All the prophets did foresee in Spirit that Christ should become the greatest transgressor, murderer, adulterer, thief, rebel, blasphemer, and so on, that ever was or could be in all the world. For he, being made a sacrifice for the sins of the whole world is not now an innocent person and without sins...but a sinner. Our most merciful Father...sent his only Son into the world and laid upon him...the sins of all men saying: Be thou Peter that denier; Paul that persecutor, blasphemer and cruel oppressor; David that adulterer; that sinner which did eat the apple in Paradise; that thief which hanged upon the cross; and briefly, be thou the person which hath committed the sins of all men; see therefore that thou pay and satisfy for them. Here now comes the law and saith: I find him a sinner...therefore let him die upon the cross. And so, he setteth upon him and killeth him. By this means the whole world is purged and cleansed from all sins." Luther once wrote to a friend: "Learn to know Christ and him crucified. Learn to sing to him, and say, 'Lord Jesus, you are my righteousness... You have taken upon yourself what is mine and given me what is yours. You became what you were not, so that I might become what I was not.'" [Your Father Loves You by James Packer, Harold Shaw Publishers, 1986] What an amazing concept this is! We stand in awe of it. What human being would ever have thought of this plan? It is clear that:

III. God Showed Great Wisdom In Justifying Us This Way and Paul finishes the chapter by mentioning three things that God accomplished through doing this. First:

1. all human boasting before God is eliminated (27-28) If all we must do to receive this gift is to believe it is ours, to accept what God has done for us and depend upon it, then there is nothing that we can try to take credit for. No one can say, "I did this" or "I am this" or "God saved me because I..." God gets all the glory because our salvation is all of Him and not of us. All we can do is thank Him for providing it and praise Him for His great love for us. Through this plan God insured that no one can steal His glory. Secondly, He insured that:

2. all human beings must come to God in the same way, through faith (29-30) God leveled the playing field; He put all human beings on the same plane. Jew or Gentile, Uzbek or Kyrgyz or Yenadi, rich or poor, religious or atheist, Mother Theresa or Hitler types, ALL have only one and the same way to be saved and made righteous. I can't find who first said it, but it's true, "The ground is level at the foot of the cross." We're all on an equal footing. No one has any advantage over another. We can bring God nothing; all we can do is believe and trust in what He has done. And finally, through this plan:

3. God's Law is upheld (31) Are we saying that God's law doesn't matter, that it doesn't matter if you sin, that you can do evil and get away with it? Not at all. The law has been completely upheld. God's sentence, The soul who sins shall die! [Ez. 18:4], still stands. Our sin has been dealt with and its penalty of eternal death has been fully carried out upon the Lord Jesus. The sentence of the Law has been satisfied with no injustice done; nothing has been gotten by with. God is still just and He has justified us!

The story is told of two brothers who once lived completely opposite lives. The older was a God-fearing man, good to everyone. The younger was rebellious, even violent. The older brother tried to influence him, but in vain. One evening, while the older sat quietly in his home, the younger brother stormed in with blood on his clothes, shouting, "Save me if you can! I have killed a man, and the police are after me!" The older replied, "Quick! Let's change clothes." They did so. The murderer donned the white garment, and the innocent put on the blood-stained one. Scarcely had they finished when the police arrived. Seeing the older brother in bloody clothes, they knew they had found their man and dragged him from his home. They had no doubt he was the one they sought. Brought to court, the accused admitted his guilt. The judge bowed to what seemed clear evidence and sentenced him to death. He had one last wish: "At the moment of my execution, please give my brother this letter." His wish was granted. Later, when the brother opened the letter, he read: "I died in your place, in your bloody garment, for your guilt. I was happy to make this sacrifice for you and ask only one thing, that you live a life of love and goodness." The innocent man was dead. Nothing could change that fact. But as often as former comrades asked the younger brother to participate in an act of violence, he replied, "I cannot do it in the white garment I received from the brother who died for me." [Jesus, Friend to Terrorists by Radu Valentin. Living Sacrifice Book Company, 1995. Pages 91- 92]. Dear brothers and sisters, the Lord Jesus changed places with us and died, the righteous for the unrighteous so that He might save us from that eternal penalty. He was happy to do it; He endured the cross for the joy that was set before him and that joy was the joy of having YOU! But the point is that, having given you His righteousness, now we should from the bottom of our hearts desire to live the way He wants, even if we fail at it. And when we are tempted to live the old way, this thought should reverberate through our minds, I cannot do it in the white garment I received from the Savior who died for me.

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Justification: God's Provision Of Righteousness - 3:21-5:21

The Example Of Abraham - 4:1-25

Paul expressed the theme of this 2 1/2 chapter long section of his letter clearly in 3:28, ...we hold that one is justified by faith apart from works of the law, or as the NLT puts it, ...we are made right with God through faith and not by obeying the law. God gives us His righteousness when we simply trust with all our hearts in Jesus Christ; it is not based on anything that we do. And Paul devotes all of chapter 4 to sharing with us how we can see this principle in the life of one man, Abraham. (1-2) To you and I that might not seem to matter very much; to us Abraham is just another obscure Old Testament Bible character. But:

I. The Way That Abraham Was Justified Before God Is Important Abraham was the forefather, the first father, the progenitor of the entire Jewish race. The Jews held him in extremely high esteem. When the Pharisees argued with Jesus in John 8, twice they said, "Abraham is our father!" In their minds, it was their relationship to Abraham that made them Jews, part of God's chosen people. So, if Paul can demonstrate that Abraham was made right with God by faith and not by his deeds, then they have no leg to stand on when they insist that keeping the law makes a person right with God. The other reason Paul chose to give this much attention to Abraham is that in the record of Abraham's life he found the most direct statement of God's method of saving people that is found anywhere in the Scriptures, Gen. 15:6, which clearly says that:

1. God counted Abraham righteous because of his faith (3-5) When Abraham was 75 and childless, God had made Him the promise that he would become the father of a great nation of people and a blessing to all the peoples of the earth. He waited patiently, but in Gen. 15, one day some eight or nine years later, God gave Abraham a vision and, in that vision, he was questioning God in prayer about His promise. He was complaining that he was now old and God had given him no son and one of his servants was going to end up being his heir. So, in his vision it must have been nighttime and God told him to go outside his tent and look up at the stars. Have you ever been out on a bright moonlit night in the country somewhere or in the mountains where there's no light pollution from a town or city to obscure the heavens? You gaze upward and there are stars, thousands of them, little distinct points of light, each shining clearly in every sector of the heavens. It's beautiful; have you ever seen that? So, God says, "Now count those, if you can. I'm not only going to give you a son, I'm going to give you as many descendants as those stars up there!" What an amazing, awe-inspiring moment that must have been. And the record says in that powerful moment:

a. he believed God's promise that he would have innumerable descendants. God made sure that Moses wrote down there in Genesis that Abraham believed God as though at that moment there was a full commitment, a complete trust like never before and because he trusted God to do what He said, God counted him righteous! God put down on his account sheet in heaven, "Abraham is righteous; he trusts in Me". Now, Paul goes on to point out that:

b. God counted that faith as righteousness to him apart from any deed God did not call Abraham righteous because he obeyed God's call and left his home in Ur of the Chaldeans. He did not call him righteous because he threw away the idols of his ancestors or because of the uprightness of his personal behavior. God counted him as being righteous for only one reason, simply because he trusted in Him! And Paul says in verse 5 that:

c. He does the same for us when we trust Him to justify us When we stop trusting in our deeds as the way to be made right with God, when we admit that we are ungodly, wicked, irreverent sinners who cannot save ourselves, and simply trust God to save us because Jesus died for us, He counts our simple trust as righteousness! He declares us righteous because of Jesus and all our sins are washed away, so that we stand before God just-as-if-we'd never sinned. We don't do a thing to cause it to happen except believe! Isn't that marvelous? But Paul wants to prove it even more clearly, so now he turns to the life of another Old Testament figure, King David. The name of David was just as honored and revered by the Jews as that of Abraham. He was their best and greatest King, the one to whom God promised that his descendants would reign forever! He was called a man after God's own heart, the sweet singer of Israel who wrote so many of the Psalms. Yet there was a period in his life when David fell into great sin, sin worthy of death. As you recall, his armies were engaged in a great battle against the Ammonites but he stayed home. And as he was walking on his rooftop in the cool one evening, he saw a beautiful woman, Bathsheba, bathing on a neighboring roof. It turned out she was the wife of one of his soldiers, Uriah, but he gave in to lust and sent for her and committed adultery with her. Of course, she became pregnant, but to hide his responsibility in the matter, he gave secret orders to have Uriah killed in battle and took her as his wife. A whole year he kept up this charade until God sent the prophet Nathan to point his finger at David and say, "YOU have done this!" As the floodgates of guilt and remorse and mourning broke upon him, he realized the tremendous depth of his own sinfulness and repented. He expressed the depth of his feelings in several of the Psalms and Paul points out that:

d. David affirmed this same truth of being counted righteous by God after his great sin, knowing there was nothing he could do to earn forgiveness (6-8) You know that he's talking about himself here. Look back with me to the passage from which this comes, Ps. 32:1-5. You can almost hear his sigh of relief! Now go back to the first two verses and notice the verbs. This is Hebrew poetry written in a specific style. There are three parallel clauses that say same thing, each one becoming more intense than the last. It's like coming out of Dairy Queen saying, "That ice cream was good; it was absolutely delicious; it was the best ice cream I've ever tasted!" So, David is saying, "It's blessed to know that my sins are forgiven (that is, sent away from me), but it's even better to know that they are covered (hidden from God's sight), yet the best of all is to realize that they are not counted against me anymore, that God counts me righteous, as if I'd never committed this awful sin!" Now, how did that happen? In verses 3-5 you see that it was not by doing good deeds to erase the sin, but by simple confession and trusting in God to forgive! Thus, David was rescued from his iniquity by faith; he was declared righteous by believing God, just like Abraham was and just like we are!

Listen, the most wonderful thing in the world is to know that your sins are all forgiven, that not one of them is counted against you, that God declares you righteous simply and only because you believe in Jesus! OK, but does that only work for people who are Jewish, who are physically descended from Abraham to start with? What about the rest of us? That's where Paul goes next. Now, you have to understand that the thing that from Abraham on set the Jews apart from Gentiles, the rest of the world, was circumcision. In the Jewish mind, circumcision is what made a person a Jew and included them among God's people. Jews derogatorily referred to Gentiles as "the uncircumcised"; even young David with his sling and stones scoffed at mighty Goliath saying, Who is this uncircumcised Philistine that he should defy the armies of the Living God? So, Jews easily came to think that circumcision is what made you belong to God, just as within Christendom there are millions who think that baptism is what makes you belong to God. But Paul makes an interesting point here:

2. Abraham was circumcised AFTER he was justified (9-12) Abraham was counted righteous in Gen. 15 when he was in his early eighties. Circumcision was not given until just before the birth of Isaac at age 99 over a decade later! So, Abraham was counted righteous long before he ever heard of circumcision, and when God did command him to do it:

a. circumcision was the sign of his faith in God Let's look at the story in Gen. 17:1-5. Notice how God extended his promise to Abraham here. God said You will be the father of a MULTITUDE of nations, not just one! He even renamed him from Abram to Abraham, "father of a multitude". Then God gave him a sign, a symbol: 10-11, 23-24. As Paul notes, Abraham's circumcision was the sign, the symbol, the outward token, that said that he believed the promise of God and that he belonged to God. So, Abraham is not the father of all who are circumcised except in a very limited physical sense, rather:

b. he is the spiritual father of ALL who believe, whether they are circumcised or not! He is the spiritual ancestor, the progenitor, of all those who believe even though they're "uncircumcised" to the Jews. You realize that's us! Almost none of us are Jewish; we're not descended from Abraham in our flesh and yet God says that he is our spiritual father because we believe God, even though we're not part of the nation of Israel! We're part of that multitude of peoples that he is the father of! But he is also the father of those Jews who believe like he did. Down through history there was always a true Israel within Israel, a remnant like Moses and Joshua and David and millions of others who placed their trust in God like Abraham did. Then after Jesus came, there was a remnant of Israel who believed in Christ and there still is today. Not all Israelites were God's people then or now; only those who believe God like Abraham did are counted righteous.

So hey, we can actually claim Abraham as our father! Remember the little kid's song, Father Abraham had many sons, many sons had Father Abraham. And I am one of them, and so are you. So let's just praise the Lord! I used to think, "Why are on earth are we teaching kids to sing about that?" But it really is true! By our faith we are grafted into the line of God's people so that Abraham and the rest are not just some Jewish guys from long ago; we can claim them as our very ancestors and we ought to praise the Lord! Hallelujah! But the other big thing in the Jewish mind is the Law given to Moses and the keeping of it. That's what set them apart from the rest of the world. So next Paul points out that:

3. Abraham received God's promise by faith, not law (13-17) That promise that he would become the father of a multitude of nations, heir of the world, didn't come through his keeping the law. In the first place, the Law was only given by God at Sinai 430 years later (Gal. 3:17). But even if God gave him and his descendants that promise through his keeping A law, a set of rules, Paul says:

a. if the promise came by law, it would be worthless because the promise would be lost through transgression. Inevitably where there is law, people break the law and commit sin and that would render the promise null and void. If receiving what God promised depended on our performance, we'd never get it. But:

b. since the promise came through grace, it is guaranteed Grace means it comes solely from God and our receiving of it depends on God's character, not on our human performance. And because God never changes, it is guaranteed and cannot fail; it is as sure as God is! But most importantly:

c. since the promise is by faith, it is open to all who believe, not just Jews Because it does not depend on physical birth, it now applies to all who believe through Christ; we are Abraham's promised descendants. In God's sight we who believe in Jesus are Abraham's children; we share his faith. He believed in a God who called things that did not exist into existence, that is, a God who promised a child when there was no human hope of one and counted it as though it were already done. We believe in a God who raised the Lord Jesus to life again when there was no human hope! We are just like our father! Now Paul explores that a little further. Here's:

II. Why Abraham's Faith Was Counted As Righteousness (18-22) Abraham:

1. he believed God's word, even though it appeared impossible He was not an unrealistic dreamer; he faced the facts squarely. He knew his own body was not capable of having children and he realized that not only had Sarah been barren all their married life, but she was now physically past having the capacity to bear a child. He knew all of that was true and there was no hope, humanly speaking. Yet:

2. he never wavered in his trust, but instead gave glory to God He didn't look at his circumstances and give up. He didn't despair and say, "Not even God can give us a child!" Rather, he was strengthened in his faith; he trusted God more and gave Him glory for what He promised, trusting that it would be so. But how could he do this in such an apparently hopeless situation? Verse 21 says that:

3. he was completely convinced that God was able to do what He promised He believed something about the nature of God. He was convinced that He is an omnipotent, almighty God, one who has the power to do what He promises regardless of human circumstances. That's the kind of faith God credited to him as righteousness, a faith that cast its whole weight on God and His ability to keep His promise. Likewise, when we cast our whole weight on God to save us through Jesus, realizing that in our sinful human selves we cannot possibly be saved, that there is no human hope for us, and we trust in God, believing that He has power to do what He said He would do, it is then that He counts us righteous! You see:

III. Abraham Was Meant As An Example For Us Who Believe In Jesus (23-25) You have to realize something here. The words, Abraham believed God and it was counted to him as righteousness, were words that Abraham never saw. They were a comment written by Moses centuries later under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. Abraham perhaps never fully understood the process of what was happening; he simply believed God. So why did God place that Divine comment in the text?

1. God had those words specifically written for us, not simply to explain to us what happened to him, but so they would instruct us in the way that we can be made right with God. God wrote them specifically to tell us that:

2. like Abraham, we must trust in Jesus and be counted righteous We must do like Abraham did, trust in the God who did the impossible, who raised up Jesus from the dead. We must trust that Jesus died for our sins and that He was raised the third day "on account of" our justification, that is, to prove that His blood had paid the price and that we now have a right standing before God because of our faith.

Paul sums up what he has said in this whole chapter nicely in another place. Look with me at Gal. 3:6-9. Amen. We who believe are blessed along with Abraham, the man of faith! Two children were playing together on a hillside one afternoon. When they noticed that the hour was nearing sunset, and one of them looked up at the sky and said wonderingly, "See how far down the sun has gone! A little while ago it was right over that tree, and now it is so low down in the sky." His brother answered, "Only remember it isn't the sun that moves; it's the earth that turns. You know, Father told us." The first one shook his head, "The sun did move! I've been standing here all the time in the same spot." And with great confidence, he declared, "I know what I see!" To which his brother calmly replied, "And I believe Father." Those two boys are representative of the whole human race. All human beings stand in one position or the other. The vast majority confidently trust in what their senses reveal to them or in what seems obvious to them because of the culture they were raised in. The rest of us simply believe Father; we believe what His Word tells us is true. We are confident that He has power to do what He says He will do and that by our faith we are not only made righteous before Him, but have become His very children.

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Justification: God's Provision Of Righteousness - 3:21-5:21

The Joy Of Being Justified - 5:1-11

Ever since 3:21 Paul has been talking about the fact that we are justified by faith. When we believe in Jesus Christ, God counts us righteous or just. Paul spent all of chapter 4 proving his case through the example of the life of Abraham, but now in chapter 5, he begins to talk about what a blessing it is to be justified and its effect can be summed up in one word: joy. For some reason we here seem to have a hard time either experiencing or expressing joy. But I've seen it. I've seen poor, illiterate people in tiny little churches with thatched roofs in the south of India sing and dance and shout to God with all their strength. I've stood in a converted airplane hangar near Lake Issyk Kul in Kyrgyzstan and watched people who didn't have much in this world clap and dance and reach up and touch the banners that young people were waving across their heads as they passed down the aisles. I've seen people who suffer more than I've ever dreamed of, who live and survive with less than I think that I could ever live with, be filled with a kind of joy that it's tough for me to come close to. And this joy is simply and fully because of their relationship with Jesus Christ. About 250 years after Christ, Cyprian was the Bishop of Carthage (in modern Tunisia) during a time of persecution by two Roman Emperors. In writing to a friend, Donatus, he penned these words: "It is a bad world, Donatus, an incredibly bad world. But I have discovered in the midst of it a quiet and holy people who have learned a great secret. They have found a joy which is a thousand times better than any pleasure of our sinful life. They are despised and persecuted, but they care not. They are masters of their souls. They have overcome the world. These people, Donatus, are the Christians--and I am one of them." Paul reveals to us here the secret of that joy. It is that:

I. We Have A Permanent Standing With God (1-2) Most of the people in the world, if they have any belief in God, are perpetually unsure of their status with Him. They are always concerned whether they have done enough to be accepted by Him, never sure whether if they die, they will belong to Him. But we have a complete assurance that, because of Jesus, we have a permanent relationship of union with God that cannot ever change because:

1. it is based upon the past transaction of our justification Since we HAVE BEEN JUSTIFIED by faith... The tense of the Greek verb here is one that indicates an action that was begun in the past and is continuing in the present. Our justification is a past transaction that continues in place through this moment and forever. It occurred by faith the minute I placed my trust in Jesus Christ to save me; at that very instant God counted me righteous and He continues to do so. Let me compare it to the paying off of a mortgage or a car loan. Do you know that feeling you have when you write that last check and pay off the balance? Well, some of you do, anyway! The sense is that this debt is settled; the account is now closed and cannot be reopened anymore; it's over and the house or the car is completely yours. That's the sense of relief Paul is trying to convey. For us, the sin question has been settled before God once, for all, forever and that has brought us into:

2. it is a state of peaceful union with Him ...we have PEACE with God. The Greek word for peace comes from a root that means "to bind together that which has been separated". When we placed our faith in Jesus Christ and were justified, that was our access, it was our entrée to a new relationship with God, one where we who were the very enemies of God because of our sin, are now bound together with Him. And the tenses of all the verbs in these verses are the same; they indicate something begun in the past that continues through the present, that is, something that is permanent. The moment we were justified, we came into this relationship, but we still have it and always will. Paul further emphasizes that fact by using the word stand. It means to place; we've been placed into this relationship with God forever, permanently. Do you realize what a wonderful thing that is? You never have to worry that you will wake up tomorrow and be lost! Your standing with God is based on the death of Christ and can never change, so let come what may! And the reason it can't change is that:

3. our standing is an act of grace given to us through Jesus by means of faith ...this grace in which we stand means that this relationship we have, this union with God that is ours, was a gift given to us by God's grace. We didn't earn it or strive to achieve it; He, out of His own love, simply gave it to us once and for all the moment we believed that Jesus was our Savior. It was a gift given by God, not dependent in any degree on our behavior. To illustrate, a few weeks ago LuAnn and I were at Dan's graduation at Arcadia and, as at many university graduations, the first thing they did was to award an honorary doctorate degree to the speaker, the woman who produced "Reading Rainbow" years ago. Anyway, that degree was a pure gift that the university decided to grant. She didn't do any of the coursework required to earn it; she accumulated no credits, wrote no thesis, did no homework, received no grades, yet out of the grace of the university she was given a permanent standing as a Doctor of Letters, with all of the full rights and privileges that appertain to it. She stands a doctor forever. That's what's been done to us! God has given us this permanent standing of union with Him forever as a free gift and therefore, Paul says:

4. we rejoice in the future certainty of experiencing God's glory That phrase, in hope of the glory of God, we usually read over without thinking about it. But in the Bible, hope means an absolute certainty of what is yet future, so because of our permanent standing we are certain, not that God is glorious, but that we shall experience God's glory, we shall see Him face to face and share in His glory! It's what He prayed in Jn. 17:24; Jesus asked, Father, I desire that they also, whom you have given me, may be with me where I am, to see my glory that you have given me because you loved me before the foundation of the world. Jesus asked that we, all of us, would be with Him in heaven to see and experience and share in His glory, the glory He had with the Father before the world began. And the Father answered that prayer! Our guaranteed future is to be with Christ and experience all the fullness of His glory! That's the source of our joy. That's what makes us rejoice! We rejoice because:

II. We Have A Complete Certainty About Our Relationship With God, an absolute assurance, a complete confidence that other folks don't know anything about. Paul moves on to point out four things that give us that blessed assurance and the first one is actually something we would not expect:

1. we are assured of it by our circumstances (3-4) There is a process that God has put into effect in our day to day lives that causes us to know by experience with greater and greater certainty. And of all places it begins with the trials, sufferings, and problems we inevitably experience in life. It works like this:

a. our suffering produces endurance Trials come into our lives. A loved one gets sick, we lose our job, we're in an accident. And what happens to us as result? We develop endurance or perseverance in the NIV. What's that? It is trusting God through difficulty. We learn to trust Him to carry us through hard times as we continue to follow Him. This happens a first time, a second time, a third time and it keeps on happening as life throws its curves at us and each time we endure by trusting God, so:

b. our endurance produces character What's that? It's the habit of trusting that's been developed by doing it over and over again until it has become a part of who we are. It becomes part of our character. Look with me at James 1:2-4. Enduring suffering produces a maturity, a completeness, a realization that, "God has caused me to stand every test I've faced". And when we go through enough troubles to be able to look back and see that history of how God has brought us through every test in life, and we have that character habit of trusting God, of being a man or woman of faith like Abraham:

c. our character produces hope. What's that? It's a complete confidence in God's future for us, the certainty that if God has done all of that, then He certainly will not only be with us in future circumstances, but He will deliver us all the way to our arrival in glory!

So, trials and problems actually do us a wonderful service; they build into us a confidence in God that cannot be shaken and therefore as we mature spiritually, we learn to rejoice in them, rather than complaining about them and wishing them gone all the time! In 2 Cor. 12:9-10 Paul wrote of his own experience with suffering and said, I will boast all the more gladly about my weaknesses, so that Christ's power may rest on me. That is why, for Christ's sake, I delight in weaknesses, in insults, in hardships, in persecutions, in difficulties. For when I am weak, then I am strong. That's the kind of maturity that God desires to develop in us, the kind that ends up experiencing joy even in trials because they become a means of assuring us of our relationship with God! Then Paul goes on to say that:

2. we are assured of it by the Holy Spirit God has given us (5) That confidence, that hope, will never be disappointed; we'll never be ashamed of having held it, because it is not just some human conclusion that might be proved false. While circumstances are confirming our hope on the outside, something else is happening inside. God has placed His Holy Spirit within us and:

a. He has overwhelmed our hearts with God's love for us He is pouring out the experience of the love of God for us inside us until we are full and overflowing. Twice, Paul wrote that when the Spirit of God comes to live in us, our very hearts cry out Abba, Father! We joyously exclaim, "Daddy!", like a little child who sees his father walk in the front door. Because of the Holy Spirit, we are absolutely convinced internally that we have become God's children and that He loves us! Of course, at the same time:

b. He has produced in our hearts an overwhelming love for God in return. Our hearts overflow with love for our Father who has given us this amazing privilege! We truly LOVE God with all our hearts because of the permanent relationship He has given us. Now thirdly, Paul moves to the realm of our minds and says:

3. we are assured of it by the death of Christ (6-8) Paul points out something that we already realize:

a. human beings will scarcely die for those they deem worth dying for Human beings are seldom willing to die for another. A few might die for a relative or friend. Only rarely might someone give his life to save someone they don't know, but it would have to be someone who seems worth it. Nobody gives up his life to rescue people who appear to be getting what they deserve! He says Christ died for us who were weak (we who couldn't save ourselves), but what really causes us to stand in awe of God is that:

b. Christ died for us while we were still ungodly sinners God has proven once for all time, beyond all doubt, His love for us, in that while we were still wicked, sinful, unrighteous, ungodly enemies, Christ died for us! Christ looked down from the cross upon the cruel soldiers who had hung Him there and were gambling for His clothes, upon the mocking, jeering crowd who had called for His death, and cried, Father, forgive them! Then He died to make it possible! The Holy Spirit helps us to realize that them means US, that all humanity by our sin hung Christ on that cross and that His love for us was so great that He died for us anyway! How do I know that my future with God is secure? Because Jesus died for me! Because God so loved me that He gave His only Son, so that since I believe in Him, I will not perish but have everlasting life! People use the term extreme sports to describe people doing the most crazy, illogical, dangerous things that almost nobody is willing to do, but this is the most extreme act imaginable, that while we were still sinners Christ died for us!

Father Maximilian Kolbe was a prisoner at Auschwitz in August 1941. Another prisoner had escaped from the camp, and in reprisal, the Nazis ordered that ten prisoners had to die by starvation. Father Kolbe offered to take the place of one of the condemned men. The Nazis kept him in the starvation bunker for two weeks and then put him to death by lethal injection on August 14, 1941. Thirty years later a survivor of Auschwitz described the effect of Kolbe's action: "It was an enormous shock to the whole camp. We became aware that someone among us in this spiritual dark night of the soul was raising the standard of love on high. Someone unknown, like everyone else, tortured and bereft of name and social standing, went to a horrible death for the sake of someone not even related to him... To say that Father Kolbe died for us or for that person's family is too great a simplification. His death was the salvation of thousands. ...We were stunned by his act, which became for us a mighty explosion of light in the dark camp." [A Book of Saints, Anne Gordon - BILL Norman Markham, Ontario] That's what the act of Jesus in dying for us does! It stuns us! It shocks us! It is an explosion of light that proves once and for all that God loves us and that makes us absolutely confident and certain of our standing with Him! And finally, Paul says:

4. we are assured of it by the life of Christ (9-10) There is another great fact we are convinced of: that Jesus rose from the dead and He is alive now and forever! So, it makes the utmost sense that:

a. He who gave His blood for us so long ago will surely save us from God's wrath in the future, from an eternity in hell when we die! If He did such an extreme thing to save us then, it should assure our hearts greatly that He is alive to protect us forever and ever. As Heb. 7:25 says, Consequently, he is able to save to the uttermost those who draw near to God through him, since he always lives to make intercession for them. He is always there on our behalf. But Paul's thought goes even one step deeper:

b. the Son who died for us as enemies, lives to save us as reconciled ones If He died for us when we were enemies who had nothing to do with God, how much more will He do for us now that we have been justified and brought into relationship with Him as His children, because He is alive forevermore and wants us to be with Him! His life is our ultimate confidence that He will guarantee our future forever and ever.

Oh, what a wonderful guarantee we have of our own future because we've been justified. It's not merely a reasonable certainty, but a perfect, complete certainty, and it is because of that that:

III. We Are Continually Rejoicing In God (11) The Greek word for rejoice actually means "to boast or to glory in something." We might say, "to sing and shout about something." And what do we sing and shout about? God!

1. the gift of reconciliation through Jesus is cause for great celebration Every day of our lives should be filled with, O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is thy Name in all the earth! We should be shouting with the angels and the saints who are around the throne, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power and riches and wisdom and strength, honor and glory and blessing! This great gift, this unspeakable gift, should fill us with thanksgiving. Peter wrote, Though you have not seen him, you love him. Though you do not now see him, you believe in him and rejoice with joy that is inexpressible and filled with glory! - 1:8. But remember that:

2. this gift is also cause for bold declaration That word rejoice carries the sense of doing it before others, declaring your joy to them and the reason for it. People that are full of joy about something just can't keep quiet about it; they just can't keep from bubbling over with it and sharing it with others. If your joy is real, you'll talk about it.

Oh, how different this is from the people all around you who have no sense of a permanent standing with God, who worry about it from day to day and have an uncertain future with no sense of confidence as to what eternity holds for them! Imagine facing life like that! Imagine facing death like that! In the beginning I shared with a quote from Cyprian about the joy that he had found in Jesus. I thought you might like to hear the story of the end of his life. At the end of the year 256 a new persecution of the Christians under Emperor Valerian I broke out, and two of the Bishops of Rome, Stephen I and Sixtus II, suffered martyrdom there. In North Africa Cyprian courageously prepared his people for the expected edict of persecution... and himself set an example for them. When he was brought before the Roman proconsul he refused to sacrifice to the pagan deities and firmly professed Christ. The proconsul banished him to Curubis, modern Korba, where he comforted to the best of his ability his flock and his banished clergy. In a vision he saw his own approaching fate. When a year had passed, he was recalled and kept practically a prisoner in his own villa, in expectation of severe measures after a new and more stringent imperial edict arrived, demanding the execution of all Christian clerics. On September 13, 258, Cyprian was imprisoned by the new proconsul, Galerius Maximus. The day following, he was examined for the last time and sentenced to die by the sword. His only answer was, "Thanks be to God!" The execution was carried out at once in an open place near the city. A vast multitude followed Cyprian on his last journey. He removed his garments without assistance, knelt down, and prayed. After he blindfolded himself, he was beheaded by the sword.

[<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cyprian>] His joy was not extinguished by danger, by banishment, by imprisonment or even by being sentenced to death; even then it bubbled out of him. He had found a joy a thousand times better than any pleasure this life could offer. He had found Jesus. Paul said it best when he exhorted the Philippians, Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say, Rejoice!

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Justification: God's Provision Of Righteousness - 3:21-5:21

Understanding Death AND Life - 5:12-21

The second half of Romans 5 is one of the more difficult portions of Scripture. In fact, D. M. Stearns, the well-known Bible teacher and missionary statesman from Germantown, once said that if you want to know whether a man is a real theologian, see if his Greek Testament falls open to Romans 5 and whether the pages are brown and worn! Greater men than I have wrestled with the meaning of this passage, so I just want us to look carefully at what it says and try to be as simple as possible. Let me explain why I think Paul wrote this passage. He has been talking since 3:21 about justification, about the fact that a person is counted righteous before God when he believes in Jesus Christ. He has explained the fact that it happens, he has given the proof that it happens from Abraham's life in chapter 4, and he has extolled the great joy that it brings us in the first half of chapter 5. So, now he is going to picture for us how it happens, how it is that God counts us righteous, but in order to do that, he first has to explain why God counts us as sinners and that brings him to expound one simple, central fact, which is that:

I. Adam's Sin Brought Death Upon Us All (12) The first reading textbook for the American colonies, the New England Primer, expressed it this way, "In Adam's fall, we sinned all!" This is called the doctrine of imputed sin: the concept that somehow Adam's first, original sin was attributed to the entire race descended from him and it affects each and every human being born into the world. Verse 12 spells it out nicely for us:

1. sin entered the world through Adam Adam was the doorman who opened the door and let it in. Prior to this, sin was external to both the world that God created and also to the people He had made. It existed only among Satan and the angels who fell with him. But when Adam sinned by disobeying God, he brought it in and when he did:

2. death entered as a consequence of sin God had told Adam clearly that the penalty of sin would be death, and please keep in mind that physical death is what Paul has in mind in this whole section. So, death entered the world as the penalty of sin. Death was not part of the original creation; human beings were designed and created to be immortal, to live forever. But when Adam opened the door:

3. death spread to the entire race Abel was the first to die, but soon Adam died, Eve died, their children died and their grandchildren and great grandchildren after them all died. It was like Adam opened the floodgate on a dam and in gushed death and wiped out every member of the entire human race. Every human being that has ever lived (save two that we know of in the Bible) has died and we see all around us living proof of that fact. The human mortality rate is perfect; one out of one people die, always and everywhere. The question is, why do we all die? And verse 12 answers:

4. we die because all of us sinned "in Adam" The Greek tense here is very important; it indicates an action that is completely done and over with in the past. Paul is not saying that all DO sin but that all DID sin in that one act of sin Adam committed long ago. Commonly, we think that we die because we have committed sins, yet infants die before they knowingly sin, sometimes even in the womb before they do anything! Mentally handicapped people die, who may never have understood moral responsibility. In fact, if your individual sins cause death, as a believer in Jesus, you would not have to die, because your sins are gone! You have the very righteousness of Christ. So, why are you and I going to die physically? The answer is not because of our personal sins, but because of that one primary act of sin; we die because of our connection with Adam. As 1 Cor. 15:22 puts it, ...in Adam all die. Now the first thing that comes to mind is something like, "That's not fair; how can someone else sin and I suffer the penalty!" But that's not actually what is happening. There are two ways to explain our connection to Adam. One is to say that:

a. he acted on our behalf Some theologian would say with a deep academic voice, "He was our federal head". That is, Adam, as the first human being, was the representative of the whole race of people who would descend from him and he acted on their behalf. We acknowledge this concept in many areas of life where a leader acts on our behalf and in doing so, we act. For example, if our President or Congress declares war, then I, as a citizen of the United States, am at war, even though I was not personally there to declare it. The head of a tribe may sign a peace treaty and so each member of the tribe is in effect bound to that treaty, as though he signed it himself. So, Adam's action was my action; he acted for me and the consequences of his action fall on me, just as surely as if I was the one who acted there. The good news is that this helps us to comprehend how Christ died in our place on the cross; He acted as my representative, so that the penalty for my sins was actually poured out upon me in Him, just as surely as if I had physically hung there. He received it on my behalf! Do you get what I'm saying? But our connection to Adam goes even deeper than the concept that he acted for us. In God's eyes:

b. we acted in his act Look with me at Heb. 7:9-10. You can review the story in Gen. 14 for yourself, but the Holy Spirit says here that Levi, Abraham's great grandson, who was not born until many years later, actually paid tithes to the priest Melchizedek in the person of his great grandfather Abraham. Abraham's act was his own act, it says, because he was "in the loins" of his ancestor. Abraham was the head or the progenitor of a race of people, the Hebrew race, so God counts the whole race which would physically descend from him as being already present in him. Obviously, they are not physically present, but God counts them that way. That's why the promises God made to Abraham hold good to his children; when God made those promises to him, He made them to each and every descendant who was "in him" as well. And that's how I am physically connected to Adam; I was "in Adam" and so was in the garden in him. The case is not that he sinned and I now pay for it. Rather it is that when he sinned; I sinned. The guilt of that act was my guilt and the penalty for it, that is, death, my penalty. I know that's heavy and hard to understand, but hey, God is pretty deep, you know! Anyway, the next point that Paul makes is that:

5. all humans die whether they sin knowingly as Adam did or not (13-14a) Paul is proving his argument that all sinned in Adam. Those people who lived during the time from Adam to Moses had no law to break, no direct command of God follow. They could not sin against the direct revelation of God, as Adam did, and have it counted against them. Yet every one of them was a sinner and the proof of it is that they all died. Why did they die? Because they sinned in Adam and so did we!

So, the bad news is that Adam's sin is imputed to us; that's why we die! However, the good news is that that explains to us how our justification, being made righteous before God, occurs. It works exactly the same way! For the rest of the chapter Paul shows over and over how:

II. Adam Is A Contrasting Picture Of Christ (14b) That word type [or maybe pattern or figure in your translation] means the impression left by a stamp or seal pressed into clay. How many have ever used a typewriter? Not many anymore! Each key on a typewriter causes a letter to strike the ribbon against the paper and leave an impression. The impression is a shadow of the real thing that made it. In the Bible, a type is an Old Testament person or thing that foreshadows or pre-figures a New Testament thing. It is something in the Old Testament that is like something in the New Testament and is intended by God to be an illustration of it. For example, Heb. 8:5 says the Tabernacle in the Old Testament was a copy and a shadow of things in heaven. It was built carefully to illustrate things about God's dwelling in heaven. The sacrifices of the Old Testament are types of Christ; they illustrate and spell out the various aspects of His death on the cross and its meaning for us. Jesus said that Noah spending three days in the belly of the fish before being spit out alive was a picture foreshadowing His own burial and resurrection. So, Paul says Adam is also a type of Christ and by studying his act, we can learn more about what Christ did for us by His act on the cross. Now, most types are comparative, that is, both things are like each other. But Adam and Christ are contrasting types; they and their actions are similar in position, but with totally opposite results. In other words, we look at Adam and see what he did for us in a negative sense and it helps us see how Christ did the exact opposite for us in a positive sense! Kapeesh? [By the way, Urban Dictionary says kapeesh is a word commonly used by Italian gangsters and mobsters of which I am not one!] Now Paul goes on to point out seven successive contrasts between Adam and Christ, beginning in verse (15):

1. as Adam's sin affected many, Christ's grace-gift affects many Both Adam and Christ were heads of a race; both were representative persons acting in behalf an entire body of people. Because the whole race was in Adam, his act was the act of many, that is, the entire human race and it brought the effect of death to us all. Just so, Christ's act of dying can give life to the many millions of us who believe! But Paul's point is not about the quantity; it is about certainty. If one man can sin and ruin a whole race like Adam did, then how much more can a God of grace by a free act of grace redeem a whole race. Just as surely as in Adam all die, in Christ all get life! Every person who believes gets life from Christ, his Head, just as certainly, and in fact, even more certainly, than he got death from Adam! Hallelujah! Next, we read verse (16). Paul says:

2. condemnation followed one sin but justification followed many sins Each act (both Christ's and Adam's) had a relationship to sin. One sin was all it took to ruin the whole race. Think about it. The simple act of disobeying a command not to eat a piece of fruit was enough to condemn an entire race to death. That's how awful and destructive a thing sin is! But in contrast, think how great a thing Christ did in giving us righteousness. Think of all the millions and millions of sins committed by all those from Adam on, even down to all the many in your own life. Christ's one act of dying was sufficient to justify us from every one of those. Hallelujah and hallelujah again! Now comes verse (17). Paul says:

3. as Adam made death reign over many, Christ made many reign in life The contrast here is in the word reign. Each person established a reign, a kingship, a controlling force. Adam's act gave death full reign, full control over every human being. Death reigned as king over the race, as verse 14 said, and not only for that time, but for all generations to come until it is finally abolished. On the contrary, Christ's act defeated death and disarmed it and claimed the keys to it, so that the race of people who are in Him, even though they were once ruled by death, now reign with Christ in life that is eternal. We will reign over all things with Him forever and ever. Adam created a reign of death; Christ created a reign of life that will never be extinguished! Is it fair to say TRIPLE Hallelujah?! On to verse (18). Paul points out a similarity this time:

4. as one trespass brought condemnation to all, one righteous act brings life for all The emphasis here is on the result of the two actions. Adam's action was a trespass, a wrong action, a breaking of the command of God and that wrong action brought condemnation to the whole race that was in him. The word condemnation in Greek technically refers to the passing of a sentence of punishment. Adam's entire race came under the pronouncement of the sentence of death. But Christ's act was a just one, a righteous one. It was the satisfying of all the demands of God's nature and of the Law and the end result of that one act was that it brought a new judgment, a new sentence, a verdict of life for all who believe! Now four Hallelujahs is something even a Pentecostal church might have trouble with, but this is worth it! However, back to contrasts in verse (19). Here's another similarity:

5. as Adam's disobedience made many sinners, Christ's obedience made many righteous Now Paul focuses more closely on the nature of the two actions. They were similar yet opposite. Adam's act was disobedience. The word disobedience literally means failure to hear in Greek. Adam failed to hear God in the right way and therefore failed to heed what God told him. How many times did the prophets say, "Hear, O Israel!" It means to hear with the intent to act, to carry out what you hear. And his act of not hearing caused God to declare or constitute many as sinners. But Christ's act was an act of obedience and the Greek word for obedience means to hear under, that is, to hear with submission to the authority of the speaker, the way a private listens to the command of a general. Christ listened; Adam didn't! And as a result of His listening, God declared or constituted all who believe as righteous, as freed from sin! That should lead us to ask ourselves, "How's my hearing?" Do I hear the way Adam did or the way Christ did? Well, now the question comes up in Paul's mind, "What about the law then; if all men were made sinners through Adam's transgression, what use was the giving of the law and what did breaking the law matter?" Look at verse (20). Paul says:

6. law caused sin to increase but grace increased much more Literally he says the law entered alongside. Mankind was already sinful, but the law augmented that, so that sin increased. Sin took on the new character of transgression, of the breaking of God's commands on a personal basis. Personal sin, individual sin, was added on top of the original sin and man became even more deeply guilty of sin before God. However, this became an opportunity to show the even greater grace of God. God's grace literally, superabounded! The word has the sense of filling something up and then piling some more on top of that! When we were at the shore last week, my brother-in-law always gets a plastic container of Fisher's Carmel corn. He saves the container from year to year to refill. Well, this year the lip of the lid was cracked and it was unusable, so he handed the man the container without it and the guy not only filled it to the level line of the lid but he filled it in a mound about six inches above the top until it was running off the sides! That's the word superabound; it means all you could have and then some more on top of that! No matter how bad sin got nor how much it increased nor how evil it became, it was just that much more opportunity for God to show that His grace is greater still and some more on top of that! Praise God that no matter how far we fall, no matter how low we become, it only becomes more of an opportunity to show how much greater His grace and forgiveness in Jesus Christ is! I don't even know what to call six Hallelujahs!! And now we come to the conclusion in verse (21). Here is Paul's conclusion:

7. as sin reigned through death, grace reigns through righteousness bringing eternal life There are two forces which have reigned as king universally. Through Adam, sin was made king of the human race. Sin ruled humanity and the result of its reign was universal death to every one of its subjects. But now through Christ, grace was made king and grace now reigns over all those who are in Him, and the result of its reign is to bring eternal life to every last one of them. It was all done through Jesus Christ our Lord! Oh, aren't you glad we are ruled by grace and not by sin any longer!

Can you see how much Christ has done for us? If we were left to ourselves in Adam, what a terrible state we would be in! But now in Christ all of that has not only been cancelled out, it has been superabundantly changed for us so that we are fully justified, made righteous, freed from the powerful reign of death and of sin and are ruled by the mighty grace of God which knows no limit! Let me tell you this story. Major John Andre was a British officer and intelligence agent who was involved in planning with the American General Benedict Arnold, the infamous traitor, to have the British army take the fort at West Point NY during the Revolutionary War. While traveling out of uniform he was discovered, arrested and sentenced to be hanged as a spy, while Benedict Arnold successfully fled. Even though he was an enemy officer, he impressed a great many of the Americans as a brave and honorable gentleman in the way he conducted himself throughout the whole affair. He was hanged on Oct. 2, 1780 and buried on the spot, but his remains were later brought to Britain and buried in Westminster Abbey as a recognition of the miscarriage of justice. However, after his hanging, in his pocket were found several verses of a religious poem that was first published in 1776 in The Gospel Magazine, a British evangelical magazine that is still published to this day. These verses he had written down from memory as a testimony to his faith and because of him this poem went on to be set to music and to appear in American hymnals for the next hundred years. For us this morning it forms a fitting conclusion to all Paul has taught us in Romans 5 and it goes like this:

*Hail, sovereign love, which first began
The scheme to rescue fallen man!
Hail, matchless, free, eternal grace,
That gave my soul a Hiding Place!*

*Against the God who built the sky
I fought with hands uplifted high,*

Despised the mention of His grace, Too proud to seek a Hiding Place.

*Enwrapt in thick Egyptian night,
And fond of darkness more than light,
Madly I ran the sinful race, Secure without a Hiding Place.*

*But thus the eternal counsel ran:
"Almighty love, arrest that man!"
I felt the arrows of distress,
And found I had no hiding place.*

*Indignant justice stood in view.
To Sinai's fiery mount I flew;
But justice cried, with frowning face:
"This mountain is no hiding place".*

*Ere long a heavenly voice I heard,
And Mercy's angel soon appeared;
He led me with a placid pace
To Jesus, as a Hiding Place.*

*On Him almighty vengeance fell,
Which must have sunk a world to hell.
He bore it for a sinful race,
And thus became their Hiding Place.*

*Should sevenfold storms of thunder roll,
And shake this globe from pole to pole,
No thunderbolt shall daunt my face,
For Jesus is my Hiding Place.*

*A few more setting suns at most,
Shall land me on fair Canaan's coast,
Where I shall sing the song of grace,
And see my glorious Hiding Place.*

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Sanctification: Our Appropriation Of Righteousness - 6:1-8:17

Our Great Transformation - 6:1-11

Paul has now completed his deep explanation of two of the aspects of our salvation. For the first 2 ½ chapters he explained our condemnation, how all of us are under sin. Then for the next 2 ½ chapters he explained our justification, how God declares us righteous when we simply believe in Jesus Christ. Now, beginning at 6:1, he is going to spend 2 ½ chapters explaining our sanctification, that is how God actually makes us to BE righteous and holy, how we become during our lives on earth what God says we already are. Dr. Donald Grey Barnhouse, long-time pastor and Bible teacher from Tenth Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, described sanctification through this story. Several centuries ago, the emperor of Japan commissioned an artist to paint a magnificent portrait of an exotic bird. After many months of waiting, he went to the man's studio to see how he was progressing. Upon his arrival, he found that the final touches had just been put on the canvas and the work was a masterpiece in every minute detail. When the Emperor asked what had taken so long, the painter went from cabinet to cabinet, producing armloads of separate sketches which featured outlines of the bird's feathers, tendons, wings, claws, eyes, and feet. He had been making preliminary drawings all along, but only when the emperor appeared was the lengthy task perfected. Barnhouse commented: Just as it took much painstaking effort before the picture could be true to its subject, so the Holy Spirit must constantly work in the believer's life to conform him to the image of God's Son. Though the Christian has been justified and even potentially sanctified in God's sight through the new birth, a long process of spiritual development must still be accomplished. His state must catch up with his standing. When the King of kings comes to claim His own, then the blessed work will finally be completed. That's what sanctification is and now Paul begins to discuss this subject of how God changes our lives by revealing to us the nature of the great transformation that God has caused to happen within us. And he starts with a question that is actually a very startling statement (1-2). Paul is saying that:

I. It Is Impossible For A Genuine Believer To Continually Practice Sin He is not saying that a believer never commits a sin, period; He is declaring that the change that has happened to us is of such a magnitude that it is impossible for us to go on in the habit of sinning as before we believed. His question points out:

1. the serious danger of abusing God's gift of grace There have been those who have concluded that if God forgives us simply for believing, then we are free to live any way we want. In fact, the more we sin, the more opportunity there is for God to display His grace in forgiving us! Grigori Rasputin was a monk who became a powerful influence with the Tsar of Russia in the early 1900's. He believed that sinning and repentance were a necessary part of salvation and that those deliberately committing fornication and then repenting bitterly, would be closer to God. One person commented, "Rasputin was a dual character who could go straight from praying for the royal family to the brothel down the street." [Wikipedia] Paul says that's a travesty! A person who can sin with such impunity has never had a real encounter with Jesus Christ, because if he did, it would be impossible for him to do that! Why? Paul's answer is, because we have died to sin! Now, that is a powerful statement and I want to unpack it for a moment. When Paul uses the word sin here and throughout these chapters, he is not referring to individual deeds or acts of that are sinful, that is, sins. Rather:

2. sin is the evil force or power that indwells people and drives them to commit sinful actions. It's a force just like gravity in the physical realm. Gravity is a powerful unseen force, a strong pull, that is constantly drawing all objects on the planet toward the center of the earth. In the spiritual realm, sin is a similar unseen force that is continually at work inside of human beings relentlessly and powerfully drawing them toward evil. We are born with it; it dwells inside every one of us from the moment of our conception. But Paul says something amazing happened when we came to Jesus Christ. He says:

a. we have died with respect to it Now, that's significant. He doesn't merely say that it has less pull upon us now. He says we are dead to it. Something that is dead is totally insensitive to its surroundings. A road-killed squirrel doesn't jump up and flee when the next car comes speeding up. It doesn't squeal in terror. It doesn't scurry about and try to get away like it did when it was alive. In fact, it doesn't respond at all. It just lies there uninfluenced by any of the forces that once moved it. So, Paul says, we are dead with respect to that force called sin. It has no power over us any longer; it exerts no pull on us. When an astronaut goes up in a spacecraft far enough, he gets beyond the gravitational pull of the earth and becomes weightless. There is nothing pulling him (or anything else) down to the floor any more. He floats about; everything floats about, free from gravity. We might say that for the moment, he is dead with respect to gravity. It has no power over him any longer. And the fact that we are dead to sin means that it does not control us anymore the way that it did. It's power over us is broken. The other reason I think Paul uses the word dead is because it indicates permanence. When something is dead, it's dead. It isn't coming back. Paul is telling us that the power of sin over us is broken forever. That's why he says that:

b. it is impossible for us to live controlled by it any longer Once the astronaut is in space, he can't be controlled by gravity, even if he wants to be! Just so, John explains, No one born of God makes a practice of sinning, for God's seed [that is, God's very nature now] abides in him, and he cannot keep on sinning because he has been born of God. - 1 Jn. 3:9. It is impossible for us to live a lifestyle of sinning, to keep on perpetually being drawn to do evil all the time. The transformation God has made inside us makes it absolutely impossible. Rasputin was evidently never born of God, monk or not!

Now Paul goes on to tell us:

II. How God Transformed Us When We Believed (3-5) There are two very important truths summarized in verse 4. The first is that:

1. we died and were buried with Christ At the moment we believed; God placed us IN Christ. Our life was joined to His in such a way that what happened to Him happened to us. When He died, we died; when He was buried, we were buried. It's not just that we were made different. Something about us actually died, perished, is no more, is gone forever. Hey, did you ever think about how we use the idiom dead and buried in English? If we say, "that issue is dead", we mean it's not worth talking about, but if we say, "that issue is dead and buried," we mean it's over with for good! Burial is the proof that death is real, the guarantee that the buried object is no longer alive and isn't coming back! Hold that thought for a moment and look at Paul's second important truth at the end of verse 4:

2. we were resurrected with Christ to live a new order of life like His What happened to Him, happened to us. He rose from the grave to a new manner of life. He still had His body, but it was different. It was no longer impacted by all of the forces of earth the way the old one was. And when He rose, we rose with Him, not yet to the new bodies like His that we will get one day, but to a new manner of life, a new way of living that is driven by the new nature that He created within us. We are totally different people, living a totally different life because we died with Christ and rose with Him. Now Paul explains that:

3. baptism symbolizes this tremendous transformation that has occurred The act of being buried in the water pictures the fact that my old self has died and been buried with Christ and I have been raised with Him to a new self; I'm a new man who lives a new way. Now, please understand that baptism:

a. it does not cause the transformation to occur It does not cause the dying and the rising to occur. It merely pictures what already happened to us when we believed. Yet even though the act of baptism doesn't save us:

b. it is important. It is not something to be neglected, to be nonchalant about. It is a command of Christ Himself and He commanded that every one of His disciples from every nation should be baptized in His name. To ignore that command is disobedience! But why is it so important? Because it declares our union with Christ and our transformation by Him. It says, "I am in Christ and Christ is in me and He has changed me! The old me is dead and gone. There's a new me living now. My life has been changed by Jesus Christ!" However, the point of what Paul is saying is really in verse 5:

4. since our death is undeniable, our living a new life with Him is inevitable Those words united with Christ are literally grown together with in the Greek. Perhaps fused together would be a good translation. Think of Siamese twins. They are not just tied or held together; they are vitally connected. Each one of them is a living part of the other. They share a common life. We are fused together with Christ in both His death and resurrection; we share a common life. So, since we were fused together with Him when He died and we died with Him, it is inevitable that we also share together in a new life. He's not talking about the future resurrection of our bodies some day; he's talking about walking in newness of life, as he said in verse 5. We cannot help living a new life, a life not dominated by the power of sin, a life that is growing in holiness like His, IF we are truly in Him. Of course, if we're not living the life, the Bible says we ought to examine ourselves as to whether we are really in the faith or not. We could be fooling ourselves and that would be deadly!

At any rate, Paul does not stop there. He goes on to give us:

III. The Explanation Of Our Transformation (6-7) Here's how it works:

1. our old self was crucified with Christ and is dead Now, just what part of us is that exactly? Well, in my understanding, we are three part beings. We have a spirit, the very core of our being. It is our life, the essence of who we are, our nature, if you will. Then, technically, we have a soul, or what we might call a personality. It is composed of our mind (thoughts), our emotions (feelings) and our will (ability to choose). Or as Bill Gillham likes to say, "We have a thinker, a feeler and a chooser." It's more or less the mental part of who we are. And then, of course, we have a body, the physical part of us that we leave behind when we die physically. So, when Paul says our old self was crucified, he means that:

a. the old sinful nature at the core of our being is gone Crucified means killed. The core essence of the person we used to be is dead and gone forever; it is removed from us by an act of spiritual circumcision as Colossians describes it, cut away and thrown out! However:

b. the force called sin still remains present in our bodies and our minds It is not sin that was killed in us. It was our own old nature that was executed. From birth, the power of sin lived in our spirit, in our mind and in our body. We were thoroughly controlled by it, through and through. But now it only lives in our mind and body. We still have sinful thoughts and feelings and make sinful choices and do some sinful deeds with our body, but at the core of who we are, we are new people. And:

c. through this process the power of sin to rule over us was broken You see, sin controlled us by using our nature. It is the nature of a cow to eat grass. It is the nature of a lion to eat the cow. If you change the core being, the inner nature of the lion into that of a cow, he'll eat grass and he'll want to eat grass. Now, you might be able to get him to eat meat now and then by outside influence, but by nature he wants to do what he is inside. The power of carnivorousness, or whatever we'd call it, is broken and he is freed from eating cows forever. He doesn't have to do it. That's what God will do with lions in the millennium, by the way! But it has already happened for us now:

d. we have been permanently freed from the power of sin. It can no longer control us because our old nature is gone. Now, it might manage to attract us to sin now and again, but it can no longer force us to do it; we are no longer sin's slaves. The point being this: we don't have to sin. We can choose to, but there is no longer a nature in us making us do it. Rather, in place of the old self:

2. Christ created in us a new self exactly like His Paul doesn't go into detail with this right here, but look with me at Col. 3:9-10. We have put off, been completely stripped of, the old self, the old nature and we have been clothed with a new nature, a new spirit, a new self, one that Christ created in us in His own image. What is it like? Back up to Eph. 4:23. At the core of our being, we are actually righteous and holy like Christ Himself. He birthed in us a new nature like His own that is totally free from sin and at that same moment:

a. He also joined Himself to our new spirit - 1 Cor. 6:17 says, he who is joined to the Lord becomes one spirit with him. His Holy Spirit enters us and fuses Himself to our human spirit, uniting us as one and giving us His holiness! So, we are not split personalities; we don't have two natures at the same time, a little angel on one shoulder and a little devil on the other like in the cartoons! We ARE righteous and holy like Christ, even though sin still lives in our body and mind and tries to give us trouble whenever it can. We'll talk about that war in the next chapter, but Paul's real point is in verse (8). He's not talking about living with Christ in heaven in the future some day. He is saying that since such a change of literal death to sin has occurred in us:

b. it is absolutely sure that we will live life with Christ, that is, we'll live an entirely new style of life. Our newness of life guarantees it. Paul put it like this in Gal. 2:20, I have been crucified with Christ. It is no longer I who live, but Christ who lives in me. And the life I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me. Christ's life is what animates me. It's not me living anymore; I died! Jesus put His life in me and He is doing the living. I live my life in this body by simply trusting Him to live out His life through me! This new way of life is a sure thing, a certainty, because the old self is dead and gone.

But can that ever change? Can it ever be reversed? Can I ever go back to being what I was before? Paul answers that:

3. this transformation in us is permanent (9-11) Christ cannot go back and die again. His death settled the issue of sin once and for all and death has no claim or hold on Him anymore because He went through it once and conquered it. And what Paul is saying is that:

a. just as Christ's death to sin was permanent, so is ours Our old self is literally dead and buried. It can't be resurrected and brought back, any more than Jesus can have His earthly body back and die again! Moreover:

b. just as the life Christ lives, He lives to God, so do we This new nature created in us can't go away. Christ can't unjoin Himself from our spirit and resurrect our old self and put it back so that we live the old way. This change in us is a permanent change that lasts forever!

But here is the thing that is really important. Having been transformed on the inside, we play a key role in the outworking of that in our lives (11):

IV. We Must Grasp The Reality Of This Transformation And Apply It We must adopt a new way of considering ourselves. We must count or reckon ourselves to be what we really are as the first step in our new life. If you do not grasp what we've just learned, you'll always see yourself as trying desperately to become something you are not, that is, holy. But if you comprehend it, you'll see yourself as simply learning to become what you already are. And that makes a world of difference.

In his book, The Normal Christian Life, the well-known Chinese leader Watchman Nee shared his personal experience: "For years after my conversion I had been taught to reckon. I reckoned from 1920 until 1927. The more I reckoned that I was dead to sin, the more alive I clearly was. I simply could not believe myself dead and I could not produce that death. Whenever I sought help from others, I was told to read Romans 6:11, and the more I read Romans 6:11, and tried to reckon, the further away death was: I could not get at it. For months I was seeking and at times I fasted, but nothing came through. I remember one morning, one I can never forget. I was upstairs sitting at my desk reading the Word and praying and I said, "Lord, open my eyes!" And then in a flash I saw it. I saw my oneness with Christ. I saw that I was in Him and that when He died, I died. I saw that the question of my death was a matter of the past and not of the future, and that I was just as truly dead as He was because I was in Him when He died. The whole thing had dawned upon me. I was carried away with such joy at this great discovery that I jumped from my chair and cried, "Praise the Lord, I am dead!" I ran downstairs and met one of the brothers helping in the kitchen and I laid hold of him. 'Brother', I said, 'do you know that I have died?' I must admit he looked puzzled. 'What do you mean?' he said, so I went on: 'Do you not know that Christ has died? Do you not know that I died with Him? Do you not know that my death is no less truly a fact than His?' Oh, it was so real to me! I longed to go through the streets of Shanghai shouting the news of my discovery. From that day to this I have never for one moment doubted the finality of that word: "I have been crucified with Christ". I do not mean to say that we need not work that out. Yes, there is an outworking of the death which we are going to see presently, but this, first of all, is the basis of it. I have been crucified: it has been done." Hallelujah!

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Sanctification: Our Appropriation Of Righteousness - 6:1-8:17

Living Like Who We Are - 6:11-23

In this section, Paul is explaining the aspect of our salvation that we call sanctification, the process of how God causes us to become progressively more and more holy in the way that we live. He began in the first half of chapter 6 by spelling out the nature of the great transformation that God works within each one of us when we believe in Jesus Christ. Now he's going to tell us how God wants us to actually use that understanding in a practical way to change the way we live. Last time we ended with verse 11; today we'll begin there (11). Here's a principle to remember: we always act out of or based on what we believe to be true. Let's take, for example, a girl who was told she was fat or teased about her weight a lot when she was young. She learned to believe that she was fat. So, today she is 30 or 40 years old and weighs 110 lbs. And what does she do? She starves herself continually. She diets perpetually, maybe even to the point of eating and throwing up. Every time she looks in a mirror, she thinks, "I'm fat!", even though everyone else tells her it's not true. She keeps on acting on what she believes. Now, the rest of us may confidently smirk at a person like that, thinking we would never be so foolish, but for all our supposed "knowledge", we all act on exactly the same principle. We all act out of what we believe to be true, whether it is or not. That's why Paul is telling us here that:

I. We Must Believe The Truth With Our Mind We must believe ourselves to be what God says we really are. We must consider or reckon or count ourselves as being the way we are in truth; if we don't, we'll never act that way. He says:

1. we must realize that:

a. we are dead with respect to sin which indwells our minds and bodies Sin does still live in us, but its chains of control over us have been cut; its forceful power over us is severed. We are dead to it! We do not have to respond at all when it tries to influence us. And further we must realize that:

b. we are alive because our brand-new nature is joined to Christ Sin doesn't live in our spirit or our nature.

Christ put in us a brand-new nature that is holy and pure like His, a nature that loves Him and wants to serve Him. The problem, of course, is that neither of these two things is visible. You can't do an MRI on your body and see that your old nature has died and been removed. Nor can you see the new nature that Christ birthed in you there. This transformation inside us is invisible, so just like all the other major truths we hold, we have to count them as being true because God says so! Our mind has to reason, to consider, to say, "God says this is true, therefore I believe this is true; THIS IS REALLY TRUE!" But it is not an academic kind of knowledge, some fact to be filed away collecting dust and cobwebs in the back of our minds:

2. we must stand firmly on these truths in the moment that sin tempts us When we feel the drawing power of sin pulling us toward something we know is wrong, in our minds we have to be ready and able to say, "No, I died to that with Christ! That's not who I am, I really am like Christ; I really don't WANT to that. So I WILL NOT do that!". The difference is that I'm not kicking myself and feeling guilty for that evil thought entering my mind. I'm not saying, "Oh what a wretch I am; what a sinful worm I must be. How could I even have such a thought!" So, I repent and confess over and over again and all the time I feel that I must be the worst sinner on the planet. If I believe what God says, that I really am a saint, a holy one, then I recognize that sin is still IN me, but IT IS NOT me. There is a foreign power, if you will, trying to take over control of me and I won't have it!

Can you see what a difference it makes to know who you are? After General Jonathan Wainwright was forced to surrender to the Japanese during World War II, he was held prisoner in a Manchurian concentration camp nearly 4 years. Cruelly treated, he became "a broken, crushed, hopeless, starving man." Finally, the Japanese surrendered and the war ended. A United States army colonel was sent to the camp to announce personally to the general that Japan had been defeated, that he was free and in command. After Wainwright heard the news, he returned to his quarters and was confronted by some guards who began to mistreat him as they had done in the past. Wainwright, however, with the news of the allied victory still fresh in his mind, declared with authority, "No, I am in command here! These are my orders." From that moment on, General Wainwright was in control. [Forever Triumphant, F. J. Huegel] Why? Because knowing what was really true about himself changed the way he acted and that's exactly what it does for us. That's what Paul goes on to show us in verses (12-14) He is saying that, now believing the truth with our minds:

II. We Must Choose With Our Will You see:

1. sin can only control us if we allow it to It has no power over us except the power we give it. Before we knew Jesus, sin used to reign as king in us and when a king says jump, you jump. Why? Because he has the power to make you do it. But wouldn't it be neat to be able to say to a wicked king, like old Nebuchadnezzar who commanded the people to bow down to his statue, "No, I won't bow and there's not a thing you can do to make me!" That's what we have to do to sin. It still exists in our mind and body and it will still try to give us orders, but it has no power to make us do them. Its demand is all hot air! So:

a. when sin tempts us to pursue its evil desires, we must refuse to hear; we must refuse to obey its orders. In our mind we have to say "No, I will not do that! How could I do that when Jesus saved me and made me brand new!". As an example, let's pretend you are Joseph and you find yourself alone in the house going about your duties. And here comes Potiphar's wife, dressed to seduce you. She talks to you and begs you to sleep with her; she grabs at your garment. Sin, living in you, sees the opportunity to gain control over you. It floods your mind with lustful thoughts, sets your hormones to raging, and begins to tempt you sorely. If that process goes on very long it will result in sinful actions. What can stop it? Truth! Joseph says, [My master] is not greater in this house than I am, nor has he kept back anything from me except yourself, because you are his wife. How then can I do this great wickedness and sin against God?" In steps Joseph's mind and says, "Wait a minute, I know this is wrong. It is evil, unjust to my master and it is rebellion against God, whom I love! I'm not going to listen to this. I don't want to do this and I WILL not do this. Legs, get going! RUN!" That's what Paul means when he says, Let not sin rule over you... In fact:

b. we must refuse to allow sin to use any part of us for unrighteousness That word present or offer means literally to hand over to, to place something at someone else's disposal, to place it beside them for their convenient use. For example, if I hand you my car keys, I place my car at your disposal to use as you wish. (Just don't wreck it; I love my SUV!) Paul says, "Don't give sin the keys! Don't let it use your body for its evil purposes! In fact, don't let it use any of your members, any part of you, your body, your thoughts, or your emotions. Refuse to place yourself at its disposal! Why not? Paul says in verse 14:

c. sin must no longer rule us since we now live by God's grace, not by keeping the law If it was up to us to keep God's commands perfectly in order to be accepted by Him, then sin would rule us. It would tempt us to break the commands and then fill us with guilt that we did and condemn us before God. But we are free from all of that; all of our sins have been forgiven once, for all, forever by the marvelous grace of our loving God. We live on a new plane; Christ has made us alive together with Himself and He lives in and through us. Why would we want to, why would we dare to, allow sin to rule over us and tell us what to do in even the smallest degree! Rather, going back to verse 13:

2. we must choose instead to offer ourselves to God We hand Him the keys to our life. We say, "Here, Lord, I am Yours!"

a. we do this because we know we have been brought from death to life We do it because we know that this is who we are and this is the right thing to do. And again, Paul uses the concept of our members, meaning:

b. we must invite Him to use all parts of us as His tools to work righteousness We come in our minds to God and say, "God, here is my body; here are my hands; here are my feet; here are my eyes; here are my thoughts...use them to glorify You! I choose to be Your tool, not sin's tool! Do your righteous will through me!" Paul comes back to the same concept later in Rom. 12:1, I appeal to you therefore, brothers, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies as a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God, which is your spiritual worship. We must commit our body to God and put it at His disposal. By the way, you know what the problem is with a living sacrifice, don't you? It keeps trying to crawl off the altar! I think Paul is implying that we must keep that offering, that presenting of ourselves new and fresh and reaffirm it daily in every situation where we are tempted. So, let's go back to Joseph in his moment of temptation and add in this step. As his hormones rise, he says in his mind, "Wait a minute, I know this is wrong. It is evil, unjust to my master and it is rebellion against God, whom I love! I'm not going to listen to this. I don't want to do this and I WILL not do this. GOD, HERE IS MY BODY; use it for Your glory. Take control of me. What should I do? Run, Lord? OK legs, do what God says! Get going! RUN!" I'm saying that we should take Paul literally, that when we're tempted, we should actually stop and pray and ask God's Spirit to take control of us so that we have His power, as we proceed to think and act under His control, not sin's.

So, to reiterate again, when sin tempts you there is a simple three step process. First, you count the facts of who you are as true. Second, you say "no" to sin mentally; you say, "I will NOT do this!" Then you pray; you give your body, your thoughts, and so on to God and ask Him to do with your body the thing that He wants to do. Then you do it. That's how you live like what you really are! Now Paul gives us another way of looking at this process in verses 15-23, but he transitions to it by raising the question in verse (15). Of course, the fact that we're completely forgiven and living under grace doesn't mean that we are free to live any way we want and sin whenever we feel like it! Rather, because of the grace God has extended to us:

III. We Choose To Become Slaves Of Righteousness (15-23) Now, slavery is not something we like to talk about; because of our cultural history we tend to view it as this evil thing, but slavery was such a common part of Paul's world. Many of the early believers were slaves who belonged to the households of wealthier masters and accepted that as their lot in life. So, Paul uses it as an analogy to help us understand the process of our sanctification (16-18). Paul says:

1. we are slaves to whichever force we ultimately end up obeying A slave has no real will of his own; his lot is to always carry out somebody else's will. So, when you carry out the will of somebody or something else, you are, in essence, a slave to that person or thing. Before we were saved:

a. we used to obey sin as its slaves Sin, the powerful force, dwelt in our very nature at the core of our being. We used to do its will routinely. It would compel us to do wrong and even if we were able to resist, so often we found we just couldn't. We were enslaved to its power, which, Paul says, led to death. Death is the end and the result of that kind of life. But when we came to Jesus:

b. we were set free from the power and control of sin Because our old self died and Christ put a brand-new nature in us, sin was knocked off its throne. Without the old nature, it couldn't control us as slaves any longer. With the new nature Christ gave us comes the freedom to choose other paths, so:

c. now we obey God's teaching from our hearts Because our hearts, our natures, were made like His, we WANT to do what He tells us! It's a good thing, one that we continually choose more and more. And so, Paul says:

d. we have become slaves to righteousness We're always going about doing the will of God, which is righteous, holy behavior. You have to understand, there is no middle ground. There is no "doing our OWN will" as a third option. We are either doing the will of sin or doing the will of God, which is righteousness. All things we do are either one or the other. So, every choice to obey sin or to obey God is, "Whose slave do you want to be?" Now, in verse (19) Paul admits that:

2. this is an imperfect analogy Like all analogies it fails at some point. But we use analogies since humans are frail and don't think so clearly. We need something concrete that we can see in order to understand truths about things that we can't see. Paul is only using it to make a point. The place at which the analogy of slavery breaks down is the idea of choice. In the Roman world a slave had no choice, no will of his own. But in Christ we do; we are now free to choose our master, to choose whose will we will obey. Paul simply wants us to understand that:

a. the way we obeyed sin led us ever deeper into impurity and lawlessness The more we did what sin wanted us to, the deeper we fell into doing things that were impure and unholy, the more we chose to act as if God's law didn't exist and didn't apply to us. But by contrast:

b. choosing to obey God leads us ever deeper into righteousness and holiness The more we say "Yes" to God and obey Him, situation by situation, the more righteous and holy our lives become, the more we live like Jesus and become what we really are! So, we should do it with the same vigor and intensity that we once served sin! And the other point at which the analogy breaks down is this. A slave was never rewarded for doing what he was born to do. He simply did what he was told without any expectation of pay or reward, except that his master kept him alive. But God is such a gracious Master that He rewards His slaves! Paul says:

3. there is a genuine reward for our slavery (20-23) We quote verse 23 all the time, but what it really means is that:

a. the poor wages of that shameful slavery to sin is death The word wages is a military term. The Roman soldier got some of his pay in currency, but part of it was given to him in his rations, the daily food that he got by on. Obeying sin doesn't pay any huge dividends; it pays scanty wages, subsistence pay, like that which a slave gets, and the sum of it all adds up to death, both physical and spiritual. To perpetually serve sin is a life of death; it is being dead while we yet live, doing things we're ashamed of, and then dying forever in eternity. But:

b. the fruit of serving God is holiness and His free gift is eternal life You see, God doesn't pay wages; He graciously gives to his servants who serve Him a marvelous gift which is two-fold. In this world God produces in us holiness of life and behavior on a daily basis, a life that is really living the way it was meant to be with nothing to ever be ashamed of, and its culmination is life forever, life that begins the moment we are saved and goes right on through death for all eternity. We can never die! So, our lifetime of serving Him, long or short, is worth it all!

Let me share with you two imperfect analogies of my own in closing. Did you know that in the world there are nearly 100 species of slave-making ants, living anywhere from the jungles of South America to the US and Europe? Slave-making ants can't really take care of themselves and do the work needed to sustain their colony, so they periodically swarm out of their nest to raid the colonies of other breeds of ants, kill off the defenders and then bring back cocoons full of larvae to their own nest. When these new little ants hatch, they assume that they are part of the "host" colony and launch into the tasks they were born to do. They spend their entire lives never realizing that they are actually forced-labor victims, living as slaves of an enemy. And that's how we are. From birth we enter the world and proceed through life as slaves to sin, never realizing that we are enslaved and doing the work of an enemy. But Jesus Himself became an ant like us and walked into our colony, not merely declaring the message of the truth that we are slaves, but actually dying in our place to set us free. So, now we know that we are free; we don't have to serve our former slave master anymore! Then, do you remember that in the Old Testament, there was a law that said when it came time for a servant to go out free from his service, that if he loved his master and wanted to keep on serving him, then his master shall bring him to God, and he shall bring him to the door or the doorpost. And his master shall bore his ear through with an awl, and he shall be his slave forever. - Ex. 21:6? A free man could choose to become a voluntary slave for life, if he really loved his master. That's what Paul is urging us to do. Now that we are free, now that our debt and obligation has been paid in full by Jesus, let us bring ourselves to God who freed us from our sins and let Him mark us permanently as His servants who are committed to carrying out His will forever. That is how we live like who we really are!

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Sanctification: Our Appropriation Of Righteousness - 6:1-8:17

The Role Of The Law - 7:1-13

Paul has been teaching us about sanctification, the process by which God produces holy lives in us, since the beginning of chapter 6. He began by explaining to us exactly who we are, those who have died with Christ and risen with Him to a brand-new life. Then, he showed us the process of how to live like what we are by grasping who we are, refusing to give control of ourselves to sin and offering ourselves to God in every situation we face. But there's another issue we have to face here. In 7:1, Paul says, I am speaking to those who know the law... Of course, that would include Jewish people who became believers, like Paul himself, but though there were some, I doubt there were tons of those at Rome. What we often forget is that the only Scripture that the early believers had was the Old Testament. The teaching of Jesus was passed on orally and the apostles were slowly writing letters like this one, however, growing in their knowledge of God's Word meant getting to know the Hebrew Scriptures. These were filled with statutes and laws which God commanded Israel to keep in order to be accepted by Him and the question, "Which of these must we obey as followers of Christ?" was something the early church wrestled with for many years. In fact, we still struggle to answer it today. But it leads us to the deeper issue of the principle of law-keeping itself, or what we would call obedience. What role does obeying what God tells us play in our acceptance with Him? Well, in the first six verses Paul explains:

I. Our Relationship To The Law As Believers (1-6) Let's read (1-3). Here's another one of those analogies that Paul uses to help us understand. He says:

1. the law was like a husband, whom we were bound to obey This is not a sermon on marriage and we don't have time to discuss the dynamics of headship right now and that's not the point. For purposes of the analogy, before we came to Jesus, we were bound to obey the law, to do what it said, because God said it, just like Peter says that Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord. That was our obligation, to obey, to do what we were told. But, Paul says:

2. death permanently severed our relationship to our old husband, the law The analogy is that:

a. the law binds husband and wife to one another until death We say it in our wedding vows, until death us do part... A husband who leaves his wife to live with another woman while she is still alive or a wife who leaves her husband to live with another man while he is still alive is committing adultery, breaking the command of God. But:

b. death releases a married person to belong to a new spouse When death of a spouse has occurred, the relationship has ended, so that the survivor is free to marry another person. A widow or widower who remarries is not committing adultery against their original spouse because death has broken that bond of law between them. The person remains, but the relationship of wife or husband has been severed by death. I have two retired missionary friends, Matt and Mary Lou Bristol. previously Matt was married to Betty, whom he loved and we loved, but Betty died of cancer and death severed that relationship to the law of marriage. He is no longer married to Betty because she's dead and with the Lord. That relationship is ended. That's why Matt was free to marry a new spouse, Mary Lou, and devote his life to her. So, Paul's analogy is that that's what happened to us. We were married to the law, bound to obey it, but a death occurred which severed that relationship. Only it was not our husband, the Law, that died; it was US!

3. we died to the law because we were in Christ when He died (4) As we learned in chapter 6, when we believed, God placed us in Christ; He joined our life to His so completely that what happened to Him happened to us. Therefore, when He died, we died and:

a. our death released us to be united to a new husband, Christ Any relationship, any obligation that we had to the law was broken, cut off, severed completely. We are no longer bound to obey the Law and no longer stand condemned by the Law. That whole matter of us breaking God's law was nailed to the cross once and for all when we died with Him. However, because we also rose with Christ to a new life, we have a new husband, Christ Himself! When a man and a woman are joined in marriage, they become one flesh; when we are joined to the Lord, we literally become one spirit with Him. We join our spirit with the Spirit of God. We are made one with our new husband, Christ! We are no longer bound to the law; we are now bound to Christ Himself and:

b. our union with Him is designed to bear Him fruit in our lives Malachi says that God makes a husband and wife one because He desires godly offspring. That union is designed to produce fruit and our union with Christ is for the purpose of producing fruit also. And that fruit is a life of holiness and purity and good works that pleases God, the very life that the law was pointing toward by trying to get us to mechanically obey commands!

So, we're dead to our old husband, the Law, with his telling us what we HAVE to do and condemning us when we don't and we're married to a new husband, Christ, doing the very things God approves of because we WANT to! Can you see the difference? Paul goes on to explain it more thoroughly. He says that:

4. before salvation we were living in the flesh (5) Let's think about that phrase living in the flesh for a second. The NIV uses the term sinful nature and that's really a poor choice of translation that its translators chose consistently throughout the New Testament. The Greek literally says flesh and here's what it means:

a. flesh is our mind and body indwelt by sin and the patterns of thought and behavior we developed because of its control Remember, sin is that force of evil we're born with, that lives in us, even after our spirit is made new in Christ. Because of sin's powerful control in our lives, it developed in us patterns of thinking and acting that were wrong and we lived in those patterns. Those patterns are what Paul means by our flesh. I received Christ when I was 15, but long before that sin had developed evil patterns in me. I'm like Paul; I coveted. I wanted things I didn't have that belonged to others and so I stole things on several occasions, things that I wanted for myself. I lied, not only about the stealing but about other things to keep myself from being in trouble. I learned to think lustfully about girls. Nobody taught me any of those things. I didn't get them from other kids. I lived and thought and acted in the patterns that I did because sin was in me! And, Paul says:

b. sin used the law to arouse sinful passions inside us St. Augustine, the early theologian who lived around 400 AD, wrote this in his Confessions: "There was a pear tree near our vineyard, laden with fruit. One stormy night we rascally youths set out to rob it. We took off a huge load of pears--not to feast upon ourselves, but to throw them to the pigs, though we ate just enough to have the pleasure of the forbidden fruit. They were nice pears, but it was not the pears that my wretched soul coveted, for I had plenty better at home. I picked them simply to become a thief. The desire to steal was awakened simply by the prohibition of stealing." It was the same for me. I knew it was wrong to steal, but the more I saw the things I wanted, the greater the desire I had to take them. I knew it was wrong to think about girls like that, but the more I knew I shouldn't do it, the more I wanted to do think wrongly and to do wrongly if I had the opportunity. Sin uses God's prohibitions which are meant for our safety and our good, and causes us to desire to break them. And that's how I lived, even though I was what you would have called "one of the good kids"! Now, according to verse 5:

c. following these passions bore fruit unto death Not only would sin have killed me for all eternity if I had died physically, but it gave me a life that was a "living death". I was dead while I still lived because I lived for pleasure. If God had left me continue down the path I was on, I might be in jail today instead of behind a pulpit, who knows! And there would have been a trail of hurt and wrong and evil left behind me, the way there is for all who live apart from Christ. However, Paul says:

4. now we have died to the law and are free from serving it (6) Not only have we died to sin and its power of control over us, but through that same death, we have died to the law:

a. the obligation to obey the law no longer holds us captive We are accepted by God, received by God freely on the basis of grace, apart from anything we do. And so:

b. we serve God in a whole new way, through the inner desire of the Spirit, not by outwardly obeying a written code We end up doing the very things God wants us to do. We end up, not merely not stealing, but giving to those who are in need. We end up, not just not lying, but always committed to telling the truth. We end up, not simply not lusting, but treasuring and valuing the opposite sex. Why? Not because we're obeying some code imposed upon us against our will, but because Jesus has changed our very natures and we WANT to live godly lives. It's who we are! Are you following? Now Paul goes on to further explain:

II. Our Problem With The Law As Believers in (7-11) and the first thing he has to point out is that:

1. there is nothing inherently wrong with the law (7-8) The law is God's creation; it is holy and good, just like He is. It is righteous and just and fair. Those characteristics of it have not changed. In fact:

a. God uses the law to reveal to us what sin is He gave it to clarify the nature of sin. We would not definitely know that coveting is wrong if we didn't have God's own word on it. We wouldn't know that stealing or lying or adultery are wrong. Our conscience might bother us while doing wrong things, but we would have no authoritative word to know it. The law made sin definite and clear and it gave to sin the character of transgression, that is, choosing to do what God has said NOT to do. So, there's nothing wrong with the law; as we saw a moment ago:

b. sin, still dwelling in us, uses the law to arouse evil desires Sin sees an opportunity to regain control in me and so it grabs the law and uses it as a base of operations against me. It tries to make me want to do the very things which the Law forbids. Sin uses God's righteous law to intensify its own evil desires like forbidden fruit to tempt me all the more strongly. It's just like when you tell a small child, "You can't have any candy until after supper." The child may not have even wanted any candy, but now that you brought it up and prohibited it, the want is there and the more you insist on prohibiting it, the stronger it grows. That's how sin works in all of us, even after we come to Christ; without the prohibition, sin lies dead, dormant, waiting for opportunity. So:

2. the problem occurs when believers try to live by keeping the law (9-11) Please note that alive is a verb not an adjective. Paul says, I was once living apart from law... When was that? Certainly, he does not mean before he came to Christ because he was constantly taught the law from little on up and always strove to keep it. He testifies that as far as legalistic righteousness goes, he was blameless. So, in my opinion, he is referring to the time after he was first converted to Christ, when he finally understood that it is by trusting Jesus and not by law-keeping that he was righteous before God. He started to live this new way, not by keeping rules, but by following the new desire of his heart to live God's way. Just so, when we first come to Christ, we are thrilled that we are no longer in bondage to trying to please God by keeping rules. But then:

a. sin tries to re-exert control over us by using the law The commandment comes to us in a new and fresh way. Because of the presence of the Holy Spirit in us, we now understand the spirit of the commandment. Now we see what Jesus explained, that not killing is not merely the act itself, but having bad feelings in the heart is the same thing. Not committing adultery in the body may be simple, but God's intent was for the thoughts of our mind to be pure. So, all these things that once seemed fairly easy to do now become virtually impossible once we truly understand them. It finally dawns on us what God really expects, perfection! The commandments come to us in a whole new way! So:

b. sin deceives us into thinking we must obey the commandment, that even though salvation may be given freely by grace, that the Christian life is the keeping of a set of rules for God. I remember being like that! I remember preaching like that! "You must do this; you must do that! Try harder; do more! Live the Christian life in your own strength; it's all up to you!" And when we strive to live that way, thinking that God being pleased with us depends on how well we perform:

c. we feel condemned and under the sentence of death, though we are not Paul says, I died! How? Certainly not in the body. And not in the spirit either, because our dying with Christ is already accomplished. So how then? In his conscience! He ended up feeling as he expressed himself in verse 24! Here's what sin does: I want so badly to keep the law and I try and try and I can't keep it and every time I fail, I feel so guilty before God, condemned because I can't please Him. I become more and more conscious of how rotten I am and I try harder and harder and I live in misery! That's what sin wants to use the law to create in me; it wants me to become so frustrated with trying that I give up and quit and go ahead and sin. It wants me to think, "What's the use anyway? I'm no better than I was!"

When I was in seminary we lived in rural southwest Ohio. Our next door neighbor was the epitome of what you'd call a "redneck". Jerry was the son of a Pentecostal preacher. He knew all the do's and don'ts, but he had a real temper and was always drinking and fighting. His wife and two small kids suffered for it. He resisted coming to Jesus because he was convinced he couldn't live the Christian life. But he liked me and we got to be friends and one day Jerry invited Jesus into his life. For a time, he seemed to be genuinely different. All of us were rejoicing. But Jerry worked in a steel plant and the guys were really on his back now about becoming a "holy-roller". He courageously resisted and held his temper in check, but one day he was in the bathroom and some supervisor must have really lit into him. And he couldn't help himself; he grabbed that guy by the neck, stuck his face in a urinal and kept on flushing it until the man pulled away and fled in terror. Well, that was the beginning of the end for Jerry. He was crushed. It convinced him that his own fear was true, that he couldn't live the Christian life even as others could. It was not for him. He gradually went back to his old ways. Was he truly converted or not? I don't know; we moved away and he died young. But that frustration over trying to live a holy life in my own strength is real and it is something that every one of us experiences as we'll see next time. But:

III. This Process Reveals To Us How Truly Awful Sin Really Is (12-13) Sin is a dreadful thing, a terrible, horrible, evil force that would take God's holy, pure commands and pervert them to produce death in me instead of life. I don't have sufficient words to describe how appalling sin really is and I sure can't wait for the day that God will take it out of me forever when I'm with Him!

But don't miss the point of what Paul is teaching in this section: we are dead with respect to the Law. We are not serving God on the basis of trying in our own strength to better ourselves and be more like Him. If you try to live the Christian life that way, you will fail and maybe quit. We are to be serving God in the power of the Holy Spirit, not by keeping a list of rules God gave us. Fred Brown was a Tennessee evangelist all his life; he died in 1992. In one of his sermons, he used three images to describe the purpose of the law. First, he said it was like a dentist's little mirror, which he sticks into the patient's mouth. With the mirror he can detect any cavities. But he doesn't drill with the mirror or use it to pull teeth. It can show him the decayed area or other abnormality, but it can't provide the solution. Then, he said that the law is also like a flashlight. If suddenly at night the lights go out, you use it to guide you down the darkened basement stairs to the electrical box. When you point it toward the fuses, it helps you see the one that is burned out. But after you've removed the bad fuse, you don't try to insert the flashlight in its place. You put a new fuse in place to restore the electricity. And finally, he said the law is like a plumb line. When a builder wants to check his work, he uses a weighted string to see if it's true to the vertical. But if he finds that he has made a mistake, he doesn't use the plumb line to correct it. He gets out his hammer and saw. The law is holy and good and God uses it to reveal the presence of sin, but don't try to use it to fix the problem. That only creates a bigger one.

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Sanctification: Our Appropriation Of Righteousness - 6:1-8:17

The War Within Us - 7:13-25

I know these last messages have been difficult to understand. So, before we go to Romans, I want you to look with me for a moment at 2 Pet. 3:15-16. My point is that Peter didn't understand Paul either! At least, he admitted that some of the things God gave Paul were hard to understand! So, why do we study them if they're confusing? Because, as Peter acknowledged, they are part of the Scriptures and to twist and misuse them leads to destruction! So, be patient as we wade through together, OK? Back to Romans.

Romans 7 is describing the "monkey wrench" that shows up as we try to live the Christian life. In chapter 6 we learned that God wants us to understand that we are dead to sin, even though it still lives in us, that we are no longer under its power and that we have a new nature that desires to serve God. He instructs us to count those things as being true and then act on them by refusing to yield control of ourselves to sin and offering ourselves to God instead. That's how we're to live the Christian life, however, two things get in the way of us doing that. Sin does not give up easily; it keeps trying to reestablish control over us. The first thing it uses is the law which we learned about last week in verses 1-13. Sin tries to get us frustrated through trying to keep the law, even though we are free from it. Then, hand in hand with trying to keep the law, is the second thing which we'll study today in verses 13-25: dependence on self. If sin can get us wrapped up in trying to please God out of our own strength, we will end up living a defeated, miserable Christian life and sin will regain much of its control over us. Now, it is very important to keep in mind that this section was written by Paul who has now learned the secret of living the Christian life, but is looking backward in these verses on the previous struggle he had experienced in his life when he was a new believer. This struggle is something that each of us experiences, however, what Paul describes as his experience here is not meant to be seen as a normal or expected part of the ongoing life of the believer. In fact, in chapter 8 he goes on to tell us how we can live free from this struggle! Here Paul is now graphically spelling out what he meant in verse 11 when he said, sin killed me. These verses show how sin completely demoralized and defeated him at that time. So, let's pick up our study in verses (13-14). Again, it is extremely important to recognize that:

I. The Enemy Is Sin Dwelling In Us Paul says that sin used the law to produce death in him. Sin is a spiritual force, the evil power that lives IN me, but it is NOT me. Perhaps a good analogy would be to say that sin is like having a cancerous tumor. The cancer is IN me, but it's NOT me. It's a powerful alien force that began in one of my cells that is multiplying and growing and trying to take over control of my body, seeking to use all my bodily resources for its own growth and, in the end, trying to kill me! So typically, if I discover cancer is in my body, I devote every resource I can find to try to kill it and rid my body of it! That's a good picture of what sin is like in us. When we come to Christ, we experience a new birth; our spirit is made brand new in the image of Jesus. But sin still lives in us as a powerful alien force that continually tries to get us to voluntarily yield control of our body to it, so it can take over and rule our lives. And one of the ways that it tries to do that is to get us to think that IT IS US, that IT is who we are, that we are poor sinners who can never stop sinning, rather than saints of God destined to live a holy life. Verse 14 describes Paul's spiritual state at that time in his life. He says, the law is spiritual, that is, it can only be kept by the power of the Holy Spirit who indwells our spirit. But in contrast to that, he says, I am fleshly (the NIV says unspiritual, but the Greek is literally "fleshy"). Fleshly or carnal is Paul's word for the believer who is immature and is depending on himself rather than on the Holy Spirit. Look with me at 1 Cor. 3:1-4. Paul chides the believers at Corinth because they were fleshly; they were acting as mere human beings in their own strength, separating from each other into selfish factions. What fleshly really means is that my mind and body are frequently dominated by sin. Sin tries to keep us living fleshly, to let it control our thinking and our acting. So then, according to verse 13, sin uses the law, it uses our new consciousness of what God expects of us, to point out to us our inability to keep God's standards and to bring us to a place of defeat and frustration so deep that we stop trying and give it control. You know, I'm sure, people that have had multiple rounds of chemotherapy. They fight the cancer once and it appears to be dead but then it comes back stronger and they fight it all over again, a second and then a third time. Cancer attacks again and again until it wears them down and they are too tired to continue. That's what sin does in us; it assaults us over and over again, and Satan is just hoping that we'll get tired and give up and let it and him have control! Well, good analogy or not, that's the process Paul describes as happening to himself in the verses that follow. Look at:

II. Paul's Explanation Of the Battle I Face and notice that he talks in the first person to make sure that we all apply it personally (15). He says, here's:

1. what I find in my experience

a. I am unable to do what I truly want to do I have the right desires. I have a new nature and I genuinely want to please and obey God, but in situation after situation I can't bring myself to actually do it. I want to do right all the time, but I can't; I don't have the power to make it happen. I fail time after time. In fact:

b. I do the very things I hate I find myself doing things I don't have any desire to do at all, things that I actually hate. Haven't you found this at some time in your life? Have you ever caught yourself using language that you really hate hearing? Have you ever reacted in anger and done something rash or maybe even struck someone physically in a way you never wanted to do and you're sick about it afterwards? Why do I do things like that? It's confusing. Paul says:

c. I don't understand this about myself Here I am, a believer with a new heart. I genuinely want to obey God, but time after time I can't and I don't. I do things that are totally the opposite of what I want, things I detest in other people. How can that possibly be? Well, it's happening because:

2. two opposing forces are clashing inside me I'd like you to turn with me to Gal. 5:17 because there we have this conflict succinctly described in one verse. The first force that is at work in me is:

a. my spirit, that is, the new nature that Jesus created in me and joined to His Holy Spirit. My spirit is who I really am, the real me, my true nature, and it is made in the image of Jesus Himself. It is holy and pure and continually desires only to do good. But then in me there is also:

b. my flesh, the evil desires that are produced through sin dwelling in my mind and body. The works of the flesh are listed down further in Gal. 5:19-21: sexual immorality, impurity, depravity, idolatry, sorcery, hostilities, strife, jealousy, outbursts of anger, selfish rivalries, dissensions, factions, envying, murder, drunkenness, carousing, and similar things. Sin continually creates in me the desire to do evil things such as these. Sin is a powerful force in me and:

c. these two forces continually oppose one another The New English Translation (NET) says, the flesh has desires that are opposed to the Spirit, and the Spirit has desires that are opposed to the flesh, for these are in opposition to each other... They oppose each other and they are adversaries of one another. Both are strong forces and they clash with each other; they war with each other inside me. That's why I end up not doing what I want, because:

d. sin struggles fiercely to keep me from doing what I (and God) want When my spirit wants to do something good and right, my flesh, controlled by sin, pushes powerfully to get me to obey it and do its will instead. This is the struggle that I experience inside myself.

Does anybody know what I'm talking about? Do you experience this? Good! Listen to what John Piper has to say about it: A Christian is not a person who experiences no bad desires. A Christian is a person who is at war with those desires by the power of the Spirit. Conflict in your soul is not all bad. Even though we long for the day when our flesh will be utterly defunct and only pure and loving desires will fill our hearts, yet there is something worse than the war within between flesh and Spirit—namely, no war within, because the flesh controls the citadel and all the outposts. Praise God for the war within! Serenity in sin is death. The Spirit has landed to do battle with the flesh. So, take heart if your soul feels like a battlefield at times. The sign of whether you are indwelt by the Spirit is not that you have no bad desires, but that you are at war with them! [www.desiringgod.org/sermons/the-war-within-flesh-vs-spirit] Did you hear that? Yes, it's confusing that there's a war inside us after we're saved, but the fact that we're fighting a war is the very proof that we're spiritually alive with Christ! So now, let's go back to Romans 7 where Paul spells out what He said in Galatians in more detail. Here's:

3. what I must understand First of all:

a. the real me (that is, my new nature) agrees with the law about what is good (16) I know what God commands is good and right and I want to obey it. It's not that the requirements are too hard. And the fact that I WANT to do it in the first place is the real evidence that I am truly born again. People without Christ WANT to sin, even though they may try hard to keep themselves from it for various reasons. I am new inside; I WANT to do good and live holy. Therefore:

b. when I do what I don't want, it is really sin controlling me (17) It's not ME, per se. I've simply given control to sin and let sin take over control of me to do what it wants. I've yielded to it and sin is carrying out its desires through me. Sin is using me! I am letting sin use my body to do what IT wants instead of what I want. Now, make no mistake, that doesn't make me any less responsible for the actions. A man was filling out an accident report for his insurance company because he had carelessly dented the fender of a parked car. One question on the form was, "What could the operator of the other vehicle have done to avoid the accident?" So, trying to lay the blame on the owner of the other vehicle, the man wrote, "He could have parked somewhere else!" We always like to shift the blame, but that's not what Paul means. I can't justify myself by saying, "Sin made me do it" or "the devil made me do it". I am dead to sin's control; I don't have to yield to it, yet I do sometimes. I am responsible for yielding, yet I realize that when I am doing evil, it is really not me, but sin doing it through me because I yielded to it. Do you understand what I mean? Now here's the bad news:

c. I have no innate ability to carry out the desires of my new nature (18) Yes, something good DOES dwell in me. My nature is good. But nothing good dwells in my flesh. I have the desire to do good, but not the power in and of myself. It's not in me. It's not in me to save myself. It's not in me to keep myself. And it's not in me to live the life God intends for me to live. I can't do it! That's why:

d. this is a continuing problem for me (19) I keep on struggling. I keep on failing over and over. I think that I get past it and it happens again. But Paul repeats it one more time:

e. I must remember that it is not really me doing it, but sin (20) I am a new creation in Christ Jesus. It is not me that wants to sin, but there is this enemy force called sin in my very body that is trying to make me do evil! I must never give up and think that this is just how I am, that I am sinful to the core and will never be able to do any better than this. Rather, I must agree with:

III. Paul's Conclusion: I Am At War (21-23) This is not just an incidental, occasional thing. There is a principle at work here, a law that is constantly functioning. In fact, there are two laws at war inside me, clashing like two titans engaged in an epic battle. The first law is that:

1. my new nature delights in obeying God I do delight in my very inner being in the law, in pleasing God, doing what God wants me to do. So, my mind is ruled by my new nature yet there is another law raging in me:

2. sin wages war against me to control me Sin is trying to control the members of my body by stirring up evil desires in my body and mind and it's a terrible fight! And what's worse yet, I am losing! Sin wins all the time! In incident after incident sin wins and I do what it wants rather than what I want. Now what does any intelligent person do when they're in a fight and they're losing badly and they're about to get creamed? They yell for help! Right? And that's exactly what Paul does in verse (24). He realizes:

3. I need help from another to win this war "I feel wretched, literally, I feel exhausted and worn out by labor. This struggle has tired me out and I don't know if I can keep fighting it any longer. Somebody help me! Deliver me!" At some point in Paul's life, he became so tired of trying to fight this struggle on his own and came to his senses and cried out for a deliverer, for someone else to help him in this struggle. And that, dear ones, is actually the real problem in this struggle. Look how many times the word "I" appears in this saga. Over and over, he says, "I", "I". He's fighting alone; he's taking on this powerful enemy called sin in his own strength and he can't do it. The Indians are burning down the fort and he needs the cavalry to show up! He needs someone to come to his rescue, some force that is stronger than he is to step in and do for him what he cannot do. So, finally in verse 25 he announces the glorious truth that he discovered at long last:

4. I have help from another; I have help from Jesus Christ Himself (25a) He bursts out in thanksgiving for what he knows now. God has provided a live-in power source through Jesus Christ and that power, we'll find in chapter 8, is the Holy Spirit whom He has placed in us to live out the life of Christ through us! Instead of me battling against sin, when I feel the struggle, I simply cry out to the Spirit of God and ask Him to take control of my mind and body and to empower me to do His will. And He does it! I learn to walk in the power of the Holy Spirit and that's what gives me victory in the battle! It doesn't make the battle go away; but it makes victory available to me every moment of every day. I don't have to lose; I can win because Jesus will take over and do it for me! Oh, that's a hard lesson to learn, isn't it?

In 1964, Alan Redpath, well known former pastor of Moody Church in Chicago, had become pastor of Charlotte Baptist Church in Edinburgh Scotland and was going great guns in the ministry, packing out the church, expanding meetings to other venues Saturday nights and Sunday nights. And in the midst of all of this seeming success, Alan suffered a near-fatal stroke which put him in a nursing home. In the ensuing months as he slowly recovered, he sank into the depths of despair. He wrote later that it was as if the devil had bombarded his soul with terribly wicked thoughts, the likes of which he'd not known in 20 years. He wrote, "Sinful thoughts, impurity, bad language were all the shattering experiences of those days." At one point, he prayed, "O Lord, deliver me from this attack of the devil. Take me right home!" It was then that he felt the Lord was saying to him, "You have this all wrong. The devil has nothing to do with it. It is I, your Savior, who has brought this experience into your life to show you two things. First, this is the kind of person--with all your sinful thoughts and temptations, which you thought were things of the past--that you always will be, but for My grace. I have never intended to make you a better man. In the second place, I want to replace you with Myself, if you will only allow Me to be God in you and admit that you are a complete failure, and that the only good thing about Alan Redpath is Jesus." [Our Daily Bread - 9/8/1984] Dear ones, God lets this war go on inside us because He wants every one of us to come to a Gethsemane, to a watershed moment that changes our life, a moment when we realize that only Jesus can live the Christian life and that the only good thing about us is Jesus. All this is designed so that we simply learn to cry out to Him, "Lord, live through me!"

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Sanctification: Our Appropriation Of Righteousness - 6:1-8:13

The Role Of The Holy Spirit- 8:1-13

We left the second half of Chapter 7 last week with a clear picture of the awful war that goes on inside us between our spirit, which is joined to the Holy Spirit, and our flesh, which is indwelt and controlled by sin. The struggle was so intense at one point in Paul's life that it caused him to cry out for a rescuer in verse 24, Who will deliver me from this? But then in verse 25 he declares that Jesus Christ IS our deliverer, and as we enter Chapter 8, he shows us how Jesus delivers us. Here we come to the real secret of how to live the Christian life; we learn to live by the power of the Holy Spirit. In the first nine verses Paul describes for us just how the power of the Spirit is provided and applied in our life. Look with me at verses (1-2).

I. Christ Has Removed All Condemnation From Us And Given Us His Spirit Let me say that again. There is not one iota of condemnation left for us who are in Christ. Not one! Sin, which dwells in us, tries to deceive us into feeling condemned because we fail to keep God's law. But those thoughts of condemnation are pure lies. There is NO condemnation for us, not even one little bit; it was removed at the cross. Our standing before God is not based on our performance but rather on our position. We are IN Christ Jesus and you cannot be in Him and have condemnation! In 1857, Abraham Solomon created a now-famous painting entitled, "Waiting for the Verdict." You can google it on the internet. In great detail it depicts a family of that era in a small room waiting just outside the open door of a courtroom where a young man is on trial. A set of older parents sit with a look of intense pain etched on their faces. A forlorn looking younger woman, evidently the wife, tries to manage two small children with their help, while the young man's sister, frightened and tearful, stands peering through the half-opened door into the courtroom where her brother is on trial. As you look at that painting, you can almost feel the tension as they await the verdict. That's the tension that sin tries to produce in us as believers. It points to our failures, to the times when we do the very things we hate, and fills us with the tension of waiting and wondering as to how God is going to regard us for this offense and that offense. Its goal is to keep us in that state of waiting and wondering whether we'll be accepted by God or not. Well, later that year, Solomon created a second painting entitled "Not Guilty (The Acquittal)". In this work he shows the same family with the young man now in the room holding his wife and children in his arms, with the judge reassuring the father and a look of joy and relief on everyone's face. They are no longer waiting for the verdict; they are feeling the relief of knowing that there is no longer any condemnation for their loved one. And that sense of peace and relief is what Paul is hoping we'll grasp from this wonderful affirmation. We are no longer waiting for a verdict; the verdict is in! We are released, freed, pardoned. Our Judge is now the One who reassures us that we have nothing to fear, that there is now NO condemnation for us! Why? Because, according to verse 2:

1. the Holy Spirit freed us from the law of sin leading to death To put it in common parlance, there's a new sheriff in town, people! There's a new law, a new principle at work in us! Jesus put His Holy Spirit in us and His Spirit became our very life. We get life through His Spirit and that sets us free from the old principle that the one who sins must die! You see:

a. the law was too weak to break sin's controlling power in us (3) Simply telling us the right thing to do was not enough. The power of sin was so strong in us that we did what we knew was wrong to do anyway. The force of sin pressuring us to do what it wanted was too strong; it was undeterred by simply trying to prohibit those actions. It's like the local school putting up signs that say, "Drug Free Zone". I rather doubt it; forbidding it doesn't make it so! The sign or the law saying, "Thou Shalt Not" has no power to make the person "Not"! It's too weak, but, Paul says:

b. God did what the law could not by sending His Son into the world to rescue us from that condemnation. He says that:

(1) Christ came in a body of flesh like ours, though without sin That made Him truly one of us; it joined Him to us so that He could take our place and bear our punishment. And then:

(2) God gave Him as a sin offering for the guilt of our sins He became the perfect sinless sacrifice offered in place of the guilty. He Himself bore our sins in His own body on the tree and died for our sins, once for all, that He might bring us to God. But in that process, not only were we completely released from all condemnation forever, but another very important thing happened:

(3) God carried out the sentence of death on the force of sin in our bodies at the cross It is not US who stands condemned now; it is the SIN which lives in us which is condemned. Did you hear that? The sentence of death has been passed upon sin which dwells in us. Its power has already been broken because it can't touch and control our spirit any more. It can't rule our hearts and do what it wants with us. It is dying and on the way out and one day when we're at the feet of Jesus, it will be removed altogether! One day sin will be no more! So now:

c. the righteousness of the law is fulfilled in us by the Holy Spirit (4) Paul says that we believers:

(1) we do not walk according to (that means under the power of) the flesh. We don't live our lives letting the power of sin in our flesh control our thoughts and actions. We refuse to do that. Rather:

(2) we walk according to (and that means empowered by) the Holy Spirit We live out of a new source of power that God has placed within us. We ask the Holy Spirit to use His mighty power to do through us all that God wants us to do and by that power we DO it! We do the very things God said to do because the Spirit in us gives us the power to do them! Last week I used the analogy that sin is like cancer, an alien force living inside me that is NOT me, trying to take control over me and kill me. Now let me use another analogy. We are like Iron Man, if you've seen one of his superhero films. Iron man himself has no superpowers of his own. He's just an ordinary mortal, Tony Stark, who can be beat up or killed as easily as any other man. But he has this suit of armor that contains an almost unlimited power source and when he puts on that suit, he can fly, he can withstand explosions and impacts, he can send out repulsor rays to destroy his enemies, he can do almost anything and defeat anyone. Only it's not him doing it; it's the suit, with its inexhaustible power source, that he wears! Well, that's us! Only instead of a suit of powered armor on the outside of us, we have a source of limitless, infinite power on the inside, the very Spirit of Almighty God Himself, and His power will live our life, the very life God intended, for us!

But the Holy Spirit has done more for us than simply providing us power. Paul says:

2. the Holy Spirit took us completely out of the realm of the flesh (5-8) Now remember, the flesh is the set of desires, thoughts and actions that sin produces in us by controlling us. Paul says there are two kinds of people in the world, people who live in the realm of the flesh (that is, nonbelievers) and people who live in the realm of the Spirit (believers). Paul says:

a. those whose existence is in the flesh think about things of the flesh. They think about how to get their own wants and desires met. They have minds hostile to God; they think thoughts that are not only contrary to His, but that are against Him. They cannot submit to His law, cannot please Him and are on a path that leads to death. But:

b. those whose existence is in the Spirit think about things of the Spirit which lead to life and peace Spiritual people, people who have the Holy Spirit, think about the things of God. In fact, they think the very thoughts of God because the Spirit knows those thoughts and puts them in their minds. The path they are on is a path that is life and they live it in peace because through the Spirit they please God continually. There are only two ways to live and people are either living in the realm of the flesh or in the realm of the Spirit. But look what Paul says (9):

c. we are no longer in the flesh but in the Spirit since He dwells in us Every person who truly and genuinely believes in Jesus has the Holy Spirit. Without exception! You can't be a Christian and NOT have the Holy Spirit, unless it is only a term or a name to you. If you actually belong to Christ, you have the Spirit and since you have the Spirit, you live in an entirely new realm, an entirely new way, the realm of the Spirit, not of the flesh!

For 16 years, John Joseph Kovacs was a "tenant of the tunnel." Along with a few other squatters who sometimes called themselves "the mole people," John lived underground in an abandoned railroad tunnel in New York City. When Amtrak bought the tunnel and prepared to reopen it in 1991, John was forced to look for a place to live above ground. According to The New York Times, Mr. Kovacs became the first person chosen for a new program designed to "transform the homeless into homesteaders." After spending a third of his life in a railroad tunnel, he left his underground existence to become an organic farmer in upstate New York. He was quoted as saying, "The air will be better up there. I'm not going to miss anything. I'm not coming back." Can you imagine the change in his life? To go from living in a realm of darkness and cold and concrete, to living in a realm of fresh air and warmth and light. That's a graphic picture of what happened to us. Col. 1:13, For [God] has rescued us from the dominion of darkness and translated us into the kingdom of His dear Son! We now live in a whole new realm, the Kingdom of His dear Son, who through His Spirit has produced in us life and light and peace! We don't live in the flesh anymore because, Paul says:

II. The Holy Spirit Now Lives Through Us (10-11) Listen:

1. our bodies are "dead" (that is, they are dying and bound for death) because of sin Sin still lives in our bodies and is joined to them and the only thing that will release us from that is death. So, we're stuck in dying bodies, but:

2. the Holy Spirit is now our life through joining Himself with our new spirit Since He has come into us and become one with our spirit, He is the life force flowing through us. He is the power which causes us to live and the power by which we must live. And the point is in verse 11:

3. this new life in our dying bodies is as certain as Jesus' resurrection He's not talking about the future resurrection of our bodies one day. That subject is not even in view in this passage. J.B. Phillips translates it like this: Nevertheless, once the Spirit of him who raised Jesus from the dead lives within you, he will, by that same Spirit, bring to your whole being new strength and vitality. The life of the Spirit of God who lives in you will flow through you and bring a new power, a new strength, a new kind of life to you, even though you still live in a dying body still indwelt by sin.

That same power that raised Jesus from the dead and seated Him at God's right hand is IN us and is available to us to live life through us. That fact is as sure as the fact that God raised Jesus; we can count on it! But there is one catch: our will. God will not violate our will. He will not make us into puppets who have no control over what He does with us. We must choose to allow His Spirit to have control of us. As Paul put it very simply in Eph. 5:18, ...BE filled with the Spirit! Let the Spirit of God take full control over you! Tony Stark has to put on the suit in order to be Iron Man and likewise I have to choose to "put on" or "be filled by" the Holy Spirit. That is what Paul is going to finish by saying here:

III. We Have A Solemn Obligation To Live Under The Holy Spirit's Control (12-13) Because of what God has done for us, we owe a tremendous debt. We have a solemn, sacred obligation to Him. You see:

1. we have no obligation to do what our sin-dominated flesh tells us to do We're dead to sin and its power over us. We have no earthly reason to let sin control our acts and thoughts, or as Paul puts it, to live according to the flesh. We don't have to do it and there's no reason we should do it.

2. that is the way nonbelievers live and it leads to death They live that way because they can't do otherwise. They're stuck. They're in bondage to it, controlled by it. Rather we have been set free, so we have a solemn obligation to choose to exercise that freedom.

3. by the Spirit's power we "kill" the deeds sin tries to do through our bodies Sin says, "Why don't you lie about that?" But you say, "Spirit, I don't want to lie! Take control of me and help me to tell the truth, no matter how painful it is!" In effect, I kill that evil deed; I put it to death before my body even has a chance to do it, but I do it through relying on the Spirit's power to do it through me and not on myself. In every circumstance, every time my flesh serves up a wrong thought or desire, I turn to the Holy Spirit who lives in me and rely on Him to take control of me and put that evil deed or thought to death. Paul says:

4. this is our normal way of living and it is truly life! It has to become a habit. Whenever sin serves up its evil suggestions in my mind, I reject them and call upon the Spirit for His power to do what is right and righteous and pure and holy. I do it every day, multiple times a day. It becomes the way I live and that is what causes me to live the holy, pure, sanctified life that God intends.

Tony Evans tells the story of a man who went to buy a refrigerator. He bought the most incredible refrigerator you could imagine. It had all the bells and whistles you would expect, and then some. It cost hundreds of dollars more than a normal refrigerator, but what could you expect for such a fine product? The store delivers the new refrigerator to the man's home; he fills it with all his food, and he's so excited to have this great new refrigerator. The next morning, he goes into the kitchen to make breakfast, only to find that the milk is spoiled, the ice cream is running out of the bottom of the freezer compartment, and the vegetables are changing color. It's obvious that the refrigerator is not working. So, the man calls the store to give them a piece of his mind. The man at the store says, "I don't understand what's wrong. Open the door and see if the light comes on." He opens the door; "No light." "Put your ear up close to the refrigerator and see if you can hear the hum of the motor." "No hum." Then the man says, "There's a cord at the back of your refrigerator. Check and see if it's plugged in." The man looks, and sure enough, it wasn't plugged in. So, he comes back to the phone and says, "You're right, the cord was not plugged in. But for the kind of money I paid for this refrigerator, that shouldn't matter. This thing should work anyway!" That's silly, isn't it? We would never expect an appliance to work without being connected to a power source which flows through it and produces cold or heat or whatever the appliance does. I have a battery powered drill and a battery powered computer and a battery powered phone. We know that all these things need a power source placed within in order to do what they are intended to do. Well, God expects us to have that kind of common sense about our own lives. He placed His Holy Spirit in each one of us as a kind of life-time warranted, unlimited, never wears down or runs out, power source for us to live by. But we must plug ourselves in; we must connect by simply asking, "Holy Spirit, please fill me! Holy Spirit, please control me! Holy Spirit, please empower me! Holy Spirit please love this person through me! Holy Spirit, please give me grace to forgive this person. Holy Spirit, keep me from these evil thoughts!" And on and on the conversation goes, every day, all day. And whenever we ask, He does what we ask and takes over and fills us and controls us and empowers us. That is truly living the Christian life, asking Christ to live it through me.

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Glorification: Our Ultimate Righteousness - 8:14-39

Our Future Glory - 8:14-27

In our study today we enter the final section of Paul's explanation of the depths of the great salvation God has provided for us through Christ. Let me take a moment to remind you of the four aspects of it that Paul addresses:

Condemnation: we all lack righteousness (1:18-3:20)

Justification: God provides His righteousness to us (3:21-5:21)

Sanctification: God's righteousness transforms our lives (6:1-8:13)

Glorification: we are ultimately made completely righteous (8:14-39)

Beginning at 8:14 we look to the future. We have been saved because God justified us when we believed on His Son. We are being saved as God transforms our lives more and more into His image by His Spirit. But one day we will be saved when sin is completely removed from us and we are made completely righteous like Him. When we think about our eternal future, we like to talk about where we'll be and what that place will be like, but Paul is more interested in what we ourselves will be like. In verse 17 he says we will be glorified with Him, that is, we will be made to share in the very glory of Christ Himself when we are in His Presence! Three of the disciples saw at least a glimpse of what it means to be glorified when they were up on the mountain with Jesus and ...he was transfigured before them, and his face shone like the sun, and his clothes became white as light. Years later Peter wrote, For we did not follow cleverly devised myths when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but we were eyewitnesses of his majesty. For when he received honor and glory from God the Father, and the voice was borne to him by the Majestic Glory, "This is my beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased," we ourselves heard this very voice borne from heaven, for we were with him on the holy mountain. - 2 Pet. 1:16-18. They saw Jesus be glorified, brief as it was. And the apostle John, who was also there with Peter, said, Beloved, we are God's children now, and what we will be has not yet appeared; but we know that when he appears we shall be like him, because we shall see him as he is. - 1 Jn. 3:2. Oh, we shall be glorified as He was, as He IS, shining, majestic, radiating the very glory of God Himself! That's what lies ahead for us. But how do we know that? Well, Paul says:

I. The Holy Spirit Assures Us Of Our Glorious Future (14-16) First of all, the Holy Spirit:

1. He assures us of our present relationship with God as His children He bears witness to and with our own renewed spirit. He convinces us internally, at the core of our being, that we are really God's children. It's more than a mere feeling; He gives us an unexplainable, supernatural certainty that we now belong to God as His sons and daughters. And the evidence of that assurance is that:

a. He creates a spirit of intimacy between us and God We no longer cringe in fear of God and His judgment and worry what He will do with us; we don't serve Him as slaves who do His will and fear His punishment. Rather we are drawn to God; we approach Him like a little child saying from our hearts, Abba! Father! Daddy! We're no longer afraid that God is going to "get us" the next time we do wrong, that condemnation awaits us; instead, we run to Him like a child and climb up on His lap to talk to Him and share all that is on our hearts! The Holy Spirit gives us this intimacy with God that is just incredible. And one of the glorious effects of that intimacy is that:

b. He leads us through life according to verse 14. Last time we talked about how we need to have a running conversation with the Holy Spirit, asking Him to fill us, that is, to take control of us in situation after situation, directing us what to do and empowering us to do it. I think that's what Paul means here. We whom the Spirit guides and empowers and works through, we are the children of God! God's Spirit has a living relationship with His children that takes them on through life. And that spirit of intimacy and that personal walk type of relationship He gives us naturally leads to something else:

2. He assures us of our future inheritance as joint heirs with Christ (17a) Listen to this: Jewish law said the oldest son gets a double portion of the inheritance, but Roman law said that all sons share an equal portion of the inheritance, even adopted ones! That's the concept that Paul has in mind. As God's children, we are His heirs. All that is His becomes ours! But we don't simply each get a little piece of it; we are equal heirs with Christ; everything Christ has from the Father will be ours too! Well, how much did He get? Heb. 1:2 says, ...[God] has spoken to us by his Son, whom he appointed the heir of all things... In fact, Jesus Himself said, All that the Father has is mine... - Jn. 16:15. Then simply look down to verse 32 of our chapter; God will give us all things together with Him! We ALL get it ALL! All of it is all of ours. Every privilege He enjoys, we will enjoy! Every pleasure that is His will be ours! Every created thing in heaven and earth will be ours with Him. We will shine with Him in His glory; we will reign with Him in His authority; we will participate with Him in all that He has planned for all eternity. No wonder the Scripture says, No eye has seen, no ear has heard, no mind has conceived what God has prepared for those who love him! - 1 Cor. 2:9.

I told you previously the heartwarming story of a father who had moved his family into a marvelous new home. The accommodations and luxuries were so much better than in the old house that it was almost impossible to believe it was true. His little boy ran from room to room, scanning everything with surprise and calling out repeatedly in childish delight at each new object that greeted his sight, "Is this ours, Dad--is this really OURS?!"...When the glories of Heaven burst upon our view, we will not stand at a distance like some stranger, saying, "O God, all this is Yours?" Rather, we will bound forward and examine every provision in those blessed mansions, exclaiming, "Father, these are OURS?" We will be absolutely overwhelmed by all the divine riches of glory that are ours in Christ Jesus! That's the good news, however Paul wants to make sure we understand that:

II. Our Glorification Is Linked To Our Present Sufferings In the very same breath as he mentions our glory as joint heirs, he adds verses (17b-18). God has this principle that sufferings come first and the glory follows. It is the pattern He laid down for His own Son, that He should endure the suffering of life in this world and the agony of the cross first, and that is what achieved the greatness of the glory that follows forever. And likewise, Paul says:

1. we will endure sufferings in this present time While we are alive on earth, we will suffer with Him. The New Testament never paints a picture that life for us as believers will be a bed of roses, that we will all be rich and prosperous and well and safe. Rather it warns us that in this world we will have tribulation, we will be hated, we will know hardship and even deliberate persecution for Jesus' sake. Don't sign up to follow Jesus expecting a cushy assignment! However, our very endurance of suffering with Him assures us of our glorious future! The fact that we are willing to endure all things for Him, to suffer and even to die without turning away from Him, is the very evidence that we truly belong to Him and because of that:

2. we will experience an incomparable future glory together with him! That little word to at the end of verse 18 is the Greek word into or unto. It's saying that glory:

a. it will be revealed both to us and in us We will SEE the very glory of God in all its fullness and marvel at it, but we will also BE His glory. He will transform us and glorify us in such a way that His glory will shine through us to the whole watching universe. And when we are there at last and experience all that glorification means:

b. it's greatness will cause our present sufferings to fade to insignificance There will be no comparison. That glory will be so great that the sufferings we endured in this life will seem like so much dust on the scales. Albert Barnes comments: They are nothing in degree. For these are light compared with that "eternal weight of glory" which they shall "work out." [2 Cor. 4:17]. They are nothing in duration. For these sufferings are but for a moment; but the glory shall be eternal. These will soon pass away; but that glory shall never become dim or diminished; it will increase and expand forever and ever. Our sufferings don't even rate a comparison with the immensity of that glory. Awful as they may be at this moment, they are merely a drop of evil in light of the ocean of eternal glory that awaits us.

And Paul tells us this to help us to think like he did, to consider, to reckon, to look at our sufferings in the right way. To us our sufferings are big; they are immense, huge, awful as we are enduring them. But the way to endure them is to realize and remember the immensity of the glory that lies ahead, to fix our eyes on the things above, not on things on the earth, on that eternal weight of glory that these sufferings are producing that will never fade away! And part of that is something that we never even think about. Paul says:

III. The Whole Of Creation Is Anxiously Awaiting Our Glorification (19-22) All of creation, the earth, the animal kingdom, the plant kingdom, the human race, all of it:

1. it was perverted from its original state at the fall of man Remember Adam's punishment when in Gen. 3:17-19 God said, ...cursed is the ground because of you; in pain you shall eat of it all the days of your life; thorns and thistles it shall bring forth for you; and you shall eat the plants of the field. By the sweat of your face you shall eat bread... The very earth now requires difficult cultivation instead of producing natural abundance as God intended originally. As death entered the human race, evidently death entered the animal world too and with it, violence. All those nature shows where the hyena eats the gazelle alive or the cheetah chases the baby springbok and pulls it down, it was never meant to be that way! Beautiful as it is, nothing in all of creation is the way it was meant to be; it's corrupted; it's perverted, just as we have been perverted by the entrance of sin into us. But the good news is:

2. it will be set free from its bondage to corruption along with us On that day when Jesus comes and we are finally glorified with Him, the whole creation will be released too! Look with me at Is. 11:6-9. When's that ever going to happen? When Jesus comes! When He comes to earth and sets up His kingdom, it will all be set right once again! It'll all be the way it was meant to be. The whole earth will experience the glory of God and be transformed, but for now:

3. like us, it is currently groaning in pain, intensely longing for that day That word groaning in verse 22 means the creation is groaning as in the pains of childbirth. It is experiencing violent, painful things like disasters and earthquakes and famines and wars and terrorism. These things are like labor pains, extremely intense, but the good thing about birth pains is that they look ahead to a wonderful event! What's the creation waiting for, longing for? For us! For the day when God reveals His children in all their full glory to the watching world! The world will be changed along with us, so it's waiting for what Jesus has planned to do with us! And likewise:

IV. We Ourselves Are Anxiously Awaiting Our Glorification (23-25) Just like the creation, WE are waiting for something:

1. we are awaiting our adoption Now wait a minute. I am already adopted, aren't I? I have already been made a child of God through faith in Jesus Christ and become a member of His family. Yes, that's true, but we think of the meaning of adoption in its modern context. Paul doesn't use it that way. In Roman society adoption meant being placed in full position as an adult son. When a young man reached a certain age, it was customary for his father to take him into the Forum. From a public platform he would say to the citizens of the city, "This is my son; he has now come of age; he inherits my name, my property, and my social position!" Then he would take off the boy's youthful toga praetexta and put on him the toga virilis, "the coat of a man". This act installed him as an adult son and invested him with all the full rights and privileges of sonship and was known as adoption and that is what Paul is referring to. In Gal. 4:1-2 he explains, I mean that the heir, as long as he is a child, is no different from a slave, though he is the owner of everything, but he is under guardians and managers until the date set by his father. There is coming a day when our sonship will no longer be an inward unknown thing to the world but an outward visible thing that all of creation will know, because we will take up our full right of ruling and reigning with Christ! And the crowning act of this moment set by our Father:

2. this will include the redemption of our very bodies by resurrection We will at last be made like Jesus Christ fully. We will get our brand-new resurrection bodies which have no sin nature and are not subject to decay and all the things that sin brought in! Right now, sin is an alien force residing in us, and still trying to control us, but one day it will be cast out. We will have glorious liberty and be free at last from the curse of sin, holy and pure in spirit, soul and body! And then the Lord will set us on the Forum of the universe and publicly bear witness to every created being, "These are my children, my sons and my daughters, made like Me in all my glory. They bear My Name. All that is Mine is theirs and they have My full authority over you!" Hallelujah! That's why Paul says that:

3. we are saved in hope That is, as believers in Christ we have a confident assurance that our glorification will occur and we are always looking toward it. Yes:

a. we groan inwardly at our present suffering Knowing what awaits us on that day and tasting even now the sweetness of the Holy Spirit's presence which is our guarantee of it, we groan inside ourselves. We can hardly wait to get there; we long for that day. We have this awful sense that the world is not right and, on one hand, we agonize over the misery of this present evil age, but on the other:

b. we wait patiently, eagerly, and confidently for our glorification We are filled with hope, with the confident expectation of our future! We know what is out there. We are convinced of it. How? Remember verses 16-17. The Holy Spirit convinces us that we are God's children and if children then we are heirs and will be glorified with Christ! We've read the end of the book first and we know how it's going to turn out so we are eager for it to happen. Like the creation, we are eagerly waiting, but also patiently waiting. We're like a person waiting for the bus that will take them home. We know the bus will come one day, so we sit at our bus stop and keep looking down the road for the bus, expecting it, but meanwhile we wait patiently, enduring the heat or the rain or the cold, determined to endure the difficulty and wait until it gets here, no matter how long it seems to take, actively doing whatever God has told us to do until the bus comes, yet always wishing that bus would come soon, because when it does, we will go home! We live, full of the Holy Spirit, His very presence assuring us that the bus is coming, living out the life of Christ day by day, yet always with one eye on the eastern sky watching for His appearing because we want that Day, that glorious day! Oh, we want it so bad! But remember, nobody ever said that waiting and hoping and looking ahead is an easy thing to do. Fortunately, Paul tells us:

V. The Holy Spirit Helps Us Endure Our Present Distress (26-27) As we wait here and endure suffering, we pray! It's just natural; we pour out our hearts to our Father as we endure the struggles of life. But we have a weakness, a limitation, even in that process:

1. we do not know what we should pray for because our perspective is limited We're often so confused by our circumstances, so blinded by our pain, so limited in our understanding of what's happening to us or in the world, that we don't know what God's will really is. And therefore, we don't know what to pray for as we ought. Sometimes in our suffering we have to pray, "Lord, I want to get well from this awful illness, but maybe not getting well means you can use me more and if so, your will be done!" Sometimes we are so overwhelmed that we don't know even what to pray at all. Yet in these very moments:

2. the Spirit translates the true longings of our hearts to the Father The Spirit is joined to our spirit, to our very heart, the core of us. He knows our thoughts and feelings. He endures our pain with us. And He, also being one with the Father, is God's window into our very soul. He conveys the longing of our hearts in the most accurate way possible to the Father, but in that process, He does second thing:

3. He intercedes with the Father for us according to God's will Nobody knows all that means, but at the least it means He helps us to pray the right things, the things that God wants us to ask for, even if we can't say them with our mouths. Another way to say it might be that just as He lives through us when we ask Him, He also prays through us as we rely upon Him. One commentator says, this ...implies not only that...we are taught to pray what would otherwise be unutterable ...but that the Holy Ghost himself pleads in our prayers, raising us to higher and holier desires than we can express in words, which can only find utterance in sighings and aspirations... [Lange's Commentary on Rom. 8:27] And whatever the Holy Spirit prays through us and on our behalf will always be exactly in accord with God's perfect will.

Dr. Wilbur Chapman was a Presbyterian evangelist who held crusades in the US and worldwide for many years around 1900. From April 20-28, 1911 he booked a music hall that held 800 in the town of Shrewsbury, England. Despite publicity, attendance the first night was sparse and Chapman and many others were gravely disappointed, sensing something was sorely lacking. But a guest was there that night, an American missionary by the name of John Hyde who was enroute home from 20 years on the field in India. And as he sat in the meeting that night a burden came upon him to pray for the rest of the crusade. The effect was immediate; the next night the hall was packed and some 50 received Christ. For more than a week he prayed in a hotel room and hundreds were impacted. But on the first day after prayer so obviously turned things around, Dr. Chapman asked Hyde to come to his room and pray for him personally. He wrote to a friend: "He came to my room, turned the key in the door, dropped on his knees, and waited five minutes without a single syllable coming from his lips. I could hear my own heart thumping and beating. I felt the hot tears running down my face. I knew I was with God. Then with upturned face, down which the tears were streaming, he said, 'Oh, God!' Then for five minutes at least he was still again, and then when he knew he was talking with God his arm went around my shoulder. Then he said something like this, 'My Father, here is a minister who sorely needs Thy help, do bless him, I beseech Thee, may his life be precious in Thy sight. May he be girded anew with strength for service; may Jesus Christ become more real to him.' And then there came from his heart such petitions for men as I had never heard before. Then he was still again for a little while, and when the closing words of the prayer were said, we rose from our knees, and I had learned a never-to-be-forgotten lesson concerning intercession. Jesus Christ became a new ideal to me, and I had a glimpse of His prayer life, and I had a longing which has remained to this day to be a real praying man."

[\[http://shrewsburylocalhistory.org.uk/effective.htm\]](http://shrewsburylocalhistory.org.uk/effective.htm) I have a sense that prayer like that might just be a glimpse of what Paul means when he says, Pray in the Spirit on all occasions... - Eph. 6:18. Our occasions might be far different from that one, but if we ask Him to fill us in our suffering, the Holy Spirit will pray through us and intercede with the Father in ways we can hardly imagine now. We can have a taste of that future glory here and now to sustain us until then.

Romans 1-8: Understanding Our Great Salvation

Glorification: Our Ultimate Righteousness - 8:14-39

Our Absolute Security - 8:28-39

The ultimate result of everything that we have learned in these chapters about the great salvation God has provided for us is our absolute, unshakable, rock solid, impenetrable security. People today look frantically for security in every conceivable way, from amassing huge bank accounts, to survivalists storing up weapons and food to, marrying a person they think can meet all their needs. But truthfully, there is no person on earth that has any degree of security at all, except we who know Jesus Christ. If we understand justification, we realize that we are secure in our relationship to God because our righteousness is provided by Him. If we understand sanctification, we realize that we are secure in our Christian life because the Spirit's power lives the life God expects through us in holiness and purity. But if we understand glorification, we realize that we are absolutely secure in our circumstances, that no matter how awful the things that come our way become, we know our future is guaranteed! And the ground of our absolute security is God Himself; He is what guarantees our future. First of all, Paul tells us that:

I. We Have Absolute Security Through The Sovereignty Of God Our security rests in a God who is sovereign, who is in absolute control of all things, in a God who is omnipotent, all powerful, a God who is able to do anything He chooses to do and whom nothing can hinder from it. That's why:

1. we are completely secure amid our present circumstances, no matter what they may be. Look at verse (28). We quote this verse all the time, especially when something bad happens, to console ourselves or others with the idea that, "God will bring something good out of all this." But its real meaning goes so much deeper than that. Look at the end of the verse first:

a. God called us to Himself as part of His eternal purpose He has a plan and purpose that He has determined to work out in this world and we are part of that eternal plan and purpose. The whole of my life, indeed, the whole history of the human race, is to God only a blink in time. In and through this brief vapor of vanishing earthly life, God is creating a race of perfect sons and daughters who will be with Him and involved with Him in all of His plans and exploits forever! And therefore:

b. He causes every earthly circumstance to serve His good purpose for us Bad things like tragedies, loneliness, hunger, natural disasters, crime, sickness, death, all these things not only cannot thwart the purpose of God, but our God is so powerful and mighty and sovereign that they are actually made to serve His purpose! In the life of the child of God, He uses His sovereign power, not merely to control everything that happens to us, but to work all those things together to come out for what is to Him a good result, the doing of His will! Nothing stands in the way of God accomplishing what He has determined to do! That's why you can lose your job and say, "God is doing something else here; He will work this out for me." That's why your house can burn down and you can say, "God is at work in this and I know He will take care of me". None of these things touches us apart from His will and plan and permission. None of them are accidentally running loose on their own somehow, pure mishaps that have no rhyme or reason. But of course, He doesn't promise that we'll know what the reason is! We just have to rest in God's sovereignty and be content to know that He has one! Romanian Pastor Richard Wurmbrand spent 14 years in prison for his faith, three of them in solitary confinement, and endured much torture. Few have suffered more than he did, but here is his testimony: "The communists believe that happiness comes from material satisfaction; but alone in my cell, cold, hungry and in rags, I danced for joy every night. Words alone have never been able to say what a man feels in the nearness of divinity... Sometimes I was so filled with joy that I felt I would burst if I did not give it expression. I remembered the words of Jesus, 'Blessed are you when men come to hate you... on account of the Son of Man. Rejoice in that day and leap for joy! I told myself, 'I've carried out only half the command. I've rejoiced, but that is not enough. Jesus clearly says that we must also leap.' When next the guard peered through the spy-hole, he saw me springing about my cell. His orders must have been to distract anyone who showed signs of breakdown, for he padded off and returned with some food from the staff room: a hunk of bread, some cheese and sugar. As I took them, I remembered how the verse in St. Luke went on: 'Rejoice in that day and leap for joy – for behold your reward is great.' It was a very large piece of bread: more than a week's ration. [In God's Underground, p. 54] God used 14 years of awful suffering to help Richard Wurmbrand grow into a closeness of relationship with Himself that he might never have otherwise attained! Suffering accomplished God's good purpose in him and so it always does in us, especially when we cooperate with the process as he did, instead of fighting it!

Well, now Paul takes this thinking that God always accomplishes what He sets out to do and expands it one step further by explaining that:

2. we are predestined to glorification (29-30) These verses have been a point of contention for centuries between different brands of theologians, and to no avail. So, it's really important that we all lay down our systems of theology and simply look at what the text plainly says. First of all, it says that God:

a. He foreknew us and long ago predestined us to be made like Jesus Way back when, in eternity past before the creation of the world, before we were ever formed, God knew us. He knew all about us and all about our life and all about the things that would happen in our life. And way back then, God did something, He decreed something about us individually. Strong Calvinists would say it was because He chose to elect us. I would say He knew we would respond and so chose us as being in Christ, but none of that is the point. Predestination in this text is not about why we come to Christ; it is about being glorified. What it says is that God decreed way back then that you and I would conformed to the image of His Son, that is, that we would be glorified, that we would have a resurrection body like Jesus and that we would reign forever together with Him as a joint heir! God decreed that about us eons ago and then when the time was right and He brought us into the world:

b. He carried this decree out by calling, justifying and glorifying us God lined out an entire progression of events for us way back then, an unbreakable chain of happenings. So, because He foreknew us and made that decree about our final state, He then called us to Himself, justified us by giving us Christ's righteousness and, notice this, glorified us. Therefore, if you know you are saved, if you know you have been called, if you know you have been justified, then you can also be absolutely certain that you will be glorified, because God made that determination about you long ago and He cannot fail to carry out the last part of the plan! In fact, what this verse really says is that to God it is already accomplished! That's how secure we are. It is, to use a common expression, a "done deal". God decreed it, and since He has the power to make sure His will and Word come to pass, it is already done! As I keep saying, our lives are joined to Christ, so what happened to Him happened to us. When He died, we died. When He rose, we rose. He ascended and now He is seated in the heavenly places, so guess what? We are already seated in the heavenly places with Him. It is not simply anticipation of what lies ahead for us; it is factually true to God because to Him time doesn't make any difference. To Him the future is as real as the present because He inhabits eternity! We are already glorified! Hallelujah! That's secure! And then Paul gives us the real reason that God decided to do all this:

c. His purpose is that Jesus might be first among many brothers (and sisters) who are like Him. Simply put, God wanted a whole bunch of kids! He wanted a big family! And He planned from the very beginning that He would have it. Hebrews 2:10 tells us that God's purpose was to bring many sons to glory! He didn't just want a bunch of things He had made. It was not enough for Him to have the galaxies and the stars and the planets. It was not enough for Him to have trillions of angelic beings to carry out His wishes. It was not enough for Him to have the world and all that it contains. He wanted sons and daughters, children who would be made in His very likeness, contain His very nature and be capable of sharing the glories and joys of all eternity in a oneness of being with Him! That's why God decreed all these things about you; that's the reason behind sending His Son to the cross and that's why He will bring every last thing He has decreed about you to pass! The well-known Chinese Bible teacher Watchman Nee told about a new convert who came in deep distress to see him saying, "No matter how much I pray, no matter how hard I try, I simply cannot seem to be faithful to my Lord. I think I'm losing my salvation." Nee said, "Do you see this dog here? He is my dog. He is house-trained; he never makes a mess; he is obedient; he is a pure delight to me. Out in the kitchen I have a son, a baby son. He makes a mess, he throws his food around, he fouls his clothes, he is a total mess. But who is going to inherit my kingdom? Not my dog; my son is my heir. You are Jesus Christ's heir because it is for you that He died." WE are the object of all that God has done, of His whole purpose in the world and He will not fail to complete it! Hallelujah! Don't you just want to love Him?

Well, moving on, it is not only God's sovereignty that gives us security. Paul says:

II. We Have Absolute Security Through The Love Of God in verses (31-39). Love is the motive behind all that God has decreed. Love is the reason for His determination to carry it out. Paul makes a powerful statement in verse 31:

1. God Himself is FOR us (31-34) God is FOR us. That is our security. Nothing can penetrate that. Paul reasons, "Look:

a. God will not condemn us Why would He? He gave up His Son in order to give us all things! He gave His only Son whom He loved to die on a cross for us, so if He condemned us, His own Son would have died in vain! And if He loved us so much as to give up His Son to get us, won't that same love carry itself out all the way and bring us safely to glory and give us all the things that belong to us as joint heirs with Christ? Sure, it will! No, the Father will never condemn us and:

b. Christ will not condemn us Why would He? He died, rose, ascended, all for us. In fact, He even intercedes for us right now! How could He condemn those He gave His very own life for? Not only that, how could He condemn those that He is representing at the right hand of the Father every single day? No, Jesus will never condemn us and, if neither the Father nor the Son will condemn us, then:

c. no one else can bring any charge against us since God has justified us! Sure, Satan would love to. In Revelation it says that he is the accuser of the brethren and that he accuses them before God day and night. We have a glimpse of that in the way he tried to accuse Job before God and impugn his motives for obeying as being selfish, even though Job wouldn't sin. I'm sure Satan tries in vain to point out our failures and our sins. But listen, since God is for us, since we are in right standing with Him, since we are free from any condemnation by Him and He is the Judge of all the earth, then if follows that nobody can condemn us. Nobody can take our glorious future away from us! God would never let it happen!

And now in the conclusion of this chapter, we come to such a beautiful section that we often read it for the majestic way in which it expresses the depths of God's love. But instead of admiring the diamond for its sheer beauty from a distance, I would like us look carefully at each facet that makes up the whole gem. The precious truth Paul is trying to drive home is simply that:

2. NOTHING can separate us from Christ's love (35a) The answer is "No one!" Nothing can separate us from the love of Christ. It is too great, too vast, too deep, too strong. There are not sufficient words to describe it, so Paul begins to list all the things that, even though they are the most powerful forces we experience on earth, can't succeed in dividing us from Christ because of His immense love for us! First, Paul says that:

a. no experience of suffering in life can separate us from it (35b-37)

(1) our suffering or even dying is not evidence of a lack of God's love When trouble comes, Satan will always try to get us to think that God has stopped loving us. He will pop that question into our minds, "If God loves me, why is this happening to me? Why doesn't He stop it and rescue me from this? If I loved someone, I would never let them have to endure something like this!" It may be persecution like our brothers and sisters in Iran or Afghanistan face today; it may be even the threat of death. It may be famine, falling on hard times and not having enough to eat or to pay your bills. It may be the loss of a loved one, a debilitating accident or a dread disease. Suffering comes to us in a myriad of forms in this world. We may even find ourselves in a situation like the Psalmist in Ps. 44:22 that Paul quotes, where Israel hadn't been unfaithful to God, yet she was defeated before her enemies and faced death at their hand like so many helpless sheep to be butchered. Yet not even that can separate us from God's love. Rather:

(2) God's love causes us to win a glorious victory over all these things We are not the losers but the winners. We are not the vanquished; we are the conquerors. Why? Because all things, even these, still work together to accomplish God's plan and His good purpose. And in the end, they convey us to glory and result in His glory! And not one of them changes His love for us! Don't ever buy that lie of the enemy! Suffering does not come from a lack of God's love; it is in suffering that you will come to know His love in the deepest and greatest ways of all as you enter with Him into what the Scripture calls the fellowship of His sufferings! No experience of suffering can take away that love and further:

b. no facet of creation can separate us from it (38-39) What is there in all of the universe that could possibly break that love. What are the most powerful things we know that could part us from it? Paul says:

(1) neither dying nor living can do it. In chapter 14 he says, For if we live, we live to the Lord, and if we die, we die to the Lord. So then, whether we live or whether we die, we are the Lord's. If we live, His Spirit lives in us and we live out His life. If we die, we are with Him in glory. Either way, we win! But what about the spirit world? Paul says:

(2) neither angels nor demonic forces can break that love. All the demons the enemy can muster, not Satan himself, the most powerful of all, not all of them combined can lessen that love even one iota! But what about the things we fear on earth? Paul says:

(3) nor earthly rulers... No Kim Jong-Un can stop God from loving us. No dictator can terrorize us by threatening our lives! Psalm 2 says, Why do the nations rage and the peoples plot in vain? The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the LORD and against his Anointed... He who sits in the heavens laughs; the Lord holds them in derision. For all their plotting and planning, not one of them can stand against Him or break His great love for US! Then, we always get anxious about the unknown, but Paul says:

(4) neither present nor future circumstances can separate us. We worry and worry about so many things. What if this? What if that? Listen, there is not a single thing in the present and there will be not a single thing to come in the future that will ever keep God's love from being lavished upon us! Not one!

(5) nor any dimension of space No matter where we are, how high up on a mountain or how low down in a mine, whether we're on one side of the earth or the other, everywhere we are, God is, and where He is, so is His love for us! The punchline is in verse 39:

NOTHING in all creation can separate us from God's glorious love in Christ! Did you hear that? Nothing! That's how absolutely secure we are because He loves us! I don't think anyone knows that better in human experience than our dear sister and survivor of the holocaust, Corrie Ten Boom. If you have never read her story, The Hiding Place, it's a classic and a must read if you want God to show you the greatness of His love in the midst of the greatest suffering. Corrie wrote this, Often I have heard people say, "How good God is! We prayed that it would not rain for our church picnic, and look at the lovely weather!" Yes, God is good when He sends good weather. But God was also good when He allowed my sister, Betsie, to starve to death before my eyes in a German concentration camp. I remember one occasion when I was very discouraged there. Everything around us was dark, and there was darkness in my heart. I remember telling Betsie that I thought God had forgotten us. "No, Corrie," said Betsie, "He has not forgotten us. Remember His Word: 'For as the heavens are high above the earth, so great is His steadfast love toward those who fear Him.' Corrie concludes, "There is an ocean of God's love available - there is plenty for everyone. May God grant you never to doubt that victorious love - whatever the circumstances." Amen!

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 9:1-5 Israel, O Israel!

Let me remind you of the general outline of Romans:

Doctrinal	Chs. 1-8	God's Grace
Dispensational	Chs. 9-11	God's Government
Developmental	Chs. 12-16	God's Guidance

At chapter 9 we begin a whole new section of Romans. In chapters 1-8 Paul has been dealing with our salvation from beginning to end, from condemnation through justification and sanctification to glorification! But now he leaves that and goes on to a subject that he had touched on back in chapters 2-3. Back there he had proved that Jews are lost people that need salvation just like Gentiles. However, Paul, with his tremendous Jewish heritage, couldn't leave it go at that.

I. Paul's Next Subject: God's relationship to Israel You see, one of the hardest questions the early church had to digest was, now that there was a Church of Jesus Christ, what about Israel? In the earliest church there was a movement to say that all converts had to be circumcised and keep the law. Paul fought this at every turn, but it simply took a long time for the church to understand God's new relationship to Israel. It took 10 chapters of the book of Acts before the church even began to think that Gentiles could be saved, and then God had to give Peter a supernatural vision to prove it! In Acts 15, a council was called at Jerusalem to settle the issue of whether Gentile converts had to keep the law, but still nowhere in the Scriptures was there any full explanation of Israel's place in God's plan, now that Christ had come and the church had been started. This is it. Alongside this, put the book of Hebrews, which is (I believe, Paul's) treatise showing how Old Testament things which were only shadows that are now fulfilled and can be left behind. Christians no longer need a Temple and animal sacrifices. It was his theological help to Jewish believers to let go of the things they still clung to. But Romans 9-11 spells out God's relationship to Israel as a nation in three phases:

Ch. 9	God's Past Dealings with Israel	Sovereignty
Ch. 10	God's Present Dealings with Israel	Responsibility
Ch. 11	God's Future Dealings with Israel	Prophecy

If I could summarize the message of these three chapters in a nutshell it would be this: In the past God sovereignly chose Israel to a place of privilege among all nations. Because of her unbelief and hardness, He has presently removed her from that place of privilege. Yet one day she will be reinstated to that place of privilege in the Kingdom. And, even though this question of Israel's place in not so much of a big deal to us, as we see how God dealt with national Israel, there are many valuable lessons we can learn for our own lives!

II. Paul's Present Anguish (1-4a) No one loved the Jewish nation more than Paul did. In Phil. 3:5 he calls himself a Hebrew (born) of Hebrews! His roots went deep. His life had been committed to Israel and her law. What he is going to say about her being set aside does not come easy for him. In fact, he wishes it could be some other way, but it isn't. He says if it were possible, he would trade his own salvation for theirs, that somehow they could be in his place of privilege in Christ and he be cut off from Christ as they are! Note how he emphasizes and re-emphasizes his sorrow at their condition, I speak the truth...am not lying...my conscience...the Holy Spirit...GREAT sorrow...UNCEASING anguish! Let me ask you, do you love lost people like that? Do you have that kind of anguish in your heart for people that are cut off from Christ and face eternal hell if they don't turn to Him? When was the last time you cried over the fact that someone was lost? Beloved, one of the chief reasons Paul won so many to Christ was that he cared about their spiritual state; one of the chief reasons we don't win more is that we don't. We are too often content to sit back and watch people travel the road to hell instead of feverishly building a road block to keep them from it! And there is a second point of application I'd like to make here too; we ought to be concerned specially for the lostness of Jewish people! In our era of world missions, wonderful as it is, we have often looked to the vast regions beyond and forgotten the Jew, by whose fall salvation came to us! It is only in the last few decades that missions to the Jews have come into being and the concept of a Hebrew Christian has been revived! We should be concerned for the salvation of Israel. It is not as though God has forgotten them and thrown them away so we can ignore them; on the contrary God has a plan whereby once the church is raptured out, they will become the center of His earthly activity once again and forever! In fact, Paul goes on to point out:

III. Israel's Perpetual Privileges (4b-5) There are some things that belong to Israel and always will, some very awesome things:

1. the adoption - Ex. 4:22 Nationally, Israel was placed in a special relationship to God as His son, His firstborn who would receive the inheritance. Compare Is. 66:22, Jer. 31:35-37. God put the nation of Israel into a special relationship with Himself that is perpetual. It is as unshakeable as the universe itself. She remains, though set aside from her privileges, God's chosen nation! The nations of earth would do well to remember that!

2. the Divine glory The Shekinah glory-cloud that led Israel in the wilderness and filled the Tabernacle and the Temple belongs uniquely to Israel. That special manifestation of His presence is uniquely hers and will return to her Temple in the Millennium (Ez. 43:5).

3. the covenants All the covenants God made from Abraham on, He made with the nation of Israel. They are hers and their promises are hers still. The promise of the land as an everlasting possession, of the perpetual establishing of David's throne, and so on. Even the New Covenant which Jeremiah talked about in 31:31 (the law written on the heart) and which Hebrews says we share in, is given to Israel if you go back and read it. He is yet going to keep it!

4. the Law The Law was never given to the Church; it was given to Israel and it remains hers. She will practice it again in the Millennium. But what a high and holy privilege she had in receiving the very Word of God!

5. the Temple worship with all its sacrifices and regulations It was never given to the church. It is Israel's and she will again have a Temple and serve God in the same way (Ez. 40-48). But what a privilege to be entrusted with the very outward things that explain and spell out for us the meaning of the sacrifice of Christ on the cross!

6. the Promises What promises? Hundreds of them! The Old Testament is filled with them! Promises of the land, protection, prosperity, blessing, longevity, a Messiah, a Kingdom with Jerusalem as its capital, and many more. God is not an Indian-giver! He does not promise and then retract it. Those things are still hers and the attempt to steal them away and make them apply to the church in some spiritual fashion is robbery!

7. the patriarchs Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Judah and Joseph are all of Israel; they are not ours in any sense except a spiritual one, as we imitate their faith. That great heritage is Israel's alone. And finally:

8. the Christ! The Messiah when He came, came to His people. The flesh that Jesus took unto Himself was Jewish flesh! God forever bonded Himself to His Nation in a Person, the God-man, Jesus the Christ. The very word Christ means Messiah. He is first and foremost the Messiah of Israel besides being the Savior of the World!

These are perpetual privileges, irrevocable in the long run. God could not give all these things to Israel and then cast her aside forever. And indeed, these chapters will show us He hasn't. But the tragic shame is that in spite of all the privileges she had, Israel still rebelled against God! Listen, the privileges she had are wonderful! But the privileges we have in Jesus Christ are far superior, even to those. God bound Himself to a nation, but in Christ he that is joined to the Lord is one Spirit. Almighty God binds His Spirit as one with ours. We have a heavenly kingdom and promised authority. We have better promises, a wonderful covenant through the shed blood of Jesus Christ, a superior law of love and so on, you name it! Yet how often we rebel against God in spite of all these! Oh beloved, never take your privileged position in Christ lightly like they did! Never think that since you are God's children you can do what you like and He will still love you. He will, but He may have to remove you from the experience of your privileges and discipline you like He is doing with Israel, even today! I'm reminded of a story: An old farmer had been plowing with an ox and a mule together and working them pretty hard. The ox said to the mule "Let's play sick today and rest." The mule said, "We need to get the work done and the season is short." But the ox played sick and the farmer brought him hay and corn and made him comfortable. When the mule came in, the ox asked, "How'd it go today?" "Alright I guess, but we didn't get as much done." The ox asked, "What'd the old man say about me?" "Nothing". The next day the ox thought he had a good thing going and played sick again. When the mule came in very tired, he asked, "How'd it go?" "Alright I guess, but we didn't get as much done". The ox asked, "What'd the old man say about me?" "Nothing to me, but on the way home he stopped and had a long talk with the butcher!" Israel stands today as a warning to us never to presume upon the privileges God has given!

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 9:6-24 Israel's Rejection

In Romans 9-11 we are in some of the deepest Scripture in the Bible. It is really tough to understand. But it will help to keep in mind that Paul does not skip randomly from subject to subject. He has one thought in mind in these chapters, Israel's relationship to God. Remember in verses 1-5 how he outlined Israel's high and holy privileges as God's chosen people and lamented the fact that, generally speaking, Israel was now lost and set aside from her privileged position before God. Now, that whole thought raises:

I. The Problem: it seems God's Word has failed (6a) Remember those promises that God made to Abraham and his seed, wonderful promises, eternal promises? If God now sets her aside and being an Israelite no longer counts before God, then how can God keep His promises? Hasn't His Word failed? The answer, of course, is no, but the reason why is kind of tricky! So, Paul gives:

II. The Explanation (6b-13) He first lays out a principle and then applies it:

1. Not all physical Israelites are counted as Abraham's seed and heirs to the promises (6b) Just because a person is physically descended from Abraham does not mean that God counts him as an heir to the promises. Indeed, it never has meant that. God has never counted all physical descendants as true descendants. For example;

a. He chose to count Isaac's descendants, not Ishmael's (7-9) Abraham had other sons. He had Ishmael, the father of the Arabs, long before Isaac. Later he had sons by Keturah after Sarah died. But all those, though they were his offspring were not his "children". Indeed, when God tells him to sacrifice Isaac, He calls Isaac his only son whom he loved. It was the son who was born to inherit the promise that was his son. God chose to count it that way; He reckoned Abraham's seed through Isaac. Every good Jew would concede that! Further:

b. He chose to count Jacob's descendants, not Esau's (10-13) The same is true for Jacob and Esau. And Paul reminds us that before the two boys were ever born or had done anything good or bad, God had already chosen to count the descendants of Jacob, not Esau. His words, The elder shall serve the younger, were never fulfilled to the two individuals, but they are a prediction about the two NATIONS that would descend from these men. The statement about loving and hating comes from Malachi 1:2-3, and if you check it out, it is spoken about the two nations, Israel and Edom, not the two individuals. Paul's point is that God chose to count only Jacob's descendants as "children of Abraham," not Esau's. And every good Jew would be quick to say, "AMEN!" Now please note:

2. These were sovereign choices (11-12a) God did not wait to see how things would work out, nor did He simply look ahead with His omniscience to see how these two nations would turn out. He chose, according to His own plan and purpose, the line from which Messiah would come and the nation that would be His chosen people, to fulfill His purpose in the earth in bringing forth Messiah and being a light to the Gentiles. This is exactly what He told Israel. Compare Deut. 7:6-8. The reason for the choice lay with God, not with them. Folks, God is still making a lot of sovereign choices. Who is to say why you were born in America and someone else in China, into the family you were instead of another, looking like you do? Who is to say why the US is so great in the world today and what will be tomorrow? Listen, all of these things belong to a Sovereign God, not to us! But now, Paul gets onto a brief sidetrack of answering objections before concluding his main point, so we'll skip them and get right to the point:

3. He now chooses to count only believing Jews along with Gentiles as His people (22-24) If you sort carefully through the language, the point is that just as God has made it clear in the past that He has chosen to count some as His people and not others, so He is making it clear now that those Jews who believe in Jesus Christ (along with the Gentiles who believe) are His true people, not simply those who physically descend from Israel! Just as God chose to set aside Ishmael and Esau, so now, He has chosen to set aside for this present time the majority of national Israel from her place of privilege and blessing as His people. Now don't get me wrong; we'll see that He is going to preserve her as a people and is not finished with her yet, but in this current time, it is only those Israelites who become part of the church of Jesus Christ that are His people! God chooses it to be that way.

III. The Objections It seems to me that Paul either was a mind-reader or a good judge of character, because when you read his letters, he's always anticipating what's going through your mind ahead of time. So, here Paul anticipates two possible objections to God's sovereign choice to set Israel aside:

1. it looks like God is not fair (14-18) How can God just "arbitrarily" choose like that; how can He exercise that kind of control over the destiny of men and nations without any input on their part? The answer is that God will do what He wants. The Scripture says so; it says He will have mercy on whom He wills to have mercy. Paul cites the example of Pharaoh. The scripture says God raised him and his nation of Egypt up to the very height of glory in the earth in his day, just so that God could display His superiority to all false gods in bringing Israel out of bondage. If God wants to harden or soften a world leader or raise up or throw down a nation, He does it. That goes along with being God! If God wants to harden or soften someone's heart that you know, that too goes along with being God. You see, the problem of unfairness is based on a misconception, that God is under an obligation to treat everyone equally, to give everybody equal opportunity, to do for all what He does for one. That would be true if all were deserving of it, but the fact is that no one is deserving of God's mercy; all deserve His wrath! The entire human race is sinful and wicked to the core and deserves destruction. If God does anything for anyone, it is purely His mercy! But there is nothing in moral law to say that criminals deserve mercy. He can have mercy on whom He wills! God is not bound to equal treatment. But there's another objection:

2. it looks like I am not responsible (19-21) If God is sovereign and has that kind of control and we can't ultimately resist His will, then how can He hold me responsible for anything I do? I am simply carrying out what He has decreed anyway. Well, Paul has a good answer for that! Who are you, creature, to question God?! How can you, a mere man, question God! You see, you and God didn't happen to end up in the same world and meet. He made the human race and the world it inhabits. He made you. You and the world are His property, created by Him to serve His purposes. God has the right to carry out His purposes with His property! Then he turns to the example of the potter. The clay is his; he has the right to form it the way he wants. If he wants to make one lump a fancy vase, fine. If he wants to make another a cooking pot, fine. If he starts to shape the lump one way and then reshapes it another, fine! He's the potter; the clay has no room to object, because he took the water and the mud and made it! God can choose to do what He wills because He is God and it is He that hath made us and not we ourselves!

Listen, there is a good lesson in all this for us. There are times when we want to complain, to feel badly towards God for putting us in a particular situation, for letting us get sick or leading us into an unpleasant place where we'd rather not be. We're tempted to complain to God for the way He's handling things. But just wait a minute! In those times remember this: He is God! Think of Psalm 8, What is man that thou art mindful of him? You and I are nothing but hell-deserving sinners. The fact that Jesus Christ died for us and saved us should be enough. Even if the whole of my life is miserable torture according to God's plan, He has already given me much more than I deserve, a glorious eternity, and that should be enough! How can I complain?!

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 10 Opportunity Missed

Chapters 9 and 10 are like two sides of the same coin and the coin is God's dealing with the nation of Israel. Chapter 9 tells us of Israel's past and how God worked in it. Chapter 10 tells us of how He is dealing with Israel in this present age. Chapter 9 tells us very plainly about God's sovereignty in choosing Israel and then in setting her aside from a place of privilege before Him. Chapter 10 tells us just as plainly of Israel's responsibility before God. She rejected God's provision in Christ and so was set aside. The message of Chapter 10 boils down to this: Israel has missed and continues to miss the opportunity God has placed before her.

I. Israel's Mistake (1-4) Oh, do you see how much Paul loves Israel still? One would think that by now, after all the persecution they had brought him and how they nearly killed him, he would not feel this way, but he loves them with all his heart and prays for them to be saved! But, by his involvement with them and his own life as a Pharisee, he knows that they are have made one basic mistake:

1. they have zeal and plenty of it Josephus, the Jewish historian, reports how zealous they were under Roman rule. Many were crucified and tortured rather than break their Law. He comments that no pagan would do that! He reports that they made proselytes in practically every city of the empire and in Rome itself. Look at Paul himself in Phil. 3:4-6. Not only did he keep the law blamelessly but he was so zealous that he dragged men and women to prison and death for their daring to defect from what he believed! And many Jews still have a zeal for God, still keep the feasts and the law and endure hatred and bitterness for who they are. But:

2. it is misdirected What they are really trying to do by their zeal is this:

a. they try to become righteous by works They do not know the righteousness God waits to provide by faith. They think they have to manufacture their own. And they get so busy doing it that:

b. they fail to receive it by faith When the opportunity to receive Christ by faith comes along, they don't take it. You see, verse 4 says Christ is the end of the law, its goal or purpose, the thing to which the law was the means. The law was a schoolmaster, Paul says elsewhere, a tutor. It brings conviction of sin, convinces men that they have no righteousness and leads them to receive Christ and the righteousness He provides as a free gift. But they get so caught up in pursuing the means that they miss the end altogether! Listen, there are plenty of people around us making the same mistake. They have all kinds of zeal. They go to church and attend mass regularly, even daily. They repeat prayers and give money without question. They do an untold number of good deeds. But zeal doesn't make it with God. Muslims are fanatically zealous about religion but just as hell-bound as any atheist. Now secondly, see:

II. Israel's Opportunity (5-17) I want us to look at the bulk of this chapter from two perspectives. First, in its direct reference to Israel, then, in how we can apply what it says to us. First:

1. what God did for Israel

a. God provided a Savior (5-8) Paul quotes Deut. 30:12-14. This was the challenge Moses set before the second generation of Israelites, just before they entered the promised land. They had not been at Sinai like their fathers and seen God's glory, but Moses said that's alright. They didn't need another Moses to go up and get God's Word for them. They didn't need to send for someone from far away to teach it to them. They already had God's law in their hands; it was provided for them. Paul uses those familiar words (to Jews) and applies them to Christ. Nobody has to go up to heaven and bring Him down; nobody has to go down to Sheol and bring him up. He has already come down from heaven and come up out of the grave and it was this very message that Paul preached. God provided a Savior for Israel and then:

b. God presented to them a Savior (9-13) All that any Israelite has to do is to confess Jesus as Lord, as Master, Messiah, the Promised One, with all his heart and be saved. God presented Him to Israel both directly and, for those who came later or lived elsewhere:

c. God sent someone to tell them (14-15) God sent people with beautiful feet, the apostles and others, people bearing the good news to them in every city of the empire. Yet:

d. most Israelites rejected God's provision (16) He quotes Isaiah's prophetic cry in 53:1 which intimates that few would believe in the crucified and risen Christ. And few did! They missed their opportunity after all that God did for them and so were set aside that God might go after the Gentiles and call out of them a people for His name!

2. some lessons we can learn from it Now, you're getting tired of hearing about Israel, so let's look at three general principles found here:

a. faith eliminates all human effort (5-10) Works says, "Do and keep on doing and if you do perfectly, you will live". God says:

(1) there is nothing left to do (6-7) Christ has done it all! I once got a two page letter from someone to tell me that the Bible teaches we are saved by faith and works. Millions and millions of souls are blinded by that lie like the Jews were. They are all around us. But Jesus paid it all! All that is left for us:

(2) it is an act of trust in the heart (9-10) It is an act of the heart, believing that Christ died and rose again and calling out to God that Jesus is Lord. This does not seem to be talking about confession before men, but about calling to God (compare 12, 13). That is all that God requires of us to be saved!

b. faith is available to all (11-13) The emphasis in these verses is ALL; everyone is the same!

(1) God's requirement is the same for all There is not a separate way for the Jew (by keeping the law). In this age there is no difference. Jew and Gentile are alike sinners and are saved the same way and incorporated into the same body, and in that body, Ephesians tells us that God has knocked down the middle wall so we are no longer Jew or Gentile! I might add it is the same for the drunkard and the priest and the prostitute and the humanitarian. There is one way and only one. But:

(2) God stands ready to receive all Don't you get the sense from these verses that God is the Father just standing and waiting with open arms for the prodigal to come home? All who believe receive. There is none too bad, none who is beyond God's grace.

c. faith comes by hearing the message (14-17) Verse 17 makes it clear. People don't call on someone they don't believe in and they can't believe in one they've never heard of and they can't hear unless someone tells them and they'll never get told if no one is sent! Faith comes by the hearing of the Word of God as it is proclaimed. Hence, two things:

(1) the necessity of preaching Here is the cry missionaries have raised for years. People can't be saved unless we tell them. The Jews can't be saved unless they're told; the Gentiles can't; no one can. Who are you telling? What means are you using to tell others?

(2) the responsibility of responding Not all Israelites respond. Not all Gentiles respond. Not everyone we tell responds. But they have a responsibility to do it. Man is responsible before God from conscience and from general revelation, but how much more when he has been told directly! People are responsible for missed opportunities!

III. Israel's Objections (18-21) As Paul draws this section to a close, He raises two possible objections that a Jew might raise to what he has just said:

1. they did not hear (18-19) Not every Jew had an opportunity to hear. Paul says, "Of course they did". He quotes Ps. 19 which, if you'll recall, talks first about the general revelation of God in the creation. The very heavens declare His glory. But the second half goes on to talk about the special revelation God has given in His Word. Paul quotes a verse from the middle of it which says that God has made himself known everywhere. They had creation and conscience to drive them to God and they also had His law. All those things point to Christ and hold them responsible.

2. they did not understand (20-21) They heard the message but they did not understand it. Paul quotes Moses and Isaiah to show that Gentiles could understand, who knew nothing and were not even seeking after God. Israel's problem was not understanding, but disobedience and obstinacy!

Listen, people can hear if they want to hear. Even where Christ has not been preached, they can seek God through the revelation He has left them. But right here, how easy it is for a person to hear God's message. They have to avoid it to miss it. Man's problem is not understanding; it is obstinacy. Jesus put it this way, "Ye would not!" No one will stand before God and say, "You didn't give me an opportunity to be saved". God will say, "You had the opportunity, but your heart was hard and you didn't want it!"

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 11 Israel's Future

You may have seen people wearing buttons with the initials P.B.P.G.I.N.F.W.M.Y., standing for, Please Be Patient God Is Not Finished With Me Yet! That is true of us, but in a very real sense that statement sums up the message of this chapter concerning Israel's future. Romans 9 dealt with her past, Romans 10 with her present, but in Romans 11 God lays out the fact that He has a plan and a purpose for her still. In essence this chapter is prophecy, but it helps fill in some specific gaps for us about our relationship to the Jews today. The chapter divides into three sections:

I. Israel's Relationship to God (1-12) Paul begins with a question. Has God then totally cast away and forgotten about His people Israel? Don't they have any relationship to Him anymore? The answer is, "YES, they do!" He speaks of them in two groups:

1. the remnant who are saved (1-6) He offers himself as an example. Paul was a Jew, a Benjamite, and here he is in a relationship with God. Paul then cites the example of Elijah, who felt himself so alone in the days of Ahab and Jezebel, but God told him there was a remnant of 7000 left within Israel who still were His. God has always had a remnant within those nationally called Israel who were truly in relationship with Him. And it is true now. There are thousands of Jews who have come to Christ. They are today's remnant, the portion of Israel who today belong to God. Throughout the age it will continue to be so, by God's grace. He could have cut all of them off for rejecting His Son, but He didn't!

2. the rest who are hardened (7-10) The rest of Israel has experienced a hardening, a dullness of understanding, a blindness of seeing spiritual truth. It was brought on by their own rejection of God, but it is from God. In setting them aside, He also dulled their spiritual senses, which is why it is so very difficult for Jews to be won to Christ. Now, that may not seem fair to us but see:

3. the reason which is us! (11-12) God didn't do it simply to punish them; He did it to bring salvation to us Gentiles. What great riches we have inherited through Israel's fall! We have come to know Christ, millions of us all over the world! And still God wants to use us to eventually bring about the future turning of Israel to Him, which brings us to discuss:

II. Our Relationship to Israel (13-24) Paul turns now specifically to talk to Gentile believers for a while and spell out by illustration two very crucial things for us:

1. our role toward Israel (13-14) Our assignment is to arouse Jews to envy and save some, to let them see that we have accepted their Messiah and are sharing in the blessings of Abraham which should be theirs, while they're missing out. We are not to forget the Jew but to reach him for Christ!

2. our attitude toward Israel (19-20) Here's Paul's primary concern. History has borne out the fact that it is a great danger, because time after time Christianity has become haughty against the Jew and even persecuted Jews in the name of Christ. Paul says, "Oh no, you should love them and desire to see them saved, not become proud over what you have and they don't". He uses the illustration of the meal offering to prove his point (16). It is the first handful offered to God that sanctifies the whole batch. Abraham and Israel are the firstfruits; we are the batch. Our salvation came from God's working through them, through the promises to Abraham and the transmission of God's Word and the bringing forth of Christ according to the flesh. Salvation is indeed from the Jews! Then he uses the illustration of a cultivated olive tree which had some of its branches cut off and wild olive branches grafted in. The root and the trunk are Abraham and the fathers, Israel. The natural branches are Israel today. The wild branches are the Gentiles. So God set aside Israel nationally after the cross and grafted in the Gentiles, but remember the root and the trunk hold up the branches. We are Abraham's seed by faith! And we should not be haughty. God cut off Israel for disobedience but the same will happen to the Gentiles as a whole during the Tribulation Period and Israel as a whole will be grafted back in again. They will come to Christ. Things will be reversed. In the Tribulation, only a remnant of the numerous Gentiles will be saved, but a great majority of Israel will turn to Christ! So be careful about your attitude! Jews can be easy to dislike; they can be demanding and materialistic sometimes. But love them!

III. Israel's Relationship to Us (25-32) Now, Paul turns the subject around from how we should relate to them, to how they relate to us now. But first, he sums up by giving:

1. two truths to remember Paul clears up a mystery now; he fills in what God has not yet made fully clear.

a. partial present hardening (25) Israel's national hardening is partial and it is temporary. It affects only a majority, not all Jews. Some will come to Christ. And it will only last until God comes to the place in His plan where the full number of the Gentiles have come into the fold!

b. full future deliverance (26-27) Paul quotes Isaiah to show that when Christ the Messiah finally comes to reign, Israel as a nation will turn to Him and have His blessing in the Millennium. Now, having given these truths Paul shows us:

2. two paradoxes A paradox is something that seems backward, seems reversed. It is two parallel truths that can't seem to be true at the same time, but are:

a. the paradox of Israel's situation (28-29) On the one hand:

(1) they are enemies of the Gospel individually They are outside of Christ, antagonistic to the Gospel, enemies of the church. They are individually God's enemies, just as all unsaved people are but:

(2) they are beloved for the fathers As a people, they are specially loved for the sake of the patriarchs and they continue to have a special place in God's plan and program for the world. Why? Because God's gifts and calling are irrevocable. He does not change His mind nor renig on His promises. When He promised that Israel would be His people and would inherit the land forever, they will. This generation may be individually set aside, but nationally they are still very much on God's mind and heart!

b. the paradox of God's mercy (30-32) Here's another strange thing:

(1) we (being disobedient) received mercy through them We the Gentiles were apart from God and having no hope, Ephesians says. We were pagan idolaters. We were disobedient. They were in the place of grace and blessing. But through their disobedience in rejecting Christ, we got opportunity; we got mercy. But now:

(2) they (being disobedient) receive mercy through us Now, they are apart from God; they are in the place of disobedience and we Gentiles are largely in the place of grace and blessing. Now, we are the means of bringing God's mercy and grace to them! We've all been in the place of disobedience, Jew and Gentile alike, and God has had mercy on all! And finally, Paul can't contain himself any longer:

IV. A Benediction (33-36) He breaks out into song. Let it stand for itself. How wise God is, how great His knowledge and understanding. How wonderful the plan He has laid out for the history of mankind, Jew and Gentile alike. We would never have thought of it and cannot conceive it all yet. What a wonderful, magnificent, marvelous God we have!

15-16 Paul's Closing Advice

We'll begin by considering the first half of the twelfth chapter concerning your relationship to the Lord and to other believers. If we could characterize both of those relationships with one word, it would be the word service. The relationship God wants you to have with both Him and others is that of servant. The activity God wants you to be involved in toward Him and others is service. Now first let's see:

I. The Means of Your Service (1-2) There are two things you need for genuine Christian service:

1. a body consecrated for the service of God (1) Here we have the picture of a living sacrifice. The language is that of the Old Testament. To offer means to give as a sacrifice. Now, with animals that meant to death, but dead sacrifices do God no good; they only picture Christ. God needs a living sacrifice, that is, YOU, to come to Him and say, "Lord, this body of mine is Yours and I am ready to use it in your service in any way You direct". Notice:

a. consecration is an act of the will Paul beseeches and urges; it is not mandatory. It is something you and I must do freely in light of all that God has done for us in saving us. It is also something that must continually be reaffirmed. I'm not telling you to go home tonight and pray one prayer and that's it. The presenting may start with telling Him, but it is acted out every day in the choices you make, either to help someone or pass them by, to go worship with other believers or stay home and watch TV, to lie or tell the truth. In every decision we make we must say, "Lord, my body is yours, I'll do what you want!"

b. service is a genuine act of worship The KJV says it is reasonable service; the NIV says spiritual service. The Greek says, intelligent or logical service. I would say real or genuine. The most genuine true worship is done daily by submitting to God and obeying, not like the Jew who might offer his sacrifice and go off and ignore God's law or like the Christian who might come to church and worship outwardly and then go home and live selfishly. Real worship is a moment by moment consecrating of your body to do His bidding!

2. a mind renewed by the Spirit of God (2) When I get saved, my spirit is joined to the Lord and is one with Him. But as we've just seen, to be fully serving God requires more than that. It requires you to voluntarily present your body to Him, but it also requires a changed mind as well. Our thought patterns have to change; we have to think God's thoughts, to think like He thinks. But the natural mind can't comprehend God's things, can't agree with them. Something has to be done and it has two parts:

a. resisting conformation to the world We must voluntarily resist the attempt by the world around us to shape our thinking. We must refuse to say, "Well, that's what so and so thinks, so that's right and I'll do it". The world system is a jello mold and it's trying to stuff you in and shape your thinking, to teach you to believe in humanism, to disbelieve things the Bible says are true. You have to make a conscious effort to say no!

b. assisting the transformation by the Spirit The construction here is interesting. Be transformed is a passive imperative; it is something you have to get done TO you but can't do it yourself. Somebody else has to do, it but you initiate the process by your wanting it! Who is the Somebody that renews your mind? Compare Titus 3:5; it's the Holy Spirit. He not only gives you a new nature at salvation (regeneration), but is the One who from His inside vantage point, uses His power to alter your thinking patterns. So, what am I saying? You have to consciously give the Holy Spirit moment by moment control over your mind, reject any thoughts that come from Satan, and ask Him to fill your thinking. You do it moment by moment, every time a sinful thought comes. Now look at the result:

3. a life transformed into the will of God Your life is gradually transformed, metamorphosized. Compare 2 Cor. 3:18. It's the same word used of Jesus at His transfiguration. We are changed to be like Him. and the final result is that we live out God's will, not that we figure out God's will, but we experience it and live in it daily. It's like this:

A consecrated body leads to a renewed mind which leads to a transformed life which is living out GOD'S WILL! Service is not a job we do; it is a way we live, a daily putting of our minds and bodies at God's disposal and so living out the will of God! That's how you serve God! Now here are the means you use:

II. The Manner of Your Service (3-8) If you want to talk about the nitty-gritty of the actions you do to serve God, there are two things you must do:

1. you must evaluate your performance (3-5) When you are serving God side by side with others in the church, it will be a natural thing to think, "How am I doing at this? Am I a good servant?" That's not bad, but we must leave the final evaluation up to God. However, we can take stock of ourselves from time to time. Here are four rules:

a. don't overestimate yourself It is always our tendency to think we're doing the best job we can, to think we're as committed as we can be, doing what we do as well as we can. Paul warns about overconfidence. Rather he says:

b. do it with sound judgment Sober means sound minded, sensible, according to what you know from the Word of God. Be careful to use the Word as your measuring stick and hold yourself against it.

c. do recognize it as a gift God proportions out to every believer a measure of faith, the ability to trust Him. If you've been able to trust Him and obey by serving in any way whatever, it is all a gift from God. That'll keep you humble. As you evaluate yourself and think it was neat that you led someone to Christ or helped someone out, remember it was God doing it through you!

d. don't compare yourself to others (4-5) Here is the big bug-a-boo of service. I serve in the midst of others so I tend to set them up as a yardstick and measure my performance by theirs. We the church are a body and a body has many different parts that do different things. So, we all have different functions, different places in the body. Some may serve with children, some with music, some in the office, some in the pulpit, but we're one body and are fitted together to complement each other. So don't compare yourself and feel that you have to do what someone else does! The question is, "Are you doing what God wants you to do? Are you fully submitted to Him?"

2. you must use your spiritual gift(s) (6-8) Every believer has a gift or ability that the Holy Spirit can use to serve. You don't need to complain that service is only for the talented. You already have a God-given means to serve. There are three things you are responsible to do with it:

a. you must IDENTIFY it You must figure out what it is. Perhaps that means experimenting a bit and trying some different things, taking some opportunities that come your way, or asking others what they perceive you to be fitted for. Maybe you have more than one gift but you have at least one!

b. you must EXERCISE it When you find out what God wants to use you to do in particular, then you are responsible to concentrate on it and do it. Look at the list. If it is prophecy (speaking for God or preaching), do it. If it is service (like giving material help or painting rooms), do it. If it is teaching, if it is encouraging (counseling), or giving, or leading (organizing), or showing mercy (visiting the sick, helping the needy), do it. Whatever it is that God has enabled you to do, do it, concentrate on it; exercise that gift and let everybody else exercise theirs. We complement each other!

c. you must MAXIMIZE it This shows up in the list. If you give, give generously. If you organize, do it diligently. If you help, do it cheerfully. Maximize that gift! Do it as much and as well as you can, to whatever extent God enables you.

You see, God didn't save you to be a nothing, to sit in the body and absorb from others, to have no purpose, no ministry. He might as well have taken you home. No, He saved you to serve Him, to take the ability He provides and trust Him and be used. So, start daily laying your mind and body on God's altar. Find that gift and get busy using it. Count for God! The only trouble with a living sacrifice is that it keeps trying to crawl off the altar! Stay there!

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 12:9-16 One Christian To Another

A Christian must not only concentrate on his God-given ministry, but he has to relate properly to other Christians while he is doing it. This little section consists of a series of brief commands and exhortations that spell out for us the things that should characterize our relationships with fellow believers. I have tried to group them into sections for clarity of understanding.

I. The Christian's Attributes (9) An attribute is an aspect of a person's nature and character. We most commonly use it to speak of the attributes of God like love, holiness, and so on. It is not simply that God acts in love; He IS love. It is not that He does holy acts; He IS holy. These things are part of His very nature and Paul gives us three things that should be part of our very nature:

1. loving sincerely Literally it says without hypocrisy, without play acting, without putting on a false appearance and acting differently from the way you really are. A Christian must love with his heart; his heart must care about others genuinely. I read somewhere that the English word sincere comes from the Latin sina cera which means without wax. Centuries ago, there developed the practice of hiding flaws in a certain kind of ceramic product with wax, so that vendors with genuinely valuable products would label them "without wax" to declare that there was no nice exterior with a flawed interior. Are you like that?

2. hating evil God does not merely refrain from evil; His being detests it! So should we! It is not a matter of not sinning because God says so, but secretly wishing we could. We must grow to abhor and hate evil like God does. Note it does not say evil persons, but evil, the evil that the persons do and the evil that we do!

3. clinging to good The word used here means to glue, to cement together. We must be "super-glued" to good; we must learn to love it, to cling to it with all our strength, not simply doing it because God says to do it. Now if our very being, our heart, is characterized by these three things, love for others, hatred of evil, and love of good, then we should not have any problem getting along with each other in a proper way. Those things will underlie our behavior. We must be, before we can act!

II. The Christian's Axioms (10) An axiom is a basic principle by which you operate. As far as our relationship to other believers is concerned, there are two axioms that should sum up our behavior:

1. caring tenderly for the other There are two interesting Greek compound words in this phrase. The first one rendered brotherly love is familiar to you. It is philadelphia, the love of a brother. Now Paul is not telling us THAT we should love our brothers, but HOW we should go about it, and to tell us, he uses another phileo word, philostorgos (translated by the NIV as devoted and by the KJV as kindly affectioned). It means the tender kind of love between a parent and child. The kind of love we should have for each other is the kind a mother has for the baby on her knee, the kind that cares for it and worries over it and sacrifices for it and meets its every need. As you look around at each other, that feeling of tender affection should be in your heart for each one. Christian love is not some cold statement, some mechanical giving to others; it is loving them with the same depth of emotional commitment you would give to a child when you whisper, "Daddy loves you!"

2. seeking honor for the other This is the opposite of our nature and what we've been taught. We want to take credit, to be in the limelight, to get recognition, to be honored and esteemed by others. But God says the Christian's actions should be characterized by seeking the recognition and honor for others, deferring to them, letting them be in the limelight.

Now, if we'd learn at the root of all we do to practice these two things, relationship problems would all but disappear! Just think if your children did them!

III. The Christian's Attitudes (11-12) Here Paul gives four attitudes that should characterize all that we do, whether for God or others. We must:

1. be zealous Literally it says, in zeal not sluggish but burning in spirit, serving the Lord. The Kless translation reads, not a lazeball but a fireball. Your service for God should not be something you do as you get around to it or because "nobody else will" or begrudgingly. Rather it should be like a fire burning, always wanting more fuel, flames reaching higher. There is nothing worse than a lazy servant!

2. be joyful A Christian should be a joyful person. Why? Because he has hope. Hope in the Scripture always points to the return of Christ and the guaranteed future we have with Him. A Christian should not be a grumbler and complainer, a negative cynical person. He should be a person with a deep-seated joy that comes from knowing Jesus Christ and understanding his own future glory!

3. be patient A Christian should be patient under pressure when trouble comes. He should literally remain or abide, not throw in the towel and quit! Compare 5:3-5. This produces our hope!

4. be prayerful Need I comment on that? A Christian's life should be characterized by prayer, by regular prayer, habitual prayer, faithful prayer.

Just think if we all had the three attributes mentioned, practiced the two axioms as our way of living and had these four attitudes, the church would be heaven on earth! It should be! But then Paul goes on to spell out how these things work out in some concrete actions:

IV. The Christian's Actions (13-16) There are seven key things you should be doing:

1. help your brothers When a brother has a need, we are supposed to be there to help him meet it. Now, that hits you right in the pocketbook! But remember John's words in 1 Jn. 3:17-18. Love means material sacrifice. That's what the early church did!

2. love your strangers Hospitality is the compound Greek word philoxenia which means love of strangers. Now, of course that would include all strangers, but the context here is believers. Hospitality is not having all your Christian buddies over for coffee. That's fun. Hospitality is reaching out to believers that are new, unknown to you and loving them just like those you know well, doing for them what you'd do for close friends!

3. bless your adversaries Remember the context here. Outside enemies seem to come later in verse 17 forward. I think here we have believing adversaries, those who are down on you, who have differences with you, who give you a hard time. Bless them; don't curse them! They are still brothers in Christ. Their lack of love is no excuse for you to be the same way and besides, the Holy Spirit can use it to speak to their hearts!

4. empathize with others I chose empathize over sympathize. Don't just see them happy and say, "That's nice!" or sad and say, "Too bad". Feel what they feel. Stand in their shoes and rejoice when they rejoice. Share their joy. Go through their suffering with them; cry when they cry. This kind of support does an untold amount of good!

5. harmonize with others Be like-minded. Have a harmony of thinking with other believers. Of course, that's only possible if you concentrate on doing what Phil. 2:2-5 says, Let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus... It doesn't mean we always have to agree on details, but we should have harmony of goal and purpose and attitude. Do your best to harmonize.

6. socialize with others, not just with people who are like yourself, but with people that are different, with people who dress poorly and color their hair green. Be with people whom you might regard as lowly, with people that may be less intelligent than you are. See Jas. 2:1-9. The NIV's willing to associate or the KJV's word condescend is literally be carried away with, that is, make a point of it; go out of your way to reach out to people like this. Don't be too proud for it!

7. epitomize others Literally it says, Do not become wise concerning yourselves. Don't set yourself up as the epitome of what a Christian should be. Epitomize others instead. Find a model out there who's ahead of you in spiritual maturity and epitomize somebody like that rather than yourself. Don't ever think you've "arrived" in spiritual things.

Now I know that's a pretty long list of expectations and a pretty tall order too! But I didn't write it; I just explained it! God wrote it! It's up to you and I to do it. But when we do, when we as a group of believers learn to act like this to each other, then Jn. 13:34-25 will start to come true. Outsiders will see the love we have for each other and recognize that it comes from Jesus Christ and accept Him.

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 12:17-21 "Dear Enemy..."

At verse 17 Paul moves from our relationship to others in the body of Christ to our treatment of enemies, those who do evil to us, those who hurt us or mistreat us or take advantage of us. My assumption is that this is basically dealing with unsaved folks, though from time to time you may have enemies even within the body of Christ, but there you have the Mt. 18 route to follow in getting help from the church. My guess is that few of us think we have any enemies. But we do. They are probably anonymous to us. It might be the business that takes advantage of you by selling you a defective product at an inflated price; it may be those who are standing against the cause of Christ in general and trying to hinder Christianity in its stand against moral evils or humanism like the ACLU or the porn industry. But sooner or later you'll meet one in person, at work, at school or in the neighborhood and then all we study now will hit home! First, Paul lists:

I. Your Perils in Dealing with Enemies (17-18) Dealing with enemies is very dangerous, not so much because of what they might do to you, but because of what they might cause you to do! There are three great dangers:

1. not realizing the character of your reaction The natural human reaction to anything is payback. We do unto others AS they do to us! So, when somebody steals from us, our human nature tells us that, given the opportunity, we should take from them and we feel it is FAIR. But in reality, stealing is not FAIR but EVIL! Two wrongs don't make a right. If you slander me and I know about it, my natural reaction is to slander you. But slander is wrong whether it is done to you or by you! The desire for vengeance tends to cloud our thinking, to lead us to sin and justify ourselves in doing what we would never do otherwise!

2. not thinking how your action will affect others The Greek word for careful is interesting; it means "to think ahead". Oftentimes when we are injured by an enemy, we react instead of thinking, thinking, for instance, that others are watching, that others see our life. Unsaved people see our life. If others see us do evil and take vengeance, what a blot it puts on the name of Christ that we bear! If we don't watch out, Satan can use an enemy to cause us to do lots of damage!

3. not seeking to live in peace God's goal for us is to be able to have a peaceful relationship with all men. The danger is that we may allow a hurt to fester and become a grudge and deliberately throw out the goal! Now, Paul recognizes:

a. it may not be possible It may be the enemy will not allow it, that they will always make trouble for you, however:

b. you are responsible for your part If any portion of the responsibility for creating a peaceful relationship falls to you, if there's anything you can do to make it happen, then you are responsible to do it! It may mean apologizing for something or doing an act of kindness, but the danger is in giving up and being party to the strife that separates you!

II. Your Premise in Dealing with Enemies (19) In everything you do, you operate from some basic premise and in this area, you have a very clear one:

1. justice is God's province The words revenge and avenge have a very bad meaning to us. But both words in Greek are compounds of the noun dike which means justice. God is not talking about a selfish kind of getting even; He is talking about the doing of justice, about a person getting the just punishment for the offense he has committed. And justice is God's realm; it belongs to Him and here's why:

a. He is the offended party David knew it and prayed so in Ps. 51, Against thee, thee only have I sinned... It is not simply that your enemy has done something to hurt you; he has broken the moral law of God, just as a criminal has not only injured the victim, but broken the law of the land. Therefore, the judge must mete out the penalty of the law. So, it is really God's place as the offended party, the upholder of the Law, to mete out punishment; it is not up to you to do it for yourself! Further:

b. He is the only qualified Judge The saddest part about personal revenge is that it is blind; it doesn't look at the facts. Besides, only God knows all the facts, all the intents of the heart, all the hidden circumstances. There may be things involved in that enemy's action toward you that would totally change your reaction if you knew them. God is the only one qualified to give out just punishment and believe me:

2. He will see that it is carried out He says, "I WILL repay!" Look where Paul quotes this from, Deut. 32:35. This is a prophecy looking ahead to the Tribulation and Millennium, about how God will repay those who hurt Israel. But the key thought is not carried over to Romans, IN DUE TIME. We want justice now; God says "in My time". It may not be until after death, but be sure of this: the Judge of all the earth WILL do right; He will repay! So:

3. you must not try to take it from Him Don't steal His place; leave Him the room to do it. Don't try to be what you cannot be by avenging yourself. David had his enemy Saul lying asleep at his feet; his man had a spear in his hand ready to kill him. But David said, As surely as the Lord lives, the Lord Himself will strike him; either his time will come and he will die or he will go into battle and perish... David said, "As much as he's hurt me and is trying even now to kill me, justice belongs to God and God will take care of it in due time; I will not try to usurp His place!" So exactly what are you to do when you have an enemy? Simply avoid him as much as possible and try to coexist?

III. Your Position in Dealing with Enemies (20-21) Here God lines out for you your course of action!

1. your action: do good Don't just evade; do good to your enemies. Jesus taught that very thing, Love your enemies and pray for those who persecute you. Here Paul spells it out. He says to meet your enemy's needs. If he's hungry, feed him; if he's thirsty, give him drink. I might add, if he's stranded by the road, help him. If he's sick, take him a meal. If he has problems, try to help however you can. Find out what his needs are and love him by trying in positive ways to meet them! Don't sit back and figure he deserves it! Maybe he does, but that's God's realm; yours is to love him like God loved you when you were His enemy!

2. your reason: Now we have to cope with that famous passage about the coals of fire which is a quote from Solomon in Prov. 25:21-22. What does it mean?

a. not vengeance What it looks like is, "Keep doing good to him and it compounds his judgment; get your vengeance through doing good." But that is totally inconsistent with the context of both passages. Now, one obvious reason is:

b. to produce repentance Hopefully the enemy will be won over by love and become a friend, if not become a believer! Some commentaries note that the Egyptians centuries earlier had a ritual of repentance that involved carrying a pan of hot coals on the head as a symbol of sorrow over misdoing. Whether Solomon knew about that or not, I don't know, but the thought fits nicely. Christianity has always striven to convert its enemies; Paul himself was a converted enemy! But the bottom line reason is:

c. to show obedience The part Paul doesn't quote is, the Lord will reward you! For what? Obedience! For doing what He says to do whether you feel like it or not! Actually, the words in doing this are not in the Hebrew. The Greek translators added them and Paul retained them. Heaping coals of fire is probably a reference to the custom of starting a fire from borrowed coals (there were no matches) and Orientals often carry things on the head. If one would heap coals in the pan, then some would surely be alive by the time the person got home to start his fire. I think the meaning is, "If your enemy hungers, feed him; if he thirsts, give drink; if he needs fire, HEAP coals in a pan and give them to him; don't be stingy!" That is obedience and the Lord will reward it!

3. your admonition: don't let evil conquer you Instead, you conquer it by continuing to do good! Overcome is the Greek word for conquer. There is a battle going on, but it is not the outward one between your enemy and you. It is a spiritual one. Don't let evil conquer you by causing you to sin and try to take personal vengeance. Instead, you conquer evil by continually going out of your way to do good to your enemies and then leave the results to God!

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 13:1-7 Taxation Without Hesitation

Paul now moves into another area of the Christian's relationships: the Christian and the government. Now remember first, that Paul is writing to believers in Rome, the capital city of the world, the seat from which world government was exercised. There was a constant intrigue and power struggle connected with the emperorship and plots against the government were common. In fact, the emperor of the day was none other than Nero, who in another five years or so would set up the first wholesale Roman persecution of Christians, trying to blame them for the burning of Rome and remove suspicion from himself. Nero started out pretty fairly in his reign but after a few years yielded to low passions and was engaged in immorality, homosexuality, and murders! How should a Christian relate to government and especially to one like this? Should we bring about the Kingdom of God with force of arms and join in rebellion against such wicked governments? This may well become a real issue for us some day. There is growing interference of government in religion today. Some day we may face the question in a real way, "Can I be subject to a government which is so unjust?" Paul lays down a rule:

I. The Rule of Subjection to Authority (1) We are to be subject to higher authorities, especially in this case, the government, but not limited to government alone. There is a family authority structure in the home. There is a spiritual authority structure in the church. There is a social authority structure in the nation. And wherever we fall in those authority structures, we are to be subject to the authority that is over us, whether it be parents or elders or policemen and government officials! And what it means is obeying their laws, the rules of the house, the teaching of the elders, or the laws of the land! Notice two specific things here:

1. everyone is under authority There is a tendency born in us to think that we are the exception. The rules apply to everyone but us! No, each of us is subject to the authorities that are over us and we have a duty to obey them.

2. subjection is a voluntary act We must submit ourselves. God does not say, "Disobey until you are caught or forced to obey." He says voluntarily obey! Compare 1 Jn. 3:4 which says, sin is lawlessness. The Greek word anomia means acting as if there were no law, no authority. The spirit of resisting established authority is at the root of all sin. That's why Satan fell and where Adam and Eve went wrong. It is now our nature to rebel against authority. But for the sake of God, we have to voluntarily place ourselves under our authorities by obeying. Now there are three things this does NOT mean. It doesn't mean that:

a. we should not use legal opportunities to improve our government and laws or protest injustice We're free to vote, to write letters, or to protest abortion or other injustices.

b. we should not remove ourselves from under an oppressive authority We are free to quit our job or flee a country.

c. we should disobey God We must always obey Him above any earthly authority. Compare Acts 4:19, 5:29.

II. The Reasons for Subjection to Authority (5) This verse gives us two reasons why we should obey authorities and summarizes verses 1-4. They are conscience and punishment. We need to have:

1. a holy conviction of the necessity We obey because we are convinced in our hearts that it is the right thing to do before God. Here is why:

a. all authority is of God (1b) The Greek word is exousia which means authority. God is a God of order; He established authority in the universe beginning with Himself and then among men. He invented the concept of rightful authority. God is in fact the author of human government, the basis of which was given to Noah and family when they got off the ark. God told them that mankind was to police his ranks and punish the shedding of blood. So, positions of authority like ruler, president, or parent, or elder, are God-established positions. Further:

b. those in authority are God-ordained it is not just the positions, but the people in those positions who are God's instruments. That applies to whoever is there! You may say, "What about evil rulers?" Well, take the case of cases. In the Tribulation a vile wicked man will very nearly rule the world and will persecute Jews and Christians mercilessly. Yet the fact that he will rule is part of God's ordained and predicted plan! I heard a Chinese believer say, "God closed China's door. Mao was God's instrument!" So, we are not only to obey good men, but to submit to the authority of all who hold it! So:

c. to resist authority is to resist God (2) If authority is God's and if God superintends who gets into authority, then to resist and disobey the authority is to disobey God and is sin, which the Christian is never to do deliberately and:

d. to resist authority is to bring judgment God chastens disobedient believers! Usually by that very authority which they disobey! Parents discipline disobedient kids. If you cheat on your taxes, sooner or later God is liable to see that the IRS audits you!

2. a healthy fear of the penalty Now, conscience should be the primary reason for obedience but fear of punishment doesn't hurt either! Here Paul examines:

a. the ministry of rulers (3-4) Twice he says that rulers are God's servants; they serve a special purpose in the plan of God and it is two-fold:

(1) to promote good To do good things for those who do good. To provide incentive for people to do right! And conversely:

(2) to punish evil, even to the extent of the sword, that is, death! Government is what God instituted to prevent the world from becoming as wicked as it was before the flood. Government and authority in general is what keeps man's sin nature from running rampant, resulting in total anarchy and degradation. Imagine if there were no laws and no police, what would happen! Even the worst of government is better than no government at all in the long run.

b. the message for you

(1) you will be rewarded for doing good, at least under any normal government. In most countries you will be praised and justified for doing what is right and good in most cases, for honesty, hard work, caring, and so on.

(2) you will be punished for doing evil If you do what is evil, the government will punish you. And that is only right. You should not be able to steal and get away with it or hurt someone and get by with it. So, be obedient and do good and you won't normally have to worry! Have a healthy fear of being disobedient!

III. The Range of Subjection to Authority (6-7) Now, just what areas does this cover? Paul says broadly, To all their due! You have debts and obligations that you owe in various realms; be sure to meet all of them. Then he spells out four specific examples:

1. tribute The word here means taxes levied on a subject nation, like those Rome levied on her conquered provinces. In this respect the Boston tea party to protest the tea tax was not exactly a biblical idea! If we're ever conquered and a tax is levied on us, pay it! If you're ever under a foreign government, obey it!

2. revenue means taxes for the support of the civil government. The whole rationale for taxes is in verse 6. Rulers do God's job and are entitled to support from the people. Tax evasion is not just a crime but a sin!

3. fear The NIV word respect is literally fear. We are only told to fear six times in the New Testament and every time it relates to God. Compare 1 Pet. 2:17, Mt. 10:28. I suspect this verse is almost like, Give to Caesar what is Caesar's and to God what is God's! Pay your taxes to the government and give to God the holy awe, respect, and obedience that is due to Him above all others!

4. honor Here we have the respect due to men, to the king, the president, a parent, or whoever. Give to those in authority the proper respect that goes with it.

In short, authority applies to everyone and to everything, from taxes to registering for the draft, to the speed limit, to littering, to copyright laws, even to creel limits on fishing. We don't like to hear it and we all violate it from time to time, sometimes intentionally, sometimes not. But let's try together to be more careful, even in some of these little things, not only because it is right but because of the wonderful testimony it will be for Jesus Christ!

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 13:8-14 On Loving Your Neighbor

Since 12:1 Paul has talked about our relationship with God, with fellow believers, with enemies, and with the government. Here he proceeds to talk about how we should relate to our neighbor. Now, the question you're tempted to ask is, "Well, he's covered everybody from other Christians to enemies, just who is my neighbor?" Doesn't that ring a bell? Somebody asked Jesus that once when He had started talking about neighbors and to answer it, He told the parable of the Good Samaritan to make the point that your neighbor is anyone you come in contact with who needs you. They may be saved or unsaved; you may know them or not know them; they may live close to you or far away from you. The NIV translates well the term as fellow man. Paul is going to tell us how to relate to other people in general, who are not specifically our brethren in the local church nor our enemies, but just anybody who crosses our path. And he tells us that we have two very major responsibilities to every person who comes into our lives. The first is to:

I. Love Him (8-10) Here Paul harks back to the words of Jesus, Love one another! and to the words from Leviticus which Jesus used to sum up the Law, Love thy neighbor as thyself. If you could read Greek, you would notice that the word used here for love is the same word that was used back in 12:9 about our brothers in Christ, agape. We are to love all people with the same kind of love, the sacrificial, giving, committed love that God had in sending His Son. It is not that you love your brothers and sisters more than others. For them you add to your agape some philadelphia, that special attachment to family members. But the base line of all our human relationships is to be agape love, the love of God. Why?

1. it is a debt we owe him (8a) This verse is not a prohibition against borrowing money. The NIV does better than the KJV which says, Owe no man anything. Debt is one form of what you owe in verse 7 and continues the thought. Some people you owe taxes, some you owe honor, and all of them you owe love! The Bible never prohibits borrowing; it only cautions against it (Prov. 22:7). It simply says to pay what you owe on time. But the debt here is not money, but love and it is an outstanding debt, an eternal debt, one you are always owing and can never pay off. And you owe it, not because others have loved you back, but because God has said so! He has declared you an eternal debtor to Him for what He has done for you, but He has assigned payment on that debt to others! And since you could never begin to pay back the love you owe Him, your love debt to others is infinite! You can never say, "I quit! I've done my part!"

2. it is a duty we owe God (8b-10) It is not only a natural response to God's love, but a command that God has given us. Now Paul looks back to the Law of Moses, specifically to the 10 commandments and especially to those that concern others. And he says it is clear that God has a specific way in mind that we are to treat others and:

a. love is the summation of all duties If you had to list every "don't" about expected behavior, the list would get mighty long. And if you check the Old Testament, it makes a pretty good attempt at it! But there would always be some other "don't" that would be missed. Moses could never have written, "Don't let the air out of your neighbor's tires" or "Don't become a surrogate mother!" So, the command to love your neighbor sums up all the duties, because verse 10 says that love works NO harm to a neighbor. So, you may be pleasing God by avoiding all the "don'ts" you know of, but the real duty is to love. Yet love is more:

b. love is the consummation of all duties It is the fulfillment of the law. The same Greek word is found in Col. 2:9 which says that in Christ dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead (pleroma). Love is more than a short form for all the specific duties we have; it is the fulfillment, the final end result, what the law was meant to produce in our lives. We are no longer bound to obey the Law with all its don'ts, but we have a duty to God to do far more, to fulfill the Law by demonstrating the love for others that it never could produce! Now the second responsibility we have to our fellow man is to:

II. Live Before Him (11-14) Consider this section as a whole. Now Paul is going to spell out some specific kinds of behavior for us. And the thought is that we not only need to love our neighbor, but we need to live before him. We not only act TOWARDS him but IN FRONT OF him. And here's why:

1. our motive (11-12a) Jesus Christ is coming again! We have to know what time it is! In life, you don't know how to act unless you're aware what time it is and what is next on the schedule. So it is spiritually. The next event is the return of Christ and that means three things:

a. the danger of oversleeping Why is it dangerous? For the same reason it's dangerous to oversleep in the morning; you don't get done what needs done. If you oversleep spiritually and fail to live a godly life before others and be a testimony to them, it may not get done before Jesus comes. And I needn't remind you of:

b. the passing of time It goes so fast. It seems just yesterday we were children or young marrieds or our children were kids. And the older we get the more we are impressed that time is passing. Even though we don't know the day or the hour when Christ will come, there is one thing we know; it's nearer today than when we first got saved. It's nearer today than last year, than yesterday. Time to work is passing; opportunity is constantly being shortened. And what we are really seeing is:

c. the drawing near of Christ's return The night is this age; the day is the age to come. The day is drawing near. It is approaching fast. The Bible never says it will be tomorrow, but always that it is drawing near swiftly and will arrive suddenly. Before we are ready for it, the trumpet will sound and we will meet Christ. And that should make us remember our duty to live right moment by moment! Now what is:

2. our method (12b-14) How are we to go about living this Christian life before our watching neighbors? Paul gives a two-fold principle: Put on and put off. The same principle is found in Eph. 4:22-24 and Col. chapter 3. We must by God's power eliminate ungodly habits and actions from our lives and replace them with godly ones. First, he says:

a. put off dark deeds, deeds that belong to darkness, to unbelief. In verse 14 he spells it out as gratifying your flesh. Don't even think about how to gratify those illicit desires that come from your flesh. They are inconsistent with your new life in Christ. And he spells some of them out in three categories:

(1) behavioral inconsistencies The NIV term orgies is better the NAS words carousing and drunkenness. Carousing is the behavior that results from the drunkenness. Getting drunk or stoned on drugs and the loose behavior it causes must be put away; they are inconsistent with a godly life.

(2) sexual inconsistencies The word immorality is literally going to bed (that's where KJV gets chambering). It means adultery and fornication. Debauchery is shameless conduct; the word is used in 2 Pet. 2:7 of the way of life in Sodom and includes all other kinds of sexual perversion. These things must be put away; they are inconsistent with godly living.

(3) social inconsistencies Dissension means arguing and fighting. And you know what jealousy is. There is no room for these either. All of these things are inconsistent. When we do them, the watching neighbor is prevented from seeing Jesus in us and may be lost. What we must do rather is to:

b. put on the armor of light which is identified for us in verse 14 as the Lord Jesus Christ! It is the same Greek word you would use to put on your coat. We must cover ourselves with Him, wrap ourselves with Him, let Him fill our lives until love floods every human relationship we have and the life we live shows Him to our neighbors.

During the Korean war, a lady and a two year old child were walking down the road. An enemy patrol threw a grenade on to the road. Just before it exploded the mother threw herself in front of the child. It exploded and as she lay dying, she said, "Don't worry son, Jesus will take care of you." Later an American patrol came by and one of the men saw the boy crying over his mother. He took his hand and said, "Why don't you come with me; I'll take care of you." The little boy looked up and his eyes got wide with wonder. He asked, "Are you Jesus?" As far as this world is concerned, we are! Are you loving your neighbor and that means living a Jesus-filled life before him?

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 14 When Brothers Disagree

In chapters 12-13 Paul has been talking about the Christian's relationships. Chapter 14 he devotes to the very special area of how we should act when we disagree with our brothers in Christ on debatable things. Now, please be clear that as in 1 Cor. 8-10, we are not talking about issues clearly proclaimed as sinful by the Bible. Paul uses the eating of meat and the observing of special days as his examples. When it comes to issues like these, where sincere Christians differ in their opinions, there are three major principles we must follow:

I. We Must Give Reception (1-3) We must genuinely accept those who disagree with us on these things and regard them as fellow believers. We must fellowship with them and not, Paul says, with the purpose of deciding their conduct. Sometimes we receive others on false premises, not to accept them as sincere followers of Christ, but to make them like us or to argue them into our point of view. Rather, we must recognize that Christians are all at varying levels of understanding and maturity and therefore:

1. we must not look down on the "weaker" Here's a man who won't eat meat (probably because he's afraid some of it might have been offered to idols). We look at him and call him a "weaker" brother because he doesn't know what we know. We're not to treat him with contempt, to mock and scorn him. We all say "Amen" to that, but then I say that over here is a man who believes the KJV is the only Bible, that women should never wear pants, that boys' hair must be cut at a certain length. How do you feel about him? There is to be no looking down.

2. we must not condemn the "stronger" Sometimes we'll find the shoe on the other foot. Another Christian does something I just wouldn't feel the liberty to do. He is, in this case, the "stronger" brother. Boy, my natural reaction is to condemn him, to point out his action as a sin and his walk as hypocritical. You see:

3. God has accepted all of us in Christ We're not trying to dabble in sin and get away with things. We're both sincerely trying to please Christ and God loves us as His children and uses us because we're saved!

II. We Must Understand Responsibility (4-12) We are all servants of the Lord Jesus Christ and we must know that:

1. a servant is accountable to his own master (4) A household servant is not out to please the guests, but the master. An employee stands or falls in the eyes of his boss, not others. If you come into the office and tell my secretary to do something but I have her doing something else, who is she accountable to? We have no business judging someone else's servants, judging other believers. They must answer to God. In fact:

2. we must each do our best to please God (5-9) Each of us must determine the best we can how to please our Master. You see:

a. we are to live to God not ourselves We are servants who belong to God. Our lives should be lived unto Him. The goal of our lives should be to please Him. We do not live to ourselves; we are not the ones who will grade our own lives. If we did, we'd all think we were just perfect the way we are. It is not us we must please, but Him. And to do that:

b. we must do everything in faith (22-23) We must do everything in complete confidence that it is pleasing to God. If there is the slightest doubt about doing this or that, then don't do it, because to you it is sin and you would feel yourself to be sinning. And if the goal of your life is pleasing God, that's contrary. You don't want to do anything that would displease God in any way, so WHEN IN DOUBT, DON'T! And here's why:

3. we will all stand Christ's judgment (10-12) Every servant has a day of reckoning, a day of giving account, a day when the Master looks at the finished work and sees whether he's done what he was told. And we too, all of us, Presbyterian and Baptist and independent, narrow-minded and broad-minded alike, will stand at Christ's judgment seat. If you can find fault with your brother, just think how well God knows you and all the fault He can find with you! You see, I am not responsible to make every Christian be like me. I am responsible to please God. So is the other. I have to give account and a critical spirit is not one of the things I want on my record! If we think of that day, we might be a little humbler now!

III. We Must Practice Restraint (13-21) Here is the same principle spelled out in 1 Cor. 8. In verse 13 we have:

1. the principle stated (13) Our responsibility is not to judge whether others are stumbling, but to make sure that we do not cause any brother to stumble. We are not to become a stumbling block, not to do anything which will cause our brother to regress spiritually or to fall into sin. The most important thing is not that we look at others to see what they do, but to look at ourselves to see how what we do affects others.

2. the principle explained (14-19) Now he spells out what he means fully. First, he wants us to:

a. understand real versus esteemed uncleanness (14) No food is literally nothing. Nothing is unclean of itself. There are no clean and unclean foods like the Jews had. There are no sacred and non-sacred days, no clean and unclean people. (NOTE: He is not talking about directly mentioned sins here, but non-moral actions.) Yet, if a person feels something like that is wrong, then for him it is! If he feels that mowing the lawn on Sunday is wrong, then for him it is. If he feels all dancing is sinful, for him it is. The key here is not enforcing my personal estimation on others as reality! So, those things which we don't consider wrong, can actually be wrong to others, and we want to be careful not to coerce others into doing that which is wrong for them! Paul has three don't's for us:

b. don't do what will harm others (15) Even if you have perfect personal freedom to do it before the Lord, if it will harm somebody else, if it will prove spiritually detrimental or mar their spiritual lives, don't do it.

c. don't do what others will speak evil of (16) He's not saying here to go around and try to prove your case and teach everybody that your liberty is not evil but good. Just the opposite. Don't do something that in itself might be fine, but you know it will be evil-spoken-of by others, that it will give them occasion to condemn you. That does not help anyone.

d. don't major on minors (17-19), which is really what all this is. The Kingdom of God is not all about what you eat or drink or wear or watch or how you dress or what you enjoy. It is about spiritual matters. Those things are very unimportant compared to having the peace and joy of the Holy Spirit and a righteous life. Don't major on minors as so many of our fundamental brethren do. Instead, major on building up, on edifying, looking for ways to build others up!

3. the principle summarized (20-21) Put God's work in the lives of others first. Don't ruin what God is doing for the sake of a small thing like food. Do nothing that will cause anyone to stumble. It seems to me that the best summary of the whole case is in verse 22a and it is the one thing we have most ignored in Christianity. We should keep our opinions on debatable things primarily between us and God and not broadcast them to others and cause controversy. Instead, we have often nailed them to our doorposts and brought divisions between ourselves!

Two goats met one another on a narrow plank across a river. If they were human beings, they would have argued about who had the right to pass and who should jump off and get wet. But the goats figured out all by themselves how one could help the other and at the same time help himself. One lay down and let the other leap over it! That's the attitude we must have in debatable things with our brothers. We must lay down our rights and let them pass so that both of us will be better off for it.

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 15:1-13 Principles For Christian Living

This portion of chapter 15 is really a continuation of chapter 14. There Paul talked about how to act when we disagree with each other on minor issues. Now he proceeds to give us five general principles for our Christian lives together. The first one is:

I. Bearing With One Another (1-3) Dare I say "Putting up with one another?" You see, spiritual strength is not in how much you know scripturally or how clearly you understand what the Bible teaches and can prove it. The really strong believer is the one who can bear with the failings of the weaker brethren in love, the one who can put up with their immaturity and inexperience and lack of knowledge and care for them and bless them anyway! There are three aspects to this:

1. not pleasing ourselves One clear mark of maturity is not insisting on your own way, not always looking to get what you want or enforce your thinking. And, of course, Christ is our ultimate example in this. He, the very Wisdom of God, the Lord of all, did not seek to please Himself, to do what He preferred. He lived a life and died a death of sacrifice, of bearing with, and so must we.

2. pleasing our neighbor That doesn't mean we always do everything others want, but that we try to do what is best for them, that which will cause them to be edified or built up in the long run. Your bearing with some brother's scruples and giving up some of your own liberty will be an example and testimony to him in the long run, rather than arguing and insisting on your own way. And it is also:

3. pleasing God, which is the most important thing of all. Paul quotes the prophecy of Ps. 69:7-9, saying that Christ endured suffering and scorn for the sake of the Father and for the good of others. It was true during His ministry. Verse 9a has a particular fulfillment in the cleansing the Temple and the rebuff He got for that. and of course, the ultimate fulfillment was the cross and the mocking crowd which jeered at Him, but He pleased God and stayed there! If Christ lived and died, not to please Himself, but to please God and to benefit others and had to endure suffering to that extent, then we ought to do the same and be willing to endure and bear with our weaker brethren in some of these minor matters! I thank God for how people in my churches have loved me and put up with me as I grew and learned and maybe insisted on some unimportant things and gave me room to grow! We must do that for others!

II. Learning Through the Scriptures (4) Now Paul talks about what he has just done in using the Scriptures to encourage us. The Bible can play a real part in our endurance of things. Compare 5:3-5. The process of life is that suffering produces perseverance which produces character which produces hope. Through suffering we learn patient endurance which molds our character which gives us a confident trust in God for our future. Now the Bible plays a role in this process alongside of our life experiences in two ways:

1. the Bible is our paraclete It is the encouragement of the Scriptures that helps us to endure. The word encouragement is literally paraclete, the same word Jesus used to describe the Holy Spirit. It means one called alongside to help. When trouble comes, we turn to the Word of God and there we see men and women of God who have endured suffering before us and we are encouraged to follow their example and endure. We see the precious promises of God and the love of God and are strengthened to endure.

2. the Bible is our hope-builder The end result of the Scriptures is that we get hope, a confident assurance that God has always kept His people and He will keep us too; our future is in His hands. We look at the Bible and it builds our confidence to endure. So, the principle that Paul is teaching is: read it, search it for encouragement and example, and make it a part of your life!

III. Uniting With Our Brethren (5-6) Not only are we to bear with them, but we are to have a spirit of unity, a singleness of mind and heart. Now, notice four things about our unity:

1. it is granted by God Paul prays God will grant it; it is not something we work up ourselves by simply trying to be alike. As God works in each life and conforms us to be more like Him, we are drawn to be more like each other. We need to pray for this too and ask God to make it work in our own lives.

2. it is toward one another It is among ourselves; between brethren. It only works in the context of all parties being believers.

3. it is according to Christ That is, following His example. Here is our part. The more we follow the example of Christ and work at reproducing His attitude and values in ourselves, the more we become like each other.

4. it is a unity of purpose It is not an identity of thinking or speech. It is a unity of goal and life purpose, to glorify God. We may have differing ideas and thoughts on how to go about it, but if our end goal is the same, to glorify God, then we will have a tremendous unity in spite of all our differences. If we have the same heart, our mouths will follow!

IV. Receiving One Another (7-12) We must accept one another regardless of our differences, our race, background, or anything else. We must receive one another on the basis of our faith in Christ as Savior. Now in this, of course, we have:

1. Christ our example Paul quotes Ps. 18:49, Deut. 32:43, Ps. 117:1, and Is. 11:1,10, all in a string, to prove the point which I'll try to simplify about Christ:

a. He belonged to the Jews He came in fulfillment of God's promise to the Jews; He was first and foremost the Jewish Messiah, the Savior of Israel. He had to do that; the promise was made. But:

b. He received the Gentiles by grace They were without God in the world, Ephesians tells us. They had no hope; they were strangers to God's covenants of promise. God didn't have to accept and save them. And remember, THEM IS US! God was under no obligation to accept us, to provide salvation for us. He didn't have to save anybody. But He did. In love and grace, He reached out and received those who were different, those who were lost and hopeless. And the Scriptures bear abundant testimony in every part, the Law, the Prophets, and the Psalms, that God would accept the Gentiles by His grace. Now, the point is that if God accepted us:

2. we must receive those who differ If God would receive us poor lost Gentiles and accept us just like we are without making us become Jews first, then we need to practice grace like that and receive those among us who differ in much smaller ways! We need to receive them regardless of their background, their income, the way they dress, whether they talk too much or too little. If we have a singleness of heart, then we must accept each other and seek to edify each other. Verse 7 tells us this is what causes people to praise God. When we bite and devour each other and fight within our ranks as Christians, the world sits back and says "I don't want that!"

V. Being Filled With Hope (13) God wants us to have a certain confidence about the future. He wants to fill us with an unspeakable joy and a peace that passes understanding. And those things will give us a sure confidence about our future. The only requirement I see in the verse is, as you trust Him, that is, as we keep on trusting Him. And as we do, He will not only fill us with hope, but make us overflow with it! We'll overflow with the certainty that He's in control and our future is secure. And since we know that, we can endure anything. We can bear with each other and put up with our differences. We can endure the guff we get from the world, all because we know it will be worth it all when we see Jesus!

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 15:14-33 A Missionary Heart

At verse 14 Paul turns to a more personal level of writing as he concludes his letter to Rome. The pronouns I, me, and my now appear regularly. And what we really have is a glimpse into the heart of a missionary in the midst of his work. I think there are two ways in which we can apply this section to ourselves: 1) we can learn something about the missionaries that we support and how they think and how to pray for them and 2) we can get a missionary heart for ourselves. We can take Paul's spiritual values and make them our own. The text divides easily into three sections.

I. Paul's Missionary Principles (14-22) The first thing you see is Paul's explanation of:

1. his position (14-16) He is an apostle, THE apostle to the Gentiles. He wants them to know that He writes with that kind of authority to them, even though he has never been there. They don't know him; they have never met him, yet he wants them to accept his letter as from God and heed it and prepare for him to visit later. Then he shares what makes him tick:

2. his purpose (17-18) In summary, it is to glorify God the Father and Christ Jesus. A missionary heart has no room for pride. It has no room for looking back at its own accomplishments and thinking, "My, look at what I have done!" A missionary heart knows Gal. 2:20, Yet not I, but Christ lives in me. Christ does the work; I am but a channel of blessing, an empty vessel He uses and fills for His purpose. What makes you tick?

3. his past Now we see three principles that have governed his ministry as we have it recorded for us in Acts. He ministered:

a. in every way (18b-19a) He ministered by what he said; he was always preaching and teaching and writing to his churches. He ministered by what he did; he was stoned and shipwrecked but he got up and went on. His behavior testified of his faith. He ministered by the power of God through him in signs and wonders. God used him to heal the sick and raise the dead. God did special things through him, but the point is that Paul used every available way to reach others. Do you? Do you take advantage of the opportunities God sends your way, of the talents you have?

b. to everywhere (19b) He had been from Jerusalem all thru Asia Minor, Macedonia, and Greece, all the way to Illyricum (the province next to Italy itself). Paul didn't see the world with blinders on. He didn't see just his own area. His heart was concerned for the world. Is yours?

c. to everyone (20-22) His heart was stirred for those who had never heard. He wanted them to hear too. He didn't want to duplicate efforts, to repeat the work of others and forget about those who had never heard the first time. His heart was concerned for lost people and especially those who were really lost!

II. Paul's Missionary Plans (23-29) Paul's plans were built on his principles. He spells out what he hopes to do and it is summed up in three places that we too have to be concerned about:

1. Spain - the regions beyond (23-24a) Spain was the longing of Paul's heart. Every place else had heard. The eastern Mediterranean had heard, Rome had heard. He wanted to go beyond, to Spain. We need a heart that longs to reach the unreached! But that was not Paul's only longing:

2. Rome - the established field (24) Did he just want to visit and vacation there? Look back at 1:11-13; he wanted to feed, fellowship, and have fruit among them! He wanted to build the saints. It was not enough to win converts. He wanted to make disciples and grow them into workers for Christ! And we must long for that too! But Paul could not forget:

3. Jerusalem - the home base (25-28) He was enroute there from Corinth as he wrote. He was taking an offering that had been collected in Greece among the Gentile churches for the poor saints in Jerusalem. He wanted to minister to the needs of the home base as well. Every missionary ought to be concerned for their home church; we ought to be as well, whether in a material way like this or a spiritual way. This offering would do more than help the poor; it would cement the Jew and Gentile churches together. See 2 Cor. 9:12-13. It was a spiritual thing. Paul wanted spiritual growth at home too! We must have a balanced vision like his: the regions beyond, the established fields, and the home base. All are important. And as every missionary knows, nothing of this can be accomplished apart from prayer so we have:

III. Paul's Missionary Petition (30-33) This is Paul's "prayer letter" to his Roman supporters. And in it he tells them:

1. how to pray (30) Two things are noteworthy here. First is the word struggle which is the Greek word agonizo. Paul wanted them in their praying to agonize, to struggle, to wrestle. He wanted their prayer to be sincere and fervent and deep, not simply "God bless Paul!" Then there is the word join. When they prayed, they joined Paul. Missionary work is not done alone. It is co-laboring. It is a joint work of prayer and deeds. When we pray, we labor together with those who work. But Paul gets specific:

2. what to pray (31-32) There are three things he wants prayer for and they are the same for all missionaries:

a. for protection He wanted prayer to be kept from unbelievers. He knew it was dangerous to go to Jerusalem, but it was dangerous anywhere for him, it seems!

b. for effectiveness Some folks don't want the good that you're trying to do for them. Paul wants prayer to be received by those he ministers to, especially the Christians! He wants to be effective!

c. for direction He wanted to go to Rome and be refreshed, but only by God's will, or Lord willing! He wanted God's direction in the next step.

Protection, effectiveness, direction. These are the very things our missionaries need, the very basics of our prayer life for them. All three of those requests were answered but not quite as Paul planned. Paul was delivered from the Jews (by being put under arrest!); the offering was accepted, and he did get to Rome (2 years later in chains!) God doesn't always do exactly what we ask, but He does what is best for that one we pray for! Do you have a missionary heart? A heart that longs for the lost? Are you a missionary co-laborer, a prayer warrior for those who labor? You can be! God would like to shape you that way if you'll let Him.

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 16:1-16 A List Forgotten

Almost nobody studies Romans 16. It is usually summarily dismissed as Paul's conclusion and personal greetings. But it is far more than that! It is an invaluable record of quite a few people who were Christians just like you, but who lived 2000 years ago. They lived in a different age and a different culture and under different conditions, but they were saved just like you are and lived godly lives just like you do. That's an awesome thing to think about! The relationship I have with Jesus Christ is just as real and vital today as it was then! Let's first see:

I. Who These Names Are Now the record is not detailed; in fact, it's rather sparse. Yet, by each name Paul mentions one key thing that he remembered most about that person:

1. Phoebe (1-2) - a protector She was the one evidently carrying this letter to Rome and the Roman Christians were to receive and help her. She is from Cenchrea, the seaport town of Corinth, where Paul wrote from. She was a servant of the church which in the Greek may be the same as deacon, so she may be a deaconess? But the thing Paul notes about her is that she has been a great help to many, literally a protectress, a patron who has looked out for the welfare of others. She was evidently a woman of some influence or wealth and not afraid to use it to help the brethren. Do you know any people like that who give to meet the needs of others, who step in and do what they can?

2. Priscilla and Aquila (3-5a) - tentmakers These are Paul's old Jewish friends who met him at Corinth and worked with him (Acts 18:1-3) and indeed risked their lives for him. The thing to note is the church in their house. Compare 1 Cor. 16:19. In Corinth the church met with them and now they are back in Rome, their original home, and have a church there. They are true tentmakers, not simply by trade, but wherever they went they planted a church in their home! They used their home and business as a place where sinners were converted and saints were discipled. Do you know any people like that whose homes are given over for God's use?

3. Epenetus (5b) - a responder He was an early convert of Paul's, now in Rome. Paul remembers how he was the first to respond in Asia, how eager and ready he was, his desire to know spiritual truth, how he willingly opened his heart to the Lord without waiting to see if any others would stand with him. Do you know any people like that?

4. Mary (6), Tryphena, Tryphosa and Persis (12) - hard workers Four women are greeted in this list, all with this same description. I have a feeling he's not talking about housework and child-raising. Verse 6 says for you. Compare Phil. 4:3. They were witnesses and prayer warriors! And they worked hard at bringing others to know Christ. Do you know any people like that who really put their all into serving Christ?

5. Andronicus and Junicus (7) - sufferers These two were relatives, probably meaning fellow Jews, and noteworthy ones too. They had been saved before Paul was and seem to be referred to as apostles, just as Barnabas and Silas were elsewhere. If so, then they were probably in the work of church planting like Paul, but at any rate, at some point (unknown to us) Paul had spent time in prison with them. They suffered for their faith and for their labor for Christ. They went to jail rather than quit or recant. They endured it and continued on undaunted. Do you know any people like that who stand up for Christ in the face of opposition?

6. Ampliatus (8) and Stachys (9b) - beloved friends Here were two that Paul literally loved. They were special friends to him. Why, we don't know. Perhaps they were people who had shared and prayed with him closely, personal confidants. At any rate, a love like that of David and Jonathan had grown up between them, a selfless caring, sweeter than even romance. Do you know any people like that whom you just love specially for some reason?

7. Urbanus (9) - a helper A fellow worker is one who works with you, that is, a helper. Urbanus had been a real helper to Paul at some point. Thank God for people like this. I don't know what I'd do without people like this who are always there to lend a hand whenever needed. Do you know any people like that?

8. Apelles (10) - a perseverer We don't know what the testing was, but Apelles stood it! Probably it was a long hard trial or a series of many. Others would, like Job's wife, have cursed God and given up. Apelles remained true through thick and thin, demonstrating the reality of his faith. Do you know any people like that who endure physical suffering, personal loss, tragedy and yet stand true?

9. households of Aristobulus and Narcissus (10b,11b) Two households are mentioned here. Narcissus is unknown. Aristobulus may be the grandson of Herod the Great. Wouldn't that be neat? The great thing is they came to Christ as families. These men were progenitors. They took Christ to their whole family and introduced them to Him. They led their families in becoming Christian homes. What a blessing! Do you know any people like that who have been the first to be saved and led their families to Christ?

10. Herodion (11), Rufus and his mother (13) - brothers and a mother Herodion is unknown but compare Mk. 15:21. If this is the same Rufus, his father Simon carried Jesus' cross and came to faith and now he too had taken up the cross and followed! At any rate, Paul felt so close to these folks that he called one a relative or kinsman and Rufus' mother had been just like a mother to him! Have you known of those mothers who are like the mothers or grandmothers you never had or of brothers closer than real ones?

11. two house church groups (14-15) Here are two lists of five names each, a reference to two house church groups that met in Rome. They were worshippers. They were known for being part of the church, not Christians who went off and did their own thing. They assembled with the brethren. Now let's stop and before we leave them see:

II. What These Names Are They are more than just people who lived and died long ago and who don't matter anymore. They are:

1. examples Here are people to model yourself after. Why not set yourself to be like some of them? Why not be that second mother or brother to some young Christian? Why not be that helper to someone in the Lord's work? Why not set yourself to stand for Christ at work or in the midst of the suffering and problems that have come to you? Why not be a hard laborer and work at winning others? They have left us an example to follow.

2. epitaphs Romans 16 is the only tombstone these folks have. The brief words written here are the only epitaphs the world remembers about them. One day you are going to die and many people will forget most things about you. But some things will be long remembered. I read this dedication by the author in a book on prayer, "My gratitude to my godly praying mother on whose tomb are the words Ida Duewel - Intercessor. What will your epitaph be? What will they carve on yours? What will that one thing be that lasts about you? Is there one thing in your life done consistently for Christ that will last or is your life full of wood, hay and stubble that will not count?

3. eternal friends W. R. Newell wrote, This page is no mere relic of the past; it is a list of friendships to be made hereafter, and to be possessed forever in the endless life where personality indeed shall be eternal, but where also the union of personalities in Christ shall be beyond our utmost present thought." ([Romans, p.556])

My friends, these folks live. They wait for you in heaven. One day you will meet them and make their acquaintance. Then you can ask Apelles what things he endured; you can see the things that were so outstanding about them in life now glorified. The same is true of all the godly names in the Bible. All the saints are your brethren; you will meet them by and by! What a glorious thing the church is, one body composed of all the saints of all ages, past, present, and future. What a grand future we have to look forward to. And the grandest thing of all will be seeing Him who made it all possible!

ROMANS 9-16 GOD'S GOVERNMENT AND GUIDANCE

Rom. 16:17-27 Parting Thoughts

Paul is about done with his long letter to his Roman friends and we are about done with our study of it. But Paul could not close without some parting thoughts, as his heart was yearning for those believers there. There were three things he wanted to leave with them:

I. Warnings (17-20) They were doing so well; their obedience to Christ was known all over the empire. And Paul knew very well that that's just the time to be most on your guard. And the greatest danger is being led off base by a false teacher, one who looks so good and so right, but would lead you into believing wrong things and so eventually destroy your walk with the Lord. One of the signs of immaturity is ignoring danger, thinking, "It can never happen to me." Mature believers stay constantly vigilant and Paul warns us to do four things in regard to these false teachers:

1. recognize them (17) Watch out for them, be alert, recognize them when they appear. They may appear in very nice guises. They may be Jehovah's Witnesses or Mormons or some smooth radio or TV minister who is not sound. You must learn to identify them by making sure you know what sound doctrine is! You must study and learn and grow so that you know what is fundamental truth and what are areas that real Christians may differ on. When a person starts hedging on fundamental truths like the Deity of Christ or the inspiration of the Bible or when his life begins to show that he is hedging on the moral principles laid down in the Word, you can be sure that person is not motivated by the Holy Spirit!

2. avoid them (17b-18) He doesn't say to battle them or argue with them or try to persuade them but very plainly to stay away from them, so they won't affect you. And here's why:

a. their motives are wrong You may have a hard time believing it, but God says it. They are not in it for God. Their interests are self-serving. At the bottom line they do not have your welfare in mind and further:

b. their methods are wrong They don't play by your rules. True motives and actions are covered by smooth talk and flattery. Their intent is to lead you into their heresy. Don't expect them to be totally honest and pure like you're trying to be! Avoid them and don't get burnt!

3. obey in spite of them (19) The Romans were doing well and being obedient. Paul says, "Keep it up! Be wise about false teachers and keep on obeying in spite of them!"

4. remember our triumph over them (20) Remember who wins! In the end Christ will triumph over Satan and all his henchmen and we'll be standing with Him in that day. Don't get discouraged! Sometimes I look around and see the grip that false teachers have on most of our major denominations, on our seminaries and colleges and I get frustrated and incensed. I look at how the cults and even liberal theology are succeeding all over the world. But I remember that in the end they lose; Christ wins! Come Lord Jesus!

II. Greetings (21-23) Paul was not alone where he was at Corinth. He had a team of people there with him and wanted to send greetings from them also. It's another list like the first half of the chapter and just as interesting, when we see the kind of people God put together as a team for Paul. He sends greetings first:

1. from a fellow worker: Timothy Look at Phil. 2:19-22 and see how Paul felt about him. At that later time, he was the only trustworthy one Paul had. They worked together as father and son with the same motives. They were true associates.

2. from relatives: Lucius This may be Lucius of Cyrene mentioned in Acts 13:1. Jason may be the Jason of Acts 17:5-9, who was Paul's host at Thessalonica and suffered in his place. Sosipater is probably Sosipater of Berea (Acts 20:4) who travelled with Paul to Jerusalem. These were Paul's traveling companions as he took the offering to Jerusalem and Paul calls them his relatives, probably meaning fellow Israelites. At any rate, they are his family in the Lord; He was close to them.

3. from a helper: Tertius, who served as Paul's secretary in writing this letter, a helper who was there to assist in needed tasks.

4. from a host: Gaius, probably one of Paul's early converts at Corinth (1 Cor. 1:14), but noted here for his hospitality. He hosted Paul in his home and the whole church met there. He's like the other Gaius in 3 John who is known for his hospitality, supplying the needs of the saints.

5. from brothers: Erastus and Quartus, two Corinthian Christians, the first, a government official (city steward or director of public works), the second, simply a brother, but both Paul's converts and friends, those he was ministering to. Look what God gave Paul for his ministry: a trusted associate, close brethren, a helper in ordinary tasks, a host to meet his physical needs, and a flock to minister to. Do you ever wonder how pastors make it, how missionaries survive in their field situation? God does the same thing now. I feel like I have all these elements here; if I didn't, the ministry would be all but impossible. God has built for me a team and He builds support teams for all those who serve Him, if they go about it right. And we must remember that whenever we get the credit, much of it goes to our team!

III. Blessings (24-27) Verse 24 is in the NIV margin at the bottom because it isn't found in some manuscripts, but it certainly is genuine because Paul used it in the conclusion of every one of his letters! This section is Paul's benediction, his best wishes for the Romans. He wants three things for them:

1. grace (24) Grace is kind of a catch-all word that we tend to ignore, like the word bless. Paul wants the favor and love and power of Christ to be with them. He wants them to have the power and favor of Christ which enables us to live as believers in this world.

2. growth (25-26) He wants them to be established which means to fix or turn resolutely in a direction, just as Jesus set his face to go up to Jerusalem. Paul wants them to continue on firmly fixed in their walk with the Lord which means growth. And then Paul puts into a nutshell in one sentence all that he's been trying to explain through the entire letter. He wants them to grow:

a. in understanding the plan of God The mystery hidden for long ages is the mystery of the church. Compare Eph. 3:3-6, Col. 1:24-27. It is the mystery which Old Testament folks never knew, that Jew and Gentile alike who believe, would become one body, the church of Jesus Christ, by faith. Paul wants that to sink in and be understood. It has been his major theme throughout Romans. He wants them to understand it!

b. in understanding the purpose of God which is that the whole world might hear and be saved (26b). He wants that to be emblazoned in their minds; he wants them to live for it, to give their lives to that purpose, just like he has. And finally, he wants them to have:

3. glory (27), not for themselves but for God. His thought is that their lives might bring glory to God both now and forevermore.

What more could I wish for you? That you might have the grace of God to live the Christian life, that you might grow in your understanding of what God is doing in the world and your commitment to give your lives to His purpose, and that your lives might bring glory to Him forever! That's a wonderful way to close a letter and not a bad way to close a sermon either.

Conclusion Ch. 16

1 COR. 1:1-9 OUR BLESSINGS IN CHRIST

With this message we begin a series of studies in the book of 1 Corinthians. Now, it's no secret that the major portion of this epistle deals with problems in the church. We all remember that they had divisions, immorality, lawsuits, and greed. They were abusing the spiritual gifts and the Lord's supper. It was a church that had real problems. Yet as Paul begins to write to them, his first thought is thanksgiving. Compare verse 4. He was thankful for them because, in spite of all their problems, they were the recipients of the grace of God. This week we celebrated Thanksgiving. We sat back and counted our temporal blessings. We looked around and counted our family and said, "Thank you Lord". We looked at the mountains of delicious food in front of us and our full refrigerators and said, "Thank You Lord". We leaned back and remembered all the good times we've had and said, "Thank you Lord". And those things are all wonderful and are all gifts of God. But we have four things to be thankful for that go far deeper than any of those, especially when you consider that, like the Corinthians, we are problem people. So many of the problems Paul set straight among them are our problems too. Yet in spite of all of them, the grace of God has done four wonderful things in our lives which Paul reminds us of:

I. The Blessing of Salvation (1-3) What do you find here in this salutation that we usually ignore? Four groups of saved people. Look:

1. God saved Paul (1a) Paul, called an apostle! That's not what he used to be called. He used to be called Saul, the enemy of Christians, the persecutor, the insatiable hunter of Christians. But one day, walking down a road on another evil mission God saved him and called him to be an apostle, that is, a missionary! Oh what grace! But look:

2. God saved Sosthenes (1b) Know who he is? Now he is probably Paul's traveling companion and the scribe who wrote down this letter for him, but compare Acts 18:15. If this is the same man, he used to live in Corinth and used to be the ruler of the synagogue, a staunch Jew, but he became sympathetic to the Christian cause and got beaten for it, and now look what he is, a brother! See the grace of God! Now, if you really want to see something:

3. God saved the church at Corinth (2a) Do you have any idea of the kind of place Corinth was? Hear how the ancients thought of it. Plato referred to a prostitute as "a Corinthian girl"; Philetaerus, the ancient playwright, wrote a play about a lecherous man called "the Corinthian." Aristophanes coined a new word as a synonym for fornication; he invented the verb, "to Corinthianize!" Corinth was a city known all over the world for idolatry, materialism, and sex. Sounds like the society we live in! Maybe that's why many of the same problems are recurring in the church in our day.

However, wonder of wonders, in the midst of all this, God had an assembly, a church, a gathering of people who were made holy and called holy! Compare 6:9-11! But even more wonderful:

4. God saved us! (2b-3) This letter is addressed to us too; we're believers in Christ like them. We're saved just like them. Oh, I wonder sometimes whether we realize the blessing of being saved, whether we realize where we would be and what we would be and where we would end up, if it were not for the grace of God. Maybe you were never wicked like Paul or like the Corinthians, but you are a trophy of grace just the same! We have a Father in heaven instead of a Judge! We have a Master in heaven instead of an Executioner! What a privilege! But that's not all!

II. The Blessing of Enrichment (4-7) Let's say it more clearly; you have been made rich. And though Corinth was a rich town, a wealthy commercial center, and though most of us are actually rich when compared with the rest of the world, that's not what Paul is talking about. We have been made rich in Christ. We have not just been sent to heaven on a shoe-string. We have been given marvelous riches in the spiritual realm. First, there is:

1. the enjoyment of spiritual truth (5) Boy, had they been enriched in speaking and knowledge. People were speaking in tongues; they were prophesying; they were preaching. So many people wanted to get up in church and say something that the whole thing was confusion and Paul had to regulate it. But forget the problems for the minute, and see the point; they enjoyed spiritual truth. The people who once enjoyed immorality and pleasure now want to hear, learn, and communicate spiritual truth. They had a brand-new kind of joy. Oh listen, we have knowledge the world can't have or get in any other fashion except coming to Christ! We know many of the mysteries of the universe. We know how it all got here and what keeps it going. We know what lies beyond the grave. We know what it is that makes man different from the animals and what makes man behave the way he does. We know how to change a man and make him a new person! We are rich in knowledge! And God keeps dumping more and more on us as we study the Word each day and are taught in the body. It's a joy!

2. the experience of spiritual realities (6) Paul had come to Corinth and preached the Word of God. This church, these people, were the result of his preaching. They were living evidence that the Word was true and powerful. How rich we are in seeing the Word come true in our lives! We share the Gospel with someone and they are transformed, just like it says. We take a promise of God and count on it and it comes to pass, for example, His meeting our needs. We watch the very things God says happen every day!

3. the exercise of spiritual gifts (7a) They really didn't lack any. Paul listed all the gifts being exercised there and the variety was astounding. Of course, different individuals had different ones, but what a joy they had in serving God by the exercise of their gifts. What a wonderful thing it is to watch God work through you! To sing and watch God bless people by it. To type and watch your skill provide necessary information to people and meet their need. To teach and watch young lives change in response to it. Folks, we are rich spiritually! We know God; we see God at work in us and through us. Our faith is a living faith, not the cold dead practice of forms and rituals and ceremonies! So, we are blessed because of what God did in our lives, and because of what He's doing day by day, but there's more:

III. The Blessing of Preservation (7b-8) You see, it is not only great to have it, but to know that it will last! Now, there are two aspects to this:

1. the anticipation of Christ's coming This is not all there is. We're expecting something, always looking to the horizon. We know how this whole ball game turns out. We know Jesus Christ is coming again and further, that He is coming for us. While the world is running around worrying about what's going to happen next month or next year or next generation and pulling their hair out, we know what our future holds. We're waiting for it like a kid waits for Christmas, but the great part is:

2. the assurance of Christ's keeping I don't have to depend on my own efforts to stay saved, to hold on! I'm not holding on to His rope by the skin of my teeth; He took His rope and wrapped it around me with a knot that won't let go! I don't have to worry that tomorrow I'll slip and fall. Now, I'll try my best not to, but if it happens, He won't let go. He will preserve me safe and keep me and get me to that Day! So, I not only have a gracious past experience of salvation and a glorious present experience of God at work in my life, but I have a guaranteed future, a glorious future to look forward to! And there's one thing left:

IV. The Blessing of Fellowship (9) G. Campbell Morgan called this the key verse to the whole book. It is the real answer to all the divisions, disorders, and difficulties the Corinthians had. We have a faithful God who has brought us into a condition of fellowship with His Son. Now, that thought has a double meaning:

1. sharing a common life The Greek word is koinonia from which we get the English words common and communion and the central thought of it is togetherness. We share a common life with Him. He that is joined to the Lord is one Spirit. Christ lives in me and lives out His life through me. So, I am never apart from Him, not even for a moment. He is always with me, always a part of everything I do, everywhere I go. But more than that, fellowship means:

2. partnership in a common venture The venture of my Christian life, then, is not just my venture, but our venture. Jesus and I are partners in a life that is being made to glorify Him. God is a faithful partner. If we are faithful too, this venture is indeed a glorious one. Just think, the God of all glory and power has united Himself to me and shares with me the adventure of life.

What a blessing! I read a poem one time about a humble Christian man named Jim. For years each day he'd rise to pray and when in church, he'd bow his head and meekly say, 'Dear God, it's Jim!' And when he'd leave, we all could see God's holy presence walked with him. As Jim grew old, the chastening rod of years left him so ill and drawn, his path to church is now untrod; but in his heart each day at dawn he hears the words, 'Dear Jim, it's GOD!' Oh, listen, my friend, we are saved, we are rich, we have a guaranteed future and we have a glorious fellowship that nothing can disturb! When was the last time you thanked God for these things?

1 Cor. 1:10-31 DIVIDED WE STAND

1 Corinthians is basically a corrective letter. The Church at Corinth was a large thriving body, but it was also filled with problems. These problems had been reported to Paul (verse 11) by some folks who came to visit him and it appears from 7:1 that the church had also written to ask Paul about some questions they had. This letter is Paul's attempt to correct their problems, and the first one he deals with is the problem of divisions.

I. The Problem Described (1:10-17) The church had fallen into a state of internal division. Perhaps it would help us understand if we knew a little of:

1. the history behind it (10-12) The names are instructive here: Paul, Apollos, Cephas, Christ. If you remember, Paul was the founder of the church at Corinth. Compare Acts 18:11. He began in the synagogue as usual and even got the synagogue ruler, Crispus (8), and also his successor, Sosthenes, saved! He stayed a year and a half. So, the first wave of Christians there remembered him with great respect. But he left and while he was off to Jerusalem and Antioch, Apollos was converted at Ephesus and then he went to Corinth (19:1). So, Apollos became the next pastor at Corinth and of course 18:24-5 says he was learned and eloquent, who knows, maybe moreso than Paul! Then of course, a good number of Jews were converted there and they would naturally look to Peter and the Jerusalem church for leadership. So, what happened is this:

a. factions had formed When a certain subject came up, those who had been close to Paul said, "Paul said this, I follow him...". Those who were close to Apollos and Peter did the same. Some, trying to be more spiritual, said, "I don't follow any man; I follow Christ..." and offered their own opinion. And soon:

b. they were quarreling with each other Differences of opinion lead to different ways of thinking which leads to arguing and infighting. My, don't we have this today! We could have it right here. We get on a certain theme and we all take sides. Then the next issue comes up and people find themselves hanging with the same crowd because they think alike. Pretty soon we've got a church full of little factions always trying to assert their power over the others! And it's sad to say that you can talk to pastor after pastor and find it's true in churches today!

2. Paul's reaction to it (13-17) Paul didn't want anything to do with it; he was appalled. If I could summarize the message of those three rhetorical questions, it would be, "Listen, Christ is the One who died for you, who saved you, in whose name you were baptized, not mine or Apollos' or anybody else's. And Christ is not divided! You are not really following Him!" And then we have:

II. The Problem Diagnosed (1:18-31) Dr. Paul cuts away the surface symptoms and goes to the root of the problem. His diagnosis is two-fold. Division comes from two sources:

1. it is a problem of human wisdom (18-25) They were not looking for God's wisdom; they were operating on their own sanctified common sense, each one pushing his own ideas that came from his own human thinking. If they all got their thinking from God, it would have been the same because God isn't divided. Paul tells them clearly in verse 17 that they are pursuing human wisdom, not God's wisdom. And then he reminds them that at the center of God's wisdom is a cross! And the cross proves two things:

a. God's wisdom is contrary to human wisdom The cross seems like a foolish thing to the human mind. Verse 22. The Jews demand miraculous signs. They would have had Christ come down from the cross and display his power to the world so that they might believe in Him. The Greeks demanded wisdom, logic. It had to make sense. They would have had to have a much more logical way for man to be saved than for God to send his Son to die on a cross. In short, nobody would have done it the way God did it; not Jew, not Gentile, nobody! God's ways are not our ways. We have to recognize that often God does things or wants us to do things that don't make a lot of sense to us, that don't fit the way we think things ought to be! However:

b. God's wisdom is better than human wisdom Verse 21. All the wisdom in the world did not bring man to know God. It took the cross! And the preaching of the message of the cross did it! God's way always works! And God does it that way on purpose; He frustrates our human wisdom and intelligence so we'll look to Him. In verse 19 Paul quotes an Old Testament illustration from Is. 29:14. This is God's statement to Judah and, if you check the context carefully, you'll realize that in that time there was the threat of invasion from Assyria which had already conquered the northern Kingdom of Israel. The people had a humanly wise plan, ally with Egypt. Compare 30:1-3. But their wisdom didn't work. If you recall the story, God did it his own way; the angel of the Lord went out and killed 185,000 Assyrian soldiers in their sleep! Not one arrow was fired in that battle! God's wisdom is better! So, what's the point? If we want to keep from having divisions among ourselves, we have to realize that our own way is not necessarily God's way! All of us have to be first and foremost committed to finding out what God wants of us and that will draw us together, not apart!

2. it is a problem of pride (26-31) Now Paul gets personal. He tells them to look around, to look at one another and themselves. There weren't many college professors and Ph. D.'s, there weren't many politicians and council members and influential people, there weren't many of the genteel rich of noble birth and high society. They were slaves and carpenters and fishermen and merchants and housewives. They had nothing to brag and boast about. They were nothing that God should be glad to choose them and use them as His servants. Look around, you'll find that we are in the same boat. We're a church full of common everyday people. What's his point? Divisions are caused by pride, by people thinking that they're more than somebody else. His point is:

a. in ourselves we are nothing Not one of us has anything to boast about before God. God didn't choose us because we were smart or influential or energetic. It was grace, so:

b. everything we are is from God Christ is our wisdom, our righteousness, our holiness, our redemption. We didn't have any. We can only boast in Him!

Divisions are not only caused by wrong thinking, but by wrong attitude. Elsewhere Paul wrote, Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus who humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross! We have to keep the cross at the center of our thinking. God's ways are not our ways and we must be open to what our brothers and sisters think too. But most importantly, we need to keep the cross at the center of our attitude and be humble like Jesus was. My friend, is there a rift between you and somebody else today, particularly between you and a fellow believer? Well, I can guarantee you that one or the other or both of you either have a wrong thought pattern or a wrong attitude. And I can also guarantee you that God isn't pleased with it. Maybe there's something you can do to fix that today.

1 Cor. 2 OUR WISDOM

Now you'll remember from last week's study that in the first 4 chapters of this letter, Paul is dealing with the problem of divisions in the Corinthian church. And you'll also remember that in diagnosing the root causes of this problem, Paul said that depending on human wisdom was the chief thing that got them into this mess. We often don't realize that the Gentile world of Paul's day, and particularly Greece where Corinth was, was in some senses an intellectual place. It was his era that produced Plato and Socrates and Aristotle and all the great ancient writers and philosophers. Compare Acts 17:21. Athens, where Paul had preached just before Corinth, was the center of this intellectual movement. There were groups like (verse 18) the Epicureans and Stoics. There were Gnostics who professed to have special knowledge. It seems as though the world of Paul's day was bent on a quest for knowledge and placed a high value on the things of the mind. And no doubt that filtered down to the common ordinary people too and it also crept subtly into the church. And it was this air of having superior knowledge that helped cause the divisions. So, having charged them with leaning on human wisdom, Paul proceeds to explain in the whole second chapter what wisdom truly is. There are:

I. Two Types of Wisdom that are contrasted throughout the passage:

1. human wisdom The very terms Paul uses to describe it tell us some things about it:

a. it is based on the natural order (1:20) It is "wisdom of the world", the kosmos, the natural order of things. The wisdom which man has gained by observation, by looking at the things which he can see and observe and drawing conclusions about them.

b. it is rooted in the human mind (2:5) It is "men's wisdom", that is, it is a result of the action of the human brain. We look at the natural world and then the mind draws conclusions about it based on the human point of view. But there's a problem with that:

c. it changes over time (2:6) It is the "wisdom of this age", this era, this time. But what man discovers and believes in one age may change. There was a time when human wisdom looked at the sun passing through the sky and said the sun revolves around the earth. Later on, we figured out just the opposite was true! It was the same with the flatness of the earth. It was the same with medicine and the concept of bleeding patients to get rid of bad blood. Today it seems "wise" to most people to look at fossils and believe in evolution, but open minded scientists are finding out differently. Human wisdom is OK as far as it goes, but it is far inferior to:

2. God's wisdom (2:7) His wisdom is entirely different:

a. it is based on creation, not discovery His wisdom is "before time began." God does not look at things and figure them out, He made them! Who knows something better, its inventor or one who learns about it from scratch?

b. it is hidden to the human mind It is above and beyond what the human mind can comprehend on its own. It is in the mind of God and so is hidden to us. We can't see from His perspective, so if we are to have it:

c. it must be revealed by the Holy Spirit (11) Nobody knows your thoughts except you, your human mind and spirit. Nobody can know them unless you tell them. So, we cannot know God's mind either, but the Holy Spirit can because He is God and He dwells in us to show us the thoughts of God! He also is privy to all our thoughts and shows them to God! So, you can either go through life trying to figure out everything on your own, set your own values and make your own judgments, (and I guarantee you will miss being right quite often) or you can look to God for His answers to your questions and needs! Now Paul goes on to remind the Corinthians just what it was that brought them to new life in Christ and we can apply that to ourselves:

II. How We Came to Faith (1-5) The key is in verse 5. Our faith does not rest on human wisdom:

1. it was not the result of human ability (1) Paul wasn't a better speaker or a better thinker than others they knew. They didn't come to faith because they were impressed with him.

2. it was not the result of a complex message (2) Paul didn't come with some high-sounding philosophy that was hard to understand. He came saying "Christ died for your sins". It wasn't some complex thing they had to figure out.

3. it was not the result of human drive (3) Some people may not have ability, but they get by on drive or effort. Paul came weak and trembling. He'd been through some tough experiences and a lot of persecution and danger on that trip. Maybe he wasn't well. It wasn't extra effort that brought them to faith.

4. it was not the result of oral persuasion (4) He didn't play on their emotions by using rhetoric, as was popular in his day. They didn't get talked into faith.

5. it was the result of God's power (4b-5) Read the account in Acts. God moved in that city. He brought conviction to the hearts of men. He brought two synagogue rulers to Christ. He brought a number of Jews to faith. Compare 6:11, 9-10. He saved drunkards and prostitutes and transformed their lives into holiness and purity! And it was the miraculous transformation in lives that brought others. Human wisdom never did anything for them! But God's simple wisdom of believing on His Son transformed their lives! Listen, you didn't get saved by some fancy philosophy or some great orator's persuasion. You got saved by believing a simple message because you saw the power of God at work in someone else's life and felt it at work in your own! So, don't think you can now go through life figuring out your own path and making your own decisions. You need to seek God's wisdom day by day in everything you do. You need to know what He thinks about everything in your life. So, let's talk about:

III. How God Conveys His Wisdom to Us (6-16) How can we know God's thoughts, His direction for us?

1. it cannot be humanly discerned (6-9) I sometimes get tired of hearing verse 9 used to describe heaven. It is true that we can't imagine the beautiful things in our future. However, this verse has nothing to do with heaven. It means you cannot get God's wisdom, His thoughts, by human perception, by seeing or hearing or thinking. God's wisdom is hidden to the natural mind. Some of the wisest men of their day, who knew the Scriptures inside and out, crucified the Son of God, because they were following their own human wisdom and couldn't see what was right before their eyes!

2. it is conveyed by the Holy Spirit (10-12) If we can't get it by our own effort, then God has to reveal it to us and He does. The Holy Spirit is God and He knows all the thoughts of God and when we get saved, that same Holy Spirit comes to dwell in us. Why? So that He can take God's thoughts and reveal them to our minds as we need them! What a blessing this is. God wants us to know His thoughts and has given us the Holy Spirit that we might know them as often as we desire, when we earnestly seek them. And then:

3. it is conveyed by us to others (13) We are able to take those thoughts that the Holy Spirit has given us from God and put them into Spirit-guided words and give them to others who have the Holy Spirit in them, so that:

4. it is received by those with the Spirit (14-16) Nonbelievers, unless God is drawing them by His Spirit to Himself, think God's thoughts are foolish; they cannot identify them as God's truth. But the saved person who has the Holy Spirit and is controlled by the Holy Spirit is able to take those thoughts, recognize them as being from God, and make judgments about various issues on the basis of them. You see, nobody has known God's mind on a human basis, but we have the very mind of Christ; we can think His thoughts after Him if we choose because we have the Holy Spirit.

So, when you need wisdom, what should you do? You should ask the Holy Spirit to control your mind, immerse yourself in God's Word and allow Him to bring God's thoughts to you and keep doing it until God's thoughts are clear in your mind!

Be patient; sometimes it takes a little while! Folks, too many of us are living by our own wisdom. We make our decisions without consulting God, without even praying. We go into huge undertakings, change jobs, and even marry people, without seeking God's mind. We start ministries and build buildings and plan events, yes, and even preach sermons without seeking God's mind. God has given us the standing invitation that if we lack wisdom we should ask and it will be given freely to us. Now be forewarned, often the wisdom God gives will look like foolishness to those around you and they will deride you and make fun of you for following it. Dwight Moody was preaching when someone passed a note to him through the usher. It had only one word, "Fool." Moody looked at it and said, "I've often received notes that people wrote but forgot to sign. This is the first time I've received a note that someone forgot to write but signed it anyway." Proverbs tells us that the beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord. It is only the fool that ignores God's wisdom.

1 Cor. 3 A PRESCRIPTION TO HEAL CHURCH PROBLEMS

No good doctor ever stops at diagnosis. He never says, "Well, your problem is..." and then says, "That'll be 125 dollars." No, he always moves on to treatment. He gets out his prescription pad and says, "Here, take 17 of these a day and it'll cure your problem." You wouldn't have it any other way. So, Dr. Paul has been diagnosing the problem of divisions in the church at Corinth, but now he goes on to write them a prescription that will heal their problems. In fact, if we would all take a good dose of what is in this chapter, it would not only solve any problems between believers that might exist now, but it would be good preventive medicine to keep any new ones from starting. Paul says there are three things that we must understand, and if we do, they will heal our church problems:

I. We Must Understand the Source of Divisions (1-4) It always helps the patient to understand the disease. He can cope with it better. He must be able to tell what are symptoms and what are root problems. So, it will help us if we realize that divisions and broken relationships between believers are only symptoms of some very basic problems:

1. they are a sign of spiritual immaturity You know, there are Christians who are 70 years old, but have never grown up in Christ. What do you say when you see two adults squabbling? "Quit acting like children!" Children squabble and fight. Adults, because of their maturity, learn to get along. Maturity in Jesus Christ means a maturing in love and humility and that will overcome differences that exist between us. When you see division in the church of Christ, somebody is spiritually stunted; somebody has a block in their spiritual life. They are not growing!

2. they are a sign of carnality The NIV word worldly is literally fleshly in Greek, and it means acting under the control and influence of human wisdom and human desire and human nature instead of the Holy Spirit. In other words, you have a believer who is saved and has the Holy Spirit in him, but is not allowing himself to be filled or controlled by the Holy Spirit, but rather the habits and patterns of his old life that he lived in before he was saved. It may be in a different area of his life; he may not go out and get drunk anymore but his old patterns are now causing him to act selfishly and proudly and quarrel with other believers. He's carnal! And if we understand that problems between believers are signs of immaturity and carnality, then when we see them in ourselves, we'd better take appropriate action. We'd better find out what it means to get under the control of the Holy Spirit, begin to spend time in the Word and prayer and do other things that will make us grow!

II. We Must Understand the Nature of Service (5-15) You see, part of the reason we have problems among ourselves, whether as individuals or in a church or between missionaries on the field, is that we have some basic misunderstandings of what it really means to be serving Jesus Christ. And Paul uses two very graphic analogies here to explain it to us:

1. it is like working a field (5-9a) He uses the common idea of a landowner having his workers produce a crop. One fellow plows, then another may plant the seed, and another may water and cultivate it. And so, it comes to grow and bear fruit. Now, it doesn't make any difference who plants or who waters. What matters is that God makes it grow! And the church is God's field! It is what He is growing today.

a. we are all servants with an assigned task We don't all have the same task. We simply do what the master tells us. Paul planted the seeds in Corinth and Apollos came along later and watered them and each was simply doing God's assigned task.

b. it is not the servant but God that is important Verse 7. The servants can't make seeds germinate and grow. They can't control the seasons and the weather that produce a good crop. God is the important one. He does the real work! You may think you're working awfully hard for God and that you're producing results. But listen, God produces results. God wins people to Christ. God changes little lives in Sunday School. God leads people to a closer walk or delivers them from addiction. And God pays the bills! Your service to God is simply being obedient so that through you God can accomplish what He wants. When you think of it as any more than that, pride gets in and human wisdom and division is next!

c. we share a common goal The servants are not in competition. They are partners in a common job, to grow the crop, not to show what good workers they are. So, we share the common goal of building the church, not getting our own way!

2. it is like building a building (9b-15) Now, that was an analogy for country folks; this one is for city folks. We're like builders building a building. It takes a lot of workers, each doing their part, to build a good building. And the church is God's building. He's constructing it on the foundation of Christ and His work on the cross (verse 11), using us as His workers.

a. we are all builders (9a) Some are carpenters, others bricklayers and painters and paperhangers and electricians. Every one of us contributes to the building of the church as we exercise the ministry God has given us, whether it be prayer, giving, teaching, or whatever. We're putting up a building for the Master!

b. we must be careful builders (10) You wouldn't want a sloppy carpenter building your house! God doesn't want it either. He doesn't want a church full of blemishes and crooked parts. He wants a church full of mature, holy, pure disciples of Jesus Christ!

c. we must use right materials (12-13) Here we have two lists of building materials. Gold, silver and precious stones are one set; wood, hay and stubble are the other. When we build, we must use the right ones. We must use:

(1) materials of quality You wouldn't want a cardboard roof or pipes made of straws. You want materials that will stand the test of use and weather. So, what we do as servants, we must do well. If we make disciples, we must make them strong to stand the test. If we plant the church, we must plant it strong. If we teach, we must do it thoroughly and with preparation; if we pray, we must do it earnestly with all our hearts!

(2) materials of value Why not iron, brass, and stone instead? They are just as strong, but they are not the things of value to the master! The master of this house wants a golden house inlaid with silver and set with gems. Those are His specifications! Sometimes we occupy ourselves in doing things for God, but we may be doing the wrong thing, building with temporal materials instead of ones of eternal value which the master wants. It is the eternal things God is after, souls brought to maturity in Jesus Christ, holy and pure, not programs and buildings and advertising campaigns.

d. our work will be tested (13-15) You see, God is the Great Building Inspector! Our work will be tested, as it were, by fire. The worthless stuff will burn up; only the real will last. Only the things we did which were truly serving Jesus Christ will remain. All those other things which we did to impress people or out of force of habit or to appease a guilty conscience or to outshine another believer will all be gone. Some of us are going to be mighty embarrassed in that day at the judgment seat of Christ. So, what really is Christian service then? It is God working through us to build His church. And we are responsible to let Him do that in all sincerity! And if we were all doing that, there would be no divisions! But lastly, to solve the problem of division and broken relationships:

III. We Must Understand The Warnings of God (16-22) Paul issues three warnings here to make it clear. We must guard:

1. against corrupting the church (16-17) This building that we're building is a Temple, a place for God to live. The church is where God lives, in the bodies of His people. The word destroy means literally to corrupt and so, to destroy by corruption. You can attack a pipe two ways. You can bend and break it from outside or you can let hard water attack it with minerals from inside and destroy it just as surely. This verse is not so much a warning to the dictators of the world who would destroy the church, but to those who would take a local church and tear it apart with factions and false doctrines and legalism or what have you! What strong language here! If you really love God, your effect will be to build the church, not tear it down! Second, we must guard:

2. against conceit in the mind (18-20) We must guard against thinking we're really somebody and really have it all together while so and so doesn't. Paul says to watch out for this and change your thinking, because pride goes before a fall. If there's any hint of conceit in your thinking, God has just the experience prepared for you that will remove it! And finally, we must guard:

3. against continuing in factions (21-22) Instead of separating from each other, let's claim the best of each other. Let's learn from Paul and Apollos and Cephas and take what we can from each of them without setting them up on a pedestal to follow. Everything is yours in Jesus Christ. Don't louse up your inheritance by petty rivalries!

Well, there's Dr. Paul's prescription for you. Now the question is, as with all medicine, will you take it?

1 Cor. 4 THE MEANING OF CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP

There is a whole aspect of this problem of divisions the Corinthians had that Paul has not yet considered. He had talked about their shortcomings in following human wisdom and about their root problems of immaturity and carnality. But at Corinth there was at least one group of people whose slogan was, "I follow Paul," yet who were not acting like Paul would act at all! Wouldn't it upset you if people went around saying they were your followers, yet seeing your name maligned because of their misbehavior? Paul had a personal stake in this problem of divisions. They were divided over the issue of following leaders. So, Paul set out in chapter 4 to teach them how they should regard Christian leaders and really, he lays out for us the meaning of Christian leadership.

I. Paul's View of a Christian Leader This, of course, does not only apply only to Paul or the apostles, but also to those who are Christian leaders today. Pastors, evangelists, missionaries, the elders of the local church, teachers, apply these things to yourself in whatever your role may be or to leaders you look up to. Even parents can apply it to themselves as leaders in the home.

1. stated (1-5) There are four basic truths in Paul's view of a Christian leader:

a. he is a servant of God (1) Paul does not use the common word for servant which is diakonos, but huperetes, which means an under-rower. It comes from naval use, meaning the guy who pulls when the captain says, "Pull!" The word emphasizes fact that he is under the authority of a superior, that he is a man who takes orders from a higher source. Christian leaders are not a law unto themselves; they cannot do as they please. They take orders from Christ and in fact, the Bible teaches that those in positions of authority have even greater responsibility.

b. he is a steward of God's things, literally a house-arranger, the manager of the house. It means a person entrusted with the complete care of the house on the owner's behalf, like Joseph in Potiphar's house. He was entrusted with the care of all the household matters to the extent that Potiphar didn't concern himself with anything except to eat his food and go to work! A Christian leader is a person to whom God has given responsibility to handle the secret things of God, such as God's word. He is responsible to understand it, to live it, and to communicate it to others.

c. he is responsible to God (2) A person under authority who has been given a job to do must prove faithful; he must do what he has been ordered to do. His master will require it. We are all responsible to God, not for how much we do or for what we do compared to what someone else does, but for whether we do what God has ordered us to do! Therefore:

d. he can only be judged by God (3-5) It does not matter if people look at you and say, "My he's doing a fine job." In fact, it doesn't even matter if you look at yourself and say, "I'm doing the best job I know how". They can only judge by outward appearances and many times you and I will never see our own faults. Only God is qualified to say whether we have been really faithful stewards or not and when the Lord comes, He will take care of the job of rewarding us.

2. applied (6-7) Paul makes two applications:

a. do not go beyond the Scripture Paul quotes a saying that was evidently well-known to his readers but is not an actual Old Testament quote. Don't go beyond what is written, that is, beyond the Scriptures. When you go beyond what you have there, you are liable to error. So, what does it mean? When you look at a Christian leader you have every right and even a duty to examine them by the Book. If they teach false doctrines, you have every right to oppose their leadership. If their life does not stand up to Scriptural standards of behavior or if they display unbiblical attitudes in dealing with people, then you have every right to judge. But when you get beyond that into the realm of preferences and methods and styles and personalities, and take pride in one over another, you are on dangerous turf! To use Gamaliel's words: you may be found to be opposing God!

b. do not forget your humble position Here's a good thought for all of us. It is only God that makes us different from each other. None of us is any better than the rest. Everything we are or have is a gift of God's grace. So, any time we put ourselves in a position of judging other believers, unless it has to do with Scriptural matters, we are usurping God's place. He is the Master of all of us!

II. Paul's Example as a Christian Leader (8-17) Paul didn't just talk a good show; He lived it. He provided in his life a personal example for others, an example that was exactly opposite of the way the Corinthians were behaving. So, from him we learn:

1. the kind of example leaders ought to be (8-13) Now Paul uses the illustration of a parade, a Roman parade, but don't think of mummers strutting down Broad Street. Think of a Roman general returning victorious with his army to Rome and marching through the streets. Back at the tail end of the procession are the prisoners of war, the captives taken in battle, the trophies of the conquest who were brought back for the arena, to be a public spectacle as they were devoured by wild beasts or forced to fight gladiators. Paul says, "I and the other apostles are like that. We are a public spectacle to a hooting crowd and headed ultimately to give up our lives for Jesus Christ. Paul and other apostles suffered things those Christians at Corinth in all their petty bickering had never endured and might never have to endure. But look how they reacted to their suffering:

a. enduring misery without complaint (11) The Corinthians were fairly well-off. They had homes, incomes and clothes to wear for the most part. Paul didn't but he didn't complain!

b. enduring labor without quitting (12a) It was tough enough just preaching, but he supported himself with tent-making also. Yet he didn't quit and give up.

c. enduring mistreatment without retaliation (12-13) Oh, the way Paul and the others were treated! They were cursed, beaten, flogged, persecuted, run out of town, and even, stoned. Yet they never displayed any retaliation, any fighting back, any hatred. That is the kind of example leaders ought to provide! Too many times we are worried about the way we dress or whether our speech is polished. The most important example people take from us is in how we endure our problems, not in how exciting and vivacious we are and how much charisma we have. But in how we take criticism, how we handle sickness and tragedy and how we deal with people who don't like us!

2. the kind of response we ought to have What about those who are not leaders? How should we relate to those who are our leaders in Christ?

a. we ought to keep a proper perspective (8) These Corinthians were like the prodigal son; they wanted their inheritance now! They wanted success and prosperity and pleasure right now. They wanted to reign with Christ in an outward and visible way right now. But now is not the time! What a difference from the example of Paul and the other apostles! We've got to be careful we don't go seeking after worldly goals like the Corinthians did and ignore the godly examples of our leaders. Instead:

b. we ought to follow their example (14-17) Not that we try to be like them and do the things they do and carry out the responsibilities they have. Paul says what he means, his "way of life." Compare 11:1. A leader strives to mirror Jesus Christ in his life. A follower strives to mirror Jesus Christ as demonstrated in the leader! You don't have to pick up all their idiosyncrasies and certainly not their faults. But as their life mirrors the very life of Jesus Christ, filled with love and forgiveness and tolerance, you should imitate them!

III. Paul's Warning as a Christian Leader (18-21) As he closes this whole section on divisions, Paul warns them that he intends to visit them in the near future and he lets them know that he wants it to be a loving visit. But in the process he says two more things we can apply to leadership:

1. regard power over talk It is not those who talk the best game that are true leaders; it is those whose lives and ministries display the power of God. Paul certainly did. People healed, blinded, demons cast out, the dead raised. and of course, thousands saved and transformed. When you pick a leader to follow as an example, make sure you choose one who has God evidently at work in his life.

2. prefer gentleness over discipline With leadership goes the right to correct and discipline. Build your own life on the godly example of others and so allow your leaders to deal with you in gentleness, rather than in rebuke and discipline. If the child listened to the kind voice that comes first, there would be no unpleasant paddling to come afterward.

In closing, I leave you with Heb. 12:1-2. In Heb 11, Paul listed all the great examples of faith who had gone before from Abel to David. We would also include Paul and Peter and John and a host of others. Maybe we could also add a host of other godly leaders who have affected our lives in this generation. Seeing we have such a great host of examples who have given all to follow Christ, let's throw away sin and pride and petty problems and determine like them to follow the course that God has laid out for us until, like the Lord Jesus, one day we sit down with Him on the Throne to reign!

1 Cor. 5 DARE TO DISCIPLINE!

As we leave chapter 4, Paul has finished with the subject of divisions and now he moves on to another category of problems that the church at Corinth had: derelictions, that is, things they as a church had neglected. There are three areas in which this church had failed to exercise its responsibilities: disciplining those who persisted in sin, disputes between its members, and the desecration of its members by dabbling in fornication. By the same token, these are three areas in which the modern western church has largely failed to exercise its responsibilities as well! And there is no more neglected area than the one we consider today, hence the title: Dare to Discipline! (stolen from the popular book on child-rearing). There is no doubt that discipline is rapidly disappearing from the American home but in the average American church it is already gone! However, the church has a God-given responsibility to exercise discipline within its ranks. So, let's begin by examining:

I. The Problem (1-2) Really, there are two parts to it.

1. an immoral man (1) Here was a man in the church, a man who professed to know Jesus Christ, a man who continued to attend worship and celebrate the Lord's supper. Yet he was involved in a sexual affair with his father's wife, probably his step-mother. This was something not only forbidden by Jewish law in the Old Testament, but even pagan Roman law made it illicit. However, the particular sin involved is not so important to our study; it might just as well have been theft, armed robbery, graft, or lying. What is worth noting is 1) that it was serious; in church discipline we are talking about moral failure, not unimportant secondary issues, and (2) that it was continuing; it was not an isolated incident but something persisted in.

2. an unconcerned church (2) This problem was even worse! The church knew about it! For that matter, verse 1 says everybody knew about it, literally "it is noised abroad". Yet they did nothing about it. What's worse yet is that they had no sorrow about the fact that one of their number should do such a wicked thing. Paul says, "How can you be so proud; how can you parade your spiritual superiority and yet allow such wickedness to be tolerated among you?" A church that is unconcerned about sin among its members is a sick church! It is a church in deep trouble and if you don't believe it, just read what Christ has to say to the church at Pergamum and Thyatira in Rev. 2! Discipline begins with the conviction that Christ is building Himself a pure church, a spotless church without spot or wrinkle. It begins out of the conviction that one of the primary concerns of Christ with our lives is holiness without which no man shall see the Lord!

II. The Process of Discipline (3-5) It was something they had never done before, so Paul told them how it works.

1. its practice: excommunication (2b,5a,13) It is already clear that the man is unrepentant and is going to flagrantly continue in sin, so Paul says excommunicate him; put him out of the fellowship, expel him. Call a meeting and declare that he is no longer to be counted as one of you, as a brother in Christ! The strongest phrase he uses is "hand him over to Satan." Here's a man who has chosen to allow Satan to rule his life instead of the Holy Spirit, so now declare it so; release him as a part of the church to fall fully under Satan's dominion. Now, those are strong statements, they sound severe, but remember Paul is already talking about the final end of the discipline process, not its beginning. Jesus laid that out for us. Compare Mt. 18:15-20. Note how every effort must first be made to bring the sinning brother to repentance. First individually, then by a small group and finally by the congregation at large. However, when a person resists the admonishing of the whole body, then he is to be regarded and treated as an unbeliever and no longer counted to be a Christian brother. And though the verses that follow are deep, they suggest that what appears to be true on earth is really true, that the church is merely reflecting what God already knows to be true and that the person is what he has been declared to be, an unbeliever. But having said that, note:

2. its purpose: restoration (5b) There is no room for a haughty spirit in discipline, a feeling of "better than thou". It is to be done in a spirit of great sorrow (verse 2) and with a view to restoration. Jesus said, If he listens, you have gained your brother. That's the idea! Paul says that the intended result is the destruction or ruin of the flesh. The meaning of the phrase is tough to figure out. Paul could be talking about physical death (there is a sin unto death, John tells us). Or he could be talking about letting the person be so miserable they repent and are delivered from the control of sin. But the point is that the action of discipline is with a view that the person will ultimately be saved, call on Christ and trust in Him for salvation. Compare 2 Cor. 2:5-10 where Paul mentions this same man again and says, "Now take him back; he's repentant, the discipline has had its effect, forgive him and forget it." If we treat a person as a pagan or a publican, an unsaved person, what does that mean? Should it be with scorn and self-righteousness? No, it should be done with love and caring like you would treat any unsaved person! That's how you go about practicing discipline in a local church when a member sins grievously and continually. It's a humbling thing, but God commands it to be done. But He does not command it without explaining it. Paul finishes up by talking about:

III. The Principles of Discipline He approaches them in two ways, first as:

1. applied to the church (6-8, 12-13) There are three important principles here:

a. the danger of tolerance (6) Church discipline is necessary because sin is like cancer; it spreads and multiplies. Paul compares it to yeast. A little bit of yeast put in a lump of dough will work its way through the whole thing; that's how sourdough keeps growing. And if one person in a church gets away with flagrant sin, it will spread. Others will be enticed and emboldened to try it and ultimately, it will be the ruin of that church as a testimony for Christ! Tolerating sin is dangerous!

b. the duty of purity (7-8) It's not just a matter of practicality; it's a duty to God. Paul, in using the analogy of leaven, now turns to the Old Testament for an illustration. The sacrifice of the Passover lamb began the feast of unleavened bread which lasted a week, during which time all leaven was to be removed from their houses, of course symbolizing purity. Well, Paul says, "Christ, the real Passover Lamb, has been sacrificed on the cross and we're living in the days of Unleavened Bread. We have a duty to God to stay pure and clean." Christ died for our sins; we have an obligation to live pure, to get rid of the leaven of sin when we find it in the house!

c. the delegation of responsibility (12-13) God is the judge of all the earth, the judge of believers and unbelievers. But as far as this earth goes, God has delegated the responsibility of discipline to the local church body; they are to discipline their own. God expects it as a part of our obedience and stewardship!

2. applied to the individual (9-11) Of course, the question then comes as to how to relate on an individual basis to people like this. There are two principles to remember:

a. the need to distinguish Some people have the idea that they can never associate with sinners. If a person has a bad habit or looks rough or is living with someone, they won't talk to them or have anything to do with them. That's how the Pharisees were. They accused Jesus of fraternization with sinners. Paul says to prevent that you'd have to leave the world! Indeed, it is the sick who need a doctor! We need to build relationships with sinners, for the sake of sharing the Gospel with them! However, the case here is a professing believer who is involved in grievous sin like immorality, idolatry, drunkenness, or dishonesty. That is an entirely different case. We must carefully distinguish.

b. the need to dissociate As long as a person professes to be saved and practices sin, we are to break off personal fellowship, not to show approval or acceptance of them in any way. Paul says "Don't even invite them for a meal." Now, I don't think that means to be rude or mean to them or to turn your head when you see them coming, but simply to part company for your own protection and for their discipline. You keep on praying for them and caring about them and witnessing to them when you can, but they cannot be an accepted part of your life!

Now folks, you can mark it down that, given the character of our age, churches and in particular Glenside Bible Church is going to face situations like this one more and more. As our society grows more and more tolerant of immorality, it will creep into the church. And we will have to deal with those situations when they come. It's going to break our hearts, but we'll have to do it. I want you to understand it now, so that when it comes you will be ready. We must stand ready to discipline in love when we have to. A tourist in Scotland was driving along and saw a flock of sheep in a field. But one sheep was far away from the flock, limping along with a broken leg, bleating and crying. The tourist stopped and the shepherd came over. She asked what had happened to the lone sheep. With tears in his eyes the shepherd said, "I had to break its leg. It always kept wandering away from the flock and I could not keep chasing it all the time. I find that when a sheep's leg is broken and I care for it and nurse it back to health, it always comes when I call." So, God chastises His sheep to bring them back to Himself and we must be ready to be part of that process, even if it hurts!

1 Cor. 6:1-11 ON SUITS and SQUABBLES

It is only natural for Paul to move on from the subject of church discipline and the responsibility to judge those within the church, to a second area where the church had been derelict in its responsibility, the area of disputes. You know, as long as man has been on the earth, whenever two of us are close enough together to rub shoulders, we get on each other's nerves and argue. And sometimes we get into situations that tend to put us at odds with one another. When I was a kid, the neighbor's cows got loose and trampled our garden and we could have quarreled over it. Years ago, a man fell out front of the church and broke his glasses and blamed us for it. There will always be those kinds of things and we need God's wisdom to work them out, so let's go to Corinth and look at:

I. The Problem of Disputes (1, 6) Corinth is certainly not unique in the problem of having disputes, but note here four key factors that made it dangerous:

1. the presence of disputes between believers We are not talking about disputes with outsiders, but brother against brother! Something is wrong here. There are believers that have animosity toward one another, who want to hurt one another or at least vindicate themselves over each other. And it is not an isolated case like the man in chapter 5, but evidently it is fast becoming a common practice!

2. the appeal to secular courts They were taking their cases to the legal justice system of their day. Now, don't get Paul wrong. He himself used the Roman system of courts and justice in appealing to Caesar. It was not that Paul didn't feel you could get justice in a secular court. He was acquitted and dismissed by Gallio, the proconsul of Corinth when the mob took him in in Acts 18! The problem was believers taking each other to secular court.

3. the lack of church involvement Again, the church was not involved, not doing anything about it, not making any attempts to cause believers to settle their differences between themselves. Most churches are like that! We get too worried about violating people's private lives and so allow members to hold grudges and act in unchristian ways to each other without any reprimand.

4. the terrible witness of it Hear Paul's sad shock: in front of unbelievers! Believers airing their dirty laundry in front of unbelievers, how could they ever win them to Christ? That's where the old "the church is full of hypocrites" line comes from, because we let our sins and problems get out to a watching world instead of dealing with them and it drives people away from Jesus Christ! And with the press we have today, it doesn't take much for the world to know any problems that go on in the church! Now, Paul has two things to say to this whole subject and we would be wise to learn them and to heed them:

II. We Should Judge Our Own Disputes! (2-6) He says the place to judge disputes within the body of Christ is within the body! And just look at his reasoning:

1. we shall judge the world (2) Did you ever stop to think of that? You and I will one day have a responsibility with Christ as judges; we will reign with Him. Compare Dan. 7:22, 27. We're going to be entrusted by God with the responsibility of settling people's problems on earth during the Millennium. What a great deal of trust God has in us! But not only that:

2. we shall judge angels (3) What angels? Well, since God's angels do not sin there will be no need to judge them, but compare Jude 6. The angels who fell with Satan, many of them are confined in the pit, waiting for the end of the Millennium when Satan, their boss, will be finally judged and cast into the lake of fire. They will appear for sentencing in that day. So will all those who are not confined, the demons who wreak such havoc in the world. And guess who will be involved in their judgment, in passing sentence on them: YOU will! What a great deal of authority God has invested in us! So, Paul's point is:

3. we should judge among ourselves (4-6) If God will use us to judge the world, can't we handle little petty disputes among ourselves? If God will use us to judge eternal beings and their destiny, can't we handle the much less important things that happen in this life? He says the church is quite capable of handling these cases! Now, you need to know something about verse 4. It is possible to translate the Greek in two different ways, and the way the NIV has chosen doesn't fit the context well. Look in the margin of your Bible. The men of little account are not believers in the church, but the very unbelievers to whom they are running outside the church, men who have no standing (literally) with the church. His thought runs, "You're going to judge the world; you're going to judge angels; so, when you have little problems do you appoint as your judges people who are outside the church? Shame on you! Why would you run to those who are entrusted by God with less than you are!" Paul's point is clear: believers should not take each other to secular court to settle differences. How should they settle them then? Jesus told us; we saw it last week in Mt. 18:15-17! If your personal attempt at settlement fails, take with you several others (I would say it's a good role for the elders) and if that doesn't work, tell it to the church. The church has that kind of authority in the lives of its people! Now folks, this is serious business. I used some little petty type problems at the beginning, but think of some serious ones such as a husband and wife having serious problems and both are part of the church. The church has a responsibility to reconcile those differences, not a divorce court! Or what about employer/employee problems where both are in the church; it should go to the church not a court! You see, our problems should stay right here and we have the wisdom of God to solve them without turning to secular courts! But that's only one part of the problem:

III. We Should Not Have Any Disputes to Judge! (7-11) in the first place! It is not enough to settle disputes; the fact that there are disputes is bad to start with. The presence of disputes between believers is an indication; it tells us some things:

1. they are an indication of spiritual defeat (7) Satan is in the camp and he has used his oldest and most successful tactic on us; he has set us against each other so we stop being against him! Serious differences are not from God. God brings love and unity, so in such a dispute somebody, or likely both, have a spiritual problem!

a. one or both are not walking in love Love for that brother or sister is all gone; it has been replaced with distaste and dislike. How different from what Jesus said. Compare Mt. 6:23-24. To paraphrase, "Don't come to church and act pious and worship God with a dispute in your life. It is your responsibility to go and get it straight." And notice that the command is the same no matter which the case is. Mt. 18 says if your brother sins against you, you go. Mt. 6 says if he has something against you that you've done, go! You have to love that person and settle your differences before you can serve God!

b. one or both are not willing to sacrifice Paul says, "Why don't you just let yourself be wronged?" That's the spirit of Christ; that's what He did! There are times when you have to let the other person win in order to settle differences, when you have to apologize for things you otherwise shouldn't. You see, you may win the battle, but you'll lose the person in the end. How much better to lose the battle, but eventually win the person! You might have to pay a price to do it!

2. they are an indication of selfishness (8) The old lawsuit game got into their blood and they were wronging one another by it. It was an indication that each was putting self on the throne, instead of putting others before self. The great majority of disputes between believers have selfishness at the root.

3. they are an indication of carnal behavior (9-11) Now here's that famous set of verses that we often use, but we never notice they are set in this context of disputes between believers. Paul's thoughts run like this:

a. the unjust shall not inherit the Kingdom (9) And he gives a whole list of people who are sinners and reminds them that these are the very things many of them were in the old life. In the list is thieves, greedy, and swindlers! That's how they used to act, but:

b. you who were unjust have been justified God washed them from those sins, stood them in his heavenly court and justified them, declared them just or righteous. So, his point is:

c. you must act like what you are! They were acting like they used to act when their old nature ran the show. When we have squabbles between brethren, we're living carnally, acting like mere men, not men who have the Holy Spirit living in them. We must act like what we are! And if we would do that there would not be any disputes to judge in the first place.

We are brethren and Christ's heartfelt prayer was that we all might be one, without schism, without enmity. So, what will you do the next time you have a problem with somebody? Deal with it God's way? Or man's way! I remember two neighbors in my home town who built a literal wall down the middle of their shared driveway. I thought of it as "the hate wall". You can do like they did, take those differences and set them in cement and press your case as hard as you can and try to win and then have to live with yourself when it's all over. Or you can swallow all pride and selfishness and lean on the Holy Spirit and go and fix those differences and be glad for eternity you did. The choice is up to you.

1 Cor. 6:12-20 ON DESECRATING TEMPLES

The human body is perhaps the most marvelous thing God ever created. It is a wonder of intricacy and coordination. One of the most fascinating courses I ever took in college was human anatomy and my reaction after studying all the various systems of the body and how they work together was that of the Psalmist who said, "I am fearfully and wonderfully made!" To most people, the body is a very precious thing; you'll know all about it when its various parts start to fail you! But on the other hand, it is amazing beyond belief what some human beings do to their own bodies. I'm not particularly thinking of the things African tribes do in disfiguring themselves with their distended earlobes, stretched lips, and filed teeth! Some people pump their body full of drugs or chemicals or rip an unborn baby loose from its insides. Some kill themselves and disease their bodies with immorality. The Church at Corinth was evidently not only derelict in disciplining members who fell into sin and in allowing disputes between members to go unmentioned, but evidently a number of them had become derelict in the way they were treating their bodies.

I. Some Practices That Were Going On At Corinth Paul doesn't make an outright list so we'll have to read between the lines here to see them.

1. encroachment of worldly philosophies (12) Notice the NIV's quotation marks around the three phrases in verses 12-13. The reason they are there is that many scholars feel those words are a direct quote by Paul of a slogan the Corinthians were commonly using. They had adopted a favorite saying and more than that, a way of living, that said, "Everything is permissible; all is OK". Now where did that come from? Well, it may have been rooted in Paul's own teaching in regard to the Old Testament law. He taught that we are free from the law, no longer bound to obey it as Israel was. The Corinthians latched onto the slogan, but forgot its point. Then, to make matters worse, they lived in a time and in a city where some very prevalent ideas about the body abounded. The prevailing philosophy of their day said that matter was evil, and so the human body itself was evil. Salvation was a spiritual thing; it had to do with the spirit, not the body. Purification was in the realm of the spirit, not the flesh, so it was OK for the flesh to enjoy itself without restraint. Well, that thinking easily crept into the church and fit right in with "Everything is permissible". So, they were thinking wrongly about their bodies. After that came:

2. enslavement to "permissible" practices Paul alludes to this in verse 12b, but his example is in 13. They had another slogan, "Food is made to be eaten and the stomach is made to eat food!" Now, that could be a reference to gluttony and the ancient customs of gorging and feasting. But probably it refers to the idea of eating foods forbidden by Old Testament law or to eating meat sacrificed to idols, which he takes up as a subject in chapter 8. But the sense is that some of these eating habits, while entirely permissible, had become addictive. Eating is fine; gluttony is not! Eating food sacrificed to idols is OK, but doing it and blatantly offending your brother isn't. Letting anything, even a permissible thing, become life-dominating is wrong. The third level of the problem was:

3. engagement in actual prostitution (15) Evidently, some Christians were finding license in their beliefs to continue to visit prostitutes as they had in their pagan days. After all, Greek society and Corinth in particular was loaded with them. Prostitution was an accepted part of worship at idolatrous temples. It was not frowned on at all. And so, some Christians were desecrating their bodies by it. You see, first they thought wrong. Then they acted wrongly in little things. Then they sinned openly and immorally. That's how sin works. And I'm afraid that it is working that way right now in our own society. Like it or not, the world has colored our thinking to some extent. What the world thinks about morals and sexuality is not hidden. More and more today, Christians are involved in sexual sin; Christians are involved in desecrating their own bodies. Time after time I hear about it or read about it. If there ever was a time when this message of Paul's about our bodies was needed, it is now! First, let's see:

II. Some Facts Concerning Our Body

1. it exists for the Lord (13-14) Paul says food and the stomach are not the ultimate issue; they'll both be gone one day. The point is that God is concerned about the body. It is for Him; He made it to serve His purposes. The Psalmist put it this way in Ps. 139:13-16. God designed, planned, and made your body to be the way it is. It is His creation made for His purposes, not yours. God cares so much about this body that He is going to raise it from the dead and transform and glorify it, just like He did the Lord Jesus! The Lord has an eternal plan and purpose for this body of yours!

2. it is a member of Christ (15-17) Now, member is not like a member of an organization, but literally, a limb of the body, a body part, like an arm or leg. The church is Christ's body and individually we are his body parts (Paul talked about that in 1 Cor. 12). However, it is not just your spirit that is a part of Christ's body, but all of you, the whole person. So, your physical body is a part of Christ's body; you are His physical replacement in the world. He lives visibly now through you! So, when you do something wicked with your body, like sexual immorality for instance, you are taking Christ's body and uniting it with a harlot and becoming one with her. Put simply, what you do with this body affects the Savior; you cannot act without affecting Him; your body is part of His body!

3. it is a Temple of the Spirit (18-19a) Did you notice that your body has a relationship to the Father and then to the Son and now to the Holy Spirit. In verse 18 the word other is not in the Greek, nor is it implied. "All sins a man commits are outside the body". That's not a technical statement, but a general one, that for the most part sins are external matters against others or in what we say or do. But sexual sin is especially serious because it is directly against the body and when you violate your body, you are desecrating a temple. The Holy Spirit lives in you; your body is His sanctified dwelling place. When you sin against it, you are polluting and defiling the Spirit's Temple and that's a serious charge.

4. it is God's property (19b-20) Your body does not belong to you; it was purchased by Christ. He redeemed you, spirit, soul, and body! And the price was great; it cost His life! But the point here is not the magnitude, rather that the transaction was completed by payment. You don't like it when you've paid for something, but somebody mistreats it. You say, "That's mine, I paid for it!" Well, God paid for your body; it is His. You are not free to do to it and with it whatever you like, only what He directs! So, since our body belongs to God by creation and by purchase, since it is a member of Christ and a temple of the Holy Spirit, let me give you:

III. Some Principles Concerning Our Body

1. we should treat our body beneficially (12a) We should care for its needs and see that it is not pressed beyond endurance. We should do what is necessary to keep it healthy and sound; do what is profitable for it. Proper eating, exercise, rest and all those kinds of things are beneficial treatment of God's property.

2. we should not allow it to be addicted (12b), to fall under the mastery or control of anything other than the Holy Spirit. That controlling factor might be alcohol or drugs, either narcotic or prescription! It might be habitual overeating or lust for sex. It might be caffeine! Whenever something has a pull on your body so that it is affected and controlled by it, that thing is out of line! It might even be a very permissible thing, but when it begins to desecrate the Temple, it must be stopped.

3. we should flee from sexual immorality (18) Here Paul gets very direct. The other principles are kind of slippery; you have to decide what's over-eating and what's not. But here Paul is clear. When it comes to sexual immorality, it is not merely, "Don't do it!"; it is "Flee!" Flee like Joseph did when Potiphar's wife was after him (but remember to take your cloak with you!) Run from the slightest temptation to it!

4. we should honor God with our body (20) It is not just a matter of abstaining from evil, but of positively using our bodies to glorify God through service. Use it for deeds of kindness and love and testimony to the love of Christ.

So, how are you doing on these things? What about your body? You may not like it; you may wish it were slimmer or looked differently. You may wish it were stronger or hurt less. But God designed it just for you to have, to carry out His will. If I might just leave you with a Scripture used backward from its context, compare Eph. 5:29. Paul's point is that husbands should treat their wives with the same loving care they do their own bodies, with the same care that Christ treats each one of us. My point is that you should be careful to nourish and care for your own body, just the same way that Christ nourishes and cares for you!

1 Cor. 7 THE MARRIAGE QUESTION

Verse 1 tells us that we have now come to another division of the Corinthian letter. Paul talked about their DIVISIONS in chapters 1-4, then about DERELICTIONS in chapters 5-6. Now, he moves on to their DIFFICULTIES in chapters 7-10. Evidently, the Corinthian church had written him a letter to get some questions answered in areas where they were having difficulties understanding what to do. Their first question had to do with marriage (chapter 7) and their second with eating meat sacrificed to idols or what we'd call questionable activities (chapters 8-10). As we then approach the subject of marriage today, I would like to approach the seventh chapter as a whole. So much attention today is concentrated on the divorce issue mentioned in verses 10-15, that I would like to save that until next time. That was only one small part of the bigger question they were asking, which was really, "Should a Christian be married, and if he is not now, should he get married?" Really, the question is that of celibacy. Evidently there was a party in Corinth who had come to advocate the position that it was more spiritual to be unmarried. That same party has always been around down through church history. It has resulted in the celibate priesthood and the convents of the Roman Catholic church. But on a practical level, it faces every young person and unmarried person in the church at large today. It faces your children and grandchildren and one day it may face you, so listen up anyway!

I. General Principles About the State of Marriage

1. singleness is good (1) There is nothing wrong with it. Paul was a Jew and in Jewish society marriage was almost mandatory. Sometimes we unwittingly give out the same impression. People think you're weird if you're not dating or not married by the age of 25 or 30. They pity older singles and call them "unclaimed blessings". Remember the greatest missionary that ever lived, the Apostle Paul, was single! He may have been widower, but during the whole time of his ministry he was single. It's OK!

2. marriage is good (2) It is not only good because it is God-ordained, but in a society like Corinth or America where sexual immorality so abounds that it is the norm, Christian, monogamous, marriage is a wonderful God-given deterrent to immorality. But it is only good when there is the complete fidelity of a single husband and wife.

3. sex within marriage is good (3-6) We'll save the details for next time, but the point is that sex is God-ordained part of the marriage relationship. There has often been in church history, and even to the present, a feeling that sex is a kind of evil necessity allowed in marriage, but totally wicked outside of it and in itself. Some Christians have tried to be married and live pure from it! It shouldn't be. Sex within marriage is normal, wholesome, and even commanded!

4. God's design is more important than yours (7) Paul had a wish. He found that being single helped him immeasurably to serve God and wished the same for others. However, Paul says God does not have the same design for everyone. God in His wisdom wants some to be married and some not. You may have a wish too. It may be like Paul's to remain single, or more probably the opposite, to get married. I've known people, especially young ladies, who were consumed with the idea of getting married! Listen, if God is the most important person in your life, then what He wants is the most important thing for you. And there is no decision you make in life which requires more praying about and care than the decision of whether or not God wants you to marry! And the time to think and pray about it is before your emotions get involved with someone, because then logic seems to go out the window!

II. Practical Thoughts About the State of Marriage If you analyze this chapter carefully, you will find that Paul says there are three key factors involved in the marriage decision:

1. the self-control factor (8-9) It is no secret that people are different; some have a far greater sex drive than others. It is part of their physical make-up. Some people find sexual temptations and lustful thoughts a constant and difficult problem that requires fighting. Others are not bothered much by it. Now, marriage provides a God-given, wonderful outlet for that kind of pressure and Paul says that if you're the type of person who would constantly burn with lustful passions and have to fight them and perhaps be weak enough to fall into immorality, then it is definitely better to marry, other things being equal.

2. the circumstantial factor There are two sets of circumstances to be taken into account:

a. your personal circumstances (17-24) The point of these verses is that being a Christian doesn't demand that you change your physical circumstances. Most of the Corinthians, of course, had been saved as adults out of idolatry. Paul says, "Where are you right now? If the Lord leads you to change, well and good. But unless you're in sin, there is no need to change, just because you're saved". That's the question to ask, "Where are you right now?" God's first design is for you to be serving Him to your utmost right where you are! If you're not, then don't expect God to lead you or that getting married will fix it! Don't change where you're at, unless you're sure it is of God!

b. your environmental circumstances (26) Paul mentions "the present distress". Perhaps this is a reference to anti-Christian sentiment at Corinth (remember the riot against Paul?) Single people would find persecution easier to handle. Perhaps there are other circumstances, like the burden of caring for a parent, the call to a dangerous field, and so on, that would indicate God might want you remain single. In other ministries, it would be far easier or even necessary to be married.

3. the service factor (29-35) The key thing in life is serving God and marriage certainly affects that. There are two aspects to consider:

a. the entanglement aspect (29-31) The truth is that the time is short. Whether or not Christ is coming soon is not the issue. Death is coming anyway. The time is short; you have only a limited opportunity to serve God before you go off the scene of history forever. Nothing we have now is forever, not material things, not our joys or sorrows, not even marriage. But all these things tend to bog us down in this world. I like the NIV word engrossed in verse 31. If being married will cause me to become engrossed in the things of this world and start living for those things and totally hinder my service to God, then I had better think twice about it!

b. the anxiety aspect (32-35) Marriage brings responsibilities, and necessarily so. A married person must care for their spouse and family and must please them as well as the Lord. That's not bad; it's just the way it is. It may not entangle your heart with worldly things, but it may bring to you a whole load of anxieties and cares that may hinder the service to which God has called you. Jim and Betty Elliot decided not to marry because of their individual callings to the mission field; later they married on the field. The point is, BE SURE! DON'T MARRY BECAUSE ITS THE THING TO DO, OR BECAUSE IT'S EXPECTED, OR BECAUSE OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS!

III. Direct Applications to Those Considering Marriage Paul speaks directly to several groups here to make application of these principles. Please note that none of these apply to a person who has no scriptural right to marry (verse 11 says there are such), but rather to those who have legitimate freedom before the Lord to marry.

1. to those not currently married (8-9) Non-married might be a better translation. It seems to picture those who had been married, but were widowed, or perhaps those who were not married, but were involved in sexual immorality before salvation, so as not to fit the classification of virgins mentioned later. But it could apply to all currently unmarried people. There is:

a. freedom in the Lord They can marry; they are free, but the key is:

b. the self-control factor Can you control your bodily desires and passions? Can you live pure if you're unmarried? If so, then perhaps you should. If not, then perhaps you should look to God to marry. This factor is perhaps the bottom line factor.

2. to those never married (25-38) This seems to apply (verse 28) to both male and female. The whole section of verses 36-38 is confusing. The KJV and NAS translate it as though it is talking about a father allowing his daughter to get married. The NIV translates it as though it is talking about a young man with plans to marry a girl. You can't tell from the Greek, because the word daughter is not there; it simply says, his virgin. That could mean either his daughter or his fiancé! However, it doesn't matter, because in either case we are talking about never-married persons and the advice is the same:

a. freedom in the Lord (28, 36) It is not wrong to marry; there is complete freedom in the Lord to do it, but he urges never-married folks to consider:

b. the service factor (32, 35) Can you have undivided loyalty and devotion to God and obey Him and go where He says to go and be married? If you can truthfully answer yes, then well and good. If not, think carefully about staying single.

3. to those once married (39-40), the widows and widowers who are now alone. Note again that there is:

a. freedom in the Lord There is nothing to prevent it; marriage is not eternal, so that you are betraying that first spouse now in heaven. You are free, but consider:

b. the circumstantial factor Paul judges that you'll be happier without all the problems that it may bring. So, he implies that the factor of circumstances is the key. Compare I Tim. 5:9-14. Here's quite different advice. Young widows or widowers should marry out of the practicality of it in their own circumstances. Older ones are probably better off single. Again, the circumstances of your life and surroundings are key factor.

So, to the unmarried of every type, this chapter says that the most important thing in this life is not marriage, but God. You need to put God in first place. You need to be ready to do what He wants and please Him above all. Isn't that for all of us, married or unmarried? So, Paul's challenge is that you may have to be ready to lay down what you now consider the most important thing in life for Him. Are you?

1 Cor. 7:10-16 THE DIVORCE QUESTION

The questions the Corinthians had about marriage not only included the question of whether to marry, but also the whole problem of divorce. Evidently, divorce was a common thing in the pagan society around them and they were not clear as to Christ's position on this practice. Especially, there was the problem of people who got saved and now found themselves married to unbelievers. What should they do? It is obvious that God's answers to these questions are greatly needed in our day too when divorce is becoming more and more normal and acceptable, not just in the world, but in the church as well. The first thing Paul does for us is to lay out:

I. The General Principles of Marriage Let's begin a little ahead of our text:

1. fidelity (2) Notice it is each-their-own, singular. That means no polygamy or multiple husbands, no concubines, mistresses, or consorts, no third parties. Marriage is based on the commitment of one husband and one wife to remain totally consecrated to each other until death. That's what marriage is; at least that's what God says it is. Now, the world has a hard time with that, but fidelity is God's #1 requirement!

2. sexual regularity (3-6) The couple should have a regular, active, and mutually satisfying sexual relationship. That is to be characterized by:

a. meeting the other's needs The husband's body belongs to the wife and he must be first concerned to meet her needs. The wife's body belongs to the husband and she must first be concerned to meet his needs. And if both practice that principle, there will be a satisfying relationship and temptation to be unfaithful will be greatly reduced. Notice that this is not a suggestion but a command! Paul only mentions:

b. the sole exception The only time that regular sexual activity can be broken off is if both agree to do it for a short period, so as to give themselves fully to prayer. But it is only to be a brief period and then to resume immediately, Paul says. And even this exception is not mandatory, but a concession, something allowable if both wish to do it.

3. permanence (10-11) Now Paul affirms that he is repeating what Jesus taught in Mt. 5, Mt. 19, Mk. 10 and elsewhere, that marriage is permanent. In other words, if a husband and wife want to obey God, then they will not divorce each other. Now, notice how specific Paul is about:

a. the command of no divorce The verbs he chooses here are important and so is the fact that he mentions two possible situations:

(1) no leaving yourself The wife (or husband) is not to leave, not to say, "Well, I'm tired of this marriage; I'm leaving." So, you can't just throw in the towel and quit and walk away. Conversely:

(2) no sending away the other The husband (or wife) can't send the other away, tell them to leave! Now please note that these things are a command, a "must not!" Some might feel, "Well, it's OK if I do it, as long as I'm ready to be obedient in taking the consequence of remaining single". No, this is a command. It is the leaving or sending away that is wrong in the first place! The consequences Paul mentions are for those who have already broken their marriage and are now convicted and want to know God's path! It is not a "take your pick" situation where you can choose to stay in the marriage or remain single!

b. the consequences of divorce Now, once a marriage has been broken and the person wants to know what to do, Paul has an answer:

(1) permanent singleness That is not something to be said lightly. It seems cruel to see a person who sinned by breaking their marriage without cause have to remain alone the rest of their life. But God knows best and God says that is the right path. It is either remaining single or:

(2) eventual reconciliation Here is God's real goal: to put it back together. Just as Israel His bride left Him and yet He is committed to bringing her back to Himself one day! Now, this whole subject opens up a real can of worms such as, "What if the divorce happened before you were saved? Or "What if you were an innocent party and your partner divorced you?" Or, "What about the exception clause or abuse?" But let's not get bogged down in all those things today. Paul is teaching a general rule; two believers who are married should not divorce, period, and if they disobediently do, they should be reconciled or remain permanently unmarried! However, having given the general rule, Paul does mention one:

II. The Specific Case (12-13), the case where a believer is married to an unbeliever, presumably because both were unsaved when they married and now one is saved and the other has not believed. What should they do? This was important to clarify because Jesus never covered the subject directly in His teaching and because someone might have been reading their Old Testament and read the book of Ezra and saw where the Israelites had married foreign women against God's commands and, now that they were repentant, God told them to break up those sinful unions. Well, things are different now. That was Israel. Some things God did differently with her. But now for the church age, Paul gives God's command. There are two cases:

1. if the unbeliever stays, don't send them away If the unbeliever wants the marriage and stays in it, you don't leave or send them out and here are two reasons:

a. you are a means of grace to them (14) Now, this is a strange verse to us, but perhaps not to anyone with Jewish background. Would not the union of a Jew and Gentile produce a mixed unholy offspring? That was the case of the Samaritans whom the Jews despised for their tainted blood! Sanctified here does not mean saved, but rather, set apart. The Christian spouse does not get salvation for the other family members, so they are genuinely holy. Rather, it means that the blessings and benefits that come to the Christian, abide on the home as well. The Christian influence on the spouse and children, the answered prayer, needs being met, and all of God's other blessings come to the home through you. You might feel it better to take the children out of such a mixed influence and leave. But God says, "No, stay! I will bless the home for your sake", just as Potiphar's house was blessed by Joseph's presence or Laban's by Jacob's. You are a channel of blessing to the family but further:

b. you may win them to Christ (16) If you leave, you never will! But if you stay, there is a good possibility that you may win that unsaved spouse to Christ, whether it is a husband or wife. Compare 2 Pet. 3:1-2. However:

2. if the unbeliever separates, let them (15) If the unbeliever says, "This isn't the person I married; I didn't bargain for this Christian stuff" and separates himself, in that case there is a direct command to let the spouse separate, not to follow after them or try to force them to remain in the marriage against their will. Paul comments:

a. the believer is not "enslaved" This one word bound has caused more controversy than any other part of this text and requires careful scrutiny. Look with me at verse 39 and see it there. The Greek word there means literally to bind together, either physically or legally and it is speaking of the legal binding of husband and wife. It is said to be until death. It is the same in verse 27 (KJV), where the NIV says married and means legally bound in marriage. You find the same word in Rom. 7:2, where again Paul says the legal marriage bond lasts until death. However, the word in verse 15 is an entirely different word; it is from the Greek doulos (a slave) and literally means enslaved! Paul is saying that the believer is not in the slavery of having to follow that departing unbeliever about and putting up with every attempt of the unbeliever to get rid himself, fighting tooth and nail to keep that other. He is to let go; he no longer owes the duties and service that go with marriage to that person. See:

b. God's primary concern is peace A forced staying will bring constant strife. God wants peace in that home and between those two persons, and letting go will be necessary to accomplish it.

Now, this whole section has a general point: God wants your marriage to work. God's way is never to run out, but always to hang in there and pray and persevere and make it work. Unless death intervenes, you only get one shot, so you have to make it your best. Some of you today may have difficulties in your marriage that are known only to you. Commit yourself to solving them. Get help if you need it. Get Christian counseling. Some of you have an unsaved husband or wife and sometimes they make it rough on you and you feel like leaving or getting rid of them. Hang in there! Persevere. They can still come to Christ; it is not too late. I know one lady whose mother prayed 40 years for her husband and he finally got saved! Many of you have pretty good marriages. Maintain them. Guard them carefully. It is so easy for things to fall apart!

1 Cor. 8 THE LAWS OF LIBERTY

The second difficulty which the Corinthians had written to Paul about was whether or not to eat meat that had been sacrificed to idols. Now, you must remember that the Christians in Corinth were, like us, a minority. Most people worshipped at one or more of the idolatrous temples. This idolatry was a life-dominating and culture-dominating thing. Much of the meat available in the marketplace came from the sacrifices offered in the temples. It could not all be eaten by the worshippers there and so was sold publicly. The Jews would not touch the stuff because it was associated with idolatry and was not 'kosher'; it had not been slaughtered properly to remove the blood. The Christians, however, were faced with a dilemma. They were not bound by Old Testament dietary laws any longer, but would the use of this meat connect them with idolatry? This question had several ramifications that Paul covers in his three chapter answer. Could they buy it in the market for personal consumption? What if they went to someone's home as a guest and it was put on the table? Or could they even attend one of these pagan sacrifices as an observer and sit down to eat the meal there like everybody else? These questions sound hauntingly familiar to us, don't they? All I would need do is change the word meat to alcohol and temple to night club or bar and the questions would hit home! This matter of meat raises for us the whole issue of Christian liberty or questionable things or things we call matters of conscience, things like the social use of alcohol, cards, dancing, movies, and so on, things that some Christians feel full liberty to do and others stand firmly against. The list changes with time. Things drop off as those issues are clarified, and new ones are added, but the principles we use for dealing with all of them remain the same. There are:

I. Two Laws of Decision-making (1-3)

1. the law of knowledge (1-2) We act on what we know and, being Christians, we know a great deal more in the spiritual realm than unsaved people do. It is God's gift to us. That is our first consideration "What facts do we know from Scripture that relate to the issue at hand." But knowledge by itself has two problems:

a. it is incomplete Paul spelled it out in the 13th chapter, saying, we know in part. Full and complete knowledge will not be ours until we get to heaven. We often make judgments without having all the facts because we can't see from all the angles God sees.

b. it puffs up self Knowledge tends to pride, the old "I know something you don't know" syndrome. We feel we are superior to others who have a lesser understanding of the issue.

2. the law of love (1c, 3) We also act on the principle of love for others as our basic rule and most important command. Now, love has some very positive things going for it:

a. it builds up others Knowledge tends to pride; love tends to humility. Knowledge looks to self; love looks to others.

b. it comes from knowing God The most important thing is not what you know, but Who knows you! The love that you practice is the outward demonstration of the fact that you know God and God knows you! So, in exercising our liberty, we must consider both these laws. Knowledge and love must somehow both govern our actions. Either without the other can go astray. So, the two questions to ask yourself in deciding on a questionable thing are, "What do I know about it?" and "What is the loving thing to do?"

II. Two Levels of Knowledge (4-7) The fly in the ointment here is that not all believers have the same level of knowledge. If we all knew the same truths, we would not disagree on these kinds of issues. But we don't. In thinking about what we know on any issue there are always two levels of knowledge:

1. our level (4-6) Paul lists the facts that he knows about the meat-eating issue. We know:

a. the nothingness of the item An idol is a nothing; it is a hunk of wood or metal or stone. It has no life and no power. There are not many gods, as the pagans claim, but only one God. Therefore, the physical act of placing meat in front of an idol does nothing to it. It is not magically contaminated. It is a hunk of meat. The principle we need to extend this is found in Rom. 14:14. Nothing is unclean of itself. There are no longer unclean foods that are forbidden as in the Old Testament. There are no longer unclean people that should not be touched (as God showed Peter in Acts). God has given us all things richly to enjoy, to make use of for good purposes. And we know:

b. the nothingness of the action (8) From the standpoint of knowledge, it doesn't matter if you eat the meat or not. It is not a sin and has no effect whatsoever. A playing card is a piece of paper with numbers on it; so is a dollar bill. Neither is unclean of itself and playing a game of fish or even poker makes no difference at all (Of course, when you try to take somebody else's money by doing it, that's an abuse of the principle!). Having wine with a meal is not in and of itself wrong; Jesus Himself did it and you can't prove otherwise. (Of course, drunkenness is wrong, as is the misuse or abuse of any of these things.) But see, those things are what WE know. Then there is:

2. the level of others (7) Some people who were converted from idolatry believed in Jesus as the True God, but may still not have learned that other gods did not exist. Or they may now have such a repulsion of idolatry that they consider anything even touched by it as sinful. Making a rule has always been the simplest way to deal with things. Many older Christians were taught for years that it was a sin to ever take one drink or ever go to a movie or ever have hair longer than a certain length. And they took what they were taught and never studied it carefully to find out why and whether it was true in the absolute. So, there are Christians out there with levels of knowledge different than yours!

III. Two Levels of Action (8-13) So here I am faced with the dilemma, to do it or not to do it. I have two levels of action to choose from:

1. selfish: knowledge-based (8) I can act purely on what I know. I can act based on the freedom that I have to eat based on what I know. I can use my "rights", my "liberty in Christ". Or:

2. loving: love-based (9-13) I can consider the effects of what I do on others whose knowledge level is different from mine. You see:

a. love considers the effects of actions (9-11) Love says, "What if somebody sees me sitting here in this pagan temple eating meat who believes this is a flagrant sin and says, 'If he can do it, then I guess I can do it,' so he does and it bothers his conscience and emboldens him to do other things like participate in the actual idol worship and it messes up his relationship with God and ruins his testimony?". Love says I am responsible to others because people watch me. Love says, "What effect will this have on others if I do it?"

b. love considers the cause of Christ (12) If my liberty hinders another believer, then I sin against Christ! Love considers, "Will my doing this further or hinder the cause of Christ?" So, the bottom line truth is:

c. liberty must be regulated by love (13) When knowledge says I have freedom, love must determine whether I exercise it or not! Knowledge gives me the "can"; love gives me the "ought to" or "ought not to". So, rather than give you a clear-cut series of do's and don'ts, I've given you a set of principles that you've got to apply to each of these issues and in every situation. You have to apply these principles day by day, to whether you drink alcohol, to the music you listen to, to the places you go and the things you do, to your personal habits.

I'll leave you with the verse that was on my college's seal, Jn. 8:32 You shall know the truth and the truth and the truth shall make you free. Of course, they liberalized the meaning to say that education brings freedom. But if you read the text, you'll find that our real freedom is the freedom from the bondage of sin. However, Paul writes in 1 Cor. 7:22, He who was a free man when he was called is Christ's slave! Paul always called himself the "bondslave of Jesus Christ". We are at the bottom line servants, and he who would be greatest among us must be the servant of all! The real question to ask yourself is not, "What may I do?" but "How can I serve?"!

1 Cor. 9 THE LIMITATION OF LIBERTY

Remember from chapter 8 that Paul had laid down two laws to be used in deciding questionable issues, the law of knowledge and the law of love. His point was that love supersedes knowledge; sometimes we have to give up what we may have the freedom to do for the sake of others! What a message for us today when the cry is, "my rights!" We have rights for everybody today, except unborn babies and Christians who want to pray in schools! "Lay down your rights" is not a popular message now, nor was it then. Paul knew that many of the Corinthians would be upset with him over his answer so he proceeded to do what every good preacher does in areas like this; he showed how he had practiced this in his own life! Now, the first 14 verses of this chapter are concerned with:

I. Paul's Rights as an Apostle (1-3) Paul was an apostle. That may not mean much to you but to be an apostle is a very heavy thing. The office of apostle was that of the highest leadership within the church. It was superior to the elders or deacons of the local church. An apostle was originally one sent by Jesus to plant the church in the world. Some of the Corinthians evidently had some question about whether Paul really was a legitimate apostle or not. Paul says, "I am an apostle; I have seen Jesus personally in a vision and He sent me to plant churches; I brought you Corinthians to Christ; you are the proof that I am an apostle. And if anybody should have freedoms and privileges, it should be an apostle!". Then he lists three freedoms he should have:

1. the freedom to eat (4) This refers back to 8:13, meaning the freedom to eat meat sacrificed to idols. He had already shown how he knew that there was perfect freedom to eat that meat because idols are nothing. And as an apostle who certainly should have knowledge, he, of all people, should have that liberty.

2. the freedom to marry (5) Paul was unmarried. Many of the other apostles weren't. This also refers back to what he said before. Compare 7:8, 28. He had complete freedom to marry, just as much as anyone.

3. the freedom to receive support (6) Now he mentions his right to have his physical needs supplied by the brethren, so he could be free to preach. But lest anyone might argue with that right, he establishes it in five different ways:

a. the natural examples (7) The nature of things tells you it should be that way. Soldiers are supplied with weapons and provisions by their country. They don't have to stop and make a living. Vineyard owners eat from their plants; they have their needs met by what they put their effort into. Shepherds who care for their sheep enjoy milk and wool from them. So, Christian workers have a right to support!

b. the unmuzzled ox (8-11) Paul says it was first intimated in the law. The rule about not muzzling an ox while threshing grain is not a humanitarian law for oxen, but a teaching that those who labor should enjoy the fruits of it and that applies to Christian workers!

c. the example of other leaders (12) Other Christian leaders were being supported by them and they felt an obligation to do it.

d. the Old Testament priests (13) The full-time servants of God in the Old Testament had their needs met by the worshippers and it was still going on. It was an acknowledged principle of God.

e. the teaching of Jesus (14) The Lord (Jesus) taught it also. Compare Lk. 10:7-8. Jesus expected that his apostles would be provided for by those they taught. Paul says it extends even further and is a church-age principle. That's why we have a paid clergy today. It's not that we pay them to do a spiritual job for us. We supply their material needs so that they can be free to minister to our spiritual needs! So, Paul had the right to expect support and all these other things, but see:

II. Paul's Renunciation of His Rights (15-18) Paul had more rights than any of them, yet he gave them all up! See:

1. the limits Paul imposed on himself While he had complete freedom to eat meat that had been sacrificed to idols, he says in chapter 8 that he won't do it ever again because it might cause someone to stumble. While he had freedom to marry, chapter 7 makes it clear that he has no intention of it. All those years of serving God, for the sake of his ministry he never married. He gave up the comfort of having a wife and family so others would hear and be saved. And though the Corinthians had the obligation to support him financially, and he had the right to receive it, he never used that right there, so no one would say he was in it for the money! In Acts 18, which tells the story of the founding of the church at Corinth, the first thing it says is that Paul found Aquila and Priscilla who were tentmakers like himself and he stayed and worked with them. Evidently that was true the whole 1½ years he was there. He worked all day making tents and ministered during off hours and at night and whenever he could! He limited his own right, even once there was a real church established that could have supported him! He gave up his rights. Why?

2. the view Paul has of himself He is not some nice guy who voluntarily is doing some nice thing for which he should be rewarded. He is simply a slave of Jesus Christ under orders to go preach the Gospel in the best, most effective way possible. His rights don't matter to him; what matters is carrying out the charge the Master has given him! My, we Christians are always whining about how much we give up for Jesus, how we sacrifice this and that! Listen, we are simply carrying out the orders He has entrusted us with! You can have all the rights and freedoms in the world but if you're not ready to lay them down for Christ's sake, then something's wrong with your spiritual life. If you're not ready to lay down the use of alcohol or cards or music or anything else for Christ, then your commitment has holes in it! But you may still say, "Why should I? Wouldn't it be better to insist on my rights and change the thinking of others?" Well, look at:

III. Paul's Reasons for Limiting His Liberty (19-27) Paul has four major reasons why you should be willing to lay down your rights and privileges:

1. to save as many as possible (19-23) When Paul was with Jews, he observed Jewish customs, ate kosher food, and so on. He didn't have to, but he did or he would never have won any! When he was with Gentiles, he did not carry those Jewish customs over, but operated as a Gentile Christian himself. Why? So as to not turn them away from the Gospel. When he was with weak brethren who would never eat meat from the idol's temple, he made sure he didn't either. His rule was not to put anything in the way of people being drawn to Christ. And you had better not either! I don't want anyone someday to stand before God and point a finger at me and say, "I saw him do that and I figured if that's Christianity, I don't need it; he's no different from me!"

2. to win a reward (24-25) Paul wanted a crown, a prize. Paul says, "Be like an athlete in training. Deny yourself all the liberties you have, to get in shape so as to run to win the prize." But the prize is not a material reward, Compare 1 Thess. 2:19-20. The reward is in that day around the throne to see all those that have come to faith through our influence and have grown to maturity through our help and have affected others. Listen, it won't matter one day whether you got to listen to some of the music you liked or got to enjoy the taste of wine or got to live where you wanted to live or got to buy the cheapest meat in the market. Those things will be over and gone. A human soul is the only immortal thing in this world, the only thing you can take with you. And what a reward it will be to see those who have been influenced by you standing there with you on that day. How sad it would be to have no one there that you have helped!

3. to prevent discipline (26-27) Paul had a purpose, a goal in life. He didn't run like a runner without a course or finish line. He didn't box the air. He knew his life was meant to count for Jesus Christ and he was careful to discipline himself lest he should overstep the rules and be disqualified! The word is really disapproved. His fear is really that he would end up out of the race, that he would become useless to God and God would have to stop using him and take His hand of power and blessing off his ministry and discipline him! Conversely, the Corinthians were abusing every liberty they had, even the use of spiritual gifts and the celebration of the Lord's Supper, and what does Paul tell them? Compare 11:28-32. Paul doesn't want that. He wants God to be pleased with his life and ministry and to bless it to the end. I hope you do too.

I don't know what rights and privileges you may be concerned with. It may be a legitimate opportunity that you forego for the sake of appearances. It may be an apology that is due to you but you forego waiting on it and take the first step. It may be a place you'd like to go or a thing you'd like to do but you can't because of others. If you dwell on those things, you'll get mighty frustrated. Dwell on this instead: One day in the twinkling of an eye you'll be in heaven and there will be a throne and on it will be Jesus. And all the angels of heaven will be gathered around in shimmering white and with them a vast multitude so great that no man can count them all, those who have been redeemed thronging around the throne. And one by one the names are called: Peter, Luke, James, and Lois, Tom, Mary and at last your name is called and the attention of heaven focuses on you and at last the word comes, Well done, good and faithful servant! And a chorus of AMENs goes up all around you and you look and there is the paper boy who you treated so kindly and gave a tract to and there is the neighbor you so carefully witnessed to and there is the little child you let sit on your porch swing and gave up time for, now grown up. And on and on and on. Friend, I'd give up anything for that, wouldn't you?

1 Cor. 10:1-13 THE DANGER OF LIBERTY

There is a great danger any time you have a privilege and that is presuming upon it, presuming that your privilege will carry you through, no matter what your behavior is! Put simply it is to think, "Because I am this, I can do this and get by with it!" For example, "Because I am the boss, I can come in to work late and nobody will say anything." Nowhere is this danger more devastating than in the spiritual realm. "Because I am a Christian and I am secure in Christ, I can sin and get by with it, God will forgive me anyway!" Paul's been talking about limiting your liberty in questionable things out of love for others. But what if I don't! What if I don't want to give up my rights and lay down my freedom for someone else. After all, I know I'm saved and can't lose it. I don't HAVE to do it! Well, Paul's closing remark in chapter 9 is, "I discipline myself carefully so God doesn't put me out of the race, so He doesn't discipline me!" No, you won't lose your salvation, but God may discipline you for your behavior and, as we saw briefly in the end of chapter 11, that discipline may go as far as taking you out of this life if you can no longer be used! Now Paul gives:

I. The Illustration of Israel (1-10) Paul says twice (verses 6,11) that God dealt with Israel in such a manner as to make her an example to us, literally in the Greek it says a type, an Old Testament illustration of a New Testament truth! Israel, as a whole, pictures the believer in Jesus Christ. She never lost her standing with God which she had by grace through God's promise to Abraham, but when she fell into sin, God disciplined her severely! In fact, look at:

1. the general case of their overall experience in the wilderness. Note two things:

a. all were privileged in the things of God Look how many times the word all appears here. All..all..all. They all had the privileges but:

b. most perished under God's discipline (5) An entire generation died there in the wilderness in 40 years. We are talking about a million graves! In fact, only two made it across the Jordan into Canaan, Caleb and Joshua! Even Moses and Aaron died on the other side. God's discipline extended even to physical death! An entire generation were disapproved, taken out of the race, cast away as far as God's use of them and plan for them was concerned. Now let's look at the five specific examples that Paul gives, five cases of things that could disqualify you and I from God's service and bring discipline.

2. Case # 1: Lust Paul first lists the privileges and then the failures. They seem to correspond to each other and we'll look at them together in five cases.

a. they knew God's care (1) They were under the cloud. It went before them to guide them and extended back over them to protect them from the sun with its shade and at night it became fire to warm them in the desert cold! They knew the care of God and how He was leading them and protecting them, but still:

b. they desired evil things (6) This seems to point to Numbers 11 where they were on the way to Kadesh and got tired of eating manna. They remembered the delicious variety of foods they had in Egypt and demanded that Moses give them meat! They always wanted the world and its pleasures! So, God sent them quail to eat for a month, but He also sent a plague that killed hundreds of people and guess which ones (11:34), the ones that craved, and they called the place Kibroth Hattaavah, the graves of craving! Some of the Corinthians missed their meat too, didn't they? (chapter 8). Some believers miss the things they used to enjoy too! The fact is, getting caught up in wanting things God doesn't want you to have is a pretty quick way to get put out of the race!

3. Case # 2: Idolatry

a. they knew God's power (1) They had passed through the sea. They had stood and watched the Egyptians dead on the seashore and knew that the Lord was mightier than all the idols of Egypt! But at the first opportunity:

b. they practiced idolatry (7) You remember the story of Exodus 32 and the golden calf. They heard God say, "Don't make any graven image" with their own ears, yet they did it anyway. But you may not remember what happened next. Moses drew a line and said, "Whoever is on the Lord's side cross the line!" and then sent the Levites out with swords and 3,000 of the worst offenders were killed! Some of the Corinthians missed going into their idolatrous temples too! They were asking about going back to eat! But you know, letting anything get into first place in your life other than God is dangerous. It might be a job or person or a hobby, but you could end up out of the race!

4. Case # 3: Immorality

a. they were united with Moses (2) The word baptized here must have another meaning, because they didn't get wet! And it does, to identify. Baptism identifies us with the person and work of our Lord Jesus Christ. Through their exodus, they were identified with Moses their leader and through him to the Law he brought them. They said to Moses, "We will obey!" But:

b. they committed fornication (8) While they were on the plains of Moab across Jordan in Num. 25, the Moabites used a piece of advice they got from Balaam the hireling prophet, and used their pretty young women to entice the Israelite men into sin and idolatry. It worked quite well. This time 23,000 died under God's discipline for uniting themselves to another. Some of the Corinthians were going down that road too. Remember chapter 6 and Paul's advice about taking Christ's body and joining it to a harlot? The warning stands. Sexual immorality will put you out of the race; it will keep you from being used of God as His servant and hearing "Well done" one day!

5. Case # 4: Contempt for God

a. they knew God's provision (3) They ate spiritual food. The Psalmist calls their manna, angels' food, Jesus mentioned it as bread from heaven. They knew God was providing for them but:

b. they tested the Lord (9) This is in Numbers 21. They said, "God is not providing; this stuff isn't real provision and there is no real food or water". This time His discipline was poisonous snakes. Many of them died and many more would have, except in repentance they turned to look at the serpent up on the pole and lived. Some of the Corinthians were testing God by the way they treated the Lord's Supper and in other things. Some of them were already getting God's discipline. Treating the things of God with contempt is another way to get put out of the race!

6. Case # 5: Rebellion

a. they were shepherded by Christ (4) Paul alludes to the water they got from the rock on two occasions, but says the real Rock that was meeting their needs was Christ. He was with them those 40 years in the wilderness, shepherding them and caring for them and giving them life but:

b. they rebelled against Him (10) The murmuring was not simply complaining in Numbers 16, but rebellion against Moses' authority by Korah and his friends saying that they too had God's authority. In reality, they were re-bellings directly against it and this time the ground opened up and swallowed them and 250 others were burned in fire. Some of the Corinthians were awfully proud too and trying to rebel against Paul's authority over them in Christ, but really against Christ Himself. Some believers today want to say "No" to God about this issue or that one. This too can bring discipline and you can be set aside.

II. The Application to Us (11-13) Israel is our example. She had great privilege with God, but that did not prevent God's discipline. She stands as a warning to us. And Paul concludes this section with two great truths:

1. your standing never avoids God's discipline (12) This verse doesn't simply mean that anybody can sin, though that is true. It means that nobody, not Paul, not even you, is immune to God's discipline for sin, even though you are saved. It's a great presumption to think, "I can sin and God will not punish me!" whether you're saved or not. And you know, we have lost something today. We are not afraid of God anymore. Oh, I'm not talking about terror and being afraid to pray to Him. I mean the healthy fear that a boy used to have for his dad because of some trips to the woodshed! We ought to know God loves us and is close to us, but we ought to be greatly afraid to displease Him! Paul was!

2. God will always help you to avoid sin (13) It's not that God just says, "Don't sin" and then it's up to us to fight off temptation by ourselves. He has committed Himself to help you in two ways:

a. He limits the temptation for you He puts a limit on it; He won't let any temptation come into your life that is too strong for you to handle with His help and then:

b. He makes a way of escape for you He always makes a way out, and often that way is as simple as the next verse, "Flee!" Don't go near it! So, you have no excuse for sinning. You can't say, "I couldn't help it, there was no way to avoid it, it was too much for me."

And that leaves responsibility squarely on your shoulders. You have great privileges in Jesus Christ but you must still choose to obey Him or risk His discipline. A little three-year-old boy didn't like soap and water. One day his mother said, in trying to reason with him, "Surely you want to be clean, don't you?" "Yes," he replied, "But can't you just dust me off?" God wants clean children and if He needs to, He'll scrub hard! So don't abuse your liberty by using it for sin!

1 Cor. 10:14-33 THE PRACTICE OF LIBERTY

In this section Paul finishes up his discussion of the issue of Christian liberty which was brought on by the issue of eating meat that had been sacrificed to idols. He had given the Corinthians the general principles to apply: knowledge and love. He had shown them how right it was to lay down their own freedom for the sake of others. He had warned them against falling into sin through liberty. But he couldn't leave the subject without giving some concrete answers to their specific questions as to what to do. In essence, he walked them (and so us) through how to apply liberty in practice. Now there were:

I. Three Situations Requiring Application (14-30) The first is:

1. the case of public participation (14) He's not merely advising against idolatry, but answering the question of whether they could eat in the idol's temple. Could they in public sit down with idolaters in a temple and eat meat that had come from the altar? Paul's answer was an unequivocal "NO! Flee it!" Paul says, "NO WAY" and then gives his reasoning:

a. the illustration of the Lord's supper (15-17) He challenges us to think about our communion meal. It does two things. First, it is literally "a fellowship" in the body and blood of Christ; it identifies us as ones that are trusting in Christ. Second, it identifies us with the others who partake as one body, one "fellowship". He then uses:

b. the illustration of Jewish sacrifices (18) The Jews would bring their sacrifices and offer the required portions on the altar and then they would get to eat some of the meat. And that eating identified them with God, to whom the sacrifice was made, and with each other as worshippers of God. Consequently:

c. the application to the idol's temple The same basic thing would happen when a believer would enter an idol's temple and sit down to eat the meat with the pagan worshippers.

(1) it identifies you with demons (19-22) Now the actual idol statue is nothing and the meat offered is just meat, pure and simple. But the worship that goes on is not simply ignorance that does not matter; it is the worship of demons! Behind every false type of worship is Satan and his demons. So, to go into the temple and participate identifies you with the worship of demons, with something God has expressly forbidden! Further:

(2) it unites you with idolaters It binds you together in a fellowship and oneness with unsaved people who worship idols; it makes you one with them and you're not! Remember how God disciplined Israel for this very thing!

(3) it hurts your testimony (23-24) The physical action of eating itself may be permissible, but in the public context it is not constructive and is not for the good of others! It ruins your testimony for Christ! So, when it comes to publicly participating with unbelievers in questionable things, the answer is a direct, NO! It identifies you with the world, with Satan's crowd, and ruins your testimony. Don't do it.

2. the case of private consumption (25-26) But what about the meat that was sold every day in the marketplace and was so common that it wasn't even marked anymore as having come from the Temple? Could a believer buy it and take it home and eat it? Should he ask where it came from? Paul says, YES. Buy your meat and eat it and don't ask questions. There seem to be two thoughts here:

a. if no others are affected, there is freedom Since the eating is at home and the buying is not offending anyone, it is ok to use what liberty you have in Christ. Simply:

b. regard it as created and given by God Give thanks for it and regard it as you would any other piece of meat. So, when it comes to the private use of liberty where it doesn't affect others and doesn't cause any stumbling in your own family and can't be misconstrued by anyone, then you may use your knowledge and exercise your freedom in Christ.

3. the case of personal invitation (27-30) What about when you're invited to someone's home, particularly an unbeliever, and they feed you meat? Do you have to ask if it came from the temple? Should you then refuse to eat it? Paul says, Yes and No. He gives two determining factors:

a. don't raise questions that offend your host The host is an unbeliever. Your job is to be a witness to him. Don't raise questions of your own Christian liberty that are going to offend him and turn him off to Christ. There is nothing worse than a Christian who goes to someone's home and then acts offended by them doing something that bothers him! Use your liberty in a way that will win them. But:

b. do respect the conscience of others present Suppose some other believer is present who is really offended by eating meat sacrificed to idols and he points it out to you. Then don't eat, so as not to offend your weaker brother, so that while you are giving thanks to God, he won't be sitting there condemning you in his mind as a hypocrite! Paul says we should do the most loving thing for all those who are present in a personal situation like that. If you have liberty to do either thing, do whatever is for the highest good of others. So, if we can make a general rule of thumb that Paul gives here concerning questionable practices, it would be this: in a public situation, No; in a private situation, OK; in a personal situation with others, do what will best minister to those present. Now, before leaving the subject entirely, Paul gives us:

II. Three Principles For Determining Action (31-11:1) I've restated them in the form of three questions that you can ask yourself as a test in any given situation. First, ask yourself:

1. Can I do this to the glory of God? (31) - THE KNOWLEDGE QUESTION It deals with whether the thing is sinful in itself or not. Can I do this and be sure that I am not sinning? Do I feel that I could talk to God while I'm doing it? If you have any doubt, don't do it. Paul wrote the same thing to the Romans in 14:23. If it cannot be done in faith, in complete confidence before God, then it is sin to you; don't do it! Now, once you've answered that, ask:

2. Will I cause anyone to stumble? (32-33) - THE LOVE QUESTION It deals with the effect of the action on others. If I do this, will it hurt anybody, my children, other believers, unsaved people who don't understand? Will it in any measure hinder anyone from coming to Christ or from growing in Christ? If it will, don't do it! Then, once you've answered this, ask:

3. What would Christ and godly leaders do? (11:1) - THE ADVICE QUESTION It deals with the input of others who are examples to you. Unfortunately, the chapter division interferes with the connection here; verse 1 belongs to this whole subject in chapter 10. Ask, "Did Jesus ever face anything similar?" or "What would He do if He did face this situation?" That will usually settle it! But also ask, what do other godly leaders do about this? You are certainly not the first one faced with your problem. Other godly people have faced it before you and are continuing to face it. What is their example and advice to you? Proverbs says that in many counselors there is wisdom; get some!

Daniel faced this exact same thing many centuries before the Corinthians or Paul ever did. He was a teenager, carried off from Judah to Babylon as a captive, chosen by the idolatrous king of Babylon to be trained to enter the king's service. And the king sent him a daily ration of food and wine from his own table, which had been dedicated to idols. And Daniel's reaction is recorded in 1:8, But Daniel resolved not to defile himself with the royal food and wine. With a little study they could have learned from Daniel's example. Perhaps we can learn from Daniel and his three friends who not only wouldn't eat, but wouldn't bow to an idol, and make the same kind of commitment, "We resolve not to do anything that will defile us and make us unfit for God to use."

1 Cor. 11:1-16 THE SUBJECT OF DRESS UNVEILED

At chapter 11 the Corinthian letter enters its third major section, DISORDERS, things that were being taught or practiced wrongly in the church. The fourth disorder concerned doctrine, the teaching of the resurrection in chapter 15. The third disorder in chapters 12-14 concerned spiritual gifts and their use in worship. The second disorder concerned the Lord's Supper, and the first, which we look at today, concerns the subject of dress. Many a sermon has been preached on this theme from that day to this, but very few of them on this passage. Some people who are greatly concerned about dress are quick to say, "the Bible says..." when they talk about how we should dress or how long our hair should be, but are short on actual Biblical proof. Others are totally unconcerned about dress because, after all, it is only an unimportant, outward thing and it doesn't matter to God. And they err in the opposite direction. I hope that we can get a balanced view of the subject, so let's begin with:

I. The Outward Problem (5) Word has come to Paul about a practice that is going on in church meetings at Corinth. Women are getting up to pray or to prophesy unveiled. Please note: The problem in this passage is not women speaking in public or leading worship. The question of women's role in the church comes later. I would have you notice that Paul does not forbid them to lead in prayer nor to prophesy (speak the Word of God), not at all. In fact, he assumes they will continue to do that. The Scripture carefully saves the leadership roles of elder and pastor and deacon for men, but it does not forbid women to have a role in ministry to the congregation. However, what concerns him here is their dress when they do it!

1. the cultural custom of the veil In first century culture, it was the normal practice for women, and particularly married women, to wear a kalumma or veil. This was true among the Jews, the Greeks, and the Romans. It was not the Moslem or Oriental face veil meant to hide the identity, but usually what we would call a hood, an extension of the garment that was pulled up over the head as a covering. If you notice, verse 6 says that to go about unveiled for a woman is equivalent to having her head shaved or shorn. That was the punishment for an adulteress. For a married woman to go in public without the veil was culturally similar to a married woman today refusing to wear her husband's wedding ring. It marked her in some sense as available, perhaps loose. So, in the church you have:

2. the public display of improper dress Now of course, in the home a wife would not have to keep a veil on, but in any gathering they would. But now women were getting up before the congregation to pray or testify improperly dressed, much as if a woman in our church would come up to pray in a bathing suit or dressed in some revealing fashion. Why were they doing it? Probably because, as in chapters 8-10, the cry at Corinth was "all things are lawful". "We don't have to worry about those minor things anymore; we are free in Christ. Veils are hot and unbecoming, neither practical nor beautiful. We can throw away that custom and tradition; we don't need it anymore."

II. The Deeper Problem There is a deeper problem here and to understand it, you must first understand:

1. the principle of headship (3) The word head here is the word for a physical head, but is used, as we do in English, in another sense, the sense of source or leader. We talk about the headwaters of a river or the head of an organization. Paul says:

a. God is the head of Christ Here is a truth hard to understand. The Father and the Son are both God. They have equality of Being. But while in Jn. 10:30 Christ said, I and my Father are One, in Jn. 14:28 He said, the Father is greater than I. What can that mean? Christ submitted Himself to the will of the Father; He placed Himself under the authority of the Father. A similar, more understandable situation is this:

b. Christ is the head of man He is our source, our authority, the One to whom we belong. And in similar fashion:

c. the husband is the head of the wife This is not talking about all women and all men, but about those in a husband and wife relationship. Within that God-invented relationship, God has placed man as the head of the home and family. That was done by God in Gen. 3:16, Your desire shall be for your husband and he shall rule over you. They had equality of being, but the husband was given the headship position. Now we are ready to see:

2. the problem with improper dress It is three fold:

a. it brings dishonor to your spouse (4-5) If a man covers his head in worship, it brings dishonor to His head (Christ). The Rabbis started the custom of men wearing a veil, a tillah, to cover their heads in the synagogue as a symbol of unworthiness. Paul says that ought not to be. We have open access to the Father through Christ. To cover the head is to do dishonor to the finished work of Christ our Head as though it weren't enough! But for a woman to unveil, to dress improperly in public, brings dishonor to her head, that is, to her husband! What would you think if the wife of one of our elders got up to pray wearing a bathing suit? You'd think, "What kind of a rebellious wife does that man have? Don't they have a good relationship? How can he let her do that?" It is a sign of rebellion in the home. Further:

b. it brings disgrace to yourself (6) You'd think something else too, "What a floosy! Who'd ever dress like that in public?" It would disgrace not only her husband, but herself. When you dress improperly, it not only dishonors your spouse but also yourself, because we do judge by outward appearances, don't we?!

c. it defiles your spouse's glory (7-9) Man was created in the image of God; He displays God's glory. God delights in mankind; He loves and treasures us. He built the world for us. He's preparing heaven for us. We are His glory, but when we dress wrong, we defile the thing He treasures! When a man in Paul's day covered his head, he was defiling God's glory. And a wife is the glory of her husband, the thing in which he delights, his treasured one. When she dresses improperly, she defiles her husband's glory, mars his treasure! So, Paul says, wear the veil. Show that you belong to your husband as an obedient wife. Dress properly so all will know it. And just in case anyone was still reticent about it, he adduced three other reasons to wear it:

II. The Reason This Problem Matters I'll just mention briefly:

1. it is observed by the angels (10) There is lots of discussion about this verse. I think angels are God's book-keepers; they are always present to record our works as believers.

2. it is anticipated in nature (13-15) Women have almost universally from early times let their hair longer than men. It is a kind of natural covering that distinguishes them from men. It is not unfair that women should wear the veil and men not. Nature seems to have anticipated this custom.

3. it is practiced by others (16) It was universal church practice to conform to this cultural standard. However, lest it slip by unnoticed, Paul puts here:

III. The Caution Concerning This Problem (11-12) Lest any man should become proud, thinking that this argument of Paul's teaches the superiority of men, or lest any woman should become angry, thinking this argument teaches the inferiority of women, Paul sets the record straight. God created both mutually dependent on each other. He used man to bring forth woman, but now uses woman to bring forth man. Neither is independent or can do without the other. This problem is not a superiority/inferiority issue. It is a question of God-given order among His servants! But most important of all, let's look at:

IV. The Application of This Problem to Us The most obvious question is, "Where are all the veils? Does God still want us to follow this custom?" Some churches have answered, "Yes," like the Amish and Mennonites and many of the Brethren churches and even the Roman Catholic nuns who wear head coverings. But obviously, the majority of the church of Jesus Christ does not do so. Why not? The answer is that most of us feel that Paul is here dealing with a cultural situation that applied in his time, but which no longer applies in the same way. The wearing of a hood or veil has no significance in our culture; it has lost all trace of its original meaning so as not to apply to us directly, much the same as the Old Testament ceremonial laws do not apply to us since we are not Israel in the land of Canaan. What we do need to do, however, is to pull out and apply the truth that Paul is teaching here and I think it is two-fold:

1. our dress should honor God The way we dress, man or woman, is important because we are living representations of Christ. What people think of us as they see us will ultimately reflect on Him. If our dress is old and stodgy and unattractive then people will think that about our faith in God. If our dress is revealing and sensuous, then folks will question the purity of our faith. If our dress is clean and appropriate, then people will get good impressions of us and be ready to listen to us about our God.

2. our dress should honor our spouse Our dress should never be the kind that will tempt others to look at us with lustful thoughts. It should be the kind our spouse would be proud to have us wear, that he or she would be proud to have their most precious treasure seen in.

Have you given any thought to the way you dress lately? Have you thought about what others might think when they see you? Is your dress honoring to God? It doesn't have to be expensive and it doesn't have to be new. But is it clean and modest and proper? Will it stand in anyone's way to hinder what you might say to them about Christ? I know it's what's on the inside that counts, but the world doesn't. And we'll never get to tell them if we don't think about the outside.

1 Cor. 11:17-34 WHOSE SUPPER IS THIS?

The second disorder in the Corinthians' church life concerned the Lord's Supper. Now, when you think of the Corinthians celebrating the Lord's supper, don't think of the way we do it today. Don't think of a fine church building; there were none. Don't think of little cups and racks; there were none. In fact, don't think of a thumbnail-sized piece of unleavened wafer and a sip of grape juice. They celebrated the Supper much differently from the way we do.

I. The Observance of the Supper When Jesus initiated the Lord's Supper it was at the Last Supper, which was a Passover Meal. He used the normal unleavened bread that was broken early in the Passover meal and the last cup of wine that was part of it. When the early church began to celebrate it, they, of course, did not celebrate it as a Passover meal when they met together weekly, but it seems they did begin the custom of sharing a meal together and celebrating the supper in the context of the common meal. By the time Paul wrote, it appears that they had a clear two-part approach. First was the common meal called the agape or love feast, which was then followed by a separate bread and cup called the Eucharist or Thanksgiving, which we call the Lord's Supper. In later generations, the meal was completely detached, leaving the Lord's Supper to stand by itself, as we usually do it. Various manners of observing the Supper have evolved down through the years. Some use a common cup while, others use an individual cup. Some go forward to the chancel, while others stay in their pews. The exact manner in which we celebrate the Supper is not so important; Jesus was not instituting a ritual, but a remembrance. Whatever manner causes us to think of Him is OK. But though their manner of observance was quite different from ours, the ways in which they abused the Supper are much the same:

II. The Abuses of the Supper (17-22) Paul was really upset with the practices that were going on at the love feasts. It seems to me there were three major problems:

1. disunity with one another (18) There were divisions, cliques, little groups, that ate together, probably the same divisions he was referring to in the early chapters of the book. They came together to celebrate the symbol of the body of Christ, yet they had divided the living body of Christ! Christ does not want you to come to His table with bitterness and an unforgiving spirit in your heart toward other believers. He does not want you coming with bad feelings and divisions. The Supper is the sign that makes us one. Compare 10:16-17. We cannot come divided.

2. disrespect for the Lord (20) Some of them used the Supper as a time of feasting, of indulging in eating and drinking to quench their hunger and thirst. Some rushed to eat without waiting for others. Some even became drunk. It was not really the Lord's Supper they were eating, but their own! They showed disrespect for the very thing that was to remind them of their blessed Savior. That wouldn't apply very much the way we celebrate the supper, although it might give us something to think about for covered dish dinners when you see the plates piled a foot deep! But we can show disrespect for the Lord and His table in other ways, like coming to it with known unconfessed sin in our hearts or by having an area in our lives where we have refused to obey God. That is not taking seriously the fact that the Supper reminds us of. Jesus died for our sins; how can we any longer live therein? We could do it by taking the Supper as just another religious ritual, not remembering Christ. We must come with hearts right toward God!

3. disregard for other believers (22) Theirs had evidently become kind of a bring-your-own type of affair and some had lots to bring, while others were very poor and had nothing. And the ones who had lots flaunted it and showed no care for the poor with their crust of bread. The love had gone out of their love feast! And you don't have to be divided to be uncaring and selfish. Don't come to Christ's table with a heart that is self-centered, one that doesn't care about the other members of the body, that stands idly by and refuses to lend a helping hand when someone is sick or in trouble, one that doesn't even take time to pray for the needs others express. Come with a heart that's in love with others and puts them first! No, the supper they've been taking is not the Lord's Supper. He proceeds to remind them of the true meaning of the Supper.

III. The Meaning of the Supper (23-26) It is a three fold reminder:

1. the bread is a remembrance of His body It is to remind us of the suffering that His body endured for us on the cross, how it was "broken" there on our account. The key is "for you". It was an unselfish act.

2. the cup is a remembrance of His blood The color reminds us of His blood shed for us on the cross, the fact that He gave His very life for ours. It was our very life that was at stake and He sacrificed His for us.

3. the supper is a proclamation of His death and return It is more than a reminder; it is a proclamation, an announcement, a message in symbol, that Jesus died for our sins and that because we are still doing it, we are yet waiting for His return. That is the Lord's Supper, not a ritual but a remembering of the most sacred fact of our faith. I read the story of a Christian who had a dream and, in his dream, he saw the Lord going up Calvary, crown of thorns on His brow and blood flowing from His beaten back. He watched as a cross was laid down and Jesus stretched upon it. Then a man began to drive the nails and, in his dream, he began to cry, "Stop, stop". He couldn't see the man's face but kept yelling until at last the man turned around and he saw in horror that it was himself! He awoke in a sweat and realized anew the true meaning of Christ's death. He had nailed the Savior to the tree by his sins. That's the story this Supper proclaims. I eat it; I take it in me; I recognize that His body was given for me, that His blood was shed for me. It's a serious matter, which brings us to look at:

IV. The Seriousness of the Supper (27-34) We can boil these verses down to three key facts that show how serious the Lord's supper is:

1. abuse of the supper is against the Lord (27) When you come to the table in an unworthy manner, you sin against the body and blood of the Lord. He's not talking about having the ceremony exactly right. He means that if you come to the table with known sin harbored in your life, with strife between you and another believer, or with a life full of selfishness, then you are, by your life, tramping on the very cross that this Supper reminds you of. It is a sin in God's sight; like trampling the Son of God underfoot (Heb. 11:29) and counting the blood of the covenant as an unholy thing!

2. abuse of the supper will bring discipline (28) Just like any other sin, God will not let us cling to it without disciplining us. Some of these folks had become sick and some had died. God had taken them home to stop their dishonoring His name. Sometimes discipline comes in other ways like failure, loss, lack of supply, and so on, but the important thing to know is:

3. self-examination will avoid discipline (31) If we scrutinize our own lives and change what needs changed and repent of what needs repented of, God won't have to discipline us! If some of those Corinthians had just stopped and looked at themselves, they would have been alive and healthy!

So, verse 28 tells us what we ought to do: examine ourselves, search our own hearts and be honest before God. Are you in a state of disunity with somebody? Determine to make it right. Is there known sin that you're hanging on to? Have you been caring about others? Exercise 1 Jn. 1:9. Let's all bow our heads in prayer and prepare to celebrate the supper.

1 Cor. 12 The Nature of Spiritual Gifts

The third disorder in the Corinthian church had to do with the use and abuse of spiritual gifts. It seems to me the primary problem related to a rampant, uncontrolled, and confusing use of the gift of tongues. And it must have been a major problem, because Paul gives three chapters to dealing with it. In chapter 12 he talks about the nature of spiritual gifts, in chapter 13 he lays out the motivation behind spiritual gifts which is love, and in chapter 14 he explains the exercise of spiritual gifts in worship. Today we'll consider chapter 12. First of all, Paul tells us that spiritual gifts are:

I. Based on Commitment to Christ (1-3) These verses are written against the background of pagan idolatry from which these Corinthians came. Christianity is not the only place where some of these actions occurred. You may not be aware of it, but the phenomenon of tongues, going off into ecstasy and speaking, occurs in many other religions including Islam, Hinduism, and animism. It occurs in the cults today. I once met a man who was part of The Way International who said he spoke in tongues, but would not say that Jesus is God. There are also sometimes healings or other signs. But it is basically associated in these contexts with demon possession! The presence of what looks like spiritual gifts in itself does not make it so. The bottom line is whether a person confesses Christ as Lord and Savior. Without that commitment there are no true spiritual gifts.

II. Explained in Detail (4-11) Three terms are used here, gifts (4) which means capacities or abilities given by God, service (5) which means ways or opportunities to use what you have to serve God, and workings (6) which means ways God works in people's lives. So, a spiritual gift is some capacity or ability you have, which you use in some way to serve others, and God uses to work in their lives. Now Paul tells us four general things about gifts.

1. the gifts summarized

a. they have a variety of appearances (4-6) They may appear to be very different. Some seem very spiritual like preaching or teaching, while others seem very mundane, like helping or organizing. However, what they are doesn't matter as long as you use them to serve and God can use them to work in people.

b. they have a common Source (4-6) No matter what the gift is, it is from the Holy Spirit, used to serve the same Lord Jesus, and used by the same God to change people's lives! A spiritual gift is not something you do, something that should swell your head with pride. It should be acknowledged as coming from God!

c. they are for the common good (7) Gifts are not meant to build you up personally, but to bless others. That's what's wrong with a lot of the modern charismatic or Pentecostal movement in their emphasis on tongues as a personal gift to draw you close to God. All gifts are for ministry to others, to build up others in the body.

d. they are distributed by the Spirit (11) They are not something you seek, but something you discover and develop. The Holy Spirit puts them there according to His plan and will! If God wants you to preach like Billy Graham, He'll give you the ability. Gifts are not something that should be personally sought after in that sense. You don't have to pray for God to drop them on you. Rather, ask God to help you see ways that you can use the talents and abilities He's given you for Him!

2. the gifts listed (8-10) Rather than try to identify all of these specifically, let me point out that this is not meant to be an exhaustive list. Verse 28 adds more! The gifts that God gives are changing; new ones are added all the time, like flying an airplane, using a computer, or photography. Don't try to limit what God can use!

III. Illustrated In The Human Body (12-26) The way the gifts function can be best seen by using the illustration of the human body and comparing it to the church, which is called Christ's body. Here are four important truths:

1. we are a unity of many individual parts (12-14) There are fingers and toes and eyes and heart and liver and stomach. We are a bunch of very different parts gloriously united into one functioning unit. That is true worldwide. We are people from every land, every language, every walk of life, every appearance, yet united into one Body by the Holy Spirit. It is also true in the local church body. We are all very different in many ways, yet one Body in Christ.

2. each of us contributes to the whole (15-20) Just think if you were merely a whole pile of fingers grown together. You'd feel well but couldn't see to do anything! Every part serves a necessary function for the good of the body, even eyelashes and fingernails. And so, every one of us contributes some necessary function to the whole body and just as God designed your human body to function, so He has designed the church body with everything it needs to function. So, note:

3. we cannot exist without each other (21-25a) Every part is indispensable, so your eye can't tell your feet to "bug off" and go it alone. Each of us need what the others of us provide spiritually. The next time you wonder what good some person is, remember that you need them, even if you think they're worthless! You are not the big cheese, the most important part, no matter what you think. That's why divisions cripple the church so badly! Hence:

4. we must be concerned about each other (25b-26) I've noticed with my teeth that if an upper one aches, the lower one hurts too. You can have a headache that upsets your stomach. All the parts share in some measure the feelings of the others. So, we must learn to relate to each other that way, to realize that we are one body and that what happens to each other matters a great deal. When someone else gets hit by a car, it's just like me severing a finger. When another has a problem, it is my problem.

IV. Applied In the Church (27-31) Verse 28 tips us off that now Paul is going back to the local church context where the gifts are utilized, and giving us some principles to apply in relating our gift to the local body we're in.

1. God has placed us within our local body God did the appointing. God takes just the right people with the right gifts and puts them in the local church. The fact that we have the gifts we do and that we belong to this local fellowship is no accident but part of the design and purpose of God.

2. we should emphasize those gifts which edify most There is an order here assigned to the gifts, an order of importance. Now, this is a broad list ranging from the gift of apostle to the gift of helping others. No gift is unimportant or useless. But the Corinthians have been stressing speaking in tongues and the personal edification they get out of it. Look where Paul puts it in the list! Last! They wanted to emphasize and glorify the gifts that they enjoyed most. Paul emphasizes those which benefit others the most. He says in verse 31 that if you are going to desire gifts, desire the greater ones, the ones that bless others the most. He'll pick that theme up again in chapter 14.

3. we should not envy the gifts of others (29-30) We can't all be apostles or all be teachers, as there would be no students left! It would not be healthy. We should not go around envying the gifts others have. Rather we should concentrate on developing what we do have to God's glory. You will never be a Billy Graham, but he'll never be you either! Don't look at others and think, "Oh, I wish I could be like that!" In the hallway after a concert at our church, I heard a young lady say to the soloist, "I wish I could sing like you" and her reply was, "Oh no! You be what God wants you to be; that's what's important!"

What should you do? First, ask what your gift is. Ask others that know you well. Second, ask how you can better use it in the context of this local church, what opportunities for ministry there are here. And third, get busy using it!

1 Cor. 13 The Motivation of Spiritual Gifts

This is one of the most beautiful and oft-quoted chapters in the Bible. It is, no doubt, the most complete description of just what God's agape love is really like. But when studying it we must remember that it lies squarely between chapter 12 and chapter 14, which have to do with the problem of the abuse of spiritual gifts in the church. Paul did not simply have a digression in thought and compose a beautiful ode to love and then excuse himself and return to his subject in chapter 14. As 12 ended, he was showing that we relate to each other as different parts of Christ's body and that our spiritual gifts minister to one another. In 13 he's saying that love is what makes the gifts work; it's the motivation behind the use of our gifts. In fact, love has a three-fold relationship to spiritual gifts:

I. Love Completes Spiritual Gifts (1-3) Here Paul mentions five spiritual gifts: tongues, prophecy, knowledge, faith, and giving. All of them were gifts being exercised at Corinth, all of them very wonderful gifts. But none of them were complete in themselves. Each one was lacking something. Without being exercised in love, they were useless. In fact, they ceased to be spiritual gifts at all. We've all heard of charlatans who could preach wonderfully and yet in the end were found out to have been living ungodly lives all along. Without love, using a gift is just another action. Love is the completing factor. It gives them three things:

1. it gives them power (1) The sounding gong or clanging cymbal are just noise by themselves, electrifying for the moment, but gone instantly. A gift without love has no spiritual power, no reality. Love makes the gift a tool of the Holy Spirit and causes it to be used in people's lives!

2. it gives them purpose (2) I can have eloquence and understanding and faith enough to move a mountain, but all those things are no good without love. If I don't use them in love for other people, they have no purpose.

3. it gives them profit (3) Here's a man who gives away everything he has to others and even sacrifices his own life. But he doesn't do it out of love for them. He does it to be seen by others, to make a name for himself, or he does it by force. It does him no good; he already has his reward, as Jesus said. You can teach and preach and help and organize, but unless you love, there will be no reward for it at the judgment seat of Christ!

II. Love Characterizes Spiritual Gifts (4-7) Now, if love is to be the root and source every time we use a spiritual gift, then we can say that love characterizes the gifts. The things that are said here about love itself are also being said about spiritual gifts being exercised in love. The list divides into three parts:

1. those using spiritual gifts should be: (4a)

a. patient The KJV word longsuffering is more true to the original. It means the ability to endure others, to be wronged and not retaliate, just as Christ endured the worst that his captors could hand out in silent suffering. A person truly exercising their gift in love can be wronged and not seek to return it, unlike the Corinthians who, in chapter 6, were dragging each other into court!

b. kind Kindness is consideration for the needs of others and in love trying to meet those needs, unlike the Corinthians who in chapter 11 would sit at their "love feast" and feast and pay no attention to the hungry poor brethren at the next table. Rather it is being like Jesus who was touched by the fact that the crowd hadn't eaten all day! I've seen preachers embarrass mothers with crying children by saying, "Take them out of the service". That man has obviously never sat in a pew with a child! A real spiritual gift is exercised with kindness!

2. those using spiritual gifts should never be: (4b-6) The first three of these are similar:

a. envious We should never be jealous of somebody else's possessions or position. Love doesn't care that somebody else's gift is more public than our own, that somebody else gets patted on the back and clapped for, while we go unnoticed.

b. boastful This is when you're on the other end, when you're the one in the forefront. Those with true spiritual gifts never point them out, never brag about them, never draw attention to them. When you see some brother who has done a very fine thing saying, "Look what I've done", then look out!

c. proud Boastful has to do with the mouth. Proud has to do with the heart and is the root of boasting. Pride (the negative kind) is the very opposite of love; it is really self-love. Here are the Corinthians, abounding in spiritual gifts, tongues, prophecies being made and so on, but all the while divided against each other, each envious of the other and boasting that their group was the right one. Proud! True spiritual gifts cannot operate like that!

d. rude Rude is the opposite of kind; it is being inconsiderate of others, insensitive to their needs, not caring how what you say and do will affect them. Often this comes out more in our speech. This kind of rudeness was going on in the very worship at Corinth in chapter 14. People were disrupting the service and interrupting each other. There is no spirituality in that.

e. self-seeking This means looking to see that our own needs get met before the needs of others. That's where the whole issue of eating meat sacrificed to idols comes in. Many were more concerned about their own stomachs and having plenty to put in them, than about the spiritual effect it would have on others.

f. easily angered In fact, there's no easily in the Greek. Love has a hold on the temper. A person with true spiritual gifts is not prone to anger; he or she does not fly off the handle and lose control.

g. unforgiving This is a book-keeping term that means to keep a record of wrongs. A person serving by the power of the Holy Spirit doesn't have a little black book in which he writes down the sins of others and says, "I'll get even!"

h. delighting in evil instead of truth Isn't this what they were doing back in chapter 5 where they had a man living in incest and were taking pride in him rather than expelling him? Those truly exercising gifts of the Holy Spirit are not tantalized and delighted by sin; rather they love right and truth and morality!

3. those using spiritual gifts should always: (7) Here are the four universals of love. A person using his gifts in love does these things:

a. protect This is literally to roof someone, that is, to shelter them from harm or pain. Love watches out for the weaker brother and the dangers that lurk for him.

b. trust does not mean to be willingly blind, but rather means continuing to trust those who have proven trustworthy. It is not suspicious and always ready to believe the worst or the next rumor that goes around!

c. hope is a trust in God for the future, with the certainty that what God has promised is coming. Those using spiritual gifts are to be looking ahead, not moaning about their circumstances.

d. persevere means to remain true in all circumstances. People with true spiritual gifts stick and stay; they are not the type that fall away when difficulty arises or problems come. Now, if you see a person using a "spiritual gift", no matter what it may be, yet there's no love, if these characteristics are not true of him, then he is not motivated by the Holy Spirit. He's motivated by the wrong spirit. In fact, love is so important that it not only characterizes all the gifts, but:

III. Love Surpasses Spiritual Gifts (8-13) It is the greatest quality we can possess or display. And here's why. Paul tells of:

1. the temporariness of the gifts Spiritual gifts are temporary; they are for the here and now. They are not intended to continue on forever. Gifts are intended to bring the church to maturity and when it is finally mature, they will no longer be needed. When we get to heaven, faith and hope will be obsolete; we will have reality instead. No one will be oppressed or needy and need help and we'll all sing pretty! Spiritual gifts are tools for the maturing of the body, not ends in themselves. They are only temporary. But see:

2. the permanence of love Love never fails; it never stops, ceases, or becomes obsolete. It stays the same forever, both our love for God and for each other.

You see, the outward acts will cease, but the motive behind them, the driving force of love is forever. So, it is far more important that you have a heart full of love, that the Holy Spirit fills you with love, than that you have some great gift, talent, or ability. As 14:1 says, Follow after love! That is how all men will know that we are His disciples, not because we speak in a tongue or preach with eloquence or sing with great beauty or have a wealth of Bible knowledge, but simply because we love.

1 Cor. 14:1-25 WHAT ABOUT TONGUES?

One of the most frequently asked questions in the Christian world is "What about tongues?" It has been one of the most confusing and divisive issues of our time. There is a rather large segment of the modern evangelical church who are our brothers and sisters in Christ who claim to exercise or at least seek after this gift. And it seems that in the early church of the first century, there was also one particular segment in the church at Corinth which was doing the same thing. The gift of tongues is never mentioned in any of the letters to other churches; indeed outside of 1 Cor 12-14 it is only mentioned four other times in the entire New Testament! Yet the exercise of this gift had become so prevalent at Corinth and caused such a problem in the church that Paul in essence gives three chapters to correcting it. Let's look at the tongues problem in Corinth and maybe we can get an answer to the modern question "what about tongues?" Let's look first at:

I. The Practice of Tongues (1-5) There is no better place to go than the source where it all started:

1. in Acts - 2:4-11, 10:44-46, 19:1-7 Tongues only occurred three times in Acts that were recorded for us, first on the day of Pentecost and the other two instances were similar, so let's concentrate in Acts 2. Notice three things about tongues. It was a:

a. gift of unlearned existing human languages The word tongue means language, so to "speak in a tongue" means to "speak in a language". Note in verse 8 that they were speaking existing human languages which this crowd could identify and understand. The incoherent babbling that is often described as tongues today actually occurs in other religions. It was quite common in the mystery religions at Corinth. What made the tongues-speaking of the Christians of note to anyone was that it was actual distinct languages! Note in verse 7 that these were languages that those who were speaking them did not know. Now, secondly, their speaking:

b. communicated a message to the hearers Verse 11 shows that those who heard them understood the content of the message. What astonished them was the fact of the speaking, not the message, but the message was clear to them. Then note that their speaking was:

c. not continued nor exercised at will We never read that this group, having done it once, did it again. We do not see them practicing it in the fellowship of believers. The gift was bestowed for a particular occasion, and that was also true in the other two instances. It could not be exercised by the person at their own discretion as other gifts like teaching could.

2. at Corinth Things were quite different here. They were getting up in the worship service and:

a. speaking languages no one understood (2) There were not people there to interpret or understand these languages. In fact, the speakers themselves did not understand what they were saying. The speeches were mysteries, known only to God, requiring His divine gift to interpret and He wasn't giving it! Secondly, they were:

b. speaking for their own edification (4) It obviously wasn't doing anybody else any good because they couldn't understand it and verse 14 tells us that those speaking really didn't learn anything by it either. Yet it built them up. How so? Not by the content of what was spoken, but simply by the fact that they spoke. It confirmed to their minds that they were God's children, that they had a spiritual gift, and so it made them feel good and safe and secure and close to God to do it. And it seems that they put quite an emphasis on this gift; it seems they held it up as the highest of the gifts, the one to be sought after above others. Have you noticed by now that the modern use of tongues follows very closely the Corinthian pattern rather than the Acts pattern? I have been in meetings where people "spoke in tongues" and have talked to many who claim to exercise that gift and it is almost always in this same pattern, where nobody understands and where they don't understand it, yet it makes them feel close to God! So they regard it in an elevated position above all the gifts and seek after it!

II. The Problem with Tongues (6-19) of both the Corinthian and the modern variety. If indeed the speaker is actually speaking a language and not just emotional gibberish, he still has four problems to overcome:

1. it does not benefit others (6-12) It doesn't impart a message to anyone or teach anyone anything. In fact, it is totally useless to others. To prove it, Paul uses some natural observations:

a. the purpose of sound is to communicate (7-8) In music, nobody understands the tune unless the notes are distinct from one another and arranged in a pattern. When they play "charge" on the bugle, nobody will know to move unless the trumpet plays a clear audible pattern. The very purpose of sound is to communicate. Almost every sound we make, even a scream or "Ouch", is to communicate something, even if that something is a mood or feeling. Now look at speech:

b. the purpose of language is to convey meaning (10) Languages or tongues are arrangements of sounds for the purpose of communication, for conveying meaning. Now, here are people speaking languages, but with no attempt to convey meaning. It is contrary to the purpose of sound and of language itself! It loses all normal function and does nobody any good because they can't understand it. And though being useless is bad enough:

2. it hinders fellowship (11) We are supposed to be one as brethren, but when a person speaks in a non-understood language like this, rather than drawing us together, it drives us apart; it makes us seem like foreigners to each other. Remember the Tower of Babel? Men could not stay together once their languages were confused! It drove them away from each other in frustration, while those that communicated in the same language stayed together! And this is especially true when this gift is put up on a pedestal as the most important gift. It divides church after church. My home church went through it at one point years ago!

3. it does not benefit you (13-15) It's nice to feel good inside, to be joyous in your inner self, but tongues really does not benefit you, because you have no understanding of what is being said. And that component of knowing, understanding, and learning is very important. That is what distinguishes us most as being in God's image. Animals feel. People reason and think and learn. So, it does not genuinely cause you to grow spiritually. Further:

4. it prevents agreeing in prayer (16-17) When we come together, we are to pray and Christ will be in the midst. We are to agree together in prayer and it will be granted. But how can we agree if we don't know what the other person is saying? How can we say, "Amen", "So be it," if we don't know what we're agreeing with? So, Paul finishes in verses 18-19 by saying that in the church five understandable words are better than 10,000 in a tongue that you can't understand. Now, by this time you must be asking, just what is:

III. The Purpose of Tongues (20-25) Paul spells it out for us:

1. they were for a sign to unbelieving Jews (20-22) Paul goes back to the Old Testament and quotes Is. 28:11-12, which is a prophecy about the nation of Israel, that God would speak to them by using people speaking foreign languages and even by Gentiles, but they still wouldn't listen to Him. 1 Cor. 1:22 says that the Jews demand a miraculous sign in order to believe something. That is what they were used to in their history. That's why they said to Jesus, "Show us a sign!" Tongues were originally meant to be a sign to unbelieving Jews that the message of the Christians was genuinely from God. Remember all the three cases in Acts. The first in Acts 2 is to convince a crowd of Jews of the truth of the message Peter was about to preach! The second in Acts 10 is where Cornelius and his Gentile friends receive the Holy Spirit and the Jewish apostles don't want to believe God that would save Gentiles, yet they are convinced by the sign of tongues! In Acts 19 we have Jewish proselytes, followers of John the Baptist, and when they receive the gift, it convinces not only them, but they, no doubt, go along with Paul into the synagogue and become his proof to the Jews! The gift of tongues was the method God chose to validate the message of the apostles, primarily to Jewish unbelievers. But even even at that time Paul says:

2. they are confusing to unbelieving Gentiles (23) If now this sign gift is used in a church service with no interpreter present, Gentiles would be confused rather than impressed. 1 Cor. 1:22 says that Greeks demand wisdom! They want understanding, something they can grasp. Just think what your reaction would be, even as a believer, if you walked into a place where everyone was speaking in unintelligible languages? You would be uncomfortable and want to leave, wouldn't you? But:

3. intelligible speech saves unbelievers (24-25) Prophecy, the declaring of God's word, intelligible meaningful communication, is what builds up the saints and is what saves unbelievers! I have yet to meet the person converted by observing tongues, but I've met plenty who were converted by the preaching of the Word!

So, my friend, maybe you've sometimes wondered about this. Maybe you've had a friend who urged you to seek the gift of tongues or read a book about it or heard a speaker on the radio or TV who championed it. Maybe you've been a little confused about it and puzzled by it and maybe it has even brought you doubts about the depth of your own relationship with God? But see, that's the problem. It doesn't edify; it doesn't build up! But now you have an answer. If a person seems to have this gift and it makes them feel good, well OK. I don't say that God can't give this gift today, but I'd have to know every language on earth to really tell for sure if a person was speaking a genuine language or not. I just remember what Paul said in verse 19. But notice also that even though Paul didn't agree with them, he still didn't break fellowship with them and discredit them. In verse 6 he calls them brothers. And we must be careful to do that too!

1 Cor. 14:26-40 THE EXERCISE OF SPIRITUAL GIFTS

At verse 26 Paul comes to the conclusion and summary of his teaching about spiritual gifts. In chapter 12 he taught the Nature of the gifts, in chapter 13 the proper Motivation of the gifts (love), and now he's telling us how to Practice or exercise the gifts in the context of the assembly, that is, when the church is gathered for worship. Really, he's giving to us the principles that should govern our public worship.

I. The Rules for Using Spiritual Gifts (26-35) Look carefully into each of these verses, not for the exact behavior that was going on then, but for the principle Paul is trying to get across.

1. edification (26) Gifts must be used for the edification or building up of the church. When we are all together, a real variety of gifts and abilities is represented, but when they are used, it should only be for the purpose of building up the others in the congregation. So, no matter what the actual content of our worship service, we should never allow things that tear down, divide, or confuse the body, even if the person is exercising a spiritual gift, like the tongues-speakers at Corinth.

2. comprehension (27-28) Paul hits the tongues-speakers again. He says if there is no interpreter, keep quiet. Why? There must be comprehension. People must understand what is going on. That applies, no matter what the gift is. Someone could get up to preach and speak in such a complicated and high-sounding fashion that no one follows. Or someone could get up to sing and do it in such a garbled fashion that no one knows what is being sung. Everything we do in worship should be clear and understandable.

3. evaluation (29) Why should prophets have to be evaluated, if they speak by the Spirit of God? The answer is that nobody has moment by moment inspiration. Everybody makes mistakes sometimes and confuses some truth a bit, not intentionally, of course. We grow in our understanding. There are some minor things I taught years ago that I don't agree with now because somebody taught me better. And then sometimes Satan will inject his thoughts into our minds and we parrot them. So, preaching has to be evaluated carefully and sifted through by the hearers, and perhaps corrected if need be. The same is true of all the gifts. They should stand the test of being evaluated by others as profitable and edifying and proper.

4. participation (30-31) The exercise of the gifts should not be monopolized by one person. God has gifted all of us and there should be room and opportunity for all to exercise theirs. This applies in worship services too. Not all in one service, but different people should have the opportunity to sing, testify, and even preach as God leads. Worship is never to be a one man show.

5. regulation (32-33) Evidently, those who were prophesying were just as disorderly as those speaking in tongues. What a confusing mess those Corinthian worship services must have been! God says He is a God of order and peace. The Holy Spirit does not move people to go off into uncontrollable frenzies of speaking. If the Spirit is in it, then it can be done in a decent, orderly fashion. Our worship doesn't have to be rigid and follow some prescribed pattern from memory, but it should never be disorganized and shoddy or confusing.

6. submission (34-35) How'd that get in there? Now remember that Paul is straightening out problems that were going on in the worship at Corinth. And evidently some of the chief offenders were women! We already saw in chapter 11 how some of them were getting up in public in improper, immodest (for their day) dress and were dishonoring their husbands. Evidently, a number of them were also involved in the confusing array of speaking in tongues were chief offenders causing disruption in the orderly flow of worship. So, Paul lays down a rule here for them. Now, does this mean that no woman can say anything in church, that they must be totally silent. Well, if it means that, then we have some problems because that is in contradiction to other Scripture passages where they have:

a. the permission - 11:5. Paul could easily have said not to pray or prophesy at all, but he didn't; he said "Dress properly when you do!" That verse explicitly implies that women CAN lead in prayer and even prophesy or communicate the Word of God. Compare Acts 21:9. Philip the Evangelist had four daughters who prophesied. This is later than when 1 Corinthians was written and Paul stayed with them without complaint. Paul writes in Timothy that older women are to teach the younger ones. Verse 34 mentions the Old Testament Law; well in the Old Testament there were frequently prophetesses who brought God's Word to the people. One was a judge over the whole nation, Deborah! These verses can hardly mean that women can never speak in public assembly. So, let's look at:

b. the problem - Compare 1 Tim. 2:11-12. The real problem going on here is not that women speak in church, but if you look carefully, it is the same one Paul wrote Timothy about. The word here is not utter silence in the Greek but stillness, quietness. Paul says the woman is not to be teaching men nor to be usurping authority over men. Now, that doesn't mean that a woman can never teach a man anything or that she can't give a testimony or even teach a Bible lesson when men are present. It means that she is not to have a regular ongoing teaching ministry to men which puts her in a position of authority over them. It doesn't mean she can't hold any office in the church, but that she cannot take a place of leadership that rightfully belongs to a man. She can exercise her gifts as long as she is doing so in submission to the Lord and to her own husband and that brings us to the problem at Corinth:

(1). lack of submission We've already seen that in chapter 11. By improper dress the Corinthian wives were dishonoring their husbands and showing lack of submission. Now he says they are doing the same thing by their tongue speaking and prophesying in disorderly fashion, trying to usurp the floor and control the service. And their second problem was:

(2). lack of knowledge Some of them didn't know what they were talking about. They were not being taught and nourished properly in the spiritual realm by their husbands at home. What they were saying was not always right. Paul encourages them to earnestly seek knowledge from their believing husbands in the home setting. So, we see:

c. the principle is submission That is what the Law says, that a wife is to be in submission to her husband. She should be still and quiet and orderly and if she exercises any gift, it should be in full submission to the authority of her husband and bring him honor, rather than disgrace by speaking out of turn. And, if I might apply that principle further, it works for all of us. We are to submit to one another in love. That is to be true in life and also to be true in worship. You may very much like a particular style of music or not enjoy using video clips in church. Another may benefit from the very things you are not fond of. In worship we must defer to one another, be willing to esteem others better than our own selves. You may wish you could sing every week, but have to defer to others to give them a chance. Submission is a primary rule!

II. The Marks of Improper Use (36-39) As Paul closes the subject, he spells out for the Corinthians the two things that disturb him the most. These are signs, marks that the worship going on is not right:

1. disregard for the Word of God It doesn't matter how spiritually gifted a person may seem to be. If he ignores the Word of God, acts contrary to the Scriptures, then something is deeply wrong.

2. disorder in the worship of God When there is disorder, God is not in it! Paul's point is not to forbid the use of spiritual gifts, but to see that they are used in a decent and orderly way.

Now, here at GBC we try to follow these principles. We try to do everything, including our worship, in accord with the Word of God and the principles it lays down. We try to see that in our worship there is edification, comprehension, evaluation, participation, regulation, and submission. Sometimes, no doubt, we fail, I suppose, in some areas, but if we do, it isn't from lack of trying, but rather from human frailty. But I wonder whether you have that commitment in your personal life. Do you try to do everything according to the Word of God? Whether it is worship or work or school or your home, do you try to the best of your ability to apply the principles God has laid down for you in those areas? Or is the Word of God something for Sundays only? The captain of a ship looked into the dark night and saw a faint light in the distance. Immediately he told his signalman to send a message: "Alter your course 10 degrees south." Promptly a return message was received, "Alter your course 10 degrees north." The captain was angered; his command had been ignored. So, he sent a second message: "Alter your course 10 degrees south-I am the captain." Soon another message was received, "Alter your course 10 degrees north-I am seaman third class Jones." Immediately the captain sent another message, knowing the fear it would evoke: "Alter your course 10 degrees south-I am a battleship." Then the reply came: "Alter your course 10 degrees north-I am a lighthouse." God's Word is a Lighthouse built on an immovable Rock. Against it we must test all our experiences, all our desires, all our actions. And if the order comes to alter our course, we must obey!

1 Cor. 15:1-19 CHRIST'S RESURRECTION

At the core of our faith, we celebrate an event that occurred nearly 2000 years ago. When you think about it, it's quite incredible. A dead man came to life and left his tomb empty, a man who was scourged and beaten severely to the point where He could not carry his cross and then was nailed through wrists and ankles and hung there for six hours. Then he lay in a stone tomb for two days. That is the man whom we believe rose! It is humanly unthinkable. It is not logical and exceeds all normal limits of human belief. Yet here we are, 2000 years later, convinced of it. Two questions come to my mind: 1) How do we know He rose? and 2) What difference does it make to us? Paul answers those very questions for us in the first half of 1 Cor. 15. First, he gives us:

I. The Proofs of Christ's Resurrection There are three primary pieces of evidence that attest to Christ's Resurrection:

1. the witness of the Scriptures (1-4) Notice twice he says, according to the Scriptures. The death and resurrection of Christ were predicted in detail hundreds of years before they occurred. When Peter got up to preach on the day of Pentecost, He proclaimed the death and resurrection of Christ and then quoted Ps. 16:10 where David said, You will not abandon me to the grave, nor will you let your Holy One see decay. David predicted 1,000 years ahead of time that the Messiah would rise. When Paul got up to preach in the synagogue in Antioch, he also quoted Ps. 16:10. We know Is. 53:9-11, that great chapter which predicts so many details of Christ's death, also predicts that he would see the light of life and would prolong his days after His suffering. God said it would be so, that He would rise. God cannot lie. Jesus himself repeatedly told His followers that He would die and rise again the third day. It was so well known that the Jews demanded a guard be posted at the tomb to prevent His disciples from faking it! Jesus can't lie. From our perspective, if Christ did not rise, then the whole of the Bible is untrue and unreliable, because it teaches a false truth that Jesus rose. But everything else the Scriptures said about Christ's life and death was fulfilled; so it must be with His resurrection.

2. the witness of the apostles (5-7) There were eyewitnesses who saw Him alive after His death. Paul lists most of them here. Peter saw Him, the Twelve saw Him, on one occasion a crowd of more than 500 of His disciples saw Him, probably in Galilee. As Paul was writing some 30 years later most were still alive and could be asked about it in person. They were so convinced that they did not doubt what they had seen, even though 30 years had gone by! And not only that, but many of them were so sure of what they had seen that they gave their lives for it! They would not deny it in the face of persecution and death! Nobody dies for a hoax! Nobody dies for an uncertainty! When John begins his first letter he writes, "We heard with our own ears, we saw with our own eyes, we touched with our own hands the Word of Life!" And we accept their testimony as true.

3. the witness of personal experience (8-11) Here is the bottom line, personal experience. First:

a. the personal experience of Paul You know the story of the Damascus Road. Here was Paul, an enemy of Christ and Christians, a blasphemer and a persecutor hard at work, some time, perhaps years, after Christ had returned to heaven. No one was seeing Him anymore. Yet he appeared to Paul and the change in his life is obvious. He became the greatest Christian missionary the world has known, not because he believed an idea or accepted a doctrine, but because he saw Jesus Christ living and well! And I would include here:

b. our own personal experience While we have not seen Him with our eyes or touched Him with our hands, millions of us Christians over a period of 2,000 years have experienced a changed life through personally inviting Christ to come and live in us. I was 15 when I did that and there was a definite change in my life. I have watched dozens of others ask Him to come in and have seen the change in their lives. This evidence is available to anyone. Invite the living Jesus to come live in you sincerely and genuinely and you will know that He rose and is alive! But so what? What difference does it make that He rose?

II. The Importance of Christ's Resurrection The resurrection of Jesus Christ is the most important event of all history. And here are three reasons why:

1. it is vitally related to ours (12-13) There were those at Corinth who were going off into error saying there is no resurrection of the dead. Paul argues that our resurrection is wrapped up with His.

a. if we do not rise, then He did not rise You can't say that Jesus rose, but we'll just live on as spirits and never have bodies. You can't have one without the other. But Paul's real point is:

b. since He rose, then we must rise This is really the whole argument of chapter 15. He rose, therefore we will rise. His resurrection is our guarantee of a wonderful future. We will not live in some shadow world of spirits as the ancients believed. We will live in a world as real as our own bodies; we'll have a life that is as real as the one we have now!

2. it is the central fact of Christianity (14-16) Christianity is built on the resurrection of Christ. Take the resurrection out and:

a. without it, Christianity is empty It is vain; it has no content, nothing to say. Without it, the huddled, scared disciples would have remained in secret and died off. There would have been no church. When Peter got up to preach, he would have had to say, "God sent Jesus, but you killed Him and we'll never have a Messiah now!" What kind of message is that? But I tell you that thousands of people in churches have that kind of empty message! They believe Christ was a great teacher or an example, but don't believe He got up bodily out of the tomb. My Bible says He is risen and seated at the right hand of God as Lord of all! That's the only message that gives Christianity meaning! But worse:

b. without it, Christianity is deception Its central message is that Jesus rose. If he didn't, then Christianity is a lie, a hoax, at best an ignorant faith based on some mistaken people's reports! You see, I either believe in the resurrection of Christ or I am not a Christian. That's why Paul writes to the Romans that you must believe in your heart that God raised Him from the dead in order to be saved!

3. it is the guarantee of our salvation (17-19) Paul teaches that the resurrection is the sign, the proof positive, that our sins are paid for, that the cross was enough to pay for them once and for all. Without the resurrection, we don't know who won, whether death and sin were the victors or Christ was the Victor. Without it, our faith is futile, empty of effect; it cannot save us.

a. without it, the dead have perished Those who have died trusting in Christ are gone, lost; we don't know what happened to them. We have no certainty of what lies beyond the grave or whether our sins can be forgiven. Further:

b. without it, the living are pitiable Think about all the things those early Christians suffered for their faith. Think about all the things Christians today suffer around the world. What a sad travesty it is, if their message is not true, if Christ did not rise. What a sad waste of life and effort. If we cannot be sure of the resurrection of Christ, we cannot be sure of anything!

But the good news is in verse 20. Christ has indeed been raised from the dead! I do have a guaranteed future. The song writer said, "Because He lives, I can face tomorrow!" My faith is not resting on speculation, but on a sure fact; Jesus Christ is alive! Houdini, the great magician, told his wife that he would attempt to return to her from the dead, even if he had to go to hell to do it. For 10 years she carefully followed the conditions and instructions he left. On the tenth anniversary of his death the final seance was held at the Knickerbocker Hotel in Hollywood CA. 25 other seances were held round the world simultaneously. For more than two hours they prayed, pleaded, and begged for Houdini to manifest his presence. Finally, Mrs. Houdini said, "I now turn out the light. It is finished." Houdini could not resurrect himself. We know he was mistaken and his promise a lie. Jesus Christ made the same promise and fulfilled it on the third day. He is Lord!

1 Cor. 15:20-55 OUR RESURRECTION

Chapters 11-15 deal with disorders in the church at Corinth. The last of those disorders that Paul deals with is doctrinal and we're going to consider it first. Some of the Corinthians, according to verse 12, had gone off into error, teaching that there is no bodily resurrection of the dead. After dealing with the resurrection of Christ, Paul moves on to give the most detailed explanation in the Bible of the fact that you and I shall be resurrected. Now, beginning at verse 20, we see first:

I. The Fact of Our Resurrection (20-22) The Bible does not simply teach the immortality of our soul; it teaches the resurrection of our body. One day, even though our body dies physically and disintegrates, God will give us a new resurrection body. Note two important things:

1. the certainty of it We KNOW this. How? Because we know Christ rose bodily from the dead. He is the firstfruits. Any farmer knows that the firstfruits are the guarantee of the crop. The first beans to poke their tops out of the soil are the sure promise that the rest of the crop will follow. We shall be made alive bodily!

2. the extent of it The key word is ALL. It is not just for the lucky few or those who achieve a certain level. Every believer will be resurrected; YOU will be resurrected. But when?

II. The Time of Our Resurrection (23-28) This is a deep doctrinal passage for the study of relationships within the Trinity, but for now let's stick to the subject. Notice in verse 23 the words, each in his own turn. The Greek word is a military term which refers to a company or rank of soldiers. What John in his writings calls the first resurrection or the resurrection to life does not occur all at one time, but it occurs in stages, as a military parade of companies passing by. Christ first; believers later at His coming. In fact, New Testament believers (the Church) will be resurrected when Christ appears at the Rapture before the Tribulation Period. The Old Testament saints and those who believe during the Tribulation will be resurrected at Christ's return to the earth to set up His Millennial Kingdom. And finally, people who are born during the Millennium and believe will be resurrected at the end of the Millennium when it is time for the Great White Throne in Rev. 20. The time when Christ comes for each group is the time of their resurrection. For us, it is at the Rapture of the church. So, let me be clear; if I die, my soul is in heaven with Jesus immediately, but when He comes to rapture the church out to heaven, I will get my resurrection body, just as surely as Christ rose the third day.

III. The Importance of Our Resurrection (29-34) We might be tempted to think, "So what?"; after all, what does it matter if I'm in heaven with or without a body? Well, if we spent more time in the Bible, we wouldn't think like that. When you deny the resurrection, you ultimately end up denying the afterlife altogether or at least in the way we conceive of it. That's where the Sadducees got off the track. They denied the resurrection, but that meant they gave up believing in angels and the existence of spirits. They became annihilationists. God created us to live forever as whole beings, body, soul, and spirit. Our eternal life is a resurrected life. The time between our death and resurrection is only temporary. So, the importance of being raised is the very importance of eternal life itself. Look what it does for us:

1. it gives value to those who have died (29) This verse is a good candidate for being the least understood in the Bible. The Bible Knowledge Commentary says up to 200 explanations have been given of it! To me, it seems most natural to take it at face value. Paul doesn't say that believers should be baptized for the dead; he says that some people do it and that it would be a foolish thing if there is no resurrection. Essentially, he's saying, "Look, even people who don't know proper Christian doctrine know there's a resurrection!" Or it could be, as Scofield says, that Paul is talking about us following on in the path of those Christians who have died before us, being baptized and filling in their ranks. What use is it without a resurrection? But no matter how you cut it, Paul seems to be saying that the doctrine of the resurrection is important because it connects us with those who have gone on before us. They are not annihilated; they live. We are not separated from them forever, but can follow confidently on, knowing we'll be together.

2. it gives courage to face dying (30-32) Paul says, "If I didn't believe in the resurrection, I'd quit this apostle business and settle down to a peaceful life of tentmaking! This is too dangerous. There's no use in laying your life on the line; rather, you ought to protect it and do everything to prolong it!" We can face death with confidence; we can be unafraid to put our lives on the line for Christ because we know there is a resurrected life, an eternal life for us.

3. it gives incentive for right living (32b-34) If you don't believe in a resurrection life, you might as well adopt the "Eat, drink and be merry" philosophy. You only go round once, so grab for all the pleasure you can get. The resurrection keeps us from being lax and falling into sin; we shall be with God one day!

IV. The Manner of Our Resurrection (35-50) This section is for those who want the specifics, the "hows"! First, we see the resurrection:

1. illustrated in nature (35-41) Paul points out two facts:

a. there will be continuity He is back to farming again. When you plant a seed, it dies, so to speak. It disintegrates and out of it comes a new plant. The seed you plant determines what grows. Bean seeds don't grow onions! So, there will be a continuity between your natural body and your resurrection body. It will be enough like the one you have now to provide recognizability and also:

b. there will be individuality Every seed produces its own specific individual plant. Paul says to look around at the variety of matter that exists in the universe. God has given variety even to the sun and stars and to species of beings on earth. We will not all be clones and look alike. You will be YOU and nobody else.

2. explained in detail (42-44) Paul gives four key facts about the nature of the new body we will have:

a. our body will be imperishable It will not grow old or get sick. It will never die. It will be eternal and immortal. Wow!

b. our body will be glorious It will be perfect, beautiful, shining with glory. Ladies, you can throw away the make-up; gents, forget the bald spots and spare tires!

c. our body will be powerful It will never grow weak or tired like it does now. It will have entirely new powers and capabilities this body doesn't, like immediate transportation, to name one!

d. our body will be spiritual It will have a nature that is oriented toward God, completely without sin. It will fit us to walk with God for eternity.

3. demonstrated in Jesus (45-50) The point is verse 49. It will bear the image of Jesus. Think of Jesus in His resurrected state, of the new and different body He had when the disciples met Him. Think of how He appeared and disappeared and was unlimited, yet was recognizable and very real and touchable. As John says, we shall be like Him!

V. The Moment of Our Resurrection (51-53) But what if we live until Jesus comes? These verses form a beautiful picture of how that moment of resurrection will be. It will be sudden, swift, as quick as the blink of an eye. God's trumpet will sound and, if we have already died, instantly our souls will be in their resurrected bodies and with the Lord in the air. If we're still living, in that same instant we shall rise to meet Him and on the way, our living body will be transformed, metamorphosized, into a spiritual body, as a caterpillar turns into a butterfly. All together, the whole church, the body of Jesus Christ, is transformed in the same instant! But lastly, we must turn to:

VI. The Message of Our Resurrection (54-58) What does it mean to us in a practical way right now?

1. we need not fear death (54-57) Death has no sting left. The sting was sin and Jesus took care of that, so now it is a glorious door to heaven. Death is a conquered enemy who has become a servant, a doorkeeper to let us into heaven.

2. we do not serve in vain (58) All that work, all that service, is not lost. It is not in vain, nor forgotten. There is an eternity of life out there and what I do here and now makes a difference in the responsibilities I will be given there. So, hang in there. Don't quit. If the going gets tough, don't despair or give up. Serve the Lord whether anybody notices or not, whether you're tired or not. There is a resurrection and a life eternal. It's as sure as Jesus Christ Himself.

1 Cor. 16:1-4 CONVICTIONS ABOUT COLLECTIONS

Chapter 16 forms the conclusion of Paul's letter to the church at Corinth. Before he closes there are a couple of practical matters which he wants to take care of. The first one concerns the taking of a collection or an offering which was already in progress. This is one of those marvelous "nutshell" passages in the Bible where God blesses you with the outline of an entire teaching subject in 1 or 2 verses, like John 3:16 which gives the Gospel in a nutshell or 2 Tim. 3:16 which lays out all we believe about the Bible in a nutshell. So, verse 2 here is a nutshell verse about Christian giving; it lays out for us all we need to know about Christian giving in brief, rememberable form. And when you take the surrounding verses with it, you have a lot of information about what God expects of us in the stewardship of our material possessions.

I. The Grace of Giving (1) The collection he's talking about is a special offering that all of the Gentile churches in Asia Minor, Macedonia, and Achaia are gathering together for the poor in the church at Jerusalem. Let's get a little background:

1. the need at Jerusalem - Acts 8:1,3 Though the church at Jerusalem had grown by leaps and bounds in the early days, persecution was soon upon them. Their lives and well-being were threatened and great numbers of them fled the city and settled elsewhere. But the ones who remained no doubt had a very difficult time of it, being discriminated against by the Jews. 11:27-12:1 On top of that there was a famine not long afterward affecting the area. The Christians at Antioch were moved to send money to Jerusalem to help. Now compare Gal. 2:10. This records the outcome of the conference in Acts 15. Again, the apostles ask the gentiles to remember the poor in Jerusalem! Evidently the church at Jerusalem suffered horribly in those years with most of its members being poor and destitute. On the other hand, here were all these Gentile churches that Paul had started all over the Mediterranean, where there was not yet outward persecution and there was relative prosperity among the believers in many areas. They were moved by the plight of their brothers in Jerusalem and decided to take up a huge collection for them and have it delivered to Jerusalem by representatives. Paul is going along to deliver it as he returns from his third missionary journey. But he writes the Corinthians about it from the church at Ephesus as he prepares for it.

2. the effects of the collection - 2 Cor. 9:12-14 Paul wrote the Corinthians a second time on the eve of his coming to them and spent two chapters on this offering. For now, let's just note its effects:

a. it met needs God used their giving to meet the needs at Jerusalem. When we give, God uses us to meet the needs of others, to answer their prayers, to keep His promises. We are often His means of blessing through our giving. And further:

b. it brought glory to God The recipients would praise God for them and for the grace given to them, not only the grace of salvation, but the grace of giving. Giving is a grace; it is God moving and working through you and it brings Him much glory as you do it.

II. Guidelines for Giving (2) Here in a nutshell are the guidelines for how this grace ought to be exercised. Test yourself against these principles:

1. the time of giving - the first day of the week, on Sunday when they met together. Giving is both an individual and a collective matter. It is individual, in that the individual decides how much to give. It is collective, in that it is done in the context of being together. We give when we are together. That's why we take offerings during services. We could just mail envelopes and let you mail them back or encourage everyone to give electronically, but giving is an act of worship; it is an act of praise to God as much as praying or singing. That's why God says to do it when we are together!

2. the regularity of giving - "every week" Sure, some may get paid once a month and give once a month to cover the whole month. In those days, many were probably paid every day for that day's work. I think his point is regularity, consistency. Giving is not just to be done when you are moved by an appeal. Giving is to become for you a habit of life, a considered thing that you plan out and do on a regular basis.

3. the participants in giving - "every one of you" Giving is not for the rich, not for those with lots of money, not for those who don't have financial problems. It is for every one of us. Compare 2 Cor. 8:1-5. The Macedonians didn't have it easy; they were impoverished, but they gave. The key is, they gave themselves first! Giving is for you. It is for you, young person, if you earn money or if you get money, God expects you to give. Giving is not simply letting Mom and Dad hand you a dollar and dropping it in a plate. That's transfer. Giving is where you take what God has given you and you give out of it back to Him!

4. the manner of giving - "a sum of money in keeping with his income" How much should I give? Let me start off by saying that the word tithe is not found in connection with the New Testament church. Literally, the tithe was an Old Testament income tax of 10% levied on Israel by God to provide for the needs of the tribe of Levi and the priests. God does not require that of us. It may be an example for us to start with, but we are not under the law. What does God require of us? Even more, that we give according to His blessing. If I make $100,000 and give 10% to God, that leaves 90,000 for me. I'm not sure if that was me, that God would feel that I had done anything very significant. If I make $10,000 and give 10% of that, it would be very significant because I am hurting already and I need that cash I gave. Don't try to treat God like the IRS with percentages closely calculated. Look at what God gives you and then give significantly out of that. It is not the amount that counts (remember the widow with her two mites?); it is the willingness to sacrifice! And that brings us to:

5. the motive of giving Paul doesn't want to them to give out of embarrassment or coercion when he arrives. He doesn't want any last minute forced appeals. He wants them to have given because they want to. Compare 2 Cor. 9:5-7. God loves a cheerful giver! He wants you to give because you love Him, because you are thankful for all He's given you. He wants you to give because your heart is touched by the need of the brethren and of the world. He wants you to give because you want to, as a result of the Holy Spirit being in you! Somebody said, "It isn't what you have in your pocket that should make you thankful, but what you have in your heart!" The same is true of giving!

III. Godliness in Giving (3-4) There is still the matter of what to do with the money once the collection has been received. We must not only exercise the grace of giving according to the guidelines God has laid down, but corporately we must make sure we deal with what is given in a godly fashion. There are two principles that Paul mentions here:

1. acceptability to the congregation The congregation would appoint men to bear the offering to Jerusalem and carry out their wishes. Individuals give, but it is the body which decides how that which is given should be distributed. It is not the whim of the pastor or of some church leader. The distribution of funds must occur with the knowledge and concurrence of the congregation.

2. accountability in distribution Notice how Paul was very careful not to handle the money himself. He would go with the men from the churches, but they would handle it. Why? Compare 2 Cor. 8:20-21. Paul didn't want anybody saying that his hand was in the till. He wanted to do what was right before God, but also to make sure he appeared right before men. He wanted to be accountable for this. It is so important that we subject ourselves to scrutiny in this area. Listen, our books are open. We have nothing to hide. We publish a financial report four times each year, accounting for every cent of giving. We have no secret funds and hidden accounts and we audit our books (not edit). We want to be good in our distribution of the giving which is entrusted to us!

Well, how about you, my friend? Are you giving according to the guidelines God has laid down? Are you giving sacrificially out of a glad heart or does God get the left-overs? A man had a heart attack and was rushed to the hospital. He could receive little company and was not to be excited. While in the hospital a rich uncle died and left him a million dollars. His family wondered how to break the news to him with the least amount of excitement. It was decided to ask the preacher if he would go and break the news quietly to the man. The preacher went, and gradually led up to the question. The preacher asked the patient what he would do if he inherited a million dollars. He said, "I think I would give half to the church" The preacher dropped dead. Let's not let good giving become so rare that it shocks us!

1 Cor. 16:5-24 HOW TO TREAT WORKERS

Today we finish our study through 1 Corinthians and look at Paul's closing exhortations. In these verses Paul talks first about himself, then Timothy, then Apollos, then a group of other Christians from Corinth who had just brought him a gift. The key word that stands out to me in these verses is the word work. Find it in verse 9 (effective work), verse 10 (the work of the Lord), verse 15 (the service or work of the saints), and verse 16 (joins in the work and labors). The work of the Lord is his subject and these men he mentions are the workers. Paul is trying to tell the Corinthians how Christian workers should be treated by them. It shows how should we treat Christian workers, whether they are the missionaries we send overseas or those who labor right here among us. It may apply to those in full-time service or those who work as part of the local church. There are four guidelines which we should be following in our relationships with them:

I. A Worker Should Be Helped (5-9) Paul talks first about himself and lays out some of his personal plans. He's at Ephesus and wants to go around through Macedonia and down to Corinth. He hopes to spend some time, perhaps the whole winter, with them. For the moment, he wants to stay where he is and continue the present work which is prospering. There are two things to note:

1. a worker's strategy depends on the Lord Note the little phrase, If the Lord permits. Paul recognized that all his plans were tentative; the Lord has the ultimate say in how our plans for ministry work out. Sometimes it is beyond us to know why one of our own wants to go here or there and do this or that work. Other times we wonder how they ever ended up where they did, having gone into the work with completely different intentions. Churches don't understand why pastors sometimes move. Well, that's God's business. It was God who opened the door for Paul's ministry there. A worker's strategy of ministry depends on the Lord's guidance and leading, and often His hindering. But:

2. a worker's service depends on us Paul says that when he stayed with them, he would need their help. Wherever God was leading him, it would take their help to get him there. That help would be in the form of material gifts, no doubt, the supplying of his needs. But it would also come in the form of prayer and encouragement while he was with them. The ministry our workers have depends on us, on our giving, on our prayers, on our help in very practical ways. So often we'd like it the other way around; we want to give them strategy and let them depend on God for the help! But God works through us to enable the workers to serve.

II. A Worker Should Be Accepted (10-11) Paul, since he is not ready to go to Corinth, is thinking of sending his trusted son in the faith, Timothy. Paul is worried over how Timothy will be treated there because of all the factions and problems; he's concerned that some would refuse to accept him. There are two aspects to this:

1. he should not be disregarded The words refuse to accept are literally to regard as nothing. They might pay no notice or attention to him. I wonder how many missionaries feel forgotten or abandoned or perhaps feel like outsiders when they come home. They are there in the limelight for a brief moment during a service and then forgotten. I wonder how many pastors are discouraged in the work because people pay no attention to what they preach. Acceptance means listening, learning, and caring. But the second aspect to this thought is:

2. he should not be troubled Paul was afraid people might oppose Timothy or make it tough for him. Christian workers are often troubled from without; they don't need it from within too. Believe it or not, there are those who deliberately make trouble for pastors and missionaries, sometimes from within their own flocks. No, a worker should not be neglected or troubled:

III. A Worker Should Be Loved (12-14) Here's good old Apollos, the one who had gone to Corinth to minister after Paul had left. Now he's at Ephesus with Paul, laboring together in the work. Yet at Corinth these two men are the objects of war cries in the church, "I follow Paul" or "I follow Apollos". He wanted to send Apollos so that those of the Paul faction would learn to love him and so Apollos could help those of the Apollos faction to love Paul! But Apollos did not feel led to go right then. Paul sums up in verse 14 with an admonition that applies always, do everything in love. Workers should be loved. A worker should be loved:

1. whether he is present or not It shouldn't matter whether Apollos goes or not. He should be loved anyway. A worker should be loved as much when he is away, as when he is present. But oh, how our love tends to grow colder when a worker is not with us, especially when they are far away, perhaps for several years or more and are only able to write at long intervals. Real love persists in caring!

2. whether he agrees with us or not It persists whether he does what we want him to do or not. Paul wanted him to go; he didn't want to go. Paul still loved him. and we ought to love those who work for the Lord. We may not agree with them on every point or every method, but we should love them! So many times, we break fellowship over some little point. Love is able to transcend differences!

IV. A Worker Should Be Recognized (15-18) A trio of men arrived from Corinth bearing a gift for Paul. These men had devoted themselves to ministering to the needs of the saints. They had become workers. Paul said such men should be recognized; in Greek that means to know a thing as it really is. They should be treated as being what they really are, servants of God. How? In two ways:

1. by submission We should willingly place ourselves under their authority, recognize the authority they have from God to do the work, and also:

2. by support They recognized Paul was doing a work of God and brought a gift which refreshed him and supplied his lack. Paul urged the church to honor that and to join hands and labor along with them. We not only have to acknowledge workers, but need to get our hands dirty and labor with them, become workers ourselves like Stephanas did.

Well, how do you treat Christian workers? Whether our pastors or any of our missionaries or those within our congregation who have definite ministries like the teachers or elders. How do you treat them? Do you help them when they need it?

They cannot serve without your assistance in prayer, materially, or by volunteering your own time and hands to do what needs done. It may be doing a mailing for a missionary or painting in the church building. Do you help them? Do you accept them by listening to them and learning from them and smoothing out the path for them instead of making waves? Do you love them, no matter where they are and how long they've been gone and whether you agree with them? Are they in your prayers and on your heart? Do you recognize them as being God's workers and honor them as such with your submission and support? Remember, they love you. You are on their hearts as they minister to you or on your behalf to others. Compare verses 19-24. Paul greeted them, wished the grace of God on them, and expressed his love for them. I do the same for you along with all the other workers we have. And I share with Paul and with you in a common wish and prayer, Maranatha, "Come Lord Jesus"!

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

1) The Problem Of Divisiveness - Chs. 1-2

Today we're going to begin a brand new series of studies based on the book of 1 Corinthians. This is a letter that addresses a series of problems that were occurring in that church one after another. Paul writes, "I want to talk to you about this... and now about this... now about this..."; that's how the letter is written and that's how we're going to study it. We're not going to attempt a verse by verse exposition where we explain every verse in the letter; that would take pretty long. Rather we're going to look at each of these 11 problems that Paul addresses and think about how they recur in our situation today and what we should do about them. The problems range from divisions between people to sexual immorality to singleness, marriage and divorce issues, to issues of personal liberty. They are all things we face today just as they did. Now, where did all these problems come from? Well, the city of Corinth in which this church was started and from which all these believers came was a city filled with pagan immorality. Towering above the ruins of old Corinth is a 2,000-foot mountain fortress called Acro-Corinth. In Paul's day, the temple of the fertility goddess Aphrodite was located at the top of this impressive summit. As many as 1,000 priestesses carried on immoral sexual activities in the worship of this pagan deity. It is said that these "hospitable ladies" would come into the city wearing specially designed sandals that left these words imprinted in the sand: FOLLOW ME. You can imagine how many Corinthian citizens and visiting sailors accepted and followed their tracks to the Temple. Aristophanes coined a new word in the Greek language which transliterates: to Corinthianize and it referred to fornication, much like the concept "to Americanize" is thought of today among the Muslim peoples of the world! We are not so much different from Corinth. In the last half century, sex and immorality has become America's goddess also; her lure is everywhere you look. And many of the people who came to Christ in Corinth came out of this thinking and these practices and that is tough baggage for new believers to bring into their Christian lives. The change was drastic for them and the old ways were hard to let go of. Paul got to Corinth about 51 AD and this letter was written some 3-4 years later so the most mature believers in the church were only recent converts and the church was floundering in immaturity. Believers were still living in old patterns they had brought with them from their old lives or had reverted to after they were saved. The generation of people coming to Christ today is much like that. They do not have a Christian upbringing or the heritage of a moral society. They come from broken homes; they enter marriage having had multiple partners and often children from other relationships beforehand. They have not been given a Christian worldview or work ethic and all the things that we older ones think are just common sense to us in family life have never been modeled for them at all. The problems of our society are streaming right into the church with the people who come into our doors, so the church today needs a letter like this one! Now the first issue Paul writes to them about is not a moral one; it is:

I. The Problem Of Divisiveness In Corinth Let's read the description of it in 1:11-12. Some travelers from the household of a believer in Corinth named Chloe had stopped to see Paul and shared with him some of the quarrelling that was going on in the church since he had left and how its unity had deteriorated terribly. If you think about it, you can see how this happened through:

1. the succession of leaders The names Paul, Apollos and Peter are instructive there. Turn with me to Acts 18:11. Paul spent a year and a half in Corinth. Over that time, verse 7 says that MANY people believed. Paul disciplined them, pastored them and, no doubt, some leaders were developed, but then he moved on back to his home area of Antioch to report in after his journey. That first wave of Christians held Paul with great respect. Now, look down to 24-27. So, Apollos comes to Christ and he eventually comes to Corinth. He's a gifted man, learned and eloquent, a great public debater, and who knows, maybe better than Paul! And more people come to Christ and these now hold him in great respect! Of course, a good number of those who came to Christ were Jews and knowing that Peter was the leader of the church in Jerusalem, some wanted to hold him up as an example. So, when people in the church began to disagree over things, they began to divide out into camps. "I follow Paul!" "I follow Apollos!" "I follow Peter!" And some who were really trying to be spiritual said, "Well, I don't follow any man; I follow only Christ!" When differences of opinions arise in churches, it is easy for people to look to the ones they feel closest to for support and that leads to:

2. the development of schisms Verse 10 mentions divisions, literally schisms, breaks in relationship, believers separating themselves from one another and forming factions even within the same church body. People don't talk to each other; they ignore one another. They only respect their own little group and disregard the others. And that naturally leads to:

3. the growth of strife between portions of the body Paul says, "You are quarreling with one another!" Arguing, fighting, yelling! Things that should have no place in the body of Christ.

My how that problem of divisiveness has plagued the church down through the centuries and it is still very much alive and well today. Our own history reflects it. When I got here in 1979, what was then Wharton Baptist Church had just lived through one in the previous couple of years. A faction had formed who were "against the pastor". Others desperately wanted to be faithful and preserve the church and were perceived as being "for the pastor". People drew others to their side and there was no talking to each other and eventually there was quarreling and fighting and deep emotional hurt between people who were formerly good friends. Because he stayed tenaciously, those who were "against the pastor" eventually pretty much left and went to other churches. He finally left, but divisiveness had done its work. A church of 300 dwindled to 70. All missionaries were dropped from the budget by necessity. "Divide and conquer" has been a known military strategy through the ages and Satan uses it regularly against the church. Again, in the mid-80's what was then "Ardsley Chapel" experienced divisiveness. The greater majority felt they should combine to form Glenside Bible Church. A small minority vehemently felt they should not. I understand there were some very hot words in some business meetings. Eventually the minority left and the majority did combine, but again there was deep emotional hurt between former close friends. Neither of these conflicts had to do with doctrine or morality or unbelief or anything else of paramount importance. To be honest, like most conflicts, they were really mostly about power and control and who gets to have their own way. The history of the church is replete with divisiveness, ever since Paul and Barnabas arguing about whether to take Mark with them on their second missionary journey and parting company over it, and rare is the church body which does not experience it in some degree. We live in constant danger of becoming "a house divided against itself" like Corinth and as Jesus said, that house "cannot stand". Now, speaking to a church falling into that situation, Paul strongly reminds the Corinthian believers of:

II. The Unity To Which We Are Called (1:10) That word appeal in English doesn't quite do justice to the Greek. It is more literally, I call you, brothers, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ... Unity among us is not an option. It is not some wonderful thing that it would be nice if we could have. We are called to it in the name of Jesus! The night before He died, Jesus poured out His heart in prayer to the Father in John 17 and asked Him for this very thing: I pray also for those who will believe in me through their message, that all of them may be one, Father, just as you are in me and I am in you. May they also be in us so that the world may believe that you have sent me. I have given them the glory that you gave me, that they may be one as we are one: I in them and you in me. May they be brought to complete unity to let the world know that you sent me and have loved them even as you have loved me. - Jn. 17:20-23. That's what Jesus wants! Complete and perfect unity among us right here in the body on earth, the kind of unity that He and the Father have, the kind of unity that He has with us individually. We are called to that unity by Him, summoned to it; it is not an option and when we break it, when we act in a divisive fashion, when we build sides and break relationships, we DEFY the Lord Jesus Christ! Look at verse 10:

1. we must give out the same message Agree is literally to speak the same thing. We don't have to agree on everything in life. I want a green carpet; you want a blue one. I don't want to wear a tie; you enjoy wearing a full suit. We don't have to like the same color or dress the same. But we have to give out the same message of grace and love and acceptance in Jesus. We have to say the same kind and loving things about each other and about others. We have to speak out of one heart. It's not an option; it's a necessity. If we don't give out the same message, the world will never know that Jesus is really in us. And:

2. we must break down any relational barriers between us so that we become perfectly united; that word means completely fitted together, like the dovetail joint on a fine cabinet drawer. It can also mean to restore something to that state. When unity is broken by division, we are called to restore it, to break down the walls that stand between us, to go to one another and seek forgiveness. The "Paul contingent" needs to seek out the "Barnabas contingent" and admit their wrong thinking and wrong words and wrong treatment and vice versa and restore a depth of relationship. It is not optional; we're called to it. In fact, in our GBC church covenant, we PROMISE to do it! And, Paul says:

3. we must become united in our thinking and judgment How we think about things that matter and how we evaluate and choose what to do must be the same. We need to grow into unity so that we end up on the same page and act as one. I have been continually amazed over the years at how consistently our Board of Elders has pursued this principle. It has not always been perfect but 99% of the time, no matter which men have been part of the group, no matter how tough the issue we face, in their maturity we end up thinking the same thing and moving forward unitedly in what we should do. You have no idea what a blessing that is, especially when you hear stories of what happens in other churches! But we are all called to that, not just our leaders.

So why don't we always have it? Well Paul mentions later on in the chapter:

III. The Root Of Divisiveness: (1:29-31) You see, boasting is what they were doing, isn't it? I follow Paul! I follow Apollos! Each was boasting in something about themselves, something fleshly. The root of all divisiveness is Pride! It is thinking more of ME than of Jesus, more about what matters to ME than what matters to Him. I separate myself from you because I don't get MY way, because MY feelings are hurt, because I need to be right or to be recognized or because I need to be in control or be in charge. When relational breaks are not over a matter of genuine biblical right and wrong or a matter of truth and error, they are ALWAYS about self, about someone elevating himself above others and the Lord. They are always about pride. Paul saw that spirit of inflation instantly and wrote three things to bring them back down to earth. First, he said:

1. remember it is about JESUS, not about us (1:13-14) He said, "Now wait a minute, let's get one thing straight...Who was crucified for you anyway? Paul wasn't crucified for you! Apollos wasn't crucified for you! Peter wasn't crucified for you! JESUS was crucified for you!" Paul doesn't matter; Apollos doesn't matter; Peter doesn't matter. What you want doesn't matter. Our life is not about us; it's about JESUS! When you're into this kind of divided state, nobody ever thinks about Jesus and what He wants, but He's the One who died for us in the first place so remember what HE wants! When you're tempted to divide from some brother or sister, think about that and it'll change your tune. Second, he said:

2. remember what we are, humanly speaking (1:26-28) Just look around you. How many people with doctorates to you see? (Besides our dear Dr. Anu who is one of the most humble people I know!) How many college presidents or tremendously educated people? How many millionaires do you see? How many CEO's and corporate executives and big business owners? How many senators and congressmen and government officials? How many of the rich and famous and well-to-do people of this world end up in the church? Not many! Most of us are just common ordinary people who, in the scheme of things, don't matter a whole lot in this world. We would never accomplish much of anything on our own. Everything we are and everything we've done we owe to Jesus! He has taken us and done great things with us; we're just ordinary vessels, jars of clay. Who would boast about the jar; it's the treasure inside that deserves the glory and should be boasted about! One young man received an award for an outstanding achievement and he took too seriously the extravagant praise that was given to him by the one who made the presentation. So, when he got home, he repeated to his mother all that had been said. Then he paused and mused out loud, "How many great men do you suppose there are in the world today?" And her wise reply was, "One less than you think, my son." That's what Paul's reminding us of. Then third he says:

3. remember the Spirit's power in bringing you to faith (2:1-5) So quickly we forget how we came to Jesus, how we were lost and undone and the Spirit of God opened our eyes by His mighty power. I read such a refreshing testimony the other day: About a year after I was married, a co-worker invited us to church. Every week she nagged us about coming to church with her family. Finally on April 9, 1974 we went to church to get her off my back and I heard for the first time that God loved me and had a wonderful plan for my life. Over the weeks that followed I learned that I had many misconceptions about who God is. On July 21, 1974, I surrendered my life to the Lordship of Jesus Christ. God's prevenient grace had been actively at work in my life prior to this date. God had not abandoned me. As I reflect on my spiritual journey, I recall that many people shared the gospel with me, but I simply did not understand. However, on July 21, as I listened to the sermon, 1 John 1:9 and Ephesians 2:8-9 became "alive" and I responded by accepting by faith the relationship that God extends to us through Jesus. God's justifying grace filled me with love and joy. We didn't come to Christ because some preacher was eloquent or some wise person out-argued us. It was a direct work of the Spirit of God convicting our hearts and we simply believed at last and accepted the gift that was offered. You didn't do ANYTHING to be what you are today; GOD did it all. HE saved you. HE changed you. JESUS transformed your life; you've got nothing to boast about. The only place to stay is humbly kneeling before the foot of the cross in worship and thankfulness. If you stay there, you'll never become divisive!

So how are we going to stay there? How are we going to remember that it's about Him, not us? Well in the rest of chapter 2 Paul gives us:

IV. The Remedy For Divisiveness (2:10-16) We don't have time to study this great passage in detail; I just want you to notice four things that it says:

1. we have all been given the very mind of Christ in the Person of His indwelling Spirit (2:10, 16) The Holy Spirit is God and so knows all the thoughts of God, all the things that go on in God's mind. And God put the Holy Spirit inside us when we believed, to live in us permanently. Therefore, we have the very mind of Jesus Christ, the very thoughts of Jesus Himself, living and residing inside us in the person of His Spirit! We possess the very mind of Christ! It's simple. All we have to do is learn to listen to Him! And since the same Spirit lives in each of us, if each of us is listening to Him, doesn't it follow that:

2. we will have the same mind as we listen to the Spirit (2:12) If we listen to the Spirit, we'll understand the very thoughts of God; we'll think God's thoughts after Him! That's awesome enough, but the point is that we'll all think His thoughts instead of our own. All our self-oriented stuff will be out of the way and we'll all be of one mind. And therefore:

3. we will give out the same message as we listen to the Spirit (2:13) We'll speak spiritual words, words taught by the spirit, instead of all the words we say out of our "earthly experience" or our self-centered "wisdom". We'll speak the same thing, give out the same message, the one the Spirit wants, instead of all our "I this" and "I that". And:

4. we will have the same judgment as we listen to the Spirit (2:15) We will judge and evaluate all the things we come across in the same way because we'll hear HIS judgment and share it.

And so, if we simply learn to listen to the Spirit inside us, we'll BE all the things Paul says we are called to be, perfectly united in thought and judgment and in what we say and how we feel about each other. All we have to do is listen! The inventor of the telegraph, Samuel F. B. Morse, was once interviewed by George Hervey who asked him, "Professor Morse, when you were making your experiments at the university, did you ever come to a standstill, not knowing what to do next?" "Oh, yes, more than once." "Then what did you do?" Morse said, "I've never discussed this with anyone, so the public knows nothing about it. But now that you ask me, I'll tell you frankly - I prayed for more light." "And did God give you the wisdom and knowledge you needed?" "Yes, He did," said Morse. "That's why I never felt I deserved the honors that came to me from America and Europe because of the invention associated with my name. I had made a valuable application of the use of electrical power, but it was all through God's help. It wasn't because I was superior to other scientists. When the Lord wanted to bestow this gift on mankind, He had to use someone. I'm just grateful He chose to reveal it to me." In view of these facts, it's not surprising that the inventor's first message over the telegraph was these words: "What hath God wrought!" Samuel Morse learned to stop and ask God and listen for a reply. That kept him humble. If we simply learn to do the same, to stop and get on our faces and pour out our hearts to God over issues that come up between us and listen for His Spirit to speak to our hearts, that process will keep us humble. And if we listen, we will NOT be divided.

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

2) The Problem Of Carnality - Ch. 3

We're looking at each of the 11 problems that Paul addresses one after another in this letter and thinking about how, they recur in our situation today and what we should do about them. The first problem he addressed in chapters 1-2 was Divisiveness; believers were dividing into factions against each other and we saw how precious UNITY is to the Lord Jesus. In Chapter 3 Paul continues to address that same behavior by getting at its root problem. Read verse 1. Now I really struggled to choose a name to call this problem by. The NIV uses the adjective worldly, but in Greek it is an adjective built on the word sarx which means flesh and would literally be translated "fleshly", if that were a word in English! The NAS says, men of flesh, but the King James had a great word, the word carnal, and preachers for centuries preached heavily on this verse using it and talking about "carnal Christians" and "spiritual Christians". So, like it or not, carnality is the name I chose to give this problem but it's more important to me that you:

I. Know The Meaning Of The Word - (1-3) Carnal is from the Latin for flesh so:

1. carnality means being controlled by the flesh instead of the Spirit And flesh is not referring simply to this meaty stuff I call my body; it has a much broader meaning in Scripture. The flesh is the sinful patterns by which we have learned to get our own physical and emotional needs met apart from God. It is the ways that we have been trained to live by the people and the environment in which we developed. Today we often call this our "stuff", or our "baggage", or our "history". Maybe I learned growing up that by being loud and yelling I can intimidate people and get them to do what I want. So now I'm a believer and when you do something I don't like, instead of approaching you in love, I get loud and yell at you. I am being carnal; I'm choosing to let my flesh, my "stuff", control me instead of the Holy Spirit. Or maybe as a female I learned that by batting my eyes and smiling coyly and using a flirtatious tone of voice I could get a guy to do what I wanted. So here I am now as an adult believer, but when I need help instead of genuinely asking for help as a sister to a brother, I trot out my "stuff" and "lure" some guy to do what I need done. I'm being carnal, choosing to let my flesh control me instead of the Spirit. Being carnal:

2. it means thinking and acting like people who don't have the Spirit It's thinking and acting the same way I did before I got saved, before Christ's Spirit came to live in me. It's living as though none of that happened, as though I wasn't transformed or born again, as though the Spirit of God wasn't living in me and joined to my spirit.

3. it means thinking and acting like the people of the world around us act The nonbelievers all around us use all the means they have learned. They push others out of the way to get ahead. They criticize others to make themselves feel better. They use alcohol or drugs or sex to numb their emotional pain. They lie or at least hide the truth when it suits their purpose. It's all they have! It's the only way they know to do life. Why should I expect anything different of them? They don't have the Holy Spirit! But I do! My ways of thinking and acting should be different from theirs, not the same! Further, Paul says that carnality:

4. it is a sign of immaturity When you see an adult acting like a child, it's readily apparent, isn't it? What do you think when you see a woman who always has to be the center of attention and will always find a way to talk about herself and never listen to what you have to say? Or what do you think when a man leaves dirty clothes lying all over the floor in the bedroom thinking his wife will pick them up or when he leaves the sink pile up high with dirty dishes figuring that she'll get to them eventually? We see childishness readily and know what maturity looks like, don't we? We expect a person to be self-centered as a child, but to come to care about the needs and the feelings of others as an adult and to take responsibility for themselves and things like that. Well, God expects us to "grow up" in Christ, to move along to maturity and the demonstration of maturity is Christ Himself who was ALWAYS controlled by the Holy Spirit so He never acted selfishly, never hated others or was jealous of them; in short, He always thought and acted HOLY. And when He sees us acting carnally, like we used to act before we had the Holy Spirit, He sees us as spiritual infants, as babes who've never grown up, because we are not growing into the image of Christ! Now, this flesh-controlled way of acting and thinking:

5. it is the root cause underlying most other problems Most of the problems that were going on in the church in Corinth were caused by the immature, flesh-driven thinking and acting of its members. They were quarreling with one another; some guy was sleeping with his step-mother; others were still involved in sexual immorality; some were taking each other to court; marital relationships were all messed up. And these problems all boil down to the same thing, carnality, living out of the old patterns of self-centered thinking, instead of allowing the Holy Spirit to be in control and make changes. And most of the problems that crop up in the church today, and in this church body here, boil down to the carnality of people, believers letting their flesh patterns control them instead of the Spirit. Let's just:

II. See How Carnality Can Display Itself In The Church Though all the problems addressed in the book are the result of it and it can take many forms, let's just read verses 3-4 closely and look at the specific area that Paul focuses on, this whole matter of the church being divided into factions. It reflects pretty accurately what the church has done even today. He says that:

1. believers were zealous toward one another The NIV word jealousy in the Greek is really zeal. They were passionately indignant toward one another. Each was convinced that his was the right way and could not tolerate others who would dare to think differently. It was not about core issues like who Christ is or His providing our salvation, but over secondary, human oriented issues, such as "Paul always said this and I follow Paul!" or "Apollos always did it this way and I follow Apollos!" How much energy has been expended in the last century by zealous believers defending positions like, "Women shouldn't wear pants; you should only use a King James Bible; spiritual believers should never dance or drink any alcohol." Or it might be over what you believe about the return of Christ, over whether you're reformed or dispensational, or whether you're charismatic and practice tongues or healing. It may even be over how we plan to spend money or whether we should have a stained glass window in the building. And it is always from a haughty, self-righteous attitude that says, "I'm right and you have to agree with me! I'm better than you!" It is never out of a love that cares about the other and seeks to help them. The key word in carnality is always "I"; the flesh is always zealous about self. Now as a result of that:

2. believers were quarreling with one another Because each group passionately believed they were right, they argued about it. There was fighting and arguing and yelling among people who were part of the same body, who had the same Spirit, who were brothers and sisters. It led to pride and actual boasting about themselves, "I follow Paul!" "Well, I follow Apollos!" And it led to division, to separating from one another. Now, look with me at where that comes from. Compare James 4:1-2. Where does quarreling come from? From the flesh, from the "Big I", from not getting what I want. Carnality is the root of all the arguments you hear of in congregations. Dr. John Cannon was once called in as a consultant by the board of a church that was having a great amount of dissension. Two committees had given conflicting recommendations on how to redecorate the building. One said it should be painted white; the other insisted that yellow would make it look more attractive and up-to-date. After the two groups vigorously restated their cases, the dispute became bitter, harsh, and divisive. Dismayed by the angry speeches that were disrupting the fellowship of the entire church, Dr. Cannon said quietly, "Here's my advice to you. Don't paint it white; don't paint it yellow; paint your church black! It will be very appropriate for an assembly that ought to go into mourning for having such a shameful quarrel." That sharp arrow hit its mark. The members saw that their ranting and spiteful comments had grieved the Holy Spirit. After calm reflection, a peaceable agreement was reached. You may laugh, but the first vehement argument I ever saw in a church was in a business meeting over what color carpet to put in the sanctuary! Believers quarrel over anything, the pastor, the music, the sign out front, you name it.

When we let our flesh reign, when we live to get our own way, when we insist on our own need to be right, to be better, to win, to be noticed, to have control or whatever it is, it tears us apart from each other! Now Paul addresses carnality by helping us to:

III. Understand What Our Lives Are Truly About Look at (5-6). He says:

1. we are all merely servants and that word here is not slaves, but literally, ministers, diakonoi, deacons, ones who serve. A servant is one who executes the commands of another, who carries out the orders and the wishes of the one in charge. We are in the service of our Master, the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul and Apollos were merely the ones whom Jesus sent to run His errand of taking the Gospel to Corinth and bringing the Corinthians to believe. That's what we all are. We are not masters, people in charge. We are those who serve Him, who minister to Him, who attend to His needs, who do what He wants done. And:

2. we all have tasks assigned to us by Jesus Paul was sent first. He planted the seed of the Gospel in Corinth. He won the first converts. He disciplined the first believers and trained the first leaders. But then Jesus sent him on elsewhere and He sent Apollos to Corinth and his task was to water what was already planted. He won more people and did more teaching and training. But neither Paul nor Apollos were anything in themselves. They were just servants told to go to the field and carry out orders. And that's how we all need to see ourselves. When we start to take "ownership" of the ministry tasks we're involved in, when chairing the committee becomes "mine" or leading the worship becomes "mine" or running the nursery becomes "mine", that's when carnality is rearing its head and quarrels are soon to follow. We need to hold our tasks loosely. They're just things Jesus has sent us to do. He could have sent anybody He chose to do them, because none of us are anything. We can't make anything grow:

3. it is God who produces all the results, not us (6-7) Apart from Him we can do nothing! The growth of the church at Corinth was God's doing. It was HIS work, not Paul's or Apollos'. And if what God sends you to do accomplishes anything, it will be God that does it, not you or I. If He blesses anyone by this service this morning, it will be His doing, not ours. Jesus instructed us, So you also, when you have done everything you were told to do, should say, 'We are unworthy servants; we have only done our duty.' - Luke 17:10. He didn't mean we're supposed to feel worthless and unloved; that's the issue of our relationship to Him and in that realm we are beloved children. But when it comes to what we DO, to our ministry and service, it is all Him doing it; we are just doing what He's told us to do. Take no credit. Don't let carnality raise its head and get puffed up. You see, what we're on earth for is this:

4. we share the common purpose of growing or building His Kingdom (8-9) God is building a Kingdom on earth, a Kingdom of human beings who are His subjects through faith in Jesus. No matter who we are and where we live and what type of things Jesus tells us to do, we're all about the same task. We're all about seeing people come to faith and grow in Him and become part of His body the church and reach out to others in ministry. Whether we're framers or masons or drywallers or roofers, we're all putting up the same building and we should aid each other and work with each other in that task, not compete and quarrel with each other! Every one of us has a part in building the building, but:

5. we must focus carefully on pursuing our ministry tasks (10) Just because you're merely a servant doesn't mean that you can be sloppy about your assignment! These guys were messing up. They were all builders, but the flooring guys were arguing with the carpet guys and each trying to push the other to do it their way. And the painters were pushing the trim guys to hurry up and get done so they could get finished sooner. So, the building was looking like a set of jobs instead of a house. Do you get the picture? We must focus carefully on what we're doing and not let the flesh get hold of us in the process. Why? Because, Paul warns:

6. if we live a carnal life, our life will be wasted and our reward lost (11-15) When it's all done, God's going to set fire to the house and see what still stands afterwards! I know the analogy doesn't quite fit our modern building methods, but the point is that one day when the task is all done and He comes, it's payday! Jesus is going to reward His servants, not with money, but with things that will have value in eternity. And if we have spent our life as a believer living carnally, living for self, living the old way out of the old stuff, we'll get there and discover that it was all for nothing. In a "poof" it will be all gone; there will be nothing lasting that we've accomplished. Oh, we won't lose our salvation, but the house of cards that we've built with our lives will go up in smoke and we will have wasted our opportunity to do something that will last forever! On the other hand:

7. if we live a spiritual life, our service will be eternally rewarded Jesus told the faithful servant in the story, Well done, good and faithful servant! You have been faithful with a few things; I will put you in charge of many things. Come and share your master's happiness! - Mat. 25:21. In another story Jesus put it like this, Well done, my good servant! ...Because you have been trustworthy in a very small matter, take charge of ten cities. - Luke 19:17. God has plans out there. He has a universe to rule. He has wonderful responsibilities to entrust to us for our enjoyment in His eternal administration. If we get it right here, if we live by the Spirit instead of the flesh, who knows all the wonderful things that will result from it. This life on earth is our proving ground! What we learn here fits us for there! Don't waste it. In fact, just in case his building analogy didn't resonate, Paul closes the chapter by saying:

IV. Heed These Clear Warnings From God There are three of them:

1. DO NOT do damage to His church (16-17) The you's in verse 16 are plural. The church is God's Temple; you are His house that He's building; it's where He lives. DON'T tear it apart! Don't divide it. Don't corrupt it. Don't use it for your selfish purposes. If you work destruction in His house, if you defile it and ruin it and mess it up, He will not take kindly to it! He will do the same to your life!

2. DO NOT deceive yourself by thinking your carnality is wise (18-20) Any time you think you have all the answers, that your way is the best and the only, that you have it all together and everybody else is off base, you're in big trouble. You have set yourself against God and He will trap you in your own foolishness. God loves you too much to let you go on with a puffed up heart and attitude. He'll shrink you down to size. So, don't let your own flesh deceive you. Stay humble. And:

3. DO NOT continue sinful behavior (21a) Once you see it for what it is, don't keep it up. Don't persist in self-inflation. Instead try a new approach to life (21b-22). Appreciate all things as gifts. Paul was a gift to the church; Apollos was a gift to the church. Peter was a gift to the church. The church was blessed by all and everyone could benefit and learn something from each. Everything that comes your way has something in it that is a benefit from God, so instead of allowing it to stir up your flesh and reacting in a carnal way, receive it as a gift and look for how God wants to use it and bless you with it!

Carnality is a deadly thing. I read the story of a boy who became a sailor while very young. He rose rapidly in the profession and was soon made the captain of a ship. At the end of one particular voyage, he was approaching land when a passenger who was familiar with maritime procedures asked if he intended to anchor the ship and call for some help in entering the harbor. He replied, "Anchor? Not me! I expect to be in dock with the morning tide." The passenger persisted, urg- ing him to signal for a pilot. "I am my own pilot," came the abrupt reply. Determined to reach port by morning, he took a narrow channel to shorten the distance. His crew of weathered seamen just shook their heads. Passengers said that they were in no hurry and hoped he would take the wider course. He laughed at all of them and repeated that he would be on land by daybreak. Indeed, he was on land before daybreak. But the ship was wrecked, and his own life was lost because of his arrogance. When you become your own pilot, when you revert to living your own way instead of the Spirit's way, a wreck is imminent. It can kill you, it can wreck your life and it can cost you your eternal reward. As we close, ask the Lord to show you where carnality may be creeping into your own life, where you may be running the show instead of Him, where you are doing what you want instead of what He wants.

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

3) The Problem Of Contempt - Ch. 4

The third problem that Paul addresses in his letter to the Corinthians is still connected to the subject of the several factions that had formed in the church. The first problem was the issue of divisiveness itself, breaking the unity of the body. The second problem was the issue of carnality which caused it, letting self-centered flesh patterns control their reactions instead of the Holy Spirit. The third problem is the attitude which the Corinthians had developed in the process. As we read this fourth chapter there are a number of indications that:

I. The Corinthians Were Judging One Another And Paul Instead of simply admitting that they had differences over non-essential things, those who were of the "I follow Apollos" party had developed a judgmental attitude toward those who were of the "I follow Paul" party and along with it a judgmental attitude toward Paul himself, now that he had been gone from them for several years. And, of course, the same thing was probably going on in the other direction. If we look closely at the words of this chapter, notice Paul says that:

1. they had become arrogant (18) That word arrogant literally means puffed up. They had an inflated self-estimation. They thought more of themselves than was really true. Paul warned us all about that in Rom. 12:3 where he wrote, For by the grace given me I say to every one of you: Do not think of yourself more highly than you ought, but rather think of yourself with sober judgment, in accordance with the measure of faith God has given you. That's exactly what had happened. They were thinking more of themselves than they should have; they were thinking of themselves as being better, smarter, more spiritual or more you-name-it than the other groups or than Paul himself. Their group jingle might have been the anonymous poem, Faults in others I can see; but praise the Lord, there's none in me! Now, we would never say that because it appears too outwardly arrogant, but a good many of us actually believe that and tend to live based on it. We think that we're always right, that our way is the best, that nobody gets it like we do, that nobody can do it like we can. And I'm not talking about famous sports figures with inflated heads; I'm talking about us right here in the church and in our families, believers whose self-esteem has become piously overinflated, who think too highly of ourselves because of our education and training or our experience or our expertise or simply because it's Sunday! Now, these believers in their immaturity:

2. they had become judgmental (3) Paul knows that some of them are judging him, saying that he's wrong, that he's not worthy to be an apostle. He tells them how they ought to regard him (1a), to reckon him. They were evaluating him because they had become critical of others. Their prevailing attitude was not to encourage and love and build up, but to condemn and criticize and cut down. We all know people like that, even people in the church, who never have a kind word to say, whose glass is always half-empty, so they always tell you what you did wrong instead of what you did right. Many of you remember watching Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood on TV with your kids for years; maybe you didn't know that Fred Rogers was also an ordained minister. He writes, "I remember so keenly one of the times I learned how individually the Spirit can work. It was years ago, and my wife and I were worshiping in a little church with friends of ours, another husband and wife. We were on vacation, and I was in the middle of my homiletics course at the time. During the sermon I kept ticking off every mistake I thought the preacher, who must have been 80 years old, was making. When this interminable sermon finally ended, I turned to my friend intending to say something critical about the sermon. I stopped myself when I saw the tears running down her face. She whispered to me, 'He said exactly what I needed to hear.' That was really a seminal experience for me. I was judging and she was needing, and the Holy Spirit responded to need, not to judgment." [Christian Century, Apr 13, 1994. Page 383.] If I don't catch myself, I can be exactly like that! So can you! We can be critical, judgmental, looking down our nose, thinking how we are better than the other person! And in the process of that:

3. they had become satiated, that is, satisfied with who and how they were, so that they were blind to their own need (8) In their eyes they had it all already! Jesus talked to the church at Laodicea like that in Rev. 3:17, You say, 'I am rich; I have acquired wealth and do not need a thing.' But you do not realize that you are wretched, pitiful, poor, blind and naked. It is so easy to see the faults in others and be completely blind to our own. A serviceman stationed at the Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Alabama, tells about an inspection that was being conducted by a full colonel. Everything went smoothly until the officer came to a soldier who had overlooked one small detail about his uniform. The colonel stopped, looked the man up and down and snapped, "Button that pocket, trooper!" The soldier, more than a little rattled, stammered, "Right now, sir?" "Of course, right now!" was the reply. Whereupon the soldier very carefully reached over and buttoned the flap on the colonel's shirt pocket. [Pulpit Helps, April 1992. Page 28.] We don't see that we're proud; we don't see that we're arrogant; we don't see that we're hurting people and driving them away and dividing the body and dishonoring Christ! And where this all leads is this:

4. they developed an attitude of contempt toward others. And I tried to define that word a bit; it seems to me to have three elements. There is a disrespect for the other person. They become lesser or lower than me in my eyes. They are beneath me. And that disrespect becomes a disregard for them as a person. I don't care about what happens to them or how what I do affects them or how they feel. And that disregard often intensifies into an actual dislike for them. I don't want them around. I avoid them. I react at the very thought of seeing them or talking to them. Barbara Beevers writes in Discipleship Journal: "I once learned a valuable lesson in being judged by my own standard of judging. In an orientation group before an overseas trip, there was a woman who dismissed or disagreed with everything I said. Others in the group noticed it and asked her why she didn't like me. She had to think about it awhile before she realized that the reason was my Eastern Seaboard accent. That was a surprise to me, but God also used it as a wake-up call. I thought back to the time when I had first moved to the South and a well-known Christian speaker lectured at our church. My husband was impressed with the man's insights, but I could hardly listen to him because of his strong Southern accent. His regional expressions sounded like poor grammar to me. I sat there thinking, "Who is this man to instruct us? He doesn't even speak proper English." I missed a lot that week. It took a couple of days for me to get past judging his knowledge by his accent before I could learn from him." [Discipleship Journal, Sep/Oct 1994. Page 35.] She's not alone. We ALL do it. We all view certain people, even other believers, with contempt because they talk too much or they're brash or they're slow or this or that. And I just know the Spirit is bringing at least one name to your mind right now!

The problem of contempt is alive and well, even here among us, just as it was in Corinth. Now in the first few verses Paul lays out exactly:

II. How We Should Regard Ourselves And Others First of all:

1. we are servants of God (1) That is not only true of Paul; it's true of all of us. No matter how important we get in our own eyes, no matter how many our achievements, how great our knowledge or how proficient we are at what we do, we are all still simply servants of Jesus Christ. And the word Paul uses here in Greek means one who rows under another. It comes from the naval world where you have a coxswain (pronounced koksun) in charge of the boat steering and giving orders to the rows of oarsmen who are rowing and when he says "Stroke", they all pull together. At the bottom line, we are all those who simply follow orders. We're just people at the "beck and call" of Jesus Christ. We're all the rowers, not the captain, just people doing what He says. And He's given us a job to do:

a. we have been entrusted with His truth Who Jesus really was and what He did are a secret, a mystery to most of the world. They don't know anything about Him and His salvation, but we do! By saving us, He has entrusted this knowledge to us and given us the assignment of sharing it with the whole world. He left the job in our hands and told us to get on with it. We have the best news, the most vital information in the world and we're told to give our lives to getting it to everyone everywhere, yet here in Corinth we sit, admiring our reflections in the water and looking down our noses at one another like we own the boat! To bring them down a notch further, Paul points out that:

b. we received everything we have from Him (7) Everything about you, everything you have, from looks and abilities to your position in life, it's all a gift from Him. You have not one thing that you did not receive, not even this next breath you take. Everything is His, given to you, entrusted to you to use wisely during the time that He's given you on this earth. You and I are only servants who've been left a whole bunch of stuff to care for and:

2. we are required to be faithful to God's trust (2) If I ask you to take care of my car while I'm gone, I have some expectations. You know that I'm coming back and when I do, I'm going to hold you accountable that the car is unwrecked, that its gas tank isn't empty, that it's clean. I'm going to require of you that you prove to be faithful to your assigned task. And so is Jesus. He gave us everything we have, did all the work to save us, entrusted us with the saving news of the Gospel, told us to share it with the world and left. And when He returns and we stand before Him, He's going to expect us to have been faithful! That's how it works, but the point is that:

3. He is the One who will decide how faithful we have been (3-5) It doesn't matter if you judge how good a job I've done. It doesn't even matter if I judge how good a job I've done:

a. He is the only one who has the right to judge us Turn back with me to what Paul said in Rom. 14:4. You're not the Master; I'm not the Master. HE's the Master; we're all servants. If I work for Bud, it doesn't matter what Keith tells me to do, does it? If I serve Jesus Christ, it doesn't really matter what you think I should do or even what I think I should do. My job is to carry out what He says I should do and He's the only one with the right to evaluate me! And I have no right to judge you, to evaluate the way you're serving; that right belongs to Jesus Christ. And one day He'll return to do just that and each one of us will receive the praise that we deserve from Him! It's His right, but more than that:

b. He is the only one who has the ability to judge us We all have this little problem that the Lord mentioned to Samuel when he was trying to figure out who would make the best king of Israel. He said, ...The LORD does not look at the things man looks at. Man looks at the outward appearance, but the LORD looks at the heart." - 1 Sam. 16:7. You can't see inside me and I can't see inside you. But God can! That's what He looks at. He looks at your heart. He looks at your motives, at why you do things, not how much you accomplish. That's why it's so dangerous to criticize and judge one another; we can't see hearts like God can and we make BIG mistakes. I was talking to someone the other day about Benny Hinn. You may have seen him on TV in these giant crusades and people falling down, being "slain in the Spirit". Years ago, I would have criticized his theology and put down his practice and generally talked about him with contempt, but you know, I've heard the man explain the Gospel clearly and challenge people and pray for people to give their lives to Jesus Christ. Who am I to judge another man's servant? I'm not about to preach his theology or to imitate his methods, but who am I to say he is not pleasing his master? Who am I to say that my brother who wears an all black suit with a white clergy collar is less spiritual than I am because he sings music that was written a thousand years ago? If we both know Jesus Christ, then we stand or fall in His eyes alone and He is able to give both of us grace to make us stand, if we are willing to receive it!

So, how are we going to keep this judgmental, critical spirit, this contempt for others from creeping into our lives? Well, the text gives us an idea:

III. We Should Imitate The Example Of Godly Leaders Like Paul (16) What a novel idea! Look at people who are living the life you know Christ wants you to live and model your life after theirs! We're so fortunate because first of all:

1. we have the example of Paul and the other apostles themselves (9) It seems like God put them all on parade for the world to see. Not the kind of parade we have here on July 4th. He's talking about the kind of victory parades that Rome had, where the returning General would parade all of his victorious legions through the streets of Rome and at the end of the train would come the captives, the prisoners of war, destined for the Colosseum to have their death by wild beasts and gladiators made into a public spectacle for all of Rome to watch. We don't have time to tell their stories, but every one of the Apostles lived a bold and vibrant life and gave themselves to the task of taking the Gospel to lands where it had never been. In their short lives they got as far as India on the east and Britain on the west and every one of them died a martyr's death, except John and he lived a martyred life, exiled to the mines of the island of Patmos. Crucified, beheaded, burned or killed with the sword, they gave their "last full measure of devotion" as President Lincoln put it. But look how they did it; look how Paul did it:

a. they endured tremendous misery without complaint (11) Turn with me to the second letter Paul wrote to Corinth. The catalog of Paul's Christian life reads like this, 2 Cor. 11:23-28. Yet he never complained. To him it was worth it all for the surpassing greatness of knowing Christ and making Him known to the world. Imitate people like that, people who are willing to suffer and sacrifice without complaining because they love Jesus. And that last part reminds us that these men:

b. they endured demanding labor without ceasing which Paul mentions back in (12a). Paul worked hard; he sewed tents everywhere he went to support himself. Imitate people like that, people who are willing to work hard and long for the sake of the Gospel. And then here's the kicker:

c. they endured awful mistreatment without contempt (12b-13) They loved the very ones who hated them, who caused them all their suffering. Imitate people like that! Imitate people who bless the very people who curse them, who show love to the very people against whom others would be plotting revenge. Imitate Stephen, who as he was being stoned prayed, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge!" Treat no one with contempt, especially our own brothers and sisters in the church!

Now, fortunately, it's not only the example of Paul and Peter and the others from that day which we have:

2. we have the example of godly people in our own lives (14-17) All of us:

a. we have our own "fathers and mothers in Christ" who impacted us, who led us to faith, who discipled and taught us, who modeled for us the kind of life Jesus meant for us to live. If I say the word godly, just think who comes to mind. Fix your eyes on them; imitate them as they walk after Jesus. And the one characteristic I know they all have in common is that they are humble. They are not big shots; they don't blow their own horn. They are not wise in their own eyes. They are simply servants going about their Master's orders with fervor and loving the people they come across, ALL the people. Like Paul:

b. their way of living matches what they teach or what they profess; so must ours We talk about loving one another as Christ loved us. We talk a good talk, but those who are really spiritual giants walk a good walk that matches. Let's imitate them.

I read about a businessman who keeps on his desk a fairly large stone on which is lettered one word: FIRST. It acts for him as a constant reminder of Jesus' words, "He that is without sin..., let him first cast a stone." When he looks at it, it helps check the carnal desire within him to be hasty in criticizing and condemning others. When he recalls his own flaws, he finds it less difficult to show grace to others who are weak and erring. This remarkable paperweight also serves a secand purpose for him. When people come into his office in an angry, critical mood, he quietly hands the stone to them at an appropriate moment. Of course, they are surprised, but they usually examine the stone carefully, and then ask what the word "FIRST" means. As they listen to his explanation, it isn't long until their attitude toward others changes. So, I leave you, not with a rock, but with this one word, FIRST. When you feel contempt rising up in you, think about yourself and who you really are. Are you really ready and qualified to be first in line to cast a stone? No, only Jesus is.

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

4) The Problem Of Tolerance - Ch. 5

Let me review for you the problems that Paul has addressed in the church at Corinth in the first four chapters. The first problem was the issue of divisiveness itself, breaking the unity of the body by dividing into factions. The second problem was the issue of carnality which caused it, letting self-centered flesh patterns control their reactions instead of the Holy Spirit. The third problem is the attitude which the Corinthians had developed in the process; they had developed contempt for one another and for Paul. At chapter 5 Paul moves on to address an entirely different kind of:

I. The Problem In The Corinthian Church (1-2) The subject of this chapter is actually that of church discipline, how the church as a body should deal with members who sin. They had a case of it going on right then and it was a well-known case. Paul had heard about it hundreds of miles away in Ephesus where he was writing from. That kind of news travels, doesn't it? We call it a scandal. When a well-known TV evangelist is caught with a prostitute or is arrested for embezzling listener contributions, that's front page news. Hypocrisy like that didn't fly well then and it doesn't fly well today and the world is quick to cry, "Fake" and to discredit belief in Christ because of it. Well, in Corinth, the problem had two aspects. The first was obviously:

1. the practice of sin by one of its members One of the believers there who professed to be a follower of Jesus Christ was openly committing a form of incest. He was either openly sleeping with or had actually married, his father's wife, his own step-mother. This was expressly forbidden, not only by Jewish law in Lev. 18:8, but even by the laws of pagan Rome itself. It was detestable and abhorrent in the eyes of the whole society. But the particular sin itself is not so important. Paul goes on in verse 9 to include a host of others. It could have been greed or embezzlement of money. It could have been drunkenness or drug addiction or armed robbery! The point is that Paul is addressing it because:

a. it was a "grievous" sin, to use a common term; we might call it a flagrant sin. Every believer sins and most of us daily. We are unkind or rude; we think wrong thoughts, display wrong attitudes and fail to pray or to help or a hundred other things that we should do. Paul is not advocating the idea that the church is to act as a kind of Christian "moral police" like the Taliban in Afghanistan, beating men without beards or women with uncovered heads. This sin was serious; it was grave. It was outrageous, shocking, something so serious that it violated everyone's conscience, not just believers', and the whole world knew it was evil. So, here is a guy in the church doing something that everybody knows is "against nature", plus:

b. it was continuing and the offender was unrepentant It was not a mistake that he fell into one time and then quickly got out of. He was coming to worship. He was singing the songs and praying. He was taking the Lord's Supper just like all the rest. And all the while he was openly continuing in this flagrant sin without even a hint that it was wrong or that he had any intention of stopping it. Now, that's a problem, but what made it really a problem was:

2. the tolerance of sin by the church body What really shocked Paul was that:

a. there was a lack of concern They all knew about it. It was no secret. Yet nobody seemed to care. Nobody's heart was broken over it. And Paul chastises them: "And you are proud! You're pointing fingers at each other over stupid little stuff and saying, 'I'm more spiritual than you!' You should be filled with grief and sorrow and shame that one of you would fall into this kind of sin!" They didn't appear touched by it at all and:

b. there was a continuing acceptance of the offender Nobody did anything about it. The church didn't throw him out. They didn't warn him. They let it go on without even confronting the guy, it seems.

Tolerance. It's a popular theme today. Everybody today has a "zero-tolerance" policy about weapons or about drugs or about fighting or something. But when it comes to sexual behavior, it seems that the pendulum has swung the other direction to a "complete tolerance" policy in our society. Actually being "intolerant" is seen as a sin. If you take a stand that homosexuality or abortion or sex outside of marriage are morally wrong, for instance, you are seen as a bigot. We are encouraged on every hand to tolerate behavior that God has a zero-tolerance policy about! And that attitude of tolerance has crept slowly into the church. In this last decade, several major denominations have not only ordained people living in homosexual relationships to the ministry, but some have made them high-level leaders, bishops! In Dec. 2004 a United Methodist minister had her credentials revoked because she lived an openly lesbian lifestyle, but the Philadelphia church that she served offered to employ her as a lay associate and 6 months later a church court reinstated her credentials! We all read for months about the huge scandal of hidden sexual abuse of children by priests within the Roman Catholic Church and how some of it was known but was covered up for years. But I don't want to focus today on other wings of the church where people may profess Christ but don't really know Him. This same tolerance also creeps into evangelical churches like ours, with genuine believers who hold firmly to the Scriptures. In Nov. 2006 the well-known pastor of a mega-church in Colorado Springs and president of the National Association of Evangelicals was forced to resign under allegations of sexual misconduct with a male prostitute and admitted that a number of the allegations were true and that he had deceived and lied. He was publicly preaching against and politically lobbying against what he was doing in private. Fortunately, that church did the right thing by removing him, but he is only one in a long list of genuine believers who have fallen into serious sin and every church, even ours, is faced with this issue. We have faced it several times in my many years here and it is always a difficult and painful thing when someone who is one of us ends up in this kind of sin and the church is forced to do something about it. But what if we didn't? Some churches don't; the pain of taking a stand like that and the rifts that it will cause is too great. Well, Paul explains:

II. The Reason Tolerance Of Serious Sin Is A Problem (6-8) First of all, if we let such serious sin go on in our midst and do nothing about it:

1. it is a great danger to the whole body because sin will spread It multiplies like yeast when you put a pinch of it into a fresh batch of dough. I know most of you don't bake your own bread anymore, but what happens? The little bit of yeast will soon work through the whole batch of dough and cause it to rise. In bread, that's a good thing! In the church, that's a bad thing! If one person openly practices something evil, others are enticed to join them or they are emboldened to do other things just as bad. Soon the whole church is affected; its testimony is corrupted and eventually God has to do something to defend the honor of his own name. If you remember, when the Israelites were on their way out of Egypt, Balak the king of Moab wanted to curse and conquer them but Balaam the false prophet actually ended up selling him some effective advice, Invite them to your feasts and get them involved in your sexual orgies and the worship of your gods and then God Himself will have to destroy them for you! And it worked! God had to purge and cleanse Israel and when His church becomes tolerant of sin, periodically Christ has to do something to purge and cleanse it also! So, tolerating sin endangers the church's testimony and its very survival because it spreads. But there is a deeper reason why it must not be tolerated and it's this:

2. we have a great duty to God because of Christ's sacrifice Christ, our Passover Lamb, has been sacrificed for us! In Israel when the Passover Lamb was sacrificed, the Feast of Unleavened Bread began. For a whole week there was to be no speck of leaven or yeast in the house anywhere. All the dough was baked without yeast! And that yeast was, of course, a picture of sin. When the Passover Lamb dies, sin is to be removed and we are to live holy! In New Testament terms, Christ, God's very Son, was sacrificed to take away all our sins. How can we deliberately and knowingly practice flagrant sin knowing that? We have an obligation, a duty to God to live in purity because Jesus gave His life for us! And as a church body we have an obligation to see that our loaf is kept without leaven for the same reason, that our body remains pure because it is a local representation of the body of Jesus Christ. So, what are we supposed to do about it when it happens? Paul spells out clearly:

III. The Action That Must Be Taken He says point blank twice that:

1. the offender must put out of the body (2b, 13b) Since he is not repentant and shows no hint of either stopping or asking forgiveness, remove him! Expel him! Put him away from being among you! And how do you do that? Paul spells that out too. He says:

2. it should be done publicly (3-5) Call a meeting and declare it publicly that this man is no longer one of you, that he is no true believer in Christ or he would not be doing what he is doing and that he is no longer a part of the body! The strongest way of putting it is in verse 5, Hand him over to Satan for that his flesh may be destroyed! What that means is that here's a man who has chosen to allow Satan to rule his life instead of the Holy Spirit. So, now declare it for what it is! Release him from the protective umbrella of being part of the church to fall fully under the dominion of the master he has chosen! In Acts 5 when Ananias and Sapphira purposely lied and misrepresented themselves Peter didn't mince any words, he said, "Satan has filled your heart so that you lied to the Holy Spirit!" Up in Samaria, when Simon the magician offered to buy the ability to give the Holy Spirit by laying on his hands, he was living in greed even though it says he had believed and been baptized. And Peter answered: "May your money perish with you, because you thought you could buy the gift of God with money! You have no part or share in this ministry, because your heart is not right before God. Repent of this wickedness and pray to the Lord. Perhaps he will forgive you for having such a thought in your heart. For I see that you are full of bitterness and captive to sin." - Acts 8:20-23. "Your behavior proves that you are not right with God, that you belong to Satan and you're not one of us!" Paul says, "Tell him that! And tell him that publicly!" Those are harsh words, aren't they? We can hardly imagine ourselves doing that? But we have to remember that:

a. this is normally the final step in a longer process which Jesus Himself spelled out for us. Turn with me to Mt. 18:15-20. Note how every effort must first be made to bring this sinning brother to repentance. First, you talk to him personally, show him his fault privately. If that doesn't work, take some other folks with you who can confirm what you say; maybe he'll listen. But if he's obstinate and refuses and intentionally continues on in his sin even though he's been warned, THEN tell it to the whole church and let them try to convince him, but if he won't listen to the church, cut him off from the church. Call a meeting and tell him that he is no longer part of you, that he is for all intents and purposes like any other nonbeliever! Don't count him any longer as one of your number. And the last verses there are really deep, but they suggest that what appears to be true on earth IS really true, that the church is merely reflecting what God already knows to be true and that the person really is what he has been declared to be, an unbeliever! But even if you have to go that far, Paul still says that:

b. the ultimate purpose of expelling the man is restoration (5b) There is no room for a proud and haughty spirit in this kind of discipline. According to verse 2, it ought to be done in great sorrow and with a view toward restoration. Jesus said, "If he listens..., if He listens..." That's the point and Paul says the intended result is the destruction or ruin of the sinful nature in the NIV, but literally the Greek says, the flesh. He says, "Let Satan destroy and ruin this guy's life that is built on living according to his flesh so that he'll repent! So that in the end when he's tired of living the hard way, he'll come to Christ and find true forgiveness and salvation and a transformed life. In fact, it seems that the Corinthians did indeed throw this guy out and that it worked! And look what Paul writes about him in the next letter, 2 Cor. 2:5-10. "Now that he's repentant, take him back! Restore him to the body! Forgive him and know that he is forgiven in Christ!" That's the goal; that's what God always wants! But He will not force us to it; He gives to each of us the free will to choose Him or not.

Now, Paul goes on to explain that this expulsion:

3. it should be followed by dissociation (9-11) As long as a person professes to be saved but still practices the sin:
a. there must be a breaking of fellowship He or she can't just come and do the things they've always done and be treated the way they were always treated. To say, "You are not one of us any more" must mean something in a continuing sense. Jesus said, treat the person as you would an unbeliever or a publican (a person who collected taxes for the Romans, that is, as a person who makes a living doing something you despise). Break fellowship with them. Make it clear that there is now a line, a difference between you. Paul says, "Don't invite them over for a meal or go to their place for one!" In other words, let them go; separate your life from theirs. You don't have to be rude and unloving about it and certainly you shouldn't stop caring about them and praying for them, but there has to be some distance put in place between them and you as a reminder that they are not one of the body any more. Now Paul inserts here a huge note of CAUTION which I'd like to echo. He says:

b. this principle must NOT be applied to nonbelievers He is not teaching that you should never be around or have anything to do with nonbelievers who practice sin. Some have taken these verses and others that way. They don't want to be around anyone who is involved in sin of some sort. Well, first of all:

(1) it would be impossible The people all around us do this stuff. At one point a few years ago 5 of the 10 or 11 houses on my block had couples living together without being married in them. If I had nothing to do with them, think how impossible it would have been to avoid. You work with people who routinely sleep around and get drunk on the weekends and do all kinds of sinful stuff. It's all around you; to avoid it you'd have to leave the world. But the point is that:

(2) our business is to save unbelievers, not judge them (12) Judging nonbelievers for their sins is God's business; it's our business to save them, to mix our lives with theirs and reach them. Jesus was called a friend of publicans and sinners. He ate and drank with them in their homes because it is the sick who need a doctor! No, this command to dissociate ourselves:

c. it is to be applied to professing believers who act like unbelievers after they've refused every attempt to turn them back and rescue them from the course they've chosen. Their souls are in grave danger and our reaction to them is God's means of warning them and calling them to come back.

Does it work? Well, if you mean, "Does the person ever repent and come back?", sometimes it does. Sometimes it doesn't. In the case of this man in Corinth, it did. Vic Borden, pastor of Red Bridge Baptist in Missouri writes: "We've had this happen in recent months with a long-time church member, a very high-profile person, who just decided he was done with his wife of 20 years," Borden said. "Ultimately that came before the congregation and after a measure of time—gut-wrenching anguish and prayer and crying out to the Lord, calling this person to repent—the answer was, 'I'm going to do what I'm going to do.' And so, with tears, in a church business meeting, we removed his membership and (now) count him as an unbeliever. That is the way it works."

On the other hand, Peacemaker ministries has this testimony on its website: Sam told his wife Kathy that he was filing for divorce and moving in with another woman. When Kathy was unable to dissuade him, she went to their pastor for advice. Pastor James gave her several suggestions on how to persuade her husband to change his mind or at least to come in for counseling. But nothing Kathy said to her husband during the next few days had any apparent impact, and he began to pack his things. In desperation, she returned to her pastor and asked him to talk with her husband. At first, Pastor James declined to take such an active role, saying that he "did not want to scare him away from the church." "How can you take such a position," Kathy asked the pastor, "in the light of Matthew 18:15-20, Galatians 6:1-2, and many related passages." After a long and heated discussion, he finally realized that he was neglecting his responsibilities as a shepherd. As a result, he went to visit Sam that evening and offered to help him work out his marital problems. When Sam adamantly refused to change his course, Pastor James pleaded with him to change his mind and offered all of the resources of the church to help solve the problems in his marriage. When even that did not dissuade Sam, Pastor James finally said,

"I can't stop you from filing for divorce, but I must tell you that you will face church discipline if you deliberately violate Scripture as you are planning to do." After he got over his initial shock, Sam asked what he meant by "church discipline." When Pastor James explained, Sam's jaw dropped and he said, "You mean I'll be kicked out of the church for divorcing my wife?" "Under these circumstances," Pastor James replied firmly, "yes." Hearing this, Sam lost his temper and ordered Pastor James out of his home. Early the next morning, however, Pastor James received a phone call from Sam, who wanted to talk with him again. Their conversation yesterday had begun to sink in, and Sam was carefully considering the ramifications of his own proposed actions. They met an hour later, and by 10:00 AM Sam was on the telephone telling "the other woman" that he would not be moving in with her. Later that afternoon, Pastor James began counseling with Kathy and Sam, and together they started to work out the deep problems that had brought them to this crisis. Ten years later, Sam and Kathy are still raising their family together and thanking God.... Sometimes the story has a happy ending. Often it doesn't. But ultimately the important thing is that the church, the body of believers, is protected. Tolerance destroys a church. Discipline protects and purifies it as Jesus intended.

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

5) The Problem Of Disputes - 6:1-11

The first major issue Paul dealt with in this letter was that the church was all divided up into factions. It took him four chapters to deal with all the roots and ramifications of that. Then in chapter 5, he addressed the fact that there was this member openly living in shocking, flagrant sin and the church was tolerating it. Now, in the first half of chapter 6, he brings up another issue. Evidently:

I. There Was A Problem With Disputes At Corinth (1, 6) That word disputes is referring to legal cases, matters of law, and it has reference specifically to commercial or business transactions, not criminal acts. In other words, these were not purely personal matters. It is not just that people were arguing with one another over this or that; we already know they were doing that back in chapter 1! These were legal matters, things they could go into a Roman court and bring charges about, but they were not criminal charges either, like assault, robbery or murder. Those belong in a civil court according to Romans 13. These were civil charges or what we would call today lawsuits. William Barclay says in his commentary: "The Greeks were naturally and characteristically a litigious people. The law-courts were in fact one of their chief amusements and entertainment... In a Greek city every man was more or less a lawyer and spent a very great part of his time either deciding or listening to law cases. The Greeks were in fact famous, or notorious, for their love of going to law. Not unnaturally, certain of the Greeks had brought their litigious tendencies into the Christian church; and Paul was shocked." We should be able to relate to that. Doug Goins of Peninsula Bible Church comments: ...if baseball is the great American pastime, litigation is moving into second place. Our criminal justice system in this country is big business beyond belief. It's also turning into a great entertainment value for the dollar. The legal frenzy that we seem to be wrapped up in is driven by some of our favorite national slogans: "I've got my rights." "I don't have to take that from you." "I've got it coming to me." The words "I'll sue" are two of the most over-used words in our American vocabulary today, because everybody is suing everybody else. Children are suing parents, pupils are suing teachers, players are suing coaches, homosexual lovers are suing states, spouses are suing their marriage partners. This isn't limited to non-Christians. Christian neighbors are suing each other. Christian faculty members are now filing suit against the administrations of Christian schools. Churches are suing one another. Churches are suing their pastors, and vice versa. Brothers and sisters in the family of God are actually pressing charges, demanding their rights, sometimes to the exclusion of any attempt to reconcile face-to-face. I was reminded of a cartoon I had seen in Christianity Today many years ago. It's Sunday morning, and on the church platform the soloist is about to sing a number as the pianist waits to play the introduction. With microphone in hand he says, "I'd like to share a song with you that the Lord gave me a year ago...and even though He did give it to me, any reproduction of this song in any form without my written consent will constitute infringement of the copyright law which grants me the right to sue your pants off...praise God...." [<http://www.pbc.org/files/messages/6421/4519.html>] Now, notice the particular situation he's addressing in our text:

1. these disputes were occurring between believers He's not talking about believers defending themselves against vicious outsiders or the government trying to hurt them. He's not talking about being in an accident and suing an insurance company to get fair reimbursement for damages. These were people within the church, brothers and sisters in Christ, hurting one another in material ways. Maybe Joe does a job for Sam and Sam won't pay him what he owes for whatever reason. What does he do? Maybe Sue and Sarah made a business deal together but Sue isn't holding up her end of the bargain. What does Sarah do? These kinds of situations happen. Over the years, I've had a number of people come to me and tell how there was an issue like this with some brother or sister. And they ask, "What should I do with a dispute like this?" Well, in Corinth:

2. they were appealing to secular courts to settle them They were taking their cases to the legal justice system of their day and letting secular judges settle them. Now don't get Paul wrong. Paul used the Roman system of courts and justice. He declared his rights as a Roman citizen to protect himself. When on trial he exercised his right of appeal to Caesar. It was not that Paul felt that you can't get justice in a secular court. He himself was acquitted and his case dismissed by Gallio, the very proconsul of Corinth when the mob took him while he was still there in Acts 18! But Gallio was wise enough to see that religious matters didn't belong in a secular court; the Corinthians weren't. They were dragging one another into court to settle their problems. And:

3. the church was allowing this to happen without getting involved It was not doing anything about this. It was not making any attempts to move these believers to settle the differences between themselves. Sadly, most church bodies are like that. We get all worried about violating people's private lives and so we allow members to mistreat one another or hold grudges against each other and act in unchristian ways to one another without any kind of reprimand. And the sad fact is that:

4. it was a terrible witness to nonbelievers You can hear Paul's shock in verse 6, this in front of unbelievers! Believers acting like this, showing this kind of hostility, acting in unjust unfair ways to one another, and doing it openly expecting nonbelievers to settle it for them? What a terrible testimony! What would these pagans think of Jesus Christ? Of the church? How would believers ever win them with this kind of hypocrisy openly going on? Jesus said, By this all men will know that you are my disciples, if you love one another." - John 13:35. Our special love for one another is our trademark; it is the thing that draws nonbelievers to follow Christ. When it is gone and we act like the world toward each other, basically all men doubt that we are His disciples or they doubt He even exists, if He doesn't make a difference in the lives of His followers! And so, Paul doesn't mince any words. He says clearly that:

II. Disputes Between Believers Should Be Settled Within The Body The place to settle disputes within the body of Christ is within the body of Christ! If these kinds of serious matters exist here between us, we ought to settle them here. Why? Just look at his line of logic. First, he reasons that:

1. we shall one day judge the world (2) Have you ever thought about that fact? We, you and I, will one day rule with Christ; we'll be the administrators and the judges of His Millennial Kingdom. Dan. 7:27 says, Then the sovereignty, power and greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven will be handed over to the saints, the people of the Most High. His kingdom will be an everlasting kingdom, and all rulers will worship and obey him. We will reign with Christ. We will settle people's problems on earth during His Millennial reign. Who knows what we will do in the new heavens and new earth for all eternity? God is willing to entrust this business of judging to us so...we ought to be able to judge trivial matters! Like the problems we have with one another now! We're competent. We have His Spirit. We are equipped to do this. In fact, Paul goes on to say that:

2. we shall one day judge angels (3) - Jude 6 tells us that God has confined some of the angels who fell with Satan in the pit, waiting for the end of the Millennium when they and their boss will be cast into the lake of fire. In that day they will appear for judgment, for sentencing, and so will all those hordes of demons who have been allowed to run free and wreak havoc on the planet all these centuries. And guess who will be involved in that judgment, who will they will appear before - US! We will judge angels, so, Paul says, ...we ought to be able to judge things in this life! The point is that God is going to entrust us with immense eternal responsibility as judges giving righteous decisions for Him, therefore:

3. we are responsible to judge disputes among ourselves (4-6) We are quite capable of handling these kinds of things so ...why would we appeal to those who have no standing in the church? Why would we go to people who don't have the Spirit of God, who don't have a love for the members of the body, to settle our disputes instead of appealing to the body itself? Even those who may be least among us are quite capable of seeing and understanding the problem through the Spirit and the church has the ability and the authority to deal with it! In Mat. 18:15-17 Jesus made it clear. If your brother is at fault, you go and talk to him privately. If that doesn't work, take some witnesses to confirm what you're saying. If that doesn't work, tell it to the church! And let the church tell him he's got to stop or make it right. And if that doesn't work, the church should throw him out, just like the man we studied in chapter 5 last week! The church is commanded to get involved when one brother or sister injures another!

Now this is serious business. Sure, there will be small problems of the type I mentioned earlier. But how about when a husband and wife in the church are having serious problems and separate and want to divorce. Should they let a secular court solve their problems? Paul would say, "No, if they're serious believers, they should be willing to let the church step in and help them settle their issues before it gets that far!" Or how about an employer/employee problem where both are in the church? Should they go to court to settle their differences? Paul says, "No, they should be willing to let the church step in and settle it!" Unfortunately, few believers in our day are willing to let the church act in that role. They usually run away first; they disappear. They take their problems and go settle them the way they want to without interference. Paul cries, "NO, if you really know Jesus, when there are problems between you, the church is where you should go to find God's power to settle them!" And then Paul goes even further and strikes at the bottom line of the problem, which is that:

III. These Kinds Of Disputes Should Not Occur In The Body We shouldn't have them in the first place! Paul says:

1. disputes are an indication of spiritual defeat (7) The fact that such things are present at all says that Satan is already winning the battle. He's already having his way; we're already following his agenda. Jesus made it perfectly clear that:

a. we are to settle issues between ourselves immediately Turn with me to Mat. 5:23-24. To paraphrase it, "Don't come to church and sing all piously and "Amen" the message when you know there is a problem between you and someone else in the body. Go fix it!" You have a responsibility to go and get it straight first. You can't worship together if your hearts are not united as one. The minute we decide to let problems continue and grow, we lose! The love we are to have for our brother turns to anger and bitterness and eventually hatred and God won't have it, not among His children. Paul says, "Why don't you simply let yourself be wronged if there's no other way to settle it?" That's the spirit of Jesus. That's what He did! He greeted Judas with a kiss in the very act of betrayal. Sometimes the only way to settle things between you is to let the other person win, to let them have their way, even if it isn't fair, even if it isn't just. Again, Doug Goins shares this testimony from his church, Two brothers in the body here were in a business venture together a number of years ago. They invested several hundred thousand dollars in a business and were defrauded. It's an amazing story. These two men sat down with the man who had defrauded them and his lawyer and asked for full restitution. They said that was what was right morally and legally. He owed them and their other investors full redress. Then they gave him a letter that said in essence, "This is what we want from you because it's right. However, if you choose not to meet the moral and legal obligation, we forgive the debt." The lawyer read the letter and said, "Give me a minute, please...I'm a Christian, but never in all my years of legal practice have I seen Christians take the Bible this seriously." These brothers were willing to suffer loss, and they even gave the man who defrauded them a Bible as a parting gift. I don't think to this day they know if he's ever come to faith in Christ. But their conviction was that his eternal destiny was more important than their getting redress in court. They were willing to lose for the sake of God's kingdom. [\[http://www.pbc.org/files/messages/6421/4519.html\]](http://www.pbc.org/files/messages/6421/4519.html) That's the attitude that Jesus had, the one He wants us to have. Turn over with me to Col. 3:12-13:

b. we are to have an attitude of forbearance and forgiveness Bearing with somebody means putting up with them, being willing to endure things that come your way from them without growing angry and retaliating, because you love them. Think about how much stuff we put up with from one another inside our own families. We say hurtful things to one another, we ignore each other's needs and we apologize and make up at the drop of a hat. Why? Because we love each other and that's part of loving. Peter said, Above all, love each other deeply, because love covers over a multitude of sins. – 1 Pet. 4:8. Love is willing to put up with faults and flaws and to forgive sins. If we love, disputes will not be occurring. However, the other side of this is that:

2. disputes mean at least one party is practicing wickedness (8) In many of these cases someone is actually doing wrong:

a. one is committing injustice and even stealing from the other Somebody's cheating. Somebody's taking money that isn't theirs, taking advantage of the other in a way that's wrong. Many times, both parties are wrong, but at least one of them has to be doing dirt to the other in order for disputes like this to exist and:

b. directing it toward our own brothers and sisters makes it doubly bad Yes, stealing is stealing and it is bad enough to steal from your employer or a stranger, but when someone would steal from their own mother, we think that is the lowest of the low, don't we? Well, fellow believers literally ARE brothers and sisters in Christ; they ARE family. How could we even think about hurting one another like that? And Paul goes on to put it even more graphically:

3. disputes mean we are living out of our flesh like we used to live (9-11) These are beautiful verses which we often quote, but we never look at their meaning in its true context. Paul is chiding the sinning party, the cheating party, and he says, "Don't you know..."

a. the practice of wickedness bars people from the Kingdom of God People who commit immorality and adultery and get drunk and steal things and lie about people and swindle them don't get into heaven. Sin sends people to hell. Sin keeps people from God. And, to our shame:

b. that is how many of us acted in our lives before meeting Christ Those are the things we were! We practiced those things back there. Sure, some of us were raised in Christian homes and got saved young and maybe we didn't get into a lot of this stuff, but if I were to ask for a show of hands (and I'm not!) of how many of US used to be adulterers, fornicators, thieves, and so on, I think you'd be amazed at the hands that would go up if we were honest. That is what some of us were! But, Paul says:

c. we have been cleansed, made holy and pardoned from these things Jesus came along with His marvelous grace and said, "I know what you are! I know what you've done! I forgive you! I pardon you completely. You are justified! No matter how dirty your life was, I wash it all away from you; now you are clean. I make you holy, pure and perfect like Me!" Oh, what a marvelous thing it is to be washed in the blood of the Lamb! But the point is, having all this, knowing all this, how can we go back and act like we used to act! How can we go back and swindle and cheat and lie and violate our marriage vows the way the world does and act like people who are barred from the Kingdom forever? No! Paul is saying:

d. we must act like what we are! We ARE all those things. Now we have to act like it! And if we do, there won't be disputes among us. We'll bear with one another and forgive one another the way Christ forgave us because we'll love one another the way He loved us.

Beloved, I don't know at this moment of any legal issues between any of us, of any huge things where one of us is hurting another, but maybe talking about this issue brings someone to mind, some wrong done, some hurt received, some grudge you're holding, maybe someone who wounds you regularly and you don't even tell them. What will you do? The late Dr. Wallace Hamilton, novelist and playwright, liked to tell the story of an Indian sheep farmer who had a big problem. His neighbor's dogs were killing his sheep. It got so bad that he had to do something. So he considered his alternatives. First, he could have brought a lawsuit and taken his neighbor to court. Second, he could have built stronger fences so that the dogs couldn't get in. But he had a better idea. He gave some lambs to his neighbor's children. When the lambs began to multiply and a little flock began to develop, the neighbor tied up his dogs, and the problem was solved. Jesus said, "Blessed are the peacemakers." [Homiletics, Apr-Jun 1991. Page 13.] What will you do? You can take the steps to tell it to the church; there's nothing wrong with that. It's biblical. But you can also choose to endure suffering wrong and try letting God reveal to you some way to love and bless that offending party first. That's what Jesus would want to see in His church.

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

6) The Problem Of Misusing Our Bodies - 6:12-20

Paul has just finished chiding the Corinthian believers for having disputes among themselves and going to law courts to settle them. He challenged them in verses 9-11 to live like what they are: we are washed and sanctified and justified so we ought not to be greedy and self-centered and cheat one another! That's our old way of life; our new one is different! It's pure and holy. And then at verse 12, he moves on in the rest of the chapter to apply that to another serious issue in the church. To see it clearly let's look ahead to verses (18, 16).

I. The Problem Paul Is Dealing With Is Sexual Immorality If you remember, when I introduced this series, I told you that:

1. in Corinth religious prostitution was an accepted part of idol worship I told you how on the highest hill of the city stood the temple of Aphrodite, the goddess of fertility, served by as many as a thousand "priestesses", temple prostitutes. To worship Aphrodite was to make an offering and be united with her by engaging in sex with one of her servants. Consequently, Corinth had probably the lowest view of sex in the Greek world. It was practiced between anyone, anywhere, in any form, so much so that even pagan Greeks saw it as scandalous and knew the city as having a vile reputation. Well, Paul mentioned sexual immorality using several terms back in verse 9 and said, Such were some of you! Many of these believers came from deep involvement in the practice of such things and it was hard to let go of! Evidently some of them had slipped back into practicing sexual immorality at whatever level and at least a few were still making visits to one of the religious prostitutes on occasion. The concept of chastity, of sexual purity, was virtually an unknown thing in this culture, just as it is becoming in ours today. Sexual sin crept back into the church in Corinth and it has already moved in and taken up housekeeping in the American church today. Now, let's be very clear exactly what we are talking about. It may help for you to know that the Greek word in verse 18 is porneia (sound familiar?) and:

2. porneia means ANY form of sexual activity OUTSIDE of marriage God created our bodies to fully enjoy sexual activity inside the boundaries of a permanent lifetime marriage between one man and one woman. It is a wonderful gift of God, but when it is used outside of that context it is porneia, immoral sex. Of course, that includes adultery, being unfaithful to your marriage partner. But that is only the tip of the iceberg. It would naturally include any form of incest or sexual abuse of children. It would include homosexuality and lesbianism or even sex with animals (yes, perverted people do that) as a violation of God's created order. It includes prostitution, paying for sex as a service. We all recoil from things like these. But it includes more. It includes looking at what we call pornography to stimulate yourself sexually whether it is on the internet or a picture in a magazine. That has become a huge issue within the church because it's so easily and privately accessible. That is having sex with somebody in your mind and it's wrong. It includes having sex without being married, whether you're a teen experimenting with the opposite sex or an engaged couple who plan to get married or simply two people living together to "try it out". It's wrong; it's immoral. It's sin before God. But then I have discovered that I have to be even more specific because Christians I keep running into have tried to say, "Well as long as I don't have actual sexual intercourse, I'm not committing immorality." So, we have young people doing all kinds of sexual acts that stop just short of that, exposing their bodies to one another, openly touching each other's bodies to stimulate them, or sometimes doing it under their clothes or through their clothes, and feeling that they are justified. Well, let this be emblazoned in your mind: all of these things are part of the sexual process; they ARE sex and unless you are already married to the other person, they ARE wrong and immoral! They are the porneia that Paul is talking about! Parents, you need to realize that young people today have been acculturated to see all of this kind of stuff as normal and acceptable and have learned to excuse it in their minds with this kind of lie! Teach them clearly and specifically. Spell it out for them, embarrassing or not! Everything around them, the TV, movies, their peers, it all feeds them the lie that sexual activity is OK. James Dobson uses the illustration of building model airplanes in his childhood: "In those days, one could buy inexpensive kits that included a sheet of balsa wood on which the parts of the model had been stamped. It was a big chore to cut them with an exacto knife and then glue all the pieces together. Once that was finished, tissue paper was pasted to the frame. The final result was a beautiful little plane to hang in your bedroom. I wanted to build one of those models in the worst way, but I never got it done. Repeatedly, I bought a kit and began cutting out the pieces, but I couldn't finish the project because I was too impatient to wait for the glue to dry. I wouldn't leave the fuselage alone, and it would fall apart in my hands. That's more or less the way a courtship period should be constructed; it takes time for the glue to dry. A proper bond between two people is severely damaged if the process is rushed. The emotional connection between them is weakened especially by early sexual contact. If they kiss passionately on the first date, engage in heavy petting a month later, or have sexual intercourse before marriage, something precious is lost in their commitment to one another. They have not allowed the 'glue' to dry. Unfortunately, that's how the entertainment industry presents the ideal romantic relationship. A young man and woman are shown being introduced, and the next thing you know, they're making passionate love together. That exploitation for momentary pleasure carries serious implications for the future of the relationship." [Letter to Focus on the Family supporters, Sept. 1995. Page 5.] Enough said. Now, going back to our text, Paul identifies two of:

II. The Popular False Philosophies Feeding The Problem in Corinth as well as here. Notice in verses 12-13 that three of the phrases are in quotation marks in the NIV. The reason for that is that Paul appears in those phrases not to be speaking his own words but to making a direct quote of a well-known slogan that the Corinthians were using. They had, for instance, adopted a favorite saying and a way of living that said:

1. "Everything is lawful for me" (12) The NIV word permissible is literally lawful. Paul had probably taught them, of course, that they were free from the Law of the Old Testament. They didn't have to be circumcised or to keep the feasts or keep the Sabbath day. On top of that, the prevailing philosophy of their day had taught them from little on up that matter is evil, so the body itself is evil. Salvation is a thing of the spirit, not the body, so it doesn't matter what happens to the body. The Corinthians were justifying their sexually immoral behavior by saying, "Everything is lawful. We are free from the Law; we don't please God by keeping rules. Our spirit is the important thing, not our body." Today we would put it, "I have the right to make my own decisions. Nobody can tell me what to do." Well, Paul quoted that back to them and then told them the truth about it. He said:

a. some things are not beneficial to me Some things hurt me and they hurt other people. Some things destroy and ruin my life and my health. Being free from the law doesn't mean we're free to do those things. Those things are wrong. In fact, he went on to add that:

b. some things take control over me They master me. They become addictive. They take over control of my body and soon I am living for them and can't stop. We know that can happen with alcohol and drugs, but sexual immorality is another one of those powerfully addicting things. For instance, once pornography becomes a habit it is terribly addictive and hard to break. It ruins lives; it ruins marriages. Once your body is in the habit of being sexually active, it is powerfully hard to stop, so what people may call "sexual freedom" rapidly becomes slavery. Being free from the Law doesn't mean we are free to let other things control us; Jesus is supposed to do that! Another slogan floating around at Corinth was:

2. "Food was made for the stomach and the stomach for food" (13-14) Let me re-phrase that slogan for you, "Our bodies are made for sexual activity and that drive is meant to be satisfied, so having sex is just a natural part of life like eating." That's how people in our society have come to see it. So, parents are allowing and even guiding teens into sexual activity in their early teens in some instances. And it has a piece of truth in it. We ARE created as sexual beings and that drive we have IS meant to be satisfied, but only in the context of the marriage bond. Paul replies with the truth that:

a. both my body and the things it craves are only temporary Eating is a here and now thing; in heaven it won't matter. Sex is a "this world only" thing. In heaven it won't be. If I give my life to simply using my body to pursue the things that it craves, whether that's food or sex or whatever, I'll waste my life. One day none of that will matter. Life is not about getting my bodily drives satisfied. You see:

b. my body was made for Jesus to inhabit and use for His eternal purpose. Jesus created my body so that He could come and live in it with me, so that He could live my life together with me. And He planned to do that so that He could use my body to bring Him glory while it is on this earth. In fact, Paul points out, Jesus wants to be glorified in my body so much that He plans to raise it from the dead and keep on using it eternally! The body is not evil; it is not worthless. Jesus took a human body and He raised it and kept it forever. We'll keep ours forever; they're important. God has plans for them. So, what we do with them here on earth matters! Here is:

III. The Scriptural Truth About Our Bodies First:

1. our bodies are the very members [and members here means body parts] of Christ (15-17) It is not just our spirits that are joined to Christ; our very bodies are the members, the arms and the legs and the mouths of Christ! Our bodies are Christ's physical replacement in this world. He lives visibly now through us. He walks about and speaks to the world using our physical bodies to accomplish His work. So, what that means is that:

a. I involve and implicate Jesus in everything I do with my body If I lie with my mouth, Jesus is right there in my body and represented through my body and I involve Him in my lie, whether I am aware of it or not! If I cheat someone or hurt someone, it is the body of Christ doing that. He is right there and involved in it, whether I know it or not. Now, when we move into the area of sex, the Bible teaches that:

b. my spirit is joined to Him as one Verse 17 repeats that fact that when the Spirit of God comes to live in me that He is joined to my spirit and Jesus and I are one; we are inseparable. In fact, biblically, this is the model for understanding the sexual relationship. When husband and wife have a sexual relationship their two bodies are joined into one. God created that as an outward physical reflection of the way that He has joined them together as one spiritually. They are joined the way I am joined as one with Jesus. So, the point is that:

c. in sexual sin I involve Him in a deeply unholy relationship Here He is, in my body right there, my body being His and for His use, and I am making Him be in it right with me as I sin sexually. Not only am I ruining His reputation and making Him appear impure, but I am involving His member, His body, in a deeply unholy thing. The old argument that "it's my body and I can do what I want with it" is simply not true! The truth is that:

2. our bodies are temples of the Holy Spirit (19-20) The word for temple here in Greek is not the general word for the whole building. It is the word for the inner sanctuary, the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies, the very place where God was to dwell. When I got saved:

a. God literally placed His Holy Spirit inside my body; He now lives there inside of me permanently. So, I am His sanctuary; my body is His temple, the house in which He, the Holy One, lives. I can no longer use it for unholy purposes. It is sacred! Moreover, since my body is HIS temple:

b. my body does not belong to me anymore; it belongs to Him. He bought me and He owns me! He paid a price to have me and the word price is literally the same as the Greek word for honor. In other words, it is not simply that Christ paid for me, so He claims ownership. The point is that Christ honored me with the price He paid to dwell in me. Look at the cross. Look at Him leaving heaven and taking a human body. Look at Him accused and condemned and scourged and nailed to a tree. Look at Him laying down His life, all so that He could have me and live in me and live out His life through me! What a price! He didn't get me as a piece of unwanted junk at a yard sale. To Him I was precious; He wanted me so badly that He bought me with His own blood! What an honor! So, the point is:

c. I am absolutely obligated to use my body to glorify God How in the world can I even think of using it for anything else? He made my body His precious personal sanctuary at great cost so that He could use it to bring Him glory all the days of my life. How could I think of using it to drag him into the depths of unholiness and impurity through sexual immorality? When Potiphar's wife was literally tearing Joseph's robe off and begging him to have sex with her, he said, How then could I do such a wicked thing and sin against God! He knew how wicked it was, what an awful evil thing it would be, how it would impact his relationship with the very God who had cared for him all the way through his enslavement. So, he fled out the door of the house! Paul may have had that very story in mind when he penned the words of verse 18 which give us:

IV. The Bottom Line: Flee From Sexual Immorality (18) I think those words, though few, are significant. Paul did not simply say, "Avoid sexual immorality." He did not simply say, "Don't do it." He said, "FLEE from it! Run away when it presents itself! Get out of there, now!" Why did he say that? Because:

1. sexual sin requires the greatest caution The power of its attraction is great. It has snared men as close to God as David, so never assume that you are immune from it. The list of Christian leaders who have fallen in this area is longer than you or I could imagine. Don't put yourself in a position where you are liable to be tempted. And when you sense temptation, very often the godly thing to do is as simple as leaving the room, hanging up the phone, changing the channel or closing the browser. Flee! Get out of the situation before it moves further. But the real reason that sexual sin requires such great caution is not simply that it is so enticing:

2. sexual sin does the most significant damage to our own selves Other kinds of sin are primarily external to you. If you steal something, it's outside you; it's not part of you. You take it, you repent of it and return it; it's wrong and you feel bad about what you did. But when you sin sexually, it wounds you deeply, as well as the other person. It touches your soul, the most intimate part of your being. It violates the most sacred part of yourself. The wounds are of the deepest kind there is.

And yet remember that Paul says, There was a time when some of you were just like that, but now your sins have been washed away, and you have been set apart for God. You have been made right with God because of what the Lord Jesus Christ and the Spirit of our God have done for you. If this is about you today, if you've fallen at some point into sexual immorality, know that Jesus can heal the deepest emotional wounds you have. He can wash away the vilest sin you've committed. Go to Him. Listen to the testimony of a young lady named Sarah who fell into sexual immorality as it was shared in Christianity Today, ...it definitely changed my relationship with God. I felt too ashamed to even talk to God, much less ask him for help and forgiveness. That's when I felt that wall start to go up—the wall I thought would hide me from God. I had been a Christian my whole life, and I'd never gotten into any trouble before. But the guilt I felt after having sex was overwhelming. Unfortunately, it wasn't enough to keep me from doing it again. Instead, I tried to justify what Derrick and I were doing. I told myself it wasn't a big deal, that it was just a physical act. I tried not to let it bother me. But it did bother me—a lot. By the time Derrick and I broke up a few months later, I could hardly look at myself in the mirror. When I did, I saw someone dirty, someone who couldn't control herself, someone who was slapping God in the face on a regular basis.

After the breakup, I felt like my only hope was to turn back to God and repent for what I'd done. I tried to do my regular devotions, but I couldn't. Every time I read the Bible, it seemed like I found a verse about sexual immorality that just made me realize how much I'd disappointed God. I couldn't even pray. I had always known God forgives sins. I had even told other friends that God would forgive them for the sexual things they'd done. But now that it was my turn, I just couldn't believe that God could wash all that sin away. It seemed like too big a job, even for God. It took me months of struggle to finally ask for forgiveness. The wall I'd put up between me and God finally came down, but I still had to live with the "bricks"—my feelings of guilt—that were piled around me. I knew God had forgiven my sin. The trouble was, I couldn't.

It's been a few years since Derrick and I broke up. And every single day, I struggle to trust in God's forgiveness. Every day, I have to fight off my fears that God will punish me someday. My biggest fear is that I will never find a Christian man who'll be able to live with the truth about me. And even if he can, I'll have to live with the knowledge that I stole something from him. I've made it impossible for him to enjoy God's gift of sex with someone who saved herself for him. Back when I started having sex, I was focused on the pleasure I wanted right then. If I'd only known how much pain it would cause, believe me, I never would have given in. [\[http://www.christianitytoday.com/cl/9c5/9c5036.html\]](http://www.christianitytoday.com/cl/9c5/9c5036.html) Don't give in! Don't go there! Flee, Paul says! And if you have given in, RUN! Run right to Jesus! He can and will give you a fresh start. And He is able even to heal that deep emotional pain Sarah described with His truth, if you are willing to let Him and seek proper help. You don't have to live with guilt and shame and fear and fight it every day. Jesus is willing to take even that away. I've watched Him do it.

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

7) The Problem Of Singleness and Marriage - 7:1-9, 17-40

Chapter 7 begins with the words, Now for the matters you wrote about... Paul has been writing the Corinthians about things that he heard from afar and saw as being serious problems, things like divisions and lawsuits and immorality. But the Corinthians had evidently written Paul a letter to ask his direction about some questions they had and issues which perplexed them, so now he begins to answer them. The first question on their minds is, "Now that we are Christians, what about marriage? Some of us who have believed now find ourselves married to nonbelievers; should we divorce them? Some of us are unmarried; should we get married? Would it be more spiritual to stay single? Some of us are widowed; can we re-marry?" These are the issues Paul is trying to answer in chapter 7. We're going to spend two weeks on it. Next week we'll focus on the whole subject of marriage itself, its permanence and the divorce question, but let's spend today looking at the issue of singleness as opposed to marriage. This is a question the church has wrestled with down through the centuries and some wings of the church have basically answered it by saying that the most spiritual people remain single. They take a vow of celibacy; they are "married" to the church, to Jesus, and that doctrine is built largely out of the teaching in this chapter. So, is that right? Am I less spiritual because I'm married? And, of course, this is a question that every young and unmarried person among us faces and should wrestle with. It faces your children and grandchildren, and one day it could even face you. So, Paul begins with:

I. Some Basic Facts About Singleness And Marriage First of all:

1. to be single is good (1) There is nothing wrong with it; it is not some "lesser state". Despite that fact that all the relatives always say to you, "What's wrong with you? Why aren't you married yet?" or "So when are you going to settle down and get married?" People begin to give you vibes that you're weird if you're 30 and you're not married. Do any of you older singles know what I'm talking about? Listen, God doesn't see it that way! Singleness is OK. It is good not to marry! You can live a happy, fulfilled, spiritual life and not be married, if that's what God wants for your life! The greatest missionary we know, the Apostle Paul, was apparently single. We don't know whether he was married and widowed early in life or not, but for all that we read of his life, he was single and if God can use his life as a single that way, then He can use yours. To be single is good. But on the other hand:

2. to be married is also good (2) Looking at it from another point of view, marriage is something God invented and ordained. And in a sex-crazed society like Corinth or America where immorality is the norm, Christian monogamous marriage is a wonderful God-given deterrent to immorality. Not only is the couple blessed by their own faithfulness to one another, but those around them are blessed by their example because it really sticks out! So, to be married is good and not only that:

3. sex within marriage is good (3) We'll save the details of these few verses for our study next week, but Paul doesn't want to leave the impression from last week that sex itself is bad or evil. No, on the contrary, within marriage the sexual relationship is a wonderful God-given thing to be celebrated and enjoyed. Various portions of the church throughout history have given the idea that sex is a kind of evil necessity in marriage, a bad thing that you get to do because you're married. Not at all! It is normal; it is wholesome; it is even commanded by God - FOR married people. Marriage is good; sex in marriage is good; but:

4. marriage is not mandatory (6) That refers back to verse 2 where he says each man should have his own wife... That wasn't meant to be a command. You don't have to marry. Among the Jews, the rabbis saw marriage as "an unqualified duty for a man". It was more or less mandatory and it still is that way among many of the world's peoples. How many young girls are brutally bridenapped in Kyrgyzstan because parents tell a young man that he is now 19 or 20 years old and he MUST marry NOW! So, he steals the first nice looking girl he has access to, his family puts a scarf on her head and her own family and the society FORCES her to be married to the guy. For them life is about marriage - you MUST be married. And while our customs are different, our culture can still apply the same kind of pressure. How many a young lady marries the wrong guy, simply because he's the one who asked and she doesn't want to be "unmarried" any more. All her friends are getting married and she doesn't want to be left behind. Well, you won't feel that pressure from God! Marriage is good, but singleness is good too. In fact, here's the full truth:

5. God's plan is more important than our own (7) Paul was single. He found that being single helped him immeasurably to serve God and he wished the same for others, however he recognized that God does not have the same design for everybody. He has gifted some people to be single and live a successful life, while others would struggle terribly under that circumstance. And He has gifted some people to marry and live a successful spiritual life, while others couldn't imagine the complications that would bring. In my mind the fundamental question is not, "What do I want?" but "What does GOD want?" Listen, I have known SO many young people in their late teens and 20's who were literally desperate to get married. And I always share what God did in my life. There was a person I thought I was going to marry who didn't think that in return and I was crushed and God dealt with my heart until I was willing to surrender this area of my life to Him. I was miserable until I could tell Him, "Lord, if you want me to be single, I am willing! Your will is more important than mine!" THEN He gave me LuAnn. Young people, it's a lesson He wants all of us to get! He is Lord of your life and His plan for your life is more important than your own. So, surrender; give up! Say, "Lord, I accept your will; being obedient to you is more important than anything on earth, including being married; show me your gift for me!" Then you'll be free to make a good decision about marriage and a whole lot less likely to yoke yourself to a bad situation. But how do you know what God wants for you? Well, He doesn't usually appear in a vision and say, "You will marry Joel" Rather He expects you to make a wise decision with His guidance. So, as you read the rest of this chapter, you'll find that Paul gives us here:

II. The Important Factors Involved In The Decision Whether To Marry There are three key factors that play a role. The first one is:

1. the factor of sexual drive and self-control (8-9) It is no secret that people are created differently. Some have a far stronger sexual drive than others. It's a part of their physical makeup. Some people find that sexual temptations and lustful thoughts are a constant and difficult battle in their minds. Marriage provides a wonderful, God-designed way of satisfying that need. So, Paul says if you're that kind of person who would constantly burn with lustful passions and have to fight them and might perhaps be weak enough to fall into immorality, then you have to take that into consideration. It would definitely be better to marry, all other factors being equal. The second factor is:

2. the factor of the circumstances you find yourself in Let's read Paul's whole discourse in (17-24). Now what I think that means is:

a. God has called you first to serve where you are and as you are Becoming a Christian doesn't demand that you change all the physical circumstances of your life. Now, it may demand that you change your moral circumstances, the way you live, but not the circumstances themselves. If you come to Christ in an unbelieving home, you don't have to move out. If you come to Christ and your spouse refuses, you don't seek to leave them. If you come to Christ and you're a Jew, you don't have to stop celebrating the Passover and the things that are meaningful to you. If you come to Christ, you don't have to sell all your possessions and become a missionary and move overseas. Paul's point is: learn to think a new way. Think about where you are right now and what you are. God's first design for you is to be serving Him to the utmost, exactly where you are. Do you work on a construction site? God's first concern for you is not to find a better place to work, but to use you as an effective witness where you already work! Are you married? His first concern is to use you as a testimony to your unbelieving spouse, not to find you a better one! Are you single? His first concern is to use you effectively in ministry as a single, not to marry you off to a believer. But all that being said:

b. your present circumstances must be considered in your decision whether to marry or not. Speaking to single people, Paul writes verse (26). When he mentions the present crisis, we don't really know what he was talking about. It is possible that the church at Corinth was undergoing some sort of persecution. You might remember the riot in Corinth in Acts 18 where Paul was dragged before the proconsul. Perhaps that anti-Christian sentiment had spread and Christians were being discriminated against or persecuted and having to meet discreetly. So, maybe this wouldn't be the best time to choose to get married. Being single would make it easier to stand up and resist the danger without trying to protect your family. Is God sending you to an extremely dangerous assignment somewhere in the world? Are you saddled with the burden of providing care for an elderly parent? Are you a single mom left with the care of two children stricken by the loss of their father? Are you in the middle of a serious illness? Well, if things like these are going on, maybe this isn't the best time to think about marrying. What are the circumstances God has put you in right now? He's not calling you to leave those circumstances; He's challenging you to ask the question, "Will marriage truly be a good thing in these circumstances?" That's the second factor. The third is:

3. the factor of your calling and ability to serve God Paul warns us that:

a. we must not become engrossed in the things of this world (29-31) The truth is that time is short. Whether Christ is coming soon or not, death is. You and I have only a limited opportunity to serve God before we pass off the scene of history forever. Nothing we have now is permanent, not material things, not joys and sorrows, not even marriage. But we tend to get bogged down in all these things, caught up and engrossed in them. It's so easy for life to be about the job or the house or the family, instead of about the Lord. And that's where Paul points out that:

b. singleness affords a level of freedom that marriage does not (32-35) Marriage necessarily brings new levels of responsibility and care. A married person must put a lot of energy into meeting the needs of their wife or husband and of their children. Where a single person can pour hours and hours into prayer or ministry experiences, a married person may have precious little time for the things that really count and when they do, they can barely keep their eyes open. So, if I marry, what will that do to my calling from God and my devotion to His will? Will it distract me and engross me in things of this world or will it be a vehicle to enhanced and greater service? That's a factor I have to take into consideration.

Vernon Grounds tells the story of a young woman named Mildred Cable. She grew up in Great Britain and fell in love with a man who felt that the Lord had called him to be a pastor in that country. Mildred was convinced that the Lord wanted her to serve as a missionary in China. When the man asked her to marry him, she faced an agonizing decision. One night after much praying, talking, and weeping, she told him she could not accept his proposal. With heavy hearts they said goodbye and went their separate ways. Vernon Grounds writes, "That night she died to her own desires, her own hopes, her own humanly legitimate dreams. She died to her own will [and chose] to carry out the will of God. She went to China where God gave her an extraordinarily fruitful ministry." [Yes, But How? Getting Serious About Your Faith] After 20 years of ministry in one city, she traversed the entire length of the Gobi Desert on the Silk Road five times sharing the Good news of Jesus. She was perhaps the first to share it with the Kyrgyz people in Northwest China whom we're praying for today. I wonder who would have told them if she had decided that being married was more important to her than God's call. What is God calling you to do? Will choosing to marry hinder or enhance it? That is the third factor. Now I want you to see how Paul applies these three principles to three distinct groups as he gives:

III. Direct Advice To Those Who Are Not Married In the beginning of the chapter he speaks:

1. to all who are not currently married (8-9) Whether you are never-married, divorced, widowed, unless you have no biblical right to remarry under the circumstances of verse 11, if you are not married:

a. you have freedom to marry in the Lord You may choose to marry, not just anyone of course, but someone who is a believer. You are free to do it, but you are also free to stay single. The question you need to consider is this:

b. will singleness cause you to struggle perpetually with lust? Can you control your bodily desires and passions? Can you live pure and remain unmarried? If you can, then perhaps you should. But if not, if that is a great struggle for you, then perhaps you should look to God to get married and start praying about it. That's kind of a bottom line factor and, to be honest, it affects the great majority of us. Most people are not gifted to remain single and pure. Second, Paul has a word of advice:

2. to those who have never married (25-28)

a. you have freedom to marry in the Lord You may marry. It is not wrong. It is not a sin. Look further down at verse (36). From the Greek it is tough to tell if this section is talking about a virgin who is engaged to marry or about a man who has betrothed his virgin daughter to someone to be married. That's why translations differ. But the point is the same, the person who has never married has complete freedom to do it in the Lord, yet here's the question you ought to consider:

b. will marriage detract from your service to the Lord? (32, 35) Can you have undivided loyalty and devotion to God if you marry? Will you be willing to obey Him and go where He says to go and do what He says to do and will your potential spouse do that with you? Is his or her heart in the same place. If you can truthfully answer "yes", then go for it. And finally, Paul has a word of advice:

3. to those who were once married, but their spouse has died (39-40). If you are a widow or a widower, now alone again (and I would say the same thoughts apply to a believer who finds themselves alone after a divorce but hasn't caused it):

a. you have freedom to marry in the Lord There is nothing to prevent it. Marriage is not eternal as the Mormons teach. You will not be married in heaven; you are not betraying that vow you made to them. That is perfectly OK if the new person is a believer, but the question you need to ponder is this:

b. what circumstances will a new marriage create? It will bring with it a set of problems and concerns you can't avoid. Are there children? How old are they? How are they going to react to it and what will it do in their lives? In

1 Tim. 5:9-14 Paul says plainly that younger widows should probably remarry; they're going to have trouble making it and staying godly in their circumstances. Older ones may be better off single and be better able to serve the Lord.

*The names Jim and Elisabeth Elliot should be familiar to you. Jim Elliott went to Wheaton College in 1945 with one purpose – to be an overseas missionary. Everything he did was to prepare him for a rugged life as a missionary. In Jim's third year of college, he met a girl named Elisabeth Howard. Once, after there had been many private times together talking, Jim asked Elisabeth to walk with him to discuss their feelings for one another. Elisabeth was headed to Africa to be a missionary and Jim to South America. She writes in her book, Shadow of the Almighty, "Now we faced the simple truth - we loved each other. Hardly aware of our direction, we wandered into a gateway and found ourselves in a cemetery. Seated on a stone slab, Jim told me that he had committed me to God, much as Abraham had done his son, Isaac --it was exactly the figure which had been in my mind for several days as I had pondered our relationship. We agreed that God was directing... We sat in silence. Suddenly we were aware that the moon, which had risen behind us, was casting the shadow of a great stone cross between us." They literally gave each other up to obey God's calling in their lives. But over the next few years, as they individually obeyed God step by step, they both ended up serving on the same field in Ecuador and in 1953 they married in order to better serve God as partners. What a happy ending it would be, except that 4 years later Elisabeth had to give Jim up all over again to as he died under Auca spears on a sandbar in the Curare River. In fact, Elisabeth later married again and lost her second husband to cancer and now has her third husband. She's faced the question at least four times and God has given her an extremely powerful ministry to women all these years that has touched many of you personally. It is her and Jim's attitude that exemplifies what Paul is talking about. You see, the most important thing in life is not marriage, but God. To every unmarried person this chapter says, "You need to put God in first place and be ready to do what He wants and please Him above all! You need to be ready to lay down what you may consider to be the most important thing in your life for His sake!" And, after all, isn't that exactly what He has called ALL of us to do?*

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

8) The Problem Of Divorce - 7:10-16

The questions that the believers in Corinth had about marriage must not only have included the question of whether to marry or not which we looked at in Chapter 7 last week, but also the question of whether to divorce or not. Evidently with all the immorality that abounded in Corinth, the concept of marriage had been lowered and divorce had become more and more common. And that should sound familiar to us because the same thing has happened in our society. The most recent information from the US Center for Health Statistics says that there are roughly 1 million divorces in the US every year which obviously means that 2 million married people go through the pain of a divorce every year. The Barna Research Group reported at the end of 1999 that 11% of our adult population was currently divorced and 25% of adults had experienced at least one divorce in their lifetime. And what's even more shocking is that they found that the divorce rate among conservative Christians was actually significantly HIGHER than other faith groups, including atheists and agnostics, with some 27% having been divorced! That study raised a lot of eyebrows and anger, but it points out what I think we all know, that the problem of divorce is not just a problem out there in the world; it is a huge and serious problem IN the church. And therefore, it points out that the church is somehow failing to nurture the concept and the practice of marriage! Thus, Paul's words on this subject could not be more timely. Now, he begins to address this subject by laying out:

I. The General Principles Of Marriage He mentions three of them. First:

1. there must be absolute fidelity (2) No polygamy or multiple husbands. No concubines, mistresses or consorts. No old boyfriends and no new girlfriends at the office. No third parties, period. Marriage is a covenant between one man and one woman to be husband and wife for life, to keep themselves ONLY unto the other, as we say in the vow. That's how we have to enter into marriage; when I stand at the altar, I am literally saying that it is YOU and nobody else, ever! As soon as one party begins to violate this mindset, even if it is only in their thinking and wishing, the marriage is in trouble. Paul says, Flee from sexual immorality! Run from it when even the mere thought of it raises its ugly head. There must be absolute fidelity for a marriage to work! Secondly:

2. there must be regular intimacy (3-6) To put it in today's wording, a husband and wife should have a regular, active and mutually satisfying sexual relationship. Evidently some of the believers had gotten the notion that sex was evil and it would be more spiritual to live celibate within marriage. Portions of the church, particularly dating from the time of the Middle Ages, have taken the position that sex is somehow by nature evil and intended only for procreation. That impression has persisted quite pervasively to the point that many of the parents of people in my generation still held that "necessary evil" mentality toward it. Paul says no such thing. He said that:

a. each spouse has a loving duty to fulfill the other's sexual need Marital duty is not like military duty. It's not saying that this is some act you have to mechanically perform because you're married. He says literally that it is a debt of kindness owed to the other. Your spouse has needs in this area and God has given you the responsibility to love the other by fulfilling those needs in his or her life. In sexual immorality, sex is a selfish act; it is trying to get pleasure from the other for yourself. In marriage sex is an unselfish act; it is loving your spouse by giving them what their body needs. I think of a couple of sad lines I've heard through the years in counseling, like the wife who feels totally rejected and says, "He hasn't touched me in six months; he doesn't love me anymore." Or the frustrated husband who doesn't know what to do with his sexual drive and confesses, "She will only have sex with me once a month..." No, the husband has a loving responsibility to show his wife that she is continually cherished and desired in this way and the wife has a loving responsibility to show her husband that she understands his inner need and wants to fulfill it regularly. And Paul goes even further to say that:

b. in marriage we yield authority over our own body to our spouse The old line, "It's my body and I can do whatever I want with it!" is no more. It died at the altar. When I married, everything I had became LuAnn's and everything she had became mine. My car was now her car even though I drove it most of the time and her car was my car even though she drove it most of the time. I could no longer simply decide what I was going to do with my car, nor could she. And we did that willingly. We gave that authority to each other as part of marriage. Well, when we married, we were made one in body. I no longer had sole authority over my body. It belonged to her too; it was her body. And hers belonged to me; it was mine. When we marry, we willingly yield up control; we say to our spouse: "My body is your body. It is here to meet your needs. How can I use it to minister to you?" So, the bottom line is that there is to be regular sexual intimacy with one another and:

c. neither is to withhold their body from the other unless three conditions are met. First:

(1) both parties willingly agree to it I can't just say, "Well, I've decided to take a year off and be celibate so I can focus on my spiritual life!" The decision to refrain from regular sexual activity must be a joint one; both must want to do it. Second:

(2) it only lasts for a brief period of time and immediately resumes Not indefinitely, not a year, not 6 months... A brief period of time and a definite period of time, so both will know when the end of it is in sight. And third, we're not to do it unless:

(3) it is for a spiritual purpose, to better serve God somehow. Paul mentions a special season of prayer as an example. So, if the two of you decide to fast from sex and give yourselves to prayer for a few days or a week or two to seek God, OK, but, Paul says, resume it quickly because:

d. this is God's ordained means of preventing temptation to porneia, immorality. If you are married and your needs in this area go unmet for long, your mind and your heart are going to be a prime target for the enemy to attack. He will see that somebody shows up to tempt you. Proverbs says that the way to avoid adultery is to drink waters from your own cistern, running water from your own well! - Prov. 5:15. God uses this regular ministry to one another to protect each other from the snares of the evil one! Now third, Paul says, in marriage there must not only be absolute fidelity and regular intimacy, but:

3. there must be lifetime permanence (10-11) Do you hear what Paul is saying?

a. we are firmly commanded not to divorce He emphasizes it by saying, I give you this command, instead of just saying it. And then He says, "Don't think this is MY command personally; this is JESUS' command! I'm just repeating what Jesus commanded us!" Look with me at Mk. 10:2-12. Does it get any stronger and clearer than that? We cannot just change partners. We cannot just quit the marriage we're in and go marry somebody else! We can't just get tired of our spouse and make them leave! In the vows we make before God in this culture, we say plainly, "until death do us part". That means, "I am yours until I die or you die!" The vow has lifetime permanence that reflects the lifetime permanence that God built into marriage itself by making the two into one. Married people are no longer two; they ARE one! They are bonded, joined as one in every way by God, so human beings don't have a right to take apart what God has joined. That's why in Mal. 2:16 God says, ...I hate divorce... Now please hear me, He doesn't hate divorced people, but He hates the act of divorce; it is a tearing apart of what He has joined. That's as strong as it gets! Proverbs 6:16 lists seven things the Lord hates including pride, lying and murder; read it sometime. And divorce is in the same category as all of those! So, when you decide to divorce your husband or your wife and go marry someone else, you defy God Himself! And in verse 11:

b. we are clearly told the consequences if we choose to leave our spouse anyway. We read where Jesus said that to marry another is to commit adultery, so Paul says, if we leave, if we separate in defiance of God's command, then either:

(1) we must remain single and not re-marry - ever! Marrying another person adds adultery to the sin of separating from our spouse. OR... Paul says:

(2) we must be reconciled to our spouse and this would be the ideal. Go back and fix whatever is broken and rebuild the relationship.

Now please listen to my heart. I know this is an issue that is close to many of our hearts. There is not a family here that doesn't have a divorced loved one somewhere in it or at least a close friend. There are people I love here today who are in second marriages who are fully accepted both here and before God without any stigma and are even leaders in this fellowship and the point of this message is not to dig up pain from your past. So again, please hear me say that these are the general principles for marriage. If you enter into marriage or if you are married right now (regardless of how you got there), understand that this is God's standard for you! God demands absolute fidelity, regular intimacy and lifetime permanence. But even Paul now goes on to talk about some:

II. Special Circumstances Where Divorce Is Permissible (12a) He means, "There are some cases that the Lord Jesus did not cover in His teaching and they require some discernment and I want to give you my judgment about these kinds of special circumstances..." The first of those would obviously be:

1. when one partner has been unfaithful to the marriage covenant Even Jesus Himself acknowledged that:

a. this may occur through sexual immorality - Mat. 19:9 I tell you that anyone who divorces his wife, except for marital unfaithfulness, and marries another woman commits adultery. This is the famed "exception clause". One partner may be unfaithful and the Greek word is porneia, have sex with somebody else, become involved in pornography, visit a prostitute, and so on. They may violate the absolute fidelity of the marriage vow. Well, in this case the other party MAY decide to end the marriage and is free to marry another. Do note that it is not mandatory and, in my view, it should be a last resort. If it was a one time offense and the spouse is repentant, you should get help and try to make it work. In the Old Testament we have the example of Hosea whom God told to love his adulterous wife and go take her back again. That's God's ideal. However, if the other person continues and persists in immorality and shows no genuine repentance or actually divorces you and marries someone else, then you are free. But sexual immorality is not the only way to be unfaithful to a spouse:

b. this may occur through other severe violations of the vow. Paul offers judgment on one specific case, abandonment, which we'll talk about in a moment. But there are other cases just like it that Scripture doesn't mention, but obviously fall in this same category. For instance, abuse. We've all heard cases of wife-beating; we've seen pictures of battered women who've been pummeled by their husbands and had horrible things done to them. And oddly, many of them stay! Listen, if that is you, run! Get away! You are not bound to stay and endure that! It is just as severe a violation of the vow as adultery. Another example would be deception. What if you marry someone and find out that they deceived you; they're not really who they said they were? Maybe they belong to the mafia and are involved in organized crime; maybe they have a whole past history of horrendous things that they hid from you. It's rare, but it happens, and if it does, the vow is false; it is built on a lie. You are not bound. And I'm sure there are other severe violations that have occurred, but note the word severe. We're not talking about, "I don't like his bad habits!" "She spends our money faster than I can make it!" "He's married to his job and never spends time with me!" "I don't love him anymore!" Bad as those things may be, they are things that need fixed, things that may require help, but not grounds for divorce like the things we're talking about here. Paul goes on to talk specifically about another kind of situation that occurs. Divorce is permissible:

2. when one partner chooses to abandon the marriage (12b-16) There were tons of cases there at Corinth where married people heard the Gospel and one or the other believed and became a follower of Christ but the spouse didn't. This occurs everywhere the Gospel is preached, even here. The couple is going along OK and all of a sudden one partner has their life absolutely transformed by Jesus Christ and now here they are married to an unbeliever, and often the unbeliever doesn't like the change and makes things hard for them! The Corinthians wanted to know what to do in this case. Well, Paul said plainly:

a. we must never divorce a spouse for refusing to believe Our vow to follow Christ does not negate our marriage vow; it does not give us the right to divorce our spouse because they don't want to follow Christ or because they make life hard on us because we follow Christ. We are one and we must stay together, even if it is hard. If anything, our following Christ should make us a BETTER husband or a BETTER wife to our spouse! And Paul points out that:

(1) we are a means of God's grace to them and our children (14) That doesn't mean that your husband or your children are saved just because you are. It means "set apart". Through your believing God has marked them as targets of His grace. The blessings and the benefits that God bestows upon the believer in the family flow over to the family members. He blesses the home for their sake and works in the lives of the family members. We become His emissary, His means of grace to show mercy in their lives. And, Paul adds:

(2) we may win that spouse to Christ (16) You don't know! So never give up! Never stop praying for them. Never stop asking God to use you in their life. 1 Pet. 3:1-2 says, Wives, in the same way be submissive to your husbands so that, if any of them do not believe the word, they may be won over without words by the behavior of their wives, when they see the purity and reverence of your lives. That works the same for husbands. The transformation and the love of God in our life may impact them and win them! However:

b. if our spouse abandons the marriage, we are to release them (15) If they choose to leave, if they say "This is not what I bargained for when I married you!" and they want out, let them go. Release them.

(1) we are no longer bound to them in such circumstances Marriage takes two parties and if the other abandons it, it is over and you're free. But you may say, that's an unbeliever; what if my spouse is a believer and abandons me anyway? Well, here's the scoop. If your spouse is part of the fellowship and wants to abandon you, you would normally follow Matthew 18. You would confront them and eventually tell it to the church and if they remained unrepentant, we would eventually expel them from the body and we are told to count them AS an unbeliever. We can't see their hearts, but their actions are those of an unbeliever, so we are to regard them as such. So, if they abandon us, the case ends up being one and the same; the "unbeliever" abandoned us and we are free! Paul explains that:

(2) God's desire is that there be peace in our homes. If we strive and try and maneuver to keep that spouse who wants out bound to us, to preserve the marriage at all costs, it will result in war right in our home, in front of the children. But God wants peace. If they want out, do everything possible to show love to them, but let them go. You're free. They're not...but that's their problem. You are.

Finally, let me just say this. You may be here this morning as a married person, but have a divorce in your past. You may be thinking, "But it doesn't fit any of these cases. It WAS my fault. I was in the wrong. I was the unfaithful one. I did the abandoning. I did remarry. Is God going to bring that up to me? Am I fully forgiven?" The answer to that is the same as it is for the murderer, the thief, the idolater or for any other of us ordinary sinners: There was a time when some of you were just like that, but now your sins have been washed away, and you have been set apart for God. You have been made right with God because of what the Lord Jesus Christ and the Spirit of our God have done for you. - 6:11. You are washed; you are sanctified; you are justified. You are free, free to live 100% in the marriage you are in today. You see, the real lesson today is not about divorce; it is about marriage and how seriously God takes it. We should too, every one of us. In his book Straight Talk to Men and Their Wives, James Dobson quotes a heart-touching letter his father wrote to his mother before they were married. It reads in part: "I want you to understand and be fully aware of my feelings concerning the marriage covenant which we are about to enter. I have been taught at my mother's knee and in harmony with the Word of God that the marriage vows are inviolable, and by entering them I am binding myself absolutely and for life. The idea of estrangement from you through divorce for any reason at all (although God allows one-- infidelity) will never at any time be permitted to enter my thinking. I'm not naive in this. On the contrary, I'm fully aware of the possibility, unlikely as it now appears, that mutual incompatibility or other unforeseen circumstances could result in extreme mental suffering. If such becomes the case, I am resolved for my part to accept it as a consequence of the commitment I am now making, and to bear it, if necessary, to the end of our lives together." That, dear friends, is God's attitude toward marriage. Is it yours?

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

9) The Problem Of Personal Liberty - Chs. 8-10

The Corinthians had written Paul with questions about marriage and divorce which he answered in chapter 7. But they also wrote him with questions about another matter which was evidently so important that he spent three whole chapters of his letter, 8, 9 and 10, answering their concerns. It was the issue of whether or not they should eat meat that had been offered in sacrifice to idols. The question itself seems almost irrelevant to us today, but in Corinth it was no small matter. The city was awash in pagan temples. The short list includes temples to Apollo (two of them), Athena, Poseidon, Glauke, Hera, Aphrodite, a Pantheon (temple of all the gods), Heracles, Hermes, Octavia, Jupiter, Asklepios, Demeter and the Egyptian gods Isis and Serapis. On top of the great hill of AcroCorinth was that great temple of Aphrodite with its thousand sacred prostitutes. And in all of these, worshippers were continually offering animal sacrifices. Typically, each sacrifice was divided into three portions, one burned up, one given to the priest, and one given to the worshipper to eat. The temple of Demeter, which was in heavy use in Paul's day, has been excavated and it contained a number of dining rooms where worshippers would eat their sacrifices. You can easily see that the proportionately small number of priests could never consume all the meat that came their way so it ended up being sold in the meat market, the makellon, which stood near the Lechaem Road to the north. It has also been excavated and was a huge commercial building with a paved court surrounded by colonnades and small shops. It was like "the mall" to the Corinthians, or maybe a "Giant" supermarket, and people regularly went there to buy meat and other food items. So here is the best source of meat in the whole city, but the meat has been offered in pagan ceremonies to false gods. Does that contaminate it somehow? Are there demonic forces attached to it now? If we eat it, are we giving some sort of allegiance to the idol? What about if we actually go into the dining room at the Temple and eat there; is that different? These are the questions our brothers and sisters had, the same ones we would have had if we had lived in their day. Every culture has its own specific issues, cultural practices that everybody does and that we're pressured to do, but things that at some level appear to have spiritual significance and perhaps violate our obedience to Christ. If a native American comes to Jesus, should he dance the dances of his people any longer or is that invoking the spirits? If a young Hindu gives his life to Christ, should he still go and bring his parents the flowers each morning which they offer in puja (worship) at the little shrine in their home or is he participating in idol worship? If a Muslim comes to Christ, he has been taught all his life that Allah says it's evil to drink alcohol, yet Christians do it? Should he? If a Muslim or even a Jew comes to Christ, can he now eat pork, which is forbidden in the Old Testament and how does he feel when he does it? And these are the same kinds of questions we ask too, only about other matters. "Is it wrong to gamble or does that displease God; am I trying to steal money somehow? Can I play the lottery? What about if I go to a casino to gamble?" Or how about alcohol, "Is it wrong to drink or does that displease God? What about in public, at a restaurant? Can I go into a bar and order a drink?" What about working or even doing homework on Sunday; does that violate the Sabbath command? I know some Christians who feel pretty strongly that it does. We could ask questions about how we should dress, about whether we should watch movies with violent or sexual content or a myriad of other things, things that are not expressly forbidden in Scripture, yet at some level they begin to impact our faith and we know when carried out to certain degrees they are wrong. We usually call these kinds of things issues of "personal liberty", things where I don't have a clear command, where I have to make a choice as to what pleases God, and where Christians often choose differently from one another and then turn around and judge one another for the choice they made. Now that's why chapter 8 is important, not because it talks about meat sacrificed to idols, but because it explains to us:

I. The Guiding Principle In Matters Of Personal Liberty Actually:

1. there are two key principles involved (1-3) First, there is:

a. the principle of knowledge We make choices based on what we know. And we know a lot! That's part of our problem. We know so much that we think we know it all, but we don't! Paul points out that no matter how much we know about the situation, we don't know everything we ought to know. We can't see like God sees. Our knowledge is incomplete and it puffs us up. We take pride in "what we know". We feel like we have all the answers and others should know it too. So, knowledge is good but it has built in dangers. However, there is a second principle:

b. the principle of love, which Jesus commanded and which emanates from God Himself. The more you know Him, the more you are filled with His Spirit, the more you will love and the thing about love is that it always builds up others. It always thinks about the other person first and seeks the well-being of the other person first above our own.

So, what does any of this have to do with meat and idols? Well, let's find out in (4-8). You see, when considering any of these kinds of issues that involve personal liberty:

2. there are two levels of knowledge involved There is:

a. the level of our own understanding We know there is only one God and there are no others. Idols are just manmade statues, lifeless objects. They have no power, so placing meat in front of an idol and saying words over it does nothing to it. It is not magically contaminated; it's just a hunk of meat that can be eaten just like any other meat. And by the way, Rom. 14:14 clarifies for us that there are no longer any foods that are unclean in themselves. God showed Peter that in Acts. You can eat pigs and rabbits and camels, stuff the Jews couldn't eat. God made it all for you to enjoy. If you like gopher, go for it! We know that. The trouble is that NOT EVERYBODY knows that. We always have to take into account:

b. the differing level of understanding that others may have Here's a fellow who believed in Jesus last week. He spent all his life worshipping idols. He has probably seen demonic spiritual power manifested. He's seen some pagan priest put a curse on somebody and seen them die. He's not so sure about all the fine points of theology; he's trying to make a clean break and having nothing to do with anything associated with the way he used to live. So, he looks at meat that came from the pagan temple and runs the other way! Now, our tendency in operating from knowledge is to say, "Well, he should just know more! He should know better. We'll just teach him what we know and then everything will be alright!" The problem with that is people. We don't work like that.

Take, for instance, the man who's been an alcoholic. It's ruined his life and his marriage. Finally, he comes to Christ and eventually gets delivered and is living a sober life. Then we come along and tell him that wine is a gift of God and that he should be free to enjoy it! But he knows what we don't know. He knows how much he used to enjoy that. He knows the power it had over him. He knows the pull he's going to feel if he takes that first drink. And he knows the pain he felt as it ruined his life; he knows what you can't learn in a theology book. So, Paul's point is that if we operate on knowledge, we could push a man back to destruction. But:

3. love always considers the effect our action will have on others (9-12) Here's Joe Corinthian, graduate of "Dalminster Theological Seminary" in Corinth who was raised in the faith and knows idols are nothing. He also knows the cheapest place to eat is down at the "McTemple" where everybody goes, so it's supper time and he goes in and sits down and buys his "temple burger", bows his head and says grace. On his way home from work, Sam, another believer who worships together with Joe passes by and glances in and there's Joe. Now Sam used to be an idol-worshipper and he used to go there all the time and worship in the temple that was attached. He stopped all that when he believed; he didn't know you could go in there and eat. So, he goes in and joins Joe who gives him the "you're free in Christ" lecture, so he starts going regularly and meets all his old friends he used to know and they begin to say, "remember when you used to do this with us... remember the girls?????" And he begins to be tempted and, in a few weeks, he's quit going to the Christian meetings and slides back into idolatry. It was more fun! And whose fault is it? Joe's! If we choose selfishly in these areas, if we choose to always do everything we're free to do, just because we're free to do it:

a. it may lead a brother with weaker faith or knowledge into sin It may embolden them to do what they otherwise wouldn't have done; it may tempt them do things they feel like are wrong. And Satan may use that to ruin, wreck and destroy their spiritual lives! So, we can't operate on the principle of knowledge alone. We must operate on the principle of love and:

b. love always chooses a brother's well-being over our own liberty (13) Paul says, "If eating meat takes somebody away from Jesus or keeps somebody from Him, I'll become a vegetarian for life! Jesus and bringing people to Him and maturing them in Him is what my life is all about. No meat is worth that! No personal freedom is worth that!"

Now let me make a brief side comment here. You all know someone who will say, "I've been a Christian for 50 years and I believe it's wrong to touch a drop of alcohol. And I'm not so sure you ought to be dressed in those clothes in church either! When you go and have wine in a restaurant or drink beer while you're watching a game, you're sinning against God and you're offending me; you're causing me to stumble!" When you run into them, I want to give you an answer you can share. "You're not the person Paul's talking about. You haven't stumbled and left Jesus yet and you're not going to because of me. You're just a crochety old believer who doesn't want to change anything in his life and wants to control mine!" Paul is talking about people who are vulnerable, who are new in the faith, who come out of difficult situations, who could be easily led astray. They're the ones God has a heart for; Jesus said, ...if anyone causes one of these little ones who believe in me to sin, it would be better for him to have a large millstone hung around his neck and to be drowned in the depths of the sea. – Mat. 18:6. That's a pretty stern warning. Love those weaker folks; consider your choices and make sure you don't contribute to their spiritual downfall! Then in chapter 9, Paul goes on to share:

II. How Paul Limited His Own Personal Liberty He was a prime example of it:

1. he had certain rights as an apostle, including that of support (1, 4-6) To be an apostle was to be a special person in the life of the church, to be one sent out by Jesus Himself to plant the church all over the world. And certainly, he had a right to eat and drink, he had a right to be married like others were and by rights the churches ought to support him and provide for his needs to free him up to do ministry. He goes on to prove from the Scriptures that he had the right to financial support from other believers. However:

2. he chose not to exercise any of his rights (12, 15) He limited what he ate for the sake of others; he never married so he'd be free to travel and plant churches and he never took money from any of the churches. He made tents and supported himself the whole way. Why? So nobody would say he was in it for the money! He didn't want to give anyone an occasion to stumble or to keep them from trusting the Savior. In fact, that was his principle:

3. he always limited his own freedoms for the sake of the Gospel (19-23) Think about the tremendous variety of peoples and cultures he met as he planted churches in place after place throughout the Roman Empire. He often began preaching in synagogues. In a synagogue, men always covered their heads as they went in. Paul didn't say, "I'm free; I pray with my head uncovered," (as he did in chapter 11) when he went into one of those; he covered his head so he wouldn't offend them and they would listen to the Gospel. And when he was with pagans, he didn't insist on a kosher diet when he sat down to lunch; he ate what they ate so he wouldn't offend them and they would listen to the Gospel. When he was with people who had scruples about eating meat sacrificed to idols, he was careful not to eat it. No matter where he was or who he was with, he thought about them, not about himself, because he loved them and he wanted to see them saved and brought to maturity in Christ. Think about who you're with! Think about what you do! How are they going to perceive it? What is the impact on them going to be spiritually? Will it draw them closer to Christ or will it push them away from Him and if it will, don't use your freedom! It's not worth it!

Now, as we move into Chapter 10 Paul gives us a powerful warning. He says:

III. Our Liberties In Christ Can Easily Lead Us To License in 10:1-13. He uses the example of Israel back at that time when God set them free from bondage in Egypt and was bringing them to the promised land. He says that:

1. the Israelites had tremendous privileges given them by God (1-4) God did a real work in their lives, ALL their lives. They saw God do incredible things. They saw His saving grace. They willingly gave their lives to Him and committed to be the Lord's people and God bound them to Himself, all of them, just like He has done with us! And yet, he says:

2. most of them perished under God's discipline pursuing their own way (5) A whole generation died there in the wilderness over 40 years. More than a million graves pockmarked that desert! And why? What happened? Well, he goes on to give examples. Some of them chose to worship a golden calf; some of them chose to commit sexual immorality; some of them tested the Lord and grumbled against Him after all He'd done; they rebelled against what He said. Bottom line? They disobeyed God and did things their own way and instead of enjoying and growing in their privileges and ended up under the dirt. And his point is that:

3. we must be careful so we don't fall into disobedience as they did (11-12) Liberty is a dangerous thing! Having the freedom to choose can ruin your life. They thought they were so privileged that they were standing firm, that nothing could knock them down. But they turned their liberty to license. Instead of rejoicing in the freedom they had and being willing to let God tell them how to use it, they insisted on using it their own way and doing their own thing and buried themselves! And you and I can do the same! If we go around hurting and destroying the faith of others by doing what WE want to do, we're being disobedient and are in danger of God's discipline! So that's why:

4. we must rely on God to protect us from this temptation Look at this famous verse: (13). I'm not sure I ever noticed this before, but it's not really talking about the weaker brother who is being tempted to fall back into idolatry or addiction or immorality. It's talking about you and I. If you will look to Him when you are tempted to rely on your own knowledge, to think that you stand firm, and do your own thing that might hurt or ruin somebody else, God is always there to limit that temptation and to make a way out of it for you! So here in the end of chapter 10 are:

IV. Paul's Conclusions About The Matter Of Personal Liberty - 10:14-33 Here's the straight advice. First:

1. when it makes you a participant in evil, FLEE! (14, 19-21) You can't go into that idol's temple and participate in the ceremony in order to get the cheap meat, telling yourself, "I don't really believe this in my heart". You would be offering allegiance to the demonic forces which are behind the whole system of idolatry. When doing what you're tempted to do makes you a participant in something that's evil, don't just walk; RUN from it. But:

2. when it is merely a personal enjoyment, GIVE THANKS! (25-26) If you want to have wine with your dinner, thank God for it, and enjoy it. Want wear your hair long or grow a beard or wear bright green clothing or eat tofu with snails or do your homework on Sunday or whatever else it might be, as long as it has no spiritual impact on anyone else and doesn't keep anyone from Christ or lead them to fall into sin, go for it! And be thankful while you're at it! However:

3. when you receive a private invitation, BE WISE! (27-29) Look for their motive. If someone says, "Hey, let's do this!" and you know the person is testing you, if you know that somehow they're going to feel like they've won you over and gotten you to violate some religious taboo by getting you to do this thing, whatever it is, then don't do it! But if they don't seem to really care about it and you don't see anything wrong with it, go for it. Just be wise. Really think about the consequences of your action. Here's:

The Bottom Line: DO WHAT WILL BRING GOD GLORY! (31) Look at the situation, the choice you have and think, "What will bring God glory in this situation? What will result in Him being glorified and magnified? That's what I'll choose to do." A missionary to Uganda was invited to a rural village to play the piano for a worship service. While she was traveling to the remote church, an unseasonable rainstorm deluged the village, and the shelter the people had erected for the service. The piano was so thoroughly doused that it was unplayable. The villagers adjusted by accompanying the hymns of the worship service with some of their traditional tortoise-shell instruments. One of the church's elders later profusely apologized to the missionary lady for his people's use of tribal instruments in accompanying the Christian hymns. She was confused by his embarrassment and asked why he would apologize for using instruments that added a wonderful cultural flavor to a worship tradition that is usually so foreign to his people. "'Don't you know?' asked the elder. 'My people have sometimes used tortoise-shell instruments in devil worship!'" "Oh," replied the smiling missionary, "you should see how my people have sometimes used pianos." [Using Illustrations to Preach with Power by Bryan Chapell. Zondervan, 1992. Pages 30-31.] You can take a tortoise shell and use it to the glory of God. You can do the same with a piece of meat that has been offered to an idol or a glass of alcohol or a wallet full of money or a piano. You can take anything that is neither right nor wrong in itself and use it either to glorify God and advance His kingdom or to puff yourself up and hurt others. The choice is yours. Choose to glorify God.

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

10) The Problem Of Dress - 11:1-16

As we arrive in our study at the first half of chapter 11, we come to a very difficult passage, one that has been interpreted in different ways and argued over greatly and I'll demonstrate why. It's about dress, specifically women's dress in worship, and if you simply read it at face value with no background knowledge, you'd come away with the fact that all of you married women here this morning should be wearing a head-covering. Now, I happened to notice that none of you are! May I ask why? Well, the answer could be that you are all rebellious and, if you lived in ancient Corinth, that would probably be true. But I know you too well to think that, so the answer must be that you believe that for some reason what Paul is saying in this passage does not apply to you in the same way it did back then. Am I right? Well, let's begin then by talking about:

I. The Cultural Practice Of Appropriate Dress You see:

1. there is a difference between a principle and a practice Look at verse (2). That word teachings means things that were given to you, important things. We could call them doctrines, authoritative teachings, but I think the word principles says it better in today's language. The Corinthians were holding on securely to these and not varying from them and Paul praised them for it. Now:

a. principles are timeless: they are meant to be followed always by all believers and everywhere. Instructions to love one another, to give to the poor, to live a holy life, these kinds of things don't change over time and are just as binding as they ever were. Paul urged the Thessalonian believers, So then, brothers, stand firm and hold to the teachings we passed on to you, whether by word of mouth or by letter. - 2 Thes. 2:15. Where principles have been passed on to us, we want to stand fast and hold firmly on to them. They never change. BUT:

b. practices are variable: We often pray by closing our eyes and folding our hands. In Kyrgyzstan believers pray with open hands and pass them over their face when done, saying "Oomin"! We take the Lord's supper using chunks of matzoh and little cups of grape juice. Other believers use whole loaves of leavened bread and break them and use real wine. These things are practices; they vary by culture and change over time. And much of the way that we go about practicing or expressing our faith is bound up in these. We sing the music we do because it's appropriate in this generation here where we live; two hundred years ago, it would have been strange and probably rejected. We meet Sunday at 10:45 AM because that's our tradition; in China or the Muslim world that might not work so well because Sunday is a work day. So many of the things that are important to us are actually practices that may be great for us but are not meant to be for everyone everywhere. The problem comes when we get mixed up and think they are and try to force our traditions as Gospel principles that others must accept. What Paul is teaching us in this whole section of the letter is that while we must cling doggedly to principles:

c. in practices we must limit our freedom for others' sake Remember that from last week? The first verse of chapter 11 actually belongs to the end of chapter 10. Read (10:33-11:1). Paul continually varied his practices depending on who he was with. He changed what he ate or some of his other Jewish habits depending on who he was with, for the sake of the Gospel and he urged us to do the same. This next issue of dress is a continuation of the same thought. We have to be willing to limit our freedom by changing our practices in the area of food or even of dress for the sake of others, so that they won't be alienated from Christ. Now let's look at:

2. the struggle that was occurring at Corinth Paul seems to be describing it in verse (5). Evidently:

a. in Corinthian culture married women normally wore a "veil", a kalumma. Not a veil to hide their face like you might find in the Muslim world or parts of the Oriental world, but a wrap of cloth covering the hair. Today we might call it a hood or a head-scarf. Sculptures and drawings from that era depict women with this kind of covering in place. It was in many ways a cultural sign of marriage, of belonging to a husband and being unavailable, similar to our concept of wearing a wedding ring to let the world know we have a spouse. Of course, this was not done inside the home, but primarily when out in public. For a married woman to appear in public with uncovered hair was not only unusual, but it was like a married woman deliberately taking off her wedding ring. However, what was happening was that:

b. in the church women were publicly leading in worship "unveiled" with hair hanging free. We can't be sure why, but I'm guessing that it was an expression of their freedom in Christ which Paul had so clearly taught. He said that in Christ there is neither male nor female, that men and women both are equally loved by God and free to approach God. The Jews had long before developed the concept that only the MEN go in to the inner chamber and they cover their heads with a tillah, a prayer cloth as a sign of humbleness and unworthiness. Paul taught that because of Christ men were free to go into God's presence, that nothing stood between them. They didn't have to cover their heads and grovel. And women had the same freedom and access to God, so naturally some of them probably wanted to express that outwardly. They didn't have to come to God with covered heads either! So, here were women standing up in the assembly of believers to lead in prayer or to bring an exhortation to the group - and by the way, notice that Paul isn't fazed by that! He doesn't say they shouldn't be leading in worship! Ladies, you are just as welcome at the Throne and in the church as any man. But the problem was that:

c. this freedom rebelled against cultural practice and caused scandal Did they need to have their heads covered to pray or approach God? No! But it flew in the face of cultural practice. Because of the cultural meaning of an uncovered head, those who looked on were seeing something else; they were seeing married women who appeared to be rebels, wanting to show they were not under the authority of their husbands. Culturally it was an inappropriate way to dress, and it created offense, much as we might be offended here if a married woman got up front with a very short skirt or a really low neckline and no ring. We'd have some real reservations about her character, and so did Paul! But instead of launching right into criticizing the practice, he begins by explaining:

II. The Timeless Principle Of Headship which is the really important underlying issue. Read verse (3). The word head in this context basically means leader. God is a God of order and He establishes lines of authority and leadership in everything He creates. Even within the Trinity, the three persons of the Godhead who are co-equal and co-eternal, God has established leadership. Even though they are completely one, the Father is the Head of Christ the Son; how many times when He was on earth did Jesus say things like: I do nothing on my own but speak just what the Father has taught me.... for I always do what pleases him." - John 8:28-29. And Christ is our Lord and Leader, our Head; He has been made Head over all things to the church which is His body.... So, in like manner:

1. God declares the headship of the husband in the family If you want to read it more clearly, turn with me to Eph. 5:23-24. Now, I'm sure you noticed that wasn't done by vote or earned by performance. It is a timeless principle of the way things are. The husband is appointed by God to be the leader of the family and the wife and children are to follow his leadership. That's just the way God has set things up to be. In fact, Paul argues that God:

a. He established it at creation (7-9) Even though God made both male and female in His image according to Gen. 1:27, He created Adam first out of nothing. Later He created Eve literally out of Adam and because of him, so that he would not be alone, so that He would have a helper, a complement that would be everything he needed, one who would be his glory, his treasure. So, from that very first pair, the husband is to be the leader and have the authority of headship in the home and so it is to be in every generation since, however, in Corinth:

b. culturally the veil was THE public sign of that authority (10) We'll let that phrase, because of the angels go; interpreters have argued over the meaning of that for centuries. We'll probably have to wait until we get to heaven to really understand it. But the reason the woman in Corinth needs to wear the veil is NOT because of angels or of anything at all about her being or identity, but rather because it is the sign by which everybody knows she is married and under her husband's leadership and doing this with his blessing.

c. it is NOT a sign of inferiority or weakness It does not mean that men are superior to women; in fact, many women I know are far superior to their husbands in any number of ways! It is not a statement that women are somehow of lesser worth or too weak to lead or anything like that. And Paul wants to make sure nobody misunderstands him; look at (11-12). God used man in the creation of woman; now He uses woman in the creation of man! Neither is better; we are both absolutely dependent on each other; we NEED each other! Just as headship in the Trinity is not about superiority and inferiority, neither is headship in marriage. It is about God's appointed order for getting His purpose accomplished on earth by His servants. And, by the way, this does not imply that all women must submit to all men. There is nothing wrong with a woman being a leader in business or leading ministries within the church. Headship is about husbands and wives. And, Paul adds:

d. it seems to be anticipated in universal human instinct (13-15) From the earliest times in virtually every human culture, women have grown their hair long and men have most often cut theirs short. Now, how long and how short have varied, but this an almost universal human custom; it seems to be a built in instinct. And in any culture when a man tries deliberately to look like a woman or a woman like a man, it's repulsive. Longer hair seems as if it's God's gift to the woman; it's almost like a natural head-covering, as if God was anticipating this cultural practice which the Corinthians had of the woman covering her head to show her respect for her husband. But before we get lost in this, the point is that:

2. when our dress is culturally inappropriate, three things happen. First:

a. we dishonor Christ, our Head (4) There, if a man got up dressed like a woman with a covered head, it would reflect on Christ. When a woman got up with an uncovered head, it reflected on Christ. If our worship leader dressed in a dirty T shirt with a beer advertisement on it, or dressed in Gothic black with chains and black makeup, that would send a louder message than his voice, wouldn't it. Even though clothes don't matter in themselves (you can pray to God with or without them and no matter what kind they are), his inappropriate choice in this culture would send a message about how he regards God. We'd see it as dishonoring. These women in Corinth were dishonoring God through their built-in culturally inappropriate choice. It was reflecting on God. Second:

b. we dishonor our spouse (5) LuAnn has always told me that the way I dress is a reflection on her; that's why she picks out my outfit for Sunday! She doesn't trust me! In truth, she wants me to look my best and if I don't, she feels responsible for it. But if I chose to wear a T shirt that said, "Want to join me for a one-night stand?", wouldn't I be totally dishonoring to her and my relationship with her? Even if I didn't mean it? The same thing is true if I join in with the guys at work in their lewd comments about some woman walking by. My appearance and my words can dishonor her. And if she were to go out in church or in public with an appearance that looked loose and inviting to men, it would dishonor me and her relationship with me! Again, these women in Corinth were dishonoring their husbands through their culturally inappropriate choice. Then third:

c. we disgrace our own selves (6) The reference to shaving the head is not clear. Many writers seem to say that the numerous pagan temple prostitutes in Corinth shaved their heads or wore their hair short and man-like to indicate their distinction from other women and their availability, but I don't really know if that's true. In some places adulteresses were driven out with heads shaved. Others point out that for a woman to leave her hair loose and flowing was a sight reserved only for her husband and to do that in public was a mark of looseness and that if she was going to do that, she might as well go all the way and shave it and disgrace herself totally. What seems really clear is that for a woman to have her head shaved or buzzed close was a disgrace in that culture and that not wearing a head covering sent the same negative message and it wasn't good. When I dress inappropriately, it sends a message about me, about who I am and about my values, and perhaps a message I don't wish to convey! I disgrace myself.

So, should women wear a veil in church today? Some entire denominations have taken this command as a principle instead of a practice. Mennonites and Amish and some Brethren groups do this. Their women wear little head coverings to this day. Even Roman Catholic nuns wear a habit to cover their heads. But if the command is merely about a practice, the way we understand it, how do we go about:

III. Applying The Timeless Principle To Our Cultural Practices? I loved this quote I read on the web: In applying these verses, then, the question becomes, "Would wearing head coverings in our day honor this principle?" Consider a quote from the following article by Kenneth T. Wilson, entitled, "Should Women Wear Head Coverings?": "The headship established by God should not be disregarded. To overlook God's distinctive function for men and women is disgraceful. That is true in any culture. The expression of disregard in the Corinthian culture was the removal of women's head coverings. Paul's response was to tell them to wear what was the normal cultural expression of male-female distinction. In the Greco-Roman culture that distinction was revealed by women wearing head coverings. However, to require women today to wear head coverings in church is to ask them to do something abnormal rather than normal. This is exactly what Paul wanted to avoid. He wanted women to do what was normal in their culture in reflecting their womanhood and the creative order and distinction set forth in verse 3. To be obedient to this passage Christian women should not dress in a way that blurs the distinction between male and female." That says it in a nutshell, but let me add three things:

1. we must be willing to consider cultural norms and how the wider church has reacted to them (16) We don't get to be independent in the way we dress and simply do what we want. We have to consider the message it will send and how it will be perceived by the people we live among. And we have to consider how the people of God, of whom we are a part, are choosing in our time to obey God in this area. It DOES matter what everybody else thinks...they just might be hearing the Holy Spirit!

2. our dress should always honor God in the context of our culture Our daughter lived in the country of Jordan. In the city in which she lived (which is very HOT), she did not go out in public without either having long sleeves or $\frac{3}{4}$ length sleeves. To have shown her arm would have been a sign of looseness there and further, because people knew she was American, they assumed that she was a Christian and it would have reinforced the impression they already get from American TV and movies that Christians are immoral people! It would literally have dishonored Christ. If she went to a remote village which is less used to modern ways, she was always careful to wear a head scarf and long skirt outside. Otherwise, she would have dishonored God in that subculture. Our culture just now is given to an extreme amount of body exposure for women. Designers are impacting the way our young ladies dress with lots of midriff exposure and low cut V's. It may take some ingenious shopping to find things that are tasteful and still look good, but don't let the popular trend cause you to be unaware of the message that the way you dress may send. We should dress in a way in our culture that those around us will perceive as being wholesome and pure and normal for a person who professes to love God. Finally:

3. our dress should always honor our spouse in the context of our culture If we are married, it should indicate that we are happy and satisfied in our relationship and not trying to attract the eyes of others. If it is honoring to God, it will be honoring to our spouse.

John Hess-Yoder shares this story: While serving as a missionary in Laos, I discovered an illustration of the kingdom of God. Before the colonialists imposed national boundaries, the kings of Laos and Vietnam reached an agreement on taxation in the border areas. Those who ate short-grain rice, built their houses on stilts, and decorated them with Indian-style serpents were considered Laotians. On the other hand, those who ate long-grain rice, built their houses on the ground, and decorated them with Chinese-style dragons were considered Vietnamese. The exact location of a person's home was not what determined his or her nationality. Instead, each person belonged to the kingdom whose cultural values he or she exhibited... [Leadership-Vol. 7, #3.] The values you exhibit in the way you dress send a message; they advertise clearly to the people around you what Kingdom you belong to. Dress in a way that advertises God's Kingdom in a positive light and shows that you belong to it.

Eleven Problems In The Church - 1 Corinthians

11) The Problem Of Disregard For The Lord's Supper - 11:17-33

Today we're going to come to the end of our series as we end chapter 11. The Corinthians obviously had more than 11 problems, but we've already studied the ones that follow in the remaining chapters in other series, so we'll end today by looking at a problem that would probably never even enter our minds. Paul chides these believers at Corinth because they were showing an utter disregard for the Lord's Supper. Now, so that you will understand what Paul is saying, let me give you some background about:

I. How The Lord's Supper Came To Be Celebrated When you think of the Corinthians celebrating the Lord's Supper, don't think of the way we do it here today. Don't think of a whole congregation in a church building with stained glass windows; they met in small groups in homes. Don't think of golden trays and little plastic cups and pew racks; there was only an ordinary loaf of bread and ordinary drinking cups at a table or a mat spread on the house floor. It is amazing to me how far we have taken such a simple thing away from its original context.

1. it originated as part of Jesus' last Passover meal Verse 23 says it began on the night Jesus was betrayed, at that last meal He had with His disciples. It was a Passover seder and there was a lamb on the table. But Jesus didn't point to the lamb. He took the matzoh, the unleavened bread, from the table and as He broke it and passed it to them, He gave it new meaning: This is my body; eat this to remember Me. And when they came to the last cup of wine of the meal, He gave that new meaning also: This cup is My blood; drink this to remember Me. It passed right over their heads that night, but later, after He returned to heaven, they realized that Jesus meant for them to do this whenever they ate and drank together. They realized that HE was the real Passover Lamb who had been slain for their sins and that, just as the Passover meal was a regular reminder of the Exodus that had saved the Jewish nation, so the bread and the cup were to be celebrated as a regular reminder of the cross where their true Passover was sacrificed. They figured out pretty quickly that He didn't mean for them to do it only once a year at Passover and once people from all the nations began to believe, they didn't celebrate the Passover anyway, so this act of taking the bread and the wine was separated out from the Passover in their thinking and:

2. it became known as the Eucharist (or Thanksgiving). It comes from verse 24 where Jesus took the bread and gave thanks. And it IS an act of thanksgiving, a time of giving thanks to God for the unspeakable gift that He gave us when He gave His Son to the cross for us. Now, this special act of eucharist or giving thanks:

3. it was originally connected with a common meal Paul mentions it as the Lord's supper, the term we usually use, in verse 22. Eating together was one of the first things the new believers did in Acts. They came together in each other's homes to share a meal and to worship. The meal became known as the agape meal or love feast. Everybody would bring food and they would eat together and then use the bread and a cup to give thanks and remember the Lord's death. That's what you're reading about in this chapter and that practice continued for a century or so, but as the Eucharist was given more and more significance as a ritual act with memorized words:

4. it was soon detached by the 200's AD and made into a stand-alone act. And the meal, believe it or not, was eventually banned in the 300's because of abuses. So much bad stuff happened at meals which were supposed to be love feasts that the church at large banned them and threatened those who held them with excommunication! Now, that says something to me! This problem here at Corinth is a real problem, one that grew to epic proportions throughout the world!

And you know what, it's still here today! We may not celebrate the Lord's Supper in the same manner or as part of a love feast like they did, but we can still abuse the occasion of it exactly like they did! So, let's look at what Paul says about:

II. How The Lord's Supper Can Be Abused (17-22) We already studied back in the first four chapters that the church at Corinth had become divided into factions, cliques, groups that wouldn't associate with each other, each insisting on doing things their own way. So, when it came time to have a love feast and celebrate the Eucharist together, they came with all of that still intact, despising one another in their hearts. And just so, one of the things that displeases God greatly is that when we come to the Supper:

1. we may disregard the unity of the body (18) The one thing that Jesus prayed for that very night as they were leaving the Upper Room is that all His followers would be ONE. He prayed that they would be brought to perfect unity. And the Lord's Supper is about what truly makes us one. We can have all kinds of differences in how we go about serving and following Christ. We can dress differently and sing differently and have different ways of raising money and methods of evangelism, but there is one thing that unites us, one thing that binds our hearts: Christ died for us. And the Lord's table is our reminder of that. Look back at 10:17. We are His body. And the fact that we all partake of the one loaf which represents His body, says we are one. The hymn says, We are not divided; all one body we! So, when we come to the Table and we detest other members of the body, we abuse it. Don't come to the Table, to this great celebration of love, with feelings of anger or hatred or disdain in your heart toward someone like they were doing. Then, another way we can abuse the Supper is that:

2. we may disregard the sacredness of what we celebrate (20) They were eating supper, all right, but it wasn't the Lord's Supper. They were eating and drinking with no real thought about Jesus and about what His death meant to them. Now, this one is very easily possible for us to do today. In the first place, it is so easy for us to let anything like communion become a meaningless ritual, an act that we do without even thinking. We just go through the motions because that's what we do in church, but our minds are out on the golf course or pondering the afternoon football game or watching the new girl in the front pew, with no thought at all about Jesus Himself. Roger Rose said that when he was a boy, his family lived on a farm alongside a dirt road. Only on rare occasions would an automobile pass by. But one day as Roger's young brother was crossing the road on his bicycle, a car came roaring down a nearby hill, struck the boy, and killed him. Roger said, "Later, when my father picked up the mangled, twisted bike, I heard him sob out loud for the first time in my life. He carried it to the barn and placed it in a spot we seldom used. Father's terrible sorrow eased with the passing of time, but for many years whenever he saw that bike, tears began streaming down his face." Roger continued, "Since then I have often prayed, 'Lord, keep the memory of Your death as fresh as that to me! Every time I partake of Your memorial supper, let my heart be stirred as though You died only yesterday. Never let the communion service become a mere formality, but always a tender and touching experience.'" The Lord's Supper is deliberately getting the bike out to stare at it all over again. It's a remembrance of something so precious, something that saved our lives forever. We don't ever want to get over that; to treat it with indifference as though it's just some meaningless ritual is blasphemy! Or worse, maybe we're sitting here supposedly celebrating how Jesus saved us from our sins and the whole time we're involved in some sin in our lives and we have no intention of giving it up. The thought doesn't even enter our minds that we're continuing to do the very thing that Jesus died for. When we come to the table like that, with utter disregard for all it means, we abuse it. And thirdly, as we come:

3. we may disregard others and their needs (21-22) Evidently, the idea was originally that everybody brought something and they all shared it together, kind of like our pot-luck dinner. But somehow the ones who had more wanted to bring their own and eat it, leaving the ones who had little or nothing without much to eat. And those who were better off could leave their work and get there earlier; slaves and servants couldn't come until later after their duties were finished. But the early birds didn't want to wait for the rest; they brought their own stuff and dove right in! They ate and drank their fill without any regard for anyone but themselves. Oh, do we come to the Lord's table with utter disregard for the other members of the body and their needs? Do we come only thinking of ourselves or do we come with a heart full of gratitude for the brothers and sisters around us, fully engaged in praying for them and helping them with their needs. It is truly a feast of love and if we are not loving one another the way Christ loved us, which is what we are remembering at the Table, then we are abusing the Supper, just as surely as the Corinthians were. Now Paul goes on to explain clearly:

III. How The Lord's Supper Should Be Understood (23-26) First of all, I have to point out that:

1. it is not an ecclesiastical ritual but a sacred symbol Jesus was being plain and simple. He said, "I want you to break bread like this and drink the cup to remember ME, to remember what I am about to do for you, to remember that I am your Passover who was sacrificed for you." It was to be a memorial, a symbol to keep us from forgetting and a sacred symbol because what it represents is such a holy thing, the kind of thing that makes you take your shoes off because you're on holy ground as you remember it and think about it and give thanks for it. That's how it started, but in the centuries that followed, the doing of the act itself came to be regarded more as something that is a means of receiving in some form the salvation it was meant to remember. Today the Roman church teaches transubstantiation, that the bread and the wine turn into the actual body and blood of Christ and that He is sacrificed over again and we literally take HIM into ourselves in the Eucharist. It is the central act of every service, of the very life of the church. Other denominations teach consubstantiation, that Christ's spiritual presence is IN or WITH the bread and the wine as we take them. Listen, His Presence is ALREADY IN US; His Spirit lives in us! We'll never have any more of Him than we already have! Communion is a sacred symbol that I do so that I will never forget the act that made that possible! Jesus said that:

2. it declares that I participate in the New Covenant with God that was made through Christ's sacrifice Look back to 10:16. By taking these simple elements, we declare that we belong to this New Covenant Jesus made.

a. the bread symbolizes His body which was given for me His bodily sufferings, His passion, the floggings and the beating and the torment and the nails and the agony of the cross - that was for ME! He did that in MY place. I deserved that; I deserved the very wrath of God that was poured out in all its fullness on Him. Yet He took it for me and when I take this bread, I declare that I am trusting that He is my Substitute. And:

b. the wine symbolizes His blood which was shed for my forgiveness Yes, I know we use grape juice, not real wine. That's largely because of the American temperance movement of the late 1800's and early 1900's and a minister by the name of Charles Welch who figured out how to pasteurize grape juice, built a company out of it, and convinced his church and many others to use it to this day. Through the centuries and in most of the world, it's always been wine. (And by the way, the little plastic cups come from the American consciousness of sharing germs by sharing a cup; they really don't help the symbol much.) But the point is not the alcohol content or the vessel we receive it in, it's the color! The red color of the wine is to remind us of Christ's blood, to remind us of how He shed it for us there on the cross, of how they pierced His side and it came out. The Old Testament says clearly, The life of the flesh is in the blood... It was His very life that was drained out for me, for my sins. It was the precious blood of His pure, innocent, perfect life that was shed, instead of mine, and it bought my forgiveness. It washed away my sins and made me white as snow before God. So, when I drink it, I say, "This is MY covenant; Jesus has saved ME by His sacrifice!" And then Paul adds in verse 26 that:

3. it proclaims the message of His death until His return (26) It is not only a reminder; whenever we celebrate it, it is a proclamation, a message in symbol form that Jesus died for our sins, a simple two-act play that we are to keep doing over and over until He returns and the fact that we are still doing it says that we are still waiting expectantly for His return! We are looking for Him to come back! We're planning on it! And until He comes, we keep on reminding ourselves of His death and proclaiming it to the world until that day when we see Him in person! Then finally, Paul closes by explaining just:

IV. How Serious The Lord's Supper Is (27-34) Let's boil those verses down to three things that are clear and easy to remember about the Lord's Supper. First:

1. taking it in an unworthy manner profanes Christ's sacrifice It is not that the bread and the juice are mystical sacred objects, but when we come with malice in our hearts toward others or without love for them or take it in a light and flippant manner or do it as a matter of rote, we fail to recognize the seriousness of what they represent. It is a kind of blasphemy. It is like saying that the death of Christ doesn't matter to us. Heb. 10:29 says, How much more severely do you think a man deserves to be punished who has trampled the Son of God under foot, who has treated as an unholy thing the blood of the covenant that sanctified him, and who has insulted the Spirit of grace? That's what we're doing when we treat this sacred symbol in the wrong manner; we're thumbing our nose at Jesus' death, treating the holiest thing in the universe as if it were nothing; we're blaspheming! And that's why Paul says:

2. taking it in an unworthy manner may bring God's discipline in (28-30). A good number of the folks in the church at Corinth had become sick or were physically weak and some had even died because of it. God disciplines His children! He loves us too much to let us go on being such a poor testimony to His grace. And in this matter of something so sacred and serious, He may even take one of his children out of this world for it. John said, There is a sin unto death! In Acts 5, one couple in the church, Ananias and Sapphira, lied about their giving and God struck them instantly dead because they dishonored Him so! And Luke adds that great fear seized the whole church when they heard about these events. Man, we never think about that! I wonder how many brothers and sisters through the years have dishonored the Lord's table enough that He has had to send serious illness into their lives to wake them up and draw them back to a place where they take Him seriously! I wonder how many He has sent to an early grave because they would not heed the warnings of His Spirit in their hearts! I wonder whether He has ever done that here with people we know? Of course, we have no way of knowing if He has, but those verses apply as much to us as they did in Corinth and I sure wouldn't want to be found taking the death of Christ lightly. Now please, don't sit in fear every time you take communion, wondering, "What if I'm taking this in an unworthy manner??" Listen, the very fact that you'd worry about it is the best evidence that you're not! The good news is that:

3. taking it in an unworthy manner can be avoided by self-examination If we examine and judge ourselves, God won't have to do it for us! Read verse 28 again. When we celebrate the Lord's Supper, it is a time to examine our hearts, to search ourselves before God and see that we're truly honoring Christ's sacrifice with our lives. And if we're not, if His Spirit brings to mind something that is not right, then we have opportunity to fix it, to repent, to change! And that very willingness to repent, to change our minds because of what Christ did for us is exactly what God is looking for in us!

Shortly after dawn one August morning in 1944, the citizens of the small French village of Plelo were herded into the town square to face a German firing squad. The night before the Germans had routed a small unit of French underground freedom fighters. Among the villagers lined up in the square was a 15-year-old boy. He didn't really understand why, but he knew that they were all about to die. He thought about the days before the war when he had roamed the green countryside. He thought about how much of life he would miss out on. More than anything, he was afraid of dying. He wondered what the bullets would feel like as they tore through his body. Then, suddenly, the boy heard explosions in the distance. Tanks could be heard approaching the village. Quickly the Nazis ran from the square to defend themselves against a unit of 20 American soldiers led by a Corporal named Bob Hamsley. One of the fleeing freedom fighters had asked Hamsley to come to the aid of the villagers. Three hours later 50 Germans were dead, and the other 50 were prisoners. Nearly half a century later in 1990, in the same square where scores of Frenchmen came so close to death, the town of Plelo held a ceremony to honor Bob Hamsley. The man who tracked Hamsley down and made the arrangements for the ceremony to be held was that same 15-year-old boy, who was now a former mayor of Plelo. He had purposed in his heart to find and honor the man who had saved his life. The point? A savior is not easily forgotten. [From Leadership, Winter 1992. Page 49.] The story of Calvary that we tell over again in the Supper is far more dramatic than this. It is the story of the One who saved your life eternally by sacrificing Himself. And if you are truly saved, if you know that you have been rescued from eternal death, then you must realize this truth: A Savior is not easily forgotten! Let us remember Him as we prepare our hearts for the Lord's Table.

The Suffering And The Glory - 2 Corinthians 1-7 The God Of All Comfort • 1:3-11 • The Issue Of Presence

I. Introduction To The Series As I was reading through the book of 2 Corinthians in my devotions, God impressed the first five chapters upon me in a new and special way. I noticed:

1. the intense sufferings with which Paul was afflicted This letter is overflowing with words like "suffering, trouble, hardship, danger, distress, hunger, persecution, sorrow, tears, and weakness". And it dawned on me that for all the glory in which we paint Paul's life as "the ideal Christian", "the greatest missionary" and so on, it was really a life of pain and misery. He was continually jailed, beaten, run out of town, threatened, argued with and criticized. He traveled repeatedly and lived in constant danger. Some of you can relate to that. I thought about how many painful things I've been walking through with so many of you over these past years: debilitating diseases, terminal illnesses, the fear of your own death or that of a loved one, financial distresses, marital problems, separations and divorces, conflicts with other people and the list goes on. Our lives are filled with sufferings the way Paul's was. But I noticed another thing in these chapters:

2. the eternal glory on which Paul focused Every time he mentions suffering, in the next breath there is glory. The words "comfort, joy, rejoicing, triumph, and glory" abound. It is spelled out in 4:18-19. There's the key to surviving suffering: focus on the glory! That's how Paul made it through. His eyes were riveted, not on the suffering he was experiencing, but on the glory it was working in and through him. And that's not just for him; it's for us! The sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared to the glory that shall be revealed in and to us! But how do we keep that focus? How do we keep looking at the glory in the midst of the pain? Well, I also noticed throughout these first five chapters:

3. the key expressions God has given to keep us focused on the glory through the pen of Paul, key phrases we already all know which, if we can hold onto them, will point us to the glory when we suffer. Phrases like, "The God of all comfort", "Not yes and no; always yes", "the guarantee of what is to come", "treasure in jars of clay", "a house not made with hands", and more, each of which addresses in a nutshell the key issues that bombard us when we suffer, issues like, "Where is God?", "How can I be sure?", and "What if I don't make it?" They are precious gems of truth that we desperately need.

And so, out of all my "noticing" today we embark upon this brand-new series of studies which I've called "The Suffering And The Glory". The first phrase I want to impress upon you is in verse 3, "The God of All Comfort". The first meaning of the word "comfort" in the dictionary is the first one that comes to our minds when we hear it, "to soothe in time of affliction or distress". We always picture our mother or somebody bending over and trying to calm us, going, "There, there, don't cry; things will be alright!" That works OK on a child who stubs their toe, but it doesn't go too far in the deeper sufferings that life brings. In order to understand the true nature of comfort, you first have to understand:

II. The Nature Of Our Sufferings (8-11) Paul never pretended with people. He didn't put on the smiley face and say, "Oh, I'm just fine" when he was dying inside. He was on his third missionary journey and had just left Ephesus in Asia Minor after spending three whole years. He had left after a riot by the silversmiths in Acts 19 and he told the Corinthians honestly about the hardships he endured during those years. In his description we find:

1. the elements of our sufferings And, by the way, notice the plural forms. hardships, sufferings, and so on. Life is not one long misery of suffering. There are incidents of suffering interspersed with incidents of joy and other things. Each suffering is individual, though there are many of them. And Paul uses three key words to describe them:

a. hardships: The Greek word (the same one translated troubles in verse 3) means to squeeze under pressure, to be crushed like a grape until you pop. One element of our suffering is that we are crushed by the pressure of the situation. We would call it stress. A loved one is dying and you are called upon to decide whether to pull the plug on the respirator. You feel great pressure; you're torn between the love which makes you cling to that person tenaciously and the knowledge that says you have to let them go and release them from suffering. The boss tells you to make bricks but he won't give you any straw. He wants 80 hours' worth of output in 40 hours' worth of paid time. Pressure. The situation demands more of you than you can produce, no matter how hard you try. Life is full of hardships, pressurized spots. Then Paul uses the word:

b. sufferings: (verse 5). The Greek word comes from pascho from which we get our word "passion" and the sense of it is to feel the suffering, to be wounded by the hurt of the situation. Suffering brings pain, sometimes physically and even more often, emotionally. Your spouse or your little child dies suddenly in an accident. Your eyes well up, you begin to wail. How do you describe what you feel? You call it anguish but it just hurts deep inside! Then Paul uses a third word:

c. pressed down: (verse 8, under great pressure). It means to carry a burden that is extreme, that forces us down like the donkey who is overloaded and falls beneath the weight. Sometimes you are simply disabled by the weight of the situation. The burden is so great that you can do nothing to lift it, to change it; you are left in helplessness. You're the victim of a crime, a kidnapping or maybe even a rape or perhaps a terminal disease or AIDS; it is the sense of helplessness, powerlessness, the inability to protect yourself, to do anything to change it, that devastates you most. You can become like Job who could only sit on the ash heap for days and scratch himself.

Stress and pressure, agonizing pain, overwhelming helplessness, these are some of the key things that incidents of suffering send crashing into our lives. And no matter who you are or what you do, they crash into yours too; Paul found them all in the course of the ministry! Now note:

2. the intensity of our sufferings As Paul says about his in verse 8:

a. they may be beyond our limits of ability The stress may be so great that it is literally, "beyond measure", "beyond the mark," beyond what we have ever been able to cope with, have ever been able to handle, beyond all our resources and knowledge to face and:

b. they may require more strength than we possess Either physically or emotionally the pain may be so intense that it is not possible to bear up under it. In fact, sufferings may go so far that:

c. they may destroy our belief that we can survive Paul became convinced for a time that he was going to die; he felt the sentence of death. He did not believe he was going to survive; he was sure that his life would be lost in the process. Glenn Hoerr writes: "It was one of the most beautiful and historic places in central Germany. The guesthouse I was staying in was clean and comfortable, and the people were friendly. It was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Why then was I so miserable? I had never felt such loneliness before, nor have I since. In fact, I felt so lonely I was convinced that if I went to sleep, I would die. I had been in Germany for about three weeks, as a civilian working with the Army Chaplaincy to train soldiers how to study the Bible and lead Bible studies. It was for a minimum of six months, and there was no question I was where God wanted me to be. One fateful day, however, was the culmination of a series of events that left me paralyzed with loneliness and fear. I spoke no German, my car had broken down that afternoon on the autobahn, I was traveling alone, the person I was to meet at the Army base was not there or even expecting me, and the girl I had dated for the past five months was 9,000 miles away. After what seemed like the longest day of my life, I sat in my cozy room, overwhelmed by the loneliness I felt. My mind raced through one scenario after another, each one leaving me feeling a little worse. Glenn was afraid he would die. You say, over a car breakdown, a missed appointment, separation from a girlfriend, loneliness??? You can't gauge the intensity of suffering by academic evaluation! It can be extremely deep and penetrate to the very core of your being. But the true issue in suffering is not the size of WHAT has happened to me. It is an issue of Presence: I am alone. There may be people all around me, even loved ones, but nobody's with me in the tension I face, nobody's feeling the intensity of the pain in my heart, nobody can pick up my burden and I can't move it, not even God. Where is He? That's the issue: "Does God care about my sufferings and if so, where is He?" "He should be here! I don't see Him; I don't sense Him; if He were here, He would never let this happen to me. I'm alone and I'm dying here!" God pointed out this problem back in the garden: it is not good for man to be alone. He's not created that way. To survive he must know that he is not alone or he will lose all hope. Suffering comes in varying degrees but that's where it ultimately takes you; that's where it took Paul. But now, let's go back and look at:

III. The Nature Of Our God (3-4) Oh listen! He is the:

1. Father of compassion, not simply a compassionate Father, the very Father of mercies. He invented feeling! The reason you can feel pain down in your gut is because you're made in His image; He FEELS pain! And the reason you can be cut to the heart by compassion over the pain of others is that He is moved by the intensity of our sufferings. Hebrews says, For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities... - Heb. 4:15 (KJV) We don't just have a Savior who came down and bought our salvation and went back to heaven to wait for us! We have one who is touched with what we're feeling, who knows our pain to its very depths. "Does Jesus care when my heart is pained too deeply for mirth or song, as the burdens press and the cares distress and the way grows weary and long? Oh yes, He cares! I know He cares! His heart is touched with my grief. When the days are weary, the long night dreary, I KNOW my Savior cares!" How do I know? It's His very nature. He can't NOT care. He is the Father of compassion, the source from which all compassion flows. If nobody else cares about what's happening to me, HE cares. And then He is the:

2. God of all comfort The Greek word is paraclete, the same word Jesus used in the Upper Room when He told his disciples about the Comforter who would come, the Holy Spirit. It means one who comes alongside to help us in our situation. Comfort is not merely soothing somebody. It is coming and standing alongside them to help so that they will not be alone and left to themselves. The Holy Spirit is the comforter, not because He soothes us when we feel sad, but because He has come to permanently take up residence inside our mortal bodies, so that wherever we are, He is! Whatever we experience, He experiences with us. The word comfort comes from the Latin conforte which literally means "together strong", "to brave together". We have a God who says, "Fear not, for I am WITH you... My Presence shall go WITH you... Lo I am WITH you always..." We have a God who is WITH us; that's our comfort! Paul says:

a. His Presence is with us in all our sufferings He's a paraclete; He's with us not just in some, but not in others; He is with us in every last one of them. I never told you the end of the story of the man in Germany. He wrote: "After hours of useless wallowing in self-pity, I decided to begin reading through the book of Psalms. That choice of last resort, which should have been the first, brought me to Psalm 37. Like a light being turned on in a dark room, I was reminded that I was in no way alone, for the Lord was holding my hand. With that in mind, I allowed myself to believe God was with me, loved me, and understood how I felt. The paralyzing fear lifted, and I slept soundly the rest of the night. Once I got my mind thinking right thoughts, I effectively handled being alone, without feeling lonely. That day is a constant reminder that I never need to be crippled by feelings of loneliness ever again." [Time Out! compiled by Clint and Mary Bechwith. Evergreen Communications, 1989. Pages 145-146.] He is WITH me and He has promised never to leave me or forsake me! And because He is WITH me:

b. His Presence provides peace, strength, and hope What I can't cope with, I know HE can. When I focus on Him, I have peace that defies understanding, confidence that He is in control and we face the circumstances together, no matter how out of control things seem. What I have no strength to bear, He is there to bear with me. If I have no physical strength, He made my body and He can infuse it with His own mighty power that hung the stars in space so that together we carry the yoke. And if I have no more strength to bear the emotional hurt and pain, His Spirit is one with my spirit so that I cry out, "Abba, Daddy!", and we feel it together! And when I see no way out and am feeling the despair of my very life, He is there as the God who raises the dead! Whether I live or die, I belong to Him and He is with me! There is my comfort; He is WITH ME and we face life together! But notice Paul also points out that:

c. His Presence is most often evident through His people God often comforts us, reveals His presence with us in our suffering through His people coming along side us. The answer to our desperate cry for His help is often answered through the presence of one of His children who enters into our situation alongside us, who "braves our misery together with us". Sister Alice was a Christian in China. Her husband was in prison. She was forced to push heavy wagons of construction rubble and shovel cement over her head for 80 cents a day to feed her six children and her mother-in-law. The day came when there was no more rice; they had already been without vegetables and meat for many days. That night she prayed in despair, "God, you promised to take care of me and now there is no more food!" Immediately she remembered what she had read that evening, "Look at the birds of the air; they do not sow or reap or store away in barns and yet your heavenly Father feeds them. Are you not much more valuable than they?" She was convicted and fell on her knees to ask forgiveness. She thanked Him for being her provider and fell asleep. The next morning at 5 minutes to 6 there was a knock at the door. There stood an elderly lady holding a big box who said, "Are you Sister Alice; I've had a hard time finding you." She set the box on the table and went quickly out without identifying herself. She simply said, "I have no name; just thank God for that box." Inside was a large bag of rice, some meat and vegetables and at the very bottom an envelope. And inside the envelope was the equivalent of 50 dollars, a fortune to a woman who makes 80 cents a day. Folks, that lady was God with her, God comforting her, facing her poverty with her, providing what she could not! And that is most often God's way: He walks through our hardships with us in the shoes of His people. But why, our questioning minds ask, does He allow them at all? And the answer is that:

IV. The Glory Of God Is Revealed In Our Sufferings (4-7) Comfort means:

1. we experience His fellowship in our sufferings Because we are with each other and share these deep experiences together, we experience our oneness with Him more deeply than at any other time. Paul said in Phil. 3:10, I want to know Christ and the power of his resurrection and the fellowship of sharing in his sufferings... He shares in mine; I share in His; our sufferings are one and the same because we are one and in that sharing is a deep communion only known by those who are co-sufferers together. And it is in the depths of our sufferings that:

2. we learn an absolute reliance upon Him (9-10) When you are squeezed past your limits, hurt beyond your endurance and helpless to do anything, all that is left is to cast yourself completely on His mercy, to count all on Him and nothing on you. And that's where you must get to, so that He may have His proper glory. You can't get there any other way. It's not an academic thing you learn. You learn to rely on God completely only at the end of your rope. Suffering breeds in us that whole new way of life, His life, life lived in His strength, not ours. And the icing on the cake is that:

3. we become His instruments to come alongside others in suffering He comes alongside us always so that we learn, not to soothe others and tell them everything will be all right, but to step into their lives and endure their pain, their heartache, and their loss together. We become His hands, His feet, His answer to their prayers in despair. We learn how to be a comforter.

*His name was Joseph Damien. A Belgian priest, he was sent in 1873 to minister to lepers in Hawaii. As soon as he arrived on Molokai, he began trying to build friendships with the residents of the leper colony, but they rejected him. He poured himself into this ministry, building a small chapel and holding worship services. But hardly anyone came. After 12 long years, he gave up. While standing on the pier about to board the ship that would take him back to Belgium, he looked down at his hands. The white spots he saw could mean only one thing. He had contracted leprosy. So instead of going home, he returned to his work in the leper colony. The news of the missionary's disease spread through the community within hours, and soon the lepers--hundreds of them--had gathered outside his hut. They understood his pain and despair. The following Sunday when Damien arrived at the chapel, the small building was filled to overflowing. That was the beginning of a long and fruitful ministry. What made the difference? Now the lepers knew that he understood their condition. There was no question about whether he cared or not. In the same way, we have a God who has identified with our situation. [Adapted from Moments for Pastors by Robert Strand. New Leaf Press, 1994. Day 11.] We have a God who braves all our suffering together with us and He proved it once and for all by becoming one of us and giving up His very life for us on the cross. It is out of that incarnation, that becoming one with us, that He comforts us, not just with these words, but by doing what they say, Lo, I am WITH YOU always, even unto the end of the age! And one who knows what it is to be comforted becomes a true instrument of comfort to others.*

The Suffering And The Glory - 2 Corinthians 1-7

Not Yes And No; Always Yes • 1:12-20; 23-2:4 • The Issue Of Faithfulness

We are continually getting mixed messages in life. David Egner writes that he got a letter from his credit card company saying, "Mr. Egner, you are one of our most valued customers. We would like to raise your buying power by $3,000. The next day, because he was late in sending a payment of $36.96, he got another letter from the same company. It made him feel like a terrible person. It seemed to be saying that if he didn't pay up immediately, they would take action against him, Which was he? A valued customer or a terrible person? Even more, how was he going to handle these mixed signals? On one hand, he was urged to go out and spend a lot more money. On the other, he felt threatened because he was late in making a payment. It's like the signals our society sends young people. In some ads, movies, and videos they're told to indulge themselves now - with sex or alcohol. Yet at other times they are warned about AIDS and drinking while driving. People send us mixed messages, one moment "yes" and one moment "no". They seem to say one thing and then do another or they tell us something is OK today but not tomorrow. They change their minds. There is a fickleness and a self-centeredness about us that pushes us to say and do whatever is in our own best interest, regardless of what we've said and done before. Much of the time we can handle this inconsistency in small things, but when we enter the arena of pain and suffering in life, when the chips are down, we begin to apply it to God and it becomes a deep problem, because it keeps us from seeing and focusing on the glory God is producing. Let's look together at an example of the problem in:

I. The Accusation Paul Faced from the Corinthians he was writing to. As Paul wrote he was concerned about the way they would respond to him because of:

1. the change in Paul's travel plans Now, before you scratch your head and say, "What's the big deal about that?", let me ask you this, "How do you feel about someone who promises you that they are coming to visit you on a certain day?" Because they're coming, you plan, take a day off of work and buy extra food. Then they call later and say, "Oh, I can't come; I've decided to visit my Aunt Sadie instead." So, you cancel all your plans and then they call back two days before the originally appointed day and say, "Oh, can I still come; my other trip didn't work out?" And now you've made other plans and you're wary of being disappointed again. Mixed messages; "yes and no". And what's the effect? Mixed messages ruin the person's credibility, right? Paul had made a similar change in his travel plans. Originally there was:

a. Plan A: Ephesus→Macedonia→Corinth→Judea (1 Cor. 16:5-8) He was at Ephesus and he planned to leave there, go across to Macedonia in the north and then south to Corinth before heading to Judea. However, things must have changed. Here we read:

b. Plan B: Ephesus→Corinth→Macedonia→Corinth→Judea (1:15-16) He now planned to sail straight across the sea to Corinth first, then go up north to Macedonia and come back, making it a double visit, spending more precious time with them, and then sail home to Jerusalem. Now, what you don't see here is that in between these two letters there is a:

c. the "missing" visit (2:1) Most scholars think that because of these words, Paul had made a brief trip across to Corinth sometime during his three years at Ephesus which is not recorded. It evidently was painful and did not go well and Paul went quickly home and wrote another letter which he mentions in (2:3-4), which is now lost to us but caused the Corinthians much grief. Now, ultimately what Paul did when he left Ephesus was this:

d. the final trip: Ephesus→Troas→Macedonia→Corinth (2:12-13) Back to plan A! And he wrote the letter we call 2 Corinthians enroute before he arrived! So now, the Corinthians had heard, Plan A, Plan B, the in-between "showing up and leaving" and now back to plan A. And Paul knew what they would be thinking; he knew what those who were against him would charge him with:

2. the charge against Paul: inconsistency (1:17) "He says one thing and does another. He talks out of both sides of his mouth. You can't count on him." You know the all the lines, but look closer. Considering Paul to be inconsistent meant:

a. he considered them of little importance He made his plans lightly. His promises weren't important to him and that meant that he didn't consider them important enough to make them a priority. In fact, it meant that:

b. he was self-centered, doing what he wanted no matter what he said He would tell them whatever was to his advantage at the moment. He was like a used car salesman. I know a politician who I regard that way; he says yes to whoever approaches him, even though it may contradict what he's said to others. Inconsistency is self-centered, self-serving. The person does whatever is to their own benefit at the moment. But that's not the real issue in itself. Here's:

II. The Fear Paul Had: He was afraid their view of him would be a reflection on his message and God's character (1:18-19) He was the one who had preached the Gospel to them and disciplined them. He had taught them the truth. He didn't want them to think that what he'd taught them was also inconsistent, that it was for today but not for tomorrow. And since he had proclaimed it as a message from God, He certainly didn't want them thinking that God was inconsistent, that His promises were "yes and no", that He was undependable and self-centered. Now, we wouldn't normally think that, except when we suffer! However, when we're in pain and stress and tension, our flesh rises up to accuse Him the same way. The Issue: God seems to be inconsistent - He does not do what He says. "He says He loves me but He's letting me suffer all this pain. He says He'll provide for me but he's letting me go hungry or lose this or that. He says He'll be with me but nothing is changing in my circumstances. His promises only work some of the time, not all of the time! Or He does them for others and not for me!" When we suffer, those thoughts come! God sent Moses down to Egypt with the promise, that He would deliver them out of bondage to Pharaoh. So, Moses obeyed and strode up to Pharaoh and said, "Let my people go!" Whereupon he was laughed out of the court, the people were forced to make bricks without straw and they turned against Moses and said, "May the Lord judge you for what you've done to us!" And Moses went right to God to say, O Lord, why have you brought trouble upon this people? Is this why you sent me? Ever since I went to Pharaoh to speak in your name, he has brought trouble upon this people, and you have not rescued your people at all. - Ex. 5:22. "Lord, You didn't do what you said!" I wonder how many a missionary has gone around the world at God's direction, trusting His promise, only to get there and find that his kids get sick and his health deteriorates and some of his supporters drop him and the very people he's going to don't respond to him. And in his heart, he finds himself pondering, "Is this why You sent me? Lord, you didn't do what you said!" I wonder how many a pastor has excitedly gone off to his new congregation, only to have a negative experience of suffering and has ended up with the same questions in his heart? And I wonder how many a believer has found himself facing terminal illness or being left by a spouse in a messy divorce or caring endlessly for an autistic child and saying in his heart, "God, I did what you said; Why am I here? You didn't do what you said!" Larry Christenson writes: "When I was four or five years old, I used to climb up on my dad's lap and ask him to read me the funny papers. If he didn't have time, I'd badger my older brother into doing it. 'I'll be glad when you get into school,' my brother would sigh. 'Then you can read the funnies yourself.' That became the goal of my five-year-old life: When I got into school, I'd be able to read the funnies by myself! When my first day of school finally arrived, I was all dressed and ready--sitting out on the front steps at 5:30 in the morning. At last, the hour came, and I trooped off to school. Our class went through the routine of the first day, having seats assigned and getting acquainted. At the sound of the bell, I rushed home, came tearing into the house, threw open the evening paper, and flopped down to look at the funnies. And then I burst out crying. I couldn't read! My hopes were so fixed on the promise that I had failed to grasp the process by which that promise would come into fulfillment. It was perfectly true as my brother had said that when I went to school, I could read the fun- nies, but there was a process, a time gap, during which I would move into the fulfillment of that promise." [The Renewed Mind by Larry Christenson. Bethany, 1974. Pages 76-77.] Oh, it sounds so simplistic, but that's exactly what we do. We count on the promise to be fulfilled in the way we expect at the moment, in a way we recognize instantly and when it doesn't happen that way, we blame God for being inconsistent. But the truth is that in our limited human understanding we fail to see the process by which the promise is coming to fruition. So, how do we fix this about ourselves? There is only one place to begin and that is exactly where Paul goes. We must be absolutely convinced of:

III. The Faithfulness Of Our God (1:18-20) Did you hear it? God is faithful! Three times in his two letters to the Corinthians Paul repeated it so they'd get it: GOD IS FAITHFUL! He who called you into fellowship with His Son is faithful. When you are tempted God is faithful and will make a way of escape. And when the circumstances are screaming at you that God is inconsistent, God is still faithful. He does not say yes and no, but always YES! He can't help it:

1. He is faithful by very nature He can't change it any more than I can change the fact that I am a human being who is mortal. It's my nature to die. It's His nature to be faithful. Look with me at 2 Tim. 2:13. To be unfaithful He'd have to act in a way that He's incapable of acting! He would deny Himself! And Hebrews tells us that Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever! James says that with Him there is no variableness or shadow of turning. He's consistent. You can count on Him. If He says it, He'll do it! He is true and trustworthy, even though every man is a liar!

2. He consistently cares for us He demonstrated it once for all in the sacrifice of His Son on the cross. He cannot love us one moment and not love us the next. He can't be touched by our infirmities one time and not feel them the next. His attitude toward us as His children is always one of consistent care and love and look what it says in verse 20:

3. ALL His promises are true, no matter how many of them there are! And there are thousands of them in His Word. He will do what He says; He's trustworthy. We can count on Him, that He will carry out His plans and fulfill His pledges toward us. And here's what we should do:

4. our response is to affirm Him through our "Amen" "So be it!" "Lord, you said it; you're faithful; it is true and so be it; Amen, You will do it! hether I see it or not, whether I understand it or not, whether it's the way I'd like it or not, Hallelujah!" His promises are bound up in His person. In Jesus He has given us His person to indwell us for all time. And in Him we already have the fulfillment of it all. But Paul did not say only that:

IV. The Explanation Paul Gave for what appeared to be his inconsistency (1:12-14) He says, "You only understand part of the story, the part you can see. I hope you'll come to understand the whole thing." Why did Paul change his plans so often? Well, notice something important:

1. his motives were consistent They never changed for one moment. First of all:

a. they were holy: pure and not to harm them He never intended to hurt them, to disappoint them, to distress them or to deny them anything. His heart never held any evil intention toward them. And:

b. they were sincere: honest and not to deceive them They would stand the examination of the sunlight of God's presence. In verse 23 he calls God as the witness to his motives. He never had any intent to deceive them, to say one thing and do another in a deceptive way. He never thought of what he was telling them as anything but truth. He was consistent in loving them, caring for them and wanting the best for them and:

2. his consistent motives produced his change in plans (1:23-2:4) Here is a rough translation of what he said, "Here's why I changed my plans. When I had the opportunity to come to you and I came and found it so painful instead of joyous as I had expected, I went home and prayed and made a decision in my heart. I wouldn't go back again as I had said and make another painful visit, but would write you a letter instead. I didn't want to Lord it over you by my presence and grieve you. I wrote you and put off coming so that there would be time for God to work and so that things would be cleared up and that when I did arrive it would be a time of joy and not reprimand. So, I wrote you with a broken heart and in tears so that you would understand the depth of my love for you instead of coming to you. And then (in verse 12) I set out to find Titus because I was worried about him, and then God opened a door of ministry at Troas, but I still needed to find him and moved on to Macedonia to head down to you eventually. But the point is that I never once stopped loving you and caring for you, even though I didn't carry out my promise in the exact manner I had intended. I did what was best for you!" Oh, can you put God's name on that paragraph? "My child, I didn't do what you expected me to do, but I did what in my wisdom I knew was best for you at that moment! I wasn't inconsistent; I was faithful; I never stopped loving you!" You see:

3. God's motives never change; His methods and circumstances vary One time He let Moses fail, but in the end, He made him succeed after a long and bone-weary process of plagues and confrontations. At times He led Israel to victory, but at others He routed her before her enemies when that was what she needed to turn her from her idolatry. The Spirit led Jesus into the wilderness to be tempted, as well as to the mountaintop to hear the voice of the Father. And at the bottom line, God's will sent Him to a cross before He could wear the crown. His methods and the circumstances which He sends may vary, but He is faithful. His love for us never changes and His promises are always fulfilled in the end in His way. Listen to the writer of Hebrews in the Living Bible, Well, how much more do I need to say? It would take too long to recount the stories of the faith of Gideon and Barak and Samson and Jephthah and David and Samuel and all the other prophets. These people all trusted God and as a result won battles, overthrew kingdoms, ruled their people well, and received what God had promised them; they were kept from harm in a den of lions and in a fiery furnace. Some, through their faith, escaped death by the sword. Some were made strong again after they had been weak or sick. Others were given great power in battle; they made whole armies turn and run away. And some women, through faith, received their loved ones back again from death. But others trusted God and were beaten to death, preferring to die rather than turn from God and be free--trusting that they would rise to a better life afterwards. Some were laughed at and their backs cut open with whips, and others were chained in dungeons. Some died by stoning and some by being sawed in two; others were promised freedom if they would renounce their faith, then were killed with the sword. Some went about in skins of sheep and goats, wandering over deserts and mountains, hiding in dens and caves. They were hungry and sick and ill-treated--too good for this world. And these men of faith, though they trusted God and won his approval, none of them received all that God had promised them; for God wanted them to wait and share the even better rewards that were prepared for us. - Heb. 11:32 (TLB).

You cry out, "But I want to at least understand the process!" And He says, "You can't and you don't have to. I've given you My nature and My promise! I am faithful; I will do what I've said. Leave the process to Me and trust My faithfulness!" "At a young people's meeting a fresh-out-of-seminary youth pastor attempted to impress his group with the wonder of the divine inspiration of Scripture. He gathered the teens in a circle, put a chair in the middle, and handed out Bible verses to everyone in the circle. The idea was to blindfold someone sitting in the middle chair, have them tell the group some problem they were experiencing, and then have someone in the group read an applicable Bible verse as though God Himself were answering through the words of Scripture. The whole thing went miserably. The kids thought the whole idea was dumb. No one would talk about a problem more significant than how to get an A on Mrs. Bailey's math quizzes. Giggles rather than the voice of God predominated. Then a new girl who had been sitting on the periphery volunteered to sit in the middle chair. The giggling subsided a bit as they blindfolded her because no one knew her well enough to know how she would take it. Then she spoke: 'I don't know if I want to keep on with my life. I just can't stand it anymore.' Everything dropped to a dead silence. No one knew what to say or do and most just looked down in embarrassment of confusion. Then one boy read his verse, 'I am faithful; I will not let you be tempted beyond what you can bear. But when you are tempted, I will also provide a way out so that you can stand up under it.' 'No one cares about me,' said the girl. Then another girl in the circle read, 'I have loved you with an everlasting love and drawn you with lovingkindness.' 'You don't understand,' said the girl in the blindfold with a voice now desperate. 'My mother kicked me out of the house today!' Someone said, 'But Jesus says, "I will never leave you nor forsake you."'"That was all. They took the blindfold off the girl, and through her tears she asked, 'Why doesn't God really talk to me just that way?' The youth pastor placed a Bible in her hands, put his arm around her shoulder, and tenderly said to her and to the whole group: 'The great thing about God's Word being inspired is knowing that He is talking to you just that way. God doesn't write in the clouds of the sky that blow away or speak in the night where only prophets can hear. He put His words right here in your hands where you can always read them and know that He is talking to you just that way.' [Using Illustrations to Preach with Power by Bryan Chapell. Zondervan, 1992. Pages 123-124.] Friends, this book is God talking to you when you're suffering. The words it is saying are true. They are not "yes and no" but always "Yes!" He loves you and He is faithful. He will do what He says. Trust Him and walk through it together with Him.

The Suffering And The Glory - 2 Corinthians 1-7

The Guarantee Of What Is To Come • 1:21-22 • The Issue Of Assurance

How many times in life have you heard it repeated that "there are no guarantees!"? Nothing in life is guaranteed, the old cliché says, except death and taxes. And suffering is the thing that pounds that lesson home painfully. The doctor comes with the bad news that there is cancer and an operation is needed. You ask whether you will be cured. And he says, "The chances are good, but you know, of course, that we can't make any guarantees." Your plant closes down and you lose your job and you have to begin looking again for the first time after many years. You become worried about how you're going to pay your bills. You figure there has to be something out there, but you're bothered by the fact that there is no guarantee. And we, for the most part, have it easy! For billions of people in this world, there is no guarantee that they will have food to eat tomorrow. When they get sick, even with things we consider routine, they have no guarantee that they will get well because there are no doctors and no medicines. And when they consider becoming a follower of Jesus Christ, they may face opposition and persecution; they may be thrown out of their home, rejected by their family, fired from their job or even jailed by the authorities! They have no guarantee that they will even survive! Even Paul talked about:

I. The Fears That Come Our Way When We Suffer - 7:5 Remember his travel plans from our last message? He had left Ephesus, gone through Asia Minor and swung up and over into Macedonia (northern Greece), which is where he wrote this letter from. He said, "I have had no rest, no peace, no calm. I was pressured, pressed, squeezed by the circumstances at every turn. All around me there are troubles that push at me." Life is like that. There are very few stretches of relaxation and rest. Suffering often comes relentlessly. But note what happens. There were conflicts on the outside, battles, quarrels, struggles that he faced, with people, with false teachers, with wrong beliefs and responses. But these outside sufferings produced what? Fears on the inside! Now, Paul didn't elaborate on specifically what those fears were, but if you look closely at the sufferings you and others you love have endured, it doesn't take long to figure out that the bottom line is:

1. the fear of our own destiny: what is ultimately going to happen to me? Suffering breeds doubts that threaten us at the point of our deepest need, the need for security. At the core of my being, I need to know that I am safe. Name all the sufferings you like, from disease to financial crisis to divorce to crippling handicap to old age to persecution; they all create fears inside that boil down to this, "What is going to happen to me? Am I safe? Will I survive and be all right? And even if I don't survive physically, will I ultimately be OK? Will I be safe? Will I be secure?" And wrapped up with that is:

2. the fear of our own apostasy: OK, so I settle the issue of God's presence; I'm convinced that He's there, that He's with me and I believe that He's faithful, He won't fail to keep his promises, but what about me? What if I fail to remain true to Him? "I don't know how much I can take. What if the pressure gets to me and I do like Job's wife said to do and I blame and curse God or give in and do things He doesn't approve of? What if I fall into sin; what if the temptation is too great and I fall? Will I still be OK?" You see:

The Issue: Assurance and Security; I need to be sure I'm secure Security means I am safe and assurance means I know I'm safe. I need a continual assurance that I'm secure in order to function, and if I don't have it, I spend a whole lot of time and effort being afraid, worrying about it. It gnaws at me on the inside, so instead of having the peace of God which passes understanding like I'm supposed to have, I am frantic with worry and anxiety, doing everything I can to protect myself, or else I'm in depression and despair because I've given up. Maybe some of what I've described hits home. Maybe you know what it feels like to doubt and to fear, to lack assurance, but I have good news for you: WE DO HAVE a guarantee which Paul spelled out back in chapter 1:

II. God Has Guaranteed That We Will Stand Firm - 1:21-22 Did you hear that? There is a guarantee in life for the believer, one that supersedes any circumstance, one that is greater than any pressure, any suffering we face. We will stand firm in Christ! We will be safe in Him. We have a sure foundation that is rock solid and secure that cannot be shaken by wind or waves or people or circumstances or even by death itself. The moment we were saved we were placed IN Christ. Our destiny was fixed forever. We're in Him and what happens to Him happens to us; where He is, we are! We are secure in Him. Now, notice two facts:

1. our security depends on God not on ourselves We don't guarantee anything. We don't make ourselves secure. We don't make ourselves stand firm. Our security depends on God, not on us, not on our behavior, not on our performance, not on our endurance, not on our toughing it out, but on Him! Look at Phil. 1:6. Now, I know that specifically the "you" in this promise is the whole Philippian Church, but the same principle and promise is true of each of us individually as believers. God began the good work in you. God saved you. God called you to Himself. And He will be faithful to carry it on to its completion on that day when Jesus Christ returns. You say, "But what if I mess up; what if I foul up; what if I fall; what if I fail; what if I crack under the pressure?!" It doesn't depend on you. You are God's work. He started you and He's going to finish you. That's where your security lies: God always finishes what He starts. You're His project and He's going to finish you! Now, notice a second thing; the word order in the original of this verse is backwards from the NIV. Instead of saying, "It is God who makes you stand", it says, "He who makes you stand is God!" It emphasizes that:

2. the One who has given us that security is God If I promise you security and your security depends on me, you're in big trouble! But the One who's made you this promise that you are secure is Almighty God. He's the God who hung the stars in space, who set the world in place, who created all things by the word of His power. He's the God who brought the children of Israel out of slavery in Egypt, who parted the Red Sea and rolled the waters of Jordan back in a heap so that His children crossed on dry ground. He's the God and Father of the Lord Jesus Christ who healed the sick, made the lame to walk, the blind to see and who raised Him from the dead and set Him at His right hand and who one day will send Him back to reign over this world forever and ever. A guarantee means nothing unless the guarantor has the power and the resources to back it up. We have a broken computer part and I've been trying to call for service under the guarantee for a week and can't get through. They don't have enough people and phone lines to support their guarantee. But the One who gave you your personal guarantee has the wherewithal to back it up; He is Almighty God! Hallelujah! But Paul doesn't stop there. He explains to us in these two verses exactly:

III. How God Has Assured Our Security When I buy something, it usually comes with a guarantee in writing. The guarantee is a piece of paper. God's written promise in His Word would be wonderful enough, but He has gone far beyond that. He has done it by a concrete irrevocable action that secured my destiny forever. The moment I believe, God places the Holy Spirit inside my body. He who is Almighty God enters my Spirit and is joined to it, so that He and I become one in the same fashion that the Father and the Son are one, the Scripture says. Now here Paul describes the effect of that glorious act using three metaphors, three meaning-filled words that spell out the assurance that gives us.

1. He anointed us: We don't use the word anoint much. It's a bit of a foreign concept to us. Very simply:

a. to anoint is to apply a substance: to dab or smear a substance on the body. In that culture usually it was oil of some sort. This was common for cosmetic, medicinal and special purposes. It was to put a lotion, a substance, on the body. God did that very thing; when I was saved, He anointed me. He put something on me: He placed the Holy Spirit in me, so the Holy Spirit is our anointing. Look with me at 1 John 2:20, 27. We received the very Spirit of God to indwell us, to teach us all things, to verify all things for us. His presence in us is real and not counterfeit. It is permanent and it abides. He is given to us when we believe and He stays in us all the way to glory! God guarantees our security by actually uniting His Person with us. Now, there's more meaning here:

b. to anoint signifies consecration: In the Old Testament people were anointed with oil as a special sign that they were consecrated and set apart to God. Saul was anointed as king and so was David. It was a sign that they were God's chosen for that office. Aaron and all who succeeded him were anointed as priests. It was a sign that God had chosen them and set them apart for that special work. So, God has also anointed me with His Spirit. Why? As a sign that I am chosen and set apart from all the people on earth to belong to Him. Jesus Himself quoted Is. 61:1, The Spirit of the Sovereign LORD is on me, because the LORD has anointed me to preach good news to the poor... The Spirit came upon Jesus and dwelt in Him as the sign that He was the Messiah, the Anointed One, the Chosen One. And the Spirit of God is in you for the very same reason. You are His chosen one. It means He has set you apart for Himself by placing the Spirit in you. But there is a second thing Paul mentions:

2. He sealed us: Now, using a seal is another thing that we're not very familiar with. A seal is a die that can be inked or pressed to leave a special identifying mark. Every corporation has a corporate seal. Glenside Bible Church has one to seal its official documents. I'll show you one. I want everyone who has a dollar bill in their wallet to take it out right now. A $5 or $10 won't work; you can just put them in the offering! Get a $1 bill and look on the back right now. There is a picture of both sides of the Great Seal of the United States. It was adopted in 1776. On the front of the seal is an American eagle, shown with wings spread. On its breast the eagle bears a shield having 13 narrow vertical stripes, 7 white alternating with 6 red, which are surmounted by a broad horizontal stripe of blue. The eagle holds an olive branch in its right talon, a cluster of 13 arrows in its left, and in its beak a scroll on which appears the Latin motto E pluribus unum ("From many, one"). A cluster of 13 five-pointed stars, surrounded by a glory, appears above the eagle. A pyramid, truncated near the top, is the central figure of the reverse side. The base of the pyramid is inscribed with the date 1776 in Roman numerals: MDCCLXXVI. At the zenith of the pyramid, within a triangle surrounded by a glory, appears the all-seeing eye of Divine Providence. Above the eye is inscribed the motto Annuit coeptis ("He has smiled on our undertakings"). Below the pyramid is a scroll bearing the motto Novus ordo seclorum ("New order of the ages"). Any document bearing that seal is guaranteed by the full promise of the government of the United States. In like manner, Paul says Almighty God put His seal on us! Eph. 1:13 says the Holy Spirit is our seal Now, what does a seal do?

a. a seal declares ownership: It confirms identity. Whatever my seal is on belongs to me. It's mine. God sealed us by putting His Spirit in us and what's He saying? This one belongs to Me. This one is Mine! But it does more:

b. a seal certifies authenticity: Any document with a seal is considered genuine and authentic. If you want to prove the genuineness of your plain signature, you take it to a notary public who puts their seal on it and the seal certifies that it is authentic and genuine. The Spirit's presence inside me certifies that I am the real deal, that I am the genuine article. It is God saying, This one is genuinely Mine and:

c. a seal binds commitment: We put our seal on contracts and agreements to bind our commitment, to obligate ourselves to keep the promise we make. When something has been sealed, it must be kept. And by placing His Spirit in us, God is saying I will keep My Promise concerning this one - Eph. 4:30. Your sealing was done for the purpose of certifying and guaranteeing your future. It doesn't say until but unto. God put His Spirit in you to guarantee your safe arrival all the way through to the Day of Redemption when Jesus comes! It's a binding commitment that says, "When the Day of Redemption comes, you'll be a part of it. I guarantee it by the presence of my own Person in you!"

Now in case you're not already assured enough, Paul uses one last metaphor. He says God:

3. He guaranteed us: using a means we can all understand. He gave us a deposit or a down payment. You understand that, don't you?

a. a deposit or down payment is a guarantee When you buy something large, you certify your intention to fully purchase it by placing a deposit, a down payment, on it. Every year we rent a place for a week of vacation outside of Ocean City MD. I have to guarantee to the owner that I will keep my word and pay the bill by sending them a hefty deposit. And the first rule of a deposit is that it has to be significant, large enough to matter to the buyer, an amount he would truly value losing, in order for it to work. A large deposit is a sure guarantee of intent. So, look at Eph. 1:14. The Holy Spirit is our guarantee. He is our deposit, our down payment. God has promised us an eternal inheritance of safety, security and life in His presence, and He has placed the Spirit in us right now as the guarantee that He will complete the transaction:

b. His presence now guarantees we will receive all He has promised He is the guarantee of everything that is to come. He is the guarantee of our safety, our security. He is our assurance that all will be well in the end, that we don't need to be afraid of those who kill the body, that nothing can take us out of the Father's hand, that nothing in all creation can get between us. He is what makes us SURE that we are SECURE.

And when we get hold of that, when we understand and have that assurance, it sets us free! Free from the fears that suffering drives into our minds! We end up where Paul was. Look with me at Rom. 8:28-39. Nothing can separate us. We are predestined to glory; it's already done. The Holy Spirit in us guarantees what is to come. Whether we fail or falter or perform correctly doesn't change it. It's only our feelings that get in the way. Irma Levesque tells this story: "I grew up in rural New Hampshire, the eldest daughter in a family of six children. In our chaotic household I found refuge in make-believe, often pretending that I was a beautiful girl named 'Joan Bishop' (Joan from Joan of Arc and Bishop from the English translation of my French last name). I never told anyone else about Joan Bishop. It was a secret between God and me. Little girls grow up, though, and the day came when I bade good-bye to Joan Bishop...and to God. I moved to New York, got caught up in a fiercely competitive line of work, and gradually found my personal life getting lonelier and lonelier. In time I knew I wanted to return to God, but I hesitated. Would He welcome me back? One Sunday morning I could not stay away any longer. I went to a nearby church. I walked down the north aisle, past the old pews, each with its own waist-high door and tiny brass nameplates, relics from the 19th century when parishioners purchased their seats. I chose an empty pew and closed the door behind me. 'Please, God,' I began to pray, 'I'm lonely and afraid. Are You here? Is this the place for me? Will these people all around take me in?' I wanted God's assurance that I should stay in that church, but no assurance seemed to come. Suddenly I felt an overpowering urge to leave. Hastily gathering up my coat and scarf, I opened the pew door and stepped into the aisle. As I turned to shut the old door, my eyes were drawn to its tiny brass nameplate. The plate read: J. BISHOP. I returned to my seat. I was home again." [His Mysterious Ways. Fleming H. Revell, 1988. Pages 72-74.] Oh, my believing friend, you need never fear that He won't want you, that He'll reject you, that somehow some circumstance of life will get between you. His promise to you never changes. His Spirit is in you and will accomplish your arrival at the day of redemption. It's guaranteed.

The Suffering And The Glory - 2 Corinthians 1-7

The Aroma Of Christ • 2:12-17 • The Issue Of Observation

Don't you wish that life was smooth? Have you noticed how in life today can be wonderful and you feel like you're on top of the world, but tomorrow at the drop of a hat something happens and you're suffering and in pain? Wouldn't it be nice if once you know the Lord, that because you're praying about everything and being obedient, the majority of your problems would get ironed out so that you go smoothly around with gentle ups and downs like riding a merry-go-round at the amusement park? But the truth is that life is often much more like a roller-coaster, particularly the way they build them now days with twists and turns and upside down loops. Sometimes it's even like the "Tower of Terror" where the whole bottom drops out and you're free-falling and think you're going to die! The reality is that:

I. We Experience Many Ups And Downs In The Path Of Our Life You can even see it in the life of Paul, though we tend to view him as living on this high constant plane. He was constantly plummeted to the depths of suffering that were very, very difficult to endure and then lifted to moments of great joy. For instance:

1. Paul was downcast by Titus' absence and other problems (12-13) He left Ephesus after the danger of a riot. He went to Troas and had some opportunity to share the Gospel, but he was anxious and worried about Titus whom he'd sent to Corinth and hadn't come back. He went on into Macedonia and when he got there, look at (7:5). He had all kinds of problems. There were arguments and disputes and conflicts. It was not smooth and Titus still didn't show up right away. Paul was downcast or depressed by it. He was really low. But then later:

2. Paul was uplifted by Titus' coming and the news he brought (7:6-7) God let Titus show up just at his lowest point and he was filled with joy and encouragement, not just that Titus was alright but that the Corinthians were doing well and that they loved Paul and longed to see him and that they were sorry for the sin they'd allowed to creep into their fellowship. How he rejoiced! God graciously gives us ups! But I want you to notice in 2:13 that he hasn't gotten to the up yet. He's still describing the downs, his concerns, his lack of peace of mind, his low. Then, all of a sudden, he bursts out in 2:14 But thanks be to God! Why? Not that there's always a high coming, but that even in the lows, like he was in in Macedonia, God is always leading us in a triumphal procession!

Now what's the issue here? Paul is thinking about the people reading his letter and listening to him and watching him. He doesn't want to give a false impression, that the highs are wins and the lows are losses, that the highs are God at work and the lows are Satan at work, that the highs are victories and the lows are defeats. Think for a minute about:

The Issue: Observation Yes, you may know that the God of all comfort is with you in your suffering; you may know that His promises are not yes and no, but always yes in Christ Jesus and He does not fail to keep them in His time; you may have full assurance that no matter what happens on the outside, you have a guarantee of what is to come that cannot be shaken. But others don't! The people out there watching your life don't have any of that. What will they think as they see us go through our highs and lows, rejoicing and being depressed? Will they blame God for failing us when we're down? Or will they blame us for not being faithful to Him? Will our suffering undermine the very message we share? Will others be repulsed as they see us in suffering? And worse yet, there is a danger that I may somehow begin to see my life in the same way. It is so easy for my mind to begin to say that the downs are either God's failures or my fault; at any rate they are the times when the enemy is winning! They are losses, times that shouldn't be there if I'm faithful and obedient. But I want you to look at what God says!

II. God Says Our Life Is A Continual Victory Parade (14) There are two cultural terms that Paul uses in this verse and the next that are key to understanding but are not familiar to us. First, he says that:

1. the path of our life is a triumphal procession led by God The word triumph doesn't just mean to win. A triumph is an actual event. When a Roman general had been victorious in battle and defeated his enemies, he would go to the city of Rome and stage there a great parade called a triumph. He would parade his victorious army through the streets in front of the whole population. The general would be at the head of the parade and then would come the soldiers dressed in their finest array. And behind them would come a long train of captives, prisoners taken in the war and the spoils he had claimed. And by the time the parade passed by, everybody knew who had been victorious. Now, what Paul's saying is that our entire life is like one long victory parade that He has designed to be observed by a watching world. In what sense? Well, Paul uses parts of this same analogy three other times. First:

a. it is a public display of God's victorious power - Col. 2:15 A triumph is a public display; it is meant to be seen openly. The cross was like a triumph in that Jesus openly and publicly made a spectacle of the fact that He had far greater power and authority than the Jews, the Romans, the demons and Satan himself by rising from the dead! Our entire life is one continuous display of God's victorious power in our ups and in our downs. In us He displays marvelous answers to prayer as well as incredible patience in suffering. In us He displays His power to move the mountains of life and His grace to endure the deserts. Wherever He leads us in the parade, He is always displaying His power and life through us in any and every situation. Now this triumph:

b. it is actually a parade headed up to glory - Eph. 4:8 When the general returned home, the captives in his train were swept along behind him and the image is that they became his slaves, his servants, destined to be taken from their native land and to follow him to his. In this verse it's a positive thing. We're in a parade that our victorious Lord Jesus is leading up to glory. He's already arrived and we're still being swept along in His train. But:

c. sometimes it seems like a parade headed for the arena - 1 Cor. 4:9 The prisoners at the end of the parade, were often taken by the conqueror to be made a spectacle of for public enjoyment in the Colosseum where they would be forced to fight one another to death or be devoured by wild beasts. At any rate, the last were condemned to suffer and die. And Paul said, "Sometimes it seems like I'm at the end of the parade, like I'm one of those that's doomed to suffer and die. The difficulties and persecutions and losses I face overwhelm me and my fate seems sealed, but I'm still in the procession that He's leading up to glory."

Then there's a second analogy that Paul uses here in verse 15. He says:

2. our life is the sweet aroma of Christ (15) There's part of the triumphal procession I didn't tell you about. Along the sides of the parade would come bearers with sweet-smelling garlands of flowers and fragrant incense burning. The whole crowd could literally smell the parade as the aroma drifted through it. An atheist once said to a Quaker, "Have you ever seen God? Have you ever touched God? Have you ever smelled God? And you say you have a God!" After a long pause, the Quaker replied, "Hast thou ever seen thy brains? Hast thou ever touched thy brains? Hast thou ever smelled thy brains? And thou sayest thou hast brains!" You can't see God; you can't touch God, not yet anyway. But you CAN SMELL God! You can see the effect of His presence visibly at work in the lives of His people!

a. to people our life is attractive evidence of His presence without seeing They smell Him in the way we endure suffering, in the way we handle problems, in the way we forgive instead of retaliating, in the way we love our enemies instead of hating them, in the way we patiently endure instead of complaining and blaming, in the way we choose others instead of ourselves. They sense His presence at work in us and it smells good. It is a sweet aroma and it is attractive and pleasant to them. But not only to them. The incense the bearers were offering was not simply a sweet smell to the public, but also an act of worship. It was the presentation of a sweet smell to their pagan god Bacchus, the god who had given them victory. Similarly, Paul says that our life is an aroma of Christ to God.

b. to God our life is a pleasant and satisfying surrender of self. Rom. 12:1 encourages us to present our bodies to Him for His use as we pass through this world as our spiritual act of worship. We read that:

(1) Christ's sacrifice was a sweet-smelling offering - Eph. 5:2, ...Christ loved us and gave himself up for us as a fragrant offering and sacrifice to God. Christ's act of offering Himself on the cross was pleasing and satisfying to God as an act of worship and complete devotion to Him, because it accomplished His will. Likewise, we read that:

(2) the Philippians' gift was a sweet-smelling sacrifice - Phil. 4:18, I have received from Epaphroditus the gifts you sent. They are a fragrant offering, an acceptable sacrifice, pleasing to God. When we give, it is evidence of Christ's presence at work in us and He is pleased with it as an act of our devotion and worship.

As we present our bodies to Him in times when we suffer and yield to His will and live out of His strength, it is an act of worship, pleasing and acceptable to Him at the same time that it is a sweet smell to the world around us. Now, just to make sure you get the picture, here's:

3. how the process works

a. God parades us on display before a watching world Everybody we pass by, the people at work, at school, on our street, at church, at the store, wherever they are. The people we play sports or coach with, the kids on our team, the neighborhood kids that play on the lot. God is parading us in front of them all in situation after situation as a display of Himself and:

b. the display is continual: Note the two universal words, always and everywhere. He leads us through the ups and the downs, the suffering and the rejoicing times of life, everywhere we go, through all kinds of experiences. The song says, Through shady green pastures so rich and so clean, some through the water, some through the flood, some through the fire, but all through the blood. Some through great trial but God gives a song, in the night season and all the day long. Continually, everywhere we go:

c. God spreads through our words and deeds the aroma of Himself They smell His presence in the way we live, the words we say and the way we react. Here's a simple illustration. Pastor Billy Strayhorn tells about an experience he had several years ago: "I was standing in line at the grocery store. In front of me was a boy about eight or nine years old. He was looking over the display of candy bars. I remember thinking 'Good choice!' when he picked a big old Baby Ruth and laid it on the counter. The cashier rang it up and told him how much it was. The boy reached in his pocket and pulled out a bunch of pennies, nickels, and a single dime and plopped them on the counter. The cashier gave him one of those looks and started counting. Then he looked up and said, 'You're 12 cents short. You need another 12 cents.' The boy's shoulders drooped, his face dropped, and he went from grin to groan in less than a second. Just as the cashier started to tell the boy to put the candy bar back, I reached in my pocket and put 12 cents on the counter. The boy's face lit up like Christmas. He said, 'Thanks, mister.' And he took off, but then he turned around and came back. He held up the candy bar and asked, 'Hey, mister, you wanna bite?' I said, 'No thanks, you eat it.' Then he looked at me real careful, like he was studying me, and asked, 'How come? How come you did that?' Before I could answer, he got a look of recognition on his face. 'Oh, I know you, you're that preacher. Jesus made you do it, didn't He?' What could I say but, 'Yes, He did.' Then he said, 'I sure like Jesus, and I'm glad Jesus makes nice people like you. Bye.' Then he was gone. I don't know who touched whom more. I DO know that I've never gotten that much pleasure out 12 cents before or since. I didn't do anything special, but with God's love and 12 cents I was able to touch a little boy's life and bring glory to God simply by obeying Christ's command to love our neighbors as ourselves." [Parables, Etc. Dec 1995. Page 1.] Sooner or later people figure it out, even kids, "Jesus made you do it, didn't He?" Jesus is what makes you act like that. Jesus is what makes you live that way! We are the aroma of Christ to them. He spreads the fragrance of the knowledge of Himself through us! But:

d. He spreads it to two different kinds of people (15b) Some of those watching the parade are in the process of being saved. God is in the process of drawing them to Christ and your passing by and exuding His aroma to them is part of that process. But others are in the process of perishing. They are rejecters who are busy swishing away the smell every time it comes near. Now, that brings us to talk about:

III. The Seriousness Of Our Responsibility (16-17) You see, as we've said:

1. God produces through us a reaction to Himself by others When they see us and sense Him, they react:

a. to some it is a sweet smell which leads to life They smell the life that is in Jesus Christ and they want it. They want to know the God we know, to find the peace we've found, to experience the comfort we've experienced in Him. The knowledge of Him through us in all our ups and downs is leading them to life. But at the same time:

b. to others it is the repugnant odor of impending death The captive prisoners at the end of the parade smelled the same sweet smell but to them it was a reminder that they were headed for death in the arena, that their doom was sealed. Men hate the light because their deeds are evil and they want to hang on to them; men hate the smell, the aroma of Christ, because their deeds are evil and they like it and they don't want to know Him. The same smell; two vastly different reactions. But the point is that:

2. God carries the responsibility, not us You see, we're in a procession:

a. we are people sent and led by God He leads the parade. He chooses the circumstances, the ups and downs, sufferings and glory, so that He can parade us before others in all kinds of situations and spread the aroma of Himself through us in all kinds of ways. The responsibility seems enormous; it is life and death. But we are not responsible for the way people react to it. Rather:

b. our chief responsibility is sincerity The New Testament in Modern English translates: For such service as this, who is sufficient? I am, for I am not like most, trafficking in the Word of God, but rather from a sincere heart, like a man of God, I speak in Christ, in the very presence of God. God does not ask you to change people. He doesn't hold you responsible for creating in them the right reaction. All He asks of you is sincerity, that you surrender to Him and be a genuine display, that you show them what He is really like, not some false fake impression.

Lou Soiles writes: "Jesus was sent to express the Father's love. Our Father loves the world with a wild, flaming passion, a passion full of tears and full of tenderness. God holds that passion for you--and also for the people around you. You are sent to display that passion, to express the Father's love to people you meet. Recently I was leading a Bible study with several students on the parable of the prodigal son in Luke 15. We were talking about the unquenchable love the father in the story had for his children when I noticed out of the corner of my eye that one of the students was beginning to cry. 'What's wrong, Chris?' I asked. She began to tell her story. When she was five her parents got divorced. Her father was there one day and gone the next--and until recently she didn't know where. For the last 15 years she had been trying to find her father and get to know him. She had written to him and called him, trying desperately to be his daughter. No response. He doesn't want to be her father. By the time Chris finished her story everyone was crying. Then Tom began to tell his story. He grew up in a high-achieving, workaholic family, and every day, even as a child, he would come home to an empty house. 'Sometimes,' he said, 'I would feel so lonely that I would put on my father's robe just so I could smell him.' One after another, each student told his or her story. A 90-minute Bible study stretched into several hours--hours of tears and pain, of comfort and support, of friendship and fellowship, and finally of relief and hope. That night we saw the Father's love." [Student Leadership Journal, Fall 1995. Page 32.] Out there are people longing with tears to find the Father. Out there are people longing to quench the empty void inside them by simply smelling the aroma of His presence. They can smell Him in you. They can find Him through watching your life. Don't worry about the reaction of the rest. You are the aroma of Christ. Be sincere and real, genuine, no matter what you go through and they'll smell Him.

The Suffering And The Glory - 2 Corinthians 1-7

Tablets Of Human Hearts • 3:1-6 • The Issue Of Confidence

Today we continue our series about suffering in 2 Corinthians, but before we can move forward to our text in chapter 3, we have to take a few moments to review what we studied at the end of chapter 2. There we learned that:

I. We Are The Aroma Of Christ To Others As We Pass By (2:14) Remember? God is parading us in and out of peoples' lives in all our ups and downs so that as we pass by, they can catch His aroma, they can smell Him, they can sense Him without seeing Him, in us. Some respond and find life; others don't. But that's how God wants to use us during our lifetime; our passing by them is a matter of life and death. Now, at the end of that message we briefly touched on:

1. the questioning that arises about God using us in this way

a. we may question it in ourselves as Paul did (2:16b) We may look seriously at God's desire to use us to impact the lives of others and be struck by the immensity of that responsibility and say, "Who is enough for that? Who could do it?" We are called to represent God to men by our lives. God wants to use us to make an eternal difference as we pass by. What human being could be equal to that kind of task; it's impossible! It is so very easy for us to doubt and question that God can and does use us. And it is made even worse because:

b. we may face the accusations of others (1) There were some at Corinth who had questioned not only Paul's authority and integrity as an apostle, but Paul's ability. Compare 10:10. Paul's not the only preacher that has ever been said about! But it's not only preachers that get it. Does the phrase, "Some Christian you are!" ring any bells? All you need is some put-downs in life and it's usually not from unbelievers but from fellow believers. We get some criticism, some discouragement, we get told what a good job we didn't do or what we should be doing better or how they could do it better and the feelings of inadequacy can quickly begin to build.

2. the feelings this may generate in us The Greek word translated "to be equal to" in 2:16 is the same word translated competent three times in 3:5-6. It is used in two different senses throughout the New Testament. In some places it simply means "a lot" or "a large number" or "great quantity" or simply "enough"; it's found in phrases like "a large crowd was with Him" or "a large herd of pigs was feeding" or, when Jesus told Peter about the two swords, "it is enough". You see:

a. we feel unable to represent Christ to others We're not "enough" for it. We don't have the patience, the strength, the will, the wisdom to be Jesus to people. With the resources I have, I could never do it! It's like handing me the job of being President of the United States. It's so far above and beyond me that I wouldn't even know where to start. God talked to Moses out of the burning bush and told him, "You've been elected to be the Messiah, the Deliverer for Israel. Now march back down to Egypt and tell Pharaoh to let them go. You'll be like God to them and bring them out!" And part of Moses' response was this, "Lord, how am I ever gonna make them believe me? I'm just an ignorant shepherd, not a miracle worker! I can't make them listen! Besides, I stutter. I've never been eloquent. You need a good talker to talk for you!" So many times we are swamped by the feeling of our own inabilities, our own lack of power to do what God wants to do with us. And the more we suffer, the more we hurt, the more painfully our inabilities are pointed out to us! But it's more than that. The same word when used of people, carries the concept of worth. John the Baptist said about Jesus, "I am not worthy to untie His sandals" Literally "I am not enough; I don't deserve it." The centurion said to Jesus, "I am not worthy to have you come under my roof...I don't deserve it." So:

b. we feel unworthy to represent Christ to others Moses' first response to God was, "Who am I, Lord, that I should go... Who am I? I don't deserve to go. I don't deserve to represent you. I'm sinful. I fail. I blow it. I lose my temper. I say things I shouldn't. I lose my patience and grasp at straws." Paul said, "I don't deserve to be called an apostle because I persecuted the church of God. I have a track record, a past and it isn't very good. I'm unworthy of this high calling!" And so:

The Issue: Confidence - How Do I Know That God Can Use Me? "How can I believe and be confident that God can use me like this, that He can work through me and touch others? I go up and I go down, the winds and the waves of life take me through all these highs and lows and I need to KNOW that it matters, that through it all Jesus is actually revealing Himself through me to others. But how can I know it?" Well, one author says: Let's try to imagine the captain of a ship, being driven about by rough winds who wants to drop anchor, but he's determined to try to find a suitable place to do so right on board his own ship? I know that's ridiculous, but for a minute think about it anyway. Picture the captain trying to anchor the boat. He hangs the anchor on the bow (that's the front for you landlubbers), but still the boat drives before the wind. He sets it on the deck, but this too fails to hold it steady. At last, he puts it down into the hold but has no better success. Why not? An anchor resting on the storm-driven craft will never do the job. Only if it is thrown into the deep can it be effective against the wind and current. The ship must be anchored in something outside itself and much bigger than itself. In the same way, the person whose confidence is in himself will never experience true peace and safety. His actions are as futile as one who keeps the anchor aboard his own ship. Cast your faith in the great depths of God's eternal love and power. Friend, as long as you think that the job depends on you, your anchor's lying on the deck and the circumstances will sink you every time. Here's the solid biblical:

II. The Fact: God Has Made Us Competent (5-6) He made us equal to this task. He made us sufficient for these things. He makes us both able and worthy to be used by Him! Now, let's take these verses apart and notice first:

1. our competence is not in any measure based on ourselves (5a) Jesus didn't mince any words with us. He said, Without Me or apart from Me you can do NOTHING! - Jn. 15:5. "Not a little bit. Not part of the job. Not half you and half me. NOTHING. IT's ALL ME! Without Me, nothing! Unless I do it, nobody smells Me in you!" I have no competence. Rather, Paul says:

2. our competence comes from God (5b) That's true first of all in the area of salvation. Look what He has done:

a. He has qualified us for salvation - Col. 1:12 We were sinners, lost and undone. We were strangers, enemies, without hope and without God in the world, blinded in darkness, bound for hell and unable to do anything about it. But He did something marvelous in us. He qualified us (same word) to partake in the inheritance of the saints in light. He took us sinners and made us saints, pure and holy and clothed with righteousness. And how? We didn't have any so He gave us His righteousness. We are made the righteousness of God in Him, saints, holy ones, worthy of His presence, joint heirs with Jesus Christ of all things. He MADE US WORTHY AND ABLE to enter and enjoy a relationship with Him! It doesn't depend on us. And the same thing is true in the area of our service:

b. He has made us competent for His use (6a) as ministers or servants, those who carry out the desire of another. He wants others to see Christ in our lives and He not only makes us worthy to do it but He makes us able to do it. He gives us the power and the ability to do what He wants to do through us. And how does He do it? Not simply as it was in the Old Covenant or the Old Testament, by the letter. Not simply by telling us what to do, by saying, "Live this way!" No, "Better news the Gospel brings; it bids us fly and gives us wings!" God gives us the power to be what He wants us to be and:

3. His means is the Holy Spirit (6b) He puts His own life, His own power, Himself, inside us, so that He is our "wings!" God IN US! Jesus promised, You will receive POWER when the Holy Spirit is come upon you and then you shall be witnesses unto me to the ends of the earth! The Spirit is the power of God at work in us supernaturally so that He can reveal Christ to others through us! Steve Lawson tells the story of the time he flew from Charlotte, North Carolina, to Little Rock, Arkansas, via Atlanta. He was going to preach early the next morning in Little Rock (on the subject of God's providence). He writes: "Unfortunately, my flight was very late leaving Charlotte, which caused us to circle Atlanta for the longest time. When we finally landed in Atlanta, it was exactly one minute after my flight to Little Rock was to leave. I made a mad dash through the terminal, down the escalator, to the underground tram and got there just in time to miss the departing train. Great! I had no time to wait for the next one. My only hope was to run to the next terminal, hundreds of yards away. So I took off. As I ran, dodging unsuspecting travelers, I noticed a moving sidewalk before me. It went all the way to the next terminal. I leaped onto this 'skywalker.' It began moving me to the next terminal, but still not fast enough. So, I did something only a desperate man would do. I began running on the moving sidewalk. You can't believe how fast I was going on that contraption. I was flying! Passing everybody. Even the tram! I was at the next terminal in no time. I then bounded up the escalator and sprinted to my gate--just as they were about to close the plane door. I made it! The smiling stewardess said, 'I guess you were just supposed to make this flight.' The moving sidewalk made the difference. It enabled me to run faster and longer than I ever could have in my own strength. The combination of my running and the skywalker moving me forward propelled me like I had been shot out of a cannon. I ran, but with a great power enabling me. That is precisely how the resurrection power of Christ works in my life--and your life. God has a race for us to run, and we are responsible to run it. We must make the effort to put one foot in front of the other. As we do, the power of God energizes us and propels us forward. We are divinely enabled to run faster, longer, and straighter than we ever dreamed. [Men Who Win by Steven Lawson, 1992. Pages 62-63.] Now, no analogy is perfect, but you get the point. I choose to obey. I choose to follow, to do His will in any situation and the resurrection power of the Spirit of Jesus Christ energizes my life and propels me through it and exudes the sweet fragrance of Him to the bystanders! Now, how can I know that that process is indeed going on, that Christ is indeed at work through me spreading everywhere the fragrance of the knowledge of Himself? Where's:

III. The Evidence: Paul says, it's not only written in the Book; It Is Written On Tablets Of Human Hearts (2-3) Paul said, "I don't need some letter of recommendation to prove that I'm an apostle and God's at work through me. All people have to do is look at you! You were pagans. You were idolaters. You bowed down to statues and engaged in every kind of sexual immorality, drunkenness and orgies. And now you're in love with Jesus and worship Him alone. And you have given up all those horrible practices and you live holy! You are our letter! God wrote it by using the power of His spirit on the tablets of your human hearts! And everybody can read it because they can see it!" But that wasn't only true of the Apostle Paul. If you stop and think about it, it's true of you:

1. change was produced in your life through God's use of others You're a brand-new person. You're different from the way you were when you got saved, even if it was not outwardly drastic in appearance. You were translated out of the dominion of darkness and into the kingdom of His dear Son. Your eternal destiny was changed from hell to heaven and your sins which were scarlet were made white as snow. Now you love Jesus and He's growing you into His image. You are somebody's letter of recommendation, your parents, a Sunday School teacher, a Christian friend who witnessed to you. You are the living evidence of the Spirit of God at work in their life revealing the presence of Christ because you saw Him in them and took Him as your own. Their letter written by the Spirit of God on the tablet of a human heart is the change God produced in you! And in like manner:

2. change is produced in the lives of others through God's use of you Friend, the evidence that God is at work in your life is written on the tablets of the human hearts around you and you can see it by the change it produces! It's written on the tablets of your children as they indicate their desire to love and to follow Him. It's written on the tablet of the neighbor who says, "Yes, I'll go with you to Bible study; I have some questions I've been meaning to ask." It's written on the tablet of the coworker who says, "I haven't been to church in years but because I know you, I'll go to see your play." It's written on the tablet of the friend who says, "Would you please pray for me; I've had a terrible thing happen." It's written on the tablet of the shut-in at the nursing home who says, "I don't have anybody to visit me; not even my children come; I'm so glad to see you!" It's written on the tablet of the student in your class who says, "I never knew that before; thanks, I've decided to change that in my life." I've looked out over you as a congregation for years and I can look at so many of you and in some small way say, "You are my letter; the changes, the maturing in you, are in some small measure the evidence that Jesus is at work through me showing Himself." And you can do the same as you look out over the congregation of people that God has paraded you before in life. You can see the evidence written on the tablets of human hearts and be thankful. And so, the conclusion is:

IV. The Conclusion: We Can Live With Confidence (4), not in ourselves, but through Christ and in God. We can live boldly with the assurance that as we surrender ourselves obediently, that God will use us to spread the fragrance of Himself. I don't think so or hope so or wonder whether I'm qualified. I know so because of what He's said He would do and the evidence of what He's already done in others. The only thing that stands in the way is that Sometimes, like Moses, we refuse to believe that God can use us. We are so hesitant, so afraid, that our will gets in the way and we say, "Lord, send somebody else."

Jack Kuhatschek told this story: "A few years ago my pastor asked me to team teach with him a class on spiritual gifts. Once again, I felt the old familiar fear [of public speaking]. But instead of turning to God in faith, asking Him for the grace and strength to say yes, I started searching for crutches. 'You'll be teaching the class with me?' I asked. I wanted the assurance that if anything went wrong, I could simply turn the podium over to him. 'Yes,' he replied. 'We'll do this together.' Then I asked an even more important question: 'How large is the class?' 'I think it will be quite small,' he said. 'About 20 people. Most of the congregation will be attending another class that will be held at the same time as ours.' 'Twenty people,' I thought to myself. 'I can handle that.' So I reluctantly said yes. When the morning of the first class arrived, I walked into the sanctuary where the class was being held, expecting to see a handful of people. But to my great surprise and horror, the place was packed! As I sat down beside the pastor, he leaned over to me and said softly, 'The other class was canceled, so everyone will be in here with us.' At that moment, I remember looking up to heaven and saying to God, 'You tricked me!' But then I also had an overwhelming sense that if God had maneuvered me into this situation, He must know what He is doing. He did. That class opened up a teaching ministry for me at our church, a ministry that has continued to this day. In the process, I have been stretched and have experienced great joy and affirmation as I use one of the gifts God has given me. And thankfully, a number of people in my classes have told me that they have been helped as well, but none of this would have happened if I had said, 'Lord, please use someone else!' and walked away from God's gentle nudges." [The Superman Syndrome by Jack Kuhatschek. Zondervan, 1995. Pages 140-141.] Where is it in your life that God is nudging you? How is He wanting to use you? Who is it He wants to speak to? Where does He want you to serve, with the young people, pioneer clubs, visiting shut-ins, with the children, in missions activity right here or maybe even on the mission field? He has qualified you, made you worthy, made you able, and He stands ready to pour His spirit through you and write on the tablets of the hearts of the people around you. The only thing He needs is your willing cooperation. Moses said, "Lord, send somebody else." Isaiah too, sensed the call of God in his life. He knew that in himself he was unable and cried, Woe is me, for I am a man of unclean lips. But when the angel touched his lips, he accepted that God had qualified him and when the Lord said, Whom shall I send and who will go for us?, Isaiah said, Lord, here am I, send me! That's what God wants. You're qualified; just be willing. Be an Isaiah.

The Suffering And The Glory - 2 Corinthians 1-7 Transformed Into His Likeness • 3:7-17 • The Issue Of Growth

If I were to ask you to sum up in one phrase the purpose of the entire universe, what would you say? God's glory, that He might receive the reverence, respect and worship He deserves. What's the purpose of the whole world, of the human race, of all of history? God's glory, to give Him the reverence, respect and worship He deserves. Bring it closer to home. What is the purpose of your life? Paul said, So whether you eat or drink or whatever you do, do it all for the glory of God. – 1 Cor. 10:31. Now, I know that a lot of selfish and other impure motives often drive us, but if we really know Jesus, we do in our hearts sincerely want our lives to glorify Him, to bring Him the glory He deserves in the eyes of other people. We do want them to see us and what we do and say and glorify the Father. But we're often a little confused about exactly how that process works. I want to begin by talking, as Paul does, about:

I. The Way God Once Displayed His Glory in Old Testament times before the coming of Jesus. And the reason we need to talk about it is because it is often very much like:

1. the wrong view we have (7) Oh, the ministry God had back then was glorious! It was marked by tremendous outward displays. Compare Heb. 12:18-21. Man, that was glorious and no one could miss it. We're sorry we didn't get to be around for stuff like that. But somehow, we often still think His glory is best displayed by those same sorts of things. For instance we think it is shown:

a. by condemnation and fearsome judgment I mean, you touch the ark, you fall over dead! You lead a rebellion and the ground opens up and swallows you. That's glorious! You can see it! You tell a lie and they carry you out and bury you or you call down fire from heaven when someone stands in the way of the Gospel. That was glorious! How on earth does God get glory now when everybody gets away with everything and there is no justice and nobody's afraid anymore? Or we think it is shown:

b. by awe-inspiring standards of righteousness, by stone tablets that were engraved by God's own finger and so holy they were stored in the holy ark; now there's glory! All I've got is a worn Bible on the desk that's seen better days! Or we think it is shown:

c. by frequent marvelous displays of power, by Red Seas and Jordan Rivers being parted, by being given bread from heaven to eat and water out of a rock, or through our enemies being devastated by plagues or teenagers defeating giants in combat. Now there's glory! Moses used to go out to a tent to meet God and every time he came back, his face would glow with the radiance of God's glory. People didn't have to guess that he'd been with God! They could see it. It was a repeated miracle, displayed every time he went. Now there's glory! But we haven't come to any of that! That's not for us.

Why isn't my life full of that kind of stuff? Where's the outward glory? From time to time, portions of the Christian Church try to go back and seek it that way still. In our own day there is a whole "signs and wonders" movement that is growing and popular. There is talk of "power evangelism" where God does something miraculous and people are converted through seeing Him at work directly. Christians are desperately looking for direct outward manifestations of God's glory. But if we seek God's glory that way, here's:

2. the disappointment we soon discover: I call it fading glory You see:

a. glorious displays fade away in between Just check out Moses, for example, Ex. 34:33-35. When he was little, my son had a whole bunch of glow-in-the-dark dinosaurs on the wall of his room and when the light was on, they charged up and then they glowed in the dark! But only for a while and then they faded. Moses was like that. When he would talk with God, he would come out and his face was brighter than daylight. I used to think it was like this: Moses would come out and shine and the glory was so bright he used to have to cover his face to speak to the people so they could stand it. But look carefully at what it actually says. He would come out and speak to them and they would see his face and listen and when it was all done, he would put on the veil until he went back for a re-charge. Verse 7 says the glory was fading. It didn't last 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. The effect of it faded away and had to be renewed time after time. That's exactly what you discover if you look for God's glory outwardly. The effect of a miracle or any kind of spiritual high is wonderful, but it only lasts awhile and then life fades back to the level of the mundane, the everyday, the plodding and even the suffering. And those who are always shouting the glories of behavior by law discover that:

b. glorious standards don't produce righteousness Holiness preachers whose mouth thunders judgment and whose hands claim to cure cancer on Sunday can fall into immorality on Monday, just like the rest of the human race as we've seen. Gal. 2:21 ...if righteousness could be gained through the law, Christ died for nothing! The law can only TELL you what to do; it can't HELP you do it! It requires what is impossible for man and every time I think I get close to keeping it, I sin again and find I can't! For all the glory they saw, Israel was no holier! Its effect faded between doses. And the harder you try, the more you discover that:

c. glorious judgment doesn't impart life - Gal. 3:21 ...For if a law had been given that could impart life, then righteousness would certainly have come by the law. Law and judgment can only condemn sin; they can't impart life. They can only change your behavior temporarily, not your heart. Judgment makes us afraid and it changes our behavior for a while but afterwhile the effect fades away and we're back to normal. It doesn't change our life into the kind of life that God has. That kind of glory fades in its effect and so there's:

3. the game that Moses played and that we play too. I call it: "hide the fading glory" (13) Moses didn't put the veil on to keep people from seeing the glory:

a. Moses veiled his face to hide the fading from others, so they wouldn't see it fade away. He didn't want them to see that he wasn't shining and glowing all the time, but that in between he was just plain old frail human Moses with all of his faults and shortcomings like the rest of them. And you know what?

b. we veil our lives for the same purpose We put on smiling faces and learn to say, "Just fine," when somebody asks. We carry our Bibles, go to our services and sing our songs. But we don't want anybody to know that we had an argument with our spouse or lost our temper and screamed at the kids the other day. We don't want anybody to see that we're worried to death about how we're going to pay our bills or that we prayed and God didn't answer. And we wouldn't dare breathe that we're struggling in our marriage or, heaven forbid, that we were tempted to sin. Ask for help; admit that we can't do something? Never! Why not? Part of it is that we all like to hide sin; it's a human trait. But if we're sincere, if we really and truly in our hearts want to glorify God in all we do, then it might be because at the bottom line we still believe God's glory is only displayed through outward perfection. We have to make sure all they ever see is our shining face; God is not glorified in us unless other people see that everything is wonderful and perfect and great. In other words:

The Issue: How Can God Be Glorified In Me When I'm Imperfect? How can He use sickness, death, failure, sin, suffering and all the other downsides of my life to get glory to Himself? What good do I do him in all that? People need to SEE the glory. They need to see power and supernatural stuff! But I'm no Moses or Joshua or Elijah! I lose faith and falter and fail. I'm growing, but I still have such a long way to go. How can He be glorified in my life?! Well, the good news is that He can be and is! Because on this side of the cross there is:

II. The Better Way God Chooses To Display His Glory Now Smoking mountains and glory clouds don't do the trick. That's one of the major points the whole Old Testament makes! Isaiah prayed, Oh, that you would rend the heavens and come down, that the mountains would tremble before you! - Isai 64:1. That's how we feel! Just come down and show up; let the world see! That's what it takes! Well, He did come down and show up. He walked on water, stilled storms, healed the sick and even raised the dead. He did all the things you wish He'd do in your life. And instead of falling on their faces in awe of Him, men crucified the Lord of glory! That way doesn't work! The true glory of God is not simply His power but His entire person. So, God instituted a new way to declare His glory. He chose to reflect His person through us by transforming us into His likeness (17-18)! Now let's take that apart:

1. we live in a glorious freedom as children of God - Rom. 8:21 says the whole of creation is groaning and waiting to be liberated from its bondage to decay and brought into the glorious freedom of the children of God. We have a whole new way of living. We're not afraid of God. We don't serve Him and obey because we're afraid of Him. Through Jesus Christ we have been accepted by Him and become beloved by Him as His children and perfect love casts out all fear! We're free! And it's glorious! The rest of the world wishes they had it! They live in fear, fear of their gods, fear of evil spirits, fear of death, fear, fear, fear! But we just simply do what now comes natural to us, obeying and loving God in complete confidence and peace, in glorious freedom, and as we do that:

2. He reflects the glory of His person through us to the world Think about that word reflect. For instance, the moon has no light of its own. But the sun shines its light on the moon and the moon reflects it back to us on earth. We actually see the light of the sun reflected off the moon! The rear-view mirror in your car takes the image of the car behind you and reflects it back to your eyes. The world can't see His glory directly. But it can see us. So, He takes the glorious image of His person and shines it into us. We reflect it back to the world of people around us. Once there was a little boy who listened very carefully to the pastor's sermon, but one thing didn't make sense to him. After the service he went to the pastor and told him he had a question about the sermon. "You said Jesus is a Man," he began. The pastor said, "That's right." "But I'm just a little boy." The pastor smiled and said, "You're right about that." The boy concluded earnestly, "But you said that if I asked Him to, Jesus would come live inside of me." Nodding affirmatively, the pastor replied, "Yes, I certainly did say that." "But, Pastor," the lad said in exasperation, "If Jesus comes to live inside of me, He'll be sticking out all over!" The pastor laughed and said emphatically, "Son, that's exactly right!" When Jesus is the Lord of our lives, He should be "sticking out all over" you and me. [The Vision of His Glory by Anne Graham Lotz. Word Publishing, 1996. Page 114.] Because He is inside me, His glory will be beaming out in every direction of my life! I reflect Him to the world. Now, how does that work?

3. He reflects it through actually transforming us into His likeness The Greek word is metamorphosis, to transform an object from one thing into another permanently. He didn't just hand us a picture of Him and say, "There, make yourself over to look like Me!" He didn't just hand us a list of what He is like and say, "There, go be like that!" He changed what we are into what He is! His light came inside of us. He performed a circumcision on our hearts! He took the old dead sinful nature that was inside me that looked like Adam and killed it, threw it away and buried it! And in its place, He created a new nature, a new self, a new man that Paul says is created to be like God in righteousness and true holiness. He transformed the core of my being from a sinner like Adam was into a saint, holy like Jesus is! And it's that saint-nature, that Jesus nature, that reflection of His glorious person that comes back out in my words and deeds! Now notice this:

4. the transformation is gradual but ever-increasing The transformation at the core of my being was instantaneous, but my mind and my body have years of history of wrong patterns of wanting, thinking and behaving. Scripture calls it the flesh. Plus, the force of sin still lives in my mind and body; it hasn't been removed yet. So, Romans says, my mind has to be renewed so that it thinks like the One who created it and my body has to be continually presented to Him for His use. It's gradual. The more I yield to Him, the more my thoughts and actions are transformed to be His thoughts and actions, the more they reflect His glory. We have a name for it; we call it Growth And it is ever-increasing. Literally, the Greek says we are being permanently transformed from glory to glory, from one level of glory to another, more and more closely reflecting to the world exactly what He is! And what's driving this process, assuring that it continues?

5. it is being accomplished through the Spirit's presence and power It doesn't come from me. I don't just get better and better at imitating Jesus. The Spirit of God who dwells in me uses His divine power, the same power that made the mountain smoke and the face of Moses shine, to gradually transform my life into His life, so that when the world looks at what I say and what I do and how I react and how I live, they see Him!
But you might be thinking, how is this process better than the old one?

III. Why This Process Is More Glorious It seems so mundane and dull and every-day, but Paul says the ministry of the Spirit in and through us is not only MORE glorious, but it is surpassingly glorious, exceedingly more glorious, so much so that in comparison the old way would appear to have no glory at all! Look at (8-11). Why is it glorious? Through us the Spirit does three things He couldn't do the old way:

1. we are given His life and impart it to others The law couldn't give life, but the Spirit can. It could sentence men to death, but not give them life. The Spirit of God imparted the very life of God to us and is shining that very life at others so He can impart it to them as well. Then:

2. we are given His righteousness and bring it to others The law couldn't make anybody righteous, but the Spirit can. It could tell you what not to do, but not how not to do it. The Spirit of God imparted the righteousness of Jesus Christ to our spirit and made us absolutely righteous and then He shines it through us so that He can impart that righteousness to others as well.

3. we are permanently changed and impact others eternally The law couldn't produce permanent change, but the Spirit can. It couldn't transform anybody for time and eternity, but the Spirit of God changed me forever and as He shines through me to impact others, He changes the core of their being and their eternal destiny!

Now, I don't know about you but I'd rather be alive in Jesus Christ, be made absolutely righteous and be changed forever in my person and destiny, than stand trembling in fear before some smoking mountain or shining glory cloud! We need to read the rest of that Hebrews passage, Heb. 12:22-24. What a privilege! What God does in and through you speaks a better word of His glory than anything there was before! And once you understand that and quit wishing for "the good old days" and start living out the glorious freedom you have in Jesus, it has a wonderful result:

IV. The Result Of That Process: It results in Boldness; It results in Open Transparent Living (12-13a, 18a) We're not like Moses! We don't hide our faces so nobody will see the glory fade! We're confident of the fact that the Spirit is transforming us, that Jesus is reflecting Himself through us, so we live openly and boldly. We intentionally invite people into our lives so they can watch "The Jesus Channel" in us, trusting Him to draw them to Himself through us!

Pastor and evangelist Sam Kamaleson gives this testimony: "I come from a long line of Christians in India--six generations. But over those six generations, the vitality of my family's faith wore off. Only the form of Christianity remained. By the time I entered the University of Madras as a student, my faith was a burden. I practiced the form of Christianity, but the form had no vitality. My roommate at the university was a Hindu. One day, however, he came back to our room totally transformed. I watched him for the next 10 days. He never announced, 'I'm a Christian.' He just kept quiet, but I saw a difference, so I asked him: 'You've changed. What's the reason?' He grinned from ear to ear and said, 'It must be Jesus.' That's the first time someone showed me that life can change. He showed me that the Jesus of history is a present-day reality, and I could have an encounter with Him--with measurable results. So he led me to the Lord, and suddenly the form of my Christianity came to life. After my conversion, my roommate said our new faith would be contagious. Indeed, our living faith began to spread on the campus. I was a student body leader and chairman of the student council. When I began to say, because of my faith that there were things I would not do any more, it caused a chain reaction. Without knowing it, I was evangelizing. We started small prayer groups, and soon we couldn't find rooms large enough to hold them." [World Vision, Oct/Nov 1996. Page 21.] It really does work! How about you, my friend? Are you busy keeping people out of your life so they won't see the flaws, so they won't see how imperfect you are? Or are you living boldly and openly and transparently, hoping people will come into your life and look at you to see Jesus! Don't look for miracles and signs. Just love Him with all your heart, trust Him to be at work in you and let people in, so the glory can shine no matter what your situation is. That's how He gets glory! And what a joy to know that even in your eating and drinking and whatever else you do, all of it brings glory to God.

The Suffering And The Glory - 2 Corinthians 1-7

The Light That Shines In Hearts • 4:1-6 • The Issue Of Revelation

We are born into a life that is separated from God. Most people are content living in that separation their whole lives, very busy, very full and complete (so they think), growing up, graduating, getting married, having children, working jobs, growing old and dying, all in a state of separation from God. And when somebody who's become a Christian tries to reach into their lives and tell them about God and the wonderful freedom they can have through a relationship with Him, usually, instead of taking the Book and searching for truth, there is often the opposite response. No interest! They don't care! Or they push you away and say, "Let me alone, I like it this way!" And as we turn to 2 Cor. 4 to begin our study today, I'd like to talk to you about:

I. The Impact Of Nonresponsiveness As we've studied 2 Corinthians, we learned that God parades us in and out of people's lives reflecting His glory through us, transforming us into His likeness and letting them see it. And we reach out to them, but they don't want it! We pray, we share, we witness, we invite, but nothing, no response. Or worse than nothing, a negative response. They reject us. And over time that can have a dramatic impact on us. Paul warns:

1. we are often tempted to give up through exhaustion (1) Oh, but we easily could! Those words lose heart mean to give up, to quit, to faint, to grow weary and exhausted and lose the resolve to continue.

The Issue is Discouragement: People don't respond to God despite all my efforts! Listen to the string of cautions about this in the New Testament:

- Luke 18:1 Then Jesus told his disciples a parable to show them that they should always pray and not give up. I get discouraged because I pray and pray for someone and they don't respond.
- 2 Cor. 4:16 Therefore we do not lose heart. Though outwardly we are wasting away... I get discouraged by the difficult circumstances I endure, the illnesses, the hardships I go through in the process. Nobody cares.
- Gal. 6:9 Let us not become weary in doing good, for at the proper time we will reap a harvest if we do not give up. I get discouraged because I do good, I express love and caring, and there's no harvest, nobody responds; they don't care.
- Eph. 3:13 I ask you, therefore, not to be discouraged because of my sufferings for you, which are your glory. I get discouraged because I suffer for my faith or I watch others just like me suffer in the cause and yet it doesn't seem to make a difference to people.
- 2 Thes. 3:13 And as for you, brothers, never tire of doing what is right. I get discouraged because I do what's right and it costs me dearly; it costs me friendships, it costs me money and it wouldn't be so bad if it would have an impact on somebody, but I get tired because nobody cares!

I get tired. I get worn out. I get weary. I feel like quitting and throwing in the towel. The glory of God may be shining out of my life, but if it is, nothing's happening, nobody's responding. Oh, it would be so easy to quit worrying about other people, to just focus on our own family and a few close friends and to stop caring whether anybody catches the vision of Jesus Christ or not! And more than one missionary, more than one pastor, more than one believer, has done just that. I know you've had these feelings. I've had them, more than once. Now sometimes, before we get that far, we're tempted to try another avenue. Sometimes we stoop to trying to MAKE people respond. Some enemies were accusing Paul of that and he warns that:

2. we must guard against the temptation to coerce results (2a) Sometimes you can force a response:

a. by manipulating people You can play on their fears by scaring them with threats of hell when they're little or when they're sick or you can play on their grief by telling them they could see their dear mother once more in heaven and how disappointed she'd be if they don't make it. If they're needy you can get them to respond spiritually as you want in return for your help. Such "Rice Christians" are common in the world, who come for the rice and not for the Savior! The response won't be genuine; it won't last, but you can make it happen and some do. The method is secret and deceptive and shameful. And often it is done by:

b. by distorting the Word Just promise people they'll be healed when they're sick. Tell them that healing is in the atonement and it's theirs for the claiming and they'll line up - for a while. Tell them God wants them to be wealthy and prosperous, that all His kids deserve the best and that they can claim the blessing they want and they'll line up - for a while. Tell them that Jesus is only one of many ways to God and encourage them to simply be religious and they'll fall all over you!

But if you're faithful and tell them the truth and refuse to manipulate and coerce them and take advantage of their weaknesses, you'll have no choice but to deal with discouragement! Paul certainly did! No matter how many good responses there are, the MAJORITY of people will NOT respond. So, how do you deal with this discouragement without giving up! Well, the first step is to understand:

II. The Real Cause: Unbelievers Are Unable To See The Light (3) People who are separated from God living in darkness are simply not capable of seeing. The Gospel is veiled to them. It's hidden. It's not that they can hear the words but there is simply no natural ability to comprehend them. It's not your fault. It's not their fault. Human beings are born that way and it's made worse by Satan's control of the world system or the culture around them. Take, for instance, what Paul said in the last chapter about:

1. the special hardening of the Jew (3:14-16) Jewish people even to this day, 2000 years later, can read and read and reread the Old Testament and never see all the promises of the Messiah were fulfilled in Jesus. They can read Is. 53 or Ps. 22 and never see Jesus' agony on the cross or His resurrection. Why? Their minds are "made dull". The Greek literally means "to grow a callus on the skin". You know when your skin is hardened or callused, you can touch something and not feel it. It's hidden or veiled from your senses. When your mind is callused, it can hear something and not understand it; it can hear and hear and not perceive. That is something that God has specifically caused to happen to the Jewish race through their rejection of Christ as their Messiah and it's why so few Jews come to Jesus, even though they should be the most prepared and easiest to reach! Praise His Name, God does break through that and into the hearts of a remnant who become saved and Rom. 11 promises that it is partial and temporary and in the end time there will be a widespread turning of Israel to Jesus. But for now, that veil is still in place and they can't humanly break through it. But it's not only the Jews. We Gentiles are just like them; we are just as incapable of understanding the Gospel because of:

2. the universal blinding work of Satan (4) The minds of unbelievers are now, not just dim, but blinded. Now let me ask this, "Does it matter how much light you shine on a blind man? Can you make him see by shining a brighter light?" Why not? The problem is not on the outside but on the inside. He's incapable of seeing, no matter how much light shines on him! The Pharisees heard Jesus directly; they saw the blind man whose eyes were opened and heard his testimony and that of others. They saw Lazarus walking around alive and knew he was resurrected. How could they not fall at Jesus' feet? Jesus told them, "You are blind and what's worse is that you think you see!" You're blind but you don't know it! That's the state you're born in because of the fall and Satan does a tremendous job of keeping you that way. He does everything he can to keep you from ever having an opportunity to hear the Gospel in the first place. And he orchestrates human culture to make sure you're raised in such a way that if you do hear it, you'll be sure to reject it. Whole cultures of people live in absolute bondage to false systems of worship and false understandings of the universe which are like a veritable wall. But I'm not just talking about the Yanomami Indians out in the jungle of Brazil or the Fulani Muslims in Guinea or the crowds in Moscow. Your neighbor, your aunt, your uncle, your cousin, and maybe your husband or wife, is just as blind and just as incapable of responding! That's why they don't! They can't! We couldn't either. We were DEAD in trespasses and sins. Unless the thing that happened to us happens to them, they can't respond. There is only one:

III. The True Remedy: God Must Reveal Himself To Them (6) One day God revealed Himself to you and suddenly you could see that which you could never see before, no matter how many times you'd heard it. You saw that you sinful and separated from God and that the way to freedom was Jesus. Paul says it was just like:

1. the act of God in giving light to a dark world Remember Gen. 1:3. The whole universe was dark. And God gave a command, "Let there be light!", literally "Light, BE!" and light, which didn't exist, obeyed and came into being and in that instant there was light. And had there been any human eyes around to see, in that instant they could have seen everything that before was hidden in the darkness. And that is exactly like:

2. the act of God in giving light to a darkened heart God speaks that same word to every soul that comes to Him. He says, "Let there be light!" He shines into our very soul the light of the understanding of who Jesus was and what He did. Now, you know why Paul put it this way, don't you? You remember how he came to respond. Compare Acts 26:9-18. God caused the outside to be a visual illustration of what was going on inside. He lived in darkness, totally blind, a persecutor and a murderer of Christians, but God shined into his heart and he believed in Jesus. Suddenly he could see what he could never see before and he grabbed hold of it! And God told him, "This is exactly what I'm sending you to do. Your own people and all the nations, they're all in darkness. I'm sending you so that I can shine my light into their hearts and save them. They won't respond unless I reveal Myself to them but I need you in the process." It's like this: Liz Curtis Higgs tells about vacationing one summer with her family in Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado: "We picked the foggiest day ever recorded, I think, to drive the scenic Trail Ridge Road, the highest completely paved road in the United States. We just knew there were mountains out there somewhere, but we sure couldn't see them. We'd drive past signs for scenic overlooks, and the only thing to look over was more fog. We were quite certain we were heading up the mountain, though, because there was snow piled along the side of the road six to eight feet high...in June! That night we crawled into bed in our cabin at Longs Peak Conference Center, still surrounded by the damp, chilly fog, never dreaming what we'd find when we woke up the next morning. The sun was peeking around the window shade, so I reached out a sleepy hand to raise the shade...and almost fainted. We had a mountain in our backyard--a big mountain! Longs Peak is 14,255 feet high, and the sun made every snow-covered inch of it look like it might fall on us at any moment. What a humbling experience. Although I knew intellectually that the mountain was there--after all, it was on the map and probably hadn't moved lately--because I couldn't see it with my own eyes, it was not a reality to me. During those 27 years I spent apart from Christ, He was just like that mountain. Enormous, immovable, right there, right next to me, but I was in a fog and saw Him not. Then one day the fog cleared and BOOM! Look up, Liz! In truth, He was there all along, but now I had eyes to see Him." [Reflecting His Image by Liz Curtis Higgs. Thomas Nelson, 1996. Pages 101-102.] "I once was lost but now am found, was BLIND but now I SEE!," says the hymn. He does the miracle; nobody else can. He makes blind eyes to see. Now, in that very fact lies:

IV. Our Encouragement: because We Have Experienced God's Mercy (1) God doesn't just sit up in heaven and look down at a world of poor blind people who can't see His truth and let them go. At least in my case, in our case, God did something:

1. God has revealed Himself to us (6) We're living proof, every one of us. God does do that miracle in some people. He does give that gift of light and understanding and response to some. And if He can give it to Paul, if He can give it to me, then He can give it to the worst of us, the lowest of us, the farthest of us and even the closest of us. There is tremendous hope because making people see does not depend on us. I don't have to produce it. And it relieves me of the responsibility. I can't produce it! I can't MAKE it happen. God has to turn the light on. So, as Paul said:

2. we do not proclaim our own ability, but Jesus' lordship (5a) The central Christian confession is this: Jesus is Lord. He's Boss. He's in charge. He's in control. We don't have to produce results! We don't have to make people see:

3. we simply serve others for Jesus' sake (5b) We just serve them, that's all. We just let God parade us into their lives and act toward them as servants in love and let Him do the rest. But I don't want you to underestimate your role in the process:

4. we play a major role in God's process of revelation (2b) I never took the time to see the depth of the meaning that's in this little piece of a verse before, partly because the NIV simplifies it and almost changes the meaning in English. We don't just set forth the truth; we literally manifest or reveal the truth. WE are the instruments through whom God turns the light on. Through our words in sharing the Gospel, through our actions of love and truth, we are God's match to light the lamp. He doesn't just pick this one and that one and suddenly one day they're walking along and light comes into their soul and they believe in Jesus. Instead, he parades you and me into their lives blazing the light of His glory and then turns on the ability to comprehend and bingo, there is light and there is response! Paul says:

5. we reveal His truth and display it to the consciousness of men It's not saying that we have a clean reputation before all men. It's saying that we manifest in ourselves His truth and we display it, we exhibit it, we prove it, not to the conscience, but to the consciousness, to the awareness, to the soul of everyone before whom God parades us. Through us God hands the Book to the next lost person and in the beginning of the process WE ARE The BOOK! And He turns the light on in their understanding and they begin to see what they could never see before. It's all of Him. He shines and reflects it through us into their lives and He opens their eyes to see it! We serve, pray and wait for Him to do His thing in those He chooses!

Anand Chaudhari was raised in a Brahmin family in India, and at a young age began training to follow his father into the Hindu priesthood. In 1942, at the age of 12, he moved to Bombay for secular schooling, and in 1950, he enrolled at the University of Bombay. Although he continued to perform the ritual priesthood duties, his interests shifted, first to the ideals of Mahatma Gandhi and later to communism. Then he met a young man studying at the university who introduced him to Christianity. Through his influence, Anand began reading the Gospel of Matthew. He was gripped by the story of Jesus. One night while he was meditating along the sea shore, he began praying for Jesus to reveal Himself to him. He later described the moments that followed: "Somehow, I felt the real presence of Christ there. Someone holy just touched me and surrounded me. I was really committed to Christ.” After hearing a Christian radio program, he enrolled in Bible college, and in later years became the president of Rajasthan Bible Institute. [Stories of Faith: Inspirational Episodes from the Lives of Christians by Ruth Tucker. Zondervan, 1989.] There you have a sketch of the process. Nobody could be more lost, a Hindu turned communist, blind and unable to see. So God parades a fellow student into his life and through his life begins to shine light into the darkness, attracts him to the Word of God which grips his heart and at the right moment God says, “Let there be light” and all of a sudden, he sees Jesus. What a process! It happened in me and it can happen in those around me! And what a partnership! What a privilege to be a vessel that the King of Kings can use to shine glory into the heart of a blind man to make him see. But do you see the freedom that’s in it! The work is all Jesus’ and the responsibility is all His! I don’t have to make people respond. It is not my effort. I am not responsible. In fact, I cannot fail in my part unless I fail to yield myself to Him. I need not be discouraged that people don’t respond; they can’t! I need not be discouraged that my life is not enough of a display to change them; I can’t change them anyway! But in this one and that one, here and there, as God is ready, He will use me to reach into another person’s life and in some measure reveal His light and His life through me.

Treasure In Jars Of Clay • 4:7-12, 16-18 • The Issue Of Power

Have you ever thought how nice it would be if God, when He saved us, along with changing our hearts, also changed all of us completely right away as He’s going to do one day? I mean, wouldn’t it be nice if from the moment we came to Christ our mind was completely renewed and would only think His thoughts and be holy and pure always? Wouldn’t it be nice if sin was totally removed from us? Wouldn’t it be nice if our bodies were glorified all at once and stopped aging and dying and became like His with all its wonderful powers and abilities? And wouldn’t it be nice if in that moment He had taken us out of this world to heaven where we’d never feel pain or suffering again? Haven’t you ever wished that was so? I have! But instead, He transformed our spirits and left the rest of us the rest of us pretty much just the way we were to be gradually impacted by the new nature inside us. What I’m talking about is:

I. The Enigma Of Our Present State Paul uses a beautiful word picture to describe it. He says we have this Treasure In Jars Of Clay (7) There is this:

1. the priceless treasure we possess: And what is it? Verse 7 tells us it’s the all-surpassing power of God, that power of God that spoke light into the darkness when there was none (verse 6). It’s that power of God that can speak light into a blinded human heart and make it see when nothing else can. That measureless, limitless, unbounded power of God is in and with our spirit through the Holy Spirit who is right there inside us! What a treasure! And we have it! We possess it; it is ours; it belongs to us! How priceless! How precious! Simon the magician offered money and tried to buy it, but in Acts 8:20 Peter answered, “May your money perish with you, because you thought you could buy the gift of God with money! God has given us this precious gift of Himself and His power, which is better than all the gold in the world, right inside us, a limitless resource through which we can endure all things through Christ who literally puts the power in us! We’ve got it, but look what we keep it in!

2. the fragile clay jars in which we possess it, earthen vessels. The clay jar was the most common and cheapest household vessel of the day. It was literally a hardened hunk of dirt, shaped and used for a purpose and later broken and discarded. And so, we have human minds and bodies made of dust, indwelt by sin and subject to all kinds of frailty and mistake and disease and weakness and even death. The image is sort of like keeping your diamond ring in a plastic sandwich bag. In spite of the treasure that’s in us, in our state of human frailty we experience all the things which that power could solve. Paul illustrates four of them in (8-9):

a. we experience pressure because we have limited ability. Circumstances come upon us that squeeze us hard. Often from every side. Things that are too much for us. Things that are beyond our ability to endure. We get sick. Loved ones die. We have accidents. Financial burdens fall on us. Relationships fall apart. Wouldn’t it be nice if the power of God would just fix everything in our lives so we’d always be healthy and never have an accident and everything would just be so peachy and wonderful? But it doesn’t. Our jars of clay still go through the pain of all these things.
